

111.C.16

C A L E N D A R
OF
STATE PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS,
RELATING TO ENGLISH AFFAIRS, EXISTING IN THE ARCHIVES AND COLLECTIONS OF
VENICE,
AND IN OTHER LIBRARIES OF N O R T H E R N I T A L Y.

VOL. III.

1520—1526.

EDITED BY

RAWDON BROWN.

PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

LONDON:
LONGMANS, GREEN, AND CO.
1869.

CONTENTS OF THIS VOLUME.

	PAGE
PREFACE - - - - -	vii
CALENDAR - - - - -	1
APPENDIX - - - - -	627
GENERAL INDEX - - - - -	645

CALENDAR
OF
STATE PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS
EXISTING IN THE ARCHIVES AND COLLECTIONS OF VENICE.
—
1520—1526.

111.C.16

C A L E N D A R
OF
STATE PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS,
RELATING TO ENGLISH AFFAIRS, EXISTING IN THE ARCHIVES AND COLLECTIONS OF
VENICE,
AND IN OTHER LIBRARIES OF
NORTHERN ITALY.

VOL. III.

1520—1526.

EDITED BY

RAWDON BROWN.

PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

LONDON:
LONGMANS, GREEN, AND CO.
1869.

Printed by
Eyre and Spottiswoode, Her Majesty's Printers,
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

CONTENTS OF THIS VOLUME.

	PAGE
PREFACE - - - - -	vii
CALENDAR - - - - -	1
APPENDIX - - - - -	627
GENERAL INDEX - - - - -	645

P R E F A C E.

THE last entry in the second volume of the Venetian Calendar recorded an English prophecy concerning Charles the Fifth.¹ It was derived from Sanuto's Diaries, which also supply this continuation of the work with more minute details of the Emperor's first visit to England, than can be found in any other narrative hitherto published.

The first volume of the Calendar gave an account of the English adventures of Philip the Handsome and Queen Juana, in 1506, as described in the letters of Vincenzo Querini. The Venetian correspondence preserved by Sanuto acquaints us most accurately with the reception given to their son by Henry VIII. in 1520.

In alluding to this event the chronicler Hall writes, that amongst the personages of the Emperor's retinue "one ladie as chief to be noted was the princes Avinion."²

From Sanuto we learn that this "princes Avinion" was no other than Princess or Queen of Aragon. Germaine de Foix (the sister of Gaston) became the wife of Ferdinand the Catholic King of Aragon in 1505, and after his death, though the fact is disputed by Varillas and others,

¹ As Sanuto's original Diaries were restored to Venice last October, I caused the prophecy (which is in Sanuto's own hand) to be photographed, and one of the specimens thus obtained may be seen in the Library of the Record Office.

² P. 604, edition London, 1809.

she married John of Brandenburg, the younger brother of Casimir. The marriage took place at Barcelona early in March 1519, and after the death of John of Brandenburg, which occurred in Spain in the summer of 1525, Germaine chose for her third husband the Duke of Calabria.

The marriage was consummated at Seville in 1526, as stated by the author of the "Cortigiano," who remarks, "s' el letto non sarà molto grande, nè l' uno nè l' altro averà freddo."

When Germaine de Foix arrived in England she may perhaps have been fat, lame, and ugly, as asserted by Sanuto and Castiglione; but on a variety of accounts she was one of the most remarkable of royal and state personages of the period. Her reception at Canterbury by Mary Tudor, the loss of whose hand had so much irritated the youthful Charles of Burgundy in his 15th year,¹ will have enabled the two ex-queens to compare notes about the courtship of grandfather and grandson; whilst the young Emperor, calling to mind the changes effected within the last five years, on finding himself in the presence of Mary Tudor, and pondering the preference given by her, first to Louis XII., and then to Charles Brandon, will perhaps no longer have regretted the disappointment experienced by him in 1514.

From Canterbury and Charles V. we pass to the "Field of Cloth of Gold." The pageants on that occasion are minutely detailed by various Italian eye-witnesses, and a compliment paid by one of them to the temporary palace at Guisnes is especially worthy of notice, as it places the builders of England on a par with Leonardo da Vinci, who died at Fontainebleau in May 1519.

¹ See Venetian Calendar, vol. ii. p. 201.

From Mr. Brewer's Calendar (vol. ii. part ii. p. 1443) it appears that in August 1509 one William Vertu was in the service of Henry VIII.; and from the Camden Society Publications¹ we learn that Sir Edward Belknap was charged with the construction of the palace at Guisnes, and other buildings at the Field of Cloth of Gold, and that he or his colleague Sir Nicholas Vaux wrote to Cardinal Wolsey requesting that "Vertue the Kinge's" "maister mason may be sent over." So long as our own countrymen alone eulogized the King's house at Guisnes, much might be ascribed to national vanity; but when an Italian declares it worthy of the greatest and most universal artist of the age, it would be desirable to ascertain what degree of credit is due to the Royal Commissioners, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir Edward Belknap, and Sir William Sands, and how far they were indebted for their success to the working man, the King's master mason, William Vertue, whom we would fain claim for an Englishman, although the name seems to indicate a French origin.

After the interview of the "Field of Cloth of Gold," Henry VIII. held his second conference with the Emperor from the 10th to the 14th of July, at Calais, on which occasion a female artist in the service of the King presented the Emperor with his own portrait. She may have been an Englishwoman, as well skilled in painting as Vertue was in architecture. But I am inclined to believe that she was an Italian, named Alice Carmeliano, niece of Henry VIII.'s Latin secretary, a Milanese,² of which province Pietro Carmeliano was a native, and owned allegiance to Ludovic Sforza, Duke of Milan.³

¹ "Rutland Papers," p. 55. "The Chronicle of Calais," p. 81.

² See "Trevelyan Papers," Camden Society Publication, pp. 144-148, 160, 161.

³ See Calendar, vol. ii. p. 578.

The nephew of Catharine of Aragon was more popular with the English than his rival King Francis; and a remark made by Lord Leonard Grey on the return of the Court confirms the belief that the nobility of England were not brought over to the French interests by their recent intercourse with the chivalry of France. Both nations were jealous and suspicious of each other, as was shown by the new works undertaken at Calais and Ardres immediately after the interview; and in May 1521 the Venetian ambassador writes from Dijon that the Emperor's sole ally was the King of England. At the same period a demonstration was made in London against Luther, briefly described in the Cottonian MS. as the "Pope's sentence against Martin Luther, published in London on the 12th May 1521." The Venetian secretary who was in London at the time gives a much fuller account of the circumstance, adding that on the gates of St. Paul's Cardinal Wolsey then affixed two legatine bulls, above one of which was added in an unknown hand,

" Bulla Bullæ ambæ amicullæ."

The other was headed in like manner with the words,

" Araine [Arachne ?] ante tubam."¹

Wolsey, it appears, was not a little exasperated by these lampoons, and the insinuations conveyed by them. Though the hypothesis may seem startling to some, I am inclined to think that there is in these lines a tacit allusion to the King's early connexion with Anne Boleyn and to Wolsey's anxiety for the divorce. Be that as it may, Leo X. died on the 1st December 1521, and on the 9th January 1522 Adrian Florent, a native of Utrecht, who assumed the title of Adrian VI., was elected as his successor. If any negotiations had already been in progress with Leo X. with a view of repudiating Catharine, they would now be rendered fruitless. The new Pope had been tutor to Charles of Burgundy, was a virtuous prelate and a staunch imperialist. His conscience and his politics alike forbad him to persecute the kinswoman of his pupil. Adrian died in September 1523, and was succeeded by Clement VII., whose equity and justice, for which contemporaneous biographers give him credit, were often disadvantageously counterbalanced by constitutional cowardice. The union between the Empire and England gave way to apprehensions caused by the victory of Pavia in 1525; and the sack of Rome, in 1527, converted these apprehensions into open hostility. At the close of the year, on the release of the Pope from Castle St. Angelo, we have documentary evidence of an official demand for the dissolution of the marriage.¹ We learn also from the Diaries of Sanuto that in December 1527 there arrived in London the Papal Nuncio Staphileo, of whom the Pope remarked at a later period, that "he it was who " had led the King of England this dance;" the sequel and close of which are too trite and notorious to need further comment. But the historian has yet much to learn concerning the King's matrimonial speculations during the seventeen years which preceded the sack of Rome.

¹ These words (like the prophecy) have been photographed from Sanuto's original autograph, and the fac-simile may be seen in the Library of the Record Office.

At the commencement of the year following, 1521, in the conferences held beyond the Channel, there were reports of a league set on foot at Rome between Leo X., Henry

¹ "State Papers," vol. vii. pp. 29-36.

VIII., and Francis I.; whilst at Worms a Dominican preacher was expatiating on the necessity of opposing Martin Luther, and urging the Emperor to march into Italy. The English envoy Carew assured Francis that the Emperor had no such intention. But a rupture between the two powers was imminent. The proffered mediation of England seems to have been sincere; but every now and then suspicions arose of French intrigues in Scotland; and in Germany reports of the Emperor's Italian expedition continued, although the insurrections in Spain rendered it improbable. In the spring of 1521 the general topics were, the chance of war between Charles and Francis, and the successful attack on the Papedom by Martin Luther. At home, towards the end of March, we find Henry VIII. recommending his kinsman Reginald Pole to the Republic of Venice, as Pole intended to enter himself at the University of Padua; but after the arrest and execution of the young student's uncle, the King modified his recommendation, and gave the first signs of that jealousy which caused him to persecute Pole until the close of his reign.

The mediation of Henry VIII. for the purpose of preventing war between the Emperor and France, continued, and immediately after the execution of the Duke of Buckingham, of which event we have important details in this volume, Sir Richard Wyngfield arrived at Worms precisely three days before the death of the Imperial Prime Minister De Chièvres, who was succeeded by the Imperial Chancellor, the Piedmontese Gattinara. Whilst De Chièvres had favoured the French alliance, Gattinara openly proclaimed his intention of making war on France, and commenced his ministry by seizing on the Milanese and conferring it on Francesco Sforza. Henry VIII. wished to pacify the two rivals; but his ideas of vassalage made him resent the rebellion of Robert de la Marck, who, at the instigation of Francis I., had taken up arms against his liege lord. Such was the assertion made by the English envoy Spinelli. Of his colleague, Sir Richard Wyngfield, Gasparo Contarini has furnished a variety of curious and interesting notices. To the facts already known in connexion with this able negotiator, I am now enabled to add the following particulars on the authority of Contarini. Sir Richard joined Sir Tommaso Spinelli at Worms on the 23rd May 1521; on the following 22nd June he left Brussels and visited England, returning to Brussels in the second week of July. At the close of that month he quitted Ghent to meet Wolsey at Calais; he accompanied the Cardinal to Bruges, and remained with the Emperor until the middle of January 1522. In May 1522 we again find him at the Imperial Court. At Antwerp he was employed in arranging the marriage of the Princess Mary with Charles V., whom he accompanied to England, and on the 24th May 1525, he again presented himself to the Emperor at Toledo, where he died almost immediately after. The speed with which Sir Richard Wyngfield performed his manifold missions, caused the Italians to pun upon his name, which they converted into "Volante," and the heralds of the same period, in allusion to the active services of the three brothers blazoned the heraldic shields of the Wyngfields with three wings, which are still borne by the family, of whom Lord Powerscourt is the present representative.

I have been led to say this much of the partial uses to which the despatches of Gasparo Contarini may be applied, with regard to biographical notices of English worthies. But they are valuable for other reasons. His quick perceptions of individual character were surpassed by the soundness of his views as a statesman and politician. As many of the most important extracts in the present volume illustrating the foreign policy of England are derived from his despatches, some notice of their writer may not be unacceptable.

Gasparo Contarini, born October 16th 1483, was the son of a great trader in the Levant, who married Polissena Malipiero. His father Luigi designed him for a merchant; but perceiving that his son was of a studious disposition he entrusted the education of Gasparo to eminent scholars and professors at Venice, among others to the historian Sabellico, from whom he learnt Latin. Under Antonio Giustinian and Lorenzo Bragadin, Gasparo applied himself to logic. In 1501, at the age of 18, he was sent to the university of Padua, where he studied Greek under Musuro, and philosophy under the celebrated Pietro Pomponaccio, whose tenets were opposed by Gasparo Contarini in 1516, in an anonymous work, entitled "De immortalitate animæ." The Dominican Francesco da Nardo was Contarini's professor of metaphysics. After his education was completed, we find him, in 1519, employed by the Republic as Proveditor in the Polesine, where he acted most ably as a land surveyor. He was subsequently bailiff and captain at Rovigo, and was sent into the territory of Bassano, where he displayed his knowledge of irrigation by constructing a water conduit for that province. Thence he passed to Padua, and his skill in hydraulics was again demonstrated by the dykes which he raised to prevent the inundation of the Adige.

Such were the studies and such the pursuits which prepared the nobility of Venice for diplomacy. On the 24th September the Senate appointed Gasparo ambassador to Charles V. In Flanders he made the acquaintance of Wolsey, of Sir Thomas More, of Pace and the Wyngfields. On the sands at Dover he received his first greeting from Henry VIII. In Spain he again fell in with Sir Richard Wyngfield, of whose death at Toledo he makes mention.

A fortnight after the death of Sir Richard Wyngfield, Gasparo Contarini took leave of the Emperor, and arrived at Venice. During his absence he had been elected sage for the main land, and senator and captain of Brescia, which last post he did not accept. In October 1527 he went as ambassador to the Duke of Ferrara, at whose court he met Sir Gregory Casal, who then exhibited the "large commission" (Preface, Vol. I., p. lxxxvi.) lately received at Amiens from Wolsey, and in accordance with which, Gasparo Contarini likewise persuaded the Duke to join the league against the Emperor.

The success of the joint negotiations of Contarini and Casal, and the necessity for keeping them secret, are recorded in the files of the Council of Ten.

At the commencement of 1528 Gasparo Contarini was appointed ambassador to Clement VII. immediately after the Pope's release from St. Angelo, and remained in this capacity at the Papal Court from May 1528 until December 1529. During that period he again met Sir Gregory Casal, and learnt from him many particulars about the divorce of Henry VIII. He also made the acquaintance of Gardyner and Bryan, and renewed that which he had formed in Flanders with Peter Vannes. When the Emperor entered Bologna on the 4th November 1529, Contarini went to meet him, and was most graciously received by his Majesty, who would by no means allow the ambassador to dismount.

On the 31st December 1529, the Republic of Venice accredited Contarini as ambassador to the Emperor for the second time, and on the 8th March 1530, he reported his proceedings from the spring of 1528. In 1530 Gasparo Contarini was sage of the Council, Chief of the Ten, and "Riformatore" or "Superintendent" of the University of Padua. The Republic was at length deprived of his valuable services by Paul III., who in March 1535, made this most able of the Signory's diplomatists a Cardinal of the Church of Rome. On the receipt of the news at Venice Luigi Mocenigo exclaimed, "These priests have robbed us of the best nobleman in this city."

In 1536 Cardinal Contarini was appointed Bishop of Belluno; and in 1540 at the suit of Charles V., the Pope sent him as apostolic legate to the diet of Ratisbon. Desirous of reconciling the Catholics and Protestants, the Emperor ordered a book to be published containing the disputed points for discussion by both parties, and the Legate Contarini was appointed to decide the questions contained in one of the many works concerning "The Form of Concord," but this he declined to do, referring the settlement to the Pope or to the general council. Although accused of leaning too much to the opinions of the Reformers and imperilling the Papal authority, he justified himself so completely, that in 1542 Paul III. conferred on him the Legation of Bologna, and on the 7th August in that year he was accredited ambassador to the Emperor. He died the 24th of that month of inflammation, in the monastery outside Bologna, called Santa Maria del Monte. His remains were deposited in the church of St. Procolo, and finally, in December 1565, removed to the church of the Madonna dell' Orto at Venice, where in the Contarini chapel, his bust, by the famous sculptor Vittoria, may yet be seen. The inscription follows :—

GASPARIS CONTARENI,
S. R. E. CARD.
OSSA
CVIVS ADMIRANDAM INTEGRITATEM, DOCTRINAM, AC ELOQVENTIAM, IN VTRAQ. REP. ET APVD SVMMOS REGES, GESTA, ET SCRIPTA, TESTANTVR.
BONONIÆ LEGAT. PONTIF.
NATVRÆ CESSIT
M.D. XLII.
VIXIT ANNOS LIX.
ALOYSIVS ÆQVES, ET GASP.
EX FRATRE NEPOT.
TANTO VIRO.¹

Amongst the many works composed by Gasparo Contarini, was one entitled, “Responsio ad Apologiam Francisci Georgij,” which doubtless confuted Friar Georgio’s arguments in favour of the divorce demanded by Henry VIII. The work no longer exists; but like his official despatches, it connects him with England, whilst his familiar letters addressed to Reginald Pole form another link between England and this illustrious Venetian.

To return to my narrative. A fortnight after the appearance of the lampoons at St. Paul’s, Henry VIII. and his prime minister received from Charles V. the instrument of compromise, appointing them judges of his disputes with France. In July Francis accepted the mediation of England, and on the 2nd of August Wolsey landed at Calais. The Venetian Ambassador remarks that the English Sovereign was certainly desirous of peace, remembering how much the treasure left him by his father had been diminished by the last war with France; and because England was still agitated by the fall of Buckingham. On the 5th of August Wolsey opened the conference, announcing that he had been sent by his master to make peace between his nephew the Emperor and his brother the King of France. The Papal Nuncio approved of the project, and then followed a long debate between the Chancellors of the Emperor and of King Francis, Gattinara and Duprat. The first sitting was terminated by a proposal from Wolsey to make a truce, as a preliminary to negotiations for peace; and the conference then adjourned.

¹ See “Inserizioni Veneziane raccolte ed illustrate da Emmanuele Antonio Cigogna,” vol ii. pp. 226, 227, et seq.

Before the arrival of Wolsey at Calais, his intention to hold a personal interview with the Emperor was already known at Ghent, and on the day preceding the first conference, when the Cardinal gave a dinner to the Imperial Commissioners, his bias in favour of their master was evident. On the night of the 2nd August, when the news of Wolsey's arrival at Calais reached Ghent, Charles V. immediately sent congratulations to him on the event by a deputation, the chief member of which, although a Neapolitan, was well acquainted with the foreign policy of England. Giambatista Spinelli, Count of Cariati, had been constantly employed by the Emperor Maximilian both as governor of Verona and also on diplomatic missions¹ in Italy and Flanders; he had been in communication with Pace, Wyngfield, Sir Thomas Spinelli (the Florentine), and other envoys in the service of England. For these reasons Charles V. made choice of him to compliment Cardinal Wolsey and escort him from Calais to Bruges. But on hearing that the Emperor's general, the Count of Nassau, had taken Bouillon from Robert de la Marck, See Mr. Brewer's Calendar (1509-1518) passim.

Wolsey considering this an infringement of the seven weeks' truce, re-called his baggage-waggons, already on their way to the Imperial Court, and refused to proceed.

Contarini has left us details of his reception by the Emperor not found in Cavendish.

Wolsey was accompanied by the Lucchese Peter Vannes (whom we still find in the diplomatic service of England in the reign of Queen Mary), and by Sir Thomas More; but from neither of them could Contarini elicit any information beyond the assurance that the negotiations had no other object except to effect peace between the Emperor and Francis. By a letter from Wolsey to Henry VIII.,¹ it will be seen in how haughty a manner he treated the King of Denmark, who, as we learn from Contarini, had refused to attend him on his entry. But the English minister's resentment did not proceed solely from personal vanity. Already in 1518, as we know on the authority of Sebastian Giustinian, the Danish King had provoked the Cardinal's resentment by attempting to negotiate a league with France to the detriment of England. So far Wolsey's proud and haughty bearing was patriotic; and that he had a good memory for any disrespect shown to his country was again demonstrated in 1523 when the fugitive King Christian having been hospitably received at Calais, Wolsey gave as a reason that thus had it been done, "more out of regard for his " alliance with the Emperor, than from any kindness he " had ever shown to England." Finally in June 1524, Wolsey's sense of the national supremacy is recorded by the Imperial Chancellor Gattinara, who said that to effect it, and prevent the Emperor from seeming superior to his King, Wolsey would not scruple to ruin the universe. •

¹ "State Papers," vol. i., pp. 36, 38.

In the letter following the one which contains the account of his interview with the King of Denmark at Bruges, Wolsey acquaints Henry VIII. with the arrangements made for the marriage of the Princess Mary to the Emperor, and under that same date, 19th August 1521, Gasparo Contarini makes a shrewd guess at the event in the following passage :—" On the day before, the Emperor " and Wolsey went in great state to the Church of St. " James, patron of the order of S. Jago di Compostella, " his Imperial Majesty being clad in gold brocade," a material which Contarini had never seen him wear on the highest holydays. The mass chaunted on the occasion was that of the Holy Ghost, which caused the Papal Nuncio Caracciolo, who was Contarini's neighbour at the ceremony, to remark upon the fact, and to infer that the Imperialists had already concluded the business,—that the French would be topsyturvy. But as the Emperor appeared more calm and tranquil than he had been of late, his confessor held out hopes of a peace, which he said was zealously sought by Wolsey, whose sketch of the Emperor at this same period represents him as " very wise for his age and well understanding his affairs " —right cold and temperate in speech, with assured " manner, couching his words right well, and to good purpose when he doth speak."¹ The Imperial Chancellor declares that Wolsey expected to find Charles V. a lad in leading-strings, such as he had been under De Chièvres, whose subserviency to France rendered his master contemptible; but Gattinara assured Contarini that for the future there would be neither peace nor truce between the Emperor and the French unless better terms were offered. The ¹ See "State Papers," vol. vi., p. 85. Wolsey to King Henry VIII., Gravelines, August 28, 1521.

Papal Nuncio Caracciolo already foresaw that Henry VIII. would take part with his nephew. As the negotiations were conducted exclusively by the Emperor, the Lady Margaret, Gattinara, and Wolsey, the result of the conference could only be surmised. At length, on the 20th August 1521 the two Papal Nuncios were summoned to attend the conference. Wolsey continued strenuously to advocate peace, but the Emperor told him that Leo X., whom he could not disappoint, was the person who rejected both peace and truce.¹ The Nuncio Caracciolo resented this remark; nevertheless he ratified it by telling Wolsey that the Pope would not desert his partizans; whilst the Emperor on his part rejected an offer made by the Cardinal in the name of Francis, of a portion of the Venetian territories, and, determining to keep faith with the Pope, he turned a deaf ear to all overtures.

On the 26th August, Cardinal Wolsey quitted Bruges, having had good opportunity for studying the character of the Emperor, who, though no longer in a state of pupillage, did not dispense with the advice of his council.

Wolsey remained negotiating at Calais until the close of November. Immediately on arriving in England he received news of the death of Leo X., and thereupon despatched Pace to Rome. Simultaneously we hear from Ghent "that the treaty between the Emperor and " the King of England might be considered as settled." It is probable that Wolsey gave the finishing stroke to it, having been cajoled by promises of Imperial support in his canvass for the Papal tiara; but the nominee of Charles V., from the commencement of the contest, was in reality the Cardinal de' Medici, who, as the prime minister of Leo X., had persuaded the Emperor to attempt the expulsion of the French from Italy. At a later period Charles alluded to these persuasions of the Cardinal, when he had occasion to vituperate him, as Clement VII., for his ingratitude :—

¹ See also text, p. 400, for confirmation from the Emperor's own lips.

“ His Holiness is well aware, how, being a youth, and scarcely knowing what I was about, I entered on this war for him alone : I do not say for Pope Leo, but for him, for he ruled Pope Leo. Nor were the mutual injuries between the King of France and myself of such a nature as to preclude adjustment ; but at his instigation I waged the war ; and he has had very good proof how far one and the other of us may be trusted.”

The Emperor had then been suffering from ague for many months ; but though ill at ease in mind and body his courage did not fail him, and he said a few days later to the Florentine envoy at Madrid :—

“ I am expecting bad news both from Milan and Naples ; but I care not the least in the world ; I shall go into Italy, and thus have a fairer opportunity to obtain my own and take my revenge on those who have wronged me, most especially on that poltroon the Pope. Some day or other Martin Luther will, perhaps, become a man of worth.”¹

A fortnight after this ebullition of resentment the expectation of sinister intelligence was dispelled by the victory of Pavia ; and two years later the sack of Rome requited Charles V. for the ingratitude of Cardinal de' Medici, whose canvass for the Popedom in 1522 had proved no less unsuccessful than that of Cardinal Wolsey.

On the 27th May 1522, Charles V. embarked at Calais for Dover ; and from the letters of Gasparo Contarini we have a minute account of all that befell him in England from that day until his departure from Southampton for St.

¹ See text, p. 400.

Ander, on the 5th July. The accounts of the English Court, both by Contarini himself and by the Imperial ministers, are frank and unreserved. The Chancellor's bad opinion of Wolsey was confirmed by Pedro Ruiz de la Mota, Bishop of Palencia, who pronounced the Cardinal a marvellous busy-body and detestably arrogant, adding, nevertheless, that his bidding must be done. However unamiable he may have appeared to the Imperialists, the supremacy of the prime minister of England could not be disputed. The rupture with France being formally announced in May by Sir Thomas Cheney, who then took leave of King Francis, Clarencieux proclaimed war at Lyons on the 28th of the same month. On its passage towards Spain in July, the Imperial squadron received news from an advice-boat of the attack on Morlaix and St. Paul de Leon by the Earl of Surrey and Sir Richard Wyngfield, who seems to have combined the soldier with the diplomatist.

From St. Ander to Aguilar, the Venetian and the Piedmontese, Contarini and Gattinara, travelled together, and the Imperial Chancellor, discussing English politics, expressed his belief that King Henry would persevere in the war with France, for the sake of making himself master of Scotland, and obtaining possession of his sister Margaret and her son. He taxed Wolsey with irreligion and rapacity, of which last defect he quoted the following instance. Whilst the alliance with the Emperor was in course of negotiation, Wolsey, he said, did not scruple to demand of the Emperor for himself and some other personages of the English Court, an annual pension of 22,000 ducats, saying that such was the amount hitherto received by them from France, and the Emperor promised compliance with this demand. Gattinara also said that Wolsey's offers to settle the disputes between the Emperor and the Signory proceeded solely from a desire to obtain some pecuniary acknowledgment. In conclusion, to win the good graces of his Venetian companion, he vituperated the embargo laid on the Flanders galleys, vowing that the Emperor would never have acted so unfairly; and he expressed a suspicion that were any pretext afforded, the property of the Venetian merchants in England, and the galleys also, would be seized. Although the Imperial Chancellor did not think highly of Wolsey, the alliance with England continued, nor do we hear anything of the divorce, either from Rome or Spain, although in November 1522 Sir Thomas Boleyn arrived as ambassador at Valladolid, together with Richard Sampson, and strongly urged the prosecution of the war with France.

On the 3rd August 1523, a league and confederacy for the defence of Italy were agreed upon between Adrian VI. the Emperor, the King of England, the Signory of Venice, the Archduke of Austria, the Duke of Milan, the Cardinal de' Medici, the Florentines, and the community of Genoa. On the following 24th September the Pope died, and was succeeded by Cardinal de' Medici, who assumed the title of Clement VII. The French immediately appeared under Milan, but recrossed the Alps in the spring of 1524, returning in the autumn, under the command of Francis, who took up his quarters in Milan and immediately commenced the siege of Pavia, where he was captured by the Imperialists on the 24th February 1525. From the accession of Clement VII. until that event, the Emperor had ceased to place any faith in his allies, but he did not as yet seek to annul his betrothal to the Princess Mary, although two months before the tide turned in his favour he was much amused at hearing her compared to an "owl" by the famous papal diplomatist Nicholas Schomberg, Archbishop of Capua. Whilst the Archbishop was negotiating for Clement VII. at Madrid in December 1524, he strongly urged the Emperor to prefer the Princess of Portugal to Mary Tudor, who he said would never marry his Majesty, neither would she find a husband in France, as although Henry might desire the connexion, the English would have a King of their own. In time of war, he continued, they made the same use of their Princess as they did of an "owl," as a decoy for alluring the smaller birds. The Emperor not understanding the simile, asked the Archbishop what he meant by the "owl," and when the parallel was explained to him, he laughed heartily, nor did he seem to disapprove of the hint thus jocosely given.

The betrothal of Mary Tudor was considered valid until after the unexpected victory of Pavia, the news of which reached Madrid on the 10th March 1525. One of the first foreign ministers who presented himself at the Old Alcazar of the Moors,¹ to offer congratulations on this event, was Gasparo Contarini. He found the Emperor pacing a gallery and conversing with the Chancellor Gattinara, Mons. de Bresse, and Mons. de la Chau. Seven or eight times the Emperor passed from one end of the corridor to the other, discoursing the whole time. At length, on approaching a window, he called Contarini to him, and received his congratulations most graciously, saying, amongst other things, that he owed the victory to God alone, who, knowing his good will, had rewarded him far beyond his deserts. The Emperor chose it at once to be distinctly understood that he owed nothing to his allies.¹

¹ The Alcazar was destroyed by fire on Christmas eve 1734, but in the MS. diary of Francesco Contarini, who travelled through Spain in the year 1581, it is stated that the Alcazar then consisted of two quadrangles, between which was the Chapel Royal; fronting the palace was a large square, having at its extremity the stables, and over them was the armoury containing all the body and horse armour of Charles V., and also the armour and weapons used by Francis I. at the battle of Pavia. (See original autograph diary of Francesco Contarini, penes me.)

On the day after receiving the news from Pavia, Charles V., clad in a black frieze cape and jerkin, without any mark of rejoicing, attended high mass, and listened to a sermon, the text of which was :—

“Laudamini nomen Dei vestri quia fecit nobiscum mirabilia.”

The Chancellor Gattinara did not conceal his ill opinion of the assistance received from Henry VIII., and said openly in the presence of the Nuncio Castiglione, Contarini, and others, that he knew not what the English would do, or what inclination they might have to make war on a prostrate foe. To the Genoese alone the Emperor expressed some obligation. In reply to the congratulations of their ambassador, he said that he understood how once upon a time they had wished to give themselves to old King Lewis of France, who declined the offer, saying he gave them to the Devil, because they were so changeable. The Emperor added ironically, “and in like manner at this present, I can say that, if not by Genoa, I have been well served by the whole of Italy,” implying that with the exception of Genoa all the Italian powers had betrayed him. Even this solitary exception was accidental. Antoniotto Adorno had no greater scruples about changing sides than the rest of his countrymen, as we learn from Contarini's letter of 5th March 1525. To the Papal Nuncio Castiglione, who apologized by saying that he was not aware of the Pope's negotiations with France until he got to Lyons, and that many unjust accusations were made against his Holiness, the Emperor made answer, first, that before Castiglione's departure from Rome he knew the Pope was well inclined towards him, but that subsequently he changed; and, secondly, with regard to false accusations against his Holiness, God had made him (the Emperor) king of men, and not king of tongues.

¹ The character given by Gasparo Contarini from first to last bears throughout the stamp of truth : the confessor of Charles V. in 1521, knew his penitent well, and gave a sober and impartial account of him, when he said that he was endowed with every virtue, his only defect being that with difficulty could he “forget injuries.” This opinion was transmitted to the Signory by Contarini from Ghent on the 30th July 1521, immediately after a conversation with the Emperor’s confessor, whom he styles a Franciscan friar resident at his monastery there. (See text, p. 151.)

Immediately after the battle of Pavia we hear of a mission to Portugal. The Emperor's marriage with the King's sister was already anticipated. When Contarini asked Gattinara what compensation the Emperor would demand of France for the King of England, the Chancellor replied: "Verily, the Emperor will take small heed " for King Henry."

Francis assured the Emperor that had the victory of Pavia been delayed ten days, England would have declared in his favour, and he offered to exhibit letters to that effect from Henry, who still claimed a large portion of the captive monarch's territories as his share of the spoil. Early in June, Tunstall and Wyngfield are said to have offered the Emperor a sum of money on account of Mary Tudor's dower, and for the consignment of Bayonne; but the Cortes urged him to marry Isabella of Portugal. Later in the month Gattinara professed to believe that the Princess of England was destined for her cousin the King of Scotland, and on the 4th July it was reported that the Emperor's envoy Peñalosa brought a refusal from Henry VIII. either to send her to Spain or release the Emperor from his obligations; whilst on the other hand the Imperial Court at Toledo declared that the Emperor's marriage to the Portuguese Princess was already settled.

Although an open rupture was for some time delayed, the family compact between Charles V. and Henry VIII. was at an end, and Gasparo Contarini in his report of the Emperor's court made to the Venetian Senate on the 16th November 1525, expresses himself on the subject thus:—

“He (the Emperor) also bears ill-will to the King of England, and I wrote to your Serenity many months ago that discord between them had commenced showing itself; and now that at this present peace has been concluded between the kingdom of France and the King of England without the Emperor's intervention, I believe him to be extremely dissatisfied.”¹

It is, therefore, not improbable that at this period Clement VII. may have been sounded concerning the divorce. Sampson, Tunstall and Wyngfield were succeeded at the Imperial Court by Lee and Ghinucci, who found themselves there at the time of the sack of Rome. But as this volume comes down no further than the month of December 1526, the treatment received by Ghinucci and his colleague, after Clarendieux proclaimed war on the Emperor, needs no comment at present. Suffice it to say that the conferences between Charles V. and his uncle at Calais and in England were as unproductive of lasting friendship, as those held on the Field of Cloth of Gold by Henry VIII. and Francis I.

THE APPENDIX.

In my Preface to Vol. II. of the Venetian Calendar, p. lxi., I alluded to the successor of the late Count Dandolo, as director of the Venetian archives, stating how much might be expected from him, and I observed as an apology for my appendices, how impossible it was to discover every document in time to be inserted in its exact chronological order (Vol. II., pp. xlvi., xlvii.)."

¹ See Alberi, Venetian Reports, Series 1, vol. ii., p. 62.

I have now the satisfaction of announcing the realization of my expectations. Amongst his many other researches Cav. Tommaso Gar directed his attention to certain bundles of unclassed documents, part of which were evidently a parcel of the spoil obtained at the sack of Rome, as already noticed by me (Vol. II., Preface, p. liii.); another part consisted of a miscellaneous correspondence addressed chiefly to the Council of Ten; and a third had been originally placed in the Archives of the Board of Trade, and was probably mislaid with the rest in 1797.

The earliest of the supplementary documents thus liberally communicated to me by Cav. T. Gar, concerning Great Britain and the Papal Court, is dated from St. Mark's, Rome; the palace which still bears that name having been built by the Venetian Pope Paul II. in 1564. Pius IV. made a present of it to the Republic of Venice, and it is now the residence of the Austrian Embassy. The document in question is an original draft on paper, presented to Paul II. in his new abode by the Datary for his Holiness's approval. A transcript on parchment was forwarded as usual to James III. King of Scotland, on the 23rd January 1466. It relates to the appointment of Patrick Graham to the bishopric of St. Andrew's. The new bishop in 1470 had sufficient influence to have his see erected into an archbishopric, and became Papal Legate in Scotland, an office which caused him so much vexation that he died at Lochleven Castle of a broken heart in 1478.

The next drafts authenticated by the same Pope bear the date of St. Peter's, 28th January 1471, and relate to the Prothonotary James Goldwell. They are addressed to the Duke of Clarence, to Thomas Bouchier, Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury, to George Nevill, Archbishop of York, and to his brother Richard, Earl of Warwick, "the king-maker," who had replaced Henry VI. on the throne three months before the date of these documents. It appears, therefore, that Paul II. immediately acknowledged the change of dynasty effected in October 1470, and which ended with the death of Warwick at Barnet field on the 14th April 1471. In the following month of August (as will be seen in the first volume of the Venetian Calendar) Edward IV. appointed Goldwell his ambassador to Rome, and from the contents of the Papal breves, written in January of that year, it may be inferred that the Prothonotary had the support of the Duke of Clarence, whose reconciliation with Edward took place early in 1471. Goldwell must have been an able diplomatist, as he found favour both with Lancastrians and Yorkists.

From Pope Sixtus IV. there is the draft of a breve dated 28th September 1473, and addressed to Edward IV. It relates to the deanery of Salisbury. In 1484 the same Pope, by birth a Genoese, complains to Richard III. of certain grievances to which the merchants of Genoa were subjected in England, very much to the regret of his Holiness, who alludes to the expectations entertained of the King's virtue (virtutis) and of his just administration. In 1485 another Genoese Pope (Innocent VIII.) wrote to King Richard, complaining that his fellow-countryman Ambrogio de' Negroni had been defrauded of 3,816 ducats by Walter Fitzsimons, Archbishop of Dublin.

Besides the drafts of Papal missives destined for England, and taken from the spoils of the Vatican, we have original letters on parchment from John Morton, Archbishop of Canterbury, to Pope Innocent VIII., in reply to his recommendation of Sir John Kendal, showing that Kendal, who, as seen in the first volume of the Venetian Calendar, enjoyed great favour with Richard III., had given offence to Henry VII., by assuming the title of Prior of St. John's without the consent of the King. They were, however, subsequently reconciled. The abilities of this skilful negotiator are noticed by Lord Bacon in his life of Henry VII.

Cav. Gar, who has with great skill and judgment ordered a classification to be made of 170 bundles of letters, addressed to the Council of Ten by the Republic's agents in all parts of the world, has amongst other documents brought to light several bearing the date of London. The earliest of these was written on the 31st March 1515, by the ambassador Andrea Badoer, and contains a passage in cipher, deciphered for the Ten at the time of its receipt. In substance it is as follows :—

“ It is certain that the late Queen of France has married the Duke of Suffolk, who, less than two years ago, was another person's servant.¹ Being in favour with the King, he, with some others, on the demise of the King of France, was sent thither as ambassador, and as now witnessed, he performed the embassy for himself. It is supposed that in secret the King gave his consent. God grant that the marriage be not ill-omened. The whole kingdom clamours, and cannot bear it, and not only England but France likewise. So, owing to this uproar, orders were given in the event of their quitting France, that as the lesser evil, they should go to Calais and not to London, for I certainly think they would be ill received, as I perceive very great confusion, and most especially between the lords and the people (i signori et popoli) who, on the day before yesterday in Parliament, well nigh punched their heads (che poco manco non se habi dà sopra la testa), and were told that the marriage did not take place by consent of any of the lords (signori) with the exception of the Archbishop of York, who has sprung up like a mushroom, and if he escapes this [attack ?] he will have performed no small feat."

¹ “ Fameglia in l' altrui servitij.” Query, an allusion to his proposed marriage to the Archduchess Margaret. (See Venetian Calendar, vol. ii., nos. 371, 382, 464.)

The despatches of Sebastian Giustinian show that the marriage was not liked, and we now learn that this aristocratic feeling was shared by the people. The invasion of the House of Lords by the mob, in demonstration of this ill-feeling, has not been recorded by any historian, nor until the appearance of Mr. Brewer's Calendar was it generally known that Wolsey favoured the match.

The "popular movement" in Parliament took place on the 29th March 1515. In July 1516, Suffolk absented himself from the Court because the King, at the suggestion of Wolsey, refused to pay a debt contracted by his brother-in-law in France. By the Venetian Calendar¹ we learn that in May 1517, Suffolk was again paying the most obsequious court to Wolsey, on whom he waited like a dependent.

The same letter from Badoer to the Ten reminds us also of the claims of England upon Cyprus. In February 1515, Julian de' Medici married Philiberta of Savoy, in right of whom he proposed wresting that island from the Venetians. When the project was communicated to Henry VIII. he declared, at the suggestion of Badoer, that if the Venetians were expelled from Cyprus, he should claim the island for himself as the heir of Richard Cœur de Lion, forgetting, or perhaps never having known, that the Lion-hearted King sold the island for 100,000 bezants to Gui de Lusignan.

Amongst papers of another class and of a later period than those calendared in the present volume, some relate to the Board of Trade, and as they bear upon a recent question of maritime insurance, I have obtained a special permission from the Master of the Rolls to allude to them here.

¹ Vol. ii. p. 381.

By my friend Mr. Manley Hopkins, to whose "Manual of Marine Insurance" (which followed his "Handbook of Average") allusion was made in my last Preface (p. 1.), I was informed that—

"In 1867 one of the tea ships from China, contrary, it is alleged, to custom, had a tier or layer of wine in casks at the bottom of her hold, and had to jettison a considerable quantity of tea to lighten the vessel, and preserve all the contents. On discharging her cargo it was observed that all the teas had acquired a vinous or alcoholic smell and flavour, by which they became depreciated about 25 per cent. of their full value. The underwriters affirm that they are not liable for this depreciation; first, in accordance with the Tea Clause,¹ because the tea was not actually in contact with sea water; and, secondly, because they allege that it was contrary to custom to stow any wine in a tea ship."

This circumstance caused much dispute between the underwriters in London and the merchants whose teas they insured.

The papers from the archives of the Venetian Board of Trade, lately communicated to me by Cav. Gar, as already stated, show that in March 1588, 100 bags of currants were shipped at Venice for London, where the merchant for whom they were destined refused to receive them, because they had been damaged by the leakage of wines. The case was referred for arbitration to two grocers, viz., John Hyde (an ancestor of Lord Chancellor Clarendon) and Richard Aldworth, who rated the loss on each bag at 40s. Hereupon the purser took the currants for account of his master, the shipowner, paying the original consignee their "prime cost." This arrangement did not meet the approbation of the shipowner, and at length, in October or November 1590, the Chancellor, Sir Christopher Hatton, converted into a statute of the realm the award made by Hyde and Aldworth. By a decree in Chancery it was ordered that the shipowner in Venice should ratify it before the 15th June 1591. The currants had been insured at a premium of 15 per cent., but none of the parties throughout the proceedings ever attempted to hold the insurers responsible for average; and as in all matters relating to maritime insurance, Venetian custom may be considered law, it appears to me that the wine and currant case of 1588 might facilitate a decision in the wine and tea case of 1867.

¹ See Handbook of Average, 3rd edition, p. 255.

I have also been favoured by Cav. Gar with a further supply of documents concerning England, one of which contradicts an assertion made by Sanuto, and printed by me at p. 191, No. 374, of the present volume.

Sanuto states that Cardinal Adrian, Bishop of Bath and Wells, was never heard of after his departure from Venice in December 1521, and it was generally supposed that he had been murdered on his journey thence towards Rome. We now find by a letter which the Council of Ten received in May 1523, that Cardinal Adrian was still alive, and was urging his namesake, Pope Adrian VI., to restore him to his dignity and his benefices.

In St. Mark's Church, fronting the Chapel of the Cross, there yet stand two exquisite bronze candelabra, wrought by Maphio Oliviero of Brescia, with an inscription purporting that they were presented to that chapel by Altobello Averoldi, Bishop of Pola, who during many years filled the post of Papal Legate in Venice. In 1523, Averoldi was Governor of Bologna for Pope Adrian VI., and being by birth a Venetian subject, he kept up a correspondence with the Ten, part of which is in cipher, but with a contemporaneous translation.

In one of these letters, dated Bologna, 10th May 1523, Averoldi announced the arrival there of a messenger from England and France, by whom he was informed that Henry and Wolsey would on no account consent to the re-instatement of Cardinal Adrian. The messenger considered it certain that Adrian's restoration would never be permitted. Moreover he told Averoldi that he had been informed by the great Lombard statesman, Hironimo Morone, that there was a person at Milan who could interpret any cipher however difficult. It is probable that the fame of Zuan Soro (alluded to in Vol. II. of the Venetian Calendar, Preface, p. lxxii.), did not suffer from so vague an assertion. An astute guess at the meaning of one or two signs would hardly suffice for the complete interpretation of an alphabet composed in cipher throughout, and used by such adepts in the art as the Venetian secretaries of the 16th century.

Italian intelligence was appreciated and well rewarded by Henry VII. Adrian de Castello obtained from that King first the see of Hereford, and then that of Bath and Wells; and John and Silvester de Giglis, the uncle and nephew, were rewarded in immediate succession with the bishopric of Worcester. Pietro Carmeliano was the King's Latin secretary, and it has been already seen (Venetian Calendar, vol. i.), that if he was useful to the English monarch, he also aided the Republic of Venice at the time of the League of Cambrai. A letter now brought to light by Cav. Gar, convinces me that some years before Julius II. levelled that blow at the Republic, Carmeliano had done his best to dissuade Henry VII. from encouraging the Pope in his attack. Although unsigned, the letter is evidently from the Latin secretary, dated London, 8th March 1504. It is addressed to the Venetian ex-consul there, by whom it was forwarded to the Council of Ten.

Cardinal Adrian (then secretary to Pope Julius), although the Venetians had helped him to obtain the red hat in 1503,¹ was in the following year advocating the Papal attack on Venice,—an act of apparent ingratitude, which may perhaps be attributed to official duty as paramount to private sentiment. Be this as it may, Carmeliano declares that early in 1504 Cardinal Grisogono (such was Adrian's title) and Cardinal Sta. Croce (Bernardo Caravaial, a Spaniard) wrote to Henry VII. in the Pope's name, requesting his aid against the Signory, for the recovery of Rimini and Faenza. In reply to these letters, which reached London in the middle of February 1504, Carmeliano took no notice of the two cities in the Romagna, and upon the King inquiring the reason of this omission, the Secretary replied that if he had said a word to the Cardinals, they would instantly have shown it to the Pope, who would have claimed it as a promise, and that it was inopportune for his Majesty to embark in the labyrinth of Italian politics. He added that the King had a good excuse for declining, as the dispute was one of temporal jurisdiction (contese del mondo). Carmeliano states that the King approved of his opinion, nor was any reply given, "as everything passes through his (Carmeliano's) hands." Carmeliano then adds, that the Consul Giustinian had communicated to him letters from the Signory on the same subject, apparently combining a request for letters of recommendation from the King to the Pope. This, Carmeliano says, could by no means be conceded, "as his Majesty "has many important matters to arrange with his "Holiness."

¹ See Venetian Reports of Rome, annotated by Tommaso Gar, in Alberi's Collection, Series 2, vol. iii. p. 57.

The letter from the Signory to the consul Nicolò Giustinian may be read in Vol. I. Venetian Calendar (No. 837), confirming the authenticity of Carmeliano's information.

Allusion has been made by me¹ to the death at Padua of Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, and to a suspicion that his death was caused by poison. This suspicion was shared by Bernardo Giorgio, who assumed the office of Podestà of Padua a month after Courtenay's death, and wrote his epitaph, published by Scardeon in 1560.²

“ Anglia quem genuit, fueratque habitura patronum
CORTONEVM, celsa hæc continet arca ducem,
Credita causa necis regni affectata cupido,
Reginæ optatum tunc quoque connubium :
Cui regni proceres non consensere Philippo
Reginam regi iungere posse rati. .
Europam unde fuit inveni peregrare necesse,
Ex quo mors misero contigit ante diem.
Anglia si plorat defuncto principe tanto,
Nil mirum, domino deficit illa pio.
Sed jam CORTONEVS cœlo fruiturque beatis,
Cum doleant Angli, cum sine fine gemant.
Cortonei probitas igitur, præstantia, nomen,
Dum stabit templum hoc, vivida semper erunt.
Anglia hincque etiam stabit, stabuntque Britanni :
Coniugij optati fama perennis erit.
Improba naturæ leges Libitina rescindens,
Ex æquo iuvenes præcipitatque senes.³

The “ Podestà ” had doubtless proofs of the crime, which, as seen in the late Mr. Turnbull's Calendar (p. 260), was rumoured immediately after the death of Courtenay, on the 18th of September 1556. The ambassador then resident with the Republic of Venice, on behalf of Queen

¹ Preface, vol. i. p. xxxvi.

² Bernardini Scardeonii, Canonici Pativini, De sepulchris insignibus exterorum Patavii jacentium (p. 398 in Basilica D. Antonij Confess.).

³ Basileæ apud Nicolaum Episcopum juniorem anno 1650.

Mary, was a Luccese, by name Peter Vannes, the same who in August 1521, as mentioned in the present volume, was secretary to Cardinal Wolsey at Bruges. It was doubtless supposed that Vannes must have been privy to the act, and although not an Englishman, the national character suffered from the suspicion, despite his demand “ for any open trial and assured declaration of the truth, “ in forma autentica, to which he was moved for the “ Queen’s honour, that by silent murmurs was by wicked “ persons and ignorant people unworthily and much “ blotted,—ignorant people who do not consider that of a “ godly woman can nothing proceed but godly acts.”¹

An official memorandum communicated to me in December 1868 by Cav. Gar, warrants a belief that neither Queen Mary nor Vannes were concerned in Courtenay’s death, and that it was more probably compassed by the the Spanish minister Ruy Gomez.

A despatch written from Richmond on the 31st August 1555, by the Venetian ambassador Giovanni Michiel, shows that Ruy Gomez had then quitted England, and that Philip would not leave for Brussels until Gomez returned.

Michiel had previously given various notices of Courtenay, some of which, in cipher, have been recently deciphered by the Signor Luigi Pasini, of whose labours in this matter I consider it only just to give the following account. In the autumn of 1865, when Mr. T. Duffus Hardy inspected the Venetian Archives and Public Libraries, he perceived the importance of the despatches written by Giovanni Michiel, and suggested to her Majesty’s Government that the ciphered part of them should be photographed at once, so that whatever political or domestic accidents might occur, some of the most curious materials for the continuation of the Venetian Calendar should at any rate be found in our Public Record Office. Mr. Hardy's foresight was justified in July 1866, by the removal to Vienna of various Venetian State Papers, the greater part of which, however, were restored to these archives in October 1868 together with many other records, the seizure of which dated from the year 1797.

¹ See the late Mr. Turnbull’s Calendar, p. 260.

As the Venetian Calendar has only now reached the close of 1526, the public service did not require the immediate deciphering of the ciphered part of the Michiel correspondence, commencing with the 12th March 1555, and therefore Signor Luigi Pasini (who, in consequence of Mr. Hardy's visit to Venice, immediately determined to construct a key for the discovery of these ciphers), did not feel it necessary to hasten the performance of his self-imposed task. He however completed it in January 1869, and in the following month he presented to the Record Office his complete cipher alphabet, which enables me (with his permission) to give additional particulars of undoubted authenticity concerning Edward Courtenay. Cavalier Gar has tested this key, and found it satisfactory.¹

On the 8th April 1555 Michiel wrote from London, but not in cipher, that the Earl of Devonshire had at length obtained his release, and on that day was to kiss their Majesties' hands. His departure from England is announced to the Signory on the 29th April in cipher, thus deciphered by Luigi Pasini :—

“ The Earl of Dansier (sic), either of his own choice, or by the suggestion and advice of others—or rather by command—is to depart hence today or tomorrow, with all his followers, to cross the sea; and he will go to Brussels to kiss the Emperor's hand—to thank his Majesty for the boon obtained by the most Serene King —

¹ See also an Italian pamphlet printed at Venice, in August 1869, entitled, “I Dispacci di Giovanni Michiel (1554-1557); Rettificazioni ed Aggiunte di Luigi Pasini.”

the principal author of his release—and to reside awhile at that court; not merely for the purpose, as he says, of learning its fashion and ways, knowing himself devoid of any experience, having, it may be said, grown up and been educated until now in prison, but also to be present and see the war, which—should the agreement not take place—will it is feared be waged on those frontiers [of Flanders and France?]; intending after some time to betake himself to Italy; mitigating (as many persons declare) by this fair pretext the boundary assigned him, and the commutation of his prison; although a person in his confidence has told me that the most illustrious the Chancellor (Stephen Gardyner) has told him, in the name of the most Serene Queen, that going away, he may always return at his pleasure, it sufficing that he shall not find himself here on this occasion at the time of the delivery.”¹

The Earl of Devonshire carried out his intention of seeing Italy, and on the 15th of January 1556 was at Cipher deciphered by Luigi Pasini.

¹ “ Il Conte di Dansier (sic), sia sua eletione o sia ricordo et consiglio “ di altri, o più presto commandamento, deve hoggi o dimani partir di qua “ con tutti li sui per passar il mare, et andarà a Brusseles per basciar “ la mano all’ Imperator, per ringratiar Sua Maestà della mercede “ ottenuta dal Serenissimo Re principal autore della sua liberatione, et “ per resieder un pezzo in quella corte, non solo affine, come egli dice, “ di imparar lo uso et pratiche de quella, cognoscendosi senza alcun’ “ experientia, essendo si può dir cresciuto et fino a questa età allevato
“ in prigione; ma per trovarsi ancor presente et veder la guerra che “ questo anno, non succedendo lo accordo, si teme debbe esser a quelle “ frontiere, con animo di ridursi poi dopo qualche tempo in Italia; “ colorando come molti affermano con questo honesto pretesto il confine,
“ che gli è dato, et la comutatione della prigione, ancor che da persona “ sua confidente mi sia ditto, che lo illustrissimo Cancellier lo abbia “ assicurato per nome della Serenissima Regina, che andando, potrà “ sempre senza altra licentia di Sua Maestà tornarsene a suo pia“ cere; basta che non si troverà quì in questa occasione et tempo del
“ parto.” Since Signor Luigi Pasini’s discovery of the Michiel cipher, he has devoted his talents to the interpretation of that used by Michiel Surian, and his industry and ingenuity have been rewarded with complete success. Surian’s cipher differs completely from that of his predecessor, Giovanni Michiel, both in form and signification. He also makes use of another cipher, which differs from the rest of the correspondence, and Signor Pasini thinks it to be that employed at the time by Venetian Ambassadors when writing to each other. He has deposited fac-similes of these two ciphers in the Public Record Office, at London.

Venice on a visit to Vannes, and three weeks previously a communication had been made to the Council of Ten, by a Dalmatian soldier, the substance of which, as recorded in the above-mentioned minute, is as follows :—

On the 24th December 1555, Marco of Risano having appeared before the Chiefs of the Ten, was addressed thus,—

“ You told the Procurator Carlo Morosini that you know of an order given for the murder in this city of Courtenay, who is coming hither from England. Narrate what you know concerning this matter.”

To this interrogatory Marco of Risano replied,—

“ On the 28th of August (1555), Ruy Gomez quitted England for Flanders, and before his departure he arranged for me to speak with him. I went to his house, and found him in a great hurry on the eve of setting out, so that *I was no longer able to speak to him. He said to me,*¹ ‘ Captain, thou art to cross over to Flanders ; thou wilt come and meet me there.’ I crossed on our Lady’s Eve in September, and went to Brussels, where I found the said Don Ruy Gomez ; and having been with him several times he made me return repeatedly. At length on the 18th October, when about to proceed on my journey, I went to see him, and he said to me, ‘ Captain, I have heard of your renown, that you are a brave and honest man, and can do a service which will be very agreeable to me. If thou wilt perform this service I will give thee a thousand crowns, and obtain for thee the favour of the King, who will cause thee to obtain more than thou hast had from the Emperor. There is going to Venice a certain individual, named Courtenay, who expects to be King of England. On my sending to thee a person of mine, according to description, you will be able to discover his abode, and perform the service in his company, as he will have other companions, and you being acquainted with the place, will be able to find boats and the ferries for their escape, so that they may not be seized ; they are good men and true, and carry two harquebuses, each with three balls ; when they shall have done the deed, assist them, and accompany them into Puglia, when thou shalt see what I will do for thee.' I answered him that on the opportunity's presenting itself I would act willingly ; answering thus for my own benefit, but God forbid that I should kill any one for money, were they to give me Naples; and so as I speak the truth so may God help me, nor as yet has anything more come of it."

¹ “ di modo che non gli potei parlar più : lui mi disse,” etc.

The statement of the Dalmatian bravo bears the stamp of truth ; and we may therefore suppose that the demand of Vannes, for an open trial, to vindicate the Queen's honour was made without guile. A gross violation of the law of nations was to be perpetrated to the detriment of Venice ; and my belief is that of this, as of many other sanguinary acts unjustly attributed to Mary, the Queen and the English Ambassador were alike ignorant. The crime was exclusively Spanish, and was designed and executed by Ruy Gomez.

In the church of St. Antonio, at Padua, there still exists the following inscription :—

ODOARDO COURTENAI,

1556.

But Courtenay's remains are no longer in the chapel of the Crocifisso, where it may be read ; nor is it known when or whither they were removed.

It is said that his tomb at St. Antonio's, being a temporary one, bore no epitaph, so that the one composed by Bernardo Georgio exists in print only, and not in marble.

In the first volume of the Venetian Calendar, No. 823, the death of Arthur, Prince of Wales, is recorded ; and now amongst the miscellaneous documents above-mentioned is an original draft without any date, though evidently written at the close of the 15th or beginning of the 16th century, condoling with the King of England on the death of his son in the name of the Doge (Loredano) and the Senate. The draft is in Latin, and styles the deceased heir apparent "a rare model" (specimen singulare), worthy to succeed his father, who is reminded of the "orthodox maxim of the Christian religion that " the Almighty of his wisdom calls to himself those whom " he loves." The Doge expresses his belief that the saying was specially applicable to the King's son by reason of his admirable qualities.

Another document brought to light at the same time as the foregoing, illustrates a feature in Venetian diplomacy, to which I have not hitherto alluded.

The Republic's agents at foreign courts were commanded to correspond with their fellow envoys where-soever accredited, and the earliest specimen of such news-letters written from England is the one calendared in the Appendix to this present volume, written by the Ambassador Andrea Badoer to Pietro Lando, his colleague resident at the Court of Leo X. It is dated 14th June 1514, and records the presence in London of the Apostolic Nuncio, the Bishop of Cività di Chieti, of whom there are several notices in Mr. Brewer's Calendar. It may be inferred from these notices that the future Pope resided in England from the close of 1513 until the spring of 1516, when Leo X. accredited him to the young King of Spain, who was then in Flanders.

In the lives of the Popes, Panvinio alludes to the fact of Caraffa's having been sent Nuncio to England by Leo X. " to exact the Papal revenues," but he does not give any clue to the date of his residence there. Amongst the letters relating to the Bishop of Chieti, calendared by Mr. Brewer, is one from Polydore Vergil, sub-collector of the Papal dues, dated 15th March 1515. Vergil alludes to the "mole" (talpa) at Rome, and to the "Gladiator" (Harenarius) in England. The former seems to have been one of the ministers of Leo X., and the latter was probably Andrew Ammonius, the King's Latin Secretary, whose appointment as sub-collector in lieu of Polydore Vergil, is dated at Rome, 26th March 1515. The Nuncio Caraffa will of course have been concerned in this transaction; but his negotiations in England had chiefly the peace of Europe for their object.¹ Paul IV. lived to a great age, and amongst the Venetian despatches from his Court, now in my possession, is one, showing that on Wednesday, the 4th December 1555, he held a consistory, at which Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, was deprived of his see, permission being given for his consignment to the secular tribunals.

The letters calendared by Mr. Brewer, showing the protection given to Erasmus by the Bishop of Chieti, prove that at the period of his nunciature in England, he was neither bigoted nor intolerant.

From Giovanni Pietro Caraffa, Badoer proceeds to speak of Thomas Bohier, General of Normandy, who, under pretence of negotiating the ransom of the Duke of Longueville, offered terms of peace in the name of Louis XII.

The same letter shows that Lando had also used his good offices at Rome to bring about an adjustment between the two Crowns. Amongst other news Badoer tells his correspondent that the French King had acquainted the Dauphin Francis with his intention to marry, his Queen Anne of Brittany having died at the commencement of the year, adding that it was as yet undecided whether he would select the Archduchess Margaret, Duchess Dowager of Savoy, or one of the sisters of the Archduke of Burgundy, or the Queen Dowager of Scotland, or finally Mary Tudor, for whose marriage the treaty was signed at Blois, on the 7th August 1514.²

¹ See Erasmus to Gonell, 7 February 1514, in Mr. Brewer's Calendar.

² See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, No. 5307, vol. i.

The only novelty in this announcement is the mention of the Spanish Infanta, to whom it is not generally known that Lewis XII. had ever purposed offering his hand. At the close of the letter Badoer speaks of the recent arrival in London of Lodovico Canossa, whose conversation with Erasmus, during his brief stay there, is detailed in a letter to Germano Brixio.¹

It does not appear that copies of the letters exchanged between the Republic's agents at foreign Courts were transmitted to the Signory. But there exist at Vienna authentic transcripts of "advices" or "news-letters," compiled in the Ducal Chancery at Venice, addressed to the Signory's envoys abroad, that they might be communicated to the crowned heads and ministers, with whom they held daily intercourse. These advices were doubtlessly garbled, but not to the extent of falsifying the facts.

These news-letters have not been noticed by me because they no longer exist at Venice; but it is to be hoped through the zealous exertions of the Chev. Gar, and the good faith of the Austrian Government, that their restitution may be expected from Vienna. The "advices" from 1537 to 1572 will prove an authentic continuation of Sanuto's Diaries, which close at the end of September 1533.

The earliest of similar official "summaries of advices" range from the year 1510 to 1522, and from amongst them I obtained from Vienna a copy of the following, derived from a letter of Andrea Badoer's:—

"Summarium litterarum oratoris nostri in Anglia, diei 6 Aprilis 1510.

"Writes that he has hitherto been unable to see the writings of agreement stipulated with the King of France; but on the authocity of the King of England, having heard it from his own lips, declares them to be in such form as will greatly please the Signory, towards whom his Majesty continues to show himself most favourable. He has withdrawn the Protectorate of England at the Court of Rome from the Cardinal of Pavia,¹ having heard that he is utterly French, and in lieu of him has appointed as his protector Cardinal Pietro ad Vincula,² the Pope's nephew."

¹ See Roscoe's Life of Leo X.

In conclusion, I have to congratulate myself on the continuation of that assistance from all my Venetian friends to which I have frequently alluded. The present volume, like its predecessors, owes much to the diligence of Mr. E. G. Kirk.

RAWDON BROWN.

Venice, 18th October 1869.

P.S.—After the foregoing pages had been printed, the Venetian news-letters arrived from Vienna, and I regret to say that amongst them there are but four "advices" from England, dated 6th April 1510, 31st January and 4th February 1527, and 2nd March 1544.

The series ranges from 1510 to 1572.

¹ Francisco Alidosio, created Cardinal by Julius II., December 1, 1505, and who was murdered by the Duke of Urbino, at Ravenna, in the year 1511. (See Guicciardini, vol. ii., p. 375, ed. Friburgo, 1775.)

² Galeotto Franciotti della Rovere, created Cardinal by Julius II., 29th November 1503.

VENETIAN AND OTHER PAPERS.

A.D. 1520.

Jan.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 157.

1. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

On the 26th the Flanders galleys arrived at Hampton, to the universal joy. Had dined with Cardinal Wolsey and some others. The Cardinal spoke in terms of great honour of the Signory, and after dinner lavished many praises on the State; adding, that he wished to receive the 60 Damascene carpets promised by Sebastian Giustinian. It would be well to make a present to this "individual," who might be styled King of England. The King of France had sent him a golden chalice with a jewelled paten of gold.

London, 28th December 1519. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd January 1520.

[Italian.]

Jan. 3.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 190.

2. The SAME to the SAME.

Conversations held with Cardinal Wolsey about the Emperor and his coronation. King Henry wished the Emperor to go to Rome pacifically. The Emperor had sent to ask for a safeconduct in case he arrived in England on his passage towards Flanders; and the King had sent it him in ample form. The Cardinal added that his King would abide by the matrimonial alliance and peace with France. He likewise spoke in terms of honour of the Signory, repeating his wish to receive the carpets from Cairo, and that he would pay their cost.

London, 3rd January. Registered by Sanuto, 8th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 183.

3. The SAME to the SAME.

On the day of the Epiphany, Cardinal Wolsey went to mass with the ambassadors, as if he had been king, and then kept them to dine with him. The Cardinal said the Emperor meant to be a pacific sovereign. He would come to Germany, and go peaceably to take the crown. King Henry had advised him in this sense, as the territories which he actually held were sufficient for him, and he should not think of making war. The Cardinal spoke in honourable terms of the Signory.

The Flanders galleys were not at Hampton, but at Falmouth.

London, 7th January. Registered by Sanuto, 4th February.

[Italian.]

1520.

Jan. 12.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 74.

4. The DOGE and SENATE to the Venetian Ambassador in France, ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN.

Received his letters of the 27th December, touching his conversation with Madame [Louise of Savoy], about the Triple League. Advise him of reports from Rome, England, and Spain, of the intended invasion of Italy next year by the Emperor. Satisfied this is known to his most Christian Majesty. Desire the signature of the Triple League; and that his Majesty will maintain his alliance with the King of England, because the Catholic King would then show more moderation. To request secrecy of the King.

Ayes, 151. Noes, 55. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Jan. 13.
Minio's Original
Letter Book,
MS. penes me.
Letter no. 441.

5. MARCO MINIO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome, to the SIGNORY.

Report made in the Consistory by the Legate Bibiena on his return from France. King Francis having made treaties with Spain and England, and being desirous of peace, would maintain the same so long as no injury was done to him or his friends, especially to the Apostolic See.

Rome, 13th January 1520.

[Italian.]

Jan. 14.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 77.

6. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

By his letter of the 14th December, understood what was said by the Bishop of Durham and the Spanish ambassador [the Bishop of Elna] about the power of the Emperor, and his wish to take the Imperial crown, by entering Italy with an army; and that the Signory would have nothing to apprehend.

Approve his reply, but he is to decline disputing the subject as much as possible. If spoken to thereon, to answer in general terms, attesting the desire of the State for peace and tranquillity, and their friendship for the Emperor.

[Italian, 18 lines.]

Jan. 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii.
pp. 217-218.

7. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

A fresh ambassador had arrived from France to negotiate the intended interview.

The King had deprived Monsignor dil Bosco [Lord of the Wood in co. Kildare (?), i.e. Gerald Fitzgerald, Earl of Kildare] of the Lord-Deputyship in Ireland, for an act of disobedience, and had appointed the Admiral [Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey] as Lord Deputy in his stead; but the Irish did not render much obedience to his Majesty. He (Surian) had no opportunity of speaking to the King, and therefore requests the Signory to send him advices that he might communicate them in due form.

London, — and 28th January. Registered, 16th February.

[Italian.]

1520.

Feb. 4. 8. MOTION made in the SENATE by the Sages, for a letter to Antonio Surian, Venetian ambassador in England, to thank Cardinal Wolsey for his excellent disposition for peace. The proposal of England and the Signory's reply to be communicated to the Venetian ambassador in France.

[Italian.]

Feb. 4.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 82,
tergo.

9. The DOGE and SENATE to the Venetian Ambassador in England, ANTONIO SURIAN.

Received two of his letters dated the 7th ultimo. By one, he narrates the conversation held by Cardinal Wolsey with the French ambassador and himself, announcing the Emperor's disposition for peace; the King and Cardinal being similarly inclined. Approve what he has written. To tell the Cardinal how acceptable his sage discourse has proved to the State. To exhort the Cardinal to persevere in his sound purpose.

To return thanks for the loving demonstration made by him towards the Signory, and for his gracious offer.

Enclose summaries of news from the Levant, for communication as usual to the Cardinal, and such other persons as he (the ambassador) shall think fit.

[Italian, 32 lines.]

Feb. 4.
Minio's Original
Letter Book,
MS. penes me.
Letter no. 454.

10. MARCO MINIO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome, to the SIGNORY.

Appointment of a "Congregation" to condemn the propositions of Martin Luther.*

Rome, 4th February 1520.

[Italian.]

Feb. 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 194.

11. MARTIN LUTHER.

Receipt on that morning of letters from the Ambassador Minio, dated Rome the 4th. . . . In Germany an Austin friar, called Friar Matthew (sic) Luther, had written works against the Pope and the church, and had preached publicly at Nuremberg to that effect; which facts having come to the knowledge of the Pope, he had convened a Congregation of learned Observantine friars, and had appointed two cardinals as their chiefs, namely, Ancona [Pietro-degli Accolti, Bishop of Ancona] and Gaeta [Friar Tommaso de Vio], who were very learned, that they might suppress this opposition to the Church.

Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.

[Italian.]

* The Ambassador's secretary being absent at Naples, the copies of his letters were not always transcribed in full during that interval; and in the present instance the memorandum about Luther is registered thus:—"De congregatione facta pro damnandis propositionibus fratris Martini Luter: de discesu (sic) Card. Medicis."

The diaries of Sanuto contain a summary of the despatch, as in the text.

1520.

Feb. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 202.12. MARTIN LUTHER.

Copy of a paragraph in a letter from Marco Minio, Venetian Ambassador at Rome, dated the 4th February 1520.

Three days ago, a Congregation of all the Generals of the Mendicant orders was held, and such as were not present at Rome were represented by the procurators of said orders, the chiefs of this Congregation being the Cardinals of Ancona and Gaeta.

This Congregation was appointed in order to condemn certain propositions of Friar Martin Luther, who has preached in Germany against the authority and power of the Pope, and has a considerable party, and is much favoured by the Duke of Saxony. An attempt is thus being made to deprive him [Luther] of the protection he enjoys and of his adherents, and the bull is being drawn up; but the course taken by the Congregation was injudicious, for they suddenly read said friar's propositions, and then took the votes.

This friar Martin founds his arguments chiefly on the Gospels; he acknowledges the doctors of the Church, such as Saint Augustin, but not the other doctors, and he scoffs at St. Thomas Scotus and the like. It is a very scandalous business.

Registered by Sanuto, 13th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 7.

13. CARDINAL WOLSEY'S CARPETS.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 189.

Determination of the College to sell the chain (which had been deposited in the office of the Procurators of St. Mark) given by the King of England to the ambassador Sebastian Giustinian, worth 500 ducats; and also the two cups given by the King of Hungary to the ambassador Alvise Bon, worth about 200 ducats; the proceeds to be expended in the purchase of 60 Damascene carpets, to be sent as a gift to Cardinal Wolsey in England.

Note by Sanuto that the purchase was made, and the carpets sent accordingly.

[Italian.]

Feb. 9.

Minio's Original
Letter Book,
MS. penes me.
Letter no. 457.14. MARCO MINIO, Venetian Ambassador in Rome, to the SIGNORY.

The Pope says that the King of England made fair promises, but inclined more towards Spain than France, and in case of a rupture he would declare for Spain.

Rome, 9th February 1520.

[Italian.]

Feb. 11.

15. The SAME to the SAME.Minio's Original
Letter Book,
MS. penes me.
Letter no. 458.

It had been determined to institute another "Congregation," for the more deliberately condemning the sayings and opinions of Friar Martin Luther.

Rome, 11th February 1520.

[Italian.]

1520.

Feb. 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 205.16. MARTIN LUTHER.

The Ambassador Minio writes from Rome in date of the 11th that Congregation of Franciscan Friars-Observant which the Pope convoked against that Friar Martin Luther in Germany, had intended to draw up a bull against him, but they subsequently made the Pope determine to discuss the matter more fully by holding another Congregation of other eminent men (excellente homeni).

[Italian.]

Feb. 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 257.17. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The envoy sent to England to negotiate the interview with the King had returned, having settled it; but the period was not known.

Cognac, 22nd February. Registered by Sanuto, 5th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 221.

18. MOTION made in the SENATE by the Sages, for a letter to the ambassador in England, to acquaint the King and Cardinal Wolsey with the result of the conference at Verona; and that the Imperial ambassadors departed "re infecta;" but that the Signory had nevertheless given them the 20,000 ducats.

Speech made by Sebastian Giustinian, late ambassador in England, against the letter; saying the subject should not be mentioned, as the King would exclaim "I will be the arbiter; I have the heart to arrange matters;" and that he would desire the State to place the business in his hands, which should be avoided. Giustinian added that the carpets had not been sent to Cardinal Wolsey, nor had it been decided to send them; and that he, the Cardinal, "est alter Rex."

Amendment to the motion proposed by Zuan Contarini, sage for the orders, that the ambassador be written to, so that if the King or others broached the topic, he might know how to answer, but not to anticipate the announcement.

For the amendment, 82. For the original motion (which was carried), the rest.

[Italian.]

Feb. 25.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
vol. xlviii. p. 88.19. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

To acquaint the King and Cardinal with the Signory's affairs.

By virtue of the quinquennial truce negotiated between the late Emperor and the Signory, certain points remained for discussion concerning the jurisdiction of places, and restoration of property belonging to Venetian subjects in the Friuli, and other territories of the State, and the liquidation of the sums to be paid to Venetian emigrants who rebelled against the State during the late war. The State had agreed with the present Emperor, that he should send delegates to Verona, to confer with an ambassador from the Signory concerning these differences. The meeting having been held in the presence of an ambassador from the most Christian King,—who, according to a clause in the truce, is mediator between the Emperor and the State,—it was agreed the latter should pay the Emperor annually 20,000 ducats. The Imperial delegates then made several demands not sanctioned by the clauses of the truce, and the State referred the matter for arbitration to the French ambassador, who was present throughout the conference. Announcement to this effect having been made to the Governors of Inspruck, they declared themselves unable to give further orders until they had communicated with the Emperor, and as he was going to Flanders in the spring, they thought it best to suspend the conference for the present. Is to communicate as above to the King and Cardinal.

1520.

Amendment moved by Giovanni Contarini, Sage for the Orders :

That the exordium, where mention is made of the communication of the matter, be omitted ; and at the close, where the ambassador is desired to impart it to the King and Cardinal, be it said—

“ We have narrated to you substantially the result of this conference for your information, charging you not to speak to any one about what we have told you above, unless you be spoken to on the subject.”

Ayes, 82. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 58 lines.]

Feb. 25.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
vol. xlviii. p. 89.

20. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in FRANCE.

Communicate the result of the Verona conference, and enclose a copy of their despatch to their ambassador in England.

[Italian.]

Feb. 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 229.

21. MOTION made in the SENATE by the Sages, and carried, to suspend the letter destined for England, until the next meeting of the Senate.

[Italian.]

March 3.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 298.

22. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The interview would take place next May ; one of the two Kings going to Boulogne, the other to Calais.

Had been told by Cardinal Wolsey, that at the Verona conference the Signory demanded the surrender of towns not mentioned in the articles of the treaty.

London, 27th February and 3rd March. Registered, 26th March.

[Italian.]

March 3.
Senato Mar,
vol. xix. p. 123.

23. REDUCTION of DUTIES on MERCHANDISE imported from ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate by the proveditors for the London factory.

Complaints made by the Spanish, Flemish, and other merchants, of the exorbitant duty on kerseys and other western produce, amounting to 2½ per cent. Wherefore the proveditors moved that all western produce brought to Venice, by land or sea, by natives or foreigners (with the exception of the goods brought to the German warehouse, which had always been exempt from duty), pay the sole quota of one per cent., should they not have paid the consuls on exporting from the west. Should they have paid, then to bring certificates or otherwise pay the quota. The reduction of the quota not retrospective. The act not to alter the duties at present levied by the factory in London.

1520.

Ayes, 132. Noes, 13. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 21 lines.]

March 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 321.

24. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The interview between his Majesty and the King of France was to take place at Calais or Boulogne on the 24th of May.

The Emperor had sent an envoy to the King of England, to prevent the interview, but the King was firm, and was making great preparations of apparel and other things, including a most costly tent, for the King's use beyond sea.

Cardinal Wolsey adroitly urged the Signory to have him supplied with 60 Cairo carpets.

In the French towns the King of England was to take precedence of the King of France. One or two jousts were to be performed, and the two Kings themselves meant to joust.

Dated 10th March. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd April.

[Italian.]

March 12.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii,
pp. 371-375.

25. ARTICLES of AGREEMENT concerning the interview to be held between Henry VIII. and Francis I., drawn up by Cardinal Wolsey on the 12th March 1519[-1520]. Modification of the original treaty stipulated in London on the 8th October 1518.*

Registered by Sanuto, 30th April.

[Latin, 4 pages, and 14 lines, folio.] †

March 12.
Minio's Original
Letter Book,
MS. penes me.
Letter no. 473.

26. MARCO MINIO to the SIGNORY.

The Pope advised from France that the interview between King Francis and King Henry would take place, and some persons thought the Catholic King was hastening his departure from Spain, that he might be the first to confer with King Henry. The Catholic King would hold the Cortes at Corunna, and embark there.

Rome, 12th March 1520.

[Italian.]

March 14.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 296.

27. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The King would confer with the King of England in May, and was going to Paris for that purpose.

Angouleme, 11th and 14th March. Registered, 26th March.

[Italian.]

* See Hall, p. 601. (Edition, London, 1809.)

† Each page of the Marciana copy of Sanuto's Diaries contains, on an average, 48 lines.

1520.

March 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 298.28. MARTIN LUTHER.

Copy of a paragraph in a letter addressed to Lorenzo Bragadin, by Friar Gabriel, General of the Friars-Hermits, and dated Rome, 16th of March 1520.

Nothing more done about Martin, save that all the theologians of Rome have debated together three times in the presence of the Cardinals of Ancona and San Sixtus, discussing certain propositions of the said Martin's, part of which were considered heretical, part scandalous.

All the generals of the orders have in like manner stated their objections, and the reasons which cause them to remonstrate.

It is now said that a bull extraordinary will be drawn up, reproving his said false propositions without naming him; but I think that he will be admonished by a private brief, and invited to recant, and should he not recant but persevere in his obstinacy, they will proceed against him as a heretic.

• Registered by Sanuto, 26th March.

[Italian.]

March 27.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
vol. xlviii. p. 109,
tergo.29. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

Received his two letters of the 28th ultimo, and 3rd instant, acquainting them that the King had said that they had demanded of the Emperor the restitution of certain towns and places, contrary to the clauses of the new league between his Majesty and the other Christian powers. Have understood his reply, for which they praise him. To inform the King and the Cardinal, should he think fit, that the State never had the slightest thought of violating the league, and that the conference was held solely for the purpose of arranging certain disputes connected with the quinquennial truce negotiated between the late Emperor and themselves, and confirmed by the present Emperor. That in virtue of this truce, they at the conference demanded certain property belonging to private individuals, their subjects, and the right of jurisdiction appertaining to the State. That the disputes were referred to the French ambassador, and the Imperial commissioners, alleging they had not sufficient powers, had delayed the settlement, promising that the Emperor would never fail in what was just and fair. To justify all their proceedings, which aim solely at the maintenance of the truce, and the removal of any cause for discord and dissension between the subjects of the Emperor and the State.

Ayes, 193. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 42 lines.]

March 30.

Senato Mar,
v. xix. p. 126.30. LIMITED DIMENSIONS of VENETIAN GALLEYS destined for the MERCHANT SERVICE.

Motion made in the Senate for the remedy of a great abuse in the construction of the Signory's trading galleys, which were built of so immoderate a size that, when completed, in order to bring them out of the Arsenal it was requisite to narrow the "postize,"*

* "Stringer le postize." In Boerio's Venetian Dictionary it is stated that in modern times "Posticcia" signified the upper part of a ship.

1520.

by which means, it being impossible in case of need to aid the galleys with the oars, they ran the risk of being wrecked, as had been seen recently at Rosetta and Aboukir.

For the future no heavy galley to be built exceeding 160 feet in length, under penalty of 100 ducats to the master builders, and of dismissal from the Arsenal for two consecutive years.

Two galleys then building in the Arsenal, of the prohibited dimensions, of which the keel alone and the "cavi" were on the stocks, to be reduced to the due measurement of 160 feet.

Ayes, 149. Noes, 11. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

March 30.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 346.

31. FRANCESCO CORNARO, Venetian Ambassador in Spain, to the SIGNORY.

Had obtained the safeconduct for the Flanders galleys. Arrival at Corunna of 35 ships for the Emperor's passage to Flanders, and as many more were expected. The King of England was to send 40 ships to the Land's End as convoy for his Majesty.

S. Giacomo di Compostella, 25th, 29th, and 30th March.

Registered by Sanuto, 23rd April.

[Italian.]

April 8.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 326.

32. NEWS from ENGLAND of the frequent arrivals there of envoys from the Emperor, who was said to have been to his mother at Tordesillas, and to be hastening to embark at Corunna for his voyage to Flanders. Account of great preparations making in England for the interview with the most Christian King.

[Italian.]

April 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 343.

33. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The King of England, understanding that the King of France and his courtiers were making great preparations, wrote that he intended to do likewise, and should he delay a few days beyond the appointed time King Francis was not to be surprised, as he, King Henry, did thus to put himself in order.

Blois, 10th April. Registered by Sanuto, 21st April.

[Italian.]

April 11.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 376.

34. ARTICLES of AGREEMENT or TREATY concerning the interview to be held between Henry VIII. and the Emperor Charles V., drawn up by Thomas Ruthal, Bishop of Durham, Cuthbert Tunstal Vice Chancellor and Master of the Rolls, Richard Pace, chief secretary, and Thomas More, on the one part; and by Bernard de Mesa, Bishop of Elna, and Philip Haneton, chief secretary of the order of the Golden Fleece, on the other.*

London, 11th April 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 30th April.

[Latin, 6 pages, folio.]

* Of this treaty there is no mention in Hall; but it is alluded to in a note to Lingard, vol. 4, p. 197. (Edition, London, 1854.) The original document, on vellum, is preserved in the Public Record Office. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii., no. 740.)

1520.

April 11.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreto,
vol. xlviii. p. 112,
tergo.

35. DECREE of the SENATE, respecting Cardinal Wolsey's Carpets.

Expedient at the present time to keep the right reverend Cardinal of York well disposed towards us by reason of the supreme authority and favour enjoyed by him with the King of England. His right reverend Lordship having asked the nobleman Sebastian Giustinian, knight, for from 60 to 100 carpets, and having again with extreme earnestness repeated his demand and urged it to our ambassador now resident in England:

Put to the ballot—To purchase in this our city 60 beautiful and choice carpets, at the cost of 600 ducats; the carpets to be selected and purchased as the College shall direct, and sent to London by land, and presented by our ambassador to the Cardinal in the Signory's name. The present decree to be notified to our ambassador, to be communicated forthwith to his right reverend Lordship.

Ayes, 151. Noes, 10. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 21 lines.]

April 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 353.

36. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Mention by the ambassador of the King's wish to delay the interview, at the instigation of the Spanish envoys, but that at length his Majesty settled to hold it at the end of May.

Details his conversations with Cardinal Wolsey.

Dated 13th April; received at Venice on 27 April. (Note by Sanuto that the letter had travelled very expeditiously.)

[Italian.]

April 22.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 385.

37. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The expected interview with the King of England would certainly take place at the appointed time, though it was apprehended that the Emperor's conference with the King of England would take place first.

Blois, 22nd April. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd May.

[Italian.]

April 23.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii.
pp. 403-404.

38. FRANCESCO CORNARO, Venetian Ambassador in Spain, to the SIGNORY.

His arrival there from St. James of Compostella. Corunna had a good harbour, but the houses were all of wood with pitched roofs, so that he fancied himself on ship-board. The fleet for the Emperor's passage would consist of about 80 vessels. The Emperor would embark on board one of 800 butts, and that the rest averaged from 300 to 500 butts each. The gentleman [John de la Sauch] sent by the Emperor to the King of England, with a message to the effect that he purposed going to speak to him even in his own palace, had returned, bringing back word that King Henry longed for his arrival, and would send five well-appointed ships to meet him. The Emperor would set sail in 15 or 20 days, perhaps sooner.

1520.

It was certain the interview would take place. On St. George's Day, the Emperor went to church wearing the insignia of the Garter, which the King of England had sent to him.

Corunna, 23rd April. Registered by Sanuto, 12th May.

[Italian.]

April 26.
Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xliii. p. 140.

39. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the AMBASSADOR in FRANCE.

Send copies of letters from Constantinople, and by reason of the peril with which Christendom is threatened, he is to urge his most Christian Majesty to write to the King of England to arm and take steps for the maintenance of religion from overthrow. Is to add that the State is arming, and will not fail doing all that their power admits.

Ayes, 27. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 23 lines.]

April 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 353.

40. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The King of England had written to King Francis to delay the interview until July. When the English ambassador [Sir Richard Wingfield] spoke to the King, his Majesty became very wrath, saying, "He wants to delay that he may speak first to the Catholic King; but were it so I would never speak to him." Letters having consequently been written to England, King Henry would attend the conference on the 1st of June, because King Francis wrote to him that otherwise he should cross over to England, as the Queen of France, who wished to be present, was in the sixth month of her pregnancy, and could not come were the interview delayed.

Blois, ———. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

May 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 415.

41. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The King was firm in his intention of holding the conference with the most Christian King, and preparations were already being made for the journey to Canterbury in order to cross the sea. A rowing pinnace had arrived from Corunna with a secretary [John de la Sauch] from the Emperor, charged to try and prevent the King of England from conferring with the King of France so immediately, and get him to await his Imperial Majesty, who might arrive from hour to hour. Reply of Cardinal Wolsey on behalf of the King, that the matter was already in such a state of forwardness as to forbid any further delay.

The agents of the Kings of France and England were making great preparations for quarters between Guisnes and Ardres, arranging the lists and stages for the spectators of the jousts. All the nobility of the island, including the Duke of Suffolk, were providing themselves with apparel of cloth of gold and of silk to attend these jousts, the proclamation of which Madame Margaret would not allow to be made in Flanders.

1520.

Having to incur great expense for his outfit when accompanying the King to this conference, asks the Signory to grant him a few ducats, his Majesty having told him to provide a tent for his dwelling, as no other habitations could be had.

London, 26th April and 1st May.

Registered by Sanuto, 19th May.

[Italian.]

May 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 429.

42. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The King would be at Boulogne on the 27th for the interview with the most Christian King. The Emperor's exertions to prolong the term of no avail.

Dated 1st May. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 447.

43. The SAME to the SAME.

The interview would most certainly take place, and the King cross the sea on the ———, although Cardinal Wolsey was somewhat indisposed with colic, and he was to accompany the King. There had been some dispute about the site for the jousts, though all would be arranged. King Henry was sending as ambassador to France an individual [Charles Somerset, Earl of Worcester,]* who had been there heretofore, and was agreeable to King Francis: he would settle everything. At the place appointed for the English quarters 6,000 men were constantly at work for the construction both of habitations and of the lists. With regard to the interview with the Emperor, it seemed to be postponed from day to day, so that the conference with King Francis would take place first.

London, 7th May. Registered by Sanuto, 29th May.

[Italian.]

May 8.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 415.

44. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The King had remained at a place between Blois and Paris, belonging to Mons. de Lautrec, whose marriage was to be celebrated there. Madame [Louise], the King's mother, had bought an emporium of cloths of silk, in which to array the whole Court pompously, for the interview between the King of England and his most Christian Majesty.

Paris, 8th May. Registered by Sanuto, 19th May.

[Italian.]

May 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 429.

45. The SAME to the SAME.

The King had departed on his way to the interview with the King of England, and the Queen, Madame [Louise], and the ambassadors were to follow. Nothing was thought of but cloth of gold and finery; so he had been unable to speak to the King, who, together with his Court, were intent solely on bedecking themselves.

* His commission was dated 10 April 1520. See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. no. 738.

1520.

Paris, 10th May. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 15.

46. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 119,
tergo.

Motion in the Senate. The nobleman Sebastian Giustinian, knight, having returned from his embassy to England, where he resided during 57 months, and in difficult times, serving with recognised ability, has presented, according to custom, the gold chain given to him by the King of England, which was deposited in the Procurator's office, the gift not having been disposed of in any way, whereas other ambassadors were permitted, some in part and others entirely, to retain the presents made to them, to their no slight satisfaction.

On this account the nobleman aforesaid having recently offered to go as proveditor general to Candia, never shunning toil or danger, however great, provided he act for the public service of his country, and having again intimated his wish to retain the aforesaid royal gift for the sake of doing greater honour to the Signory, and also that it may serve as a memorial for his family and descendants:

Put to the ballot—That the chain delivered by said Sebastian be weighed, and valued accurately; and that he be paid in ready money its real price and value, minus 100 ducats.

Ayes, 91. Noes, 95. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 22 lines.]

May 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 453.

47. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The disputes about the interview had been adjusted. The King would cross on the 21st. Cardinal Wolsey was in better health than usual.

London, 17th May. Registered by Sanuto, 30th May.

[Italian.]

May 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 423.

48. ALVISE GRADENIGO and MARCO MINIO, Venetian Ambassadors at Rome, to the SIGNORY.

Arrival of the Duke of Albany from France. The Pope had lodged him in the palace because he was the cousin [sic, query brother-in-law] of the wife of the late Magnifico Lorenzino, Duke of Urbino.

Rome, 17th May. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd May.

[Italian.]

May 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 468.

49. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Conversations held with Cardinal Wolsey, whom he had acquainted with the news about the Turk. The Cardinal said it was important, and the King would write to the Pope to make the Christian powers resent the attack, as he (King Henry) would be ready to act for the benefit of Christendom, and would discuss the matter with the most Christian King at the interview.

1520.

London, 18th May. Registered by Sanuto, 5th June.

[Italian.]

May 21.
to July 14.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix.
pp. 210-239.

50. An ACCOUNT of the CONFERENCES held by KING HENRY VIII. with the EMPEROR CHARLES V. and KING FRANCIS I.

On Monday the 21st of May, the King and Queen of England, and the royal retinue quitted London and arrived at Canterbury on the 24th, awaiting the Emperor's arrival, as stipulated.

Late on Saturday the 26th the Emperor, with a few of his ships, appeared within six miles of Dover Castle, awaiting there the rest of his fleet.

Cardinal Wolsey, on receiving this intelligence, proceeded with his retinue of 50 gentlemen and other attendants, to Dover, where he embarked with some of his followers in two large boats, for the ship on board of which were the Emperor and Mons. de Chièvres. He then, in a brief Latin speech, expressed the joy of the King at the Emperor's arrival, offering him all that England afforded, and inviting him to land there, as if it were his own territory. The Emperor accepted the offer most willingly, and together with Mons. de Chièvres, went straight to Dover Castle, the rest of his attendants remaining in the town. When the English warder presented the keys of the castle on behalf of his King, the Emperor refused them, saying that without keys he considered himself safe in the house of his uncle and good father, the King of England. Shortly after the departure of Cardinal Wolsey from Canterbury, the King, having heard the news, rode to Dover, where he arrived in the night when the Emperor had supped and was in bed, and there they exchanged embraces and other loving compliments.

The King then left the Emperor in bed, and went and lodged below in the town.

At daylight their Majesties rose, and rode with all their attendants to Canterbury. At a distance of four miles from the town they were met by the French and Venetian ambassadors, who made their obeisance and kissed the Emperor's hand. Outside the gates of Canterbury were 60 dappled palfreys, saddled with women's pillions, but empty; the pillions were all of cloth of gold, one of them being embroidered with fine pearls and jewels. These palfreys had been prepared for the Queen Germaine de Foix, the French woman, relict of the late King Ferdinand the Catholic, now married to the Marquis of Brandenburg.*

* The Venetian ambassador, Francesco Cornaro, records the second marriage of Germaine de Foix to John of Brandenburg, in date of Barcelona, 13 March 1519.

In Hall's Chronicle (p. 604, ed. London, 1809), there is a paragraph thus, "In his retinue with hym" (the Emperor) "were many noble menne, and many faire ladies of his blood as princes and princesses, and one ladie as chief to be noted was the Princess Avinion." This last word may possibly be a misprint for "Aragon."

John of Brandenburg died in Spain in July 1525, and at Seville, on the 5th May 1526, Germaine de Foix took for her third husband Ferdinand Duke of Calabria.

The foregoing notices, derived from the despatches of the Venetian ambassadors, serve to correct the biographical notice of Germaine de Foix in Bayle's Dictionary, chap. 69, p. 683, and following.

1520.

Within the gates, on entering the town, they found all the clergy with crosses awaiting them on one side, and on the other was the mayor and the whole corporation in scarlet gowns, with hoods half black and half red, according to the custom of the country.

On reaching the square in front of the cathedral everybody dismounted, and entered the church processionally. The French ambassador [De la Bastie] was accompanied by the Duke of Buckingham, and the Venetian ambassador, Surian, by the Duke of Suffolk, the Papal Nuncio pairing with the Bishop of Durham. Having entered by the principal door, the Sovereigns walked over a carpet of purple velvet to a kneeling desk for two persons, in the English fashion, covered with gold brocade and furnished with two cushions to correspond. There they knelt, the Emperor on the right hand, the King on the left ; and the Archbishop of Canterbury, standing before them in his episcopal robes and mitred, presented the cross for them to kiss, commencing with the Emperor, and then saluting them with the censer and incense ; finally he sprinkled them with holy water, always commencing with the Emperor. Their Majesties then rose, and were conducted under a canopy of cloth of gold to the high altar, where in like manner a kneeling desk had been prepared with cushions of cloth of gold, and the ledge covered with crimson velvet. There they again knelt, and the Archbishop presented them with the wood of the holy cross to kiss, and then commenced the hymn, "Veni Creator Spiritus," which was suited both to the day, Whit Sunday, and also to the conference between the two Sovereigns, united by spiritual love and goodwill for the benefit of Christendom.

When the music ceased, their Majesties moved to the other end of the church, in the direction of the Archbishop's palace, which had been prepared for the Emperor.

Below, at the door of the first porch, which forms the entry into the palace, they met 25 of the handsomest and best apparelled ladies of the Court. Then, on entering another large corridor, they found some 20 of the Queen's pages in gold brocade and crimson satin, in checquers. They next ascended 15 steps of a marble staircase, and there on the landing was the Queen of England, the Emperor's aunt, dressed in cloth of gold lined with ermine, and beautiful strings of pearls round her neck. She embraced her nephew tenderly, not without tears ; and they then proceeded upstairs with the ambassadors and the ladies, into a chamber where breakfast had been prepared ; whereupon the attendants were dismissed until the hour for mass.

Francesco Cornaro, the Venetian ambassador resident with the Emperor, and his colleague Surian, accredited to the King of England, having dined, two English gentlemen came in the King's name and conducted them from their lodging to the Emperor, who was lodged with the King and Queen. After a brief stay their Majesties went to the cathedral, preceded by the ambassadors and by upwards of 600 lords and knights, who were all most sumptuously clad in cloth of gold and silver, and wore massive gold chains round their necks.

1520.

Cardinal Wolsey walked immediately in advance of the Emperor and the King, who were side by side, the Emperor to the right.

Both their Majesties wore simars; that of the Emperor was on the right half of cloth of silver, and on the left half of alternate stripes of gold and silver, and the simar was lined with costly sables.

The simar of the King of England was entirely of cloth of gold, lined with very beautiful lynx's fur, and round his neck he wore a very valuable jewelled collar. Both their Majesties wore cloth caps with a brim, and two very superb jewelled ornaments.

On entering the cathedral they were met by the Archbishop with cross and censer, and on arriving at the high altar found three pews. The first was on the right hand side, at a little distance from the altar, and on a level with the fourth step, which marks the first landing. This pew was of gold brocade, lined with silver brocade embroidered with roses, the King's badge, and was carpeted with crimson velvet; it accommodated from 10 to 15 persons, and was destined for the two Sovereigns, who knelt there to hear mass, their kneeling desk being of cloth of gold, and the ledge covered with cloth of gold.

The second pew was on the left-hand side, farther distant from the altar, and four steps lower than the first inclosure; it was also of gold brocade, lined with murrey satin, embroidered in like manner with roses.

After the entry of the Emperor and the King, the Queen proceeded to this second enclosure, and knelt at a desk covered in like manner with cloth of gold, and with two cushions to correspond. Beside her was "the beautiful Lady Mary, the King's sister, late Queen of France, now consort of the Duke of Suffolk."

The Queen's petticoat was of silver lama, and the gown of cloth of gold lined with violet velvet, with raised pile, on which the roses of England were wrought in gold. She wore a necklace of very large pearls, from which hung a very valuable diamond cross. Her head gear was of black velvet striped with gold lama, and powdered with jewels and pearls.

The Lady Mary was dressed in silver lama, in plates, joined throughout with gold cords at the extremities of which were fine pearls instead of tags.

The third pew, like the second, was also on the left hand side but nearer the altar and loftier, and on a level with the eighth step. It formed a canopy of crimson satin embroidered throughout with most superb gold cords. Its width was four breadths of satin, and the length of the canopy six yards. On a level with the fifth step of the altar were a gilt chair and a gilt kneeling desk; this was the site where Cardinal Wolsey, legate de latere, placed himself with two crosses, which always precede him, to denote that he is both "legate born," and legate de latere. He wore a cape of crimson camlet lined with ermine.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, also legate born, celebrated the paschal mass of Whitsuntide, with most excellent music; and the mass ended, Cardinal Wolsey arrayed himself in a cope of gold brocade, and gave the benediction and plenary indulgence.

1520.

The Sovereigns then departed processionally, and returned to the Emperor's chamber, when every one was dismissed, their Majesties dining alone,—the Emperor (placed on the right hand), the King, the Queen, and the Lady Mary.

After dinner there was dancing, and in the evening, the Queen Germaine and 60 ladies on horseback, mounted on white palfries saddled with cloth of gold, made their entry. She was met, amongst the rest, by the Lady Mary, late Queen of France, and accompanied also by 200 Spanish ladies dressed according to their own fashion, but with long thin veils and small caps on their heads as worn in Flanders, with flaps (coste) and double brims, also in the Flemish fashion, some white, some green, and some tawney. These ladies were not handsome, but graceful (gratiate), and very attractive from their Spanish costume.

On the morrow, Whit Monday, at the hour of mass, the King accompanied by the ambassadors, and with no less pompous a retinue than on the preceding day, came from the abbey (his abode) to the cathedral; inside which, near the door, he awaited the Emperor and his train; and after they had embraced, placing him on the right hand, he took him to the high altar to the appointed pew.

Shortly after, the Queens came—first the Queen of England; and then Queen Germaine, and the Lady Mary, the former being on the right hand as a mark of honour for a foreigner, and she was accompanied to her abode by 120 ladies, besides the 20 Spanish dames, all most richly arrayed.

The Emperor wore a doublet, half of silver brocade, and half of alternate stripes of gold and silver, over which he had a gown of gold brocade lined with sables.

The King of England wore a simar, one half of cloth of gold and the other half of grey velvet, girt with a jewelled belt; the simar was slashed across in about six compartments, and joined by a quantity of buttons, all of which were balass rubies, sapphires, diamonds, and other sorts of jewels, and round his neck he had a jewelled collar, said to be worth more than 10,000 ducats. His cap or bonnet of black velvet was edged and covered with white feathers.

The Queen wore a petticoat of cloth of gold with a black ground, slashed and laced with gold and black cords, at whose extremities, in lieu of tags, there hung pearls and jewels, her gown being one half of cloth of gold and the other half of violet velvet with a raised pile, the flowers in relief being embroidered with gold thread and pearls. Her head dress was in the Flemish fashion with a long veil and no cap, which gave her additional grace. Round her neck were five large strings of pearls, with a pendent St. George on horseback slaying the dragon, all in diamonds.

Queen Germaine was dressed in cloth of gold in the Flemish fashion.

The Queen Mary in cloth of silver lama.

In the Emperor's company was the Prince of Orange, a youth about 18 years of age. His entire costume—doublet, hose, and shoes—was all of silver lama, striped longitudinally with cloth of gold; and so wide were the sleeves of his doublet, which were lined with cloth of gold lama, that they almost touched the ground; and the hose and doublet joined in jacket fashion, with three plaits; his shirt being of red murrey sarsnet, which contrasted admirably with his white arms.

1520.

The mass was celebrated in state, and the Sovereigns being then accompanied to the Emperor's chamber, their Majesties dined together. The Emperor sat at the centre of the table; on his left the King; to the right of the Emperor, the Queen of England; to the left of the King, the Lady Mary; and to the right of Queen Katharine, Queen Germaine.

After dinner there was dancing for a long while, and the King danced, but not the Emperor.

Then in the evening about an hour after dusk, both the Venetian ambassadors were conducted from their lodging, in the King's name, by two knights, and on arriving at the court, entered a large hall on the ground floor of the palace inhabited by the Emperor, where three tables had been prepared, two lengthwise, and one at the head of the hall. There they met the French ambassador likewise, and after waiting a while, their Majesties came down stairs, and the water for the hands was given thus:

The Emperor and the King and Queen of England washed together by themselves. The Duke of Suffolk brought a large gold basin with a cover bearing a crown, in the centre of which was a small cup, and when this had been removed by the Duke of Buckingham, the Marquis of Brandenburg's brother,* who had accompanied the Emperor, took off the cover, holding it under the basin borne by the Duke of Suffolk; whereupon the Duke of Buckingham gave the water in the cup to drink to the Duke of Suffolk, who having thus made the assay, then poured the water from his basin, which had an aperture or mouth at the side, over the hands of the Sovereigns, to whom the brother of the Count Palatine of the Rhine (he likewise being in the Emperor's train) presented the towel.

The Emperor and the King and Queen then sat down to table; the Emperor in the centre, and the King on the left, both on very stately gilt chairs; the Queen sitting on the right, but on a low chair.

After this the second gold basin was brought, also with a cover, but without any crown, by the son of the Earl of Northumberland; the cup for the assay was borne by the Duke of Buckingham, and the Marquis of Dorset uncovered it, the towel being presented by the old Duke of Norfolk.

The right reverend Cardinal of York, Queen Germaine and the Lady Mary, having washed their hands together,† seated themselves

* John of Brandenburg, the consort of Germaine de Foix.

† "And the Cardinall hymself was so elated that he thought hymself egall with the Kyng; and when he said masse he made Dukes and Erles to serve him of wyne with asay taken, and to holde the bason at the lavatories" (See Hall, p. 593). Sanuto shows that at banquets, as well as at mass, Cardinal Wolsey exacted the "assay."

1520.

at table, and the Cardinal to the right of Queen Katharine, but there was space between them for another chair. To the right of the Cardinal was Queen Germaine, and to the left of the King, his sister, Queen Mary, these six sitting at the table placed at the head of the hall.

Then at the second table, to the right of the centre table, there sat first of all, the French ambassador, with a Spanish dame, Señora Doña Maria, the daughter of a Count of Spain; next came the Venetian ambassador, Surian, with the Duchess of Norfolk, and then the brother of the Count Palatine, with the daughter of the Duke of Buckingham;* the other lords pairing in like manner with the Spanish and English ladies.

The first place at the table on the left was that of the Venetian ambassador, Cornaro, resident with the Emperor. He paired with a lady, and next sat the Duke of Alva, with the other lords and ladies.

The banquet was most sumptuous, the tables being surrounded by enamoured youths (gioveni innamorati), who stood behind the ladies; and amongst the rest, certain Spaniards played the lovers' part so bravely that nothing could have been better (nihil supra). One of them, the Count of Capra, made love so heartily, that he had a fainting fit, or swooned for his mistress, and was carried out by the hands and feet until he recovered himself.

The viands were so numerous that the banquet lasted four hours, after which the tables being removed, dancing commenced, and the ball was opened by the Duke of Alva, a sexagenarian, but still amorous. He danced with a Spanish lady, his favorite, not handsome, but beyond measure graceful.

The ball throughout was "the Gloves of Spain" (sic), with a very gay finale to the sound of the fife. The dress of the Duke's sweetheart would be long to describe, but the Duke himself wore a small cap of tawney cloth, with a green silk tassel across the cap which he cocked to the left, in the Ghibelline fashion.

The next dance was performed by the enamoured Count of Capra.

The third by another Spanish count.

The fourth by the King; and the last was performed, and admirably, by the Prince of Bisignano, all dancing in the Spanish fashion, and the ball ending when it was broad daylight.

On the morrow, Tuesday, the Emperor and the King rested part of the day, and then sat in council until late in the evening, when, at about an hour after sunset, the Emperor quitted Canterbury, accompanied by the King and Cardinal, without the ambassadors, who were told to remain behind, though all the rest of the royal retinue followed by torchlight, the torches not being many, but of wax, and very long indeed, in the English fashion; and having quitted Canterbury together, their Majesties took leave of each other five miles thence. The Emperor however was accompanied towards Sandwich by Cardinal Wolsey; the King proceeding to Dover; the

* The Duke of Buckingham had three daughters, the Countess of Surrey, the Countess of Westmoreland, and Lady Abergavenny.

1520.

Queens also doing the like, and Queen Germaine taking leave of Queen Katharine.

THE FIELD OF CLOTH OF GOLD.

The King and Queen and the court quitted Dover with 27 ships, and arrived at Calais at noon, after a very calm passage.

On the 5th of June, the King, accompanied by the ambassadors and the rest of the court, quitted Calais in the evening, and arrived at the Castle of Guisnes, where, amongst other things, he had built a palace beyond the fortress, with a basement of stone four feet above ground, and the rest of timber; the partition walls and roof being of canvas.

The chambers of Queen Katharine were hung with tapestry of silk and gold representing the most minute foliage, the most beautiful that the eye of man ever beheld; and it cost seven ducats per yard.

In this palace were two oratories, both looking into the large chapel, and both with hangings; the first of cloth of gold with green velvet, and the King's badge of roses with the garter, quartered with lilies. In each of these two oratories were six images of massive gold, more than one cubit high, and two gold basins each worth 3,000 ducats, two gold censers, two gold boats containing incense (navicelle), two candlesticks, and a chalice also of gold; and this for each of the oratories, one of which was for the King and the other for the Queen, and each had a pew in the English fashion. The King's pew was of cloth of gold; the Queen's of crimson velvet with a raised pile.

In the King's oratory on the altar, besides the things already mentioned, were six jewelled images:—a St. George on horseback, smiting the dragon, and a St. Christopher with the infant on his shoulder, both of which were of diamonds; a Nativity (presepio) of various jewels; a St. Ursula with her companions, a St. Katharine, and a St. Barbara; all which things were worth a world of gold.

The large chapel was entirely covered and hung with cloth of gold and green velvet; and the twelve apostles in gold, and a crucifix three feet high, were on the altar.

On one side of the palace a corridor leads to the door of the palace at Guisnes, through which the King can pass to and fro at his pleasure.

It having been arranged that the conference between the Kings of France and England should take place on the 7th of June, the King of England at the 21st hour quitted Guisnes, accompanied by Cardinal Wolsey, who rode beside him; then came the Papal Nuncio with the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Spanish ambassador with the Duke of Buckingham, and the Venetian ambassador with the Duke of Suffolk. The rest of the lords and gentlemen followed, about 500 in number, all splendidly attired in cloth of gold and silk. The King wore a samar of silver brocade, joined with silver cords, from the extremities of which hung beautiful pendent jewels, and round his neck he wore a jewelled collar of great price. This band [of 500] in part preceded, and in part followed the King in pairs.

1520.

On the [left hand] side of the King was his guard, 500 in number, dressed in doublets of white and green velvet in checquers, with the royal badge of the rose embroidered on their breasts, and with halberts in their hands. They headed a squadron of 4,000 footmen, a force so imposing that it caused some suspicion on the part of the French, who sent officials to inspect the number of the band, and ascertain whether it was armed, who found the men were without arms, according to the articles. The English in their turn made a similar inspection of the French.

At length, both parties, English and French, being assured, marched forward to a hill, at the bottom of which is a pleasant valley, called "Vallis Aurea." On this hill the King of England halted, and the whole retinue formed a ring; the like being done by the most Christian King on his reaching the opposite hill, which also looked on the valley, in whose hollow a tent had been pitched, covered with cloth of gold, and an awning. The ambassadors having halted on the hill, the King of England caused the sword borne by the Marquis [of Dorset] to be unsheathed, and his Majesty, with Cardinal Wolsey alone, on horseback descended into the valley, with the Master of the Horse [Sir Henry Guylford] on foot, in a doublet of cloth of gold, and Sir Richard Wingfield, English ambassador to the King of France, from whom he had then arrived, dressed in a similar of brocatel, which his most Christian Majesty had given him.

These three (sic) descended into the valley, and the most Christian King did the like from the opposite direction, he by himself on horseback, and the Lord High Constable [Bourbon] on foot with the drawn sword, the Lord Admiral [Bonnivet] with the badge and the whistle, and the Master of the Horse [San Severino] on foot.

The Kings on arriving in the valley below, and drawing nigh, saluted each other cap in hand, and then embraced very lovingly on horseback; after which, having dismounted, they embraced again, and entered the tent accompanied by Cardinal Wolsey. They remained there in private for half an hour, after which, on coming out, they again embraced each other repeatedly, and having mounted their horses, took loving leave, and with music and great rejoicing each went in his own direction; the most Christian King to Ardres, and the English King to Guisnes; it being sunset when they got home.

Note by Sanuto, that the Mantuan ambassador in France, who was present there, transmitted this account.

On Saturday the 9th, in the afternoon, the two Kings again met, in the field appointed for the joust, situated a short mile, in the direction of Ardres, from the spot where the first interview was held. It was a large square of greater length than width, enclosed by a ditch and dike, the entrances being to the front, with bars to correspond. On each of the sides within were stages for the spectators, and in the centre was the tilt-yard, with its lists, and at the extremity towards the English [Pale?] two chambers were erected, one on each side, well and richly furnished for the accommodation of the Kings to arm and rest themselves.

1520.

At this extremity, beyond the ditch, was another square on each side, where tents and pavilions were pitched for the service of the jousts; those of either nation having their own side, and passing from the houses of their respective sovereigns into the square by the esplanade of the ditch, which is sufficiently wide for the passage.

At the end of the tilt-yard, in the direction of the two houses, there was a tree resembling an elm, around which was a square mound, the height of a man on horseback, but of timber covered with green damask. The trunk was clad in cloth of gold, as likewise two large branches affixed to the sides; and at the summit of the mound or bank were the rests for the heralds, and for the shields and arms of the jousts.

Into this place, and from this side, the King of England made his entry with fifty knights and lords, summoned according to a roll in the hands of one of his officials.

Then, from the other corresponding side, the King of France made his entry, summoning an equal number of his own subjects.

At the English entrance were the French infantry archers, and at the French entrance the English; and others patrolled the environs on horseback, with orders not to allow anyone to cross the ditch, even should it be requisite to enforce them by death.

When the two Kings met on the ground, they lowered their spears, saluting each other lovingly as usual, and then commenced making their own horses, and those of their companions gallop, jump, and wheel; after which two heralds brought two shields, one with the arms of England, the other with those of France, and carried them round the tilt-yard, preceded by 30 trumpeters and 22 heralds, and then went to the trunk of the tree under its branches, the French shield being on the right hand, as also was the French house.* On this day the two King exchanged coursers.

Beneath the royal shields were three others, one striped longitudinally tawney and murrey, with an inscription in French in gold letters, signifying "For the courses to be run in the tilt-yard." The second shield was in like manner striped, yellow and white, with the inscription "For Tourney." The third shield was all silvered white, with the inscription "For the battle on foot at the bars."†

Around the rails of the mound were placed the badges of all the lords and knights who were to tilt, together with their names.

Whilst this was doing, Cardinal Wolsey arrived from Ardres, where he had been to dine with Madame [Louise of Savoy]; and the Kings, having already dismounted, and being inside King Henry's house, the Cardinal joined them there. They remained in conference for half an hour, and then, remounting their horses, returned to their quarters.

On Sunday the 10th the King of France was banqueted by the Queen of England [Katharine]; the French Queen [Claude] doing the like by the King of England.

* As already stated, Henry VIII. gave the right hand to Francis I., because the ground was English.

† In the original "Pour il bagordo." My translation of the word is derived from Hall's general account of the challenges.

1520.

The English banqueting chamber was hung with most beautiful tapestry, such as never had been seen before, worth some 15,000 ducats, representing foliage.

Each course consisted of 50 double dishes, that is to say, with covers, all of silver gilt except those presented to the King, which were of gold, and they went so often to the kitchen that to count the times was impossible.

Beyond this chamber was a hall, 750 feet in length, where 134 ladies dined, with about twenty gentlemen in their company, as a mark of honour, according to the custom of England, but all Englishmen of rank.*

Besides this hall there was another of the same dimensions, in which the gentlemen dined, in number upwards of 200. In a chamber corresponding to the first the Duke of Bourbon, Lord High Constable, and the Admiral [Bonnivet], with all the great French personages, dined, with a few Englishmen of rank; and thus there were tables from place to place, and from grade to grade. In Cardinal Wolsey's apartments, the Bishop of Paris [Stephen Poncher], and all the French prelates and priests dined; and in each of these places were cupboards of most beautiful and costly gold plate. Then all over the house below, and about the courtyard, victuals were served; the abundance of food and wine being so great that the people choked themselves. In front of the first gate there was a fountain, which spouted wine during five hours for all comers.

King Francis and Queen Katharine having finished their repast above, came into the hall, and dancing commenced to the sound of the tabour, and pipe, and viol; the first dance being performed by the Lady Mary with a French nobleman.

After this, King Francis having brought with him his fifers and trombone players, who are excellent, had a dance performed in the Italian fashion, and danced with the sweetheart (innamorata) of one of the hostages given by him to the King of England, by name Montpézat, an accomplished woman (una brava dona), and the handsomest in the company;† and some 20 couple danced. The ball being ended, the King with very great gallantry kissed all the damsels; and the crowd became so great that their Majesties withdrew to the banqueting room, where they danced until the signal for departure at the 23rd hour.

On Monday the 11th they went to the joust at about the 20th hour. The King and Queen of England arrived first; and the Queen was with the Lady Mary in a litter of crimson satin embroidered with gold knots and foliage, the horses which carried it being trapped in like manner. Two led palfries with empty saddles and two empty litters followed; then three waggons (carrete), drawn by four horses

* From the general tenour of these notices it may be inferred that the twenty gentlemen were not seated at table, but stood behind the ladies like the "enamoured youths" at Canterbury.

† As will be seen in date of Saturday 16th June, the sweetheart of Mons. de Montpézat bore the name of Browne,—probably Anne Browne. (See Hall, p. 595, and Rutland Papers, p. 38.)

1520.

one before the other. After the waggons came 30 ladies well-dressed but ugly.

The Kings, having armed themselves, came forth from their houses, each accompanied by seven companions in livery. The dress and horse furniture of the King of France were covered with slashes, and certain circles, destined apparently for a feather, with the motto, "De vous peut être."

The Queen of France and Madame [Louise] were in a litter of cloth of silver, followed by Madame's litter of black velvet, and by 20 damsels on palfreys, after whom came three waggons, covered in like manner, as also the horses, and another black litter, after which 30 ladies on horseback, well appointed. The Queen having dismounted, and ascended the stage where the Queen of England was, the Duke of Alençon entered the lists with nine companions, all in silver tissue, with gold scrolls and black letters, which were illegible, his lance-servants being all dressed in white in like manner.

This band commenced tilting against the 16 challengers, first of all against the King of France, and then against the King of England, and the others in succession. The encounters were not fierce at first, but improved subsequently. The King of France rode a good and well-trained chesnut (razinato rosso) courser; the King of England a bay; King Francis tilted much; King Henry but little, having sprained his hand.

The 10 knights having run their courses, the Admiral of France entered the lists, with nine companions in a livery one half of murrey velvet, the other of gold brocade and silver tissue in checquers, with an anchor and an illegible motto, and with plumes of the same colours. When they had tilted it was time to depart; and as it threatened rain and was late, many proceeded towards their lodgings, but not in time to escape the shower, which drenched them thoroughly. On the 12th the jousting was resumed, but without any remarkable display, save that of a company of 11 in black, yellow, and white—the black, velvet, the yellow, gold brocade, and the white, silver; their surcoats being trapped with a white cord on the black, yellow on the white, and black on the yellow; but they jousted no better than the first. Their weapons were battle-arms and spears, with not very large buttons at the points, but they hit seldom.

On Wednesday the 13th they went to the ground, but there was such a high wind and so much dust, it was impossible to tilt; though there was a fine wrestling match between these English and French.

On Thursday the 14th, the two Kings and their companies kept the field. The King of England wore a woman's sleeve, with embroidery, in lieu of a plume, as did his companions. The King of France had an L embroidered in silver all over his apparel, and the word "Quando," in italics; and he rode a light grey Neapolitan courser.

The opponents were first a band of 10, followed by the company of Mons. de L'Escu, who was in gallant trim on a courser trapped with black velvet and brocatel, all slashed in checquers; and where the velvet was above the brocatel was beneath, and in like manner beneath the brocatel was the velvet; and from his shoulders there hung a hood or mantle in the olden fashion, which fastened to the left shoulder and hung over to the right, a costume recently brought into fashion again, as if to serve for a capuche, but of a different shape. He came immediately in advance of his 10 companions, sword in hand, turning about in front of them as if to keep them in order; and when he came in front of the Queens he made his horse courtsey twice, and went round the yard making this display.

1520.

This company having tilted, it was then time to depart, and no great feats performed on that day; but the King of England bore himself well.*

After M^{ons}. de L'Escu had tilted, he presented himself to the English King, who was running a course; and having dismounted and kissed his Majesty's hand, gave him his courser, the King having previously admired it.

On Friday the 15th there was tilting as usual, but owing to the rain and wind, there were not many spectators present, nor did the King tilt.

On Saturday the 16th two bands of Englishmen, numbering 11 each, presented themselves against the challengers. The colours of of the first band were white, yellow, and azure, all being dressed in brocade and velvet; and one of them, Master Browne by name,† the brother of that beautiful English girl, had for his opponent, the most Christian King, who on that day wore a surcoat of brocatel, barded with violet velvet, embroidered with silver knots, on the fields of which were open books of silver embroidery with black letters thus, [A ^m E].

All the King's companions bore the same device, which might apparently be interpreted "Libera me."‡

The King of England, with his band, wore yellow, russet, and white, but with various devices.

The second band of Englishmen presented itself in white, red, and azure, with 21 stirrup men. The white was silver tissue, the red crimson, the azure velvet, with gold flames and various devices in embroidery for the surcoats, amongst which was one representing a heart on fire, and above a hand with a garden water-pot for watering flowers, quenching it, with the motto, "pour reveiller." Another was all covered with white feathers in embroidery, but all severed in the centre, with a motto thus, "votre merci." In this band one of the knights wore apparel covered with Greek B's encircled by a pen, on whose quill was written "eterna."

In this band was the younger son of the Duke of Norfolk,§ who tilted against the King [of England]. This was the last day of the jousts, and the combatants behaved very well indeed, and shivered almost all the staves.

The King of France received a hurt on the temple and eye—some said from a blow of a spear—others from his horse's head-piece,

* "Par il Re Anglese si portò bene." The Mantuan ambassador does not pay Henry VIII. any similar compliment.

† Sir Weston Browne. (See Rutland Papers, p. 31.)

‡ The bar was meant to represent a fetter. (See Hall, p. 614.)

§ Lord Edmund Howard. (See Hall, p. 614, and Collins, vol. i. p. 84.)

1520.

which being loose, struck him when mounting. He was seen without his helmet in front of his mother and of the Queens, with a black eye and a black patch.*

It was said that on the preceding day, one brother tilting against the other (they were Frenchmen), received such a blow on the head that today he died.

On Sunday, the 17th, Madame, the [French King's] mother, came to dine at Guisnes, and King Francis having anticipated the hour, was in the courtyard of the castle with a few of his followers before King Henry knew of his arrival, to the surprise of well nigh everybody. The English King, however, hastened to meet him, and they embraced, King Francis saying, "My Lord, I am your prisoner;" and after very great greetings they went out of the palace together, and went to mass in the adjoining chapel, which is very gorgeous and magnificent, all glittering with gold. After mass King Henry went to Ardres to dine with the Queen of France, taking with him his sister the Lady Mary, and his company, King Francis dining here [at Guisnes] in the King's apartment. His mother dined with Queen Katharine and Cardinal Wolsey in his own apartments, with a numerous company of French lords and gentlemen. The halls were full, one of men, the other of ladies; and, as usual, there was very great abundance of good cheer, and vast pomp.

After dinner, there was dancing in the French fashion before the Queens (sic), and in a little while 10 couples of masquers made their appearance in long gowns of velvet and satin, with plumes and hoods. Amongst them was King Francis, in a russet-coloured garment bordered with white, both he and his companion; and to the sound of fifes (pifari) they performed a dance, said to be in the Ferrarese fashion, the most Christian King dancing with that my Lady Browne ("con quella milade Brun") with whom he danced the last time.

King Francis then conversed with the Queen, and with Madame de Chateaubriand, and passed the day thus until the hour of departure, and on his way back met the King of England returning from the dinner and entertainment at Ardres, where he had been with the Queen of France. King Henry was accompanied only by his fellow masquers in their dresses, 30 in number; 10 in long gowns of cloth of gold, 10 in the Greek costume, violet velvet lined with vair, and 10 in the Swiss fashion, with their plumes and short garments, but slashed with silk and brocade.

The feat performed by the French King, coming as he did to Guisnes so confidently, was remarkable, and King Henry, whilst dining at Ardres and narrating it, said that by his faith the King his brother had shown such truth and love towards him, that he should never forget it; and that there was nothing he would not do for him at all times, both personally and through his kingdom, against any-soever. Be it also known, that when the most Christian King arrived at Guisnes this morning, the King of England took from his neck a jewelled collar worth 30,000 (sic) ducats, receiving in exchange from King Francis a jewelled bracelet of less value, but very handsome, a mark of very great love and mutual goodwill.

* If Francis I. received these injuries whilst tilting, they must have been inflicted by the spear of Sir Weston Browne; and the story of the horse's head-piece, was perhaps invented to save the King's credit as a joustier. From a variety of entries in Sanuto's Diaries, I gather that the particulars in this narrative, such at least as relate especially to England and the English, were derived from a journal kept by the Venetian secretary at the Court of Henry VIII., Lodovico Spinelli, whose account must be compared with that of the Mantuan ambassador, Soardino. The accomplished Anne Browne vindicates the beauty of the women of England, which Soardino disparaged; and her brother Weston was no less formidable a joustier than the Marquis of Saluzzo, whose prowess alone is vaunted by Soardino, to the exclusion of Henry VIII. and Sir Weston Browne.

1520.

On Monday, the 18th, Cardinal Wolsey went to dine with Madame, and then came to the joust. The bands were nine in number, and after they had tilted, six coursers were brought to the ground and exhibited by a rider in the service of the Marquis of Mantua, the horses being, however, selected by the French Master of the Horse [Galeazzo di San Severino]. They were given by the most Christian King to the King of England, four of them having come from Mantua, and King Henry mounted three of them immediately, and rode them, and, being good and well trapped, they pleased him much.

On Tuesday, the 19th, Cardinal Wolsey gave a banquet to the French and English prelates here at the Court, including Stafleo, the Papal Nuncio, resident with his most Christian Majesty, and during the repast they discussed the Turkish news, and Stafleo greatly praised the Signory and the Venetian Republic and their government.

On this same morning King Henry went unexpectedly to dine at Ardres, with a very small retinue and without any guard; and then after dinner they came to the joust, where each ran a good 22 or 24 courses. The French King wore his white and violet suit, with the following motto, "Thus will the bear be."* And this day the jousts ended, and were followed by battle on foot at the bars, and tournaments, as follows.

On Wednesday, the 20th, the Kings presented themselves on the field with their bands.

The King of France was dressed in cloth of silver, embroidered all over in silver with clouds, shaded with murrey silk, edged with a label bearing the words "Tanquam nubes igne crepans." His plumes were white with purple tufts.

On the right side the King of England was dressed entirely in stiff brocade, on the left in russet velvet; and he had a St. George on horseback, with the dragon under his feet and the maiden in front of him; besides red hearts transfixing by a dart, and a hand in the act of launching an arrow; all embroidered in gold.

Against the knights, the keepers of the field, there came in succession all the bands which had jousted, and one by one attacked one of the keepers, rebated sword in hand, dealing lusty and valorous blows one and all. The King of France was the first, and the first stroke carried away his plume. The King of England came next, and thus each combatant in turn, the battle being renewed according to the need.

Those who made their appearance were about 50, and after they had all fought, they gave place to the master of the horse of France, who, being mounted on a Spanish jennet, covered and trapped entirely with gold brocade, he himself being armed as a light horseman, with stirrups and saddle jennet fashion, and wearing a short and close-fitting surcoat of brocade, ran a course with a thick spear a good four fingers in diameter at the extremity, and then repeated the feat; after which he dismounted, leaving the spear and horse for any one who might choose to run in like manner, but as no one came forward, he did himself great honour. The entertainment was thus brought to a close, and will be resumed tomorrow.

1520.

On Thursday the battle was renewed, the Kings appearing with their usual companions. King Francis had his surcoats of brocatel, striped and trimmed with black velvet, and on the border were small squares embroidered in silver, shaded with black silk, each square being inscribed with a Latin letter, joined together by a small silver lacet, thus ———————, a very elegant design; and the letters altogether formed the word "Reciproce."

The King of England and his band had surcoats of silver tissue, edged with gold brocade, the ground representing hillocks of gold, from which sprouted leafy branches resembling the olive, all of gold lama or of some other gilt material, but said to be of gold, tied and bound so that they could not fall, and making a marvellous and costly show.

The opposing bands presented themselves as on the preceding day, and bore themselves bravely, the challengers showing equal prowess, amongst which last the Kings really displayed greater valour and courage than the rest, shattering plate armour, corselets, and swords, and making the steel weapons strike sparks and fire in the air, in a fashion worthy of eternal record. And thus ended the second mode of fighting [tournament wise]; and tomorrow they will fight on foot [at the bars]; after which, it is supposed that the clang of arms and the noise of trumpets and drums will cease.

On Friday, the 22d, the challengers presented themselves on foot, with the exception of the Kings, who on this day chose to witness the feats of their knights.

In front of the Queens' stage was a square stockade, with sufficient space for 10 couple of men, and in its centre a long bar, about three feet high, with two side bars.

Within these bars the challengers presented themselves on foot.

The band of the French King wore doublets of silver tissue and purple velvet, and of other chequered velvet, murrey and yellow, alternate breadths, and with white and murrey plumes.

The band of the King of England wore biparted doublets of stiff gold brocade and russet velvet, embroidered.

The opposing bands presented themselves at the bar, two at a time carrying rebated spears, with which the combatants fought against each other until the spears broke, and then cudgelled each other with the stumps, showering heavy two-handed blows on each other's heads and shoulders. At length, when separated by the side-bars swung by four men,—there being two for the purpose at each extremity,—they then hurled the fragments remaining in their hands at each other, fighting with such ardour that occasionally, when a combatant lost his spear, or when it broke in his hand, not a fragment remaining, he nevertheless stood firm, thrusting with his arms, as if the weapon was still there.

1520.

After the spears, they next fought with swords, making in like manner fierce and desperate strokes, two by two, until the hour arrived for returning home.

On Saturday, the 23rd, a chapel was prepared in front of the stage from which the jousts had been witnessed, and connected with it, at its upper end; and although erected* in the course of one single night,* yet was it, nevertheless, costly and all glittering with gold. Here Cardinal Wolsey said mass, being served by (con il servitio del) the Archbishop of Armagh, the Bishop of Durham, and several other English bishops; there being present four Cardinals of France, and other French bishops, two Apostolic nuncios, an Imperial ambassador (also a bishop), three Venetian ambassadors (one with the King of England and two with the King of France), one from the Duke of Lorraine, one from the Duke of Ferrara, and one from the Marquis of Mantua, all of whom sat in their places on the stage where the altar was raised.

Opposite to the altar, on the stage from which they had viewed the jousts, the Queens sat in separate pews, royally apparelled, and on every side, the whole length of the stage, were lords and ladies, ranged according to their rank, the two Kings going processionally to their appointed places.

The service of the mass was very magnificent. First of all the apparelling of Cardinal Wolsey was performed by bishops, who also placed on his feet a pair of very valuable jewelled sandals. The water for his hands, was given him by some of the chief noblemen of England.† The French and English singers chaunted, with occasional accompaniments of trombones, cornets, and organs.

After the elevation, the Eucharist was seen in the air floating over the tilt yard, no one perceiving whence it issued nor who propelled it, to the height of a tall tower, and even beyond, for it travelled half a mile, to the surprise of those who did not know how it was done.‡

The mass being ended, Pace, the chief secretary of the King of England, proclaimed the plenary indulgence conceded to all who had attended this mass, saying that such divine service had been performed to the glory of God, and of this noble meeting, beseeching him, of his infinite goodness, to be pleased to render this peace between the two Kings perpetual.

After this the Kings went to dine together, the Queens doing the like by themselves, as also did all the five Cardinals, together with some prelates, and all in sundry compartments of the stage, which had been decorated and prepared for this purpose; and it was marvellous how in the open country they could have provided so conveniently and in so short a time for such a great banquet, for

* See also Rutland Papers, p. 46.

† See also Hall, p. 593.

‡ The writer does not explain the mode of the performance of this ascent.

1520.

hands at each other, fighting with such ardour that occasionally, when a combatant lost his spear, or when it broke in his hand, not a fragment remaining, he nevertheless stood firm, thrusting with his arms, as if the weapon was still there.

After the spears, they next fought with swords, making in like manner fierce and desperate strokes, two by two, until the hour arrived for returning home.

On Saturday, the 23rd, a chapel was prepared in front of the stage from which the jousts had been witnessed, and connected with it, at its upper end; and although erected in the course of one single night,* yet was it, nevertheless, costly and all glittering with gold. Here Cardinal Wolsey said mass, being served by (con il servitio del) the Archbishop of Armagh, the Bishop of Durham, and several other English bishops; there being present four Cardinals of France, and other French bishops, two Apostolic nuncios, an Imperial ambassador (also a bishop), three Venetian ambassadors (one with the King of England and two with the King of France), one from the Duke of Lorraine, one from the Duke of Ferrara, and one from the Marquis of Mantua, all of whom sat in their places on the stage where the altar was raised.

Opposite to the altar, on the stage from which they had viewed the jousts, the Queens sat in separate pews, royally apparelled, and on every side, the whole length of the stage, were lords and ladies, ranged according to their rank, the two Kings going processionally to their appointed places.

The service of the mass was very magnificent. First of all the apparelling of Cardinal Wolsey was performed by bishops, who also placed on his feet a pair of very valuable jewelled sandals. The water for his hands was given him by some of the chief noblemen of England.† The French and English singers chaunted, with occasional accompaniments of trombones, cornets, and organs.

After the elevation, the Eucharist was seen in the air floating over the tilt yard, no one perceiving whence it issued nor who propelled it, to the height of a tall tower, and even beyond, for it travelled half a mile, to the surprise of those who did not know how it was done.‡

The mass being ended, Pace, the chief secretary of the King of England, proclaimed the plenary indulgence conceded to all who had attended this mass, saying that such divine service had been performed to the glory of God, and of this noble meeting, beseeching him, of his infinite goodness, to be pleased to render this peace between the two Kings perpetual.

After this the Kings went to dine together, the Queens doing the like by themselves, as also did all the five Cardinals, together with some prelates, and all in sundry compartments of the stage, which had been decorated and prepared for this purpose; and it was marvellous how in the open country they could have provided so conveniently and in so short a time for such a great banquet, for

* See also Rutland Papers, p. 46.

† See also Hall, p. 593.

‡ The writer does not explain the mode of the performance of this ascent.

1520.

all ate at the same time, and each place had its kitchens and butteries and necessary offices beyond the ditch of the tilt yard under awnings and tents. All the other lords, barons, and courtiers ate in this place in like manner apart at their respective tables, and during the repast all the musicians here, namely, trumpeters, and players on the cornet, sourdine, trombone, fife, tabor, viol, and "tuifolo," each in their turn; and after the repast the combat recommenced on foot, as above, with spears, and at the close they fought with two-handed swords.

On Sunday, the 24th, each King dined with the Queen of the other; King Francis making his appearance at Guisnes with 20 companions, all in gowns and masked, with whom were 20 young French ladies, dressed in the Italian fashion with velvet caps, round which were feathers. The masquers were almost all dressed in brocade and tissue of silver and gold, the ladies likewise being richly attired.

These 20 with their ladies dined all together with the King, and at the appointed hour entered the chamber of Queen Katharine, and each with his female partner danced to the sound of fifes.

King Francis wore a garment of murrey brocatel, with a hood and hat in the German fashion with yellow and murrey feathers; and having danced awhile he approached the Queen, and having conversed with her for half an hour, went and changed his dress.

In the mean while the Queen gave orders to make presents to some of the jousters, a reckoning having been made of their strokes and exploits, by the master heralds and by the judges; so written billets were given accordingly to three or four, they being informed thereby, from whom they were to receive these presents; this service being performed by an official of the Queen's household. It was not possible to ascertain each article, but the total consisted of jewels, or rings, or collars, and the like, the particulars of which will be known more distinctly hereafter.

When King Francis reappeared unmasked, he wore some very large and exquisite emeralds on his breast, there being also a great number of very fine ones in his sleeves and apparel; and he had a black French cape of satin and velvet, slashed, and with gold embroidery.

Talking thus with the Queen, he in the evening took leave of her, kissing all her ladies one by one; after which he departed with his companions for Ardres, to which place the King of England in like manner had betaken himself with 20 of his attendants masked, and an equal number of English ladies; the Queen of France on her part also, making presents to the Englishmen who had distinguished themselves on the field as challengers or answerers.

Thus ended these games and pageants, which were very grand and magnificent, both with regard to the furniture and decoration of the edifices, and the amount and rank of the persons present, who were so numerous on both sides, and so sumptuously supplied with apparel, jewels, arms, collars, horses, and attendants, as to be inconceivable; nor is it supposed that in our time a similar display was ever witnessed, or that the like will be seen for many a day to come. At this interview the wealth, courtesy, and valour of the two nations were manifested in the noblest mode and fashion, of which, although many striking instances might be written in detail, yet did the reality far exceed them; nor may any one suppose that what has been written is the whole, for it could not be expressed by any memory, however vivid, though aided by the readiest of pens, for the grandeur, address, personal beauty, manners, fashions, deeds, and words, of these two most powerful Kings, in the field, at table, in conversation, at audience, and during amusements and "serizi" (sic),* were altogether remarkable and incredible.

1520.

SECOND INTERVIEW between the KING OF ENGLAND and the EMPEROR.

After much negotiation from the 4th to the 9th of July between Cardinal Wolsey and Mons. de Chièvres, it was at length agreed that the King of England should leave Calais on the 10th of July with all his retinue, and proceed towards Gravelines, a place belonging to the French lady, Madame de Vendome, but under the jurisdiction of the Catholic King, in Flanders, at a distance of two miles from Calais. A spear, having on its point a scarlet bonnet or cap, was set up in the middle of a small valley. Towards this signal the King of England went from the Calais side,† and the Emperor from the other; and having embraced each other cap in hand very lovingly, and after much resistance made by the Emperor, who would not take precedence, but at length being told that he must do so whilst within the English Pale, he took the right hand, and proceeded thus towards Gravelines. On crossing a stream, and arriving within the jurisdiction of Flanders, the Emperor placed the King on the right hand as a mark of honour. That night they remained at Gravelines, and departed on the 11th after dinner, and came to Calais. The Emperor wore a doublet of gold brocade, chequered with silver brocade; and the King of England had a simar with a "galeto" well nigh in the Spanish fashion. They were accompanied by Madame Margaret, the Emperor's aunt, in a covered litter of black velvet, and arrived at Calais in the evening.

Behind her litter were 40 ladies and a waggon (careta), and another litter in like manner black. All the ladies were dressed in black velvet, and they were all young and handsome except one, who seemed rather graceful notwithstanding her ugliness.

They entered Calais by the Boulogne gate, and after their entry passed the portal of the royal palace,‡ where the Queen of England had arrived. She greeted her nephew, the Emperor, and Madame Margaret, who shortly afterwards took leave, and was escorted to the palace of the "Staple of Calais," a very handsome structure,§ accompanied by Cardinal Wolsey. After a while, the Emperor likewise followed her thither, and there they lodged and supped. And on that evening a gentleman of King Francis' chamber, Mons. de Montmorenci, arrived from the Court of France, whom King

* Qu. "scherzi"; i.e. sports or merrymaking.

† The Venetian seems to have been writing at Calais.

‡ "The Checker" (see Hall, p. 621).

§ "Staple Hall" (see Hall, p. 621).

1520.

Henry took with him, masked, to the Emperor, visiting the ladies and dancing a part of the night.

On Thursday the 12th, the King and Queen dined with the Emperor and Madame Margaret at Staple Hall; and in the evening a great banquet was to have been given in an amphitheatre recently erected for this purpose by the King, but the canvas roof having been blown off by a heavy gale of wind, it became requisite to change the site, and the banquet was served in the King's house,* but confusedly, by reason of the narrow space: and also in a private manner, for there were only a few personages present, not even the ambassadors. As the design of this theatre was very handsome, it must be described.†

In front of the King's house [the Checker?] is a fine open space formed by the demolition of sundry buildings, on which spot they constructed this edifice entirely of timber. It has 16 fronts,‡ and its height and diameter measure each upwards of 250 feet. In the centre of the building is the tall mast of a ship, supported by other masts, the mainmast rising to a sufficient height above the walls for the formation of a handsome and well proportioned covering, like a pavilion. Around the summit of the mainmast are two iron hoops with rings, one hoop being lower than the other, from which hoops ropes are drawn to the walls all round, and thereon rests the canvas covering. Beneath the uppermost hoop the ropes, drawn in like manner from the lower one, support another sort of azure-coloured canvas, which forms the ceiling, being decorated with gold stars and planets of looking glass.

Around the walls below the ceiling are three tiers of balconies or stages, eight or nine feet deep, the parapet in front being of the height of a man's waist, and the tiers raised 10 feet one above the other, with sloping floors, so that the last look over the first, and behold conveniently what is passing on the ground floor.

These tiers are spacious, and intended for the convenience of the spectators, musicians, trumpeters, &c.

On the external parapet (margine esteriore) of the uppermost tier was represented a landscape of mountains, woods, forests, and meadows in relief, all of taffety, delightfully true to nature, with circles and elevations and inequalities; after which, farther inwards, well nigh on a level with the upper part of the back of the tier was an artificial sea of canvas with azure waves, and above the sea sky and clouds and blowing winds, and above the sky flames and gilt ornaments and roses, these representations being continued round the walls in the form of circular globes, on each of which were some of its peculiar attributes. On the earth were windmills, towers, houses, trees, and animals; in the water and in the sea ships, fishes, and marine monsters; in the air, clouds and winds and birds; and on this aerial globe were inscribed many propositions and sayings of Aristotle, as in his "Meteors," concerning the cause of the winds

* "The Checker" (see Hall, p. 621).

† The Venetian secretary's account of this banqueting house contains many particulars omitted by Hall, and which are not supplied by the Chronicle of Calais, pp. 29, 30.

‡ "Sedece faze." In the Chronicle of Calais, "xvi. principals."

1520.

and clouds, and the like. In the last globe of fire there was nothing, because (I believe) in England they are still of opinion that fire does not generate or nourish any animal soever. The parapet of the balconies on which the spectators leant was covered with white cloth, hanging over the length of two yards, like tapestry, with a border of green ivy all round, and in the centre of the field were large white roses and gilt rosettes; each of the three tiers being decorated in like manner. From the ceiling there hung large chandeliers at each angle of the theatre, and between every two chandeliers there was a human figure in the air of wicker-work, and covered and clad with silk or cloth, and bearing torches in their hands, all in different costumes, and of alternate sexes, man and woman. Below these lights were cornucopias, with foliage, which likewise served for candlesticks, being fixed on the masts.

Round the centre mast tables were placed, forming a square, and which were to have been prepared for the sovereigns; and there were other tables all round for the company.

Fronting the entrance of this banqueting hall steps had been raised for a very large sideboard. The approach to this hall was through a vestibule 30 feet long and upwards of 15 broad, and in front of its entry were three statues. The one on the right hand was meant to represent Hercules, club in hand, and at his feet a scroll representing the Emperor's two columns, with his motto, "Non plus ultra;" and under the shield this saying—" Fidelis amicus protectio fortis."

The centre figure represented King Arthur in regal apparel, and at his feet a scroll, across which were three royal crowns, and beneath, eight verses in French, to this effect:—

"I am the famous King Arthur, come to behold you, valorous Princes; be welcome," &c.

On the left hand was a man-at-arms in armour carrying a spear, and at his feet a scroll bearing the old arms of England, and beneath the motto—" Amicus fidelis est alter ego."

Between this figure [of the man-at-arms] and King Arthur, was the red dragon (King Henry's badge) bearing the banner or arms of England.

Between King Arthur and Hercules was the black eagle bearing the banner with the Emperor's arms.

Beneath the verses about King Arthur was a gilt shield, and two hands, in each of which was a drawn sword, and a scroll round them inscribed with the words,—"Cui adhæreo præest,"* which induced much comment.

In the vestibule were six gilt statues of kings, three on each side; and at the entrance, over the door of the theatre, there were also three statues, and in the centre the God of Love, with a scroll at his feet, thus—" Inveni hominem secundum cor meum."

On the right hand was a lansquenet carrying a scroll inscribed with the words—" Intus pax habitat; nos pro foribus vigilamus."

On the left-hand was an English archer with his buckler, bearing the following motto:—" Qui violat pacem hinc procul abeat."

* According to Mezerai this inscription decorated the temporary palace at Guisnes.

1520.

Within the theatre, at the entrance, were the "old" arms of England and the imperial eagle, being placed in like manner all around, together with the two swords.

In this place, and in the fashion described, the banquet was to have been made, but the westerly wind hearing the report, and fearing it might be too hot in so enclosed a place, stripped off the covering and ceiling, and scattering the fire, the air, the sea, and the land, left the site for the spectators, I suppose, the ruin being so complete that for them alone was there any accommodation.

On the morning of Friday the 13th, after dinner, their Majesties prepared for departure, but there was so much delay and so many conferences, that after a great part of the Emperor's retinue and his baggage had been sent off he at length determined to stay, and the two sovereigns and their ministers sat in council to discuss their affairs.

Then, on Saturday the 14th of July, the Emperor at length departed, accompanied by the King of England and the royal retinue, as also by the ambassadors, in their usual place. Both the sovereigns wore doublets; the Emperor's was of silver and gold lama in triangles; the King of England wore cloth of gold. They rode dapple-grey horses, both with very smart (galanti) coverings of cloth of silver, with knots. Having ridden together four miles, when distant one mile from the site of the [first?] interview, they embraced each other, cap in hand, very lovingly, having first talked together face to face, and the King of England well nigh in the ear of the Emperor, who then shook hands with the ambassadors and the rest of the chief personages; after which, the ambassadors took leave of Madame Margaret, the Venetian ambassador Surian kissing her in the Flemish fashion; whereupon the Emperor returned to St. Omer, and the King of England came to Calais, and, together with his retinue and the ambassadors, crossed the Channel with the first fair weather.

[Italian.]

May 22.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 440.

51. ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome, to the SIGNORY.

Consistory held for the affair of Martin Luther in Germany, and nothing determined. The matter postponed in order not to render the scandal greater than it was by showing that importance was attached to his errors.

Rome, 22nd May. Registered by Sanuto, 26th May.

[Italian.]

May 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 472.

52. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

On the 26th discharges of cannon were heard from the castles of England to celebrate (it was supposed) the Emperor's arrival on the island.

Arrival of a messenger from England with the news, that on the 26th the Emperor, with his fleet, reached Dover, and landed, with a numerous company, and went to the place from which the King was to cross, so that they would hold a conference.

1520.

King Francis told him (Giustinian) the Emperor was not well counselled, and saw things under a false aspect.

Dated 26 and 27 [May] from Linz [Linck?], 10 leagues from Ardres, where the King was to lodge and await the passage of the King of England. Registered by Sanuto, 8th June.

[Italian.]

May 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 480.

53. FRANCESCO CORNARO and ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in England, to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor arrived within four leagues of Dover on the afternoon of the 26th May, and there awaited the rest of his squadron. Three large and well armed ships of the King of England went to meet the Emperor and do him honour. The whole Imperial fleet made its appearance later, with delightful weather, and all proceeded together to Dover. When on the point of landing, about sunset, the Emperor was met at a short distance from the shore by Cardinal Wolsey, with two ship's boats, accompanied by many noblemen and gentlemen, richly clad in silk, with massive gold chains. On approaching the Emperor's boat the Cardinal made him a Latin speech, expressing the singular joy caused by his arrival to the King, who was at Sandwich, and would come to Dover immediately.

The Emperor, after a few words of thanks to the Cardinal in reply, then landed, the only ambassador in his company being Cornaro. The Emperor was received most joyously by the Cardinal, whom his Majesty embraced and caressed extremely, as likewise did Mons. de Chièvres. When the greeting came to an end, the Emperor mounted on horseback, and was conducted by the Cardinal and all the chief personages to the Castle, where the Emperor and the Cardinal, Mons. de Chièvres, and the most confidential Imperial attendants were lodged. During the night, the King arrived, and went straight to the Emperor's bedchamber, where they embraced each other familiarly, with great indications of good will. The King departed immediately, and lodged in the town.

On the 27th, two hours after sunrise, the King returned to the Castle, and, after mutual embraces, the two sovereigns mounted on horseback for Canterbury, where the Queen had remained. For lack of horses Cornaro was unable to accompany their Majesties, but Surian, the French ambassador, and many other noblemen who had stayed at Canterbury, met them at some distance outside the city, and accompanied them to the cathedral. The Emperor remained always to the right of the King, who throughout showed the Emperor every mark of honour becoming his dignity. On their entering the cathedral, the Queen came down stairs with the King's sister and many other ladies most richly apparelled, and they and the Emperor embraced and kissed each other, and proceeded afterwards to the high altar, where certain prayers were chanted as usual, which being ended, all their Majesties went to the lodgings which had been prepared for them in the Archbishop's palace adjoining the cathedral, and which were hung with very costly tapestries and cloths of gold. A collation was then served. Returning to his lodgings, Surian found Cornaro there, who had arrived from Dover. After remaining some while together, proceeded to the palace, and accompanied their Majesties to mass. The mass was sung with every solemnity by the Archbishop of Canterbury. Cardinal Wolsey and many lords and gentlemen of the kingdom were present in most pompous array, and with massive gold chains, forming as fine a sight as could possibly be desired.

1520.

The ambassadors, having reaccompanied their Majesties to their apartments, took leave, together with the French ambassador, by whom they were informed that King Henry would cross over to Calais on the following Wednesday, for the interview with his most Christian Majesty, for which King Henry had already sent to make great preparations.

Nothing could exceed the external demonstrations made by the King and all his dependents, so much to the satisfaction of the whole court and population of England as to defy exaggeration.

Canterbury, 27th May 1520.

Received at Venice on the 10th June.

[Italian.]

May 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 517.

54. FRANCESCO CORNARO and ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Emperor and the King of England went to mass yesterday, with a very numerous retinue of lords and ladies most richly clad, and after the mass their Majesties dined in the house where the Emperor was lodged. There sat at the table with the Emperor the King of England, the Queens,* the King's sister,† and Cardinal Wolsey. So far as they (the ambassadors) understand, the banquet was very sumptuous; and there was dancing and much revelry. In the evening two English gentlemen were sent to conduct them, together with the French ambassador, to a hall richly decorated with arras of cloth of gold and of silk. Their Majesties made their appearance there; and the water for their hands having been presented to the Emperor and to the King together, and subsequently to the Queens, to the King's sister, and to Cardinal Wolsey, they all seated themselves at one table; at a little distance from which, was placed another very long table, where they (the Venetian ambassadors) sat, as also the French ambassador, and many lords and gentlemen, in number 200. The banquet lasted three hours; it was most stately; and when ended the King danced, but not the Emperor, who remained talking with the ladies; and the entertainment lasted until Canterbury, 28th May 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 21st June.

[Italian.]

May 29.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 511.

55. FRANCESCO CORNARO and ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in England, to the SIGNORY.

Describe the banquet given to the Emperor, which lasted during

* Queen Katharine of Aragon and Germaine de Foix, widow of the King of Aragon.
† Mary Tudor, widow of the King of France; wife of the Duke of Suffolk.

1520

three hours, and was followed by a ball until day-break. The King danced, but not the Emperor; the Queen and the King's sister and other ladies were present. Then on the ——— the Emperor departed to Sandwich to embark, and the King accompanied him a distance of five miles, conversing on the way, and not choosing any of the ambassadors to follow.

On the receipt of some Turkish news-letters Mons. de Chièvres remarked that whenever the Italians wanted anything they mentioned the Turk; and that the news of a Turkish invasion of the Friuli, and the march of Venetian troops in that direction, might therefore be for the purpose of making an attack on the Emperor. Replied that the intelligence concerning the Turks had been received from the Imperialists, and that the news written by the Signory concerning the Turk had been confirmed by advices.

Possibly, after the interview with the King of France, the King of England would confer with the Emperor, as having to cross the sea, his Majesty would be but at a little distance from him.

Canterbury, 29th May. Registered by Sanuto, 20th June.

[Italian.]

May 30.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 516.

56. A LETTER from ———, at the COURT of FRANCE, to his Brother.

Cardinal Wolsey went to meet the Emperor the evening of his arrival, and the next morning was followed by the King, who gave the Emperor such good greeting as might be imagined. The secretary of the Venetian ambassador at the French Court had gone to see England, and chanced to be there at the time of the Emperor's arrival, and represented his court as very mean and insignificant,* so that the secretary having ridden from Canterbury to Dover to catch a glimpse of his Imperial Majesty, passed him on the road without recognition, such being the splendour and amount of his retinue! †

The King of England was to be at Calais on the 30th May. The Venetian Secretary said he was a handsome and jovial man, and gave a similar account of his court.

Departure on that day [30th May] of the French court from Montreuil, the King intending to sleep at a distance of two leagues thence, and to proceed on the morrow to Ardres.

Cardinal Wolsey had with him 200 gentlemen clad in crimson velvet and wearing massive gold chains; he had a body-guard of 200 archers, and was the proudest prelate that ever breathed. The Cardinal wore crimson satin from head to foot; and his mule was covered with crimson velvet, and her trappings were all of gold.

Montreuil, 30th May 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 21st June.

[Italian.]

June 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 517.

57. A LETTER from the COURT of FRANCE.

On the preceding day King Francis arrived at Ardres, and the King of England at Calais. The latter immediately despatched

* "Abietissima e pitita" (sic), query petite.

† "Lo passò, non cognoscendolo per la bella et gran compagnia."

1520.

Master Volante [Sir Richard Wingfield?] (who was English ambassador in France when the writer arrived there) to acquaint King Francis that he had arrived at Calais, together with the ladies, who, like himself, were fatigued and unwell after the sea voyage; so that he had been unable to reach Guisnes on that day, according to his promise; but should King Francis be dissatisfied with this excuse, he would proceed immediately on post horses. Thereupon the most Christian King despatched St. Marceau, together with the above-mentioned Volante [Wingfield?], very civilly informing the King of England that he by no means wished him to take the trouble of going to Ardres, as yesterday; but he besought him not to fail being present at the appointed place, on the day named for the interview.

On the day of the letter's date, the King of England was about to send Cardinal Wolsey to Ardres, where he was expected within an hour. The demonstration was considered very great, as the Cardinal governed the realm of England as quietly and absolutely as his own archiepiscopal see. The Emperor had been for three or four days in England; he arrived there very ill attended, and departed three days before that date.

Ardres, 1st of June. Registered by Sanuto 20th June.

Note by Sanuto that the original letter was in French, that it was translated, and addressed to Rome.

[Italian.]

June 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 498.

58. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

King Francis had been doubtful whether his interview with the King of England would take place, by reason of the conference held with the Emperor. On the 30th May, the Emperor took leave of the King, went to Sandwich, where his fleet was, and embarked for Flanders. On that same evening King Henry arrived at Dover, and on the morrow, the last of the month, embarked and crossed to Calais with the Queen.

On that day (1st of June) the ambassador of King Henry came to acquaint King Francis with his passage, and to announce the coming of Cardinal Wolsey, who set out in the afternoon. The most Christian King sent the Admiral [Bonnivet] and Mons. de L'Escu as far as Calais to meet him; and at the distance of half a league from Ardres, he was met by the brother-in-law of King Francis, the Duke of Alençon, by the Duke of Bourbon, and by Mons. de Vendôme, all of the blood royal, besides other gentlemen and archers. Then King Francis in person, riding a mule, went alone with some mounted bowmen to the gate of Ardres, the archers remaining outside; and when the Cardinal approached, the King passed the gate and went to meet him, and embraced him; great compliments being exchanged mutually, and the Cardinal remaining cap in hand. They then rode together to the palace, where a lodging had been prepared for his lordship, and after a few words they separated, having arranged a conference for the morrow. The Cardinal was accompanied by 60 gentlemen, dressed in crimson velvet, with gold chains, and mounted bowmen all dressed in red. His lordship wore crimson satin, and rode a she mule; a second she mule being led before him very well caparisoned.

1520.

The Queen of France and Madame [Louise] were at Montreuil, and were expected at Ardres on the morrow. King Francis would confer with the King of England, and everything take place precisely as stipulated by the articles.

Linx,* 1st of June. Registered by Sanuto, 16th June.

[Italian.]

June 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 518.

59. CAVALIER DELLA CROCE to ———, at the French Court.

On the preceding day the Emperor and the King of England went together half way across the Channel, the King going to Calais and the Emperor to Flanders, with some 80 ships, but not armed.

On the day of the letter's date Cardinal Wolsey went to the most Christian King at Ardres. He had with him 100 gentlemen dressed in crimson velvet, with gold chains round their necks, and a fine band of archers with embroidered doublets. The Admiral, accompanied by many gentlemen, went as far as Lingue [Linck?], an English castle, to meet him, and a great number of cannon were discharged during the Cardinal's passage. At the distance of three bow-shots from Ardres the Cardinal was received by Mons. d'Alençon, the Constable [Bourbon], and the Marshal De Chatillon. On his arrival the most Christian King mounted on horseback, and, preceded by the Switzers and followed by the archers and 200 gentlemen on foot in two ranks, with a crowd of princes and nobles, went to meet him at the gate. On perceiving the King, the Cardinal gave his hat to one of the attendants, and cap in hand came towards his Majesty. After greeting each other, they entered the town, the King on the right and the Cardinal on the left, cap in hand; but the King made him cover thrice. The Cardinal supped at Ardres, the King providing for his expenses.

Guisnes, 1st of June. Registered by Sanuto, 20th June.

[Italian.]

June 3-8.

Mantuan
Archives.

60. GIOAN JOACHINO, Secretary of Octavian Fregoso (Governor of Genoa), resident at the French Court.

Description of the interview between the Kings of France and England, dated Ardres, the 3rd of June.

The interview with the King of England will take place on Tuesday or Wednesday; our King is going to Guisnes, to banquet with the Queen of England; and on the same day the King of England will come here to Ardres to banquet with our Queen [Claude]. Subsequently the Kings will banquet together, and there is nothing but good will between them. They are a short four Italian miles asunder.

Ardres is an open village which the English burnt some four years ago, about the size of Urbino. Guisnes is even larger and stronger. The lists are in the midst, between the two places, within the

* Probably Linck, a fort near Bourbourg, and not far from Ardres.

1520.

English Pale, where they have selected a large plain, 400 paces in length and 200 paces in breadth, round which they have dug a ditch, and with its earth have formed a bank or bulwark nine feet high, enclosing "the Field," as they call it.

To this there are two entries, one at each extremity, opposite to each other; the lists, 150 paces in length, being between them, and well arranged. On either side there are stages on which the ladies and everybody will be placed to see the entertainments, which will commence on Monday the 11th instant, and will last some eight or ten days. The jousts on both sides, some 220 men-at-arms in all, are in excellent condition.

Persons who have been to Calais tell wonders of the English pomp, and of the King's tent measuring some 6,000 yards (aune) of cloth of gold, and exceeding that of his Majesty here, which cost about 150,000 ducats or more.

5th of June, from Ardres.

Last evening the King of France came hither from Marquise, and the King of England arrived at Guisnes, three short Italian miles from this place. Tomorrow the first interview or visit of these two sovereigns will take place at 1 p.m., between this and Guisnes, in the open country. This first embrace will be unaccompanied by any other display. On Thursday and Sunday banquets and entertainments will be given by both parties. On Monday the jousts, which will last about a week or more, commence.

Could I describe the fortress-house raised at Guisnes by the King of England for his banquet (festino), you would be surprised to hear of its architecture, but you would be more delighted to behold such a structure, built to last a day, and no longer. It appears to be that which it is not, and it is that which it does not appear to be.

At a bow-shot's distance from the castle of Guisnes, in the direction of Ardres, is a palace well nigh square, with four ranges of buildings, connected and uniform. Two of them, being 160 paces in length, are opposite to each other; and the two others have a frontage of 80 paces. Each of the four ranges measures 30 paces in depth.

This palace has a round tower at each corner, and a lofty portal, wide and magnificent, in the direction of Ardres, placed in the centre of the façade between two handsome round towers, like a fortress, as high as the palace; they are built entirely of bricks, with loop-holes (finestrate) and battlements defended by statues of armed men, in the act of discharging stones from the "scapetti," and iron balls from the cannons and culverins. At a distance of some twelve paces from these two towers are two beautiful painted fountains representing images of Bacchus, with very large and handsome basins, into which wine is to flow constantly, in abundance.

The internal and external walls of this house are about 50 feet high, with battlements all round, but of wood, though so well arranged that they appear to be brick. The building has a slanting roof, made apparently of lead, on which a beautiful scale pattern 1520.

(occhi di pavone) on brass (et de otone), the slope being such as required.

The wall is built as follows:—To the height of 15 feet it is of brick, in the Italian fashion. On this wall rest 22 feet of painted boards imitating the brick-work, of which they form the continuation.

At the summit of this elevation of about 37 feet, is a range of double glass windows inside and out, divided solely by wooden pilasters, representing columns $1\frac{1}{2}$ foot in diameter.*

Above the internal and external windows is a cornice, surmounted by a second frieze, with a blank space about five feet deep between the two, on which space I believe there will be either paintings or inscriptions, the roof (which has battlements as aforesaid) resting on the second cornice.

Having passed the entrance gate, you enter an atrium or vestibule, 100 paces in length and 30 paces broad, fronting which is a handsome covered stair in the Italian fashion, of the same width as the atrium.

After ascending 15 steps, the stair winds, and having mounted about as many more, you arrive at a great door, and enter a hall 160 paces in length, and 30 paces broad.

Throughout the building, at a distance of two feet below the windows, is a handsome gilt cornice whereon to hang the tapestries, which are all most magnificent.

The other three compartments (corpi) of the building are divided into chambers and chapels, their floors being tastefully gilt, but the floor of the hall is of alternate checquers of white and yellow taffety intersected by red roses.

Beneath these floors are the cellars, kitchens, and offices, with very handsome gratings before the windows, arched, and apparently of iron, though in reality they are of painted wood, and being placed opposite to each other, and with great regularity, they give additional grace to the quadrangle.

The palace is surrounded by a large square measuring a good 60 paces in width, with a moat; and beyond the square and moat is a barrier of beautiful brocade, with two entries opposite to each other, leading to the hall, at one extremity of which is a long corridor connecting it with the castle of Guisnes, distant some 400 paces.

Each compartment has a large lantern (una grandissima lanterna) in the centre, in the form of a crown, with octagonal windows, more for ornament than for light, as the windows all round, inside and out, render the halls so luminous that, when within them, it is like being in the open air.

It is said that this palace will be completed on Thursday, or thereabouts, but the English gentlemen charged with its construction and custody receive these French gentlemen with the utmost civility, and to all they give drink in large gilt cups (coppe) holding seven pints of wine each.

* "Sono dentro e fori vedriate, alte 15 palmi, tutte continuate, de modo che fra l'una et l'altra sono solo piastri pieni di legno, in forma di colone larghe circa doi palmi."

1520.

Here nothing is attended to but these pageants (triumphi). Today the tent of the King of France was pitched in a field near this place, where are also a great number of other tents, the English also having pitched their tents outside Guisnes, but ours [the French] are the handsomer. Altogether they will amount to some 2,000; and they are still in the act of putting them up. The tent of the King our lord is a magnificent affair (una grandissima cosa). From the ground to its summit, on which is a gigantic St. Michael, it measures 60 paces (sessanta passi); the poles which support it are tall masts lashed together to increase their length, which is such that it would certainly suffice for a ship of 400 butts. The diameter of this tent in its centre (in fondo) is sixteen paces, and all round it is a corridor, eight paces broad and some 20 paces in length.

The whole tent and its corridor have an external covering of very costly gold brocade, with three circular stripes of azure-coloured velvet with golden lilies in relief, each circle being the whole breadth of the velvet, which forms a very beautiful ornament. At the feet of the St. Michael, which has for pedestal a large golden ball, twelve zig-zag rays dart, as from a beam of light, the rays being made of the same azure-coloured velvet, with golden lilies in relief, and the rays descend from the summit of the tent downwards, in length a good 10 paces. The ropes or cords of the tent are of wove hemp tricoloured, white, tawny, and black, the King's colours, and the principal ropes are so thick that they might serve as cables for a ship of 300 butts or upwards. The internal lining will be of azure-coloured velvet, with gold lilies.

Adjoining this tent are four other smaller ones, which, although large, appear very small in comparison with the chief tent. They measure 30 paces in circumference, and 20 in diameter. They are placed in front of each other. They are to be covered with the same cloth of gold, with an internal lining of the same material, and are to be striped laterally, like the large tent, which they surround; and adjoining there will be 12 tents of suitable size which will, it is said, be covered externally with crimson satin and lined with some other satin, though from what I hear, they will not be ready for four days. These 12 tents are distant some 50 paces from the large one.

The building destined for the banquet is a rotunda, its circuit measuring about 240 paces, and will be covered like a tent, with azure-coloured cloth with painted golden lilies, decorated with very handsome tapestries, and not with cloth of gold, as stated.

The interview took place, not on Wednesday, but yesterday, in the most loving form possible, at 6 p.m.

The meeting lasted for two hours, and during three-quarters of an hour their Majesties were alone together, and seemed unable to tear themselves away from each other, and had it not then been half an hour after sunset, their loving conference would have lasted longer.

Beyond the "field" or "lists" is a place situated between this place and Guisnes (from which it is distant rather more than half a mile), in the form of a valley, where the King of England pitched a handsome tent of figured gold brocade without, and tapestried internally with very costly arras, embroidered in gold and silver. The tent was small but elegant, and adjoining were two awnings to correspond, which served as chambers.

1520.

Some 80 paces distant from this tent were two other canvas tents, well supplied with most excellent wines.

The King left Ardres at about 4h. 30m. He was preceded by the gentlemen of the princes, lords, and barons of France, a good 1,000 in number, the chief of whom were Mons. de Gamadria (sic)* and Mons. de Malaure (sic);† and also by the gentlemen pensioners, in number some 140, who were commanded by Mons. de la Roche Guyon. Next followed the archers of the guard and the princes, in number about 400, all on foot, with halberts and battle axes, and the salamander and other emblems. Then came the 100 Switzers of the guard, in satin doublets of the King's colours, and hose to match, the plumes in their bonnets being of the same hues,—black, tawny, and white. After the Switzers came all the heralds of France; all the trumpeters and fifers; all the door-porters; all the esquires of the body; and the gentlemen of the chamber immediately preceded the King, who rode a great bay courser, with a half surcoat of embroidered cloth of gold.

The King wore a cap of black velvet with feathers of the same colour, and some large jewels in it very well set, which the King estimates at 2,000 ducats. His doublet was embroidered with gold knots, the shirt protruding from the slashes, the tags of which were most beautiful jewels. His breast was bare, and he had sleeves (manegetti). Over the doublet was a cloak of cloth of gold embroidered; at the back of the cloak a certain bit of cloth of gold slashed, looking like a half cape, or well nigh a half mantle, fastened over the left shoulder, which half cape or mantle was costly and ornamented with large jewels. On his legs, he wore white boots (burzachini bianchi). Before the King was the Lord Constable [Bourbon], on a large courser, whose surcoats were of cloth of gold, and the Constable himself wore an embroidered cloak of cloth of gold, with the sword of state in his hand. Beside the King were, Alençon, Vendôme, the Duke of Lorraine, St. Pol, the Admiral [Bonnivet], the Lord Steward [De Boissi], Aumale, Lautrec, La Valle, Chateaubriand, and in short, all the princes, lords, and barons of France, not one of whom was missing. All the knights of the order [of St. Michael] were present, wearing the large insignia and tabards of cloth of gold; all the lords and barons being likewise in cloth of gold, and many gentlemen, all the household and officials, and, in fine, everybody. There were at least 300 persons clad in cloth of gold, and a great number in velvet. The ambassadors from the Pope, Spain, Venice, Mantua, and Ferrara, each accompanied by some great personage, were also there.

When this large company reached the hill which overlooks (causa) valley, all ranged themselves in line within the barriers placed there, distant 50 paces from the tent below, but these barriers were [merely] signals, [viz.,] pikes driven into the ground along the ridge of the hill for the distance of a mile, at intervals of 100 paces.

* Qu. Mons. de Gammaches? See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. p. 313.

† Qu. Count de Maulevrier, seneschal of Normandy?

1520.

On the opposite hill the English company was ranged in like order, and had arrived first on the ground, on reaching which the French music ceased. After a short pause the English instruments struck up, and the French responded. When they had been silent for a few moments, the two Kings, who were opposite to each other, moved forward on horseback, each accompanied by two mounted attendants. With the English King were Cardinal Wolsey and the Constable [Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset]. With the King of France the Admiral and the Constable. Both the Constables bore the swords of state aloft unsheathed. As the space had been well divided, the two Kings arrived simultaneously in the centre of the valley, where a spear had been planted, distant some 100 paces from the tent. Before arriving at the spot, when at a distance of 30 paces from their respective companies, which had remained behind at the barriers, the two Kings at one and the same time uncovered, saluting each other bareheaded, and then, hastening forward, they embraced thrice on horseback, always cap in hand; after which they both dismounted in such haste that it could scarcely be distinguished which was the first, but the King of England was the first. Accompanied each by two running footmen (staffieri), they then again embraced so lovingly, that but few on our side could avoid shedding tears of joy or gladness. Such were the embraces that I know not whether closer could be imagined, and they were upwards of 20 in number. They then walked slowly towards the tent, the King of England placing the King of France on his right hand, and with their heads bare they remained a good while under so scorching a sun, that it could not have been hotter in St. Peter's at Rome. Their Majesties were accompanied into the tent by the Cardinal and the Admiral, the two Constables remaining outside walking up and down and the running footmen of the two Kings and of their four attendants, being mounted on horseback and a long way off, rode to and fro, first in the direction of the English company and then of ours, but kept their ranks.

After their Majesties had been a quarter of an hour in the tent, they dismissed the Admiral and the Cardinal, who, to avoid the sun, went into the two tents where the wine was. On the expiration of half an hour, wine was taken to their Majesties in the tent, where the Admiral and Cardinal drank again and served their Majesties, who drank the same wine out of one and the same cup. Having drunk, the Cardinal and the Admiral came out of the tent, their Majesties remaining alone. At sunset the Cardinal and the Admiral went back into the tent, and said it was late; so the two Kings gave orders for their chief nobility to come and pay their respects reciprocally. From the English company, some 22 came forth, headed by the Duke of Suffolk, and upwards of 40, led by Monsr. d'Alençon came from the French side. Their Majesties went forth to receive them; and when the entire French company saw this, they all descended in like manner, regardless of any prohibition; whereas the 1520.

English never stirred from their ranks, and thus exhibited very great discipline and good faith.*

Whilst outside the tent, the two Kings embraced each other repeatedly, as if they had then met for the first time, addressing each other in such language as to leave it doubtful whether they were more brothers than friends, or friends rather than brothers. The one said to the ministers and noblemen of the other, "there is now no farther need of trouble for my brother and I will see to our own interests." And then, when the Cardinal being already on horseback said, "Sire, it is too late, most especially as the King your brother is the farthest off from his lodging; may it please your Majesty to take to horse:" the King of England replied, with a hearty laugh, "You may go yourself, but I choose to remain with the King my brother;" and again did they embrace. At length, after a great struggle, they both mounted on horseback, taking leave first in the act of mounting, and again when mounted. But it would be long to repeat the loving words uttered by the King of England to the French nobility, to whom he said that he would devote his money, realm, and person to the service of the King his brother.

Today the Cardinal and the Duke of Suffolk and all the English nobility are here at Ardres; and a great part of ours are at Guisnes.

The entertainment will take place on Sunday should the apartments here be completed, our King going to Guisnes to the Queen of England, and the King of England coming to the Queen of France at Ardres.

The King of England wore a very handsome and costly doublet of cloth of silver, with a girdle and apron (traversa) or "sbarra" from the cincture to the shoulder, of cloth of gold studded with very beautiful jewels, and a black velvet cap with jewels and black feathers; and he rode a very handsome bay courser with a "trapper"† embroidered in gold.

The English gentlemen and ours were on horseback unarmed, having only swords, but the display (pompa) of this side [the French] far exceeded that of the other [the English]. Both French and English wore very large gold chains.

The jousts will commence on Monday or Tuesday, and will last about 10 days.

On the entry of the Kings into the tent with the Admiral and the Cardinal, this last read to their Majesties the articles and conventions stipulated between them, and when he came to the words "Henry King of England and of France," his Majesty said, laughing, "Expunge this title," (levesi questo titolo), and turning to our King, added, "They are titles given me which are good for nothing." Our King desired that the reading might nevertheless be continued, and at its close, said, "Mon Frere, now that you are my friend, you are King of France, King of all my possessions, and of me myself; but without friendship I acknowledge no other King of France than myself, and thus, with the aid of our Lord God, do 1520.

* "Nel che monstrò obedientia et fede grandissima."

† "Sopraveste," surcoat. Hall writes "trapper."

I hope to be able to defend and preserve this kingdom for myself and my successors." To this, the King of England (having risen and embraced him) replied, "Mon Frere, I swear to our Lord God, although I have been very deeply in love, that I never had so strong a wish and desire to gratify any of my appetites, as that of seeing and embracing you, and I promise God, who has granted me this grace, never to love anybody so much as I love you; and should you ever find me fail in this love, and that I do not love you above everything, and do not perform such office as becomes a true and perfect friend, I am willing to be accounted the most base and sorry prince and gentleman in the world :"* whereupon he again embraced our King, who made a suitable answer, returning thanks, and promising the like to his Majesty.

Dated at Ardres, 3rd-8th June.

[Italian, copy.]

June 3.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 517.

61. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador at the English Court, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Emperor departed [from Canterbury] on the 30th May, for Sandwich, to embark for Flanders. The King of England accompanied him a distance of five miles. They conversed by the way on horseback, and did not allow any of the ambassadors to attend them.

The King and Queen and his Majesty's sister then went to Dover for their passage, to effect the interview arranged with the King of France.

He (Surian) arrived at Boulogne in a violent storm, together with the Papal ambassador. Many ships had been wrecked in crossing.

Calais, 3rd June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 20th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 510.

62. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The most Christian King had held various colloquies with Cardinal Wolsey, who offered to arrange the disputes between his Majesty and the Emperor.

Linck (Linches), three leagues from Ardres, 4th June 1520.

Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 510.

63. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador accredited to Henry VIII., to the SIGNORY.

The King had crossed with the Queen and his sister. He (the ambassador) encountered a storm on his passage and nearly perished. The negotiations between the Emperor and the King had been very secret, and their purport was not known.

Calais, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

* "Voglio esser detto il più lachio (lâche?) e più mechiante (méchant?) principe et gentil-homo del mondo. Et qui un'altra volta l'abbracciò; ma a queste parole il Re nostro signor rispose quanto convenia, ringratiandosi (sic) et promettendosi (sic) il medesimo a S. M^{te}."

1520.

June [4] ?
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 511.

64. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador at the English Court, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King and Queen, with the King's sister and Cardinal Wolsey and other lords, had crossed the Channel in great pomp. He (Surian) with the Papal ambassador made their passage subsequently, and well nigh perished in a storm, and some ships were lost. He had intended going to Calais, but landed at Boulogne. The Pope's ambassador in France told him he was there to discuss the Turkish affairs. Suspects his object is to secure an honorable place for the Pope, in the event of any treaty between the two Kings.

Boulogne, ... Registered by Sanuto, 20th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 511.

65. ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King [of France] is extremely satisfied with Cardinal Wolsey, and says he is a most estimable personage, eloquent and prudent, and worthy to rule England. He (the King) promised himself much from him.

On the 5th or the 6th the two sovereigns will meet, and the King of France will go and dine with the King of England.

The Queen and the King's mother were to arrive there [Linck ?] on the morrow.

[Linck ?], 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 20th June.

[Italian.]

June 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 471.

66. INTELLIGENCE received through the GERMAN WAREHOUSE that letters written from Frankfort on three different days, to German merchants, announced the arrival of the Emperor off the coast of England on the 26th May.

[Italian.]

June 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 522.

67. The VALLEY of ARDRES.

Letter dated Ardres, 7th June 1520, describing the interview between his most Christian Majesty and the King of England.

On the morning of the 7th June Cardinal Wolsey went to King Francis and dined with him, after which he departed, accompanied a good way by the Admiral, the Master of the Horse, and the Marshal de Chatillon. At about 5 p.m. two pieces of artillery were discharged as a signal, notifying to the King of England that King Francis was then taking to horse, and thus did he; King Henry on the other hand firing a third gun.

King Francis rode a very beautiful bay horse, caparisoned with embroidery and pearls. He himself wore a doublet of very costly cloth of gold and a cloak of the same material, and his jerkin, embroidered and slashed, was of great value. On his breast he wore sundry rich and beautiful jewels, and likewise on his cap, which was of black velvet. He was preceded by the military trumpeters, the fifers, and horn players, who performed one after the other. After the musicians came a great number of gentlemen of the Chamber and Wardrobe, all richly clad in cloths of gold and silver slashed in a variety of fashions, many of them having gold chains round their necks. The Switzers followed in battle array, with their drum major, and then came the King's macers, also in slashed garments of cloth of gold and silk, with massive gold chains of various sorts. The King followed, and was immediately in advance of the ambassadors and the princes of the blood royal and the barons, all in doublets of gold "soprarizo,"* many of which were slashed, exhibiting other gold beneath, and many wore cloaks like the King. Amongst the rest was the Admiral, who, besides gold and silver "soprarizi," had a sailor's gold whistle at his side, adorned with pearls and jewels of great price, his cap being decorated in like manner. Last of all came the archer guard on horseback. Outside Ardres a file of many gentlemen in pairs, who preceded all the others, were drawn up and ranged on the left-hand side. At no great distance from the town were the Queen and Madame [Louise] in a litter, they having come to see the pomp of France, and when the King drew nigh he quitted the ranks, conversing awhile with his mother, cap in hand, and then returned to his place. The procession rode thus for a league and half, and at length reached a hill overlooking a valley in whose hollow was a very costly and beautiful tent, and beyond was another similar eminence, on which were seen assembled all the attendants of the King of England, who came in the following order:—First, some 60 mounted bowmen with their bows and arrows, the King's guard, followed by well-nigh as many more, the guard of Cardinal Wolsey, whose gentlemen followed, all dressed in crimson velvet, with gold chains round their necks; next the trumpeters; then a good number of gentlemen well arrayed in brocade of gold, silver, and silk, all with chains; and then the sackbuts followed in advance of the barons and lords of the kingdom, who were dressed in gold "soprarizo," with massive chains, and in the midst of them were the ambassadors. Then came the King with his running footmen, in number six, dressed in crimson velvet and gold, the footmen of King Francis being clad in white velvet and silver.

1520.

King Henry wore cloth of very rich silver, "soprarizo," and a cap with black feathers, the feathers in the cap of King Francis being also black. King Henry rode a bay horse of the breed of the Duke of Termini, with trappings like those of King Francis, and perhaps more rich in jewels; his Majesty himself wearing a jewelled collar in lieu of a chain, of great value, and a jewelled belt besides no less costly.

To the left of the King was Cardinal Wolsey, preceded by two crosses, his Lordship being dressed in crimson satin.

Then followed eight coursers, the handsomest ever seen in the world, all trapped in various fashions, rich and superb, and ridden by pages clad in brocade and crimson velvet.

The cavalcade, having proceeded thus for some while, arrived at a level, where from 300 to 400 infantry were drawn up, and placed the King in their centre, they being dressed in velvet and cloth, and having no other weapon than the sword, with the exception of some hundred in front, who carried halberts.

* Qu. tissue.

1520.

In this array the English company reached the hill, and ranged themselves along its summit, the French doing the like in the opposite direction. Many of the attendants were sent back, most especially on the French side, because so great an amount of persons caused suspicion to King Henry, on which account certain gentlemen carried messages to and fro, as the French in like manner took umbrage at so great an amount of infantry. But everything was at length arranged; and when the Kings arrived at their respective hills, the trumpets sounded from both one and the other, and their Majesties immediately commenced descending. King Francis was accompanied by the Admiral and the Constable, the latter carrying the naked sword in his hand; another official doing the like by King Henry, who was also accompanied by Cardinal Wolsey. When the two sovereigns were within a stone's throw of each other, they spurred their horses, and cap in hand embraced mutually, but the hot temper of the horses keeping them apart, they returned to the embrace, and simultaneously, without waiting for the running footmen (two of whom accompanied each sovereign) to hold their stirrups, dismounted with the greatest possible agility, and again gracefully embraced and kissed each other, cap in hand, evincing great affection.

The attendants in like manner dismounted, and the two Kings, arm in arm, proceeded to the door of the tent, into which King Francis wished King Henry to enter first, but he refused, and during the contest both Kings remained cap in hand, and at length King Francis took precedence, without, however, once quitting the arm of King Henry. Having thus entered the tent, they remained there about two hours, and then ordered the collation, after which Cardinal Wolsey called some of the chief personages of his retinue that they might pay their respects to King Francis, who had already quitted the tent together with King Henry, and he embraced them all. Then the Admiral called some of the chief French personages, who were very graciously embraced by King Henry, the French and English lords doing the like by each other, with profound obeisances down to the ground; whereupon another collation was served, and they drank together, both parties presenting another batch of noblemen, who all went on foot like the first, and were embraced by both their Majesties. All the gentlemen, especially the French, were served with as much beverage as they pleased.

A great number of horsemen then descended into the valley from both sides, and went to see the two Kings. The writer went down [from the French side], and remarked the extreme courtesy which prevailed. The two Kings at length mounted on horseback, embracing each other again and again, cap in hand, and took leave, King Francis embracing the English noblemen, and King Henry the Frenchmen. And thus they quitted each other, the English returning a distance of one mile to Guisnes, and King Francis to Ardres, where he arrived after nightfall. On the return his horse kicked the Admiral on the leg and the English ambassador also, but they were not seriously injured.

The magnificence of the two Kings and of their noblemen was great and incredible, but the French excelled the English, both in apparel and horses, although the English had many gold chains, which were not usual in France.

1520.

It is said a banquet will be given on Sunday the 10th; then on Monday the jousts will commence, after which other tournaments were to be held.

The noblemen of France had pitched tents near Ardres; two, under which King Francis would lodge, were of cloth of gold.

Ardres, 7th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd June.

[Italian.]

June 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix.
pp. 12, 13, 14.

68. LETTER from the COURT of FRANCE to the MAGNIFICO PIETRO MONTEMERLO, Royal Senator.

On Tuesday the 5th of June, the King of England came from Calais to Guisnes with the Queen and the whole court, accompanied by about 50 gentlemen. He rode a bay courser, and wore a garment of brocade ribbed with crimson satin, and on his head a hat trimmed with black feathers. He is a very handsome King, both in face and figure, and has a red beard, and his countenance resembles that of Giovanni Cristoforo Troto.

The Queen rode near him, on a palfrey, with the ladies; then came her litter of cloth of gold, followed by many other ladies; then a waggon (careta) covered with cloth of gold, drawn by six coursers; then ladies; and then three other similar waggons, of three colours, all covered with cloth of gold. The ladies were 20 in all, including Queen Mary, widow of King Lewis of France.

After the ladies came all the body-guard, namely, 200 archers; one half bowmen, and the other halberdiers, with doublets of green velvet and white satin; the breasts of the doublets being covered, like ours, with the King's arms, a rose surmounted by the crown.

On the Wednesday, at about the 20th hour, the English King mounted on horseback with some 50 archers and 100 gentlemen, and went to the lists appointed for the jousts. He had with him six coursers, trapped with crimson velvet, all covered with roses of beaten gold, and little bells; a fine sight. On arriving at the lists he made trial of the horses one after another, and he afterwards ran them one against the other, laughing the whole time, being in truth very merry, and he remained in the lists for upwards of two hours. Whilst there he was visited by Mons. de Chateaubriand, the brother "our" Mons. de Lautrec, and by other great personages, to whom he gave the best possible greeting.

Today, when the first conference was held, I went to Guisnes to see the procession of the King of England, which was as follows:—

First there were 2,000 in doublets, forming one battallion; handsome men, and in good array, with swords and bucklers, forming the vanguard; then the King's archers, 200 in number, with halberts. Next came some 400 gentlemen, all dressed in velvet, either black or crimson, and all wearing massive chains round their necks. They were followed by the lords (signori) of England, of whom not more than six or eight wore gold brocade; and including that material and "bigaroto," those thus clad did not exceed 20 in number. Next came 12 mace bearers, then 12 trumpeters in green and white damask, then 12 heralds, all with the arms of England. The Constable of England followed with the drawn sword, preceding the King, who rode a light bay courser, and was dressed in a very beautiful doublet of cloth of silver, with a hood of cloth of gold at the back of his head, on which he wore a cap of black velvet, with a black feather which encircled the brim of the cap.* He had 12 stirrup-men, dressed in brocade and crimson velvet. Beside him was the Cardinal, after whom came two pages in doublets, half of cloth of gold and half of crimson, riding seven coursers, the handsomest ever seen, all trapped alike with gold and silver, the King's own horse being trapped in like manner. In this order they marched a foot's pace.

1520.

Having seen this procession I went to witness that of our King, which was in this fashion. There were no footmen, but about 400 horses, all gentlemen in good trim, the doublets of cloth of gold being in the proportion of 20 to 1 of any other material. Then came the Switzers with their feathers in their caps, reaching to the clouds; then the 12 trumpeters or "miquelets," with 12 heralds, and the trombones, who played the whole time. They were followed by the Duke of Lorraine, Alençon, Vendome, La Trimouille, the Admiral, Mons. de S. Pol, the Marshals, and several other lords, all covered with stiff gold brocade. Then Mons. de Lautrec and his two brothers, Mons. de L'Esparre and L'Escu, and Chateaubriand, with doublets of stiff cloth of gold, and over the doublets a simar of brocatel, all four in one fashion. Then the Constable in a doublet of stiff brocade, bearing the drawn sword in advance of the King, the Constable being preceded by the Master of the Horse, the latter and his horse being both covered with much embroidery.

Next came the most Christian King, on a courser whose trapper was completely covered with gold. He wore a doublet of stiff brocade, with a simar like that of Mons. de Lautrec, but of black brocade, all covered with precious stones. By his side were 12 stirrup-men, clad in brocatel with his device; and then followed a great crowd of gentlemen, and the archers and the captains, all glittering with gold. In this array the two Kings arrived at the site appointed for the conference. The place is a valley within the English Pale, called anciently "the Vale of Gold" (val de oro), in the centre of which was a tent of cloth of gold on crimson, belonging to the King of England. But first they were to meet at the distance of a stone's throw from the tent, at a spear fixed in the ground.

At each extremity of the valley is a hill, the two hills being of equal height; the one French, the other English.

The two Kings descended from their respective hills simultaneously into the valley. They were accompanied solely by the two Constables with the drawn swords, and each had two stirrup-men. When at the distance of about 12 paces from each other, the King of England doffed his bonnet, and urged his horse forward, and the most Christian King did the like. Having embraced and said a few words, they then dismounted, and after again embracing and remaining thus a short while in each others arms, they then moved towards the tent, our King being always on the right hand. They entered the tent talking and laughing, followed by the English Cardinal and the Admiral. After remaining there for an hour, the Constable of England introduced our Constable; shortly after which the Kings came forth. Then the princes of both nations paid their respects to the Kings, the "Viscontino" [Anchises Visconti?] making his appearance dressed in the Albanian fashion, which pleased much. The Kings remained until after sunset, then again embraced and mounted on horseback, and repeated their embraces, being apparently unable to quit each other.

* "Che la veniva tutta davanti allo intorno di la bereta"

1520.

Dated 7th June. Registered by Sanuto, 5th July.

[Italian.]

June 7-24.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix, pp. 71-9.

69. INTERVIEW between KING FRANCIS I. and KING HENRY VIII.

On the 7th of the month of June 1520, the festival of the Corpus Domini, the two Kings of England and France held their first conference in a field situate between the Castle of Ardres, belonging to the King of France, and that of Guisnes, belonging to the King of England. The King of France made his appearance richly clad. He rode a beautiful tall Spanish horse, all black, richly trapped.

The King quitted Ardres with his retinue about the 21st hour. On his road, near the gate outside the town, the Queen and Madame [Louise], with a great number of ladies and princesses, were placed to see him pass; and when in front of Madame, he went out of the line, cap in hand, and spoke to her, uncovered; and then, having received her blessing, he proceeded to the site of the conference, being constantly met by English lords and gentlemen sent to do him honour by the King of England; to whom in like manner French noblemen went on behalf of their sovereign. The bands of the captains of the archers of the King of France, with Monsr. de la Trimouille and Monsr. de la Palisse, kept back the crowd, and prevented others than those appointed from coming to the spot.

The procession of the King of England was as follows:—First, 60 archers on horseback with their bows and arrows, being the King's guard; and as many more, the body-guard of Cardinal Wolsey, followed. Next came the Cardinal's gentlemen, all in crimson velvet, with gold chains round their necks; then the trumpeters; then a number of gentlemen in gold and silver brocade, all with their chains, and in the midst the ambassadors according to their grades. Next came the King in person, with six stirrup-men in crimson velvet and gold; the stirrup-men of the most Christian King being in cloth of silver and white velvet. The King of England wore cloth of silver, and feathers on his head, with a jewelled collar of great value round his neck in lieu of a chain, besides which he had a girdle of great price. He rode a very beautiful bay horse, with trappings like those of the most Christian King, and perhaps more richly jewelled. Cardinal Wolsey was on the left hand of his Majesty, and in advance of him two silver crosses were borne; he was clad in crimson satin. Eight coursers followed, the handsomest ever seen, all trapped in different fashions, but costly and superb; they were ridden by pages in brocade with crimson velvet. The King having moved processionally thus, met in a field a band of from 3,000 to 4,000 footmen, who joined and followed him. These footmen had only their swords, and were dressed in various liveries, being preceded by others with halberts, all dressed alike in velvet and cloth. In this order the English drew up on the ridge of the hill; the French being opposite to them on the corresponding eminence. Into the valley formed by these two hills the most Christian King descended, accompanied only by Monsr. de Bourbon, High Constable, the Admiral [Bonnivet], and the Master of the Horse [San Severino].

1520.

The King of England in like manner descended, accompanied by Cardinal Wolsey, the High Constable [Marquis of Dorset], and the Master of the Horse [Sir Henry Guylford].

The two Kings met each other on horseback, and having embraced and kissed, and exchanged a few words, cap in hand, they simultaneously dismounted, and again embraced thrice, bowing to each other with marks of very great love; and, arm in arm, they entered a tent of cloth of gold belonging to the King of England, where they remained together alone for about an hour, being occasionally joined by Cardinal Wolsey and the Admiral of France.

Whilst the Kings remained in the tent, a number of silver-gilt cups were brought, nearly six feet high,* full of excellent wine, and other large gilt bowls with feet (piedi) of such a size that the hand could scarcely hold them; also spice cakes (un pocho forte). Liquor was distributed to all who would accept it, and they drank much, both on account of the heat and the great crowd. When the Kings came forth from the tent, the collation was served to them standing, and many lords and gentlemen from both sides descended into the valley on foot to the spot, the King of France embracing the Englishmen, and the King of England doing the like by the Frenchmen; and when the Kings returned to their lodgings it was already dark.

On the morrow, the 8th, when the three guns were fired as the appointed signal for departure, the two Kings proceeded with a small retinue to the site of the interview held on the preceding day to arrange the jousts by common consent; and they remained together for four hours, the collation being served with less ceremony than on the day before.

On the following Sunday the most Christian King went to Guisnes, and the King of England to Ardres; the latter dining with the Queen of France, and the former with the Queen of England at a spot immediately outside the town of Guisnes, and over a bridge which traversed the moat.

The principle entrance of the Castle of Guisnes leads into a square court-yard, of which each side measures about 50 paces. Here, to the height of some three paces from the ground, the foundations are built of bricks, which support a planked floor, strewed all over with rushes, it being the custom thus to cover all the floors in England. Above this floor, externally, the building is partly of wood and partly of stones in squares, having the appearance of a real wall. This palace represents a square as aforesaid, and is divided into halls, saloons, and chambers, leading one into the other. Throughout the palace is adorned with silk and red roses, and the emblems of the King of England; and the platforms were similarly ornamented. But marvellous were the tapestries with which the whole palace was hung; all of gold and silk; some representing figures, others foliage, which it would not be possible to paint more beautifully; the figures really seemed alive.*

* "Alti quasi do braza."

1520.

Outside this palace is a chapel completely covered with tissue (restagno) of gold and silver. On one side of the chapel is an altar, dedicated to the saint whose name the King bears, and on the other a similar altar consecrated to the Queen's patroness, both being most richly adorned with admirably painted altar-pieces, and ornaments necessary for the altar, all of massive gold, such as crosses, chalices, patens, paxes, basins, ~~crowets~~, censers, and the like. The cloths in front of the altars are embroidered with pearls and precious stones of inestimable price. There are also two desks, at which the King and Queen kneel during the mass, the space being enclosed with cloth of gold, the canopy and cushions being of the same material. From these two great desks, through two large windows, there is visible the lower chapel, marvellously adorned with tapestry in like manner, with a highly decorated altar, where there are the seats of the chaplains who sing the mass and other divine services.

The King of France dined in the palace with the Queen of England. They were seated at the centre of the table opposite to each other under a costly canopy. Cardinal Wolsey dined at one of the extremities of the table. On the other side, some three yards distant from King Francis, the sister of the King of England, la Blanche Reine† [Mary], widow of the late King Lewis, now Duchess of Suffolk, was placed; and no other person sat at the table. The viands were more dainty and exquisite than can be told, and their description is therefore omitted. Constantly during dinner the most excellent vocal and instrumental music was heard; a better performance was not possible. In the other halls a number of Lords and Princes who had accompanied the most Christian King dined, and after dinner there was a ball until night, the King himself dancing, and part of the time he made love to the ladies there.‡

The like form of feasting and dancing was observed with regard the King of England by the Queen of France at Ardres; the Cardinal de Boissi sat at table with the King, instead of Cardinal Wolsey, and in lieu of la Blanche Reine the Duchess of Alençon, the most Christian King's sister. The decoration of this [French] palace was very beautiful, but neither so beautiful nor so costly as that of England, though as a match for the palace of Guisnes, the most

* "Veramente le figure pareano vive."

† "La Regina Bianca."

‡ "Stete in amorosi rasonamenti cum quelle donne."

1520.

Christian King pitched a marvellous tent, all of cloth of gold and tissue, with colours and figures, these cloths of gold being visible both within and without. As it was not completed on the 10th, the banquet took place in the palace within the town of Ardres.

On the morrow, the 11th, the jousts commenced, and were attended by both the Queens, with a very great number of most noble ladies, all vying with each other in beauty and ornamented apparel, and for love of them each of the jousts endeavoured to display his valour and prowess, in order to find more favour with his sweetheart. And thus did they assemble daily to witness sword-fighting on horseback and on foot, and other tournaments and representations of war.

This lasted from the 11th of June to the 22nd, with interruptions on account of bad weather and other unavoidable causes. During this interval both parties kept open house like perfect friends, giving hope of good-will and union between these two nations, which for many years have been bred in hatred of each other; this change being effected through the wisdom and virtue of both the sovereigns, who are anxious for the peace of Christendom.

The above-mentioned entertainments being ended, Cardinal Wolsey, on Saturday the 23rd of June, sang a solemn mass in the presence of the Kings and Queens, and of all the other princes, lords, and ladies, on the site of the conference between the two sovereigns, after which he gave plenary indulgence to all present; and the first stone was laid for the foundation and erection of a beautiful Church, entitled, "Our Lady of Friendship" (nostra Dona de la Amistà), to be built, provided with sacerdotal ornaments, and endowed at the cost of the two Kings; and such a number of chaplains is to be appointed as shall seem fit to them.

They also agreed, at their common cost, to build in that valley a very handsome palace, promising to visit each other there once every year.

On the 24th, the day of St. John the Baptist, they separated, both being in tears (as were well nigh all the others), by reason of the tender love contracted by them reciprocally; the most Christian King returning to Paris, and the King of England to Calais; both being not a little anxious still to remain together.

Every faithful Christian should pray God to render this fraternal union of the two Kings perpetual, for the benefit of Christendom and the advancement of our religion.

Registered by Sanuto, 31st July.

[Italian.]

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 525-
527.

70. GIOVANNI BADOER and ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in France, to the SIGNORY.

Badoer arrived at the Court late on the 4th, and on the morrow went with Giustinian to the most Christian King, who was with four English gentlemen of authority, namely the Lord Prior of St. John's [Sir Thomas Docwra], the Governor of Calais [Sir John Peachey], the Captain of Guisnes [Sir Nicholas Vaux], and a fourth, whose name they did not remember.

1520.

The King, after some little delay, came forth from a chamber with the four English gentlemen into the hall, where they (Badoer and Giustinian) were. The King said that Cardinal Wolsey and many other English ministers had been to him several times, but he did not explain the purport of their negotiations. The interview with the King of England would take place on the morrow.

At 5 p.m. three guns were fired in the English camp as a signal for their Majesties to mount on horseback. This King Francis did, being preceded first by some 400 gentlemen on horseback in excellent array; and in advance of the King's person were others, with the guard of the hundred Switzers on foot. Immediately before the King went the Constable, holding in his hand a drawn sword, he and his horse being most richly apparelled; the Master of the Horse who preceded him bearing another sword, which was sheathed, and his apparel being no less sumptuous; the Admiral carrying his symbol, the whistle, both he and his horse being covered with jewels, pearls, and other ornaments.

The King was followed by all the princes of the blood, and the ambassadors, on very handsome horses, all clad in gold and silver "soprarizo" [query, tissue], the ornaments of the horses being of the same material. First, Monsr. d'Alençon, with the Papal Legate [Bibiena?] on his right hand; then the Duke of Lorraine, with the Imperial ambassador; then Badoer, with Monsr. de Vendome; then Antonio Giustinian, with Monsr. de St. Pol, the brother of Monsr. de Vendome; the Ferrarese ambassador, with Monsr. de Lautrec; other personages following in succession; after whom came the guard of halberdiers on horseback. The captains of the two guards did not allow anybody to approach. Whilst on the march several messages were exchanged between the Kings, by a number of gentlemen, to enforce observance of the articles stipulated, that none of the princes of the blood should carry arms, but only King Francis himself, who rode a most beautiful bay horse, which, as it surpassed all the others in beauty, so did the apparel and caparisons of rider and horse exceed those of all others in magnificence.

Thus they proceeded as far as the descent into a valley, in which was a tent of gold "soprarizo" [tissue?], the "tiracha" being of silver "soprarizo." On arriving at the descent, the King commanded Monsr. de Lautrec to make all halt. His Majesty alone, with the Constable, the Admiral, and the Master of the Horse proceeded into the valley, and the King of England did the like. They met at a short distance from the tent, and having saluted each other on horseback, dismounted at the same moment and lovingly embraced; after which they entered the tent (the most Christian King standing on the right), each sovereign being accompanied by the three personages with whom he had descended into the valley. When they had remained thus no long while, Cardinal Wolsey entered the tent, and shortly afterwards all came forth, and having continued a short time in front of the tent, took leave of each other caps in hand, making mutual obeisances.

Lix [Linck?], 8th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd June.

[Italian.]

1520.

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 527.71. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with Henry VIII., to the SIGNORY.

The King of England quitted Calais on the 5th, at 3 p.m., and, accompanied by the Papal nuncio, the French ambassador, and by him (Surian), went to Guisnes.

On the 7th, at 5 p.m. (cercha horre 20), Cardinal Wolsey having returned from the French Court, King Henry gave the signal by three cannon shots, and quitted Guisnes, accompanied by all the lords and barons, and by the ambassadors, proceeding towards the place appointed for the future interview. Whilst on the march the French Court sent certain delegates to inspect the number of the King's retinue and guard, amounting to some 4,000 (sic) infantry, whether they bore arms or not, and found that, according to the articles, they carried no weapons. The like inspection was made by the English with regard to the French, and with the same result.

The march continued thus as far as the spot where the procession halted, when the King, Cardinal Wolsey, and the Marquis of Dorset (who carried the drawn sword), on horseback, and the Master of the Horse and the English ambassador accredited to the King of France (and who had then returned to King Henry), walking, proceeded to the tent.

The negotiations of the two Kings and Cardinal Wolsey concerned an adjustment of the disputes between the Emperor and King Francis; and, inter alia, they were endeavouring to arrange a conference with the Emperor, who was at a short distance thence.

Dated 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd June.

[Italian.]

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 19.72. PAULO CAMILLO TRIULZI to ———.

Yesterday the two Kings had an interview, at 6 p.m.

Our King was accompanied by the Constable, the Admiral, and by three on foot to hold the horses.

With the other King were the Master of the Horse of England, and the Cardinal, and three on foot.

On Sunday England will come here to sup with the Queen. Our King will go to sup with the other Queen.

On Monday the jousts will commence. There will be as close a union between these Kings as if they were brothers.

The King of England is a handsome prince, the most jovial (allegro) I ever saw, and seems as well pleased with this interview as if he had gained a great realm. I have seen a temporary house built by him, said to have cost 100,000 francs, the handsomest ever beheld; never did I see so beautiful or so costly a palace. The [French] King's tent is a stupendous sight.

Ardres, 8th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 5th July.

[Italian.]

June 8.

Mantuan
Archives.73 SOARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador at the Court of France, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

Cardinal Wolsey had held a long conference with the King of France. On the morrow the Admiral went to Calais to confer with the King of England. On the following days great personages passed to and fro between the two Courts; and Cardinal Wolsey had two long conferences, which were attended only by the most Christian King, the Admiral, the Chancellor [Anthony Duprat], Robertet, and the Bishop of Paris. Cardinal Wolsey was accompanied by two other Englishmen, and besides discussing the manner in which the meeting was to take place, a negotiation (not yet concluded) was treated for the Emperor's attendance at this conference, he being in Flanders at 20 leagues from Ardres. On the eve of the Corpus Domini the King of England went from Guisnes (where he arrived on the preceding day from Calais) with the Queen, to the site of the lists, where Mons. de Lautrec received his promise to meet the King of France on the morrow, an Englishman receiving a similar promise from his most Christian Majesty. On Thursday morning Cardinal Wolsey returned to Ardres and dined with the King in state, the Lord Steward [Sieur de Boissi] waiting at table. After dinner so many difficulties arose that it was feared the conference would not take place; but at length all was arranged.

1520.

Cardinal Wolsey having quitted Ardres after dinner at about 3 p.m. and returned to Guisnes, the [French] procession moved to the appointed spot, which was a valley within the English territory, about one and a half mile beyond the French borders, where two mounds, one on each side of the valley, were raised expressly for this occasion, distant a bow-shot one from the other; and in the midst of the valley a tent of cloth of gold was pitched. Chatillon, Marshal of France and governor of Picardy, rode first, and after him the princes. . . . The most Christian King rode the "bay jumper" * of the Mantuan stud, "which your late father gave him at Milan."

After his Majesty, Mons. d'Alençon, side by side with the Papal nuncio, followed.

All the princes—including Lorraine and Vendôme—brought their ladies, and the Princesses of Navarre were also there.

The cavalcade having commenced their march, Chatillon was sent to number the English troops, an Englishman having come to number ours. Chatillon reported that the English had some 1,500 foot men more than their [stipulated] number. His Majesty replied, "Having come thus far, I will not fail to keep my promise, and gratify my wish, on this account," and ascended the mound, "on our side." The King of England did the like in the opposite direction, and their respective companies being ranged in line along the two mounds, the Kings quitted them, and met each other in the centre of the valley. The most Christian King was accompanied by the Constable and the Admiral on horseback, and by the Master of Horse on foot, with a few stirrup men. With the King of England were Cardinal Wolsey, his Constable, his Master of the Horse, and stirrup men in like manner. . . .

Lisen [Linck?], 8th June 1520.

P.S.—The English had few horses compared with ours, perhaps less by one half. The French were the more richly and more elegantly dressed,* for although the English had much gold, there was no comparison as regards elegance and costliness; but they were superior both in the quantity and thickness of their gold chains. Of their horses, but few were coursers. The King wore a garment of ribbed cloth of silver, a cap of black velvet with a plume of black feathers, the collar of the Garter round his neck, and a massive gold girdle. He rode a bay (morello) Neapolitan courser, on whose trappings and headpiece were a number of bells nearly the size of an egg, and which from their sound were of gold. Besides his own foot-guard of 100 halberdiers, he had a band of some 3,500 men on foot, all with swords and bucklers in the English fashion, so that, including horse and foot, he had upwards of 6,000 fighting men. Our force might amount to 3,000 horse and 1,000 foot, including the Switzers, and stirrup men in attendance on their masters' horses.

* "Il morello saltatore." *

1520.

[Italian.]

June 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 503.

74. ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome, to the SIGNORY.

Friar Martin Luther, in Germany, is very much followed by the Duke of Saxony and other Lords (Signori), who have written in his defence to the Pope, telling him to send any one he pleases to dispute with Luther, who will show that what he preaches and says is perfectly true, and based on the words of Christ.

Dated the 9th. Registered by Sanuto, 16th June.

[Italian.]

June 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 1.

75. FRANCESCO CORNARO, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor Charles V., to the SIGNORY.

On the 6th June the Emperor was at Ghent, awaiting the result of the interview between the Kings of France and England, at which Cardinal Wolsey was endeavouring to make peace between the Emperor and France. He (the Cardinal) wishes a triple conference to be held. Tomorrow the Emperor departs for Brussels, to hold a parliament; after which he is to have another conference with the King of England, as a demonstration merely, and will then go to Aix-la-Chapelle for his coronation as King of the Romans.

Ghent, 10th June. Registered by Sanuto, 1st July.

[Italian.]

June 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 20.

76. PAULO CAMILLO TRIULZI to ———.

Yesterday the two Kings were together in the lists for two hours, and exchanged the horses they rode. This morning our King went to dine with the Queen of England, and the King of England came to dine here. Tomorrow the jousts will commence. We shall not leave this place for 12 days.

Ardres, 10th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 5th July.

[Italian.]

June 10-21.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 23.

77. GIOVANNI BADOER and ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in France, to the SIGNORY.

Early in the morning of the 10th the most Christian King went with 10 of his attendants to the Castle of Guisnes. The King of England —“Molto più richamente vestiti et con più galla.”*

1520.

immediately went to meet him, and having embraced each other the King of England gave him a collar of jewels and pearls of great value. After remaining a short while, the King of France returned, but first gave in exchange to the King of England his gold bracelets studded with jewels of great value, and doubting whether the gift was an equivalent for the present received, he sent in addition six coursers of great price.

The next morning the King of England came to see the most Christian King at Ardres before he was out of bed. On the 25th the most Christian King will go to Paris; and the English King is again to confer with the Emperor, who is now at Brussels, but who is to come to Gravelines, four miles from Calais.

Dated 10-21 June. Registered by Sanuto, 6th July.

[Italian.]

June 10-25.

78. COUNT ALEXANDRO DONATO to Z. F. GRITI.

[Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 42-
44.]

On Sunday the 17th, the most Christian King and his mother were to go to Guisnes to dine with the Queen of England; the King of England going to Ardres to dine with the French Queen, accompanied by his sister la Blanche Reine (Regina bianca), wife of the Duke of Suffolk. The Kings were to leave their lodgings simultaneously, to meet half way, and then proceed to their respective destinations.

The most Christian King without notice anticipated the hour, and with only 10 horsemen went to Guisnes, and entered the courtyard of the castle. On hearing this the King of England hastened below, and embraced him. King Francis said, "My brother, here am I your prisoner."

On the 19th the King of England went suddenly to Ardres with only three companions, and entered the chamber of the most Christian King when he was scarcely out of bed.

On Saturday the 23rd, Cardinal Wolsey sang high mass in the presence of the Kings and Queens, and of Madame, on the spot where the sovereigns held their first conference, and as Cardinal Legate gave plenary indulgence to all present, and the first stone was laid for the foundation of a beautiful church to be entitled "Notre Dame de la meste."*

Then on the 24th, the day of St. John the Baptist, the two Kings took leave of each other, not without tears.

Dated from the 10th to the 25th of June.

Registered by Sanuto, 12th July.

[Italian.]

June 10-26.

79. GIOVANNI BADOER and ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in France, to the SIGNORY.

[Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 39.]

On — June, at the usual site of the conferences, high mass was sung by Cardinal Wolsey in the presence of the Kings and Queens and lords; after which the two Kings took leave of each other with very great marks of good will. The Queen of England gave a very beautiful diamond and a ruby in a ring to the most 1520.

Christian King; and the Queen of France gave two other rings of equal value to the King of England. The Kings gave orders for building a church and a palace on the border, at their common cost. The most Christian King then departed for Boulogne and the King of England for Calais, the latter intending to go to Gravelines for an interview with the Emperor.

Dated 10-26 June. Registered by Sanuto, 12th July.

[Italian.]

June 11.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 20.

80. LETTER from the FRENCH COURT, dated 11th June, sent to the COLLEGE by the Signory's Governor Triulzi.

The King of England and all the English nobility are at Guisnes two miles from Ardres, where the most Christian King is with all the nobility of France.

They have two camps with a great quantity of magnificent tents. On Corpus Christi Day they held a conference in the country, on the borders of the French and English Pale.

The King of France was always on the right hand, and his retinue more numerous and in more costly apparel, namely in gold and silver brocade, for velvets, satins, and other silks were held in no account. His cavalry the best.

The King of England had a handsome retinue, richly clad, and each of his gentlemen wore a massive gold chain round his neck, and they were superbly dressed. There was no great difference between the nations, save that the French were in greater number.

The two Kings each wore a treasure of pearls, diamonds, rubies, and other stones.

In stature, beauty, grace, and address in jousting there is little difference between them, save that the King of France appears to me rather the taller, and the English King has rather the handsomer face and more feminine, though in truth they are two very fine men, and have a splendid retinue.

On the following Saturday, the 9th, they met in the lists.

On Sunday the King of France went to dine at Guisnes with the English Queen, and the King of England came to dine at Ardres with the Queen of France.

On Monday the Kings went to the lists, and remained together in a wooden house upwards of three hours, and then, having armed, each attended by seven companions, jousted upwards of three hours, and many spears were broken. The two Kings bore themselves valiantly, especially the King of France, who shivered spears like ~~reeds~~ and never missed a stroke; but there was little choice, for in truth the English behaved well.

The Queen of England came first, with many ladies, both in waggons and on horseback, superbly arrayed, and in like manner the Queen widow of the late King Lewis.

Then followed the Queen of France, with the King's mother [Louise] and his sister the Duchess of Alençon, the Duchess of Lorraine, the Duchess of Bourbon, the Duchess of Longueville, and other ladies. The French women were better arrayed and handsomer than the English, and the two Queens, who had not yet seen each other, exchanged greetings and compliments, the Queen of France being always on the right hand ; and then both Queens went in procession into a place sumptuously prepared for them. The French and English lords and ladies assembled in a wooden house to see the jousts, some 40 in number.

1520.

Today, in like manner, they have recommenced jousting.

The King of England has built a banqueting house of timber; one of the handsomest and costliest ever witnessed, and so well adorned with carpets, satins, and taffeties of various colours as to appear a miracle, and the French hold it in great account. The King of France has pitched a tent covered with gold brocade, said to have cost 300,000 ducats ; the Queen also has a very handsome one, and the King's mother a third, and there are others both rich and beautiful.

On the day of the first conference between the two Kings, from 3,000 to 4,000 men, horse and foot, were hidden about the country, within call of the King [Francis,] but this was a secret, as the number of persons allowed to attend the conference was limited. The King of England got some hint of this, and as King [Francis] had more troops actually present than the stipulated amount, the King of England took umbrage, and well nigh determined to withdraw ; but when King Francis heard of this, he desired all, under pain of the gallows, to return to the village of Ardres, save those of the King's household ; and thus upwards of 2,000 horse went back. On hearing this, the English King proceeded without hesitation.

The King of England had many troops with him, but inferior in number to the French.

I visited the English camp with the agent of the Cardinal de' Medici, and they allowed us to follow the King, and thus we witnessed the interview. Many cardinals and bishops were there as spectators, including Cardinal Wolsey, now Legate, who, when he came the first time on behalf of his King to visit King Francis at Ardres, was accompanied by 400 horse, gentlemen, and archers, and others of his own household, all dressed in crimson velvet ; the 150 gentlemen all wearing massive gold chains ; and though not well mounted, they formed a gallant company, and were highly commended by the French. In short, the English managed their business well, and are valiant ; so their prowess is now admitted, and they have done themselves honour, though the French excel them in several points.

Liches [Linck?], two miles from Ardres, 11 June 1520.

Registered by Sanuto, 5th July.

[Italian.]

June 12.
Mantuan
Archives.

81. SOARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador at the Court of France, to the MARQUIS of MANTUA.

On Saturday, at about the 20th hour, the Kings, each accompanied by 50 mounted gentlemen, and 100 archers, rode simultaneously to the lists.

The most Christian King rode "Dappled Duke," of the Mantuan stud, already mentioned, and the English King admiring the horse greatly the most Christian King made him a present of it, dismounting on the spot, and thus they exchanged steeds ; the 1520.

most Christian King accepting as a gift the one ridden by the King of England, which was a Neapolitan courser, but far inferior to "Dappled Duke."

The next day the most Christian King went to Guisnes, to dine with the Queen of England, and the English King came to dine at Ardres with the most Christian Queen. The two Kings mounted on horseback at the same moment, according to the signal guns. The most Christian King arrived thus at Guisnes, where a house had been built, the like of which was perhaps never seen, for it was constructed in a short time, of wood and canvas, and resembled one of the palaces described by Count Matheo Maria [Bojardo] in the "Orlando Innamorato," or in Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso."* . . . The dinner was served solely by Englishmen, with the exception of the cupbearer, who was French. None but Frenchmen were admitted into the banqueting room as spectators; the only English present were those who served.

Amongst other remarkable things at this display were two cupboards, on one of which were many vases of massive gold, and set with beautiful jewels. From these vases the King and Queen were served. On the other cupboard were vases, also of massive gold, but not set with jewels, and these served for the other guests at the royal table. There was besides an infinite number of silver-gilt vases.

The most Christian Queen at Ardres received the King of England in similar state.

He wore a garment of cloth of gold, and in the belt across the breast was a treasure of jewels, principally rubies and diamonds. The folds of his doublet were loaded with precious stones. Round his neck was a stone, supposed to be a carbuncle, bigger than a "Mocenigo" ducat; and in his cap another large stone, supposed to be a ruby. Englishmen alone were admitted into the banqueting hall, and no Frenchmen save those who served.

The next day the Kings jousted at 2 p.m. Each King with his band were eight in number.

Against the two Kings the challengers ran two bands of Frenchmen, and two of Englishmen. The first French band was that of the Duke of Alençon, the other that of the Admiral [Bonnivet]. Of the two English bands one was that of the Admiral [the Earl of Surrey], the other, that of a certain Duke whose name I cannot remember.† Few spears were shattered, and no notable strokes were made, save in one encounter, when the King of England's spear was splintered, but his hand received no injury. The lists were without counter-lists, so that the horses often swerved, and strokes were made but rarely. The tilting commenced at 4 or 5 p.m., and lasted until after 7.

The English Queen was the first to ascend the gallery or platform (palco) raised in the stockade, and she had a great retinue of ladies,

* The first edition of the "Orlando Innamorato," by Bojardo, was printed at Scandiano, between the years 1495 and 1499. The "Orlando Furioso" was first published at Ferrara, in April 1516. In note at p. 55, "Rutland Papers," it is stated that Sir Edward Belknap had the charge of the construction of the palace at Guisnes.

† It must have been the Duke of Buckingham, as Hall writes that the Duke of Suffolk was in the King's band.

1520.

who were neither very handsome nor very graceful; they were ornamented in the English fashion, and were not richly clad. There were some 40 ladies on hackneys or hobbies trapped with gold and velvet, and about six waggons [or chariots], covered with gold and velvet, for their accommodation.

The Queen of England being placed on the platform, the most Christian Queen arrived in a litter, accompanied by 40 ladies of high rank, richly dressed and with jewels, and mounted on 40 hackneys. There were also seven waggons occupied by the waiting maids.

Saw 40 of the English ladies ranged in front of the platform. One of the number took a large flask of wine, and putting it to her lips, drank freely, and then passed it to her companions, who did the like and emptied it. Not content with this, they drank out of large cups, which, during the joust, circulated more than 20 times amongst the French lords and those English ladies.*

Lisen [Linck?], 12th June 1520.

[Italian.]

June 12-19.
Sanuto Diaries,
vol. xxix. p. 44.

82. LETTER from the COURT of FRANCE, seen by MARIN SANUTO.

At the banquet given on the 12th by Cardinal Wolsey, Mons. de Vendome, the Duke of Lorraine, Mons. de Lautrec, the Admiral, Mons. de Chateaubriant, Mons. de La Valle, and many others were present. The Cardinal maintains great decorum, ceremony, pomp, and formalities, and the extreme splendour of his dwelling is incredible.

Today, the 13th, it blows a terrible gale, and as the Kings were unable to joust, they went to the lists to see some Bretons and Englishmen wrestle.

Notice from Mons. de Lautrec that the King had told the Pope's ambassador that he had taken La Concordia under his protection, when the ambassador replied that the Pope had done the like by La Mirandola. Mons. de Lautrec says the Kings will part on the most friendly terms.

On the 17th, the King of England and Queen Mary came there to dine; the most Christian King and Madame [Louise] going to dine with the Queen of England.

Dated 12-19 June. Registered by Sanuto, 12th July.

[Italian.]

June 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
vol. xxviii.
p. 533.

83. COUNT ALEXANDRO DONADO to GIOVANNI FRANCESCO GRITI.

On Sunday, the 10th, the King of France went to dine at Guisnes with the Queen of England, and the King of England went to dine with the Queen of France. Both banquets were superb, and followed by music, dancing, and singing; the Frenchmen making merry (stando in feste) with the English women, and the Englishmen with the French women, most especially the two Kings, who were richly clad in gold "soprarizi," and wore beautiful jewels.

* "Cosa notabile non m'è parso vedere che possa referire delle donne Anglese, salvo ch' io vidi da 40 donne Anglese al longo di quello palco, et fu per una di esse pigliato un gran fiascone et tiratesello alla bocca bevette assai bene; porgetelo de man in man alle compagnie (sic), bevendo con ditto fiascho, lo vodeteno. E non contente di quella volta credo che durando la giostra bevetteno con certi tazoni che continuo andorno in volta fra li Francesi ed donne più di volte vinte, quelle Anglese Damigelle" (sic).

1520.

The French King's pavilion was very spacious, and had a strong foundation of brickwork, 12 feet high, surmounted by boards painted in imitation of bricks to the height of some 30 feet. Its covering was of azure-coloured cloths with golden lilies. Within, the pavilion was hung with tapestry, and it was destined for entertainments.

Some of the tents were covered with cloth of silver and purple velvet, embroidered with gold lilies; and there were other smaller tents covered in like manner. The furniture within was of cloth of gold and silk. Describes another large pavilion, 120 feet high, covered with gold brocade, and surmounted by a St. Michael of excellent workmanship. There were also three smaller pavilions near it of the same fashion.

The house of the King of England covered four square acres. Outside the gates were two columns, one on each side; on one the God of Love, on the other "Carità" [Hospitality?], most admirably wrought, with a Bacchus on a fountain, which on the day of the banquet spouted wine. There was a superb gate, with two towers on each side, and wooden statues, well wrought, of wild men with hand guns, stones, and crossbows, and similar statues in various niches around the building, and especially at the corners where the towers were. This gate led to a large square, with a flight of 18 steps, leading to a hall as lofty as that of the Pesaro palace at San Benetto, but longer, with a ceiling of green sarcenet (ormexin verde) and gold roses, decorated with hangings of silk and gold, wove with figures and horses represented to the life. This hall occupied one-fourth of the building, the rest being divided into sundry corridors, chambers, and closets, with ceilings of cloths of gold and silk, and tapestries. There was also a chamber hung with cloth of gold and silver, and a chapel with a ceiling embroidered in gold, and two closets above the chapel decorated with gold, where the King and Queen went to hear the services. In the closets were desks, on which were gold shrines and images, and an incredible quantity of jewels. Also a superb and very beautiful silver organ, with gold ornaments. Around the courtyard of the house were chambers and wine stores. The basement of the house was brickwork, to the height of 18 feet or thereabouts, surmounted by canvas painted in imitation of bricks, and above the canvas were panes of glass, the upper story being glazed as far as the roof, so as to give the appearance of being in the open air. The roof was of painted oilcloth and the chimney-pieces of stone.

On Monday, the 11th, the jousts commenced. The English arrived first, arrayed in purple and gold, with handsome plumes of feathers. The French wore white and gold, with beautiful plumes, all the horses being trapped in like manner. The two Kings tilted, and the French against the English, and the English against the French, with small rebated spears; and, after the first course, a second band tilted very gallantly.

Ardres, 13th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 26th June.

[Italian.]

1520.

June 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 15.84. LETTER from the COURT of FRANCE to the MAGNIFICO PIETRO MONTEMERLO, Royal Senator.

On Sunday, the 10th, the most Christian King went to dine at Guisnes with the Queen of England, and the King of England at Ardres, with our Queen. The most Christian King was accompanied by the Duke of Lorraine, the Dukes of Bourbon and Vendome, the Admiral, Mons. de la Trimouille, Mons. de Lautrec, and many others, all clad in gold brocade.

The two Kings quitted their quarters at the same time, according to signals made by salutes of artillery. The English King met the most Christian King in the lists, half-way between Guisnes and Ardres and, having embraced each other and conversed together, they proceeded on their way, the King of England being accompanied by his chief Lords, in good array, but not to be compared to ours. When near Ardres the King of England was met by the Duke of Alençon, the Cardinal of Bourbon, the Cardinal of Lorraine, and the Cardinal d'Albret, the King of Navarre, and all the gentlemen and Lords the Court. Nothing was visible but gold and silver, and fortunate the tailor who can cut suits better.

The King entered Ardres side by side with the Legate. The King wore a doublet of cloth of gold and silver tissue, and a very superb collar of precious stones. He rode a bay charger, given to him by our King the day before. The Queen and all the ladies came to the door of the hall, superbly dressed. The Queen herself was with "Madame," the King's mother, and the chief ladies. She went to meet the King outside the hall, and they embraced each other. After some little conversation they entered the hall, and the Queen accompanied him as far as the chamber where he was to repose.

With the Queen were the Lord Chancellor, Mons. d'Orval, Mons. de Memorantin, senior, and all the other great men. The four Generals each wore a collar worth 2,000 crowns. Mons. d'Esparre and Mons. de l'Escu, and the masters of requests were also there.

The hall where they dined was covered with pink brocade.

The King, having changed his dress, came into the hall and the banquet was served thus:—

First, the viands were brought from the kitchen accompanied by 24 trumpeters, who played the whole time until the dishes were placed on the table. After the heralds came 12 of the King's house stewards, in pairs, with their wands, followed by the Lord Steward [De Boissi] with a gold bâton, all embroidered, which he carried over his shoulder; all these individuals being dressed in brocade. The viands were carried by lords and gentlemen, in gold dishes with gold covers, and with each course there was vocal and instrumental music, the instruments being of various sorts, and the like was never heard before. The courses were as many as could be devised.

They remained at table upwards of four hours, and then commenced dancing. The King and many others joined, and they danced well nigh until night, when the signal gun was fired for the departure of the most Christian King from Guisnes. The King of England mounted on horseback, having first embraced and kissed the Queen and "Madame," and the other Duchesses,—namely, the Duchess of Alençon, the King's sister, the Duchess of Vendôme, and the Duchess of Némours,—and the other chief ladies of the Court. Accompanied by the above-named, he proceeded towards Guisnes, meeting the most Christian King at the lists, where they held a long conversation, laughing together; and, after mutual embraces, they proceeded to their respective quarters.

1520.

The most Christian King was dressed in royal cloth of silver, all slashed, the slashes being joined by silver bosses, and instead of buttons, his apparel was covered with the most beautiful pearls ever seen; and the furniture of the mule he rode resembled his own.

On Monday the 11th the jousts commenced at the lists, where a tree is planted, with a gilt trunk, and leaves of green damask. On this tree are the shields of the two Kings, France to the right and England to the left, surmounted by imperial crowns; and beneath are the shields of those who joust. There are also two wooden houses, one for each King, to arm in.

The Queens were present; first, the English Queen, in a beautiful litter covered with crimson satin, embroidered with gold in relief; next, Queen Mary in a litter of cloth of gold, wrought with lilies, and two letters, namely, an L and an M joined together, and covered with porcupines, the emblems of King Lewis. Three waggons followed, one covered with cloth of gold, one with cloth of gold on crimson, and the other with cloth of gold on azure, crowded with ladies, the rest of whom were on palfries; they were handsome and well arrayed. The Queen [Katharine?] ascended a wooden platform decorated with brocade. Then came the Queen of France in a litter of cloth of silver, wrought all over with gold knots, the horse coverings and furniture corresponding. Twelve ladies accompanied her, dressed in stiff brocade, with many jewels round their necks, and the coverings and furniture of their horses matched the Queen's litter. The Queen was dressed in cloth of silver, the under garment being of cloth of gold, and she wore a necklace of precious stones. Three waggons followed, covered like the litter, and the horses trapped in like manner; they were full of well-dressed ladies. Then came "Madame," in her litter of black velvet, with an infinite number of ladies all dressed in crimson velvet, their sleeves lined with cloth of gold, a beautiful fashion, which the English [fashion] is not. The Queen ascended the balcony (baltrescha), where the Queen of England was, and greetings were exchanged, after which both came upon a stage (tribunale) to see the jousts, talking and amusing themselves, surrounded by great personages and their favourite ladies.*

Towards evening it commenced raining, and all went to disarm, after which the Kings ascended the ladies' stages, and amused themselves; and Mons. de St. Pol and the Master of the Horse appeared on two horses, which were always in the air. Then the Kings and the others, having embraced, returned to their lodgings.

* Here follows an account of the jousts on that day, Monday the 11th of June, but with fewer details than in Hall.

1520.

On Tuesday the 12th and on Wednesday the weather was bad, being windy and rainy, but the Kings were on the ground with the Queens, though there were no new devices, save that on the Tuesday Mons. de l'Esparre, the brother of Lautrec, entered the lists with a band to attack the Kings, who, however, were not armed, but only their attendant companions.

Today, although the wind was high, and the weather bad, the Kings armed, each with three companions. With the most Christian King were the Duke of Vendome, Mons. de St. Pol, his brother, and Mons. [Anne] de Montmorency, dressed in murrey velvet, embroidered with golden letters, forming the motto "Quando" around, and many other devices.

The King of England had with him the Duke of Suffolk, the husband of Queen Mary, the Duke Mirlot [sic; Marquis of Dorset], and the Captain of Calais [Peachey], dressed in gold tissue and russet velvet, embroidered with branches, and their doublets and horse coverings were wrought with handsome gold flowers.

Against the Kings came Mons. de la Trimouille, with his band of 12, all dressed in black velvet, with pennons and plumes. Each man ran eight courses against the attendants.

Mons. de l'Escu entered next, with 12 others dressed in black velvet and brocatel, with black plumes, each of whom in like manner ran eight courses. The King of England and Mons. de l'Escu tilted against each other, and both did well; and after the joust Mons. de l'Escu gave the English King the fine horse he rode.

Mons. de Lautrec is always in attendance on our Queen [Claude]. They will remain here for this month, and attend to nothing but jousts and banquets.

The Emperor is at Ghent. According to report the King of England is negotiating peace between him and France. The two Kings are never happy unless together.

Dated 14th June. Registered by Sanuto, 5th July.

[Italian.]

June 15.
Mantuan
Archives.

85. SOARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador at the Court of France, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

On the 12th, four French and English challengers ran three courses, two against Englishmen and one against Frenchmen; as it was windy they ran badly. The two Queens were not at the stockade, but Queen Mary and other English ladies were present. The Duchess of Alençon, with the French ladies, did not come. Madame de Vendome, Madame de Lautrec, Madame la Grande [wife of the Lord Steward, De Boissi], and many other ladies of the Court were there, and brought a number of maids. The wind being high, there was no further tilting, but the two Kings witnessed wrestling by Breton and English wrestlers and archery. The English were superior in wrestling, but the best wrestlers of Brittany were not present.

1520.

On the morrow, Thursday, the two Kings and the two Queens went to the stockade at mid-day.

* * * * *

The head-dress of the English Queen was in the Spanish fashion, with the tress of hair over her shoulders and gown, which last was all of cloth of gold; and round her neck were most beautiful jewels and pearls. She was in a litter, covered completely with cloth of gold, embroidered with crimson satin foliage, which was also wrought with gold. The litter was open, with certain small gilt columns, like a triumphal car—a very beautiful sight. The horses and the pages were all covered in like manner, as also the 40 hackneys of her ladies and the six waggons.

The challengers on that day were eight—the two Kings, three Frenchmen, and three Englishmen. The wind was so strong, that of the five spears which tilted three were lost. The bands were four—two French, those of Trimouille and L'Escu, and two English, all in brocade and gold tissue and velvets. The most Christian King rode the Neapolitan courser given him by the King of England, but it did not do him good service. The English King and his companions were dressed in biparted garments. One half cloth of silver, the other gold, silver, and black velvet,* the horse coverings and dresses of the horsemen in attendance being of the same description.

All, owing to the wind, did very ill, and an infinity of spears were lost, but they continued tilting until evening.

Dated 15th June.

[Italian.]

June 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 2.

86. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador at the Court of England, to the SIGNORY.

Communicated the Turkish newsletters to Cardinal Wolsey, who said he had subsequent advices, and that whenever the Signory desired to obtain some object, they put forward news from Turkey.

[Guisnes?], 16th June. Registered by Sanuto, 1st July.

[Italian.]

June 16–17.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 1.

87. GIOVANNI BADOER and ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in France, to the SIGNORY.

Jousts performed daily; on the 17th attended them with the King. Reported in the Court that Cardinal Wolsey would make terms between the Emperor and France, as follows:—the most Christian King to have the duchy of Burgundy, and the Emperor the duchy of Milan. Mentioned this report to the King of France, who replied he did not intend to make any fresh agreement; that the Catholic King should abide by the promise already given him, he, on his part, having done the like; and that in eight days he should remove with the Court to Paris. Madame [Louise] answered in like manner, as also did Robertet. The report continuing, returned to the King, and requested him in any arrangement made with the Emperor to bear in mind the Signory's interests. Were desired by his Majesty not to be apprehensive, as he did not mean to make any change.

* "Mezo di tela d'argento, l'altre parte oro argento et veluto negro."

1520.

Lis [Linck?], 16 and 17 June. Registered by Sanuto, 1st July.
[Italian.]

June 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
xxviii. p. 534.

88. LETTER from the Court of France to the MAGNIFICO PIETRO MONTEMERLO, Royal Senator [of Milan].

The King of England has had a house built, the foundation of brickwork, to the height of about 12 feet above ground, the rest of timber, painted externally in imitation of brickwork. The building is so well designed, that the writer believes that the Florentine master, Leonardo,* could not have done so well or so judiciously.† On one side is the King's lodging, on the other, the Queen's; and between them, two very large banqueting halls. On another side is the lodging of the Cardinal; and on the fourth, the lodgings of the Duke of Suffolk and of Queen Mary, the King's sister.

Beneath the building is a cellar, containing some 3,000 butts of the choicest wines in the world. One cannot go there without tasting them, for visitors are compelled both to eat and drink. Never was such abundance witnessed as in this house. In the banqueting halls there are five or six cupboards, all full of vases and flasks of gold, and sundry other golden vessels, forming the most stupendous sight in the world.

Behind the building, adjoining it, is a chapel, also built of timber and canvas, but the ceiling entirely of gilt wood. All around was a frieze, gilt most richly, and below the frieze, the entire decoration was of gold brocade. There is a most costly altar, the parapet being wove throughout in gold and silk, the altar-piece likewise being wrought in the same manner with figures, some persons supposing it to be needlework. Also a massive gold crucifix, studded with pearls, 4½ feet high; and six saints of massive gold, each upwards of 3 feet high. The chapel is, moreover, furnished with a very beautiful organ, and an organist who played admirably.

Over the chapel are two closets, one for the King, the other for the Queen [Katharine], so that they may attend mass without coming downstairs. Both the closets are hung with gold brocade, and have canopies of the same material. Each closet has likewise its altar, on which are divers golden images, but not so large as the others in the great chapel.

Guisnes, 18th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 26th June.
[Italian.]

June 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxviii. p. 520.

89. ALVISE MARIN, Venetian Secretary at Milan, to the SIGNORY.

The first interview between the Kings of France and England took place on the 7th between Ardres and Guisnes. All those who accompanied their Majesties carried no weapons but swords. When the two Kings were at a bowshot's distance from one another, each

* Leonardo da' Vinci died at Fontainebleau, on 2nd May 1519.

† "Non avria saputo fare sì ben e con tanta ragione."

1520.

being accompanied by only three horsemen, they advanced and exchanged greetings, and then remained alone under a tent for half an hour; after which the others approached the tent.

On the morrow, the King of England was to give a banquet to the most Christian King; and the Emperor would confer with King Francis in the course of this interview.

Dated 18th June. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd June.

[Italian.]

June 19.
Mantuan
Archives.

90. SOARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador at the Court of France, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

On the 15th, although it blew a gale, there was tilting at the lists; but the Kings did not arm, neither were the two Queens present, though other French and English ladies attended. The Kings amused themselves during the courses, part of the time on horseback, and part with the ladies. The two bands that tilted were French, the one that of La Trimouille, the other that of the Marquis of Saluzzo. They all in general tilted badly, on account of the wind, with the exception of the Marquis of Saluzzo, who shivered seven spears, and touched the eighth. To the present time no one has broken as many as he.

On the 16th, the two Kings tilted, and the Queens were present. The most Christian King rode the "Mantellino," which carried him very well for 12 courses, and then commenced swerving, as there were no counter lists, and he was obliged to change his horse. Two bands of Englishmen, each numbering 15 men, richly and elegantly clad, tilted against the challengers, and all very well.

On the Sunday there was no tilting, but the most Christian King, with Madame, his mother, went to dine with the English Queen at Guisnes, and the King of England came to Ardres to dine with the most Christian Queen, accompanied by Queen Mary. It had been arranged for the two Kings to depart at the same hour, but the most Christian King quitted Ardres with his mother so much before the appointed time that he got to Guisnes ere the other King was on horseback, and having dismounted, went straight to the palace inside the castle of Guisnes; whereupon the King of England hastened to meet him, returning thanks for such a token of security, and then rode to Ardres.

The banquets were given thus:—the most Christian King dined apart; the Queen [Katharine] and Madame at one table, but Madame a little below on the left hand; and Cardinal Wolsey gave a dinner to the Princes who accompanied the King. After dinner there was dancing, and a masquerade.

At the table with the King of England there dined the Constable [Bourbon], the Duke of Suffolk, Mons. de Vendome, another English Prince, and Mons. de Lautrec. Then at the head of the table near the King there sat the Admiral [Bonnivet]. With the Queen there sat Queen Mary, on the left hand, but so near as to be under the canopy. Both were well dressed and adorned with jewels, and, above all, both wore most beautiful pearls. After dinner, the dances commenced, Queen Mary being the first to dance.

1520.

After a while the English King appeared masked with a handsome company. First, six German drummers dressed in silk of his colours. Then four couples of Eastlanders (Olachai)* also masked, with doublets of crimson velvet and gold brocade in stripes, and red and yellow hose in like manner, with short mantles of crimson velvet lined with gold brocade, and red hats on their heads, of the German fashion, with yellow plumes. Next came five couples dressed in long gowns of murrey satin down to their feet, such as were worn of old by doctors in England, embroidered with mottoes in English letters unintelligible to us.† Then followed five other couples (including the King), dressed in long gowns in the Milanese fashion, chequered, with hoods of gold tissue and gold brocade, and caps instead of hats. After entering the hall, they danced until very late, and then, having changed their apparel, returned home.

On the morrow, Monday, there was jousting. The Kings did not tilt, neither were the two Queens present, but there were other English and French ladies. Many spears were shivered, most especially by the challengers. The two Kings passed the time partly on horseback, and partly with the ladies. At the close, the most Christian King gave the English King six chargers, amongst which were the "dappled Mozaurcha" mare, and "Messer Ludovico's sorrel horse." The mare showed herself off to the greatest advantage, and Thomaso put them all through their paces.

Today the tilting will terminate, and the sword-fighting on foot will follow. According to report, the Kings remain together the whole of the present week, and for two or three days of next week.

This morning the English King came unexpectedly to Ardres, as if riding post, with a few persons, and dismounting at the house of the most Christian King, ran to his chamber, and found him only just out of bed. Such good greeting was exchanged, that it is impossible to detail one half of it. They dined together without ceremony, and then accompanied each other to the lists, the two Queens being also present there, but the Kings did not tilt. The whole court of France rejoices, for until now no mark of confidence had been displayed by the English King; nay, in all matters he invariably evinced small trust; but the most Christian King has compelled him to make this demonstration, having set the example by placing himself with such assurance in his hands last Sunday in the Castle of Guisnes.

Lisien [Linck ?], 19th June 1520.

[Italian.]

June 21.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 24-
25.

91. GIOVANNI BADOER and ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in France, to the SIGNORY.

Some days previously, the most Christian King mounted on horseback early, with only 10 attendants, and went to Guisnes to see the King of England, who embraced and thanked him, and took from his own neck a collar of precious stones and gave it him. The most Christian King took off jewelled bracelets of great value and gave them to the King of England, who thereupon departed and came to Ardres, to the Queen of France, where there was a masquerade and a ball. The most Christian King dined with the Queen of England, and danced and conversed with the ladies. Towards evening the Kings departed, and met midway, the King of England being with some 30 companions, masked and dressed in the Greek and Albanian cavalry fashion, their apparel being of cloth of gold and velvet. On meeting the most Christian King he unmasked, and after laughing awhile together they proceeded on their way.

* See Hall, p. 615.

† The mottoes were "Adieu Jeunesse." See Hall, as above.

1520.

On the morrow the King of England came to see the most Christian King in bed, and afterwards dined with him. After dinner they went to the lists to see the jousting, and the most Christian King sent for six very beautiful chargers, and gave them to the King of England, who was much pleased with them, as his stable is not well stocked.

Subsequently Cardinal Wolsey gave a banquet to the bishops, abbots, and foreign ambassadors at the Courts of France and England, in number 20. The guests ate off gold, and drank from golden vessels. After dinner, they arranged for his right reverend Lordship on Saturday to sing a mass in the valley of the conference, and there to build and endow a chapel dedicated to "Nostra Dona de la Mirte" (sic),* at the joint expense of France and England.

Cardinal Wolsey gave a small cross of precious stones, containing wood of the [true] cross, to Madame.

Madame returns to Paris with the Queen, who has entered her ninth month of pregnancy, and the most Christian King. The King of England goes to Gravelines to confer with the Emperor, who is now at Brussels.

Lys [Linck?], 21st June. Registered by Sanuto, 6th July.

[Italian.]

June 20.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 23.

92. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to the SIGNORY.

Cardinal Wolsey sang mass, and then gave a splendid banquet to many French and English noblemen. The three Venetian ambassadors, and those of the Pope and of the most Christian King, were present. All ate off gold. The Cardinal spoke of the love between the Kings, and said the Emperor must not aspire to greater power in Italy, nor molest the most Christian King or the Signory, whom he praised vastly.

An interview is to be held between the Emperor and the King of England. On the site of the conference of the two Kings a church, with the title of "St. Mary's of the Parliament," to be built and endowed.

———, 20th June. Registered by Sanuto, 6th July.

[Italian.]

* Cf. pp. 55, 60.

1520.
June 25.
Mantuan
Archives.

- 93. SOARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador at the Court of France, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

On the 19th the two Kings tilted, and the two Queens were present. The two bands of the Constable and of Bonavalle also tilted.* In the afternoon the most Christian Queen went to Guisnes with the Queen of England, and banqueted there, and afterwards returned to the camp.

On the morrow and next day the bands fought with swords, the same method being observed as at the jousts.

On Saturday, St. John's Eve, the following ceremony took place in the morning:†

A chapel had been prepared on the field, opposite the stage from which the jousts were viewed. It was very large, with a lofty tribune, on which was the altar, most sumptuously furnished with ten very large silver-gilt images of saints and two large golden candlesticks, all exquisitely wrought; also a large jewelled crucifix entirely of gold, and a large golden bason and two golden vases, the one for the wine and the other for the water.

On this spot Cardinal Wolsey sang high mass, with the following ceremonies.

Two enclosures, side by side, had been prepared with tapestries and cloths of gold, in the centre of the stage opposite the chapel. In one the two Kings knelt, the most Christian King on the right hand and the English King on the left; in the other were the two Queens, the most Christian Queen on the right hand. In the same enclosure, behind, there were also Queen Mary, Madame [Louise of Savoy], the Duchess of Alençon, the Duchess of Nemours, and an English "Madama."

In the enclosure of the Kings there were the Duke of Alençon, the Constable [Bourbon], the Duke of Suffolk, the Duke of Lorraine, and Messieurs de Vendôme and de Navarre. Along the stage to the right of the most Christian King were all the other French ladies and damsels, and maids, and the lords and gentlemen; and on the other side of the stage, to the left of the [English] Queen, were the English lords and ladies.

Above, on the platform, where the chapel was prepared, there were beautiful hangings of satin, and silk, and cloth of gold.

To the right of the altar was a canopy, beneath which sat Cardinal Wolsey, who sang the mass, and was served by two English bishops; one said the Epistle, the other the Gospel. Some eight other bishops, all English, and also apparelled with mitres on their heads, were likewise in attendance, constantly accompanying him when he went to the altar, and standing before him whilst he was seated.

A little below Wolsey's canopy was a second canopy, beneath which the Legate, De Boissy, sat in his cardinal's robe and cape.

* See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. p. 313.

† The celebration of this mass has been omitted by Hall, and as it displays the pompous manner in which Cardinal Wolsey officiated on the Field of Cloth of Gold, I translate in full the details of the ceremony, which is alluded to by Mr. Jerdan in a note at p. 46, Rutland Papers (Camden Society publication, A.D. 1842).

1520.

Lower still by one step were seated the Cardinals Vendôme, Albret, and Lorraine.

Next sat some 12 French bishops, apparelled, and with their mitres; and they remained thus in pontifical array, without performing any other service at the mass.

All the ambassadors resident with the two Kings were likewise placed on this stage, there being seats for them, although not ranged according to degree.

The choristers of the two chapels of France and England sang this mass; the music by Perino, accompanied by an organ, with trombones and cornets.*

Cardinal Wolsey gave both the Gospel and the "Pax" to be kissed, to the two Kings and to the Cardinal de Vendôme. The most Christian King kissed them first, then the English King, then the most Christian Queen. After the Queens had kissed, he wished to present the Gospel and "Pax" to Madame, but out of respect for the Queen she declined kissing them.

Thus the mass ended, the bishops, in serving Cardinal Wolsey, having observed all such ceremonies as could possibly have been used with the Pope.

On the conclusion of the mass, one Master Richard [Pace], the English King's chief secretary, turning himself towards the two Kings from the stage where the mass had been sung, said aloud, in substance, that plenary indulgence was proclaimed for all those who had been present at this mass; not only for those who had confessed, but also for such as had not confessed, but who intended to confess themselves at the appointed seasons; and he commenced his speech, which was also in Latin, thus:—

"Certain is it that friendship may be easily contracted in absence, but subsequently it increases through presence, and, by means of colloquies and familiar conversation, becomes greater. Then again, it augments when accompanied by the prayers and blessings of the servants of God who have authority to bless, such as the Right Reverend Legate, not only in the realm of England, but in all places where his most serene King lays claim to jurisdiction. He therefore now blesses the two most potent princes, and, by the authority of our Lord Pope Leo, grants plenary indulgence, absolution, etc., to all present, beseeching each individual to pray God to maintain the friendship contracted between the two sovereigns, to the praise of the Christian faith, and for the stability of the holy Apostolic See," &c. &c.

The Legate then gave the benediction, and, this ceremony terminated, the two Kings dined together on the spot, as also did the two Queens, and all the other lords and ladies, French and English, at common cost. After dinner the combatants fought on foot, but the two Kings did not fight, and on that day the contests ended.

On the morrow, Sunday, St. John's Day, final interview between the two Kings. Account of their banquets and masqueings. Cardinal Wolsey was present when they took leave of each other. The 1520.

* "E la musica de Perino, tromboni e cornetti."

King of England was going to Calais, and would not depart until he had spoken with the Emperor at Gravelines. On the last day but one, when the combats ended, the Master of the Horse [San Severino] tilted on a jennet, with a very heavy spear, from a saddle, without a rim or any other rest.

Ardres, 25th June 1520.

[Italian.]

June 26.
Mantuan
Archives.

94. SOARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador at the Court of France, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

When the interview was arranged, the fame of "the tent" [of the King of France] having reached England, from rivalry, and with a view to being equally well lodged in a different fashion, the construction of "the house" [of the King of England] was devised. Describes the very large diamond-shaped panes of very white glass; the external covering of oiled cloth, painted lead colour, and so marked as to give it the appearance of the [slate?] roofs of the houses in France; and the entrance hall, extending the whole length of the building, 100 paces, its breadth 17 paces; which, as the length was disproportioned to the breadth, had been divided into two by tapestry. On the left-hand side of the principal entry are two halls and a chamber for Cardinal Wolsey, the first very large, hung with silken tapestry, without gold, of astounding beauty; the second tapestried in the same fashion. In the chamber are most beautiful tapestries of gold and silk, and a very large bedstead with gilt posts, and a canopy of cloth of gold; the counterpane (which reaches the ground) and pillows being of the same material; the curtains of crimson satin. On the right hand of the entry were two other halls and a chamber for Queen Mary. The first hall was hung with very exquisite tapestry of gold and silk as above; the other with crimson velvet and gold tissue, the velvet being embroidered with the letters M.L., within a gold knot; and in certain other places were embroidered sundry porcupines, the hangings having been made when she was the wife of King Lewis. In the chamber was a bedstead with canopy and curtains of gold brocade; the hangings, like those of the halls, being of gold and silk. In the middle of the long entrance hall a small building was added, containing two oratories for the King and Queen, looking down on the very large church below, where high mass was occasionally celebrated. Describes the ornaments of the altar. Believes them to be the same as were used at the mass sung on the field by Cardinal Wolsey. Mentions the large organ. In the centre of the Queen's oratory there was a large shield bearing the arms of England and Spain. On the ground floor were offices and a very large cellar, most excellently stored with every sort of good wine—malmsies and other wines, the best that could be found in Flanders and France. In the long hall were prepared two large cupboards of silver-gilt vases, constantly used by persons drinking; and the Englishwomen never gave those bowls and flasks any rest. Then when the most Christian King banqueted there, the eating and drinking witnessed were incredible, and the odour of 1520.

the viands very noisome; and on those occasions there was an additional and marvellous display of costly and beautiful plate, as mentioned in the description of the first banquet given to the most Christian King. As usual in England, the wooden floors of the hall and chambers were strewed with rushes, so that the planks could not be seen. Account of the statues, fountains, and kitchens, which last communicated with "the house" by means of ———.*

The French King's tent was pitched outside the walls of Ardres, near his dwelling house. The tent and pavilions remained up four days only, on account of the wind and rain, so that it became necessary to strike them, to the very great regret of the most Christian King and of all the French nobility, as they were the pride of France; who thus counterbalanced the English pride generated by the house above described.

So far as can be ascertained hitherto, no one has received any mark of honour for the jousts and sword fighting.

The two Kings exchanged presents of chargers, but the "Mozaurca" mare alone, of those given by the most Christian King, was worth all the horses received by him from the King of England. On the day when the King of France went unexpectedly to Guisnes, the King of England gave him a jewelled collar, and placed it round his neck. In the centre of the collar is a pendent balass,† in the shape of a heart, supposed by some to be a carbuncle.

The Queens made presents to each other; the most Christian Queen gave the English Queen a litter of cloth of gold, with its mules and pages; receiving in exchange hobbies and very beautiful palfries, well trapped. Madame gave Cardinal Wolsey a jewelled crucifix, worth 6,000 crowns; and from the most Christian King he received gold vases to the amount of 20,000 crowns. To the Admiral the King of England gave a jewel worn by him in his cap, worth about 4,000 crowns, and gold vases worth 10,000 crowns. To the Master of the Horse, who in his presence at Guisnes wielded his heavy sword and other weapons, he gave gold vases to the amount of 1,800 crowns, and a jewel worth some 1,000 crowns. To Madame de Chateaubriand he gave a crucifix worth about 2,000 crowns. To Mons. de L'Escu a gown of cloth of gold, lined with beautiful sables. To the Constable a gold cup, studded with many and beautiful jewels, worth about 6,000 crowns.

Cardinal Wolsey gave the Admiral a very large salt-cellar, all of gold, studded with a number of very beautiful jewels, and surmounted by a St. George.

Other presents of horses, etc., were made, the particulars of which cannot be ascertained. The King of England gave 2,500 crowns for the French household (curia). Does not know what the King of France gave in return.

Liscen [Linck?], 26th June 1520.

[Italian.]

* "Per el mezzo de Coalinie;" query soterranee, subterranean passages.

† "Balastes the Sanker." See Hall, p. 620.

1520.

June 26.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 40.

95. BADOER, GIUSTINIAN, and SURIAN, Venetian Ambassadors to the Kings of France and England, to the SIGNORY.

After the mass celebrated by Cardinal Wolsey, the Kings and Queens and others dined on the spot. Then they fought with pikes and long swords, and both Kings comported themselves valiantly. The next day each went to the lodging of the other, being invited by the Queens to most sumptuous banquets; and they were disguised in costly apparel. After they had amused themselves, the Queen of France gave the prize and honour of the joust to the King of England, namely, a diamond and a ruby in two rings; the Queen of England doing the like by the most Christian King. In the evening the two Kings took leave, and Madame [Louise] told the writers that they did so with tears. She also said that besides the chapel they meant to build a palace on the borders, with the intention of visiting each other frequently there.

Yesterday the most Christian King departed to Terouenne; the Queen and Madame to Boulogne.

Dated 26th June. Badoer,—Giustinian,—Surian.

Registered by Sanuto, 12th July.

[Italian.]

June 26.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 47.

96. FRANCESCO CORNARO, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor, to the SIGNORY.

Conference between and the Emperor the King of England appointed for the 8th of July. Cornaro was going to Antwerp to provide horses.

Dated 26th June. Registered by Sanuto, 18th July.

[Italian.]

June 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 47.

97. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to the SIGNORY.

An Imperial envoy arrived yesterday to arrange the interview between the Emperor and the King. He announced that the retinue of the Emperor, of his brother Don Ferdinand, and of the Lady Margaret, would number 300 gentlemen, and requested that 150 chambers might be assigned them, each chamber to accommodate two gentlemen. The number appearing great to the English, they hinted that it should be diminished. Notwithstanding this, great preparations had been made and were still making for this visit.

The King of England is building a house of canvas and timber, and hung with tapestry, like the one made lately for the reception of the most Christian King.

On Wednesday next, the 4th, the King will go to Gravelines and cross the boundary stream to visit the Emperor within his own territory, and reciprocate the confidence displayed by the Emperor when he landed in England. On the Friday the King will return to Gravelines to accompany the Emperor to Calais, where they are to remain together only three days, namely, from the 7th till the 10th, when the Emperor will return to Flanders, and the King to England.

Calais, 28th June 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 18th July.

[Italian.]

1520.

June 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 47.

98. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to the SIGNORY.

The King of England had arrived there, and would hold a conference with the Emperor, who was expected.

Had been told by Cardinal Wolsey that he relies on making peace between Spain and France.

Calais, 28th June. Registered by Sanuto, 18th July.

[Italian.]

[July 6?]
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 54.

99. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to the SIGNORY.

The King has promised to send 1,000 infantry, paid for six months, to succour Rhodes. Had been told this by Cardinal Wolsey, who also desired him not to fear the coming of the Emperor into Italy with an army, as the crown would be sent to him. The Cardinal is very gracious, and of great repute.

Registered by Sanuto, 23rd July.

[Italian.]

July 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 57.

100. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to the SIGNORY.

The King to cross a boundary stream between the English and Flemish pale. The Emperor to come to Calais and remain four days, after which the King returns to England, and the Emperor will go to Flanders.

Calais, 7th July. Registered by Sanuto, 25th July.

[Italian.]

July 10.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 135,
tergo.

101. DOGE LEONARDO LOREDANO to CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Had long hoped for an interview between the two powerful sovereigns, his confederates, and rejoices it should now have been effected, as, besides demonstrating the good-will borne towards the State by both the Kings, it confirmed his opinion of the ability and wisdom of his Right Reverend Lordship, who could accomplish anything, however difficult, provided it were fair and laudable; whilst the supreme authority deservedly exercised by him in the realm of England admirably facilitated this result.

On hearing, by letters from his ambassadors, that thus had it come to pass, rejoiced exceedingly; extolling the sentiments of the Kings, and the ability and address of the Cardinal. Had congratulated the King, and in like manner congratulates Wolsey, who is deservedly considered his Majesty's second self.* Congratulates him also on the reception given to the Emperor in England; and on the second interview between the sovereigns at Gravelines, devised by his (the Cardinal's) skill to the advantage of the Christian commonwealth. Returns thanks for the honorable terms in which the Cardinal spoke of the Republic at the royal conferences.

* "Quæ majestatis ejus pars altera merito esse censetur."

1520.

Will always revere Wolsey's virtues and rare endowments, and awaits an opportunity for proving the gratitude of the State.

[Latin, 47 lines.]

July 10.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 136.

102. The SAME to the MOST CHRISTIAN KING OF THE FRENCH.
Letter of congratulation on the interview held with the King of England.
[Latin.]

July 10.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 136.

103. The SAME to the KING OF ENGLAND.
Had learned his Majesty's interview with the most Christian King. The Signory's ambassadors had announced the magnificence displayed, and the mutual graciousness, affection, and insuperable feats of both Kings. Such ample demonstrations confirm the necessity for the conference, and must prove acceptable to all Christian powers.

Is much gratified by the King's conference with the Emperor, trusting it may prove advantageous to the Christian commonwealth.

Although the Venetian ambassador had been charged to make this announcement, could not refrain from giving further assurance by word of mouth, as it were.

Ayes, 171. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 25 lines.]

July 10-12.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 66.

104. ANTONIO SURIAN and FRANCESCO CORNARO, Venetian Ambassadors with the King of England and the Emperor, to the SIGNORY.

First conferences between the Emperor and the King. The King went in disguise to the Emperor, accompanied by a Frenchman [De la Bastie] who was remaining at his Court, to report what was done at these conferences. The King, on departing, unmasked himself, and addressed the Frenchman publicly on the spot; so he chooses his understanding with France to be known.

Calais, 10-12 July. Registered by Sanuto, 30th July.

[Italian.]

July 12.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 57.

105. BADOER and GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassadors in France, to the SIGNORY.

His most Christian Majesty had spoken of his great friendship for the King of England, who had reciprocated in most gracious terms, and had stated it was his intention to confer with the Emperor, and that King Francis was not to be apprehensive of the Emperor invading Italy, for King Henry intended King Francis to retain all his territory, which would descend to King Henry's daughter, as she was to marry his son. King Francis is of opinion England will never allow the Emperor to come with an army to crown himself in Italy.

Boesi [Poissy ?] 12th July. Registered by Sanuto, 25th July.

[Italian.]

1520.
 July 12.
 Sanuto Diaries,
 v. xxix. pp.
 66-68.

106. LODOVICO SPINELLI, Secretary of Antonio Surian, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to his brother GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in France of the Ambassador Badoer.

On Tuesday the 10th instant, I was present at the interview between the Emperor and the King of England. The Emperor was awaiting the King of England. He rode a bay horse, covered with crimson velvet, and having dismounted got upon a dapple grey covered with cloth of gold and silver matching his own simar. He was accompanied by the Cardinal of Toledo, Monsr. de Chievres, the Count Palatine, the Duke of Alva, his brother [Don Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria?], the Marquis of Brandenburg, clad in cloth of gold and silver, and some hundred gentlemen and knights in black velvet. The whole company did not exceed 200 in number.

The King of England wore a simar of cloth of gold and silver in chequers, and the covering of his horse, a dapple grey, corresponded. He was accompanied by Cardinal Wolsey, the Papal Nuncio, the French Ambassador [De la Bastie],* the Dukes of Buckingham and Suffolk, the Marquis, [Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorset,] the Bishop of Durham, and all the members of his Majesty's Council. Only a few were dressed in cloth of gold. The company numbered upwards of 300 lords and gentlemen.

The visit was very unceremonious and without any pomp. Their Majesties moved towards each other in advance of their attendants at no very quick pace, and the King of England, omnibus videntibus, before embracing the Emperor, raised his hand to him, and then drew nigh. Thereupon some discussion took place about precedence. At length the Emperor, being within the English Pale, went on the right hand as far as the bridge of boats, which formed the boundary between the two territories. At this spot, after some resistance, the King of England went to the right of the Emperor, and thus entered Gravelines and proceeded to the palace prepared for him, where Madame Margaret was waiting for him in the first entrance hall. After he had embraced and kissed her, both the sovereigns entered the hall, where the repast was prepared, and the Emperor supped with the King.

Today, the 12th, their Majesties dined together at Gravelines, and afterwards came to Calais, where they arrived at seven o'clock. They entered by the Boulogne gate near the King's palace, where the Queen was waiting at the foot of the stair; and when Madame Margaret, who was accompanied by the Cardinal of Toledo, approached, she and the Queen embraced and kissed each other. The hour being then late, Madame Margaret entered her litter, which was covered with black velvet, and went to the Emperor's lodging with her company of 30 ladies dressed in black velvet, and two cars (cari) of another litter covered with black velvet: the Cardinal always preceding the litter of Madame Margaret.

The Emperor and the King followed, in the apparel worn by them yesterday, but on other jennet horses. Their Majesties alone presented themselves to the Queen who was awaiting them. Then the 1520.

* See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii., nos. 905, 913.

Emperor, on the King's right hand, was accompanied by the King and all the Lords to the house of the Staple, which had been prepared for his lodging. Many of the Lords were dressed in black velvet, on account of the bad weather. After all had returned to their lodgings, Madame Margaret went with her company to visit the Queen; and the King went masked to the Emperor, who was supping alone.

The number of salutes from the artillery in token of rejoicing was incredible. This evening the banquet will be given.

Calais, 12th July 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 30th July.

[Italian.]

July 14-18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 88.

107. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with the King of England, to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor departed on the 14th, on his way to his own country, accompanied by the King, who doffed his bonnet on taking leave of him, and gave him two horses; and the Emperor gave two others to his Majesty. A woman* having brought the Emperor his portrait, he gave her a chain worth 500 crowns. A banquet having been prepared for the Emperor at Calais, a gale of wind carried away the canvas roof, so that the repast was of necessity served in a certain small house.† Has heard on good authority that the King told the Emperor not to think of coming into Italy to take the Imperial crown with an army, as it would displease him, because he means to be united with his brother the most Christian King. He also gave the Emperor a certain writing, which has been sent to the King of France for his approval. Details conversations held by him with Cardinal Wolsey, who says there is no fear of the Emperor's coming armed ut supra. He also gave a hint that he was expecting the carpets.

Calais, 14, 16, and 18 July. Registered by Sanuto, 5th August.

Note by Sanuto, that two days ago 60 carpets were sent, worth — ducats.

[Italian.]

July 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 104.

108. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador with Henry VIII., to the SIGNORY.

The King had crossed over to England re infectâ, and without having come to any agreement with the Emperor, as he, the King, chooses to be French. Cardinal Wolsey had remained at Calais. They were to cross, and proceed to London. The King was taking his pleasure as usual.

Two English noblemen, the brother of the Marquis ‡ and ———, talking together, one of them said, "If I had a drop of French blood in my body I would cut myself open to get rid of it;" and the other replied, "And so would I." The King on hearing this had

* I suspect this woman (dona) to have been a female artist in the pay of Henry VIII., possibly Alice Carmillian, alias Carmeliano, concerning whom see the "Trevelyan Papers," (Camden Society publication, 1857,) pp. 144, 148, 160.

† This "certain small house" was "The Checker." See Hall, p. 621.

‡ Lord Leonard Grey, brother of the Marquis of Dorset.

1520.

them arrested, and they are expected to fare badly, unless the most Christian King intercedes for them.

Calais, 18th July. Registered by Sanuto, 13th August.

[Italian.]

July 21.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 87.

109. GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

Conversations held with the King about the interview between the King of England and the Emperor. The King of England had become entirely the friend of King Francis. The latter is not apprehensive that the former will allow the Emperor to come with an army into Italy.

Poissy, 21st July. Registered by Sanuto, 5th August.

[Italian.]

July 21.
Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xliii. p. 177.

110. CARPETS for CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Decree of the Council of Ten and Junta. Necessity for raising 370 ducats to pay for the carpets to be sent as a gift to the Right Reverend Cardinal of England. Put to the ballot that the remaining surplus of the Rhenish guilders belonging to the Signory in the treasury of Treviso be pledged as a security for the said sum.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 10 lines.]

July 22.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 107,
108.

111. INACCURATE REPORT made to Piero Trono, Bailiff of Brescia, by Jacomo da Cazago, who professed to have received the particulars from Zuam Maria di Narbona, page of Pietro Carmeliano, Latin secretary of the King of England.

Arrival of the Emperor Charles V. at Dover, on the 5th (sic) May. He was accompanied by the Queen of Castile. On the way to Canterbury the King would not at first allow him precedence, but afterwards placed him on his right hand. The Emperor remained at Canterbury about a week. The King then accompanied the Emperor to the coast of Flanders, with an English fleet of 50 large ships, each of which had two fortified tops. He then returned to Calais, remained there five days, and on the 26th conferred with the King of France across a ditch of such width as to admit of their shaking hands. On the 27th they had a second interview, &c.

On the 1st of June (sic) the jousts commenced, and lasted a month. The first joust was between the King of France and a young English Earl named Devonshire, 18 years old, who was victorious. He received a crown, a ring, and a beautiful page, dressed like a girl, whom he carried off, believing him to be a girl, but on dismounting became aware of the trick. On the morrow the King of England jousted with a French baron, and obtained great honour and victory. On the second day the English and French fought on horseback (sic), on which day the French were victorious. On the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th day, and until the close, several battles were fought on foot, and the English were every day victorious. On the last day of June (sic), a mass of the Holy Ghost was sung in the large house above mentioned (sic), and the 1530.

Kings pledged their word to be faithful friends as long as they lived, naming as their allies the Pope, the King of Scotland, the King of Denmark, and the Signory of Venice.

After the departure of the King of France, the Emperor on the — of July came to Calais with all his barons and lords of Spain and Flanders. The King received him with great honour and jousts, saying, "We must live in peace in Christendom as we did with your father and grandfather Maximilian, and do you make peace with the King of France, my dear brother; and it will be well for you to go and take the Imperial crown peacefully, and then the war against the Turks will be prosecuted, to which all the other Christian kings and princes will assent." The Emperor took time to reply until the 28th July.

The reporter quitted Calais on the 22nd July.

Registered by Sanuto, 17th August.

[Italian.]

July 24.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 70, 71.

112. HIERONYMO LIPPOMANO to his son the PRIOR of the "TRINITY" at Venice.

Two days hence Dom. Hironimo Leandro, the Pope's librarian, will depart hence for Germany, with briefs, bulls, and excommunications against such as favour Friar Martin Luther.

Rome, 24th July. Registered by Sanuto, 31st July.

[Italian.]

Aug. 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 107.

113. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The King was at one place, and Cardinal Wolsey at another. He (the ambassador) was in London, indisposed, owing to the sea voyage.

London, 1st August. Registered by Sanuto, 17th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 17.
Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xliii. p. 187,
tergo.

114. DECREE of the COUNCIL OF TEN, authorizing consignment to the College of letters or paragraphs of letters addressed to the Ten from Rome, England, or elsewhere, that they may be communicated to the Senate.

[Latin, 15 lines.]

Aug. 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix p. 150.

115. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Cardinal Wolsey was gone to "Our Lady of ———." An ambassador [Francis de Montmorency, Seigneur de la Rochepot],* a great personage, has arrived from the most Christian King, merely to see his brother; and although there is another French ambassador in London [John de Sains, Sieur de Marigny],† the King chooses him to remain permanently.

* Brother of Anne de Montmorency, Marshal of France. He was one of the hostages sent to England by Francis I., in 1519.

† See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. nos. 951, 953.

1520.

On the day of the Assumption, 15th August, the Signcry's galleys, Zuan Moro captain, set sail for Venice, well laden, etc. The King was at his usual residence out of London, taking his pleasure here and there, and avoiding the heat.

London, 18th August. Registered by Sanuto, 4th September.
[Italian.]

Aug. 26.

116. MARTIN LUTHER. (Note by Sanuto.)

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 125,
126.

On Sunday the 26th, in the College, Dominus Octavian Britonico, the Patriarch's vicar, presented a printed brief from the Pope condemning the doctrine (scientia) and works of the Austin friar, Martin Luther, the German,* and forbidding any one under pain of excommunication to read said books, or to keep them in the house; and he asked leave to send the "captains" to the house of the bookseller Jordan, the German, at San Maurizio, to seize the aforesaid books printed in Germany, and sent for sale to Venice. The College therefore despatched Thomà de' Freschi, secretary of the Council of Ten, with said vicar to make this seizure; and they took what works he had; but I had procured one of them, and have it in my study.

[Italian.]

Sept. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 259.

117. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Had received the orders from the Signory to thank Cardinal Wolsey for his good offices at the royal interviews, and to tell him that the carpets had been forwarded. The Cardinal was expected there on the morrow, and he would speak to him.

An English ambassador was on his way to France, to dissuade King Francis from going into Italy to confer with the Pope at Bologna. This ambassador is "Monsignor il Balij de Can,"† who was ambassador in France heretofore, and now returns in order to persuade the King not to go [into Italy], because it would instigate the King of the Romans, when holding this present diet in Germany with the electors of the Empire, to wage war; wherefore it would be well to remain at peace. Cardinal Wolsey has written to King Francis to this effect. The Papal nuncio in England knows nothing about this journey.

San . . . , 6th September. Registered by Sanuto, 8th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 259.

118. The SAME to the SAME.

Had thanked Cardinal Wolsey for his good offices. Concerning the carpets, the Cardinal inquired how many there were, and said he would always serve the Signory. The Cardinal said the King had sent an ambassador [Dr. Cuthbert Tunstall, Master of the

* This was probably the Bull dated Rome, 17 kalends of July 1520; but the words of Sanuto are "uno breve."

† The Bailly of Caen. He had been despatched by Francis I. to Henry VIII., in August 1520, "to hear news of him," and on his return was commissioned by Henry to deliver a message of great importance. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. nos. 937 and 960.)

1520.

Rolls,] to the Diet at Aix-la-Chapelle, for the maintenance of the peace with the most Christian King and the Signory, and in order that the negotiations on foot may be concluded. Also, that the most Christian King would do wrong to go into Italy, as he would thus cause war, and the Switzers were not with him. Also, that if the carpets had arrived at Antwerp, there would be orders exempting them from payment of duties.

Dated the 7th September. Registered by Sanuto, 8th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 155.

119. REPORT of FRANCE made in the Senate by ANTONIO GIUSTINIAN, returned from his embassy to Francis I.

The King of France, since this last interview, is on such loving terms with the King of England that he does not suppose there is any service in the world which the King of England would refuse him. King Henry told him that should he die without male heirs he meant to leave him the regency of England, as it belonged to the Princess Mary, who had been married to the Dauphin.

The King of France maintains no friendship whatever with the Emperor, who has made him many proposals, which he declined, saying that when the Emperor went to Spain, he (King Francis) showed him all favour, and was afterwards ill treated, the Emperor neither observing the articles of the treaty of Noyon, nor surrendering Navarre, as bound thereby. The character of the Emperor is not such as entitles him to much consideration, as he is ruled by Mons. de Chievres. These sovereigns are not at peace; they adapt themselves to circumstances, but hate each other very cordially.

Registered by Sanuto, 7th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 11.
Patti Sciolti,
No. 62 (nero).

120. HENRY VIII.

Royal licence for the galley, Nicolò Trevisan master, to convey to the western parts beyond seas, from the port of London, 46 sacks and 20 cloves of wool in 43 packs, shipped by Bortolomeo Marcadello, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 46½ sacks and 23½ cloves of wool in 44 packs, shipped by Pancrazio Capello, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 60 sacks and 12 cloves of wool in 56 packs, shipped by Giovanni Meravile, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 23½ sacks and 17 cloves of wool in 22 packs, shipped by Paolo Meliano, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 30 sacks and 24 cloves of wool in 28 packs, shipped by Lodovico Trevisan, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 28½ sacks and 24 cloves of wool in 27 packs, shipped by Andrea Nicolò de Molin, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 8½ sacks and 13 cloves of wool in 9 packs, shipped by Alessandro Alberto, merchant, of Florence, an alien.

Item, 8½ sacks and 17 cloves of wool in 8 packs, shipped by Andrea Giustinian, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 2½ sacks and 17 cloves of wool in 3 packs, shipped by Filippo Alberto, merchant, of Florence, an alien.

1520.

Item, 8 sacks and 12 cloves of wool in 8 packs, shipped by Lodovico Valaresso, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 5 sacks and 18 cloves of wool in 5 packs, shipped by Giorgio Capello, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 4 sacks and 1 clove of wool in 4 packs, shipped by Francesco Trevisan, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item, 17 cloves of wool in one pack, shipped by Antonio de Venia (sic) [Venier?], merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Item 70 tanned hides shipped by Nicolò Trevisan, merchant, of Venice, an alien.

Received at the hands of Henry Barton and Walter Gawtron, collectors of the customs in the port of London, 11 September, 12 Henry VIII.

[Latin, 13 lines. Parchment. Original, with pendent seal of green wax.]

Sept. 11.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 259.

121. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The King means to fortify Calais, and the most Christian King has sent to do the like at Ardres.

This proceeding seems strange to these English, and they take it much amiss, saying it is no mark of friendship,—that within the last 100 years no fortifications had been raised at Ardres, and that according to ancient treaties it is forbidden to raise any.

The English are dissatisfied, and Cardinal Wolsey has complained to the French ambassador here; and it is believed that King Francis will not build any more walls, but only excavate the ditches.

Dr. Tunstall (el Dotor Tunstallo), the ambassador accredited to the most Christian King * for this purpose, departs tomorrow.

Requests the Senate to elect his successor, that he may return home.

London, 11th September. Registered by Sanuto, 8th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix.
pp. 182, 183.

122. ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope in Consistory proposed to make three cardinals, viz., the Bishop of Toulouse for France, the Bishop [of Worcester] De Giglis for England, and the Bishop of Liege for Spain. Toulouse alone was appointed. The other two were rejected by the Cardinals, who however gave his Holiness liberty to propose and elect two others in their stead, one for the Emperor, and the other for England.

Rome, 18th September. Registered by Sanuto, 21st September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 19.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 276.

123. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England to the SIGNORY.

The plague being very rife in ——— [Westminster?], where the

* Tunstall was not sent to France at this time, but to the Emperor. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. nos. 969, 984). Surian has evidently confounded Tunstall's mission with that of the Bailly of Caen.

1520.

King was, his Majesty went to Richmond, and would remain there until the plague ceased in London. His Majesty is in good health.

Had been given to understand by the French ambassador [Marigny] that the Emperor's ambassadors [Bernard de Mesa, Bishop of Elna and Tripoli, and Gerard de Pleine, Sieur de la Roche,] are endeavouring to induce King Henry to accede to their wishes, but his Majesty is firm in maintaining his friendship with the most Christian King.

London, 19th September.

In date of the 20th.—Had been informed by the French ambassador that the King of France had written to the King of England that the Provost [of Utrecht], Dom Philibert, the Emperor's ambassador, had urged him, King Francis, to renounce his alliance with the Signory and the Duke of Guelders, in which case the Emperor and France would be of one mind; and that he (King Francis) refused his consent. Thereupon King Henry sent for the Emperor's ambassadors, and told them their master did wrong to negotiate such matters, which would cause war amongst Christians; and commended the reply of King Francis. To this the Emperor's ambassadors replied that Dom. Philibert made the proposal of his own accord, and not by commission from the Emperor.

The French ambassador requested him (Surian) to keep this secret, and he purposed doing so; nevertheless, on the arrival of Cardinal Wolsey in London, as expected next Saturday, would endeavour adroitly to speak to him thereon.

Registered by Sanuto, 15th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 24.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 260.

124. ZUAN BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Conversed with the King at St. Germain; told him of the disturbances in Spain, and that the Emperor had complained to the Venetian ambassador that the offers made by his Imperial Majesty to the Signory had been communicated to his most Christian Majesty. The King said, "They cannot suppose it, nor will all their artifices break the friendship and alliance between France and Venice, and they will not gain anything."

He (Badoer) understands that the ambassador from the King of England, the Bailly of Caen, is come to his Majesty to dissuade him from going into Italy at present; and with regard to fortifying Ardres, which has been given to Mons. de Chatillon, he [the King of France?] said nothing further would be done, nor enmity with the King of England arise thence.

Poissi, 24th September. Registered by Sanuto, 8th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 25.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 275.

125. GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The King has despatched Mons. de Montmorency, jun., as his ambassador to England, he having experience of the country and being in favour with the King.

Poissi, 25th September. Registered by Sanuto, 15th October.

[Italian.]

1520.

Sept. 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 275.

126. GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

King Francis had sent Mons. de Montmorency to England to announce to King Henry his departure for Italy, recommending to him the kingdom of France, where he should leave a garrison of 500 (sic) men-at-arms, and 50,000 infantry.

Dated 28th September. Registered by Sanuto, 15th October.

In date of the 29th confirms the departure for England of Mons. de Montmorency.

[Italian.]

Sept. 29.

Senato Mar,
v. xix. p. 153.

127. The LONDON FACTORY.

Motion made for the proveditors of the factories of Damascus, Alexandria, and London to sit in the Senate, as usual, until Michaelmas 1521.

Ayes, 153. Noes, 44. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 7 lines.]

Oct. 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 302.

128. The VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in FRANCE to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Envoys have arrived from England about the renewal of the truce with Scotland, which expires on St. Andrew's Day. Mons. d'Aubigni is going as Regent of Scotland, in lieu of the Duke of Albany, with the consent of the King of England.

Paris, 8th October. Registered by Sanuto, 29th October.

[Extract, Italian.]

Oct. 9.

Misti Con-
siglio X.
v. xliii. p. 212.

129. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the AMBASSADOR in FRANCE.

Warn him not to invite King Francis into Italy, as the King of the Romans does not mean to come, on account of the great disturbances in Spain. The coming of the most Christian King can prove to be nothing but a cause of disturbance, by provoking the King of the Romans also to follow him. He will have seen, by the letters to the State from the ambassador [Surian] in England, that King Henry and the Cardinal by no means approve of the coming of the most Christian King into Italy.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 34 lines.]

Oct. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 354.

130. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Mons. de Rochepot alias Montmorency, ambassador from King Francis, has arrived. He is come because King Henry was displeased about the proposed fortifications at Ardres. The most Christian King has sent to tell him he renounces the project; but lest it be said that he desisted at the suit of the Imperial ambassadors at the French Court, Montmorency was to announce that the works were suspended on account of the winter season.

1520.

He was commissioned, in the second place, to learn the mind of King Henry about the most Christian King's passage into Italy, and, should he go, to recommend his children and his kingdom to King Henry, about which nothing was said by my lord the Bailly [of Caen], the English ambassador in France.

Was informed by the French resident ambassador [Marigny] that Cardinal Wolsey had told him it was not well for King Francis to come into Italy at present, because the Emperor on his part might do the like, whereas he had apparently no intention of doing so. The ambassador replied that King Francis had not been into Italy for many years, and that his presence there was required for a variety of affairs; so Cardinal Wolsey said nothing more to him.

Thirdly, Mons. de Montmorency was the bearer of some portraits (alcuni desegni) and presents for the King, the Princess [Mary], and the Cardinal, who is a fish not to be caught save with a golden hook.*

Has also understood that he came to acquaint King Henry with an embassy from France to the Emperor, showing him the instructions, and inquiring whether anything should be added; King Henry having made a similar announcement to King Francis when he sent his ambassador to the Catholic King in Spain.

Mons. de Montmorency was gone to Hampton Court, where Cardinal Wolsey is building a palace. He had been to the King, who was not yet come back to London, where Mons. de Mangna [sic; Marigny] had been, and confirmed the account of Dom Philibert's negotiations concerning the Emperor, the Signory, and the Duke of Guelders.

Cardinal Wolsey had been occupied with the Spanish ambassadors, and is also ill of his usual colick attacks. Had, therefore, been unable to obtain audience of him.

Dissatisfaction of the King and Cardinal with his most Christian Majesty. This was caused by the Imperial ambassadors, and by the refusal of King Francis to allow the exportation of grain to England, where there was a scarcity, owing to which the city of London had sent two delegates to King Francis to obtain the "permit." Also, because it was heard that the Duke of Albany had arrived at Lyons from Italy, and was returning to Scotland, having an understanding with the Duke of Suffolk [Richard de la Pole], who resides beyond seas. Moreover, the fortifications of Ardres made the King give ear to the suggestions of the Imperial ambassadors. At this present, however, Mons. de Montmorency has much tranquilized the King and Cardinal, by giving assurance that the works at Ardres shall be suspended and that the Duke of Albany will not cross over to Scotland; and owing to presents received, Cardinal Wolsey is content.

Despatch by the King and Cardinal of the Imperial ambassadors who had returned to London. One of them, Mons. di Rachia [De la Roche], is going back to the Emperor, and the Bishop di Monte [i.e. the Bishop of Elna] remains. The reply purports that King Francis will raise no other fortifications at Ardres, and that the Duke of Albany will not go to Scotland. These ambassadors brought Cardinal Wolsey the bulls for the bishopric of Badajos, free of all cost to him. The Cardinal would not accept them, saying he does not choose it to be said that by payment for him of these bulls, and by his acceptance of these presents from the Emperor, his honour is sullied. Understands that no reply was made to these ambassadors concerning the descent of King Francis into Italy; but with regard to the privileges authorizing merchants, the Emperor's subjects, to import goods into England, the King consented to grant them for goods coming (le cosse che veniva) from the Emperor's own towns, but not such as were purchased elsewhere and brought to England; so that they have concluded nothing. They had, however, held private conferences with Cardinal Wolsey.

* "El qual è un pèsse che non pol piarsi si non con l'amo d'oro."

1520.

Requests the Signory to elect his successor.

The French ambassador, Mons. de Montmorency, had been despatched with very affectionate letters for King Francis. First of all, that should he go into Italy, King Henry accepts the protection of his children and his realm; and in any need will never fail him with all his might, and even take the field in person. The departure of Mons. de Montmorency took place from Greenwich on the 14th, so that the general belief in England was that they most Christian King would go to Italy.

The Swiss secretary [Michael Sanderus, Dean of Breslau,] who has arrived in London, says the Switzers will declare against France. He is the creature of the Cardinal of Sion, and is come on his business, the King having promised him assistance. The secretary has brought some costly trappings for mules, as a present for Cardinal Wolsey.

The Emperor's resident ambassador [the Bishop of Elna] suspects King Francis will invade Navarre.

Last evening the King and Queen arrived at Westminster. To-day they dine with the Cardinal at Hampton Court, and then go to Greenwich.

The truce between the Kings of England and Scotland expires on St. Andrew's Day. The most Christian King sends an ambassador to Scotland to prolong the truce for five years, or for such additional period as shall seem fit to the King of Scotland.

Dated 18th October. Registered by Sanuto, 14th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 21.

131. The VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in FRANCE to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 326.

Had been told by the Magnifico Robertet that the King would arrive for the festival of All Saints, and that Mons. de Montmorency, according to his letters, was satisfied with the King of England, because he said he meant to be the good brother of his most Christian Majesty, and against all [his enemies?].

Blois, 21st October. Registered by Sanuto, 7th November.

[Italian.]

1520.

Oct. 21.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 368.

132. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Cardinal Wolsey told him of the good offices performed by the King in favour of the Signory, because the Emperor through his ambassador in France, the Provost Philibert, was negotiating a new confederacy with King Francis, to the exclusion of the Signory. On hearing this, King Henry wrote to King Francis that he ought not to treat of such a subject. He also wrote to the Emperor that this was not the way to remain at peace, and the Emperor excused himself by saying that Dom Philibert had received no commission from him to this effect, and that what he said to King Francis was spontaneous. The Cardinal likewise said that King Henry had written to King Francis not to give ear to calumnies against the Signory, who had kept faith by him, adding, "Our King did this by reason of his ancient friendship with the State, and because of the reciprocal confederacy; and he loves the Signory." He then expressed his belief that the Emperor would not come into Italy, and said it would be well to keep the conversation secret.

London, 21st October. Registered by Sanuto, 20th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 23.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 368.

133. The SAME to the SAME.

Last evening there arrived from Antwerp the 60 carpets destined as a present for Cardinal Wolsey, to whom he sent his secretary to announce the intelligence. The Cardinal sent back word that he was very glad, and that the carpets were to be brought to him. Today accordingly he went to his lordship, accompanied by the consul, Hironimo da Molin, and they presented the carpets to him in the Signory's name. These were accepted graciously, and the Cardinal inspected them one by one. They were very beautiful, and pleased him much, and he said the present was worthy of a much greater personage than himself; thanking the Signory vastly, making many offers of service, and saying he would not be an ungrateful Cardinal, but stand the Signory's man in anything and everything.*

The envoy from the Cardinal of Sion, who came to get the 3,000 crowns annual pension promised by the King to the Cardinal, had been despatched with no other reply but that the pension was ad tempus.

An ambassador had arrived from the Duke of Savoy to acquaint the King with the marriage of his son to the daughter of the King of Portugal.

The King was to be back at Greenwich for All Saints Day.

London, 23rd October. Registered by Sanuto, 20th November.

[Italian.]

* "Ma homo di la Signoria in tutto e per tutto."

1520.
Nov. 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 410.

134. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The King had returned to Greenwich. On the day of All Saints went to pay his respects. The King announced the Emperor's coronation at Aix-la-Chapelle, and that neither the Papal Nuncio nor his ambassador* had chosen to attend it, on account of certain disputes about precedence; also that the Emperor's former councillors appointed by Mons. de Chièvres had been dismissed, and Germans elected in their stead; and that he (the King) had good hopes the Emperor would not invade Italy, but that the Imperial diet to be held at Cologne would prove pacific.

His Majesty had lately obtained from King Francis an export permit for grain, of which there was great scarcity in England, and the permit had been proclaimed; King Henry doing this that the English might bear goodwill to France and the Dauphin, King Henry's son-in-law.

London, 9th November. Registered by Sanuto, 7th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 411.

135. The SAME to the SAME.

The ambassador of the Duke of Savoy, in his master's name, inquired of Cardinal Wolsey whether he inclined most towards France or towards the Emperor, proposing to him the formation of a certain league. The Cardinal replied that the Emperor was King Henry's kinsman and his nephew, and King Francis was his brother and ally, and that therefore he could give no answer until he had seen the articles. Savoy renounces the alliance with France, and adheres to the Emperor.

Had been told by the French ambassador that Cardinal Wolsey dissuades King Francis from coming into Italy, saying the cost would be great, and that his coming was unnecessary. It also seems that the Cardinal had written to the Pope to give similar advice to King Francis.

Don Alfonso ———, heretofore the Emperor's governor and captain-general, landed at Hampton, and went to the King with the Imperial ambassadors, saying he had escaped to Portugal, where the King would not receive him, from fear of offending the Spaniards. King Henry in like manner dismissed him, telling him to go to the Emperor. He departed for Calais on the day before yesterday. This affair is supposed to be a Spanish trick (finzion), and that he had money levied in Spain, which he was conveying to the Emperor.

In England the government is intent on framing regulations and statutes against aliens, and has issued a proclamation for the presentation at the mint of all Venetian pence,† which would be received and their value given down to a certain period, after which a penalty is to be levied on those who utter them. These regulations enacted by the King are very detrimental to the French and Flemish merchants, and according to English report the Venetian pence were apparently of base silver.

* There were two English ambassadors in Germany at this time—Dr. Tunstall and Sir Thos. Spinelli.

† "Soldi," commonly called "galley half-pence," small coins of base silver.

1520.

London, 10th November. Registered by Sanuto, 7th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 413.

136. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The Imperial ambassadors have asked the King for a certain amount of money, offering him security both for this and other sums, which his Majesty lent the Emperor heretofore. Understood from the French ambassador [Marigny] that the King apologized, saying he was unable to accommodate the Emperor; and to another request for troops, he in like manner gave a refusal, saying the Emperor does not need them. Had heard however that the King is raising 9,000 infantry and 2,500 horse, saying he means to send them to Ireland, because the natives there do not render him due obedience. Some suspect they are destined for Scotland; and although King Francis contented King Henry by not sending the Duke of Albany thither, he nevertheless dispatched Mons. d'Aubigni, which may be called the same thing. Thirdly, they requested the mediation of King Henry for the settlement of the disturbances in Spain; to which Cardinal Wolsey made answer that King Henry was at peace with France, and was apprehensive lest by interfering in these matters he might cause suspicion to King Francis, who was of a jealous disposition.

London, 10th November. Registered by Sanuto, 7th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 440-
441.

137. The SAME to the SAME.

Had announced the death of Sultan Selim to Cardinal Wolsey, who had heard it by way of Rome, and said the State had two good pieces of news—the death of the Turk, and that the Emperor was not going into Italy; adding there was a report that King Francis would invade Italy and go to Venice. Rejoined he knew nothing of this, when the Cardinal expressed surprise, saying, “Should he go to Venice, I shall have been the cause of it.”

Had visited the King and acquainted him with the death of the Turk, and other news. He thanked the Signory, and said the Emperor would not go into Italy this year, but meant to return to Spain, and would leave the government of Germany to the Elector the Duke of Saxony, praising the Emperor greatly and saying he was the friend of the Signory. The Duke having at first refused the office, the King had written to him to accept it. The King also said the Emperor would return to Spain to arrange his affairs there, though they had taken a good turn.

Was moreover told by Cardinal Wolsey that the King of France would do well not to come into Italy.

London, 18th November. Registered by Sanuto, 21st December.

[Italian.]

1520.

Nov. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 375.138. DOGE LEONARDO LOREDANO to CARDINAL WOLSEY.

On the morning of the 20th the College wrote to the Cardinal of York, in England, thanking him for the good service he had rendered to the Signory.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 376.139. The FLANDERS GALLEYS.

Summary of the Auction made by the four Sages for the Orders, for the Voyage of the Flanders galleys, bound to Flanders.

Three galleys to be put up for the Flanders voyage.

The masters to receive as a gift 6,000 ducats for each galley.

To remain at Messina four days, at Cadiz, six. The captain and the masters to be at liberty to make the port of Otranto should they think fit.

At Cadiz to take two pilots for each galley; to purchase 10 hides for each galley to cover the hatchways (porte); to hoist the barge and cock-boat (copano) on board; and to provide men [rowers?] for the benches.

On arriving at Hampton, the galley that fetches the least at the auction to remain there as usual, provided it do not carry the captain; the other two to go to Sluys, and remain there 25 days, on the expiration of which the captain, under heavy penalties, to proceed to Armuyden, and then come on to Hampton or Sandwich, and remain there 60 days, after which the period of demurrage (la muda) to expire.

On the homeward voyage they are to remain four days at Cadiz, four at Majorca, twelve at Palermo, and eight at Messina, and are then to come straight to Dalmatia by the usual ports.

All wools, cloths, and tin shipped in England [for Venice] since the departure of the galleys lately arrived under the command of Giovanni Moro, to pay freight to the present galleys, as also similar merchandise conveyed by land. The period to commence at the expiration of one year from the arrival in Venice of the aforesaid galleys commanded by Moro.

To pay the crews in England at the rate of 40*d.* per ducat, making another payment in Flanders at the rate at 60 grossi per ducat. Should they remain out more than 10 months, the masters are allowed to make the payment at the rate of 39*d.* per ducat.

Trumpeters to receive four ducats each, and the captain to board them.

Ayes, 47. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 2.

Summary of the auction contract.—The galleys to go to Hampton or Sandwich, as shall seem best to the captain and masters, according to the majority, and not to proceed to Flanders.

Each galley to receive a bonus of 4,000 ducats.

The period of demurrage (la muda) in England to be for 90 days, with all the other clauses in the above written auction stipulations.

Ayes, 159.

[Italian.]

1520.

Nov. 27.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta.
v. xlviii. p. 159.

140. CHAIN pawned to the MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

Motion made in the Senate.

That whereas Andrea Badoer, ambassador in England, received as usual from the King, on his departure, a gold chain, which, for the necessities of life, he says he was compelled to pledge to the Reverend Vice-Chancellor* of England for 300 ducats; and the said Vice-Chancellor having died, there are no means whereby to recover the said chain. And as Andrea Badoer is therefore prevented from exacting the credit which he has with the Signory on account of his aforesaid embassy, and has served the State with fidelity and diligence:

Put to the ballot,—

That our said nobleman be declared debtor but for 300 ducats on account of the chain as a set off against his credit, and that there be no other impediment to prevent him from obtaining the residue.

Ayes	- 125 ; 117	} Not carried.
Noes	- 63 ; 74
Neutrals	- 8 ; 0

[Italian, 20 lines.]

Nov. 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 509.

141. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Had received the Signory's letters announcing the arrival of the Turkish ambassador to confirm the peace, and the election of Marco Minio as ambassador to Sultan Soliman, with the letter of thanks to Cardinal Wolsey for his good offices in favour of the State. Went to the Cardinal and communicated this news. Cardinal Wolsey said, "This Sultan Soliman is 25 years old, and has good judgment; it is to be feared he will act like his father." Delivered the Signory's letter, for which the Cardinal returned thanks, offering his services, and then said the Pope meant to subsidize the Switzers against Ferrara; that the King of France and the Signory should not suffer this; that it did not please his King, as he had included the Duke of Ferrara in the league with France, and the King had written to the Pope. He thought the King of France would not go to Italy, and that after the conferences which are to take place in the middle of Lent between the Emperor, the Kings of Hungary and Poland, and the Infant, his brother, who has married Maria Anna, the sister of the King of Hungary, the Emperor would return to Spain to allay the disturbances there, leaving the Infant [Don Ferdinand] Imperial Vicar; the Duke of Saxony, to whom the post seemed suited, being content with this arrangement.

The Cardinal then said that the Count Christopher [Frangipane] was coming into the Friuli as governor there of Marano and Gradisca, which heretofore belonged to the Signory, being sent at the request of his brother-in-law, the Cardinal of Gurk.

London, 28th November. Registered by Sanuto, 18th January.

[Italian.]

* John Yong, Master of the Rolls, who died 28 April 1516. See Mr. Brewer's Calendar under that date.

1520.

Nov. 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 509.142. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

The King having returned from Eltham, he went to his Majesty and acquainted him with the news. The King said he understood from France that Robert de la Marck had submitted to King Francis on better terms than before. Also, with regard to Mons. d'Aubigny's mission to Scotland, that King Francis had washed his hands of the matter, and left Madame [Louise of Savoy] and Cardinal Wolsey, the arbitrators, to decide.

In England there is great scarcity of grain; what was worth one noble now costs five. They have sent an ambassador or envoy to the most Christian King to obtain a permit to export from France 6,000 Winchester (Vorne) bushels. Should it not be conceded the English will be very angry, as they did not receive the whole even of what was promised them previously. The French ambassador [Marigny] is of opinion the permission will not be granted, which may exasperate the English.

Cardinal Wolsey, having asked the French ambassador whether King Francis would go to Italy, received for answer that he was certainly going to Milan, and would subsequently be guided by circumstances.

London, 28th November. Registered by Sanuto, 18th January.
[Italian.]

Dec. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 457.143. The SAME to the SAME.

Several couriers had been killed, and the weather was very stormy in the British Channel.

Mons. de la Rogia [Roche] and the Bishop of Helna, the Emperor's ambassadors, delayed their departure on account of the Bishop's illness, but are now gone. The King instructed them to tell the Emperor to maintain the peace with France.

News had been received concerning the marriage of the sister of the King of Hungary, whom he meant to give to the Emperor. She is now to marry the Emperor's brother, the Infant, and next Lent the Kings of Hungary and Poland, and perhaps the Emperor likewise, will hold a conference and conclude this marriage.

Master Carew, the favorite of the King of England, whose mission to France had been suspended, is now gone thither.

The truce between England and Scotland having expired, the ambassadors from Scotland had not yet come to renew it, which seemed strange to the English. The Duke of Norfolk said to the French ambassador it would be a slur on the King of France were the truce not confirmed, and that the Scots were proud and treacherous (infidelli).

Had been told by the French ambassador that King Francis would go to Milan and Venice within two months. When Cardinal Wolsey asked the ambassador about this, he answered that the King would go first to Milan, and then perhaps to Venice. Does not know whether by land or by water [down the Po].

London, 3rd December. Registered by Sanuto, 29th December.

[Italian.]

1520.

Dec. 8.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 440.

144. GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

King Francis told him the Pope was raising Switzers, he did not know why, unless it were to prevent his going into Italy; but he would go in good array. That he would levy 15,000 infantry in Dauphiné, having already 10,000; and the captains of Lansquenets would muster 18,000; so that he and the Signory would doubtless be sufficient to oppose the Emperor, should he choose to march an army into Italy. And that there would also be the subsidy of of troops promised him by the King of England, who in case of need would even come in person.

Blois, 8th December. Registered by Sanuto, 21st December.

[Italian.]

Dec. 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 531.

145. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

His secretary had been told by the French ambassador that the Emperor purposed sending ambassadors to France to negotiate an agreement, and that King Henry had written [to King Francis?] not to abandon the Signory. Master Carew, the ambassador to King Francis, was to depart on the morrow; he will have to discuss the affairs of Scotland. The French ambassador told him King Henry would be convinced that Mons. d'Aubigny was not gone to Scotland to make mischief.

London, 9th December. Registered by Sanuto, 26th January.

[Italian.]

Dec. 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 473.

146. GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

Was told by the Admiral [Bonnivet] and by Robertet that King Francis was on very loving terms with the King of England, and that they were expecting Master Carew, one of the greatest intimates of King Henry, with presents for King Francis, in like manner as Mons. Remorantino [sic; Montmorency?], one of the chief intimates of the most Christian King, went to England.

Blois, 16th December. Registered by Sanuto, 4th January.

[Italian.]

Dec. 20.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 523.

147. MARTIN LUTHER.

Private letter from Andrea Rosso, Secretary of Francesco Cornaro, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor.

Wherever the Imperial Court had been, Martin Luther was burnt in effigy, with all his works. They will do the like by himself, if he be taken, unless he confess his errors. Letters had lately arrived at Worms, containing many enormities to the reproach of the tenets of the Church. Were Luther merely to inveigh against the morals of the Court of Rome, the authorities would shut their eyes. Luther having heard that in several places his works had been burnt, to prove his power in the territory of the Duke of 1520.

Saxony, has caused books concerning canon law to be burnt also.*

Luther's followers in Germany and elsewhere amount to some 20,000. Even should the Duke of Saxony wish to banish or to punish him, the people would not permit it.

He has an understanding with Erasmus of Rotterdam, and other learned men of these parts. The affair is assuredly a great plague, and the mischief is irremediable.

The Papal Nuncio here, and Domino Aleandro dalla Motta, who was sent hither as commissary by the Pope for this business, do what they can. Aleandro has been warned to take precautions for his personal safety, as he has been threatened from several quarters.

It remains to be seen what provision the future Diet will make.

Worms, 20th December 1520. Registered by Sanuto, 25th January.

[Italian.]

Dec. 21.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 160.

148. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate,—

That Andrea Badoer, late ambassador in England, be declared debtor for 375 ducats and 8 grossi, on account of the chain received from the King, the procurators of St. Mark's, superintendents of the "Monte Novo," having made affidavit that the chain given to Sebastian Giustinian lately returned from England, which he presented to the Signory, was sold for 375 ducats and 8 grossi: the sum to be deducted from his credit.

Ayes	- 122 ; 119	} Undecided, a majority of four-fifths being requisite.
Noes	- 59 ; 67
Neutrals	0 ; 0

[Italian, 19 lines.]

Dec. 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 45.

149. MARTIN LUTHER. (Note by Sanuto.)

On the "Campo" of S. Stefano, a sermon was preached by "Maestro" Andrea of Ferrara, who has numerous followers. The "Campo" was crowded, and he stood on the balcony of the house inhabited by Pontremolo, the writer in the office of the "Ten Offices."

He abused the Pope and the Court of Rome. He adopts the doctrine of Friar Martin Luther in Germany, a very learned man, who follows Saint Paul, and is much opposed to the Pope, who has therefore excommunicated him.

[Italian.]

* In Roscoe's Life of Leo X., it is stated that this display took place at Wittemberg on the 10th December 1520.

A.D. 1521.

1521.

Jan. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 509.150. GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France, to the SIGNORY.

The English ambassador, [Sir Nicholas] Carew, had arrived with the presents. King Henry maintains the best possible understanding with King Francis. The latter desires Scottish ambassadors should go to King Henry, and the business is in the hands of two arbitrators—"Madame" [Louise of Savoy] on behalf of King Francis, and Cardinal Wolsey for the King of England. To effect this, Mons. Polit [sic; i.e. Denis Poillot] goes to England, and perhaps to Scotland.

The ambassador Carew, having inquired whether King Francis was going to Lyons for an interview with the Pope, was answered that the King had not been to his state of Milan for a long while, and must revisit it, and would then perhaps confer with the Pope at Bologna; but on arriving at Lyons he would decide.

Blois, 3rd January. Registered by Sanuto, 18th January.

[Italian.]

Jan. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 559.151. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Report of a league stipulated at Rome by Mons. de St. Marceau between the Pope, France, and England. On this account, it is supposed, Cardinal Wolsey yesterday celebrated mass, which is unusual, he not having done so for several years, save at Guisnes. The ceremony was stately, the King being present, and the ambassadors from the Pope, France, and Venice by invitation, three seats having been prepared for them. The Imperial ambassador [De Mesa] went, uninvited; he had no place, and remained with the courtiers. According to report the league has been made between the Pope, France, and the Signory. Mons. di Olivel (sic) is expected in England in the name of Madame [Louise of Savoy] about the affairs of Scotland, where a conference had been held. In Germany the Diet has not yet commenced; they are awaiting the arrival of the Electors. The disturbances in Spain were apparently quieted, and Don Pedro Giron, the commander of the forces of the community, had submitted to the Emperor, the Bishop of Zamora making his escape to a certain town, and the army of the commons disbanding.

Richard Pace was expected back from the Emperor, to whom he had been sent on a mission by the King.

London, 7th January. Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 559.152. The SAME to the SAME.

Mons. de Bolivet (sic) had arrived, having come about the disputes with Scotland. The Scotch ambassadors were anxiously expected, and Mons. d'Aubigny had used his good offices.

From Germany the King had received the articles which the Emperor means to propose in the Diet.

1521.

Master Carew, besides being the bearer of presents for the Dauphin, went to King Francis to dissuade him from going into Italy.

London, 18th January. Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 558.

153. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Envoy arrived from the King of England to condole with King Francis on his accident, and to know the state of his health. Also to speak about the affairs of Scotland; for the Duke of Albany, who has experience of them, had in like manner audience of his most Christian Majesty, besides the English ambassador, Carew, who brought some rubies as presents. The French defrayed Carew's expenses, and were preparing some scents and smocks for the Princess [Mary].

Dated 20th January. Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 582.

154. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Told by the French ambassador that King Henry will renew the truce with Scotland for six months longer, on condition that within the month of March the Scots shall send ambassadors to him. Should that term expire before their arrival, the truce to be null, and open war declared.

London, 21st January. Registered by Sanuto, 19th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 26.

Misti Consiglio X.
v. xliii. p. 248,
tergo.

155. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the AMBASSADOR SURIAN in England.

By letters from Naples, dated the 9th, they are informed that the Spanish infantry in Sicily had crossed over, part into Calabria and part to Naples, in number about 4,000, good troops and in good order. The 1,000 who arrived at Naples had received money, and were to march towards the Tronto. 500 men-at-arms were also being mustered to march towards the Tronto, and the rest of the men-at-arms to keep themselves in readiness. The Pope was to march his troops, and said he should raise 4,000 infantry.

To communicate this intelligence to the King and the Cardinal of York, requesting his right reverend lordship to persevere in his usual good offices, his Sovereign being an excellent medium for doing good, and for removing all incitement to disturbance between the Christian potentates.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 32 lines.]

Jan. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 558.

156. FRANCESCO CORNARO to the SIGNORY.

On the 21st the obsequies of the late Cardinal de Croy commenced. The Emperor sent to invite the ambassadors, of whom those from England [Dr. Cuthbert Tunstall and Sir Thomas Spinelli] did not attend on account of precedence.

After the mass a sermon was preached by a Dominican friar, in praise of the deceased Cardinal, and about the nobility of his family, which was of Hungarian descent. He commended Mons. de Chièvres vastly for his good management of the Emperor's affairs; exhorting him and the Electors to recover the imperial rights (cosse) and towns, and to go into Italy.

1521.

He then said that they ought to provide against that Martin Luther; as to correct the Pope was not the business of a private individual, but rather that of the Emperor and the Electors.

In consequence of this the Papal Nuncio, on being made acquainted with the purport of the sermon (for it was preached in the German tongue), complained greatly to the Emperor and Chièvres, saying that this friar ought not to have spoken thus about the Pope, nor yet to have exhorted them to undertake the Italian expedition. The Nuncio subsequently told him (Cornaro) that he should write to the Pope, and that on his desiring the Imperialists to provide against Martin Luther, they answered him that he must bear with the Dominican friar who preached the sermon, because he is a great man. For the last three months the Papal Nuncio has been exerting himself against Martin Luther, but the latter has so many followers, in number 40,000 (sic), that the Emperor told the Nuncio not to mention this topic at present.

Worms, 27th January. Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.
[Italian.]

Jan. 31.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. pp. 543-
544.

157. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for the election of an ambassador to England in the stead of Antonio Surian.

To take with him 11 horses and two running footmen. To receive a monthly salary of 140 ducats.

Elected, Nicolò Tiepolo, LL.D.

[Italian.]

Jan. 31.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii.
p. 166, tergo.

158. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate.

Put to the ballot that an ambassador be elected to the King of England in the place of the nobleman, Antonio Surian, with 120 ducats per month for his expenses, of which he is not bound to show any account. The said ambassador to receive all his moneys from month to month here, in cash out of a bank, at the rate of six livres and four soldi per ducat. To take with him 11 horses, including those of the secretary and his servant, and 13 mouths,* comprising two running footmen.

Ayes	149	} Elected, Nicolò Tiepolo, Doctor.
Noes	20
Neutral	1

[Italian, 20 lines.]

Feb. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 556.

159. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

The Pope returned to Rome on Thursday. Went to the palace and told him that Friar Andrea of Ferrara was no longer at Venice; that he had not printed his propositions, and would not print them or anything else against the Apostolic See.

* "Et boche numero 13, computà do staphieri."

1521.

The Pope thanked the Signory, saying, "This madman means to follow the road of that friar Martin Luther, who finds favour with many."

Gradenigo replied, "Men of this sort make a bad end;" and the Pope said, "It is true."

Rome, 2nd February. Registered by Sanuto, 8th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 573.

160. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

On entering King Francis' presence, found him cured, but paler than usual; condoled with him on the accident, beseeching him to be cautious, most especially in stag hunting, as he incurs so much personal risk. Said that very much prosperity depended on his health. His Majesty returned thanks, and told him how the accident occurred, and that on the fifth day he bled so profusely that it weakened him. The cause was, that in scarifying the surgeons touched a vein. The ambassador then gave the news, which pleased him, and he talked about Sultan Soliman and Syria. Was then informed by the King that Master Carew had come from England with presents, and to assure him that the Emperor would not go to Italy this year, pressing him not to go to Milan, lest he should provoke the Emperor to come, and also to exhort the Scots to send ambassadors to England. King Francis had replied that he would not go into Italy with an army, but should proceed to Milan to visit his territories; and that he would cause ambassadors to be sent to King Henry from Scotland.

The English ambassador is to depart shortly.

Celles [near Château Romorantin], 2nd February. Registered by Sanuto, 14th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 582.

161. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

A new ambassador from the King of England had arrived from Rome, and was accompanied by a son of Cardinal Orsini, who remained at Lyons to provide himself with cloths of silk.

Celles, 8th February. Registered by Sanuto, 26th February.

[Italian.]

Feb.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 8.

162. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Has conversed with Cardinal Wolsey about the coming of the most Christian King into Italy.

Gives account of a ship of 4,000 butts, which King Henry is building, called "The Clarence Saint Mary."

London, — February. Registered by Sanuto, 14th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 571.

163. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

Was told by the Pope that he had received letters from Germany, dated the 26th or 27th January, and that the Diet was to commence on the morrow. The Pope said nothing more, but Gradenigo understood that a Dominican friar had preached in Germany against that Martin Luther, blaming him for having caused the bull and the "decretal" to be burnt, as this matter concerned the Emperor; which words the Pope had taken amiss.

1521.

Dated the 9th of February. Registered by Sanuto, 14th February.
[Italian.]

Feb. 14.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxix. p. 569.

164. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Nicolò Tiepolo, ambassador elect to England.—Remonstrance made by him in the College concerning the monthly salary assigned him of 120 ducats, at the rate of 124 grossi per ducat, whereas the other ambassadors are paid in golden ducats. Insists on being placed on the same footing as the other ambassadors, in accordance with the first motion, which the College therefore determined to re-make in the Senate.

[Italian.]

Feb. 16.
Misti Consiglio X.
v. xliii. p. 257.

165. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

To thank Cardinal Wolsey for his offices in favour of the State, and to request him to persevere.

Ayes, 25.

[Italian, 15 lines.]

Feb. 20.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 16.

166. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Was told yesterday by King Francis that there was nothing to fear from the Emperor, as he had no money, and was debtor to him for three arrears of the tribute for Naples, and the fourth will soon be due, amounting in all to 400,000 crowns. King Francis insists on having his money, or else will make war. He has announced this determination to the King of England by the English ambassador, who had departed; King Henry being bound by the treaty to assist whichever of the two is first subjected to an infringement of its articles. The King means to act on the offensive in many quarters, in Flanders, Spain, and Italy, and has sent to tell the Emperor that unless he pays him his money he will wage a great war upon him.

Celles, 20th February. Registered by Sanuto, 16th March.

[Extract, Italian.]

Feb. 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 31.

167. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

King Henry was gone to a place two days' journey from London and the Queen elsewhere, to fulfil a vow; they would remain absent until the Holy Week. Cardinal Wolsey is gone to a third place. The King will return to Greenwich after Easter.

Understood from the French ambassador [Marigny] that King Henry had told him the Emperor would go into Italy, at the instigation of the Cardinals of Gurk and Sion, and that he (King Henry) had no longer so much power to dissuade him, though he lacked money for the expedition; and it seemed strange to him that he should go in opposition to the Pope, to France, to the Signory, and also to the King himself.

1521.

After this spoke to Cardinal Wolsey, who told him the contrary, and that the Emperor would go back to Spain, as he had sent for caulkers to come to the seaside to caulk the fleet for the passage, and detained all the ships and vessels that could be found in the ports.

The French ambassador also said that both the King and the Cardinal were dissatisfied about the affairs of Scotland, and apprehensive of having been deceived, because the ambassadors are not yet arrived; but the French ambassador told them that the Scottish ambassadors would come after Easter.

Tomorrow the Dean of the Chapel Royal [Dr. John Clerk] departs for Rome, where he is appointed ambassador resident.

London, last day of February. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd March.
[Italian.]

March 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 66.

168. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Intelligence received from Germany. The Diet postponed until the middle of Lent. The Emperor will proceed to Italy. Martin Luther is in great repute in those parts of Germany.

Cardinal Wolsey has received from Rome the confirmation (much desired by him) of his legatine authority for another two years, so that he praises . . . [the Pope?].

London, 1st March. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd March.
[Italian.]

March 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 31.

169. The SAME to the SAME.

Told by Cardinal Wolsey that the Diet was not ended, and that the Emperor meant to go to Italy, but having the Pope, France, and the Signory against him he could not prosper. Also that the levy of infantry and of Switzers was for the purpose of taking Ferrara for the Pope. Mentioned this to the French ambassador, who told him the Scots would come after Easter, as likewise Mons. d'Aubigni.

In Germany Martin Luther has many followers; this gives the Pope much anxiety.

The ships [in Flanders?] have been dismissed.

Requests the appointment of his successor.

London, 10th March. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd April.
[Italian.]

March 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 43.

170. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Conversed at Romorantin with King Francis, who told him he had heard from Germany that in the Diet the Emperor discussed his coming into Italy, for which the Princes promised him assistance. It would therefore be necessary to oppose this expedition, as it would have for object the seizure of territory belonging both to the King and to the Signory. It does not appear the Emperor means to return to Spain; neither does the King of England any longer give assurance of his not coming into Italy, as at first; and this because King Francis refused to send grain to supply the scarcity in England.

Villefranche, 13th March. Registered by Sanuto, 26th March.
[Italian.]

1521.

March 15.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 19.

171. ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador in Rome, to the SIGNORY.

A work composed by Friar Martin Luther had been brought to Rome; and the Pope held it in great account. The Cardinals Santi Quatro and Ancona had consulted together concerning this matter, about which the Pope is very anxious. Friar Martin has a numerous sect in Germany.

Rome, 15th March. Registered by Sanuto, 18th March.

[Italian.]

March 18.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 173.

172. The DOGE and SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

There are great tumults and sedition in Spain, and the High Constable, not venturing to remain in Burgos, was about to depart for Tordesillas, and join the other troops of his Catholic Highness. The army of the communities was very strong, and increasing daily, and many places had rebelled against the Emperor, whose adherents urged him to go there instantly. It was already reported at the Imperial Court that he would proceed towards Flanders. In confirmation of this, they understand from their ambassador in England that a fleet was being prepared there to convey the Emperor on his return to Spain.

[Italian.]

March 20.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. pp. 40, 41.

173. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

On the preceding day consistory was held and process read for the canonization of the blessed Zenone, Bishop of Messina, who, in his lifetime, performed more miracles than Christ. He raised the dead; he walked on the water; he struck the earth with a rod, and wine sprung forth; and on the body of a man born without arms he caused arms to grow. This is true, for the ambassador heard the evidence read. The Pope spoke to him (Gradenigo) about Martin Luther.

Rome, 20th March. Registered by Sanuto, 26th March.

[Italian.]

March 23.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 36.

174. MARTIN LUTHER.

Note by Sanuto that a brief had arrived from the Pope, granting permission to Master Andrea of Ferrara, of the order of Friars Hermits, to preach, he having been hitherto in concealment at Venice on a charge of abusing the Pope and the Church, and of following the sect of Martin Luther; and so tomorrow morning he will preach.

[Italian.]

March 24.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 36.

175. MARTIN LUTHER.

In the afternoon a sermon was preached at St. Mark's by the preacher who preaches at S. Lorenzo, Friar, of the order of Observantine Hermits. The Signory was present with the ambassadors, &c., and he made a fine sermon about peace.

[Italian.]

1521.

March 24.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 117.

176. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Understood from the French ambassador [Marigny] that King Henry and Cardinal Wolsey had been informed that King Francis was content the Emperor should go into Italy, provided he did not set foot in the Milanese. This report was circulated by the Spanish ambassador [the Bishop of Badajoz and Helna] and contradicted by the French ambassador, because, as he said, should the Emperor come he must pass through the towns of the Signory, the confederate of the most Christian King, who would never abandon Venice. This the King and Cardinal were pleased to hear. The French ambassador next told them of the agreement made between the Pope and the most Christian King, and of their paying the Switzers destined for Italy conjointly, which was [supposed to be] a proof of their meaning to seize the kingdom of Naples for King Francis and Ferrara for Leo X.; but his King never attempted things of this sort. Concerning Scotland, he said that the ambassadors elected had not chosen to come without an order from the Duke of Albany, the Regent of Scotland, and they wanted him (the ambassador) to proceed there, but the most Christian King does not choose him to do so, in order not to thwart the wishes of King Henry.

Mons. d'Aubigni, who is in Scotland, is to accompany the ambassadors to England for the purpose of subsequently crossing over to France. The French ambassador wrote to Scotland, that in the event of the ambassadors refusing to come, others should be appointed; so he thinks an embassy will come to England after Easter.

"Buda," 24th March. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

March 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 117.

177. The SAME to the SAME.

On Palm Sunday attended mass with the King and Cardinal Wolsey; and afterwards dined with the Cardinal, to whom he communicated the news from Syria. The Cardinal said it was unfortunate for Christendom that Gazelli had been routed by Sultan Soliman*. Returned him thanks for his good offices in keeping the Signory acquainted with passing events. He replied that he does so, has done so, and will do so; and told him what he (Surian) had already heard from the French ambassador. Also about the Spanish infantry, that the Pope wrote to the King complaining of them, whereupon the King wrote to the Emperor, who replied that he kept and keeps them at the Pope's disposal. The Cardinal, therefore does not understand these proceedings of the Pope with regard to bringing Switzers into Italy. He suspects the Pope of meaning to seize Ferrara; and that the Pope and France pay the Switzers, halving the cost. King Henry disapproves of these things, as they indicate discord among the Christian powers. In conclusion, the Cardinal said he would always give notice of such things as appeared to him important to the State, was published, charging those who possess his books and works to burn them, under pain of excommunication.

* Gazeli Bey, Governor of Damascus.

1521.

[Italian.]

April 1. • 183. MARTIN LUTHER.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 52.

On this morning, in the churches where sermons are preached, the preachers, by order of the Legate (Legato) with the Signory's permission, published the excommunication of such as read, or keep in their houses, &c. the works and books of Friar Martin Luther, of the order of Hermits, according to the bull issued at Rome.

[Italian.]

April 1. 184. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 117.

Had been to King Henry, who was returned from the place whither he went from fear of the plague.

Acquainted him with the summaries of the news from Syria, to which he listened attentively, expressing regret for the defeat of Gazelli, as Sultan Soliman would next attack Christendom. He then said there was no fear of the Emperor's coming into Italy this year, because he had no money; and swore that as earnestly as he prayed God to cure the Princess, so did he desire peace between his confederates, mentioning amongst them the Signory. He was exerting himself to induce all to be content with their own possessions, and whoever might give occasion of war would displease him greatly. He said he had written to the Emperor to preserve the peace of Christendom; and came to the conclusion that the Emperor could not go to Italy from lack of money.

The King then recommended to the Signory a nephew of his, the Lord Reginald [Pole],* who is going to study at Padua.

In Scotland, the Archbishop of [St. Andrew's] (the first dignity there), who was Legate, has died. Many applications were made to the King of France for the vacant see, which is in his gift, as he rules Scotland.

Yesterday the four French hostages arrived in London; and their predecessors return home.

Beseeches the Senate to appoint his successor.

Dated 1st April. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

April 6. 185. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 131.

The French secretary had been sent for by Cardinal Wolsey, who complained that the most Christian King had violated the articles of his agreement with the Emperor, by causing Robert de la Marck and the Duke of Guelders to make war on the Emperor with French assistance and favour, and that the King of Navarre likewise meant to attack the Emperor; which proceedings greatly displeased King Henry, as he wishes for peace between all the powers. The secretary justified the French King, saying that the Duke of Guelders was not his subject, and that the Emperor made these charges in order to furnish himself with an excuse for not paying King Francis the 200,000 crowns. Mons. Poliot,* who has arrived lately, also laboured to convince the Cardinal, and at length appeased him; Poliot had come on his way to Scotland. The above complaint was made by the Imperial secretary in London, who had been lately sent from Flanders by Madame Margaret.

* "Un suo nepote Domino Renaldo."

1521.

Mons. de Planis had arrived from Scotland, whither he had been sent by the most Christian King, and now he returns to France. The Scottish ambassadors are not coming to England, but the French ambassador here [Marigny] has exerted himself to have the truce with Scotland prolonged for two or three years more, on the plea that in the meanwhile some means of agreement will be found. The Imperialists in London have circulated two new bubbles (levate); one, that Robert de la Marck has been routed by 700 of the Frenchmen in Flanders who have taken service under Madame Margaret; the other, that the negotiation has been renewed for the marriage of the daughter of the King of Portugal to the Emperor.

London, 6th April. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.

[Italian.]

April 10.

186. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 91.

The Pope had received letters announcing the Emperor's return to Flanders for an interview with the King of England.

Rome, 10th April. Registered by Sanuto, 16th April.

[Italian.]

April 15.

187. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 150.

Cardinal Wolsey has been ill of fever, so that he gave audience to no one but King Henry, who visited him one day, and remained with him a long while.

The French ambassador from Scotland, Mons. de Planis, has arrived, on his way to France, and the Scottish ambassadors have not come; and Mons. d'Aubigni has remained in Scotland. De Planis brings back word that they are willing to prolong the truce for another year without any farther embassy, and in the meanwhile a peace is to be negotiated. King Francis had written to King Henry to this effect, urging him to prolong the truce. Already on the borders some forays have been made.

Yesterday the French ambassador received a post from France, with letters for the King and Cardinal, whereby the most Christian King exculpates himself from the charge made by the Emperor about Robert de la Mark, &c.; and with regard to his having granted passage to the Switzers for their march into Italy to serve the Pope, he says it was for the security of his Holiness. The ambassador had as yet been unable to deliver the letters either to the King or the Cardinal.

On that day (15th April) the King caused the imprisonment of the Duke of Buckingham in the Tower under custody. He is one of the chief personages in England. The reason is not known, though it is understood that for the last 500 years not one of his ancestors has died in bed; and his father was beheaded.

* Denis Poillot.

1521.

The ambassador urges the dispatch of his successor.
 London, 15th April. Registered by Sanuto, 13th May.
[Italian.]

April 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 130.

188. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

This morning King Francis heard mass in the church of an abbey where he (Badoer) lodges, and told him he had something to say to him. Went afterwards to the palace, when he was informed by the King that the Emperor's ambassador had again spoken to him, explaining he did not imply that the Emperor wished for war, but that it should be ascertained juridically whether the clauses had been violated, and requesting King Francis to send Robertet to the borders, there to meet some other person who would be appointed by the Emperor. The King replied that the ambassador had told him the Emperor considers himself at war, so that farther discussion was useless. The ambassador rejoined that he had not spoken in that form; and Mons. de Melanon (sic)* having requested him (the King) to refer the matter for arbitration to Madame [Louise of Savoy], he consented, and the ambassador is gone to her, together with Artoes.†

The King said he had cleared himself with the King of England, and written to the Electors of the Empire and to the Pope, who, according to letters received by him from Rome, will enter the league, and his Majesty has sent the power of attorney for its conclusion.

Dijon, 18th April. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.
[Italian.]

April 19.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 150.

189. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The French ambassadors ‡ went to Cardinal Wolsey and told him what King Francis had written. They also had audience of the King, who, at the persuasion of France, consents to prolong the Scotch truce for a year. The Cardinal complained of the present movements, saying it was not for the interest of King Francis to wage war on the Emperor now that he is holding the Diet in Germany, and desired them to write to their King that it would be for his advantage to adjust matters with the Emperor. The Cardinal offered his mediation; but the French ambassador says he does not believe King Francis will place himself in the hands of King Henry, or of Wolsey, as he distrusts them.

The Duke of Buckingham is still in custody in the Tower; his trial is procrastinated in order to effect other arrests. The Duke was plotting to obtain the crown on the death of the present King.§ His chancellor [Robert Gilbert] has been arrested, and the brother

* Qu. Adrian de Meleun, who had been one of the French hostages in England.

† Qu. La Artege, a French captain.

‡ Marigny, Poillot, and (probably) De Planis.

§ "Farsee re por" (sic. poi?) "la morte di questo Re." "Por" is not Italian. If the word was "per" it would mean "by the death, &c.," and not "on" or "after."

1521.

of the Earl of Chectria (sic. Westmoreland?);* so it is supposed the Duke will be beheaded.

Will communicate to the King and Cardinal the summaries transmitted by the State of news from Syria and Constantinople.

Dated 19th April. Registered by Sanuto, 13th May.

[Italian.]

April 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 130.

190. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

The expedition against Navarre will be made, but the French await the reply from England.

Dated 19th April. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.

[Italian.]

April 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 140.

191. FRANCESCO CORNARO to the SIGNORY.

On a summons from the Emperor, Friar Martin Luther arrived at the Court on the 16th, with a herald and a safeconduct, and on the morrow of his arrival entered the presence of the Emperor, with whom were the Electors and Princes.

The Emperor inquired whether the books printed in his name were his, and whether he would withdraw them and recant, as they were condemned by the Pope as being replete with heresy. Luther replied the books were his, and requested time for reply, which was conceded with great difficulty until yesterday, when he reappeared before the Court. After delivering a long discourse, urging the Emperor and their Lordships not to molest him, he endeavoured to convince them that what he had written was perfectly true, and said he would persist in this proposition, unless the contrary were shown on the authority of holy writ, demanding a disputation to that effect. This was denied him, because all the articles had been already condemned by the Church and Councils; and therefore he was ordered to declare what he meant to do. He then reasserted his opinion, declaring that it could be demonstrated by true arguments that unjust decrees had been made in the said Councils.

On that day, the 19th, the Emperor and the Electors and Princes dismissed Luther, and caused a writing in the Emperor's hand to be read to him, purporting that as the Emperors and Princes, his predecessors, had always done their utmost not only to preserve the Catholic faith, but to augment it, and had ever been obedient to the Apostolic See, his Majesty intended to do the like; and therefore his firm intention was that all the books of Martin, wheresoever found, should be burnt, and he himself punished as a notorious heretic, and likewise those who favoured him in any way. To effect this, the Emperor requested all the Electors and Princes to unite with him, as they had apparently promised when they determined to send for Luther to the Court.

Worms, 19th April 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 11th May.

[Italian.]

* Brother for brother-in-law. Catharine Stafford was married to the Earl of Westmoreland and her sister Mary to Lord Abergavenny, who was imprisoned at the same time as the Duke of Buckingham; but, according to Burke, the husband of Catharine Stafford did not become Earl of Westmoreland until 1523.

1521.

April 19.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. pp. 144,
145.

192. READING in the SENATE of the EMPEROR'S PROTEST to the ELECTORS against MARTIN LUTHER.*

We are determined to protect the Church like our predecessors, and to maintain what was ordained by the Council of Constance and all other councils, whereby it is certain one solitary friar errs in his opinion, which is contrary to that of all Christendom. I have, therefore, resolved utterly to hazard (exponer) my realms and signories, my body, blood, life, and soul. Having heard the obstinate reply which Luther gave yesterday in the presence of you all, I declare that I repent me of having so long delayed prosecuting him and his false doctrine; and my determination is to proceed against him as against a public heretic.

Written with my own hand this day, 19th of April 1521.

(Signed) CAROLUS.

Registered by Sanuto, 11th May.

[Italian.]

April 19.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 183,
tergo.

193. CHAIN pawned to the MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

Motion made in the Senate.

Whereas the nobleman Andrea Badoer, late ambassador in England, was compelled to borrow from the reverend Vice-Chancellor 300 ducats, with whom as security he deposited the gold chain given him by the King; and whereas the said Vice-Chancellor died, and by the law (ordeni) of England his goods lapsed to the royal treasury, as customary with other ecclesiastical property; and whereas it is impossible to obtain the chain, and present it to the procurators of St. Mark, according to the letter of the Venetian law; and whereas Andrea Badoer is not responsible for more than he received for the chain; and whereas he is content, as the chain of his successor Sebastian Giustinian was sold for 370 ducats, to pay to the procurators the sum of 370 ducats:—

Put to the ballot,—that on “Ser” Andrea paying to the procurators the 370 ducats for the value of the said chain, that item be balanced and settled (sia conzà et saldà la partida), as fair and just.

Ayes, 114-118. Noes, 44-44. Neutrals, 0-1.

[Italian, 21 lines.]

April 21.
Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 9.

194. EMBASSY IN ENGLAND.

Put to the ballot that the motion relative to the chain given by the King of England to Andrea Badoer be lost.

Ayes, 63-57.

Put to the ballot that the motion be carried.

Ayes, 98-103.

„ 0.

„ 1-2.

Nothing carried, the majority required being three-fourths.

* This document has been printed at length in the Lettere di Principi, vol. i. p. 92, and in Roscoe's Life of Leo X. A copy of this protest, in French, exists in the Public Record Office.

1521.

April 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx, p. 178.195. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Had conversed with Cardinal Wolsey, to whom he communicated the Levant news. The Cardinal told him the Diet was well nigh ended, and that the King of France was waging war on the Emperor, through Robert de la Mark, the Duke of Guelders, and the King of Navarre; that this displeases King Henry, because he wishes for peace between the Christian powers; and that should King Francis persist, he (King Henry) cannot do less than assist the Emperor. He would fain be the person to adjust these differences, and had dissuaded both the Emperor and the most Christian King from entering Italy. The Emperor would return to Flanders, and perhaps to Spain, to arrange affairs there; and, in short, King Henry would not care to maintain his alliance with France. Communicated all this to the French ambassador in London, who told Cardinal Wolsey that the most Christian King does not choose [to have] judges; yet he exculpates himself with regard to Robert de la Mark and the Duke of Guelders, declaring it is not his business to prevent them from giving trouble; though, on the other hand, he is bound to defend the King of Navarre according to the articles of the agreement made at Noyon. No prolongation of the truce has yet arrived from Scotland.

Details his conversations with Cardinal Wolsey relative to Martin Luther. Papal briefs have arrived in London ordering the works of Luther to be burnt, and the King will make provision accordingly, so that none of them shall be found on this island. The King is writing a work against Luther, and will publish it and send it to the princes of Christendom, including our Signory. It will be meritorious for a king to have written a book in favour of the Christian faith, and much to the praise of his Majesty.*

Requests that his successor may be dispatched, he having already been 30 months at the English Court.

London, 23rd April. Registered by Sanuto, 27th May.

[Italian.]

April 25.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter No. 3.
St. Mark's
Library.196. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrived at Worms on Saturday the 20th of April, but the Emperor being occupied by business concerning the affair of Friar Martin Luther,† which during the whole of the last few days has occupied him and the electors, his (Contarini's) audience was delayed until St. Mark's Day, when the Vice-Chancellor and the marshal of the household, with the Imperial counsellors, conducted him to the palace.

In a hall, seated on a chair of state covered with gold brocade and surmounted by a canopy of the same material, sat the Emperor. On one side of him were seated all the Electors of the empire, with the exception of the Duke of Saxony; on the other, the Cardinals of Sion and Gurk.

* This extract serves to date Letter No. lxxxii., Ellis, series 2, vol. 1, pp. 286-288.

† Luther entered Worms on Tuesday the 16th of April 1521, and departed thence on Friday the 26th (see Roscoe's Life of Leo X., vol. iv, p. 40; edition, Liverpool, 1805).

1521.

Before the Emperor stood Mons. de Chièvres, the Chancellor, [Gattinara], and many other princes, both German, Flemish, and Spanish.

When the ambassadors entered the Emperor rose, and when they were in the act of kissing his hand, he doffed his bonnet.

When he (Contarini) delivered his credentials, the Emperor caused a bench covered with red velvet to be brought, and desired the ambassadors to cover and be seated. This they declined, and when the Emperor again urged the acceptance of this compliment, requested to be allowed to address the Emperor in a standing posture. The permission was granted; but his Majesty chose the ambassadors to remain covered.

His speech was answered by the Chancellor,* and when the ambassadors took leave the Emperor embraced them with marks of great love and goodwill.

Worms, 25th April 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

April 25.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 145.

197. GASPARO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor Charles V., to NICOLO TIEPOLO, LL.D., and his companions.

I have neither spoken to nor seen Friar Martin Luther, although he remained in this town until yesterday morning. I was constrained to act thus, for he has very active enemies and very powerful partisans, and the affair is conducted with incredible acrimony. I have heard from many that amongst other follies he believes that any layman in the state of grace is competent to administer the Sacrament of the Eucharist,† that marriage may be dissolved, that fornication is not sin, and that all things chance from necessity,‡ though this I heard solely from the Cardinal of Sion [Matthew Scheiner]. Besides these errors, I understand that he is most imprudent, very unchaste, and ignorant of the doctrines [of Christianity].

During the last few days he was urged by the Princes here, and in the Emperor's name, to retract, but he nevertheless persisted in his obstinacy, and so today (sic) his Majesty made a declaration in his own hand against him, the copy of which is sent to the Signory.

I cannot tell you how much favour he enjoys here, and which is of such a nature that on the Emperor's departure and the dissolution of the Diet I suspect it will produce some bad effect, most especially against the prelates of Germany.

In truth, had this man been prudent, had he restricted himself to his first propositions, and not entangled himself in manifest errors about the faith, he would have been, I do not say favoured, but

* This chancellor was Mercurino Arboreo, a native of Gattinara in Piedmont. On the death of Mons. de Chievres he became the Emperor's prime minister, and to him may be mainly attributed the expulsion of the French from the Milanese.

† "Quod a quolibet layco existente in gratia sacramentum heucarestie confici queat."

‡ "Et quod omnia eveniunt de necessitate."

1521.

adored, by the whole of Germany. I was told so at Augsburg by the Duke of Bavaria and many others, and I see the same by experience.

Exhorts Nicolò Tiepolo to go to his legation in England, as the career of a diplomatist is very distinguished and most honorable, extremely like that of a student, save that it is grander. There were many learned men, Greek and Latin scholars, and philosophers at Worms, though he had not yet made acquaintance with them.

Martin Luther departed yesterday morning (sic) on a waggon (sopra una careta), accompanied by 20 horsemen.*

Worms, 25th April 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 25th April.

[Italian.]

April 25.

198. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 149.

Was told by the Chancellor [Duprat] that they were expecting letters from England about attacking the Emperor.

According to report, Robert de la Mark had made a stir on the borders of Flanders.

The ambassadors were at Dijon, including even the Imperialist, who had not departed.

King Francis has received letters from the Pope [informing him] that his Nuncio had obtained mandates to burn the works of Friar Martin Luther throughout the kingdom [of Naples], and that they were not to be either printed or sold there.

Dijon, 25th April. Registered by Sanuto, 13th May.

[Italian.]

April 26.

199. GASPARO CONTARINI to his brother-in-law MATTEO DANDOLO, LL.D. and Knight.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. pp. 141-
144.

Had held a conversation with the Duke of Cariati about Martin Luther. Four days ago Luther arrived at Worms on the Emperor's summons, with a guarantee that he should receive no harm, and go away when and whithersoever he pleased.

The day before he (Contarini) entered Worms, Luther was asked, in the presence of the Emperor and the Electors, whether the works which circulated in his name were issued by him. He replied that he should wish to know what works were attributed to him, as some might not be his. An index of their titles being then read to him, he admitted to their authorship. He was then asked whether he affirmed the truth of their contents. To this question he declined to reply without time for consideration. The Emperor objected to this demand, because Luther did not deserve its grant, and because he had known for a long while why he was summoned; but, as a favour, the matter was deferred until the morrow, and he was desired to return at the same hour.

Luther then departed, and when he came back at the appointed hour he spoke at great length before the Emperor, in German, against the Pope and the Court of Rome. He also maintained that the Council of Constance, which condemned John Hus, erred wickedly by passing sentence against him, and that he (Luther) would persevere in that opinion until confuted by argument or authority derived from holy writ. The Emperor then dismissed him, and very early on the following morning sent [to the Diet?] a certain rescript in his own handwriting, stating that he was descended from Catholic Kings and most Christian Emperors, and therefore would not degenerate from his forefathers; that with all his might he would oppose the heresies of Luther, and inflict punishment on all his adherents; and that for this purpose he (the Emperor) would hazard both his realms and his life.

* According to Roscoe, Luther quitted Worms on the 26th of April.

1521.

This rescript being presented to the Electors, they requested time to consult and decide on the matter, and went back to the Emperor several times, assenting apparently to the decree, but raising many objections; and as yet nothing is settled. The Emperor, however, seems to be firmly opposed to Luther, and not without reason, for Luther has reached such a pitch of madness and fury that he rejects the decrees of the Councils; says that any layman can administer (confici posse) the sacrament of the Eucharist; that matrimony can be dissolved; that simple fornication (fornicationem simplicem) is no sin, and hints at that community of women of which Plato treats in his Republic.

During the night of the day on which the Emperor dismissed Luther, a writing was placarded on the doors of the Cathedral, whereby 400 nobles and persons innumerable of inferior grade threatened the opponents of Luther and defied them to battle, making especial mention of the Bishop of Mayence, whom they vituperated grossly.

Had Luther conducted himself at Worms with greater moderation and prudence, and not meddled so erroneously with sacred matters, but abided by his original proposition, he would have had all Germany on his side, such is the bias towards his ravings of many of the Germans.

Has great apprehensions, because, as Luther said of himself, he is a man who will not relinquish his opinion, either through argument, fear, or intreaty. On the departure of the Emperor, and when the Diet is dissolved, Luther will raise great disturbances throughout Germany, much to the cost of the German bishops and all the clergy there, and indeed with danger to the Christian religion. He has many powerful partisans, who encourage him, and against whom no one dares to Luther's books are sold publicly in Worms, although the Pope and the Emperor, who is on the spot, have prohibited them. Within their own dwellings many of the chief Princes [of Germany?] encourage Luther. Does not know how the affair will end, but dreads the result. Has neither spoken to the man, nor even seen him, at which he (Dandolo) will perhaps marvel; but the question is treated so acrimoniously that the nature of the times requires this reserve. Luther disappointed the expectations of almost everybody at Worms, for he exhibits neither moral purity nor any prudence. Of scholarship he is devoid, and in short excels solely in imprudence.

Worms, 26th April 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 11th May.

[Latin.]

1521.

April 27.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 11,
tergo.200. ENGLISH WOOLS.

Decree of the Senate that from this time forth, till March 1522, Frankish wools (lane francesche) may be brought to Venice either by Venetian subjects or by aliens, and in both Venetian and foreign bottoms, with this condition, that those conveyed by land exported from the staple of Calais do pay one quarter of freight; those brought from England by sea by way of Leghorn, to pay one-third of freight; others coming by way of Ragusa or from the places of the Gulf to pay three quarters of the freights to the Signory's Flanders galleys, to which they by right belong.

Ayes, 89.

[Italian, 10 lines.]

April 27.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 12.201. ENGLISH WOOLS.

Put to the ballot in the Senate, that from the 1st of next June till the end of November following wools be brought to Venice solely by land from the staple of Calais, and from no other place, on payment of one-fourth of the freights to the Signory's trading galleys, to which they ought to belong, as decreed heretofore.

Ayes, 60. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 22 lines.]

April 28.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 4,
St. Mark's
Library.202. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

With regard to Friar Martin Luther, the Electors and Princes, by consent of all the members of the Diet, have answered the demand made of them in the Emperor's protest* thus,—that as the matter was momentous they besought him to allow them to treat with Luther apart, and obtain from him the recantation required by his Majesty, namely, of such points as directly impugned the decrees of the Council of Constance and others, leaving in suspense Luther's imputations against the Papal authority. It is supposed that this was done designedly, in order to restrain the Pope, and make him agree to the Emperor's wishes.†

The Diet also requested his Majesty to send a commissary of his own to attend the conference with its own delegates, but the Emperor would only consent to the Diet's acting ex se, and granted but three days' time, which having expired without any result, his Majesty sent a doctor of laws and one of his secretaries to Friar Martin, with a peremptory and final intimation to the effect that unless he retracted all the assertions before mentioned, he must depart on the following morning; twenty days' time being conceded him to quit Germany, in accordance with the safeconduct granted by his Majesty, who, on the expiration of that period, is determined to seize and punish him, as his errors deserve.

* This document is entered in Sauto's Diaries. See 19th April 1521.

† At the commencement of 1521 Leo X. was closely allied with France, and therefore the Imperial Cabinet made use of Luther to keep the Pope in awe. Subsequently, in date February 6th, 1525, we are told (also by Gasparo Contarini) that Charles V., when expressing his indignation at the ungrateful and treacherous manner in which he had been abandoned by Clement VII., hinted at the possibility of taking his revenge by declaring Martin Luther "an honest man." 1521.

To this the Friar replied that he would make no recantation whatever, and on the contrary demanded that his arguments should be refuted by holy writ. He then departed.

It is not known where he will reside, though we are assured the Princes of the Empire have promised his Majesty that they will always be ready to take any steps he may choose for the punishment of this friar, which may God grant, by reason of his numerous followers and the great favour enjoyed by him in these parts of Germany.

Worms, 28th April 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

May 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 126.

203. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor had given a rebuff to Friar Martin Luther, and prevented his departure thence [from Worms?].

Dom. Rafael de' Medici arrived at Rome last evening; is lodged in the house of a banker, by name Bagolin; and is going to the Pope at La Magnana. Will endeavour to investigate the news brought by him. This evening the Pope has commanded a musical comedy to be performed.*

Rome, 1st May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.

[Italian.]

May 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 202.

204. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Was unable to communicate to Cardinal Wolsey the summaries of news contained in the Signory's letters of 26th March and 2nd and 3rd April; but showed them to King Henry, who said the Emperor had sent an envoy extraordinary to him, to complain of the most Christian King, and wished to refer the disputes to the arbitration of himself (King Henry). For this purpose, his Majesty has sent Sir Richard Pace† [sic, for Jerningham] as his ambassador to France, and also Sir Corado [sic, for Sir Richard Wyngfeld] to the Emperor, to ascertain whether an agreement can be negotiated between these sovereigns. The resident French ambassador will depart for France; Mons. Piloto [Poillot], who came on behalf of "Madame" [Louise], to adjust the affairs of Scotland, remains in his stead.

The King has dismissed the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland,‡ and appointed another in his stead, because he was the son-in-law of the Duke of Buckingham, and he is supposed to have been accused; and [Sir George Nevill Lord Bergavenny?] his [the Duke's?] son-in-law has already been arrested, as likewise two of his nephews, the brothers of the one [Reginald Pole] who is studying at Padua. According to report, they plotted with the Duke of Buckingham

* "Questa sera il Papa fa far una comedia con musiche."

† "Domino Ricardo Panzeo" in the original.

‡ The Earl of Surrey did not resign this office until near the end of the year 1521. Sir John Peachey was despatched to Ireland about this time with instructions for the Earl; and that circumstance may possibly have occasioned the rumour mentioned in the text.

1521.

against the Crown, and when he (Surian) told the King what the Signory had done for his kinsman, the Paduan student, out of love for his Majesty, he said the State must not make so much of him, lest he prove disloyal like the others.*

London, 1st May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.]

May 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 176.

205. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

The Pope would not join the triple league because the Emperor is not going into Italy. The Chancellor [Duprat], in discussing with him (Badoer) the disputes between King Francis and the Emperor, said that a reply was awaited from England, that King Henry will send an envoy to undertake the arbitration of these differences, and that the Emperor is content to place himself in the hands of the King of England.

Musi (sic),† 6th May. Registered by Sanuto, 27th May.

[Italian.]

May 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 203.

206. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The ambassador destined for the Emperor has departed, and the one accredited to France will leave immediately. In Picardy the French have apparently been worsted by the Emperor's forces; and some Frenchmen have been arrested.

Two sentences have been passed on the Duke of Buckingham, condemning him to have his head cut off, for high treason; and the merchants are of opinion he will receive the third, namely capital punishment, at Westminster as usual.

The intelligence communicated by him to the King and others concerning Sultan Soliman is not credited, because the Prior of St. John's [Docwra] says he has letters from Rhodes containing quite the contrary; and there are also recent letters from Rome which say nothing of these Turkish advices.

London, 8th May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.]

May 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 177.

207. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

The French King has intercepted letters from the Emperor to the ——— in Navarre, in reply to his inquiry whether he should destroy the ferry of St. Jean de Port. The Emperor gives orders in the affirmative.

Was told by the King that in three days he should have a reply from England, and would then be able to make war. He has already raised 10,000 lansquenets and 6,000 Switzers, and intends to have 40 pieces of artillery. He said he was not afraid of what the King of England may write to him.

Mausi (sic), 9th May. Registered by Sanuto, 27th May.

[Italian.]

* "Disse non bisogna far tante cosse azio non si lievi come li altri."

† Qu. Mussi l'Evêque? A letter from Sir William Fitz William, the English ambassador in France, of the 7th May 1521, is dated at "Mychean Levake."

1521.

May 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 217.208. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The two ambassadors, the one to the Emperor, the other to the most Christian King, have both quitted London. They are sent to notify the Duke of Buckingham's conspiracy (trattato). According to certain statutes of the realm, on account of Brabant and Flanders, the Emperor must be made acquainted with the particulars; and so also the King of France, by reason of his vicinity. The Duke aspired to the Crown, and these two ambassadors would not have been sent, save for this cause. Friar Martin Luther is to be proclaimed an heretic, and his works burnt. He has already been sentenced; and on Sunday Cardinal Wolsey will publish his condemnation by the Councils (Concilj; Universities?) of Cambridge and Oxford,* as a heretic; and that all his books be burnt under penalty of excommunication, according to the brief received from the Pope.

Has been told by the French ambassador [Marigny] that the marriage of the Emperor's sister to the King of Hungary will not take place, and that the most Christian King is negotiating a marriage between him and his (King Francis') sister-in-law, Maria Zenevre [sic, Madame Rénée], or with a daughter of the King of Navarre.

London, 11th May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th June.

[Italian.]

May 12.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 7,
St. Mark's
Library.209. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Departure for Venice on the 10th of his colleague, Francesco Cornaro, who was accompanied a certain distance out of Worms by the English ambassador [Sir Thomas Spinelli] and by a number of the Court.

Last evening at about 6 p.m. the Cardinal of Mayence sent for the Apostolic Nuncio [Marino Caracciolo], and told him that on the day of the Invention of the Cross [the 3rd of May] Friar Martin Luther had been captured by one Hector, a Bohemian, the enemy of the Duke of Saxony, who had followed Luther to Worms, and on the road after his departure.

The mode of capture is narrated as follows:—Luther on the day of the Invention of the Cross, having preached at a village in the province of Saxony, dismissed the herald who had accompanied him, and in the afternoon, having got into a waggon with one or two persons, for the purpose of visiting some of his relations in that neighbourhood, he was attacked in itinere by this Hector, the Bohemian, who made Luther change his apparel, and carried him off, whither it is not known.

The Dean of Mayence has written this same account to the Nuncio. This morning the intelligence was in general circulation, though it is not credited by the Nuncio and persons of judgment, who consider it a feint, artfully devised by Luther, to enable him to go more freely into Denmark, or elsewhere, as shall seem fit to him.

* "Per li Concilj Catturberienze et Oximmiense."

1521.

It is reported from England that the King had ordered the arrest of the Duke of Buckingham, the chief personage in that kingdom, together with two other Knights of the Garter. The real cause is not known, but according to report the Duke had plotted to assassinate Cardinal Wolsey. This the English ambassador denies, though he does not know the reason, affirming merely the fact of the arrest, and that the King had surrendered the Duke for trial by the peers of the realm.

Mons. de Chievres has constant fever and is dangerously ill; they bled him and shaved his head, and he was considered in great danger; but he rallied last night, though not sufficiently to banish all fear as to the result.

Worms, 12th May 1521.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

May 13.

210. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 218.

On this Sunday morning (sic)* the condemnation of Friar Martin Luther as an heretic was proclaimed.

King Henry and Cardinal Wolsey,† with the ambassadors and others, went to the Royal Palace at St. Paul's; the ambassadors were the Pope's, the Emperor's, and himself (Surian). The French ambassador was not present on account of disputes about precedence.

Cardinal Wolsey, with many bishops in canonicals and the ambassadors, all on horseback, proceeded to the door of St. Paul's Church with a great multitude of people. On dismounting the canopy was brought to the Cardinal with the cross and censer, not as usual for a mere Legate, but as if the Pope in person had arrived.

On reaching the high altar, the Cardinal kissed the cross, and the ambassadors having seated themselves on a stage placed for them, the Archbishop of Canterbury made a laudatory oration, praising the Cardinal vastly. Then the Bishop of Rochester made a speech, in which he commended the Cardinal for what he had done against Friar Martin Luther, and said the King would act in like manner. He reprobated the Friar's sayings, and upheld the authority of the Pope, and finally published the Papal brief, saying King Henry had written a work against Luther which Cardinal Wolsey held in his hand, but it was not yet completed. After this, the condemnation was published, together with its approval by the King. The ceremony lasted until after 2 p.m.

The Cardinal invited the ambassadors and bishops to dine with him, and the banquet was sumptuous.‡

The Royal Courts (li consigli reggi) have condemned the Duke of Buckingham to death. He will be definitively sentenced this morning (13 May) at Westminster, the final sentence having been passed

* "In questa matina domenica," query last Sunday morning. As seen by the letter of Lodovico Spinelli (no. 213) the date should be 12th May. See also Roscoe's Life of Leo X. vol. iv., Appendix, p. 28, edition, Liverpool, 1805.

† At the close of his despatch the ambassador writes that the King was ill in bed with tertian ague.

‡ In Roscoe's Life of Leo X. (p. 28, Appendix, vol. 4) there is an account of this ceremony, taken from the Cottonian MSS. in the British Museum.

1521.

ordering him for decapitation; and he is gone back to the Tower to be executed according to the custom here, and they will do by him as was done by his father and grandfather.

The King is in bed with tertian ague.

A brief has arrived from Rome giving greater authority to the Legate Cardinal Wolsey than he had previously.

The Cardinal wished the Scotch truce to be prolonged for eight months rather than for ten, but at length agreed to the latter term. The King has not yet signed.

Requests that his successor may be despatched.

London, 13th May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th June.

[Italian.]

May 14.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlviii. p. 185,
tergo.

211. CHAIN pawned to the MASTER of the ROLLS.

Decree of the Senate.

By the statement now made by the nobleman Andrea Badoer, Knight, this Council understands that on his departure from England, as our ambassador, he was compelled to leave there in pawn the chain given to him by that most Serene King. That chain being evidently no longer recoverable, the Vice-Chancellor to whom it was pledged having died, it is fitting to settle this matter.

Put to the ballot, that our nobleman above mentioned within the next eight days do pay into our Procurator's office of St. Mark 400 ducats, ready money, in lieu and payment of the above-written chain.

Ayes, 116. Noes, 27. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 10 lines.]

May 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 221.

212. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Congratulated King Francis on his victory at Pampeluna. He replied that he had written to the King of Navarre, desiring him, on entering his kingdom, to league with the commons of Spain; and that although the army of the Junta had been routed, and their commander D. Juan de Padilla put to death, the Bishop of Zamora nevertheless had come out of Toledo and taken the field. The kingdom of Navarre being now conquered, he will lend part of his troops there in aid of Robert de la Mark. The Emperor has no one with him but the King of England, who, owing to this plot of the Duke of Buckingham, will not quit his realm.

Dijon, 14th May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th June.

[Italian.]

May 14-17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 237.

213. LODOVICO SPINELLI, Secretary of the Venetian Ambassador in England, to his brother GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary of the Venetian Ambassador in France.

On Sunday last, the 12th, the ambassadors, Papal, Imperial, and Venetian, were taken to a palace of the Queen's,* and there during two hours awaited the Cardinal of York, the Legate, who came on horseback with a great train of nobility. On his arrival all went processionally to the cathedral church of St. Paul's, where on dismounting they were met by the dean and canons in their copes, and proceeded thus to the high altar.

* Queen's Wardrobe ?

1521.

The Cardinal was under a canopy, an unusual thing, and after the oration gave the blessing, whereupon all went out of the church processionally, into the churchyard, where there was a lofty platform, which we ascended in great confusion. On this stage was a high chair with its canopy of cloth of gold. In this chair Cardinal Wolsey seated himself, having on his right hand the Papal Nuncio [Ghinucci] and part of the English bishops, and on his left the Imperial and Venetian ambassadors, with the rest of the bishops. In the centre were prelates and lay lords and plebeians. The Cardinal and the others having seated themselves, the Bishop of Rochester ascended a pulpit and delivered an English oration, two hours in length, against Friar Martin Luther, which, being ended, was much commended by Cardinal Wolsey. Then the Cardinal made a speech also in English, excommunicating and cursing Martin and his followers. During the delivery of these speeches, the Lutheran works were burnt.

These ceremonies being concluded, the Cardinal gave the blessing to all present, and everybody returned home. Thus Luther's festival terminated, upwards of 30,000 persons attending its celebration. The ambassadors accompanied the Cardinal to his dwelling, and dined with him.

The French ambassador was not invited on account of the disputes with the Emperor about precedence.

On the morrow, the 13th of May, at 8 o'clock, the Duke of Buckingham was conveyed by water from the Tower to Westminster for judgment, under a strong escort of armed men, lest he should be rescued, by reason of his numerous followers in London. In the evening he was again sent back to the usual prison at the Tower, being led through the town on foot, preceded by the axe with its edge turned towards him, indicating death, according to the custom of this realm.

From what has been told us, the Duke spoke in his defence for an hour, confuting the charges brought against him with great eloquence, in such wise that all were affected, and no one dared pass sentence; so the Duke perceiving their silence and whispering, urged them to speak, assuring them that he knew it was the King's will that he should die, and that he was content to accept the punishment, not for the crime laid to his account, which was utterly false, but for his very great sins. His death is universally lamented by all London.

Above the two placards at the doors of the Church excommunicating Luther and his works in the name of the Cardinal, the following words were added in some unknown hand; namely, over one,

"Bulla Bullæ ambæ amicullæ;"

and over the other,

"Araine ante tubam."

1521.

This has greatly displeased the Cardinal, and, from what I understand, he has determined to excommunicate the writer, although he knows not who the author is.

This morning the late Duke of Buckingham was taken "in forza de' brazi" from the Tower to the scaffold, at the usual place of execution, with a guard of 500 infantry. He addressed the populace in English. Then on his bended knees he recited the penitential psalms, and with the greatest composure calling the executioner, requested that he would dispatch him quickly, and forgave him; after which he took off his gown, and having had his eyes blindfolded, he laid his neck on the block, and the executioner with a woodman's axe* severed his head from his body with three strokes.

The corpse was immediately placed in a coffin and carried to the church of the Austin Friars, accompanied by six friars and all the infantry.

The death of the Duke has grieved the city universally. Many wept for him, as did one-third of the spectators, among whom was I. Our Italians had not the heart to see him die. And thus miserably, but with great courage, did he end his days on the 17th of May.

London, 14th-17th May 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 6th June.

[Italian.]

May 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 218.

214. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

On this morning at 11 a.m. the Duke of Buckingham was beheaded publicly on a scaffold on the square at the Tower of London. He received his first sentence on the 13th.

London, 17th May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th June.

[Italian.]

May 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 201.

215. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Informed by King Francis that Sir Richard Pace,† the English ambassador, had been sent by King Henry to contradict the report of his negotiating the marriage of his daughter to the Emperor and of his interview with the Emperor. King Henry declared he meant to maintain the promise of marriage contracted with the Dauphin; and had answered the Emperor explaining the needlessness of a conference, and that ambassadors would suffice for what was required. The King of England complained of the stirrs made by Robert de la Mark, by the Duke of Guelders, and by the Prince of Navarre, with the assistance and encouragement of his most Christian Majesty. He regretted the occurrence of these disputes (controversie) between the Christian powers, and offered himself as arbitrator of their differences.

To this King Francis had replied, he had never believed these

* "Una scure da sinder legne."

† "Domino Richardo Paseo" in the original. This is in mistake for Sir Richard Jerningham, who was sent to Francis at this time to act as colleague to Sir William Fitz William.

1521.

things, as he knew his brother the King of England was disposed to keep faith with him; and it was unnecessary he should arbitrate, as he (King Francis) required nothing of the Emperor save that the kingdom of Navarre should be given to its rightful owner, as stipulated by the articles signed between them, and that the Emperor should do homage for Flanders, and pay the 150,000 ducats due for the kingdom of Naples. The Emperor, therefore, was in the wrong, and he had sent to defy him.

Dijon, 17th May. Registered by Sanuto, 17th May.

[Italian.]

May 18.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 9,
St. Mark's
Library.

216. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Pope had received the declaration made by the Emperor against Martin Luther, the copy of which the Signory will have already received.

This declaration the Pope caused to be read in full consistory, and it gave universal satisfaction, the Emperor having shown himself Catholic, and the good son of the Apostolic See.

On the morning before last (he, Contarini, being present) in the Emperor's chamber, the contents of these letters were notified to his Majesty by the Nuncio in the company of Dom. Hieronimo Leandro. In the opinion of intelligent persons, the reported capture of Martin Luther by Hector, the Bohemian, was a fiction, and Luther is safe and sound in Saxony, and as popular as ever.*

Worms, 18th May.

[Italian, 5½ pages.]

May 19.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 11,
St. Mark's
Library.

217. The SAME to the SAME.

Report that an ambassador from the King of England to the Emperor [Sir Richard Wyngfeld] has already crossed the Channel, and has arrived in Flanders.† It is supposed that the Emperor will request the Electors to be present when he announces the object of his mission, to show that his Majesty wishes for their advice and opinion, so as to make use of them in this his need.

Worms, 19th May 1521.

[Italian, 1 page.]

May 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 194.

218. REGINALD POLE at Padua.

On the 21st of May a patent was made out for Sir Reginald Pole,‡ the kinsman of the King of England, who is come to study at Padua, authorizing him to export plate, clothes, &c.

[Italian.]

* "Et ritrovasse esso Lutherio in le parte di Saxonia sano et gagliardo cum el pristino favor."

† By a note in "State Papers," vol. i. p. 10, it is seen that Cuthbert Tunstall returned from an embassy to the Emperor in April 1521. Sanuto, date London 3rd April 1521, mentions the intended mission to the Emperor of "Dom. Corado," meaning apparently Sir Richard Wyngfeld. (See State Papers, vol. vi. pp. 70-73, and a foot note also, vol. vi. p. 78.) The letter in the sixth volume of the State Papers, pp. 68-69, signed by the two Wyngfelds and Spinelli, should be dated 1522, not 1521. In May 1521 the Emperor held his Court at Worms, in 1522, at Bruges. Compare also the contents of the letter with Guicciardini, vol. iii. p. 368.

‡ "Domino Rainaldo Polo."

1521.

May 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 263.219. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Had announced the execution of the Duke of Buckingham. The cause was, that a certain Carthusian monk [Nicholas Hopkins], of great fame as a holy man, told the Duke that by Divine inspiration he knew the King would shortly die. Whereupon the Duke commenced negotiating with divers lords, that in the event of the King's death the kingdom should not pass to the Princess, but to him; and he wrote letters which reached the King's hands, as did one from his chancellor [Robert Gilbert], who also accused him. He was therefore put to death for having plotted against the Crown.

The King is cured of his fever, and has gone to a palace called Eltham, belonging to the Cardinal, who is also to proceed thither.

The truce with Scotland is concluded for 10 months, on condition that ambassadors shall be sent hither to conclude the adjustment.

Cardinal Wolsey would fain adjust the disputes between the Emperor and France, and mediate together with the King. To effect this object two ambassadors were dispatched, as written in former letters.

The Flemings apparently refuse to go for judgment,* as bound, to the Parliament of Paris.

The Diet of Germany is dissolved, and the Emperor is expected in Brabant and Flanders.

London, 21st May. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

May 22.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 12,
St. Mark's
Library.220. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Expected arrival of a second ambassador [Sir Richard Wyngfeld] from England, the resident ambassador [Spinelli] having told his (Contarini's) secretary that he had already reached Cologne, and would be at Worms tomorrow, or on Friday [the 24th] at the latest.

In the course of conversation, the secretary inquired what was the object of this mission. Spinelli replied that his King having sent an ambassador to the King of France† to dissuade him from waging war on the Emperor, he thought fit to do the like by his Imperial Majesty, to urge him also not to have recourse to the sword. Spinelli added, "Rest assured, secretary, that my King wishes for peace and not for war between these two sovereigns, but, above all, he will not permit the King of France to control the Emperor,‡ who, though he is proceeding against one who is his subject and vassal, such as Robert de la Mark, is opposed by the King of France,—a thing contrary to law."

Spinelli added many other words indicative of dissatisfaction on the part of the King of England with the French demonstrations against the Emperor.

Mons. de Chièvres has been given over by the physicians.

Worms, 22nd May 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

* "Andar a raxon."

† Sir Richard Jerningham was sent at this time to France as ambassador extraordinary. He arrived at the French Court on 16th May, as appears in Mr. Brewer's Calendar. Sir William FitzWilliam was the English resident ambassador in France.

‡ "Non è per permettere che'l Re de Franza superi questa Maestà Cesarea."

1521.

May 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 202.221. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

An ambassador has arrived from Scotland to request the Duke of Albany, who is at his estates in Provence, to assume the government of that kingdom.

The Emperor's ambassador has been with Madame [Louise], and told her that the words uttered by him to King Francis were not a defiance to war. She replied, "You in short choose war, not abiding by that whereby you are bound to abide."

Had visited Madame, who acquainted him with the statement made to her by the Imperial ambassador, and with the fact that he had proposed the King of England as mediator.

Dijon, 22nd May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.]

May 24.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 13,
St. Mark's
Library.222. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The new ambassador [Sir Richard Wyngfeld] from the King of England arrived here yesterday at noon, and made his entry without any ceremony, save that of being met on the road. The same evening he conferred with the Emperor for the space of an hour.

Concerning the object of his mission, had been unable to elicit anything farther than was told to the secretary by Wyngfeld's colleague, Spinelli.

The Pope gives the Emperor fair words, with which the Imperialists are not satisfied; and now they consider the Pope a Frenchman.

This morning Mons. de Chièvres received extreme unction, and is in the hands of his Maker.

Worms, 24th May 1521.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

May 26.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 14,
St. Mark's
Library.223. The SAME to the SAME.

A brief had arrived from the Pope in praise of the declaration made against Martin Luther, exhorting the Emperor to continue persecuting him, and to issue his Imperial mandates for the burning of his works and books. Orders given for committing to the flames all the works of Martin Luther; he himself to be outlawed and forbidden to reside in these parts.

Worms, 26th May 1521.

[Italian, 6 pages.]

May 28.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 15,
St. Mark's
Library.224. The SAME to the SAME.

Last night, at about 10 p.m., Mons. de Chièvres expired. It had been rumoured that he had bequeathed some 500,000 ducats to the Emperor, but neither by the will nor yet by the codicil, added lately, has he left his Majesty anything whatever. It was considered certain that he had left a very great amount of treasure, of which the Spaniards declare publicly that Spain has been deprived, Chièvres appropriating it to himself, of his own accord, and not as a boon from his Sovereign. The like is said of him by the Neapolitans, so that he leaves a bad character; and he is also considered to have been a Frenchman.

1521.

Owing to his death the Chancellor [Gattinara] will augment his authority with the Emperor (although it is already great), as will also his brother-in-law De Bresse [the Governor of Bresse?]. The management of everything will rest in the hands of these two individuals.

Had visited the new English ambassador [Sir Richard Wyngfeld], who in truth appeared to him a worthy gentleman (degno zentilhomo). The French ambassador says that Sir Richard Wyngfeld was the person through whose mediation the interview between the Kings of England and France was arranged, and that his most Christian Majesty gave him a very noble and costly service of silver plate.*

Endeavoured to elicit the object of Wyngfeld's mission, hinting how desirable it would be to make peace between the Emperor and France; but the only reply he could obtain was that the King of England would mediate as one anxious for peace.

The imperial mandates against Martin Luther had been issued; and it was said that on the morrow (the 29th of May) such of his printed works as could be found, whether in German or Latin, would be burnt in the market place of Worms.

Worms, 28th May 1521.

[Italian, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ page.]

May 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 263.

225. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

On the 22nd received the Signory's letters of the 17th and 27th April and 1st May, with the summaries from Germany, Hungary, and Constantinople. Went yesterday to communicate them to Cardinal Wolsey, who thanked the State, saying he and the King were anxious for peace amongst Christians, and had received from the Emperor the instrument of compromise, appointing them judges of his disputes with France, whereupon they wrote to King Francis, offering, should he consent, to accept this office. Cardinal Wolsey said, "The King wants to recover Navarre; should he obtain it, he will lose France." He then spoke of the journey of Gritti to Milan, to inspect the passes, saying it was unnecessary to send him, as he (Wolsey) had given assurance that for this year the Emperor would not come into Italy, but that Lautrec made Gritti go, to give himself repute. Apologized for the Signory, saying that he went to visit Lautrec, who was going to France. The Cardinal said the State must not show herself so much inclined towards France, lest they render the other powers hostile to Venice, and that the Diet had promised the Emperor 54,000 infantry and much cavalry, besides what he has of his own. Moreover, it was not true the King of France had subsidized the Switzers, though they indeed promised him not to molest the Milanese. This was written by the Swiss Cardinal [of Sion] to Cardinal Wolsey, with whom he (Surian) then went to dinner.

Dated 28th May. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

* "Una credentiera de arzenti molto honorevole et richa."

1521.

May 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 263.226. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

After dinner discussed various topics with Cardinal Wolsey, who said "Your Doge is a holy duke." He then spoke about the news of Gazelli, and his defeat, in consequence of which Syria had returned under the Turkish yoke. Does not believe anything about the Sophy [of Persia]. Inquires whether the Signory has sent an ambassador to Sultan Soliman, and thinks it would be well to send soon, to keep peace with him. The Cardinal then commenced talking about the Emperor, and said he means to come into Italy, and that if those sovereigns accepted their* mediation, he (Wolsey) would be mindful of the Signory, as he wished for peace.

Dated 28th May. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

May 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 264.227. The SAME to the SAME.

Was told by the French ambassador [De la Bâtie] that the truce with Scotland was not yet positive, and that the Cardinal would not ratify it for more than eight months. He has not chosen to sign and send it to Scotland by a Scottish gentleman who came to take it, but is delaying in order that he may [first?] see the reply of the King of France, so that the dissatisfaction of the English government at the successes of King Francis against the Emperor is manifest. A gentleman [the Sieur de Montpésat] has arrived from the French Court with the [power for the] compromise.

It is reported that Friar Martin Luther has been captured and will be given up to the Pope.

Don Ferdinand has quitted the Court at Worms for his marriage to the sister of the King of Hungary, after which he will return to Flanders.

Cardinal Wolsey had made the same communications to the French ambassador as to him (Surian).

Dated 29th May. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

June 3.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 17.228. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Understands from the Chancellor that the King of England is mediating strenuously for peace between the Emperor and France; though the King has not yet heard of the attack on Navarre. The Chancellor trusted that, on being acquainted with it, England would declare for the Emperor against France, in observance of the league between the three powers, to the effect that whichever of them commenced war was to be attacked by the other two; a compact to which the King of England had frequently signified his assent.

Mayence, 3rd June 1521.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

June 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 244.229. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

Was told by the Pope that the entry of the French troops into Navarre, and their blockade of Pampeluna, had been confirmed by his Nuncio in France. The King of England would now be unable to mediate between the Emperor and King Francis, because matters had advanced too far.

* Scil., the mediation of King Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolsey.

1521.

Dated 3rd June. Registered by Sanuto, 13th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 261.

230. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Mons. d'Aubigni has arrived from Scotland, and Mons. de Marigny, late ambassador in England, has been replaced by Mons. de la Bâtie. Dijon, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

June 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 216.

231. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Yesterday morning Nicolò Tiepolo, LL.D., ambassador elect to England, announced in the College that as the motion for him to receive 120 ducats monthly salary in England could not be put, he declined the embassy.

[Italian.]

June 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 223.

232. FRANCESCO CORNARO.

Report of England made by him in the Senate, on returning from his embassy to the Emperor Charles V.

On the 20th of May 1520 the Emperor embarked at Corunna with some 40 ships, crossed the bay of Biscay, and on the 27th landed at Dover, and conferred with the King and Queen of England.*

The reigning King is about 30 years old; has a very handsome face and a well-proportioned body, is sage, learned (virtuoso), gracious, and endowed with every excellent accomplishment (virtù). He has an only daughter, about five years old, who is married to the Dauphin, the son of the King of France.

The government is exclusively in the hands of the Cardinal of York, who is from 45 to 50 years old, hale, and of good presence, but proud and very choleric. He rules the entire kingdom, and may be considered King so far as its administration is concerned.†

The annual surplus revenue of the Crown exceeds 500,000 ducats, so the King is supposed to be very rich, and to have increased what was left him by his father, although he is said to have spent 3,000,000 of gold in the war against France, besides a considerable sum at the interview with King Francis. Notwithstanding, he is supposed to have more ready money than any sovereign in Christendom.

This is as much as I could learn of the kingdom of England during the few days of my stay there.

On the last day of May [1520] we quitted the island, and disembarked in Zealand on the 1st of June.

[Italian.]

* I omit the commencement of this account of England, because it corresponds with Quirini's report made to the Senate on the 10th of October 1506, which is printed in Alberi's Collection of Venetian Reports, series I. vol. I. p. 18; edit. Florence, 1839.

† Then follow paragraphs copied from Quirini, a proof that for the composition of similar papers the diplomatists of Venice condescended occasionally to use a "crib."

1521.

June 1-6.

233. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 293.

Arrival of Paiton [sic, Montpésat] from the King of France. Has spoken with him. He is returning to France, and says that King Henry had not taken amiss the capture of Pampeluna, but would mediate to prevent war. With this message he returns to France. The Emperor has empowered King Henry to make terms, but Cardinal Wolsey is dissatisfied, and the King has made no effort to induce King Francis to place himself in his hands, because he wishes to decide about the Emperor's coronation and his coming into Italy.

The truce with Scotland has been concluded and signed, on which account the ambassadors of Scotland are coming to London to negotiate the peace there. The French ambassador in England has promised not to give this charge (capitulation) to the French, in order that they [the Scottish ambassadors] may come, and thus give repute to King Henry.

Conversations with Cardinal Wolsey and the French ambassador about these disputes. The King would never endure war between the Emperor and King Francis, and would reconcile them. Mons. de la Bâtie is expected with the reply of King Francis.

Artillery is being shipped for conveyance to Calais. Beyond seas [i.e., at Calais] there are other movements, some say to do honour to the Emperor on his coming; others on account of Terouenne, it seeming indeed that there are Imperial troops in that neighbourhood.

London, 1st, 3rd, and 6th June. Registered by Sanuto, 27th June.

[Italian.]

June 8.

234. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 261.

Was told by King Francis he had received letters from the King of England and the Cardinal, announcing their wish to arbitrate between him and the Emperor, and that the Cardinal would go to Calais to pass sentence.

Although the Emperor sent the power of attorney, King Francis would not make any compromise, having already proved his rights, though should the King of England choose to act as a friendly pacificator, he (King Francis) would be well satisfied. This reply he gave by word of mouth and in writing to the English ambassador [Jerningham], and said he rejected the mediation, because Cardinal Wolsey had said he would "pass sentence," whereas no sentence was needed where matters are clear.

Was told by Madame [Louise of Savoy] that the English ambassador had spoken to her as above, and she referred him to King Francis, knowing he would not accept the arbitration.

Dijon, 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

June 10.

235. The SAME to the SAME.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 293.

Mons. Poisam,* who was sent by King Francis to substantiate his charges against the Emperor to King Henry, has returned from England. He brings back word King Henry will mediate and has received the Emperor's assent to this effect.

* Anthony des Prez, Sieur de Montpesat. In "State Papers," vol. VI., part v. p. 77, the name is written "Mountpeyssard." 1521.

Dijon, 10th June. Registered by Sanuto, 27th June.

[Italian.]

June 13.

236. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 323.

Communicated to Cardinal Wolsey the letters relative to the agreement touching the affairs of the Friuli made through the intervention of Jacomo Florio. The Cardinal was glad such an agreement had been made, and that during this interval the Signory's subjects were secured against war. With regard to the news from Syria, he said he rejoiced to hear that Gazeli was resuscitated. Touching the disputes between the most Christian King and the Emperor, he said they were expecting the assent of King Francis to the appointment of King Henry as the arbitrator; that he (Wolsey) meant them to submit all their disputes, and the compromise to be general; and that the King of England will be hostile to the party which shall refuse to act thus.

The French ambassador told him (Surian) that King Francis will never assent; that he would indeed acknowledge the King of England as a friendly mediator, but not as an arbitrary judge.

Has spoken with Secretary Pace about the artillery sent by the King across the Channel. He said it was merely for the purpose of supplying the King's towns beyond seas.

The capture of Martin Luther has not proved true. The King is at Richmond, and will not come to Greenwich on account of the pestilential fever which is very rife there, and also here in London.

Beseeches the State to despatch his successor.

London, 13th June. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd July.

[Italian.]

June 14.

237. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxx. p. 293.

The most Christian King, on hearing the message brought by Mons. de Paitom [sic, Montpésat] from England, seems content to place himself in the hands of King Henry, not as a judge, but as a friend and mediator (amico compositor). He has despatched one of the English ambassadors who were here to the Emperor's Court* to see whether the latter is willing to grant three demands: the tribute due for the kingdom of Naples; homage for Flanders; the King of Navarre to retain his kingdom as stipulated heretofore. The ambassador departed with these instructions, and will return in ten days.

Dated 14th June. Registered by Sanuto, 27th June.

[Italian.]

* The English ambassadors at this time in France were Sir Richard Jernegan and Sir William FitzWilliam. Neither of them repaired to Germany at this time, but they dispatched Richmond Herald to the Imperial Court with instructions for Sir Richard Wyngfield, the English ambassador there. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, III., No. 1,331.)

1521.

June 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 12.238. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sir William [Fitzwilliam], who went as ambassador to France, has returned with the announcement that King Francis will not grant any further power of compromise, but merely promises on his royal word to abide by what the King of England shall dictate.

The French ambassador likewise has been to Cardinal Wolsey on this business; they send Fitzwilliam back to France; and Mons. de Matregni [sic, Marigny], the French ambassador here, is also going, to put the finishing stroke to the conclusion of the compromise, for a considerable French force is in the duchy of Luxemburg, as likewise Imperial troops, and they would fain make truce between the sovereigns, but there are two difficulties,—France will not make truce, and continue to incur the present vast expenditure, nor has she assurance that the Emperor will be satisfied with the award of the King of England.

London, 18th June. Registered by Sanuto, 9th July.

[Italian.]

June 19.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 23.
St. Mark's
Library.239. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Congratulated the Chancellor on the reported retreat of the French from Navarre, as it might facilitate the adjustment between the Emperor and France.

The Chancellor replied,—“Such is my belief: and what makes us hope that the intelligence may be true is that, as you know, some days ago, so long back as when we were at Worms, the King of England sent an ambassador to the Emperor, requesting permission to mediate for peace between his Majesty and France.

“The Emperor made answer, that although he had been much outraged by the King of France,—who moreover favoured his enemies, such as Dom Robert de la Mark, whom he (the Emperor) meant to punish as a rebellious vassal,—nevertheless, to show the world his wish for peace, he was willing to accept the mediation of the King of England.

“The King of France made a reply at variance with that of his Imperial Majesty, for he told the King of England that the Emperor having proclaimed war against him (King Francis), he had raised an army of 40,000 foot and 4,000 spears, and did not think he could come to any agreement; saying, that if it were in his power he would deprive the Emperor of all his realms, expecting to find the Archduke of Burgundy in as lowly a plight as he was during many years. But now the King of France seems to have changed his mind, and tells the King of England that he is ready to make terms with the Emperor, urging Cardinal Wolsey to cross the Channel for a conference with his Imperial Majesty,—a proof that he has been disappointed in his projects.”

The Chancellor said there was no question of a meeting between the King of England and the Emperor; the latter was to confer with Cardinal Wolsey alone.

The Chancellor also said that the appearance of the Emperor's forces on the banks of the Tronto was caused by a statement which 1521.

the King of France made to the King of England, implying an intended attack on the kingdom of Naples. The departure of the Emperor from Brussels for Ghent was to be delayed until the decision of the King of England should be known with regard to the mission of Cardinal Wolsey to the Imperial Court.

Brussels, 19th June 1521.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

June 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 22.

240. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

King Henry and Cardinal Wolsey have sent Sir William Fitzwilliam again to France, but he did not depart until late yesterday. King Henry desires to mediate between the Emperor and King Francis, and on Fitzwilliam's return will send three ambassadors, namely, Dom. John , the Rev. Agiense [Bishop of Ely?], and the Lord Chamberlain [the Earl of Worcester], first to the Emperor, and then to King Francis, to induce them to come, the one to Gravelines, and the other to Gades (sic). Cardinal Wolsey is to cross to Calais, where he will endeavour to adjust their disputes, though of this the French ambassador [De la Bâtie] in London said nothing.

Should Cardinal Wolsey cross the Channel, will accompany him. Requests, therefore, that his successor may be despatched, to prevent the necessity for his own return to England.

The Bishop Avengiense [Silvester de' Gigli, Bishop of Worcester?] is dead; his see, worth 2,000 ducats, has been conferred on * London, 23rd June. Registered by Sanuto, 10th July.

[Italian.]

June 24.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 27.

241. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The day before yesterday Sir Richard Wyngfeld departed on his way to England. Does not know the cause of so sudden a departure, but supposes it is to urge Cardinal Wolsey to come to the Emperor.

Brussels, 24th June 1521.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

June 26.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 29.

442. The SAME to the SAME.

Receipt of letters from England. Nothing is said about them,—a proof their contents disappointed the Imperialists. Had they good news or fair hopes from the King of England, they would be unable to keep such to themselves, but proclaim their intelligence for reputation's sake, as customary with them.

Brussels, 26th June 1521.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

June 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 10.

243. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Has visited King Francis, who was occupied with his usual field sports. His Majesty spoke about Monsr. Poinol [sic, Montpésat], who went ambassador to England and has now returned, as also has the English ambassador [Fitzwilliam], who had come to request the King to authorize King Henry to compromise the disputes between his Majesty and the Emperor. King Francis replied that he would not give any power to compromise, but that the King of England might adjust the disputes as a friendly mediator.

* De' Gigli died 16th April 1521. Cardinal Julius de' Medici was made administrator of the see by the Pope, and resigned that office in 1522.

1521.

—, 29th June. Registered by Sanuto, 9th July.

[Italian.]

July 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 74.

244. SETTING OF THE MIDSUMMER WATCH.

Letter from Lodovico Spinelli, Secretary of the Venetian Ambassador in England, to his brother Gasparo, Secretary of the Venetian Ambassador in France.

I will describe the pageant performed by the Londoners on the eves of St. John and St. Peter, for the ceremony on both occasions was the same; * nor do I believe that anywhere else in the world a similar mark of rejoicing is usual.

This entertainment lasted from 11 p.m. until 2 in the morning, and was conducted as follows:

First came some 15 men all in armour, with cressets,† followed by drummers with a very tall canvas giant, armed with bow, arrows, sword, and buckler, so constructed that he turned about from side to side, looking in every direction.

After this company marched 300 archers, all in armour cap-à-pie.

Then came another band of musicians with 50 pikemen, also armed in like manner in steel armour, and they were followed by a band of halberdiers also armed.

Next came another band of musicians, with 50 men and naked boys dyed black like devils,‡ with the dart and buckler in their hands, goading the followers of Pluto, who was on a pulpit under a canopy seated on a serpent that spat fire; he himself being naked, with a drawn sword in his hand so contrived that, when he brandished it, it made the serpent vomit very fetid sulphuric fire-balls: and on the pulpit in front of Pluto were figures of an ox, a lion, and some serpents.

Another band of steel-clad halberdiers marched next, preceding all the Prophets, with the tree of life § sprouting from the belly of a recumbent male figure, and by certain mechanism the Prophets turned about from one side to the other.

They were followed by a band of halberdiers, next to whom came a platform on which was a castle accompanied by musicians, and within it some armed men, who as they moved caused the draw-bridges to fall and rise, and on the walls were men standing with

* "One-half, to the amount of one hundred and twenty, went out on the eve of Saint John and the other half on the eve of St. Peter." (See Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 361.)

† The cresset was a large lanthorn fixed at the end of a long pole, and carried upon a man's shoulder.

‡ Among the items for the Chester pageant on St. John's eve were "sixteen naked boys." (See Strutt's Introduction, p. xliii.)

§ Tree of Jesse? The words in the original are—"dove era l'albore de la vita cum tutti li propheta, qual usciva del ventre de uno che giacea," etc. A very spirited and highly finished illumination by Giulio Clovio, representing the subject of the Tree of Jesse, is in the possession of A. H. Layard, Esq., M.P.

1521

stones in their hands for its defence against a Turkish horseman in pursuit, armed with a very long tin sword tinged with blood, who terrified those within, shouting in English ["wo be" ?].

Then came another band of halberdiers, followed by choristers on foot in white surplices, who preceded a stage on which was a very beautiful little girl under a canopy of brocade, representing the Virgin Mary, with four boys, also in white surplices, chanting "lauds." This canopy was covered with canvas painted red and artistically arranged, falling in festoons from the summit of the canopy to the ground.

Next came a band of halberdiers with a stage, on which was Saint George, in armour, choking a big dragon and delivering Saint Margaret.

Then followed a company dancing the morris dance, preceding a fine band of the city constables in armour with doublets of silk and cloth of gold and [gold] chains; and the mayor in armour on horseback clad in crimson damask, with his sword-bearer in armour before him, according to the custom here,—for he is never wont to go abroad unless preceded by the sword,—and with the two sheriffs on horseback, in armour, but with crimson surcoats, two pages, likewise on horseback, carrying their helmets. There were also some musketeers and a great number of torch-bearers.

Next came a band of halberdiers, behind whom, on a pulpit, was the isle of Patmos with Saint John the Evangelist and some towers, from one of which he was leaning, and beneath were two little boys.

Another band of halberdiers followed, with musicians and a stage, on which was Herod at table, with Herodias' daughter, the tumbler, and the executioner who beheaded St. John the Baptist, who was represented as being in prison on the pulpit described above.*

Then came a band of some 2,000 halberdiers, all accompanied from first to last by cresset bearers, and when they had passed, the spectators of both sexes, who were in very great number, returned home. The inhabitants, being apprehensive lest, as usual, these armed men should raise some tumult, kept very strict watch throughout the city.†

From London, the 1st of July 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 24th July.

[Italian.]

* In the original "Et el spiculator che tagliò el capo a San Joanne qual ne le carcere se vedea sopra ditto pulpito."

† I have given this letter in full, because it contains particulars which are not to be found in Hall, Stow, or Strutt concerning the "Great Watches." It is possible that to counteract the effect of the lampoons posted at St. Paul's on the 12th May, the tumbling girl, Salome, may have played a more prominent part than usual on St. John's eve, to remind the Londoners of her mother Herodias, "for John had said unto Herod, it is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife." The appearance of the Prophets is not mentioned in any other account of similar pageants, but that these shows were rendered allusive to passing events, as well as to scriptural legends, may be inferred from the assault made by the Turkish horseman in Chepeside on the pasteboard Castle of Belgrade, which Sultan Solyman was then besieging in reality, and finally took in the month of August 1521, some six weeks after the "setting of this midsummer watch."

The last allusion in the Venetian despatches to the "Setting of the Midsummer Watches"

1521.

July 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 4.245. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

A new ambassador has arrived here from the King of England,* and urged King Francis to empower King Henry to make the compromise, as the Emperor was content to do so. King Francis is willing that King Henry should act as a friendly mediator, but not as an arbitrator.

Dijon, 1st of July. Registered by Sanuto, 8th July.

[Italian.]

July 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 35.246. The SAME to the SAME.

The ambassador from the King of England has gone back to England with the reply received from his most Christian Majesty.†

Argilly, 2nd July. Registered by Sanuto, 15th July.

[Italian.]

July 2.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 32,
St. Mark's
Library.247. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On 20th June the King of Denmark arrived at Antwerp with nine ships. It is maintained that he is come in order to join the Emperor against France, and that, besides the nine vessels now at Antwerp, there are others on the way with infantry. But the opinion that he is come on a mere visit seems the more credible, as no rejoicings have been made at Brussels.

There is no news from England. Affairs in that quarter appear to have cooled exceedingly.

Brussels, 2nd July 1521.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

July 4.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 33.248. The SAME to the SAME.‡

Yesterday the King of Denmark made his entry here, after dining midway between Mechlin and this place.

At about 5 p.m. the Emperor mounted on horseback, accompanied by us three ambassadors, namely, the Nuncio [Caracciolo], the envoy from England [Spinelli], and myself, we having received notice to this effect; all the princes, lords, and gentlemen of the Court having likewise assembled with their attendants, numbering some 600 horse.

is by Giovanni Michiel, in a letter dated at Richmond on 9th July 1555, thus:—"In London, which is the fountain-head of lies and popular disturbances, a great stir was made on occasion of the pageants performed by the people on the festivals of St. John and St. Peter. The populace had conspired to rise and come hither to the Court in arms; but the Lords of the Council, having received notice of this project, forbade the show, and imprisoned several of the ringleaders."

In Hall's Chronicle (p. 756, ed. 1809) it is stated that the watches were "laied doune" in 1528; and in Machyn's Diary there is no notice of the suppressed riot of 1555.

* Sir William FitzWylliam. (See State Papers, vol. VI., part v. pp. 73, 74.)

† Fitzwilliam and Jernegan wrote a joint letter to Henry VIII. from Argilly on the 2nd of July, and were at Dijon on the 10th July; so Badoer was misinformed about their movements, as he himself states in the following despatch.

‡ Although this letter is not immediately connected with England, its contents are worth comparing with the account of Wolsey's entry into Bruges as described by Gasparo Contarini, date 16 August.

1521.

The Emperor wore a doublet of figured cloth of silver, and took to horse in the park, where we were awaiting him, and there made a slight personal display of horsemanship, performing sundry equestrian feats with much agility, thus eliciting universal applause. Then he proceeded to meet the King of Denmark, riding well nigh a distance of six Italian miles.

The King of Denmark came on a common cart,* such as the natives of the neighbouring cities of Antwerp, Ghent, &c. employ for travelling purposes; he sat quite by himself, all his attendants being on horseback.

When they arrived at the distance of an arbalest shot one from the other, the Emperor halted, the spot chancing to be a broad meadow, and the King of Denmark descended from the cart and mounted a hackney.

His Danish Majesty wore a doublet of black satin, with a black cloth cape in the Spanish fashion, and on his head was a black velvet cap with a pendent pearl.

The horsemen having then formed a double line, the Emperor and the King rode along it, spurring towards each other. When the Emperor motioned to dismount, the King of Denmark anticipated him, and was first on foot, the Emperor following his example. They then embraced cap in hand.

On resuming their bonnets the "Audencier"† acted as interpreter, and the usual compliments were exchanged, the Emperor speaking French, and the King of Denmark German.

From what he (Contarini) understood, the King said, amongst other things, that from his intense desire to see the Emperor he had not scrupled to traverse 100 German leagues incognito, passing through an enemy's country. He then made great offers of service, which the Emperor reciprocated becomingly, the conversation lasting nearly a quarter of an hour, after which they remounted their horses, the halt having been of such duration that the ambassadors and some of the other personages had time to present their respects to the King and to kiss his hand.

Proceeding onwards, the Emperor wanted to place the King on his right hand, to which he would, however, never consent; nay, as a mark of respect, he chose to ride at a little distance, somewhat in the rear, which the Emperor constantly perceiving, waited for him, and rode by his side; and they talked together without an interpreter.

They entered Brussels half an hour after sunset by the light of innumerable torches, bonfires blazing in the streets, the houses being illuminated, and decorated with tapestry and cloths of silk, flowers, and foliage, as marks of rejoicing.

With this pomp the King of Denmark was escorted to the lodging assigned him, viz., the palace of the Count of Nassau, at a short distance from that of the Emperor. On passing the Imperial palace, the King urged the Emperor strongly not to accompany him any farther, but the Emperor insisted on riding with him into the courtyard of the Nassau palace.

* "Veniva sopra uno charo positivo."

† Audencier Haneton. See State Papers, vol. I., p. 22.

1521.

This evening (4th July) the Emperor gave a banquet to the King, and went to conduct him from his dwelling. On entering the banqueting hall together they were met at the door by the Lady Margaret and by the Queen widow of Aragon [Germaine de Foix], whom the King kissed in the French fashion; and after some conversation the four sat down to supper alone.

After supper there was an entertainment, and both their Majesties commenced dancing with the young gentlewomen. "And even now, at this second hour of the night, it is still in progress; young sovereigns such as these not tiring themselves easily."

Describes the King of Denmark, as follows:—"He is from 36 to 40 years old; his countenance indicates gravity and spirit;* he wears his beard curled in the Italian fashion, and not like the Germans; his hair likewise being wavy, rather than straight. He is of ordinary stature, rather tall than short, and well proportioned, neither spare nor corpulent."

He came by land, and not with his ships as reported by the Imperialists; his retinue consisting but of six individuals. They travelled post. The Chancellor assured him (Contarini) that the King rode 200 German leagues in 12 days, and performed half the journey incognito, traversing an enemy's country. According to report the Emperor will make use of him in the present war, by reason of his skill in military matters.

Brussels, 4th July 1521.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

July 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 71.

249. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Told by the French ambassador [De la Bâtie] that Cardinal Wolsey complained of King Francis' first reply; that he so long delayed answering, and had marched his army into Castille, and was under Logroño. The ambassador had justified King Francis, saying he had not entered Castille, and was willing that King Henry should act as mediator; so that Cardinal Wolsey was pacified.

The Emperor has apparently requested King Henry to confer with him at Calais; and the King answered he would send Cardinal Wolsey to act in his name.

Wishes to return home, and requests that an ambassador may be elected in his stead.

Arrival in London of an envoy [Haneton] from the Emperor. The Emperor will not compromise, unless the King of France first surrenders the kingdom of Navarre; being apprehensive that as France has conquered it, King Henry may say nothing more about its restitution. Therefore his Majesty has sent back Sir Richard [Wyngfeld] to the Emperor.

Dated 4th July. Registered by Sanuto, 24th July.

[Italian.]

* "Monstra in la faccia gravità, et vivacità."

1521.

July 5.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 34.

250. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On that morning asked the Chancellor [Gattinara] what news he had from the King of England, as he has influence with both the Emperor and the King. The Chancellor replied:—

"The King of England wished to make peace, and has great authority with the Emperor, but not to the extent of inducing him to consent to a disgraceful agreement. Before the loss of Navarre the Emperor was willing to accept arbitration, but he cannot do so now, unless the King of France restore that kingdom, and make compensation for the damage done in Castille. The King of England is bound by the treaty to succour the Emperor, and we trust he will abide thereby, and declare for us; though should he not do so the Emperor is able to stand alone."

As the Chancellor spoke rather coldly, infers the Imperialists will receive no assistance from England; and such also was the belief of some of the courtiers.

Brussels, 5th July 1521.

[Italian, 7 pages.]

July 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 1.

251. ANTONIO GRIMANI to HENRY VIII.

Announces the demise of Doge Leonardo Loredano. His own constant exertions, made for the benefit of the public service, have caused the State to consider him fit to rule. Although unequal to so high a post, yields to the opinion of the Senate, relying on divine providence, and causes this notification to be made to his Majesty as a mark of his (the Doge's) singular love and respect.*

Signed: Anto. Grimanus Dei gratia Dux Venetiarum.

Datae in nostro Ducali Palatio die 6 Julij 1521.

[Latin.]

July 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. 86.

252. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Reply from France arrived, charging the French ambassador to tell Cardinal Wolsey, and subsequently King Henry, that King Francis will not agree to the compromise, as it is contrary to his honour, nor is it upon record that any King of France ever made a compromise; that the Emperor took one of his castles which was held by Robert de la Mark, and was therefore the first aggressor; that King Francis will send a herald to King Henry urging him, according to the articles of agreement, to act against the first invader, and, as the Emperor invaded the French dominions first, King Henry is either to oppose him or not interfere.

The French ambassador says Cardinal Wolsey hesitated on hearing this reply, and then said, "Exactly so: in the first place it must be ascertained who was the first invader, and the compromise made accordingly."

The French ambassador is of opinion Cardinal Wolsey will go to Calais, and perhaps to King Francis, but the latter will never assent to the compromise. The Cardinal would wish a truce to be made. King Francis has three armies in the field, one in Navarre, the second in Luxemburg, with Robert de la Mark, and the third in Picardy ; so that he (Wolsey ?) has written to the King to know whether he will make this compromise.*

* In the original the missive runs thus:— "Majestati vestrae ex officio singularis amoris et observantiae nostrae erga illam declaranda curavimus." In date 26th September 1521 it will be seen that Secretary Pace objected to the omission of the word "vale," which, however, was not used in the letters whereby Doge Grimani announced his accession to Leo X., Charles V., Francis I., and other potentates.

1521.

News received in London of the arrival at the Emperor's Court of the King of Denmark, with five attendants, for the purpose of commanding the Imperial army ; a bad return to the King of France, who for two years assisted him with money, &c. against his enemies.

Should Cardinal Wolsey cross the Channel with the ambassadors, he (Surian) will accompany him, and that will be the third time of his making the passage.

London, 6th July. Registered by Sanuto, 29th July.

[Italian.]

July 6.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 39.

253. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Spoke yesterday to King Francis, who told him he had written to the King of England about this stir made against him (King Francis) by the Pope, for whose support the Emperor was sending 300 spears into Italy, according to the treaty, in virtue of which the Pope gives him the investiture of the kingdom of Naples. The Emperor promised the Pope two galleys and the 300 spears, and 7,000 ducats per annum as tribute for the kingdom of Naples. The Emperor had moreover promised him Ferrara, Lucca, Parma, and Piacenza. King Francis said the Pope had done this because he had not obtained Ferrara, and added, "We promised the Pope to restore Modena and Reggio to him according to the articles of agreement, and this was not enough for him."

The English ambassador [Fitzwilliam] had not departed, but sent a gentleman with the reply of King Francis.

Argilly, 6th July. Registered by Sanuto, 15th July.

[Italian.]

July 9.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 86,
St. Mark's
Library.

254. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Emperor having summoned him on that morning to the palace, he there met the Papal Nuncio, and the English ambassador, Spinelli. In the presence of the Emperor, the Chancellor, and the Bishop of Palencia, the Nuncio, in the name of Leo X., announced an attack made by the French on Reggio, on the 23rd of June, and requested aid from the Emperor, and that he would communicate the circumstance to the other Christian powers, that they also might render assistance, and especially to the King of England, the Emperor's good friend and kinsman, who had ever been most closely linked with the Church. The Nuncio gave similar notice to the Venetians, and requested them, by virtue of their truce and peace with the Emperor, not to interfere or favour France, as the Pope meant to defend himself, and that they would allow the posts to pass through their territory.

* "Si che a scritto al Re s'il vol far ditto compromesso."

1521.

The Emperor told him in reply that he understood the Pope's message, and would not fail to render such assistance to the Church as became a good Christian; and then turning towards the English ambassador, he said:—

"Domine orator, you have heard distinctly what the Nuncio said. Write the whole to your King, and intreat that, as our good friend and confederate, it may please him to declare himself in favour of the Church, as we hope he will."

To him (Contarini) the Emperor added, "And do you, domine orator, tell the Signory, in consideration of the good friendship and truce existing between us, to allow the posts to and fro between this and Rome, and which will be frequently on the road, to have passage, and not to give assistance to the French."

Answered discreetly, expressing his belief that the Signory, as a lover of peace, and entertaining vast respect for the Pope and the Emperor, would do nothing of which either of them could have just cause to complain.

The English ambassador made a very violent reply, saying that his King would regret to hear this, and that in a few days the Emperor would see him make a demonstration; adding, "These Frenchmen want to rule the universe."

Spinelli's words were of little weight, because, independently of his professing to be a thorough Imperialist (for the sake of finding favour with the Emperor), he is intrusted with but little business of importance, the King of England transacting such through other channels, as seen by the mission confided to another ambassador [Sir Richard Wyngfeld], who departed and is to return; and moreover a few days ago the Emperor sent an envoy of his own to England, namely, the audiencier Dom. Zuan Analt (sic),* whose advices are awaited, no news having been received thence.

Brussels, 9th July 1521.

[Italian, 5½ pages.]

July 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 156.

255. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

On the 22nd June received despatches from the State with the newsletters about Hungary and Constantinople. Was not able to communicate them to Cardinal Wolsey until this morning [11th July]. After reading the summaries to the Cardinal, thanked him for the good offices which he promised to employ on behalf of the Signory at Calais, according to the will of his King. The Cardinal made answer, first of all, that he was utterly devoted to the State, and would act in her favour. He then said, with regard to the summaries, "These newsletters from Hungary are fabulous; this is what the Signory does invariably whenever any congress of sovereigns is about to take place;" the Spanish ambassador in London* having said that the intelligence was not credible. Rejoined that the Signory wrote the truth, and was anxious for the peace of Christendom, adding other expressions which the Cardinal resented. Perceived that the intelligence displeased him, and that he would not listen to it, nor would he wish the King to know it, being intent on going to Calais. Offered to accompany him, but the Cardinal would not accept the proposal until he had spoken to the King on his return from his diversions. Said that he (Surian) himself would go to the King. The Cardinal desired him not to interrupt the royal amusements.

* Qu., Philip Haneton, Audiencier to Charles V. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, Vol. III. Nos. 1393-1395.) John Hannart was the Emperor's secretary.

1521.

Having heard by private letters of the Doge's death,* announced it to the Cardinal, who praised the Doge much, calling him "a saint."

London, 11th July. Registered by Sanuto, 9th August.

[Italian.]

July 11.

256. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 157.

The French ambassador sent his secretary to announce that he had complained to Cardinal Wolsey that the Emperor had invaded the duchy of Milan by means of the exiles; and that had it not been for the Venetian troops and the friends of King Francis the duchy would have been lost. That the Emperor was sending the Duke of Bari across the Alps for its invasion. That the truce had been first violated by the Emperor, and not by the King of France. Cardinal Wolsey was apparently surprised and well nigh offended at the aid given by the State to Milan, because had this not been the case, King Francis would have more readily consented to the agreement, but he (Wolsey) still wished the truce to be made for two months. The French ambassador replied that his King would not consent to a truce, which would enable the Emperor to prepare for war; for thus did France lose the kingdom of Navarre. The Cardinal, however, is preparing to cross over to Calais.

According to report, the King of Denmark has promised his brother-in-law, the Emperor, ten ships and his personal services, saying that he is unable to give him more.

London, 11th July. Registered by Sanuto, 9th August.

[Italian.]

July 13.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 38,
St Mark's
Library.

257. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

On the 10th, when on the point of following the Emperor to Antwerp, was seized with ague, and therefore sent his secretary instead to obtain the news of the Court.

On that evening (the 13th) the secretary came back, and reported that Sir Richard Wyngfeld, who went post from Brussels to England, had returned. It seems that, on behalf of his King, he has had audience of the Emperor, and besought him to make truce with France, and to refer the affair of Navarre to arbitration. To this the Emperor apparently made answer that in all matters he would gratify his Majesty, save in this, it being his intention to settle his disputes with the King of France by force of arms.

The Imperialists have small hopes of the King of England, who they expect will remain neutral, and not favour either party.

Brussels, 13th July 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

* Doge Leonardo Loredano died on the 22nd of June 1531, at the age of 84, as stated in Sanuto's Diaries.

1521.

July 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 45.258. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Proclamation in the Senate of the scrutiny made for an ambassador to England in the stead of Nicolò Tiepolo, LL.D., who had declined.

Eighteen candidates having been proposed, the choice fell on Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., who has not canvassed much, like the others.

	Ayes.	Noes.
Lodovico Falier - - - -	113	95
Marco Contarini - - - -	99	108
Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., proveditor for the offices - - - -	126	79
Leonardo Venier, late " auditor vecchio " -	57	146
Marco Gradenigo, LL.D., late of the Senate -	65	145
Lorenzo di Priuli - - - -	78	126
Giovanni Basadonna, LL.D., late of the Senate -	80	129
Carlo Capello, late " auditor novo " -	73	133
Francesco Morosini, LL.D., - - - -	65	138
Andrea di Priuli, LL.D. - - - -	63	139
Silvestro Memo, late of the " Raxon vechie " -	73	140
Mafio Lion, late " avogador di comun " -	104	109
Agustin da Cha da Pesaro, late " auditor novo " -	75	132
Hirolamo Polani, LL.D., late of the Senate -	86	129
Nicolò da Ponte, LL.D., late of the Senate -	80	134
Marco Antonio Grimani - - - -	65	147
Anzolo Gabriel - - - -	80	131
Bertuzi Soranzo, late " auditor vecchio " -	77	134

[Italian.]

July 15.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 3.259. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in HUNGARY.

Received his letter, together with those from the King of Hungary addressed to the Pope and other Kings and Princes, concerning the important preparations of the Turk against him.

Have written to the Pope, to the Emperor, to the Kings of France and England, and to the Cardinal de' Medici at Florence, and will do their utmost with the sovereigns above mentioned.

Ayes, 188. Noes, 8. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

July 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 68.260. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Has communicated the advices received from the Signory to King Francis, who told him that the King of England will act as mediator; wherefore King Francis will send three personages to Calais, the Lord Chancellor [Duprat], Mons. de la Palisse, and the President De Selva, with the secretary. The Emperor will send the Chancellor [Gattinara], Mons. De Berghes, and one of his auditors [Haneton?] with the secretary. Cardinal Wolsey proceeds thither in the name of the King of England. In the meanwhile there will be a suspension of hostilities for three weeks. Has spoken with the Chancellor [Duprat], who confirmed the statement made by the King; and said the parties would merely investigate whether the articles stipulated at Noyon had been observed. This account was corroborated by Madame.

1521.

King Francis has also written to the King of England, complaining of what the Pope has done, and awaits his reply.

Dijon, 15th July. Registered by Sanuto, 24th July.

[Italian.]

July 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 73.

261. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

With regard to England, King Francis told me today that the three delegates will depart tomorrow for Calais, to conclude a truce for a month and a half; and they will be at Calais in three days.

Dijon, 16th July. Registered by Sanuto, 24th July.

[Italian.]

July 16.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 41,
St. Mark's
Library.

262. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The French envoy accredited to the King of Denmark is negotiating zealously for peace on behalf of the King of France. The King of England, Monsr. de Montagni [Count of Hoochstrate], and the Lady Margaret also exert themselves warmly to this effect; the latter, at the instigation apparently of the King of France, proposing to arrange the affairs of the two Crowns by partitioning the Venetian territory.

Informed by a friend, who associated with the Nuncio, that he has seen the minute of a letter written to-day by the Nuncio to Rome, purporting that the Emperor informed the Pope that he must proceed to Italy, and that the King of England had not sufficient power to obtain either peace or truce; nor did he believe that the King of England could resuscitate the dead, implying that he considered the King of France disposed of; and that were the King of England compelled to declare himself, he would be in favour of him (the Emperor), and not of the King of France.

Antwerp, 16th July 1521.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

July 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 157.

263. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday Mons. de Montpésat, the French ambassador, returned from France, having come post haste to explain to King Henry and Cardinal Wolsey that the defeat which the Spaniards say they gave the French troops, killing 14,000 of them, was untrue, and that on the contrary, not a few Spaniards had been killed. He will confer with Cardinal Wolsey tomorrow, and, according to report, he brings the power authorizing King Henry to act as mediator; but of this the French ambassador [De la Bâtie] says he has no intelligence.

The envoys from the Pope and the Emperor [Ghinucci and De Mesa] have been together to the King, to acquaint him with the league and understanding formed between their masters. Everybody in London is astonished that after so close an alliance with France, the Pope should change sides so suddenly. The ambassadors aforesaid say the Signory likewise is with them ; so they vapour vastly against the most Christian King.

1521.

Understands that the Pope has sent bulls to Cardinal Wolsey, authorizing him to confer the benefices of England and to receive the annats, except those of the bishoprics,—a thing never before conceded to any other magnate (principe). It is said the Pope has done this because he wants to obtain Ferrara.

London, 18th July. Registered by Sanuto, 9th August.

[Italian.]

July 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 51.

264. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., ambassador elect to England, to sit in the Senate until his departure.

[Italian.]

July 20.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 44,
St. Mark's
Library.

265. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Last evening the Emperor received letters from England. He sent immediately for the Chancellor, who, although ill of gout, attended. Believes these letters relate to the agreement between the Emperor and France, and announce Cardinal Wolsey's intended passage across the Channel.

Forms this conjecture because the Chancellor is going immediately to Calais, with Mons. de Berghes, and the Cardinal is to be there, as also an ambassador from the King of France.

Ghent, 20th July 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

July 20.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 45,
St. Mark's
Library.

266. The SAME to the SAME.

Was informed on good authority of the arrival of a Franciscan friar accredited by the mother of the King of France to the Lady Margaret, requesting her mediation for peace between him and the Emperor on the following conditions: The King of France to renounce the kingdom of Navarre, and to make no farther claim to it; to acknowledge the Milanese as a fief from the Emperor, receiving its investiture; and finally to relinquish the tribute paid by the Emperor for the kingdom of Naples, provided he be permitted to take his revenge on the Pope for the treatment received from him.

The friar was answered immediately that the Emperor is perfectly willing to discuss the agreement and proposals concerning the kingdom of Navarre, the fief of the Milanese, and the Neapolitan tribute, but that with regard to allowing the King of France to take his revenge on the Pope, he knew not how to do so with honour, the Pope having made a demonstration in his favour.

On account of this proposal, a post has been despatched to England.

Adds that his informant asserts positively that the King of France requires the investiture of the Milanese to include Crema, 1521.

Bergamo, and Brescia. This appears improbable for several reasons, but leaves the State to form its opinion thereon.

Ghent, 20th July 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

July 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 86.

267. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

This morning the Chancellor and his colleagues departed on their way to Calais.

Dijon, 20th July. Registered by Sanuto, 29th July.

[Italian.]

July 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
p. xxxi. p. 157.

268. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Montpésat has been with King Henry and Cardinal Wolsey, and is returning post to France. He complained greatly of what the Pope had done, and is doing, against King Francis in the Milanese, and justified what the King had done at Reggio. He said that the Lord Chancellor [Duprat] and another personage were going to Calais, but that Cardinal Wolsey, not being well satisfied with the Chancellor, would prefer the Admiral [Bonnivet].

The departure [for Calais] is to take place on the 25th. The Cardinal is to be accompanied by four personages of account, (one of whom will be the Duke of Norfolk,) and some others, who in all will number 500 horse. The French ambassador is to go, but none of the other [ambassadors]; nor down to this present has anything been said to anyone. Is of opinion that the Cardinal will not choose him (Surian) to cross, because on asking his Lordship whether he had spoken to the King on the subject, he said "No," as he had been very much occupied. Has, however, made all his preparations for crossing with the Cardinal. Tomorrow purposes going to the Court to speak to the King on the subject.

Urges the appointment of his successor.

London, 22nd July. Registered by Sanuto, 9th August.

[Italian.]

July 23.

Contarini's
Letter Book,
Letter no. 46,
St. Mark's
Library.

269. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor is going to Bruges, and Cardinal Wolsey will proceed thither after his conference at Calais with the Imperial and French delegates.

Ghent, 23rd July 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

July 24.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 42.

270. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Put to the ballot that Marco Antonio Venier, ambassador elect to England, may sit in the Senate until his departure.

Ayes, 158. Noes, 4. Neutral, 1.

[Italian, 9 lines.]

July 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 125.

271. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Was told by King Francis that the Emperor's army was receiving reinforcements, of which he had complained to the King of England, as this was being done whilst the negotiation for truce was 1521.

on foot, saying that he was not afraid of the Emperor, and that he should have 10,000 Switzers under the command of Mons. de Longueville, who, although young, is of the blood royal, and Mons. de la Motte will be his lieutenant.

Dijon, 24th July. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd August.

[Italian.]

July 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 181.

272. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

King Henry had said to him, "The Signory has sent troops to aid the most Christian King against the exiles, and has violated the truce with the Emperor, for it is said the King of France attacked him first; so I must act against the first aggressor." Replied that the Signory had not violated the truce, even supposing them to have given assistance against the exiles in the Milanese, as they were bound by the truce. The King was satisfied with this explanation. He then said he should send the Cardinal to Calais to reconcile these two sovereigns; not to pass sentence as a judge, but as a friendly mediator. He thought it would be difficult to pacify them, but he would endeavour to make a temporary truce between them. He perceived an obstacle to the peace, because the Emperor would not marry the daughter of King Francis according to promise. King Henry then greatly extolled the power of the Emperor, who, by the death of Mons. de Chièvres, had obtained 600,000 ducats; and said the King of Denmark had gone to him. That King is apparently the enemy of the King of England; and the French ambassador had told him (Surian) that it is his intention to tell King Henry evil of the King of Denmark, who would wish the Emperor to attack him.

Prayed the King to charge the Cardinal at this conference to have at heart the interests of the Signory. The King said he would do so, by reason of the love which he himself, like his father bore the State; and asked whether the galleys were coming. Replied that, owing to these disturbances, he did not know. The King rejoined, "They must come; should the Signory choose, I will obtain an ample safeconduct from the Emperor." Then, when speaking about the Cardinal's journey to Calais, the King asked whether he (Surian) was going, and persuaded him by all means so do to. Replied that he was ready to obey his Majesty accordingly.

Letters had arrived in London from Ragusa, with advices that the Turk [Sultan Solyman] had quitted Safra (sic), so that in England they now believe the Signory's despatches. The Papal bull and brief did not concern the annats, but the rest was correct. Cardinal Wolsey is to depart on the 29th. The Duke of Norfolk does not go, but the Cardinal will be accompanied by the Lord Chamberlain, the Bishops of Durham and Ely, the Grand Prior Comendatary [of St. John's] of England [Sir Thomas Docwra], and the Master of the Rolls [Cuthbert Tunstall]. The Papal Nuncio and the French and Imperial ambassadors are also going, so that no ambassador remains in England. The French ambassador also told him that on every account it was well he should go.

A diet is being held in Flanders about certain disputes concerning the merchants. This morning the government sends thither Sir Thomas More, Dr. Sampson, and Dr. Chiut (sic.).

• 1521.

Dated 25th July. Registered by Sanuto, 12th August.

[Italian.]

July 27.

273. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 182.

Conversations with Cardinal Wolsey, who spoke to him in a high tone, to the same effect as the King had done, saying that the Signory had sent troops in aid of the King of France. Justified the Republic's pretensions. The Cardinal said the State ought not to have stirred, and then the King of France would have been more ready to make the agreement, &c. The Cardinal said he should cross the sea to Calais on the 29th, and would stipulate a truce, and desired him (Surian) to accompany him.

. It would have been well to have sent his successor. The Pope is sending a new ambassador to Calais.

London, 27th July. Registered by Sanuto, 12th August.

[Italian.]

July 29.

274. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 49,
St. Mark's
Library.

In consequence of the frequent mission of posts to and fro, between Ghent and England, and of the contradictory reports about peace,—it being also said that besides his other business Cardinal Wolsey would negotiate a marriage between the Lady Mary [of England] and the Emperor,—determined to visit the Nuncio [Caracciolo], as he receives constant advices from his colleague in England [Girolamo Ghinucci], who takes part in all the present consultations and is acquainted with everything.

Went to Caracciolo yesterday, and found with him the old English ambassador, the Florentine Spinelli, whose colleague Sir Richard Wyngfeld had departed on his way to meet Cardinal Wolsey at Calais.

The Nuncio said that the Cardinal had written to the Emperor requesting him to delay his departure from Ghent until he (Wolsey) should arrive at Calais, where he intended to be on Thursday or Friday next.

In reply to the good wishes expressed by him (Contarini) for the result of the conference both the envoys spoke unsatisfactorily. Omits the speech of Spinelli because, being a Florentine, and declaring himself a staunch Imperialist, he frequently in his language exceeds the bounds of propriety, though he would not, on this occasion, have expressed himself so strongly as he did against the King of France, or have maintained the justice of the Emperor's cause, unless he had some indication that his King inclined, or was on the point of inclining, towards the Emperor. Spinelli also said that before the war the Emperor consented to refer his disputes with France to the arbitration of England, but that the King of France refused, and did not communicate to the King of England his expedition against Navarre until on the eve of commencing it; showing thus that he did not trust him. Moreover, the King of France had violated the treaty stipulated between the three sovereigns, to the effect that all were to hold and enjoy their actual possessions, and that should any one of them commence hostilities the other two were to unite against him. Spinelli came to the conclusion his King would abide by the letter of the articles and adhere to the Emperor.

1521.

The Nuncio spoke with more reserve, and on the departure of Spinelli said, among other things, that although the King of England was urgent for peace, yet should the negotiations fail it was hoped he would adhere to the Pope, which would be tantamount to his joining the Emperor. He also remarked that, as talked of heretofore, there was another negotiation on foot for the marriage of the daughter of the King of England to the Emperor, and that, if it were effected, the King of France would then stand alone; nor did Caracciolo see how he could prevail.

Ghent, 29th July 1521.

[Italian, 7 pages.]

July 30.

275. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 50,
St. Mark's
Library.

Details a long conversation held by him with the Emperor's confessor, a Franciscan friar, in his monastery, who, at the suggestion of Contarini, spoke to the Emperor about the dread of Turkish invasion.* The result was announced by the confessor, as follows: "Domine orator, on Sunday I was a long while with the Emperor, in the presence of the Lady Margaret, and narrated to him what you told me, about the peril in which Hungary and all Christendom were placed by so serious a Turkish irruption, and that his Majesty ought to apply an opportune remedy. I then adroitly commenced speaking to him about peace and the advantages derivable thence.

"To the first point, the Emperor made answer that he had written to Austria and his other territories adjoining Hungary, ordering succour, both of cannon and infantry, and that he had done all he could for the moment, as it would be folly to lose his own for the sake of assisting his neighbour. My comment about peace, he answered thus: 'Who knows better than yourself, father, what I did, and how much I humbled myself to the King of France, in order to obtain peace? I now see that there is no other way to obtain a good peace than by force of arms.'"

To this the confessor said he rejoined, "Forgive me, sire! I will repeat to you what I told the Venetian ambassador,—and what I have moreover often said to your Majesty yourself,—namely, that you are endowed with every virtue, and have merely this defect, that with difficulty do you forget injuries; whereupon the ambassador remarked, that the forgiveness of injuries betokened magnanimity."

The Emperor answered me, smiling, "Don't suppose, father, that my heart is so hard that I reject peace; on the contrary, could I

* This Franciscan friar died at Valladolid on the 14th September 1522. He probably understood the character of Charles V. in his youth better than anybody. His name is not given by Gasparo Contarini, who, when recording his demise, wrote that "he left behind him the character of an excellent ecclesiastic." In his "Report," Contarini merely styles him "il frate di San Francesco." obtain a good, firm, and lasting peace, I would accept it; but the way to secure a good peace is to prepare oneself vigorously for war."

1521.

Commenced speaking about the King of England, and the confessor told him he understood the King was exerting himself to make peace between the two crowns, but concerning the treaty and marriage talked of at the Court, he said he knew nothing, and that if true it would be very important, as the King of England laid claim to Normandy. From his mode of answering perceived that the confessor really knew nothing about the matter, and coupling this with what the Nuncio said to him yesterday, does not believe that any treaty (the report of which he mentioned in his letter of the 27th) has been concluded between the Emperor and the King of England, although there has been some talk of it.

Ghent, 30th July 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Aug. 2.

276. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 179.

Was told by King Francis that the English ambassador [Sir William Fitzwilliam] urges him to make the truce, but he refuses, as it would be the ruin of the Italian expedition, because the Emperor will aid the Pope against France.

Nieli [Nolay?], 2nd August. Registered by Sanuto, 12th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 3.

277. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 51,
St. Mary's
Library.

At 12 o'clock last night the Emperor received news of the arrival of Cardinal Wolsey at Calais yesterday.

The Emperor will depart hence for Bruges on Monday, and has sent the Count of Cariati and many other gentlemen to meet the Cardinal.

The ministry at Ghent consider the treaty between the Emperor and the King of England concluded.

Ghent, 3rd August 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Aug. 3.

278. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 219.

On 29th July quitted London with the French ambassador [De la Bâtie]. Cardinal Wolsey was half a day's journey in advance, on account of lodgings. They remained two days at Canterbury, as it was not weather to put to sea, and having arrived at Dover on the 2nd, all embarked and made a very rough passage. They landed at Calais at 2 p.m. The Imperial ambassadors, namely the Lord Chancellor, Monsieur de Berghes, and an abbot, with 100 horse, have already made their entry. The Frenchmen are to arrive after dinner. Cardinal Wolsey wishes to make peace between these two crowns, and if unable to do so, will see if he can stipulate a truce, though it is said that the Emperor, who would have consented to it before his recovery of Navarre, will not do so now. There are also difficulties about the marriage of the Emperor to the daughter of King Francis. It is supposed that, having taken 1521.

Navarre, the Emperor will be content to surrender it to France. The pension for the kingdom of Naples, as it is a mere affair of money, will be quietly settled; with regard to the Neapolitan exiles, they will be allowed time, or their estates will be restored to them. Respecting the dependency of Flanders on the French crown, that will be counterbalanced by the investiture of Milan. There are, however, doubts of some secret understanding between the Pope and the Emperor, whereby the arrangement may be impeded.

Nothing is said of the Signory, except that they are reported to be French. Regrets not knowing how to act, as no letters from the State have reached him since the 22nd June. According to report, the truce will be stipulated. The Emperor, who would at first have agreed to one for eight months, seems now to reject the proposal, whereas King Francis is apparently willing to agree to it. The armies of the two sovereigns number some 50,000 men. The forces of the Emperor are very considerable. It is said he will go to Bruges, and should he not choose to assent to the truce, Cardinal Wolsey will perhaps go to see him, and receive presents and great honour. The Cardinal has already said that he means to go, as he is, it may be said, King. It is stated that King Francis will be content with the truce. At any rate, happen what may, the King of England does not desire war, remembering what the last one against France cost him, when he much diminished the treasure left by his father; nor is the country now in a very secure state, by reason of the Duke of Buckingham's plot.*

Calais, 3rd August. Registered by Sanuto, 20th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 239.

279. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Today Cardinal Wolsey gave a dinner to the Imperial ambassadors, and also to him. Had visited the Emperor's Chancellor [Gattinara], having known him last year when King Henry was at Canterbury. Received good greeting from him. At table Cardinal Wolsey spoke against the King of France to the Imperial ambassadors, leaning rather towards the Emperor.

News had been received of the capture by a French ship of an Imperial vessel within the jurisdiction of England.† The Cardinal immediately sent off four English ships from Calais to give chase and seize it. Moreover, a Frenchman has been captured, who with a line and plummet purposed measuring the walls of the town [of Calais], much to the displeasure of the Cardinal.

Whilst with the Cardinal to-day, the French ambassadors, namely, the Chancellor [Duprat], Mons. la Palisse, and another,‡ made their entry into Calais. The Cardinal sent the Lord Chamberlain and two others to meet them; and they were treated with much respect. Went to visit them. The Chancellor gave assurance of the 1521.

* "Poi le cose per il trattato dil Duchia di Bochingen non è ben segure."

† At the mouth of the Thames. (See letter from Pace to Wolsey, 27th August 1521, "State Papers," vol. i., p. 36.)

‡ John de Selve, Premier President of the Parliament of Paris.

goodwill which King Francis bore to the Signory, and promised to acquaint him (Surian) with the whole course of the negotiation.

Calais, 4th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. pp. 239-
240.

280. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Today, having been summoned on behalf of Cardinal Wolsey, found his Lordship with the Papal Nuncio [Ghinucci] and the Imperial and the French ambassadors.

The Cardinal said he had been sent here by his King, who having heard of the disputes between his nephew the Emperor and his brother the King of France, desired him, Wolsey, as his lieutenant, to make peace between them.

The Papal Nuncio commended this proceeding, saying however, that he had no commission from the Pope, but would write to him, and was certain he would be very well satisfied.

On behalf of the Imperialists the Chancellor [Gattinara] spoke of the injuries inflicted on the Emperor's subjects by the King of France, and said he had caused Robert de la Marck to rebel against the Emperor, and taken from him the kingdom of Navarre,—though by the grace of God it had been recovered,—besides wronging him in other ways; wherefore the Emperor would neither make peace nor truce, but required the King of England to act against France as the violator of the articles of the peace, of which the Emperor would furnish proof.

The French ambassadors then replied, the sage Chancellor [Duprat] saying, in well chosen terms, that if Gattinara's sovereign wished for war, it should be waged upon him briskly; and that if he chose peace, King Francis desired it heartily. Duprat declared that with regard to his King having instigated the Emperor's subjects to rebel, no letter from the King of France to that effect could be produced. The Imperialists said they had the letters; and when Duprat asked to see them, they said they would show them to Cardinal Wolsey alone; which words the Cardinal did not relish.

Duprat then proceeded, and, speaking of Robert [de la Marck], he said it was not true that King Francis had incited him; and touching the kingdom of Navarre, he said the articles of the peace warranted its invasion. He then charged the Emperor with having stirred up the Milanese exiles against the King's duchy of Milan, and with having urged the Pope to absolve him from the oath and promise made to the King of France about the marriage. Moreover, the Emperor had not paid the three years' tribute for the kingdom of Naples, nor acknowledged the suzerainty for the counties of Flanders and Artois. He had also taken a castle of the King's on the borders, pretending it belonged to Robert de la Marck. The French Chancellor concluded by saying that the Emperor should have either peace or war at his option.

Cardinal Wolsey then said he wished a truce to be made between them as a preliminary to the negotiation of peace, and adjourned the conference.

1521.

He (Surian) said nothing, because there was no time ; nor would he have known how to reply, having received no orders from the Signory. Cardinal Wolsey is assuredly going to the Emperor.

Calais, 5th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 180.

281. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Having received four letters from the State, went first to Madame [Louise.] Found her talking with the English ambassador, who was urging her to induce the King assent to the truce, as the Emperor had done. She did not answer, as on former occasions, but said, "Let the truce be proposed at Calais, and an answer will be given."

Artoin [Autun ?],* 5th August. Registered by Sanuto, 12th August.

[Italian.]

* Aug. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. pp. 239-
240.

282. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Told by Cardinal Wolsey that the Signory had engaged Francesco Maria, the ex-Duke of Urbino, and the Pope would take it amiss and oppose the State. The Cardinal said this was not the moment to stir, and the Republic should desist from war.

Rejoined that the Pope was the cause of these wars, and prevented the Emperor from making peace. The French ambassadors are inclined to peace, and the Imperialists are not.

The Emperor's Chancellor [Gattinara] said that the Turks were under Belgrade.

Calais, 6th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 244.

283. The SAME to the SAME.

Cardinal Wolsey repeated what he had said relative to Francesco Maria, ex-Duke of Urbino. Replied he knew nothing, and that Francesco Maria della Rovere was a Venetian nobleman, and at liberty to reside in the Venetian territory, as the Signory gave refuge to all exile-grandeess, as they did to Pope Leo and his brothers when their family was expelled from Florence ; but believed it to be untrue that the Signory encouraged the Duke to make war on the Pope, and recover his duchy. The Cardinal remained satisfied, and then said that, as the Imperial ambassadors declared they had no mandate, he meant to go to Bruges, and, by speaking with the Emperor, to obtain power to make a truce, although the French do not choose to have one. As for the reported betrothal of the daughter of his King [to the Emperor ?], he said it was untrue ; and that the Emperor was in the right about this marriage [with France], as the French Princess was an infant, and the Emperor chafed at having to wait for her, as he should be upwards of 30 years of age.*

* A letter from Sir William FitzWilliam of 6th August is dated at "Awcton." (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar.)

1521.

The Cardinal is to depart on the 10th instant. The French ambassadors will remain at Calais until his return, which will not be delayed beyond ten days. Is in doubt whether to go with him or remain.

Calais, 8th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 7.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 53,
St. Mark's
Library.

284. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor quitted Ghent for Bruges on the 5th, but not by the direct road, stopping at several intermediate places to hawk and hunt. This evening he is to enter Bruges. Cardinal Wolsey will not come until Saturday. Does not know what business he transacted at the conference. Is told that Surian has crossed the Channel with the Cardinal.

Reported at Bruges that on the coast of England a French vessel had captured a Biscayan ship, which fact greatly displeased Cardinal Wolsey, who has sent four armed barks to seize the Frenchman.

Bruges, 7th August 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Aug. 8.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 54,
St. Mark's
Library.

285. The SAME to the SAME.

Was told by the Nuncio that this morning the Emperor received letters from Calais, informing him that Cardinal Wolsey held a conference on the 6th with the Imperial and French ambassadors, there being likewise present the ambassadors from the Pope and the Signory. The Cardinal spoke much about peace between the two sovereigns. The Imperialists declared they had no commission concerning peace, alleging the injuries received by the Emperor from the King of France. The French ambassadors, on the other hand, defended the cause of their King, and stated that if the Emperor chose peace he would accept it willingly, but should the Emperor prefer war, the King of France would not fail to wage it vigorously. So nothing being settled, Cardinal Wolsey adjourned the meeting.

At Bruges the opinion is that the adjustment will not be effected, though it remains to witness the result of the visit of Cardinal Wolsey, for whose reception with honour preparations are already being made.

Bruges, 8th August 1521.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Aug. 8.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 146.

286. NEWS from ENGLAND.

Memorandum by Sanuto.

This morning the letters received on the preceding evening from the ambassador in England, having been deciphered, were read in the Senate. Will give their summary hereafter. Cardinal

* "Dicendo di le noze si diceva trattava con la fiola dil suo Re, non è vero; e di tal noze l'Imperador a raxom, per esser quella di Franza puta; e l'Imperador stridò aspetarla, haria più di 30 anni."

1521.

Wolsey was to cross the Channel, and Surian was making preparations to accompany him. From what Surian has heard, Cardinal Wolsey did not wish him to go.*

[Italian.]

Aug. 8.

287. GIOVANNI BADOER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 199.

King Francis informed him that Cardinal Wolsey had arrived at Calais, and that, on his conferring with the ambassadors, the Imperialists complained of his Majesty; whereupon the Cardinal told them that if they had no other commission it was a loss of time to meet at Calais. The King is of opinion that, should the agreement not be effected, the Cardinal will come to him.

Autun, 8th August. Registered by Sanuto, 16th August.

[Italian, extract.]

Aug. 8.

288. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 244.

Had conversed about Cardinal Wolsey's visit to Bruges with the French Chancellor [Duprat], who said that his own stay at Calais would be but little to the honour of his King, and that he would acquaint him (Surian) with everything, by reason of the friendship which King Francis bore the Signory.

Whilst writing received the Signory's letters, with the summaries of Hungarian news, and the letter from the King of Hungary to the King of England, which he delivered to Cardinal Wolsey, who expressed surprise at its being sent in such a way. Replied that he had been four years ambassador in Hungary, and therefore the King had chosen to make use of him. The Cardinal said he would forward the letter, and that he was intent on uniting the Christian powers, especially the Emperor and France, to accomplish which end he would even go so far as Rome.

Calais, 8th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 9.

289. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 55,
St. Mark's
Library.

Announces the receipt of letters from Surian, dated the 7th, concerning the conference held by Cardinal Wolsey with the Imperial and French ambassadors. Surian states that Cardinal Wolsey, perceiving how determined the Imperial ambassadors were to accept neither peace nor truce, and that they merely requested the King of England to declare himself in favour of the Emperor, expressed his regret at such firm persistence in war. Is therefore convinced that the Imperialists are not so sure of the treaty with England as they fancy themselves, according to his former announcement; and were it not for the constant pressure applied by the Pope, who urges the Emperor to war, he (Contarini) would entertain fair hopes of an adjustment between the two crowns [Imperial and French].

Bruges, 9th August 1522.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Aug. 9.

290. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 244.

Desired by Cardinal Wolsey to remain at Calais with the French ambassadors until his return from Bruges, where he hoped to make a good arrangement. The Cardinal said he would there confer with the Signory's ambassador, and acquaint him with events. The French ambassadors intend going to Boulogne, and to remain there during this interval, of which the Cardinal is glad, being thus relieved from anxiety about leaving them in Calais with so considerable a number of horsemen as they had brought with them.

* See Surian's letter to the Signory, 11th July 1521.

1521.

The Count of Cariati has arrived at Calais, and ambassador from the Emperor, to accompany Cardinal Wolsey to Bruges, and two other great personages * have been sent to meet him on the road; so believes it had been arranged beforehand for him to go to Bruges. Perhaps the Emperor has acted thus on account of the Pope, to whom he is both strictly bound not to make terms with France, and has also promised Parma and Piacenza.

Calais, 9th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 10.

291. The GOVERNORS of VERONA to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 172.

Have received advices from Antonazo of Perugia, Constable in the Castle of Trent, dated the 8th, giving an account of the infantry in readiness there, and stating that the agreement between the Emperor and the King of France would not be effected, although Cardinal Wolsey, the Lord Chancellor [Gattinara], and Mons. de Berghes were gone to Calais.

Verona, 10th August. Registered by Sanuto, 11th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 10.

292. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 218.

King Francis has received letters from Calais, dated the 4th. Cardinal Wolsey and the Imperial ambassadors had arrived there. The Cardinal wishes to adjust these disputes, and the Emperor's ambassadors have done nothing but complain of King Francis.

Spoke to Madame, who said she should go to a distance of 15 leagues from Autun, and that the conference at Calais might produce some good effect, but they do not trust Cardinal Wolsey, because in the Emperor's camp the only current coin is the English "Angel."

Autom [Autun?], 10th August. Registered by Sanuto, 20th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 10.

293. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 253.

News received by him from the Chancellor (sic) of England [Cuthbert Tunstall, Vice-Chancellor and Master of the Rolls], who said that Cardinal Wolsey understood the Imperialists had taken a castle belonging to Robert de la Mark, called Baiôm (sic) [Bouillon], had crossed the Meuse, and were laying siege to another castle,† which was contrary to the articles of the seven weeks' truce, made

* Qu., the Archbishop of Palermo, and the Seigneur Traseignes. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. III., no. 1460.)

† Mouzon? The capture of that place is mentioned in a letter of Wolsey's to Henry VIII., dated Calais, 30th August (see "State Papers," vol. I., p. 45).

1521.

on account of the Cardinal's coming to Calais, Wolsey greatly resented its infringement, and had therefore renounced his journey to Bruges, and ordered the return of his baggage waggons, which had been already sent in advance; using strong language to the Emperor's ambassadors.

Understands, however, that Cardinal Wolsey spoke thus in order to render them better disposed towards the peace. It is said that, should the agreement not take place, the King of France will take the field in person and give battle. Hears that the Cardinal will nevertheless go to Bruges.

Calais, 10th August. Registered by Sanuto, 31st August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 13.
Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 56,
St. Mark's
Library.

294. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Last night Cardinal Wolsey lodged at a place called Beauport (Beoport), six leagues distant hence. Today he will journey three leagues, and is to enter this city tomorrow with a retinue, I am told, of 1,050 horsemen.

Had discussed this visit with the Nuncio [Caracciolo], who is apprehensive lest some adjustment ensue, contrary to the wish of the Pope, who would fain see the war advance. The Pope complains vastly of the Emperor, having at his request declared against France,* and the Emperor is nevertheless slow to move in Italy. He remonstrates against the long delay of the Viceroy in joining the rest of the troops under Prospero Colonna.

Bruges, 13th August 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Aug. 14.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 238.

295. GIOVANNI BADOER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

King Francis being absent, had audience of Madame [Louise], who spoke about the advices from Calais, telling him there were letters from the French delegates, who had demanded indemnity for expenses, to be paid by those who had infringed the articles, and that Cardinal Wolsey was going to the Emperor at Brussels.

Autun, 14th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Extract, Italian.]

Aug. 14-15.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 238.

296. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

Was told by King Francis he had heard from his ambassadors at Calais, who demanded payment of expenses by those had violated the articles of agreement; and that Cardinal Wolsey was going to Brussels to the Emperor. This news was confirmed by Madame on the authority of letters dated Calais, the 12th.

Autun, 14th and 15th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

* In a subsequent letter, No. 330, dated Madrid, 28 January 1525, it appears that the Emperor then declared that he entered on this war for the sake of Leo X., who was ruled by his prime minister and kinsman, Giulio de' Medici, afterwards Clement VII., to whom the Emperor sent a message to that effect.

1521.

Aug. 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 245.

297. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

In conversation with [the French Secretary] Robertet, understood there were advices from the French ambassadors at Calais, stating that the Imperialists had no authority to negotiate peace, and that Cardinal Wolsey meant to go to the Emperor.

Autun, 16th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 16.
Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 57,
St. Mark's
Library.

298. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Cardinal Wolsey entered this town on the 14th.

The Emperor with the whole court went to meet him outside the gates, and waited for him well nigh an hour and a half. On his arrival, at nearly 7 p.m., he did not dismount from his mule, but after raising his bonnet, he from saddle to saddle (a cavalo a cavalo) embraced the Emperor, who moreover did the like by the Cardinal, cap in hand. Having halted a short time, for the ambassadors and some of the chief personages of the court to kiss his hand, the Emperor proceeded into the town, the Cardinal being always beside him.

Omits particulars of the Cardinal's retinue, the number of his gentlemen and archer guard, all clad in a livery of red satin, as also of the English nobility, being certain that the State is already acquainted with them through the Ambassador Surian.

The Cardinal's lodging was prepared in the identical palace where the Emperor himself resides, and on arriving there the Emperor accompanied him even to the door of his apartment.

Yesterday morning the Emperor and the Cardinal, with their respective courts, and we ambassadors, all proceeded to mass at a church called "Our Lady's;" and at the Cardinal's stirrup were some twenty English gentlemen, all dressed in silk, and with gold chains round their necks.

Although two canopies had been prepared in the church, one for the Emperor and the other for the Cardinal, his Majesty chose him to take place under his own, sharing half the kneeling desk with him; and in like manner, on kissing the Gospel and the "Pax," the Emperor chose the Cardinal also to kiss them. When the mass ended, Wolsey gave the benediction from the high altar, as usual with legates.

On returning to the palace the Cardinal dined with the Emperor, and they afterwards withdrew together and remained in consultation well nigh two hours. Then the Cardinal, returning to his apartment, received a visit there from the Lady Margaret. Most evident marks were thus afforded of the very great honour which the Emperor wishes to pay the Cardinal, nor could more be expected.

Understands that the expenses both of the Cardinal and of his entire retinue, exceeding (as already stated) 1,050 horsemen, are defrayed by the Emperor, who thus chooses to reciprocate similar munificence displayed towards himself by the King of England on his landing there when he returned from Spain to Flanders.

This morning (the 16th) the Cardinal received a visit from the King of Denmark, who had not chosen to attend his entry. Has been told that they remained alone together for nearly half an hour; and that the Cardinal accompanied the King to the bottom of the stair, and no farther.*

1521.

On the preceding afternoon he (Contarini) sent his secretary to the Cardinal's court, to acquaint him with his wish to visit him on behalf of the Signory. The reply from one of his attendants purported that for that day there was no opportunity, as the Cardinal was expecting an interview with the Lady Margaret, which in fact took place, and that the secretary must return today, when the appointment should be made. So this morning he went accordingly, and received an apology on account of the audience of the King of Denmark; and on returning this afternoon they postponed him till tomorrow, as the Cardinal was about to confer with the Emperor. Has, therefore, not failed demonstrating his readiness to pay this compliment. Will, however, endeavour to obtain admission tomorrow, and address the Cardinal in such language as expedient at the present moment for the Signory's interests, understanding that he (Wolsey) has the management of everything in his hands.

Has been unable, down to the present time, to ascertain the nature of Cardinal Wolsey's discourse with the Emperor. In order to elicit something, went yesterday to the Nuncio [Caracciolo], and found him in a pensive mood. Was told by him that from the time Wolsey landed at Calais until now he the Cardinal had held daily private conferences with the Chancellor [Gattinara], "solus cum solo," but nothing important had been communicated to him. This disturbed the Nuncio not a little, he being apprehensive of some agreement between the Emperor and France, concerning which Surian had written that Cardinal Wolsey had told him he entertained fair hopes of accomplishing it.

These hopes were confirmed to him (Contarini) by one of Cardinal Wolsey's secretaries, named Peter Vannes, a Lucchese. Yesterday morning in the church was accosted by Vannes, who delivered the letter from Surian. Took Vannes to dine with him. In the course of conversation Vannes said, "These Flemings ask me whether my master is come to make war or peace, they being of opinion that his coming must encourage hostilities; at which I merely smile, knowing that Cardinal Wolsey seeks nothing but peace."

This statement was in accordance with reason, because Wolsey had made the French ambassadors remain at Calais.

Bruges, 16th August 1521.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

Aug. 17.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 58,
St. Mark's
Library.

299. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has today made every possible effort to visit Cardinal Wolsey, but was unable to obtain audience, as the Cardinal has been occupied incessantly, both at his own council board, and also with the Emperor, with whom and with the Lady Margaret he has passed the whole day; and he is still with them, it being now 7h. 30m. p.m.

Is assured through several channels that the business which the Cardinal is negotiating with the Emperor merely relates to peace between France and the Emperor. The majority of the court is of opinion that it will not be effected; and this opinion is shared by the Papal Nuncio, with whom he (Contarini) conversed today when accompanying the King of Denmark on his departure from Bruges. The Nuncio appeared to be in much better spirits than he was the day before yesterday. Can scarcely believe, however, that so great a personage as Cardinal Wolsey, after holding frequent conferences with the Chancellor on the subject at Calais, and proceeding thence to Bruges, would return re infecta.

* For other particulars concerning this visit, see "State Papers," vol. I., p. 37.

1521.

The Emperor's departure hence is announced for Monday. Doubts this, because Cardinal Wolsey's attendants say they do not know when he will move. Thinks the Emperor will precede him.

Bruges, 17th August 1521.

[Italian, 2¼ pages.]

Aug. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 297.

300. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

On the departure of Cardinal Wolsey for Bruges, he chose the French ambassadors and him (Surian) to remain at Calais until his return, and although he promised to send them frequent advices nothing has been heard since his departure. It is believed that the messengers are not allowed to pass Rovelim [Gravelines?]. A messenger whom Mons. de la Bastie, the French ambassador, sent to [from?] Calais was detained at the passes.

Was told by the Chancellor Duprat, that Robert de la Marck had made a truce for a week, and was at a place of his called Sedan, under which the Imperial forces were encamped, and that the most Christian King was sending Mons. de Mézières with a succour of 500 spears and 500 infantry. The Chancellor was not of opinion that a truce would be made.

Calais, 18th August. Registered by Sanuto. 7th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 245.

301. GIOVANNI BADOER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Madame [Louise] told him there were letters from Calais, dated the 12th, that the Cardinal was going to Bruges.

Autun, 18th August. Registered by Sanuto, 26th August.

[Extract, Italian.]

Aug. 19.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 59,
St. Mark's
Library.

302. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Both yesterday and this morning endeavoured to obtain admission to Cardinal Wolsey, but failed in the attempt, as moreover was the case with the Papal Nuncios [Caracciolo and Ghinucci], who, like himself, went to the Cardinal's lodgings for audience in vain.

Yesterday morning, when the Cardinal went forth to ride with the Emperor [to church?], presented himself, and announced his wish to pay his respects on behalf of the Signory. The Cardinal apologized for being unable to receive him, owing to a press of business, but appointed him this morning, the 19th, when the Cardinal excused himself from giving audience, as he must confer with the Emperor, and subsequently in the afternoon receive the Nuncios, with whom he expected to remain some while; so that he was compelled to defer the audience till tomorrow.

1521.

Has solicited this visit both for the sake of keeping the Cardinal, who exercises such vast authority, well affected toward the State, and likewise for the sake of eliciting from him in the course of conversation something about the interminable consultations held by him with the Emperor. Concerning these consultations nothing authentic can be ascertained; but conjectures that they relate to this peace between the Emperor and France; although others are of a different opinion. At any rate, supposes the business negotiated between them has been already brought to some conclusion, because on the preceding morning, when in Cardinal Wolsey's antechamber, Peter Vannes said to him, "I can tell you nothing authentic; but last evening at half-past nine my master returned home in great glee from the Emperor, and was in good spirits the whole of that evening, which makes me augur well." Remarked also that on the same morning (the 18th) the Emperor's apparel was of gold brocade, a material which he (Contarini) had never hitherto seen him wear on the highest holydays;* Cardinal Wolsey being clad in crimson satin. Moreover, the church to which the Emperor went, was Saint James', a saint to whom his Majesty is especially devoted, he being prior of his order.† The ambassadors were invited to accompany him. The Emperor also had the mass of Holy the Ghost sung; and the celebration of that mass was remarked by the Nuncio, Caracciolo, who being his (Contarini's) neighbour at the ceremony, turned to him, and said, "Domine orator, did you attend to this mass?" Answered in the affirmative, adding that it was the mass of the Holy Ghost. Caracciolo rejoined, "These Imperialists have assuredly concluded the business;" and after many other remarks, said, "Did I not tell you at Ghent that an agreement and marriage were in course of negotiation between the King of England and the Emperor." Admitted this; and then Caracciolo continued, "I am of opinion that the treaty is now ratified, and thus" (to use the Nuncio's own phrase) "the French will find themselves without a leg to stand on ‡." Replied that all this was possible, but that as the French ambassadors were at Calais, awaiting the result of this interview, it would seem strange should the Emperor and Cardinal Wolsey have formed such a resolve. Besides many other arguments in support of his surmise, Caracciolo said, "Similar practices are of frequent occurrence, and therefore your Signory would do wisely to act with reserve;" urging him (Contarini) by all means to take this course, as it would be much for the interest of the State to procrastinate with the French and gain time.

On coming away from the mass, invited an English gentleman, by name Master Thomas More, a very learned man,§ to dine with him. He had accompanied Cardinal Wolsey to Bruges. During

* By a letter from Wolsey to Henry VIII., dated Bruges, 19th August 1521 (State Papers, vol. i. pp. 38-40), it is seen that the "interminable consultations," between the Cardinal and the Emperor and the Lady Margaret related to the betrothal of the Emperor to the Princess Mary, so it may be inferred that for her sake he wore gold brocade on the 18th of August 1521.

† The order of Santiago de Compostella, founded 1170. The patron saint of the order of the Fleece was St. Andrew.

‡ "Et Francesi anderanno a gambe levate."

§ "Uno cavalier Englese molto litterato che se chiama messer Thoma Moro."

1521.

dinner discussed the business negotiated by Wolsey with the Emperor, but More did not drop the slightest hint of any other treaty than that of peace between the King of France and his Imperial Majesty.

Finally, last evening visited the Emperor's confessor, and acquainted him with the siege of Belgrade by Sultan Solyman, saying that as Cardinal Wolsey was then at Bruges it would be a fitting moment to conclude a peace so important for the Christian commonwealth. Requested the confessor to exert himself, as he said at Ghent was his intention. The confessor replied that he would willingly speak to the Emperor and do his utmost, remarking that during the last few days his Majesty appeared to be less ardent for war than he had been previously, and was indeed very calm and tranquil.

The confessor also said that he had spoken with the chief confidants of Cardinal Wolsey, and understood him to be extremely intent on the conclusion of the peace.

Bruges, 19th August 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Aug. 19.

303. VENETIAN EMBASSY IN ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 203.

Motion made in the Senate for a letter of reply to the ambassador in England, to contradict the calumny reproaching the State with a wish for war; to proclaim their desire for peace; to thank the King for his regard for the Republic; to inform him that the Flanders galleys have already sailed, and to ask for the safeconduct.

Ayes, 197.

[Italian.]

Aug. 19.

304. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 19.

Perceive what had been said by the King and Cardinal about the disturbances of Italy, Wolsey apparently having blamed the Signory for assisting the most Christian King. Call God to witness how averse they are to war, not only in Italy, but throughout Christendom. When, some months ago, a league was being negotiated between the Pope, the King of France, and the Signory, the Cardinal considered that triple alliance likely to produce a bad effect on the Emperor, and therefore desired Surian to write in his name to them to delay for certain sage reasons.

The State then held his advice in great account, but now the Pope and the Emperor have leagued against the most Christian King, with whom the Signory is allied, as known to the whole world. They therefore could not fail to render such assistance as they were bound, although this was most burdensome, they still suffering from the inconveniences of the past war. Have not, however, failed to represent (and continue doing so) constantly to the Pope and to both their Majesties how earnestly the State wishes to see them at peace. Praise him (Surian) for what he said to the King and Cardinal about the desire of the State for tranquillity, and instruct him to exhort both one and the other to employ their authority to that effect, by means of which they hope for a good result. Trust the King and Cardinal will take this reply in good part.

1521.

To give assurance that the Signory will mediate for peace; to thank the King for having said that in any agreement between those sovereigns due regard would be had for the Republic; and to pay similar compliments to the Cardinal.

The Flanders galleys left Venice many days ago. Although the voyage may be made in safety throughout, are nevertheless grateful to the King for his gracious guarantee, and would take it as a great favour if he wrote to the Emperor in recommendation of the galleys, that they may be the more protected.

Touching Turkish affairs and the invasion of Hungary, would to God that they were not in reality such as described by them! But Cardinal Wolsey will have heard from every quarter that they have proved veracious intelligencers.

Ayes, 194. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 53 lines.]

Aug. 20.

305. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 297.

A report circulated that Robert de la Marck had surrendered Sédan on condition that he and his wife and children were to be left free. The Chancellor Duprat said this report was untrue, and that the King of France was sending Mons. de Mézières to assist De la Marck. Also that the Emperor had 13,000 men with the Count of Nassau, and the other side numbered 17,000. That Cardinal Wolsey was returning to Calais, and that he (Duprat?) would be content to make a truce for 10 years, provided Navarre be restored to the King, or the same Prince of the blood (Regulo) be appointed king as before. He then said the King of France would have 30,000 men; viz., 1,400 spears, 4,000 light horse, and the band and rear band (banda e rebanda) of infantry; and that they, the four ambassadors, had written to the King advising him accordingly.

Calais, 20th August. Registered by Sanuto, 7th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 20.

306. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 297.

Arrival here from Bruges of a messenger from the Cardinal, with letters of credence, namely, ... [Francis Bryan], gentleman of the King's chamber,* who told the French ambassadors they were not to be surprised at the Cardinal having so long delayed writing, as it was for the sake of [first] concluding the arrangement, which he hoped to accomplish; that he was returning to Calais with the Imperial ambassadors to discuss the matter; and that this disinclination on the part of the Emperor to make terms, and his demonstration of refusal were for the purpose of previously levying certain moneys due to him from Flanders, Brabant, and Valois. He also mentioned the receipt of letters from the High Constable [Inigo de Velasco], announcing that the commons of Castile had united against the Emperor.

* "Maestro di camera del Re." Bryan is styled "gentleman of the King's Privy Chamber," and "cupbearer for the King," in Brewer's Calendar, Henry VIII., vol. II., no. 2735.

1521.

Calais, 20th August. Registered by Sanuto, 7th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 20.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 253.

307. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Told by Madame that Cardinal Wolsey was going from Calais to Bruges to the Emperor, and that the French ambassadors would remain at Boulogne, where they could await his return with greater honour.

Autun, 20th August. Registered by Sanuto, 31st August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 21.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 296.

308. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Master Bryan has apologized to the French ambassadors on behalf of the Cardinal, saying that he had not failed doing his utmost to effect the conclusion,* and was to depart on the 22nd for the purpose of returning to Calais with the Imperial ambassadors. The French ambassadors made answer to the Cardinal that they would wait for him. Bryan returns post to Bruges. He made his statement in the presence of the Treasurer of Calais [Sir William Sandys?]. They then pressed Bryan to breakfast with them, in order to ascertain whether he had anything else to tell. Bryan said he had no farther communication to make.

Was told by the Chancellor [Duprat] that the King of Denmark sent to Cardinal Wolsey at Bruges, saying he was about to depart, and would be glad to speak to him. To this message the Cardinal made answer, that as the representative of the King of England, it did not seem to him decorous to pay the visit; so the King, without saying anything more to him, departed in great wrath. Thus the hatred between the Danes and the English will continue.†

Calais, 21st August. Registered by Sanuto, 7th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 22.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 298.

309. The SAME to the SAME.

A messenger has arrived post from Bruges, sent to the King [Henry] by Cardinal Wolsey. He says an arrangement has been made, and that the Cardinal is coming to Calais with the Imperial ambassadors, who will be accompanied by the Count of Cariat.

The Governor of Boulogne [Anthony de la Fayette] has commenced making forays upon the Emperor's subjects, and has plundered them considerably, doing them great damage.

Has heard of the election of the second ambassador [by the Senate]; requests that he (the new ambassador) may be despatched and supplied with money, so that he (Surian) may return home; and for this favour he very earnestly prays.

Calais, 22nd August. Registered by Sanuto, 7th September.

[Italian.]

* By Hall's Chronicle it is seen that Francis Brian had in 1518-19 shown himself in favour of France.

† For Wolsey's own account of his interviews with the King of Denmark, both in the Emperor's garden at Bruges and at his own lodging, see "State Papers," vol. I., part 1., pp. 37, 38.

1521.

Aug. 22.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 60,
St. Mark's
Library.

310. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Today dined with the Imperial Chancellor, Gattinara, who told him that Cardinal Wolsey wanted to make peace between the two crowns, but that the Emperor rejected it, unless the King of France made compensation for damages and costs, with certain other conditions, the latter having violated the confederacy by commencing hostilities. The Emperor therefore charged Cardinal Wolsey to require the King of England to declare for him, juxta formam fœderis, and the Cardinal, on the other hand, alleged a variety of reasons, saying at length, that as both parties considered themselves in the right, it was necessary to make a truce, so as to afford time for sifting the matter. This truce was rejected by the Emperor, who said it was notorious that France had been the first to break the confederacy, and he had already incurred the expense of a war.

Told the Chancellor that it seemed strange to many people for so great a personage, after negotiating the business during some days at Calais, to come to Bruges, and depart thence re infectâ. The Chancellor replied, "I will tell you; this man (costui, Wolsey) expected to find the Emperor a lad in leading strings, as he was under Monsieur de Chièvres, but discovers him to be of a different disposition."

In rejoinder to his (Contarini's) arguments in favour of peace, the Chancellor said, "In truth this outrageous presumption on the part of the King of France is owing exclusively to the desire for peace entertained by the Emperor and Mons. de Chièvres, which was carried to such an extent that it subjected the Emperor to the contumely of the King of France; so that for the present there will be neither peace nor truce, unless the French come with some other terms."

Has heard from another quarter likewise that there would be neither peace nor truce, and the Papal Nuncio dropped a hint that the King of England would at length declare himself in favour of the Emperor.

This affair has been treated solely by the following four individuals, namely, the Emperor, Cardinal Wolsey, the Lady Margaret, and the Chancellor Gattinara; so that to come at the truth is well nigh impossible, though it is true that after the first few days the Papal Nuncios [Caracciolo and Ghinucci] held long conferences both with the Cardinal and the Emperor.

Bruges, 22nd August 1521.

[Italian, 5½ pages.]

Aug. 23.

311. The STATE to ANTONIO SURIAN.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 258. Desiring him to assist Hironimo da Molin, who is going to England for the recovery of a debt due to him from Antonio Bavarin.
[Italian.]

Aug. 24.

312. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,

The negotiations between the Emperor and Cardinal Wolsey are discussed most secretly. The conferences have been held by the 1521.

Letter no. 61,
St. Mark's
Library.

Emperor, Cardinal Wolsey, the Lady Margaret, and the Chancellor without the intervention of any other personages, although for the last four days the negotiations seem to have been communicated to the two Nuncios, who, both yesterday and today, attended the consultations. Believes (his news coming from the house of one of the Nuncios) that Cardinal Wolsey has been most urgent for peace between the Emperor and France, but the Emperor declined the proposals, telling the Cardinal that the Pope, whom he could not disappoint, was the person who rejected both peace and truce; which I believe is the truth. Caracciolo, the Nuncio resident with the Emperor, rather resented this, but nevertheless boldly affirmed the like to Cardinal Wolsey, assigning various reasons, especially that the Pope (at whose request many persons in the Milanese had shown themselves hostile to the French) would not permit the ruin of his partisans.

This plan being thus disapproved, another project was then devised for bringing over the King of England to the Emperor's side. Is assured that articles have been drawn up, but has not been able to learn their substance; though the Nuncios received a copy of them, which they are to forward to Rome by a special messenger.

This much he has been able to elicit from a sure quarter, but the rumours current in the Court are various. Some say the war will continue, whilst others anticipate an adjustment, basing their expectations on the stay of the French ambassadors at Calais -- an inference which does not appear unreasonable, unless Cardinal Wolsey means to deceive France entirely, though the French are doubtless on the watch for information concerning these proceedings, and are perhaps better acquainted with them than he (Contarini), for he is at present shunned well nigh by everybody, because the State adheres to France; so that with regard to the news of the Imperial Court he remains as it were on the scent (tanquam nares ad cibum).

At length, on the day before yesterday, obtained audience of Cardinal Wolsey, and paid him such compliments in the Signory's name as were required by his rank and authority and the nature of the present times, assuring him of the faith and confidence reposed in him by the State, by reason of his good offices in favour of Venice.

The Cardinal apologized for not having admitted him sooner, on account of his daily conferences with the Emperor, declared himself well affected towards the State, and said he wished to speak to him about matters of interest for Venice, desiring him to come on the morrow. Went accordingly, and was told by Wolsey that the moment was not opportune, and that he was not to take the trouble of returning, as he (Wolsey) would send for him.

The Cardinal was to have departed today, and his baggage waggons are already prepared, but he will possibly remain until Monday.

Bruges, 24th August 1521.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

1521.

Aug. 24.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 62,
St. Mark's
Library.

313. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Had received a visit from the same individual who communicated to him the treaty between the Pope and the Emperor. Considers this intelligencer trustworthy. Speaking with him about these protracted conferences between the Emperor and Cardinal Wolsey, inquired what his visitor knew about them. He answered, "Magnifico ambassador, I am aware of your anxiety for peace, but declare, under oath, the information having reached me from a good quarter,"—(suspects that "quarter" is none other than the secretary of the Nuncio Caracciolo.)—"that in these negotiations for peace there was a question of the Signory's territories, nor could it have been effected otherwise than to the detriment of the State." He then gave him (Contarini) to understand that the King of France, by means of Cardinal Wolsey, offered the Emperor, if he would come to an agreement with him, his assistance for the recovery of the Imperial fiefs in Italy, including even those occupied by the Signory; but the Emperor, choosing to abide by his promise to the Pope, rejected all these offers, and determined for the present to have neither peace nor truce with France. His visitor added other particulars about the language used by the Nuncio to Cardinal Wolsey on this occasion; so he (Contarini) thought fit, when with the Chancellor Gattinara, to sound him on the subject, saying, in the course of conversation, that the State could not break faith with France, having no occasion or cause for doing so; which opinion he repeated twice; but neither by word nor gesture did the Chancellor contradict him, or imply that the intention of the King of France was at variance with his belief. Leaves the State to form its own conclusions.

Bruges, 24th August 1521.

[Italian, 1¼ page.]

Aug. 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 333.

314. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The King of France has recalled Mons. de la Palisse, one of his ambassadors at Calais. Is told by the Chancellor [Duprat] that the King is at Troyes, in Champagne, and means to give battle to the Emperor, whose forces have had time to muster by reason of the six weeks' truce made by Robert de la Marck, who had not accepted the French succour of 500 spears and 300 infantry under Mons. de Naxares [sic, Mézières], as he did not trust the King. The Pope and the Emperor are at strife, because the Tyrolese infantry have not been sent into Italy.

Cardinal Wolsey has not quitted Bruges, so we remain in suspense. Calais, 25th August. Registered by Sanuto, 16th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 26.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter No. 63,
St. Mark's
Library.

315. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 24th the Chancellor remained closeted with the English privy counsellors who accompanied Cardinal Wolsey to Bruges until 9 p.m. Was therefore unable to see him until the 25th. During his visit the Emperor's late Audiencier [Philip Haneton], who had been sent to England from Brussels, and was now returned, presented himself to the Chancellor, who gave the Audiencier certain articles of agreement. From afar cast his eye slyly and read the commencement thus, "In nomine Domini;" and, as they were turning over the pages or sheets together, saw that each sheet was numbered, and that the last was either 13 or 14. Then commenced talking with the Chancellor about Wolsey's negotiations, and was told by him that the Cardinal had proposed various forms and conditions of peace. Is at a loss to form any opinion. On the one hand, everybody says the war will continue. On the other, the interminable conferences, attended by so great a personage as the Cardinal, incline him to believe in some adjustment; and supposing that adjustment to be prejudicial to France, as reported, it would be unreasonable for the Cardinal to detain the French ambassadors at Calais. Knows that they are well informed, but gives no opinion with regard to their having made no communication to Surian.

1521.

Cardinal Wolsey is to quit Bruges this afternoon, but has not sent for him according to promise. The Chancellor is to accompany Wolsey to Calais.

Bruges, 26th August 1521.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Aug. 26.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 64,
St. Mark's
Library.

316. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

As Cardinal Wolsey was to quit Bruges this afternoon, determined to accompany him some two or three miles beyond the town, for the payment of such compliments as might prove advantageous for the State, and also in the hope of eliciting something from him on the road.

The Emperor escorted the Cardinal outside the gates of Bruges; and then, after embracing him, proceeded on his way to a villa four leagues distant.

Having followed Wolsey and paid the usual compliments, told him how much the State desired the conclusion of the peace, and how much reliance it placed on the Cardinal, being aware that he had the interests of the Signory at heart.

The Cardinal replied that his King's intention and his own were to make this peace, for which purpose he had crossed the Channel and come to Bruges, where he encountered very great difficulties both on one side and the other, but above all the Pope's affairs had embarrassed him extremely, the Emperor having made his Holiness a variety of promises. The Cardinal then added that matters had nevertheless been brought to a good pass, and that the Chancellor and some other Imperial ambassadors were accompanying him to Calais with a commission which they lacked at the first conference, when, in fact, they had none whatever, and that he trusted the conclusion would be effected, as he should consider it a great disgrace for his King and himself if he had to return re infectâ. The Cardinal desired him to write to the State, to abstain from showing more favour to one side than to the other, lest the negotiations be thus rendered more difficult.

Returned thanks for the communication, saying the State had hitherto done its utmost in aid of a result so desirable for Christendom, and would not fail to persevere in the same course. Having said this, the Cardinal did not choose him to proceed farther: so took leave.

1521.

Bruges, 26th August 1521.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Aug. 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 296.

317. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

King Francis told him he had received letters from Calais, from the Chancellor [Duprat], to whom he wrote desiring him not to make any farther agreement, save on the following terms:—

The Emperor not to come with an army into Italy; and to make terms with the Signory. To do homage to him for Flanders; pay him the arrears of tribute due for the kingdom of Naples; and restore the kingdom of Navarre.

Siamburn [Sombornon?], 27th August. Registered by Sanuto, 7th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 333.

318. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Departure of Cardinal Wolsey from Bruges on the 26th. He will arrive at Calais on the 28th.

Calais, 27th August. Registered by Sanuto, 16th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 28.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 333.

319. The SAME to the SAME.

The French ambassadors, perceiving that Cardinal Wolsey did not make his appearance, wrote to him that he delayed extremely, and that their stay at Calais was dishonorable for the King of France. So the Cardinal sent the Master of the Horse of the King of England [Sir Henry Guylford?],*—who arrived at Calais on the evening of the 27th,—to tell them that he had intended to quit Bruges on the 22nd, but the Papal Nuncio complained to the Emperor that the King of England was not at liberty to negotiate any agreement without the consent of the Pope, who knew nothing of these negotiations. On this account Cardinal Wolsey postponed his departure, and remonstrated with the Emperor, saying the Emperor either held the Pope in greater account than his King, or else had greater regard for the King of England than for his Holiness.† At length the Emperor sent his ambassadors with the Cardinal, namely, the Chancellor [Gattinara], the Count of Cariati in lieu of Mons. de Berghes, and a bishop‡ in the stead of the Auditor [Haneton]. Cardinal Wolsey is somewhat indisposed, and travels in a litter. He is to arrive at Calais on the 29th. The coming of the Count of Cariati is not a good sign.§ The Imperial forces are continuing their attack on France at a place

* In the original "Gran Scudier." Possibly the person meant was the Lord Chamberlain, Charles Earl of Worcester. See "State Papers," vol. I. p. 29, letter from Wolsey to Henry VIII., date Calais, 4th August. In the Italian accounts of the Field of the Cloth of Gold, "Gran Scudier" certainly signifies Master of the Horse.

† The words in the original are, "e si dolse con l'Imperador di questo, dicendo ò soa Maiestà ferà più caxo dil Papa che dil suo Re, ò dil suo Re chè dil Papa."

‡ Bernard de Mesa, Bishop of Badajoz. See Surian's next letter.

§ Concerning Giambatista Spinelli, Count of Cariati, who was a staunch Imperialist, and had been diplomatically employed by the Emperor Maximilian, see Mr. Brewer's Calendars, 1509–1523.

1521.

called Mouzon; yet there will be this advantage, that should Cardinal Wolsey fail to make the agreement, the King of England will either take part with the King of France, or not be opposed to him; so that much will have been gained by Wolsey's coming to Calais.

Calais, 28th August. Registered by Sanuto, 16th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 334.

320. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Today, at 5 p.m. (sic), Cardinal Wolsey arrived at Calais. He was visited by the French ambassadors, to whom he said he had found the Emperor very obdurate, but had so pressed him, that at length he said he could do nothing because he had made an agreement with the Pope. Thereupon the Cardinal was obliged, as Legate, to promise the Emperor that the Pope should be satisfied with the convention that would be made; and he also promised [the like] for the most Christian King. He acted in such wise that the Pope will send the mandate of ratification. Tomorrow [the 30th of August] a mass of the Holy Ghost is to be celebrated, and daily at 2 p.m., they [the ambassadors] are to assemble at the Conference, to try and conclude this agreement.

The Imperial ambassadors who accompanied Cardinal Wolsey were the Chancellor [Gattinara], the Count of Cariati, the Bishop of Badajoz, Dom. Sigismondo de ———, of the kingdom of Naples, and another doctor, by name ———.

Yesterday morning was told by Chancellor Duprat that some letters had been intercepted, written by the Pope to the Emperor, complaining that the latter had not sent the lansquenets who were at Trent to the army, and lamenting that he himself had declared against the King of France, as he was apprehensive of becoming an insignificant priest.* Duprat said he believed that Marc'Antonio Colonna, who had arrived at the French Court from Rome, had made some communication on behalf of the Pope.

Calais, 29th August. Registered by Sanuto, 16th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 334.

321. The SAME to the SAME.

Today the Conference assembled at 2 p.m., namely, Cardinal Wolsey, the Papal Nuncio [Ghinucci], the Imperial and French ambassadors, and himself (Surian). The Cardinal commenced by telling the ambassadors he had been much honoured by the Emperor, and had experienced great difficulty in forming any agreement, by reason of the oath made to the Pope by the Emperor, that he would not negotiate any agreement with the most Christian King; so, for the sake of conferring so great a benefit on Christendom, he promised, in the name of the Pope, and also on behalf of the most Christian King, that they would ratify, &c.; adding other words in favour of some agreement. Chancellor Duprat answered him, that the Pope was in the wrong, having no cause to be opposed to his King, and that his Holiness had been the person who sought to deprive him of the duchy of Milan.

* "Dubitando diventar minimo prete."

1521.

Among the Imperial ambassadors is Mons. de Roeux, and Mons. de la Guiche and Mons. Poillot are the leaders of this conference [on the French side].

Cardinal Wolsey then made four demands—first, that the English* fishermen should be allowed to fish in the French waters, so that fish might be provided for so large an assembly; secondly, that the vessels of both parties in English ports should not be molested; thirdly, that in Picardy, &c. no forays should be made; fourthly, that the couriers should be allowed to pass free, and the places be appointed (sic). All these demands were conceded by the French ambassadors.

Calais, 30th August. Registered by Sanuto, 16th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 1.

322. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 335.

Mouzon has been taken by the Imperialists, and the garrison marched out with white sticks in their hands, which was a mark of their having surrendered. The Chancellor [Duprat] said that the King of France will have the Governor of Mouzon beheaded, he having surrendered the place because he was the kinsman of the Count of Nassau.

Is told by Cardinal Wolsey the King of France has no money.

Calais, 1st September. Registered by Sanuto, 16th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 2.

323. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 358.

Today Cardinal Wolsey and all the ambassadors assembled at the Conference.† After discussing the four proposals made by him about the Flemish‡ fishermen, the forays, provisions, the prohibition against seizing ships in port, &c., the ambassadors took time to answer him. Some words then passed about deciding who was to speak first, and Cardinal Wolsey determined that the Frenchmen were to commence.

Thereupon the Chancellor [Duprat] accused the Emperor of having infringed his agreement to marry Madame Charlotte, the daughter of the King of France, by endeavouring to make a marriage with others, and to obtain a dispensation accordingly from the Pope. Moreover, that the Emperor had not given the kingdom of Navarre to Don Henri d'Albret, to whom it by right belongs, in conformity with the stipulation made at La Diense [Liege?].§ That he had not paid the 100,000 ducats per annum for the kingdom of Naples; had not done homage to the King of France for Flanders and Artois; had given harbour to the enemies of France, namely, the

* "Flemish," in Surian's letter of the 2nd September.

† "Dieta," in the original. Wolsey also used the word "Dyet" in a letter to the King. (See "State Papers," I. 55; 15th September 1521.)

‡ "English," in Surian's letter of 29th August.

§ Qu. Leodium (Leodiensis), i.e., Liege? Varillas wrote that the treaty of Noyon was followed by another secret treaty. The fact is denied by Pere Daniel and Amelot de la Houssaie. To me it seems probable that this supplementary treaty was signed at Liege, and that Duprat quoted it to Cardinal Wolsey at Calais in September 1521.

1521.

Cardinal of Sion and the Duke of Bari [Francesco Maria Sforza], who are kindling war against King Francis; had sent an envoy to defy the King; and that he had also taken the castle of Mensancourt (sic),* and lately Mouzon. Cardinal Wolsey therefore should declare that the Emperor had been the first aggressor, and condemn him to indemnify King Francis for his expenses, according to the articles of the treaty of Noyon and Lodiense [Liege?].

The Imperial Chancellor [Gattinara] answered charge by charge. First, that the marriage was not binding, because it was contracted with the deceased Madame Louise, or with her sister, who is still alive; but that the present Princess was born subsequently.

To this point Cardinal Wolsey also replied, that the Emperor had never asked him for the daughter of his King, as she was promised to the most Christian King.†

Touching the kingdom of Navarre [Gattinara said?] that it would be requisite to ascertain whether it belonged juridically to Albret, as the articles purported. That with regard to the tribute for the kingdom of Naples, the Emperor owed nothing to the King of France, Naples having been given as dower to King Ferdinand [the Catholic] for his French wife, the kinswoman of the King of France, and the Emperor was King Ferdinand's heir. That the Emperor had not done homage because none was due; whilst on the other hand the King of France had omitted to tender homage for the duchy of Milan. Gattinara denied that the Emperor had favoured the enemies of the King of France, or sent to defy him, though the King of France had assuredly been the first aggressor. He said that the captured castle was the Emperor's own; that as to his recalling the Switzers from the service of France, they were his subjects; that the castle of Messancourt, taken by him, had belonged to the late Duke Charles [of Burgundy], his predecessor; and, respecting the homage, that it had been rendered since the reign of Philippe le Hardi [1270 to 1285], but not previously.

The Conference then adjourned.

Calais, 2nd September. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 2.

324. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 359.

The Count of Cariati has circulated a report that the 600 lansquenets on their march from Trent towards the Papal camp had passed, the Signory having allowed them to do so to oblige the Pope and the Emperor, with whom the State has a good understanding. The Chancellor Duprat was much perplexed by this. Assured him of the goodwill borne by the Signory to France. News of the loss of Mouzon. The King of France is in need of money. The French have routed the 300 men-at-arms.

Calais, 2nd September. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd September.

[Italian.]

* Messancourt. (See Père Daniel, vol. IX. p. 101.)

† In date Bruges, 19th August 1521, Wolsey wrote to Henry VIII., giving account of his negotiations for the marriage of the Princess Mary to the Emperor. (See "State Papers," vol. I. p. 89.)

1521.

Sept. 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 359.325. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The Conference (dieta) has sat during the last three days. Today the matters already proposed were discussed. Cardinal Wolsey told him that the French ambassadors had consented to the truce, and that the agreement would not take place on account of the Pope. Letters received here from the King of France give notice that the Duke of Alençon had inspected 15,000 Switzers, and the Constable [the Duke of Bourbon] 10,000 lansquenets, so that the King has now a powerful army.

Calais, 5th September. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 360.326. The SAME to the SAME.

Details what was said in the Conference on the preceding day by the French Chancellor, Duprat, and by the Imperial Chancellor, Gattinara. In conclusion Cardinal Wolsey said that they should not dispute who had been the first aggressor, but consult respecting the difficulties. It has accordingly been arranged to commence this question on Monday.

Calais, 7th September. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 360.327. The SAME to the SAME.

Yesterday in the Conference the Count of Cariati spoke to him about the 6,000 lansquenets, and asserted that the march took place by consent of the Signory. Replied that the State would never desert the King of France, and that they had not passed by the will of the Signory.

(Note by Sanuto, that the Senate did not approve of Surian's having said so much.)

Cardinal Wolsey spoke to him subsequently, and commended the State for having allowed those lansquenets to pass. Replied that if they had passed it was against the Signory's will. The Cardinal then said he should try to stipulate a truce for some time, as the agreement would be difficult on account of the Pope. The French ambassadors apparently now consent to it, but the Imperialists refuse. Wolsey, however, hopes it will be accomplished.

The Imperial Chancellor told Cardinal Wolsey he had received letters of recall from the Emperor, and therefore departs tomorrow. The French Chancellor wished also to do the like, but the Cardinal chose him to remain, as well as the other Imperialists, to negotiate the truce.

Gives an account of the attack on Ardres by the Imperial troops. The captain of Boulogne marched with forces and relieved it.

Calais, 7th September. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 7.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 26,
tergo.328. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor.

On the day before yesterday received his letters of the 22nd and 24th August, announcing the receipt of their reply to the Emperor's demand for the passage of 6,000 infantry.

1521.

The Pope had complained to the King of England of their favorable reception of Francesco Maria della Rovere. Their ambassador in England having written this, they answered that after the Marquis of Mantua was taken into the Pope's pay, Francesco Maria, not considering himself safe in that city, retired to Verona, as to a free town, and being a Venetian nobleman the Signory did not think proper to dismiss him, but he received neither favour nor pecuniary assistance, nor any military commission. Whilst residing in Venetian towns the Pope may consider him in the Roman States, by reason of the filial respect borne towards his Holiness by the Signory, who will never cause any revolution or disturbance. As the Emperor may allude to the same subject, desire him to reply in conformity with what they wrote to England.

Ayes, 155. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

[Sept. 8 ?]
[Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 371.]

329. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Announces what they had discussed in the conferences (diète), and that they talked of making a truce. Cardinal Wolsey is ill. Notifies the loss of Ardres, and how it occurred. Conversations held by him with the French Chancellor, who said that should the Imperialists choose to make the truce and include the Signory, exacting the same sum annually as paid at present, it would be well for him (Surian) to have instructions on the subject.

Undated. Registered by Sanuto, 25th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 376.

330. The SAME to the SAME.

Conversations held by him with the Chancellor Duprat. Apprehends that should the truce be effected, the Imperialists will not include the Signory, unless the annual payment of 20,000 ducats be made. Reminds the State of the terms stipulated by the former quinquennial league, and therefore requests instructions in this present matter.

Chancellor Duprat told him the agreement would not take place, for three reasons: 1st, the Pope is opposed to it; 2ndly, the King of France has incurred the expense [of military preparations], and will not choose to desist now for a truce; 3rdly, his Majesty would be angered by the loss of Mouzon, and desire to avenge it.

Has received the Signory's letters of the 26th August. The State was publicly reported to have allowed the 6,000 lansquenets to pass, and to have an understanding with the Pope and the Emperor; yet the French ambassadors have shown no signs of believing this.

The Imperial forces went to Ardres 1,500 strong. The place was garrisoned by 250 infantry, who, with the reinforcement sent to them by the captain of Boulogne, defended themselves, and killed some of the Imperialists, amongst whom was a captain.

A captain of three French ships has captured an Antwerp vessel on its homeward voyage, freighted with martens and sables [fur?]

1521.

to the amount of 50,000 ducats. The captain of Boulogne wrote to the [French] ambassadors [at Calais?] that the King of England was fitting out a fleet, destined for the French coast, in favour of the Emperor. Of this Cardinal Wolsey complained, saying it was untrue that his King showed himself in favour of one side or the other. It seems that the captain of Boulogne has also written that the Imperialists mean to seize Tournai.

Calais, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto, 26th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 9.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter No. 71,
St. Mark's
Library.

331. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has been told by the Hungarian ambassador, that he is going to Calais to speak to Cardinal Wolsey, and represent to him the vast detriment which the Christian commonwealth would incur through the loss of that kingdom [Hungary] and its seizure by the Infidel, endeavouring to induce Wolsey to adjust matters between Christians, in order that they may turn their weapons against the Turks.

Understands on good authority that three ships freighted with powder and ball, sent by the King of England to the Emperor, arrived at Antwerp four days ago.

This morning, the Imperial postmaster delivered to him a packet from the ambassador Surian, open, and merely containing two blank sheets; and a second cover likewise, also in the hand of [Surian's] secretary, addressed to Bonvisi at Lyons.

Infers that the letters, both private and public, for himself and for the State, have been detained, the covers alone being forwarded.

Brussels, 9th September 1521.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

Sept. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi, p. 322.

332. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

Told by the Pope that he had received letters from Bruges purporting that Cardinal Wolsey had made his entry with great honour. The Emperor went to meet him, and accompanied him to his dwelling. The marriage in course of negotiation between the Emperor and the daughter of the King of England will take place. The parties [the Pope, the Emperor, and Henry VIII.] will also re-constitute the league made between them.

Rome, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto, 13th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi, p. 346.

333. GIOVANNI BADOER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Was told today by King Francis that the Cardinal at Calais was excellently disposed to make peace. Mons. de la Palice, who has come from Calais, dissuades the King from joining the camp at present, and Mons. d'Aubigni and other commanders did the like, so that he will not go.

Troyes, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto, 19th September.

[Extract, Italian.]

1521.

Sept. 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 377.334. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday the third conference was held. The Imperialists read two intercepted letters, one dated the 19th of July from the King of France to the Pope, the other addressed to his most Christian Majesty by Mons. de Lautrec. The entire letters, however, were not read, but only certain paragraphs,—to show that the most Christian King had been the first aggressor,—desiring to make a league with the Pope, and confessing that he had given assistance to Robert de la Marck.

The French Chancellor [Duprat] replied that these letters were written after the defiance sent by the Emperor to the King.

The Imperialists also said that the Signory had violated the articles of agreement; whereupon Cardinal Wolsey rejoined that all had infringed the treaty, and that nothing must be said about first aggressors. He (Surian) stated the arguments in favour of the Signory, and the Imperial Chancellor answered in opposition to the State.

The conference then adjourned until Thursday. This was done, it is supposed, to gain time, the Imperialists expecting some letter.

Sends a letter to the Signory from the King of England, congratulating the Doge on his creation.* Secretary Pace wrote a letter to him (Surian), of which he sends a copy, purporting that the Signory's letter to the King was very dry, and that Cardinal Wolsey moreover wished a letter had been written to himself.

Ardres has been taken by the Imperialists.

Calais, 10th September. Registered by Sanuto, 26th September.

Note by Sanuto.—The letter from Pace to Surian was in Latin, and dated Guildford, the 1st of September. Pace writes that the Signory's letter was very dry, and not such as written to the King heretofore; that it lacks the "Vale," and that the Venetian secretaries do not choose to say "Valete;" so Pace sealed with the same seal as appended to the said missive (from the King).†

[Italian.]

Sept. 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 377.335. The SAME to the SAME.

Today the fourth diet assembled. The [Imperial] demands were repeated, and the Emperor's ambassadors declared that the King of France had given assistance to Robert de la Marck, and allowed his son Fleuranges‡ to raise troops in Paris. Chancellor Duprat replied that this was contrary to the will of the King, and without his knowledge, and that on hearing of it he issued a proclamation forbidding any one to join under very heavy penalties. The Imperialists also spoke about the marriage, and the kingdom of Navarre; and said that according to the articles of agreement they were allowed six months'

* The election of Doge Antonio Grimani on the 6th of July 1521 is described in Sanuto's Diaries, vol. xxx. p. 330.

† "Scrive in la lettera di la Signoria, è sta molto ieiuna, et non come si ha scritto al Re altre volte, et manca il 'vale,' et li secretarij Veneti non vol dir 'valete,' etc., perho lui a bolà con el bollo ha ditta lettera, etc."

‡ The eldest son of Robert de la Marck was married to Madame de Fleuranges. (See Père Daniel, vol. ix. p. 104.)

1521.

time wherein to restore the kingdom of Navarre to Dom. Henri d'Albret, who, however, had no right, and whose claims must be investigated by the Emperor according to the articles stipulated. The Frenchmen, namely the Chancellor and the President of Paris [Jean de Selve], answered sagely. Then the English Bishop of Ely [Nicholas West] spoke in lieu of Cardinal Wolsey, who for the last three days has been ill of fever, having had two fits, and he is expecting the third tomorrow. They then adjourned the conference.

Has received the Signory's letters of the 24th and 26th August, and will comply with their contents when able to speak with Cardinal Wolsey, who suspects he has been poisoned, and is afraid of his malady.*

Calais, 11th September. Registered by Sanuto, 26th September.
[Italian.]

[Sept. 15?]

336. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 6.

Cardinal Wolsey is still indisposed. The armies of the Emperor and of France have each taken a castle.

The Cardinal may be pronounced convalescent, and hopes to adjust matters if the two crowns will make truce, but waits to hear the result of the affairs of Italy.

Calais, ———. Registered by Sanuto, 5th October.
[Italian.]

Sept. 15.

337. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 375.

Has received orders from King Francis to join him at Rheims. Was told by Madame, that she had heard from Calais that the Chancellor Duprat would soon return. She confirmed the news of the capture of Ardres, and said the King of England was the cause, as he would neither allow the place to be fortified, nor even let the French make the moats.†

Troyes, 15th September. Registered by Sanuto, 26th September.
[Italian.]

Sept. 18.

338. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 72,
St. Mark's
Library.

Details a long controversy held by him with the Bishop of Palencia, concerning the ties by which the Signory was bound to the Emperor and to France.

The Bishop inquired, "Is not Venice a party to the treaty of London,‡ which the King of France was the first to violate? Are you not bound to oppose him?"

Replied that the treaty of London was general, whereas the one between the Signory and the King of France was special, and speciality invalidates generality. Moreover, the Signory was not a chief party to the treaty of London, but merely named by the principals, among whom was the King of England, who did not

* "Et teme il suo mal."

† The capture of Ardres is also mentioned by Gasparo Contarini, date 16th September, but it is not alluded to in Wolsey's correspondence, "State Papers," vol. I., nor yet by Père Daniel.

‡ 19-20 October 1518.

1521.

consider it clear who was the first infringer of that treaty, and the affair was then being discussed at Calais. No one could blame the Signory.

Brussels, 18th September 1521.

[Italian.]

Sept. 22.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 74,
St. Mark's
Library.

339. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Bishop of Palencia showed his (Contarini's) secretary a letter from the Chancellor [Gattinara] at Calais, to the effect that the packet from the ambassador Surian, which was opened, two blank sheets being alone transmitted, had been consigned to the royal postmaster of England, so that the Emperor's officials had committed no fraud. The Bishop added that the Chancellor offered to forward Surian's letters in safety. Had received a similar announcement from Surian himself.

Brussels, 20th September 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Sept. 26.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 76,
St. Mark's
Library.

340. The SAME to the SAME.

On the evening before last, among the viands placed on the Emperor's table was a dish of meat dressed to his taste, but of which he did not partake. When brought to the table of those who eat the remains of his Majesty's meals, this meat was found to contain a small bladder filled with powder, hair, and other mixtures; so his cook and three others have been arrested to ascertain the author of this artifice. Some persons maintain that these rascally ingredients (simel ribaldarie) were inserted for the purpose of poisoning his Majesty, but others pronounce them to be some love charm.

Spoke with the Emperor's physician, Master Liberal,* who told him he was unable to ascertain what these ingredients were, though he rather agreed with those who considered them a philter than with those who were suspicious of poison, but endeavours would be made to come at the truth. Will acquaint the State with the result.

Nothing more has been heard from Calais, save that they were debating "de rupturâ fœderis." Believes that the King of England is awaiting some event, most especially in Italy; and that thereby he will regulate his policy.

Brussels, 26th September 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Sept. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxi. p. 385.

341. CONFERENCES at CALAIS.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages for a letter of reply to the Ambassador Surian, authorizing him, should it be decided to make a truce, to include the Republic, which will pay the Emperor the 20,000 ducats annually.

Note by Sanuto, that concerning this there was some murmuring, and as the Signory opposed the measure, the letter was not sent.

[Italian.]

* Master Liberal was a Venetian subject, a native of Treviso. In 1505 he was in attendance on Philip the Handsome and Queen Joanna. Few persons were better acquainted with the infancy and youth of Charles V. than Master Liberal, who, according to the Rutland Papers (p. 64), accompanied the Emperor to England in 1522.

1521.

Sept. 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 32.342. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Announces the recovery of Cardinal Wolsey, who is rather angry with France, because King Francis will not agree to a truce in Italy, but only north of the Alps; and on this condition he will consent to one for two years.

The French ambassadors have received orders to return to France, because the King wrote that the Chancellor's absence put him to inconvenience. But Cardinal Wolsey, not choosing them to depart, wrote about this to their King, who accordingly directed them to remain. Thus the Cardinal has ceased to be angry with France, and he seems to have addressed the Imperial ambassadors in strong language, saying he insisted on making this truce under any circumstances.

Calais, 28th September.* Registered by Sanuto, 20th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 29.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 77,
St. Mark's
Library.343. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The majority of the Court, including the English ambassadors Spinelli and Wyngfeld, has proceeded to Mons, but although ill-lodged he (Contarini) will not separate himself from the Emperor, both for the sake of paying him court, as his Majesty is very fond of being accompanied, and also because he prefers being where he can hear news and transmit it to the Signory.

Nothing farther has been heard from Calais. The indisposition, or feigned indisposition, of Cardinal Wolsey seems to suspend all negotiations there, as the State will have been much better informed in detail by Surian.

Binche, 29th September 1521.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Oct. 2.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 78,
St. Mark's
Library.344. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

On the 27th ult., at Brussels, was visited by Don Alfonso Sanchez, a Spaniard appointed by the Emperor ambassador to Venice. Was assured by him that the Emperor sought nothing but the deliverance of Italy from the tyranny of the French, and that he (Sanchez) would present the Signory with incontrovertible evidence, proving that their supposed friends are in fact their enemies. Comparing these words with what he (Contarini) heard from his friend at Bruges, and with what the Bishop of Palencia said to him subsequently at Brussels, is led to believe that when at Bruges Cardinal Wolsey made some proposal to the Emperor of a nature injurious to the Signory's interests. Is also confirmed in this belief by such great secrecy [with regard to the embassy]†, the cause of which is inexplicable, unless it be that the Emperor, having rejected the proposal, is apprehensive lest Wolsey, being now at Calais (between which place and the Emperor's court the posts pass hourly), should become acquainted with the mission of Sanchez to Venice, and suspect that

* Sanuto states that there were four letters from Surian of this date, but he gives a summary only of the last.

† Mentioned previously in a letter from Contarini of the 19th of September.

1521.

its object is to announce the proposal made by the Cardinal, for the purpose of rendering the Signory hostile to France.

Mons, 2nd October 1521.

[Italian, 2¼ pages.]

Oct. 2.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 79,
St. Mark's
Library.

345. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Perceives that the Emperor and the King of France are strongly bent on war, and matters on both sides being so far advanced, suspects that neither of them will consider it compatible with honour to retreat, especially as no decision comes from Calais.

Should a conflict ensue, it must cause great detriment to Christendom; and those who thwarted the adjustment, which would indubitably have been effected at Bruges by Cardinal Wolsey, for the purpose of augmenting their possessions in Italy, will have to give account to the Almighty.

Mons, 2nd October 1521.

[Italian, 1¾ page.]

Oct. 11.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 81,
St. Mark's
Library.

346. The SAME to the SAME.

On the day before yesterday received letters from the ambassador Surian, mentioning that at the conferences between the Imperial and French ambassadors, the Count of Cariati said, with regard to intercepting couriers, that at La Chiusa a courier with letters for Cardinal Wolsey had been arrested, much to the Cardinal's displeasure. Thereupon Surian exculpated the Signory, and denied the truth of the assertion. The [Imperial] Chancellor said he knew nothing about the seizure of Wolsey's letters, but asserted that the Emperor's letter bags had been stopped on their way to Rome. This assertion, in like manner, Surian did not fail to confute by telling the truth; so the Cardinal was perfectly satisfied.

Dropped a hint concerning this matter to the Emperor, without specifying which of his commissioners had made this complaint. Requested him to have a letter written to the Chancellor acquainting him with the truth, in order that Cardinal Wolsey might be convinced the Signory had in no respect failed to observe the truce. The Emperor answered graciously that he would desire the Bishop of Palencia to write to the Chancellor. Will again urge the matter.

With regard to the negotiations at Calais, refers the State to Surian's despatches. Believes the negotiations to be protracted designedly for the purpose of keeping the Emperor and the King of France at expense.

Mons, 11th October 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Oct. [13?]

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 59.

347. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY..

Cardinal Wolsey is exerting himself much to arrange the disputes between these sovereigns, and has sent to tell the King of France that, if he wish for the adjustment, he must not proceed farther with his army.

Calais, ——— October. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd November.

[Italian.]

1521.

Oct. 15.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter No. 82,
St. Mark's
Library.

348. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has heard on good authority that Hieronimo Adorno, who arrived post from Rome, was the bearer of the Pope's assent to the truce with France, but on condition that the Pope and the Emperor should await the result of the present crisis. If it result in their favour, they hope to stipulate the truce advantageously. In the event of a reverse, they rely on the King of England, trusting that he would compel the King of France to accept the truce, and that France would consent, lest England declare for the Emperor. Considers this probable from the fashion in which Cardinal Wolsey is acting at Calais; and having conversed occasionally with Sir Richard Wyngfeld, the English ambassador at Valenciennes (and not with his colleague the Florentine Spinelli), gathers that he [Wolsey or Wyngfeld?] is much inclined towards the Imperial party.

Valenciennes, 14th October 1521.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Oct. 18.

Sanuto Diaries.
v. xxxii. p. 72.

349. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The two ambassadors destined by Cardinal Wolsey for the King of France, to make truce or some adjustment, namely, the Bishop of Ely and the Lord Chamberlain, are on the eve of departure. The Cardinal also sends two others to the Emperor, namely the Prior of St. John's and one Master Thomas [Boleyn].

Calais, 18th October. Registered by Sanuto, 7th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 25.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 87,
St. Mark's
Library.

350. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrival at Courtray late on the preceding evening of two ambassadors from the King of England. They came by way of Calais, and were great personages, namely, Sir Thomas Boleyn and my Lord of St. John's [Sir Thomas Docwra, Grand Prior of England].

Visited them this afternoon. They asked him for news. Supposing that their mission related to the truce, read to them the summaries of the Turkish advices, received in the Signory's packet of the 12th, and the missive addressed by Sultan Solymán to Ragusa.

The ambassadors seemed to hold the intelligence in great account, and said that the discord among Christians was the cause of this misfortune which had befallen Christendom. Assured them that the King of England and Cardinal Wolsey, by their exertions past and present to make peace between the Emperor and France, had rendered themselves meritorious before God; that the State and the whole of Christendom had no other hopes, save in them, for the extinction of so fierce a conflagration; and that if this were effected the King and the Cardinal would be hailed universally as fathers-general of the Christian commonwealth.

They replied, the King and Cardinal had not spared themselves, nor would they slacken their endeavours, though the Prior of St. John's represented the result as very doubtful; and Sir Thomas Boleyn said he hoped that after such turmoil and bad news for Christendom more cheering intelligence might follow. They both together exhorted him to send a copy of the summaries and of Sultan Solyman's letter to Calais. Is doing so, addressing the documents to Surian by the post which the English ambassadors are despatching thither.

1521.

The English ambassador Spinelli, accompanied by an Imperial trumpet and two servants, is gone to the French camp, for a conference with the King; some say for the purpose of desiring the King of France not to proceed farther, whilst others maintain that he will prohibit him to garrison any place, as stipulated in his treaty with England. Both these causes appear to be slightly reasonable. Is of opinion that such a message would have been conveyed by a post from Calais, and not from Courtray, but can only write what he hears.

Courtray, 25th October 1521.

Contradicts the report of the mission of Spinelli to the French camp. Considered it improbable from the first, and his secretary has just seen Spinelli in this town.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Oct. 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 36.

351. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Approve his reply with regard to the letters which Cardinal Wolsey suspects have been delayed by Venetian agents. No Venetian agents have ever detained letters from the Pope, or letters addressed to him by the Emperor, nor any courier or bag. On the contrary, at the commencement of these disturbances in Italy, as a measure of caution, the Signory gave orders at all the passes under their jurisdiction for all Papal and Imperial couriers to be treated like their own. To vouch for this fully, and confute the charges made by the Count of Cariati and the Imperial Chancellor.

Have received from Mons. de Lautrec copies of letters intercepted in the Bolognese territory on their way from Rome to Germany. Mention this to exculpate the Signory should any charge be brought against them on this account.

Approve his reply with regard to Cardinal Wolsey's inquiry as to the joint march of the Venetian and French armies against the Pope. Being allies of the most Christian King, could not refuse to furnish him with troops according to agreement, for the benefit of their mutual territories. Declare themselves the devoted sons of the Pope. Will not attempt to make any innovation (novità); on the contrary, will stifle every incentive to disturbance.

In reply to the Cardinal's loving offer to insert a special clause in the truce about to be made that the Venetian galleys, ships, and merchants trading with England shall have free ingress and egress both by sea and land, are daily convinced of the intense interest in their affairs felt by his right reverend Lordship; but wish the clause to apply to all Venetian galleys and ships on their passage through the dominions of the contracting parties, and not merely to such as touch at the ports of England.

In reply to the communication made by the French ambassadors, that Cardinal Wolsey had proposed a truce between the Emperor and his most Christian Majesty north of the Alps, and that the affairs of the Pope in Italy should remain undetermined, state that they wish the truce to be general on both sides the Alps, for otherwise there would remain cause for dissension and strife between their Majesties in Italy, to the Signory's detriment, they being the allies of France.

1521.

The Spaniards of the Papal and Imperial army cruelly sacked Ottolengo, a very opulent castle in the Brescian territory. They most scandalously despoiled women and men, carrying them off prisoners, taking all their property, and sparing neither sex nor age. They violated even the tabernacle of the Body of Christ, and committed such acts of cruelty as defy exaggeration. To acquaint Cardinal Wolsey with these facts, as his religion and virtue will make him regret the intelligence. The troops with the Cardinal of Sion in the Brescian territory, although well supplied by the Signory's subjects, carry off all horses and other animals which they meet on their march.

A messenger from Sultan Solymán has today arrived at Venice, and had audience of the Signory. He announced the surrender of Belgrade, and declared that his master had left all his artillery in those parts, for the purpose of returning in the spring to follow up the victory.

This news is lamentable, and of importance to all Christians. To communicate it to Cardinal Wolsey.

[Italian, 77 lines.]

Oct. 28.

352. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 75.

Besides the two ambassadors to the King of France, two other ambassadors were going to the Emperor, namely, the Prior of St. John's [Sir Thomas Dockwra] and a physician (uno medico) Thomas [Boleyn],* who was ambassador in France. This was done at the request of the Imperial ambassadors, who, for reputation's sake, wished that two others should be sent in like manner to the Emperor. Cardinal Wolsey, it seems, said that if he were in good health he would go himself to the King of France to effect so good a work.

Calais, 28th October (in cipher). Registered by Sanuto, 9th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 28.

353. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 75.

Told by Madame, the King's mother, that she had received letters from his Majesty, dated in the camp near Valenciennes on the 25th, announcing the arrival there of the two English ambassadors, the Bishop of Ely and the Lord Chamberlain, who were come, with the consent of the Emperor, to negotiate a truce for 10 months, but the King of France wished the period to be at least 14 months, with the following conditions:—Those in possession to remain so (chi ha si tegna); the friends and allies of the parties to be included. King Francis was of opinion that some difficulty might arise about the city of Fonterabia, now in his possession, but that all would be adjusted, and he considered the conclusion of this truce certain.

* For the name Boleyn, see Lingard, vol. iv. p. 203 (ed. London, 1854). It is probable that "uno medico Thomaso" was a mistake for "uno Maestro Thomaso," etc., "one Sir Thomas," etc.

1521.

Compiègne, 28th October. Registered by Sanuto, 9th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 29-30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 102.

354. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Gives an account of the negotiations for the truce and its difficulties. Believes the King of France will consent to it, having indeed hard work upon his hands at Tournai against the Emperor. The King of England is fitting out some ships, including a large one. Cardinal Wolsey says the King is doing this for the safety of his kingdom,* but in fact it is for the purpose of inducing the King of France to accept the truce; and the Cardinal would wish him to retain Fonterabia, in lieu of the "superiority" of Flanders. Moreover, the Imperial commander in Ardres, perceiving that he was unable to keep the place, burnt it; and the French governor of Boulogne went out with a force and took several Flemish castles and places, treating the inhabitants with very great cruelty. The French have also taken La Motte and its lord, by name Monsieur de la Motte.

Calais, 29th and 30th October. Registered by Sanuto, 20th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 31.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 82.

355. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Is here with the Queen [Claude] and Madame [Louise], and the rest of the ambassadors. Sends a letter received from Gasparo Spinelli, who is in the camp with King Francis, dated the 30th. The King had held two conferences with the English ambassadors, and the stipulation of the truce for one year depends on his Majesty, but before signing it he would fain witness the execution (sic).

On the 2nd of November the two English ambassadors are again to confer with the King for the conclusion of this truce.

Compiègne, 31st October. Registered by Sanuto, 11th November.

[Italian.]

Nov. 2.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 91,
St. Mark's
Library.

356. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

No news from Calais. On the morning before last, when speaking with the English ambassadors, they told him they were expecting the reply from France.

The Emperor thinks of crossing from Calais to England, and then riding 100 leagues through the island to the headland [Falmouth?] in the direction of Spain, where he will embark, and make the voyage to Spain in three or four days.

Oudenarde, 2nd November 1521.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

* "Per esser ziloso dil suo regno." This may relate either to foreign or domestic enemies. In a letter of 20th August 1521, Surian implied that the partisans of the late Duke of Buckingham caused some uneasiness to the Government.

1521.

Nov. 7.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 92.
St. Mark's
Library.

357. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor is come to Ath to discuss the attack on Tournai, the capture of which place is considered difficult, most especially as the winter has commenced. Has been given to understand, though not by persons of great authority, that the King of England seems not to assent to the seizure of Tournai, on account of the tribute which he receives from the King of France for that town, and which, if in the hands of the Emperor, would be lost to him. Does not believe this. If it were true, the Imperialists would not so openly discuss the undertaking.

The King of England is said to have ordered a number of troops to be in readiness for immediate service.

Ath, 7th November 1521.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Nov. 7.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 40.

358. The DOGE and SENATE to ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador in Rome.

To complain to the Pope of the outrages committed in the Brescian territory by the Switzers and the Papal and Imperial armies.

Copy of the letter to be sent to the Venetian ambassador in England, that he may use it, in case of need, to justify the Signory's proceedings.

Ayes, 159. Noes, 6. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

Nov. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 102.

359. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Is still with the Queen and Madame. Sends letters from his secretary, who accompanied King Francis. The French army perpetrated great cruelty in those parts, waging war in the Turkish fashion, notwithstanding which Tournai is straitened. Assigns the following reasons for the refusal of the truce by the King of France:—he will not restore Fonterabia, nor allow the exiles to return to Italy, nor the Emperor to enter it with an army during the 18 months for which the truce is to be stipulated. King Francis has written to Chancellor Duprat and his other ambassadors at Calais, desiring them, should Cardinal Wolsey not conclude the truce within four days, to take leave and return to his Majesty.

Dated 7th November. Registered by Sanuto, 20th November.

[Italian.]

Nov. 12.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 93,
St. Mark's
Library.

360. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

In a former letter announced the intention of the Emperor to go to Spain through England, taking his passage from Falmouth; but the other day, when speaking with the English ambassadors about this passage, they seemed not to approve of his Majesty's traversing their island.

Oudenarde, 12th November 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

1521.

Nov. 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 138.361. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Cardinal Wolsey and the ambassadors of the sovereigns are still here.

Calais, 13th November. * Registered by Sanuto, 4th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 233.362. ANTONIO SURIAN to the COUNCIL of TEN.

Cardinal Wolsey complained that the Signory was the cause of the failure of the adjustment between the Emperor and the King of France, and that he will return to England with shame. He would punish those who had been the cause of impediment.

Justified the State in reply. The Cardinal said the State's justification depended upon its joining the league with the Emperor and the King of England.

Calais, 14th November 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 10th January 1522.

[Italian.]

Nov. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 233.363. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL of TEN.

The Reverend Stafileo [Marino Caracciolo?], the Papal ambassador, said the Signory should have an understanding with the Pope and the Emperor, and also with the King of England.

Dated 14th November 1521.* Registered by Sanuto, 10th January 1522.

[Italian.]

Nov. 17.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 95,
St. Mark's
Library.364. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The negotiation for the truce appears more difficult than at first, and the Imperialists consider it hopeless. From what he has heard, —and the fact is confirmed by the Papal ministers (Caracciolo and Adorno),—the King of France will not surrender Fonterabia, nor will he include in the truce certain allies of the Emperor and the Pope. This morning the two English ambassadors, namely, the Grand Prior of England and Sir Thomas Boleyn, the Treasurer of the Household (maior domo regio),† departed from Oudenarde on their way back to Calais.

Is assured by a trustworthy person that Cardinal Wolsey gives the Emperor fair hopes that his King will join the league with the Pope and his Majesty, and declare against France.

Oudenarde, 17th November 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Nov. 19.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 96,
St. Mark's
Library.365. The SAME to the SAME.

The Prior of England and Sir Thomas Boleyn departed on Sunday morning, because the articles [of agreement] were not to the Emperor's satisfaction.

Conversed this morning with some persons of authority in the Emperor's chamber, and inferred from their conversation that the difficulty or delay in accepting the truce proceeds from the hope

* On the 14th November 1521 the Imperial Court resided at Oudenarde, as seen by the Contarini letter book, in which there is a despatch to the Council of Ten dated then and thence, but it contains no such paragraph as the one registered above by Sanuto.

† Perhaps Comptroller of the Household.

1521.

given to the Emperor that affairs in Italy will prove prosperous for him, that is to say, that the French will be expelled from the Milanese through this junction of the Switzers with the Imperialists. The "impassioned counsellors," who thus encourage the Emperor, are the two Papal ministers at his Court (Marino Caracciolo and Hieronimo Adorno)—the one, the servant and pupil of the Sforza family, would fain see the duchy of Milan in possession of a son of the late Lord Ludovic; the other, the head of the Adorno family, is anxious to return home and rule Genoa. Is of opinion that both the one and the other deceive themselves.

Oudenarde, 19th November 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

* Nov. 21.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 99,
St. Mark's
Library.

366. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 19th the Hungarian ambassador* returned from Calais, and on the same evening had audience of the Emperor. On the following morning he remained with the Imperial counsellors almost until noon. Paid him a visit for the purpose of eliciting something about his conference with the Emperor and his ministers, and the ambassador communicated to him all that had been negotiated at Calais about the truce. He said that first one and then the other of the two sovereigns accepted or rejected the proposals, by the measure of their reverses or successes. When at length Cardinal Wolsey drew up the articles, the King of France modified them. He insisted on retaining Fonterabia, and that the Duke of Guelders, Dom. Robert de la Marek, the Duke of Ferrara, and the Duke of Vintiberg [sic, Würtemberg?] should be comprised in the truce as his adherents. He added a clause at the end, purporting that he would not permit the slightest alteration in these points.

When these articles were sent back to Calais, the Chancellor [Gattinara] said that, as he was accused of thwarting the adjustment, he referred them to the Emperor, by whom they were utterly rejected.

Azalino, the Hungarian ambassador, considering how injurious it must be to Hungary not to receive assistance from the Emperor and France (which would be impossible should the war last), came to Oudenarde to facilitate the truce. The Emperor referred him to a committee consisting of the Bishop of Palencia, Mons. de Berghes, Mons. de Bresse, and Mons. de Montagni, to whom he made his statement, which they will answer after having communicated with the Emperor.

Inquired what hope Azalino had of success. He said that the Imperialists seemed to him very obstinate, and guided by their own prejudices. The Chancellor and the Bishop of Palencia both wished the duchy of Milan to change hands, the one because he is a native of the province of Vercelli,† the other because he expects Leo X. to give him the red hat. The Flemings follow this example, so that few act loyally towards the Emperor.

* In date 6th July and 5th September, Contarini wrote that this Hungarian ambassador was a Venetian named Azalino, and a churchman.

† The Imperial Chancellor, Mercurino Arboreo, was born at Gattinara, on the Sesia. In history he is known by the name of his birthplace. He was a staunch Antigallican.

1521.

The Imperialists are continuing the attack on Tournai. The artillery has arrived, and they will soon commence battering the town.

Oudenarde, 21st November, 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Nov. 25.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 100,
St. Mark's
Library.

367. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Hungarian ambassador [Azalino] quitted Oudenarde, on his way to England, on the morning of the 24th before daybreak, without making any further communication. Was not aware of his departure until two hours after it took place. There is no longer any question whatever of an adjustment, military preparations being alone attended to.

Should the Emperor go to Spain, and the war with France continue, his only road would be through Italy, as all others, even the one through England, present great obstacles.

Oudenarde, 25th November 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Nov. 26.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 119.

368. EMBASSY to HENRY VIII.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages (and carried), for a letter to be addressed to Antonio Surian, giving an account of the negotiations at Venice between the Imperial ambassador and the Signory, and desiring Surian to exhort Cardinal Wolsey to adjust the disputes between the Emperor and the King of France.

[Italian.]

Nov. 26.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 46.

369. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

The Papal and Spanish forces entered into the Milanese on the 19th instant. On the retreat of the Signory's army Theodore Triulzi was captured. The French, with all their men-at-arms and infantry, have assembled at Como and Lecco. The Venetian men-at-arms and infantry remain with the artillery.

To communicate this intelligence to Cardinal Wolsey, demonstrating the peril of Christendom unless the Almighty give assistance through his right reverend lordship, who of his wisdom is intent on making peace among Christians. Hope that by means of his authority an auspicious result may ensue.

Ayes, 177. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 22 lines.]

Nov. 26.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 46
tergo.

370. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR with SULTAN SOLYMAN, and to the VENETIAN BAILIFF at CONSTANTINOPLE.

Events in Italy must depend on those in the West. The Emperor and his most Christian Majesty are at war in Flanders and Picardy, and Cardinal Wolsey is still negotiating an agreement between them at Calais.

Ayes, 178. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 26 lines.]

1521.

Nov. 26.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 200.371. ANTONIO SURIAN to the STATE.

The affair of the truce between the Emperor and France has vanished into smoke, and the ambassadors of both sovereigns have departed, though Mons. Poliot [Poillot?], usually resident in England with the King, remained with Cardinal Wolsey, who was about to cross the Channel. The Cardinal endeavoured to make the truces, at least for 30 days, and spoke to Poliot, who said he had no commission soever, but would write to his sovereign.

Calais, — to 26th November. Registered by Sanuto, 28th December.

[Italian.]

Dec. 2.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 405,
St. Mark's
Library.372. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Announces the capture of the town and castle of Tournai by Mons. de Nassau.

Oudenarde, 2nd December 1521.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Dec. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii.
pp. 201-203.373. FRANCIS I. to MONS. DE LAUTREC.

(Copy transmitted to the Signory by Proveditor General Gritti.)

"I have in like manner sent to England, despatching thither again La Bâtie and Poillot,* counsellor of my Grand Council [Parliament?], to acquaint the King of England with what has occurred at Milan, and with what I have consequently done and am doing, giving him a full account of the position of my affairs."

Written at Compiègne on the 3rd of December 1521.

(Signed) FRANÇOIS. (Countersigned) ROBERTET.

Registered by Sanuto, 29th December.

[Italian.]

Dec. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 139.374. LAST NEWS of CARDINAL ADRIAN CASTELLES, Bishop of Bath and Wells.

Cardinal Adrian, by reason of his having been deprived of the hat and excommunicated by this Pope Leo,† has been living hitherto very privately (secretissimo) in this city in the house (according to report) of the Bishop of Paphos, Pesaro,‡ in Cà Bernardo, on the Grand Canal at S. Polo, but no one visited him. He studied and wrote. He had a very trusty friar with him. On hearing of the Pope's death, he departed rejoicing on his way to Rome, but nothing more was ever heard of him. It is supposed he was murdered on the road.

[Note by Sanuto.]

* "Polleto" in MS.

† Leo X. died on the 1st of December 1521.

‡ Whilst Cardinal Adrian was the guest of the Bishop of Paphos, Titian commenced that prelate's famous altar-piece at the "Frari," which he finished in May 1526. It is supposed by some persons that the figure of St. Peter in that picture (which was commenced on the 28th April 1519) represented the lineaments of Adrian Castellesi, Bishop of Bath and Wells. Cà Bernardo at S. Polo (a Gothic building of the 15th century) may still be seen on the Grand Canal, and belongs, as in 1521, to the Bernardo family.

1521.

Dec. 9.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 108,
St. Mark's
Library.

375. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Conversation held by his (Contarini's) secretary with the Bishop of Palencia, who said,—“The Venetian Signory is most sage; as the opportunity is offered to her, let her not lose it. The Emperor has no other enemy than the King of France, who being vanquished, his Imperial Majesty will turn his thoughts to the affairs of the Infidels; and as we know that the Signory is a good instrument for aiding this excellent desire, we wish to see a good understanding between them and the Emperor. We shall have the Switzers, who for 100,000 ducats will engage themselves; and then perhaps the King of England will also be on our side.”

Oudenarde, 9th December 1521.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Dec. 17.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 111,
St. Mark's
Library.

376. The SAME to the SAME.

As ordered by the State, will communicate the advices from Hungary to the Emperor, who last Sunday received news of the Pope's death on the 2nd instant. This unexpected intelligence will doubtless much disturb him, as it seems greatly to interfere with all his projects. The Imperialists however hope and trust that their ambassador, Don Emanuel, will do his utmost to obtain the Papal tiara for Cardinal de' Medici, though this was not credited by persons acquainted with the Court of Rome, and the majority anticipates the election of the Cardinal of Sienna.*

Ghent, 17th December 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Dec. 18.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 112,
St. Mark's
Library.

377. The SAME to the SAME.

Has been told today by the Bishop of Palencia that they did not expect Cardinal de' Medici to be elected Pope, but rather some individual as his nominee, through the favour and assistance of the other Imperial cardinals.

Ghent, 18th December 1521.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Dec. 23.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 113,
St. Mark's
Library.

378. The SAME to the SAME.

A few days ago the Emperor sent Mons. de Castro to the King of England. Has been unable to ascertain the cause of this mission, but believes it to relate to some treaty with England.

Ghent, 23rd December 1521.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Dec. 24.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 114,
St. Mark's
Library.

379. The SAME to the SAME.

Arrival at Ghent on the preceding morning of Richard Pace, chief secretary of the King of England.

At 9 p.m. Pace sent to his (Contarini's) lodging, desiring to see his secretary, to whom he said that he was going to Rome by order of his King, and required a passport through the Venetian territories for one of his attendants, who was to precede him, riding post.

* Raffaello Petrucci. He had been named Cardinal by Leo X., A.D. 1517, July 1st, and died A.D. 1522, at the age of 50.

1521.

The secretary replied that, although unnecessary for an English subject in the Venetian dominions, by reason of the love which the State bore his King, yet the passport should be given, and its bearer receive as good treatment as if he were a born subject of the Signory's. The secretary remained some while in conversation with Pace, having known him at Rome;* and returned home accompanied by the person for whom the passport was required. He (Contarini) gave the passport, and this morning visited Pace. Received from him assurances of his constant affection for the State, and was urged by him to let the Signory know as speedily as possible that the King of England desired nothing but the preservation of Venice. Pace knew the Emperor likewise to be of the same mind, and that this bias would continue unless the State sought its own ruin. He added that the State, having hitherto assisted the King of France in virtue of the obligation contracted with him, should now attend to its own affairs.

Returned becoming thanks for the assurances of goodwill on the part of Pace and his King, and attributed the policy of the Signory in favour of the French to the oath and promise given by them, no advantage having accrued to Venice, whereas the expense incurred was immense, so that the hostilities, especially in Italy, had been most injurious to the State individually, irrespectively of the interests of Christendom, which might suffer very seriously from the present wars.

Assured Pace, after alluding to the Turkish news, that Venice did the utmost for peace according to the example of the King of England. Endeavoured to ascertain the cause of Pace's mission to Rome, but all he could elicit was that it concerned the negotiations of his King with the new Pope.

The Papal Nuncio had sent to tell him, as a very great secret, that the treaty between the Emperor and the King of England might be considered settled.

Ghent, 24th December 1521.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Dec. 25.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 317.

380. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The French ambassadors have had audience of King Henry, who delayed his reply until after consultation with the ministry. He is sending two ambassadors, one to the Emperor, the other to the Switzers to persuade them not to stir. Cardinal Wolsey is exasperated against France, because she sent the Duke of Albany to Scotland. Requested Wolsey to write again to the Emperor, and assure him the galley detained in Biscay went to St. Sebastian's, not to do any mischief, but from stress of weather. The Cardinal told him to draw up the minute, and that he would have the letter written.

London, 25th December 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 17th February 1522.

[Italian.]

* The secretary, Lorenzo Trevisan, had probably known Pace at Rome in 1514, at the time of the death of Cardinal Bainbridge. (See Ellis, series 1, vol. i. p. 108.)

1521.

Dec. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. pp. 276,
277.

381. VINCENZO PRIULI, Captain of the Flanders Galleys, to his Brothers HIRONIMO and FRANCESCO.

After having shaped his course so as to cross from Laredo, when in the Bay of Biscay, on St. Nicholas' Eve, 6th December, he was compelled by a violent storm either to make for the coast of France or proceed with his consort to St. Sebastian's, as they did. Having then determined to cross from that port, made Plymouth on 18th December. But the third galley, Antonio Donado master, in order not to follow them, entered the harbour of St. Sebastian's, and when they landed the magistrates of the place arrested the master and other officers, and seized the sails, rudder, and guns, alleging that the truce with the Emperor had been violated, and that the galley was bound for Fonterabia, to succour that place, which holds for France. On hearing this he (the captain) wrote immediately to the ambassador Surian, to take precautions and send the copy of the safeconduct.

Plymouth, 27th December 1521. Registered by Sanuto, 24th January 1522.

[Italian.]

Dec. 30.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 117,
St. Mark's
Library.

382. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Imperialists are awaiting the election of the future Pope, which will enable them to base their projects much better, but it is asserted that the Emperor will proceed to Spain by way of England.

Ghent, 30th December 1521.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Dec. 31.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 210.

383. LUTHER.

Copy of an anonymous letter, giving an account of the pernicious novelties which have taken place at Wittemberg owing to the errors of Luther disseminated there.

A volume, still more a letter, would be insufficient to give an account of a new order or usage of the Christian faith, commenced at Wittemberg, but I write as follows, translating from the German :—

The friars hermits of St. Austin, have proved by Holy Writ that to celebrate masses as now practised is a great sin. This doctrine they have preached daily from Michaelmas Day 1521 to the present time. They continue firm in their opinion, and demonstrate it practically, for since Michaelmas Sunday they have not said mass in the church of their monastery. On this account there has been a great contest between the people, the doctors, the canons, spiritual and temporal, and other learned men, who were induced to debate with the friars; but the latter would not be convinced by argument, and remain firm in their determination. They will not celebrate masses in the form hitherto observed, and celebrate but one sort of mass.

Subsequently the doctors of divinity assembled and sent a letter to the Duke of Saxony, acquainting him with what the friars are doing, and asserting that it is in accordance with the Christian faith. This took place on the day of All Saints (1st of November). The letter purported that they intend to abolish the masses said for the dead, and the anniversaries and vigils in commemoration of departed souls; and all the doctors who are of this opinion signed the letter. The Duke's reply is said to be to the following effect,—that they must be well grounded and thoroughly understand Holy Writ with regard to these points of doctrine, so as not to cause disturbance amongst the people in course of debate, and be able to afford fundamental proof, and to present it in writing; requesting them not to set a bad example to the people.

1521.

The head of that church is a provost,* who preached in person both on All Saints' eve and on the day itself, when a great number of strangers came into the town for the plenary indulgence (perdon-pleuario), which cost the Elector† many thousands of ducats. The preacher impugned the indulgence, and proved by Holy Writ that the custom of masses for the dead and the indulgence likewise were abuses and false. He threw down the money box, and scattered its contents (et sfondrò el fundo de la cassa). They have abolished the custom of inflicting penance on sinners in public, declaring that these penances and pardons are diabolical inventions; and by specious doctrine, based on Holy Writ, the preacher showed that the true Christian penitent should perform satisfactory penance by doing as David says in the Psalms.

The Austin friars have recently made a fresh innovation with regard to their prior, who gives the rules and orders to be observed by them. They replied that they are solely bound to observe the commandments of God; that their salvation is impossible so long as they obey their superiors, because the superior commands them at stated times to sleep, rise, read, eat, drink, speak, and be silent; that by doing so they are unable to obey the commandment of God in the matter of faith, and to serve others for love and charity, by assisting, counselling, and teaching; and that the neglect of these precepts is immaterial, whereas to disobey the orders and regulations of the prior subjects them to the loss of everything.

This they proved most ably (bellissimamente) by Holy Writ, and priests and friars preach publicly from the pulpit, praying and commanding one-half of the friars, for the love of God, if such be their fantasy, to throw off their copes, and depart thence, relying on their merit with God (et retener al merito de Dio).

In consequence of this proceeding another great popular commotion (murmuration) took place, and the friar fell ill, but on the following Sunday he again preached and read the Gospel, though from weakness he could scarcely stand; and he besought the people by Christ's passion, as before, [telling them] that whosoever took a friar or nun

* "Uno preposito," qu. archdeacon, i.e., Andrew Bodenstein, better known by the name of Carlostadt or Carlostadius, assumed by him from the place of his birth. In 1519 he was archdeacon of the cathedral of Wittenberg, and having embraced the opinions of Luther, published a thesis in their defence, but subsequently, in August 1524, he quarrelled with Luther. See an article about him in the Dictionary of Bassano.

† Qu. Albert of Brandenburg, Elector of Mentz, brother of Frederick, Duke of Saxony. See Roscoe's Life of Leo X. (vol. iii. p. 153, ed. London, 1805).

1521.

out of a monastery would rescue a soul from the devil's claws, as there was no hope of improving the monasteries; that the friars should be freed from the rules of their orders, including such as relate to apparel; that those who tell them otherwise could not substantiate their doctrine;* and that should they live to the extremity of human life they would never be good for anybody but the devil, as by external acts and works and by their apparel they make a [false] profession,† and cause the loss of so many souls. The preacher's doctrine relative to false faith, obedience, poverty, and chastity were so edifying (bella), that many persons shed tears from devotion. He declared that if there were no other sin in the world but the hypocritical professions of the friars and nuns, it would be no marvel were God to punish all Christendom. He said plainly that they [the Austin friars] intended to depart this week, and should any of them return, he requested the council and superior of the town [of Wittenberg] to expel them. To the friars who remain they were to give a thousand florins; the University was to take their dormitory, and found a college. On the following Thursday I went into the monastery to the prior, who complained to me of his distress, and said that on that same day one-half of the friars, in number 25, had departed, as many more remaining; and he had not the courage to give them any commands, but remained among them like a lamb.

On the day of All Saint's the vicar (pievano) announced publicly from the pulpit that the sacrament is of two kinds, namely, bread and wine, and that such as wished to take it for their salvation and remission of sins would receive it under both forms, because Christ gave it. Many persons went therefore and communicated under both species. He said that henceforth he purposed celebrating one mass, together with a sermon, and that he would administer the communion in this form.

The masses for the souls of the dead and other ceremonies are abolished.

At this very moment a man-at-arms on horseback has well nigh killed a Franciscan friar with an iron mace, and rode over him. The Franciscans are likewise preparing for departure, some having already gone away this week. One of them came to my house in a doublet and slashed hose with a cod piece (bragetto) in the Swiss fashion.‡

Undated. Registered by Sanuto, 31st December.

[Italian.]

* "Et chi li informasse altramente non staria saldo."

† "Con atti et opere exteriori et vestimenti demonstrano, et fanno perder," &c.

‡ In Roscoe's Life of Leo X., vol. 4, pp. 40, 41, it is stated that Luther, after his departure from the diet of Augsburg in April 1521, remained in the castle of Wartburg, until after the death of Leo X., which took place on the 1st of December 1521. From a passage in Mosheim (vol. 2, p. 29, English translation) it may be inferred that the demonstrations made at Wittenberg in November 1521 proceeded chiefly from Carlostadt, alias Bodenstein, whose impetuosity was disapproved of by Luther. Mosheim styles him "Professor at Wittenberg." Roscoe adds that he was "Archdeacon of Wittenberg Cathedral in 1519," and doubtless he still filled that post in 1521, but I do not believe that anything has been printed about his doings in that year. Sanuto's letter is also valuable, as it gives details of the Lutheran movement during Luther's retirement in the castle of Wartburg.

A.D. 1522.

1522.

Jan. [6?].
 Sanuto Diaries,
 v. xxxii. p. 274.

384. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Cardinal Wolsey departed from Calais and returned to England with him (Surian) and other ambassadors and great personages (signori).

An ambassador from the King of France is expected, the negotiation for the agreement being still on foot.

On receiving news of the Pope's death, the King immediately despatched his secretary, Richard Pace, post to Rome, to effect the election of Cardinal Wolsey as Pope. Pace was invested with great authority to promise money, &c.; and the King has written to the Emperor to promote Wolsey's election.

After the death of the King of Scotland, the Duke of Albany assumed the government, and the Scotch ravaged the English territory. For this the Duke sent to apologize, assuring the King and Cardinal that the raid had taken place without his consent. The King, however, is fitting out his fleet, some say against Scotland, others that it is to convoy the Emperor, who means to cross over to Spain.

Announces the arrival in England of two of the Flanders galleys on — December, and what befell the third galley. Went to the King and complained of this violation of the safeconduct. The Cardinal and his Majesty caused stringent letters to be written to the Emperor for the release of the galley and observance of the safeconduct, as the galleys were bound to the King's dominions.

Since the death of the Pope, the French ambassador who was expected has not come, which Cardinal Wolsey resents.

The above are extracts from several letters, the last dated — January. Registered by Sanuto, 24th January.

[Italian.]

Jan. 6.
 Contarini's
 Original
 Letter Book,
 Letter no. 120,
 St. Mark's
 Library.

385. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Receipt of letters from the ambassador Surian in England, giving an account of the storm encountered by the Flanders galleys in the Bay of Biscay. Surian also enclosed letters addressed to him (Contarini) by Antonio Donato, master of one of the galleys, narrating the gale, and how his vessel had been seized at St. Sebastian's by Don Beltrame of Castile, captain-general and governor of that town. His two consorts were free at Corunna, but apprehensive of Don Pedro Bobadilla, a sea captain, who was gone to fit out a squadron with intent to capture them.

Applied for redress to the Chancellor, to the Emperor, and to the Bishop of Palencia, in observance both of the truce and of the Imperial safeconducts; and requested that orders might be given to Don Pedro de Bobadilla, and the galleys be enabled to proceed in safety to Flanders.

Ghent, 6th January 1522.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

1522.

Jan. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 226.386. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Scrutiny for an ambassador to the King of England, in lieu of Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., who has refused [the post], and taken his seat as sage for the Mainland. Ambassador appointed in his stead, Lodovico Falier.

Note by Sanuto that all canvassed most diligently, "standing by the stairs," &c.*

	Ayes.	Noes.
Hironimo Polani, LL.D., late of the Senate	- 104	111
Silvestro Memo, late of the " Raxon vechie "	- 77	135
Francesco Morosini, LL.D.	- 87	117
Carlo Capello, late " auditor novo "	- 65	137
Marco Gradenigo, LL.D., late of the Senate	- 94	115
Marco Antonio Contarini, late " avogador "	- 99	107
Marco Contarini, late " camerlengo di comun "	- 94	111
Cristofal Capello, late of the Senate	- 50	152
Zuan Antonio Venier, one of the X sages	- 127	74
Giustinian Contarini, of the Senate	- 78	115
Andrea Loredan	- 64	124
Bertuccio Soranzo, late " auditor vecchio "	- 92	116
Nicolò da' Ponte, LL.D., late of the Senate & Lecturer	87	128
Lorenzo di Priuli	- 112	90
Lodovico Falier	- 140	66
Zuam Basadonna, LL.D., late of the Senate	- 124	92
Andrea di Priuli, LL.D.	- 102	96
Agustin da Cha da Pesaro, late " auditor nuovo "	106	99

Jan. 7.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 59.387. The DOGE and SENATE to the Proveditor-General GRITTI.

The Emperor has demanded free passage through the Venetian states for 8,000 or 10,000 lansquenets to join his army in the Milanese. This demand requires consideration, as the Emperor is allied with England.

Ayes, 172. Noes, 11. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 28 lines.]

Jan. 9.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 121,
St. Mark's
Library.388. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Does not cease urging the release of the Donata galley. The two galleys, its consorts, and the other two Venetian ships were allowed to proceed.

Ghent, 9th January 1522.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Jan. 9.

Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xliv. p. 105.

389. MOTION in the COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA for communicating to the Senate their reply to the Imperial ambassador on the proposal made to them for a confederacy with the Emperor, and the letters of their ambassador in England, stating what Cardinal Wolsey said on this subject,

Ayes, 19. Noes, 7. Neutral, 1.

[Italian, 13 lines.]

* I transcribe the names, as they are all historical, and, together with Sanuto's comment, show the political importance of England at the moment of the death of Leo X 1522.

Jan. 10.

390. CONFERENCE at CALAIS.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 231.

Four letters read in the Senate, namely,—

(1.) From Antonio Surian, ambassador to the King of England, dated Calais, 14th November, narrating conversations with Cardinal Wolsey, who complains of having been unable to make the agreement.

(2.) From Gasparo Contarini, ambassador to the Emperor, dated Ghent (sic), 14th of November,* about conversations held with the Papal Nuncio, Stafileo (sic).†

(3.) The reply to these letters, made by the Council of Ten with the Junta.

(4.) Another letter from Gasparo Contarini, dated Oudenarde (sic), 25th December.‡[Italian.]

Jan. 11.

391. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 122,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 9th received letters announcing the arrival of the captain of the Flanders galleys (Vincenzo Priuli) at Portsmouth.

Surian forwarded to him (Contarini) a missive from the King of England for the Emperor, demanding the release of the Flanders galley. As the Emperor was absent, sent his secretary to read the letter to the Bishop of Palencia, with a request that in the letter to the Governors of Biscay mention might be made of the King of England's demand. The Secretary Covos sent the minute for his inspection. Remarked in it a clause that if the Governors were acquainted with any fresh circumstances rendering it inexpedient to abide by the safeconduct in favour of the galley they were to transmit an account of them to the Imperial Court, and in the meanwhile to preserve all the effects intact. Sent back his secretary to the Bishop, requesting this clause might be expunged.

This morning presented the letter from the King of England to the Emperor. Conferred with the Chancellor (Gattinara) respecting the said clause, and was referred to the Emperor.

The Imperialists are apprehensive that, as the port of St. Sebastian is near to Fonterabia, the galleys have gone thither on an understanding with the French, for the purpose of exciting revolution.

Ghent, 11th January 1522.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Jan. 11.

392. MISSION of RICHARD PACE to Rome.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 267.

Letter dated Trent, 11th of January, forwarded to the Signory from Brescia by the Proveditor-General Hironimo da Cà da Pesaro.

On the 8th instant there passed through here one Richard Pace, ambassador from the King of England, on his way post to Rome, and according to report he will also go to Venice. It seems that

* On 14th November 1521 the Imperial Court was not at Ghent, but at Oudenarde.

† The Nuncio at the Imperial Court in the year 1521 was the prothonotary Marino Caracciolo, who remained there in that capacity until September 1522, when Pope Adrian appointed as his successor Don Bernardino Pimentel. In May 1523 Caracciolo, being still at Madrid entered the diplomatic service of the Emperor, who sent him immediately to Venice.

‡ On 25th December 1521 Charles V. was at Ghent

1522.

if not the first in authority with the King of England, he is at least the second. He held a long conference here in Trent with the Duke [Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan], so we are of good cheer, persuading ourselves that the King of England is closely allied both with the Emperor and with the Duke.

The Emperor is intent on raising money at Ghent, whither he has caused the conveyance of a number of jewels of very great value, the property of Maximilian of Austria, of blessed memory.

From Trent, 11th of January 1522. Your good consort.*

Registered by Sanuto, 20th January.

Jan. 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 304.

393. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Four ambassadors have arrived from the King of France. They are charged to apologize for his not having, during the last few years, sent the pension which he is bound to pay to the King of England. He attributes the delay to the wars, and promises to send it. He excuses himself, secondly, for the Duke of Albany's having crossed over to Scotland, as this took place neither by his desire nor with his knowledge. Thirdly, the ambassadors assert that the French ambassadors who went to Calais did their utmost to effect an adjustment with the Emperor. In the fourth place they stated they were come to negotiate a truce and peace with the Emperor, but chose to see whether his ambassador had an ample mandate to that effect.

It appears that Cardinal Wolsey told them they [the King and Cardinal?] had sent for the Duke of Albany,† the governor of Scotland, to make an arrangement, if the King of France pleased. If on the contrary the King wished for war, it should be waged. The Earl of Angus, husband of the Queen of Scotland [Margaret], has sent a messenger to the King of England to complain of the Duke of Albany.

London, 15th January. Registered by Sanuto, 11th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 15.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 123,
St. Mark's
Library.

394. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 12th was told by the Chancellor that the Emperor could not believe his ministers had detained the Donata galley and the wine ship, save in consequence of some fresh event, and his Majesty had therefore inserted the clause. The Emperor was willing, however, to issue the letters without the clause, provided he (Contarini) gave the security of persons there in Flanders for full payment of the value of the vessels if, after their release, it should transpire that there was good reason to annul the safeconduct.

Offered to give any security in the Signory's name. The Chancellor said the Emperor declined the Signory's guarantee, as he could not exact it, but would take the pledge from merchants and private individuals. Proposed that the security should be given in London by the Venetian merchants. The Chancellor objected that, under a foreign jurisdiction payment could not be enforced, and security should be given either in Flanders or in Biscay.

* "Consorte," qu. gossip?

† In the original,—"Et par il Cardinal li dicesse haveano mandato per dito Ducha di Albania."

1522.

Replied that in Flanders and Biscay there were no merchants of Venice all of them being established in London. The Chancellor said the Venetian merchants in London could easily find persons in Flanders to promise in their name, and that such was the Emperor's firm resolve.

Then said to the Chancellor, "The Emperor has perhaps some particular suspicion, in which case let him insert an especial clause to the effect that if the galley and ship have done any damage to his Majesty's places or subjects, or plotted against his territories, then their cannon and sails be placed under embargo; for the clause objected to is so vague that it would authorize the detention of the galley by persons who perhaps seek an excuse for doing so, and prevent the galley from taking its turn (muda),—thus ruining both these voyages, and commercial interests in England."

Explained to the Chancellor the importance of these turns (mude), and what they signified. He replied, "It is impossible for us to know the cause, and therefore the Emperor does not choose the letters to be sent in any other form."

Finding further remonstrance useless, transmitted the Imperial mandates to the Ambassador Surian, in England, as no one could be found at Ghent to convey them through France into Biscay. Wrote also to the captain of the Flanders galleys, acquainting him with what had been done in the matter, and sending likewise the form of security required by the ministry at Ghent before they would give letters without the objectionable clause.

The mandates were addressed to the Council of Castile, and not to the captain and governors of Biscay, because that province depends on Castile.

Ghent, 15th January 1522.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

Jan. 22.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 124,
St. Mark's
Library.

395. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrived at Brussels on the preceding Friday.

On Saturday morning the Emperor, while at mass, received an express from the Duke of Milan, with a letter dated at Trent, the 12th instant, announcing the arrival there of a courier from Rome, who had performed the journey in 50 hours, and brought news of the election of the Cardinal of Tortosa as Pope; wherefore the Duke congratulated the Emperor.

Having read the letter, the Emperor gave it for perusal to the bystanders, saying, "Master Adrian is made Pope.*"

Three days then elapsed without any confirmation of this intelligence, so that the Emperor and the whole Court began to think it untrue, and that the Duke of Milan had been deceived, but on the evening of the 21st at 9 p.m. the Emperor was assured of the election by a letter from Don Juan Emanuel, his ambassador at Rome.

Instantly on that evening the Emperor caused all the bells in Brussels to be rung as a mark of rejoicing; and this morning he went to the Cathedral, where he had high mass chanted as thanksgiving for this boon; a Pope having been elected more devoted to his will than he himself could have desired.

* "Maistro Adriano è fato Papa."

1522.

Pope Adrian VI. was born at Utrecht, of the lowest parentage, and reared at Louvain, where he applied himself to literature. He subsequently became the Emperor's preceptor, and Dean of Louvain. Seven years ago he was sent ambassador to the late King Ferdinand the Catholic, in Spain, where he obtained the bishopric of Tortosa, and subsequently the red hat.

Considers it a miraculous circumstance that by so great a number of Cardinals assembled in conclave choice should have been made of one who was absent and scarcely known to them. The Pope is reported to be very religious and to abound in all good qualities. He celebrates mass daily, and performs all the duties of a virtuous prelate.

This morning he (Contarini) and all the other ambassadors went to congratulate the Emperor and the Infant [Archduke Ferdinand].

The Imperial ministry are despatching to the Pope an individual who transacts his affairs at the Emperor's court.

Transmits letters from the Ambassador Badoer in France addressed to him (Contarini) by Surian, and received through Spinelli, the English ambassador—Sir Richard Wyngfield—having gone back to England. Spinelli said the bearer of the letters came to Brussels in the company of a herald from the King of England. Has ascertained that the herald is on his way to the Switzers, probably to prevent them from helping the French to recover the Milanese. An ambassador from England to the Switzers is expected at Brussels in a few days.

The Hungarian ambassador has returned from England, where he was unable to obtain any aid; whereas the Imperialists have promised to succour Hungary with one-half of the troops voted to the Emperor for his coronation by the Diet of Worms, though nothing is decided about their immediate march.

Brussels, 22nd January 1522.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Jan. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 341.

396. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

News has arrived of the election of Adrian VI., which Cardinal Wolsey takes amiss, as the Emperor did not aid him (Wolsey) to obtain the popedom. France and England have been [hitherto] ill disposed towards each other, but now, owing to this election, it is supposed that the King of England will attend to his amusements, by so much the more as the King of France has sent to tell him that he will not interfere with Scotland. In England there is a very great scarcity of bread and wine, which cost double the usual price, when any can be obtained.

Dated 27th January. Registered by Sanuto, 28th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 28.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta
v. xlix. p. 62,
tergo.

397. DOGE ANTONIO GRIMANI to HENRY VIII.

Thanks for the King's letter to the Emperor, requesting the release of a Venetian trading galley, and a ship seized at St. Sebastian's. Compliments the King on his royal and heroic endowments, moral 1522.

and physical; as also on the wealth and military repute of his kingdom; and requests protection for the Venetian traders and their goods in England.

Ayes, 161. Noes, 17. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 27 lines.]

Jan. 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 63.

398. DOGE ANTONIO GRIMANI to CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Can hear no more agreeable news from England than that Wolsey, who rules the country so prosperously, perseveres in his good disposition towards Venice; a fact recently confirmed by the readiness with which he had addressed letters to the Emperor for the release of the Venetian galley and ship detained at St. Sebastian's.

Considers it a source of congratulation to possess the goodwill of one who not only enjoys authority with his own King, but is also courted by many other potentates.

Ayes, 161. Noes, 17. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 27 lines.]

Jan. 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta
v. xlix. p. 63,
tergo.

399. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Have received his letters of 6th January, and commend the form in which he negotiated with the King and Cardinal.

Regret to hear of the accident which befell the Donata galley and the ship its consort in Biscay. Have seen the copy of the letters written by the King of England to the Emperor for their release, for which they enclose letters of thanks to the King and Cardinal.

Should the galley and ship not have been released when the ambassador receives the present missive, he is to inform the King and Cardinal that it was at their invitation that the Sate sent the galleys to England, and with the firm belief that the voyage would be made under their protection, as notified by the Cardinal heretofore to the Signory through the Venetian Ambassador [Sebastian Giustinian?].

Should any outlay be needed for this release, to desire the Venetian consul in London to assemble the Venetian merchants, and persuade them to disburse the sum required, placing it to the account of average payable by the said galley and ship.

Ayes, 31.

Amendment to the foregoing letter:—Should the ambassador understand that the Biscayans refuse to release the ships, he is to suggest that the King should declare to such Biscayans as may be in England with their ships and goods that he will make an hostile demonstration against them.

Ayes, 141. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 47 lines.]

Jan. 29.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 292.

400. The GOVERNORS OF BRESCIA and the PROVEDITOR-GENERAL PESARO to the SIGNORY.

Transmit advices; also news received at Mantua from the Imperial Court, that the Duke of Albany had entered Scotland 1522.

pacifically as King, and that a matrimonial alliance would be contracted between the Emperor and the King of England.

Brescia, 29th January. Registered by Sanuto, 30th January.

[Italian.]

Jan. 30.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 125.
St. Mark's
Library.

401. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Details a long conference held by him with the Chancellor Gattinara about the negotiations for an adjustment between the Emperor and the Venetian Signory. In the course of the conversation Gattinara said to him:—

“Let the Signory be convinced that the Duke Francesco Sforza will remain in Milan, and of this (as written by us to our ambassador in Venice) we are willing to give the State valid security—even that of the King of England if they choose; and I, who am an Italian, seek and desire this for the liberty of Italy, for which the Emperor will hazard all he has, as likewise for the support of the interests of the Church, which is now suffering through spoliation.”

On quitting the Chancellor, went to the Bishop of Palencia, who told him that the Emperor's voyage to Spain would certainly be made; that in a fortnight the Court would move hence to Bruges, then to Calais, and from Calais to England, remaining there a month, and then proceeding to Spain. The Chancellor, on the other hand, had said this was doubtful.

Brussels, 30th January 1522.

[Italian, 6½ pages.]

Jan. 30.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 126.
St. Mark's
Library.

402. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Told by the Bishop of Palencia that the Emperor has it in his power to make terms with the King of France, who is already weary of his present position of dependence on the King of England, the Signory, and the Switzers.

Informed today by the Papal Nuncio that the King of France has sent commissioners to Cambrai, and invited the Emperor to do the like, for the purpose of making an adjustment, which the Imperialists reject, solely on account (the Nuncio believed) of the King of England.

Brussels, 30th January 1522.

[Italian, ½ page.]

Feb. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 45.

403. ANTONIO SURIAN to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Cardinal Wolsey, talking with him about the King of France, said: “The Signory leagued with France for the defence of her territory, and to be enabled to retain it; but it would be better for her to effect this through another channel, and make a league thus—the Emperor, the King of England, the King of Hungary, and the Signory, together with the future Pope; and be he who he may their Majesties will promise to make him join it.” This league, however, was not to be against France, but for the [mutual] defence of territories.

Note by Sanuto, that a motion was made by the Sages, and carried, to answer Surian, sending him the clause in the league with France stipulating the mutual defence of the territories, and desiring him to show it to Cardinal Wolsey.

1522.

Three letters, dated 14th and 23rd January and 3rd February.
Registered by Sanuto 11th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 3.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 320.

404. GASPARO CONTARINI, to his Brother-in-law, MATTEO DANDOLO.

Supposes that through his (Contarini's) letters to the Senate, Dandolo will have heard that the new Pope was of the lowest parentage. His father was a carpenter, who from poverty abandoned him, and thus the future Pope was compelled to beg his bread from door to door. He was adopted by a person, whom he ever after called father, and at whose cost he obtained his first education. Subsequently he was instructed at the charge of the consort of Charles Duke of Burgundy.* She was in the habit of defraying the expenses of certain students in the university of Louvain. As one of them, he made considerable progress in philosophy and divinity, but was above all renowned for his morality and virtue. On this account, when the present Emperor had passed from childhood to youth, the late Emperor Maximilian summoned Adrian to Brussels, and appointed him tutor to the Archduke Charles. The probity of Adrian was already remarkable, and the Archduke named him secretary and privy councillor, and gave him a provostship in the cathedral of Louvain. He afterwards went ambassador to the Archduke's grandfather, Ferdinand of Spain, who made him Bishop of Tortosa, and obtained for him the cardinal's hat from Leo X., and finally, to the surprise of everybody, he has been created Pope.

Luther's sect gains strength in Saxony. This internal malady will be very prejudicial to the interests of Christendom.

Brussels, 3rd February 1522. Registered by Sanuto, 18th February.

[Latin.]

Feb. 3.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 128.
St. Mark's
Library.

405. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

When speaking about the mission of Dom. Philiberto [Naturelli?]† to Cambrai with the Hungarian ambassador [Azalino], was told by him that it concerned private business, as the Emperor would never negotiate any agreement with France, save through the King of England.

Brussels, 3rd February 1522.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

* Charles the Bold took for his third wife Margaret of York, who died at Mechlin in 1503. The marriage ceremony of the sister of Edward IV. to the Duke of Burgundy was performed on the 3rd of July 1468, when the future Adrian VI. was nine years old: so the English princess may be said to have commenced her reign in Flanders with befriending one of the most virtuous individuals that ever ruled the Apostolic See. I believe this fact has not been recorded by any popular historian.

† Provost of Utrecht.

1522.

Feb. 4.

406. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 129.
St. Mark's
Library.

Transmits letters from the Ambassador Surian in England, stating that Cardinal Wolsey had promised Surian that the King of England would give security for the Donata galley and the ship detained in Biscay. The Emperor required this security to be available either here in Flanders or in Biscay, and the Cardinal has given instructions accordingly to the new English ambassador now on his way to the Imperial Court. Understands he has already crossed the Channel, and will be at Brussels in two days, together with the English ambassador accredited to the Switzers.

Brussels, 4th February 1522.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Feb. 10.

407. The SAME to the SAME.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 130.
St. Mark's
Library.

On the evening before last two English ambassadors arrived at Brussels. One of them [Sir Robert Wyngfeld], destined to reside at the Imperial Court, is the brother of the ambassador who departed thence lately [Sir Richard Wyngfeld], and the other [Dr. William Knight] is on his way to the Switzers.

Yesterday sent them a message, announcing his wish to visit them as usual with regard to new ambassadors on their arrival at the Court, and also for the sake of learning what orders they had received from the King and Cardinal about "the Donata," one of the Flanders galleys now detained in Biscay. Although they refused to receive any visits until after their audience of the Emperor, sent his secretary today to the new ambassador resident, who said he had received no instructions respecting the galleys. Has not yet received the letter from Cardinal Wolsey alluded to in the accompanying despatch from Surian, and does not believe the Imperialists will be satisfied with the Cardinal's security.

The Emperor's voyage to Spain seems to have been procrastinated, owing to the present disturbances in Italy. Many are of opinion that he is attending their result.

On the 9th visited the Emperor's confessor (a Franciscan friar) and discussed the beneficial effects of peace between the Emperor and France. The confessor remarked that it occasionally happens after all human hope of some desired object is at an end, that the Almighty then effects it through some unexpected channel. Leaves the State to draw its own conclusions from these words.

Brussels, 10th February 1522.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Feb. 11.

408. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 15.

Announces the death of the French ambassador [De la Bâtie ?] No honours were paid him at his funeral, which was attended solely by Surian. A new French ambassador has arrived.* He had audience of King Henry, and said he was going to Scotland to protest that unless the Duke of Albany departed thence he would be in disgrace with the Crown of France. He thus convinced the King and Cardinal of the goodwill of his most Christian Majesty towards England with regard to the affairs of Scotland.

* Qu. Mons. de Neufuy (or Neufville?). See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, Vol. III., Nos. 1998-1999.

1522.

Has received the Emperor's letter to the Governors of Biscay about the release of the Flanders galley, and sent it to the captain, by whom it was forwarded to the master. The Cardinal declined to send the letter he (Surian) had written to the Emperor about this release, saying he would first of all see the result of the Emperor's own letter. Combated this resolve strongly, but in vain.

London, 8th and 11th February.. Registered by Sanuto, 15th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 13.

409. POPE ADRIAN VI.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 308.

News from Trent, that on the 18th ultimo the Emperor, being at Brussels, heard of the election of Pope Adrian VI., and that he made great signs of rejoicing for this auspicious event. He immediately despatched a messenger to Spain. Subsequently a decision was formed in his Council for his voyage to Spain as soon as the weather served. He will leave a powerful army in Flanders, sufficient both for defensive and offensive operations against France, under the command of Madame Margaret and his brother Ferdinand. The latter is to be Vicar-General and Imperial Lieutenant of all Germany, the Emperor having resigned to him the duchy of Wurtemberg and county of Tyrol, besides the five provinces of Austria already given. It is certain the Emperor has made a good final arrangement with the King of England, and renewed the matrimonial alliance with him, all for the destruction of France. With the same object the King of England has sent an envoy to the Switzers, exhorting them not to stir at the request of any one, either in Italy or elsewhere, and assigning as a reason that he means to concert an adjustment in order to attack the Turk.

[Italian.]

Feb. 13.

410. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library.

Letter no. 131.

Visited the new English ambassador [Sir Robert Wyngfeld], who said he had no instructions concerning the galley and ship detained in Biscay.

The English ambassador destined for Switzerland [Knight] departed on the 11th instant.

Brussels, 13th February 1522.

[Italian, 6 pages.]

Feb. 14.

411. The SAME to the SAME.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library.

Letter no. 132.

The Bishop of Palencia told him that the Emperor firmly intended to go to Spain, either by way of England or Italy. Inquired which of the two passages he would take, as opinions thereon varied. The Bishop made answer, "Should he not change his mind, according to what has been settled hitherto, he will go by way of England; and let others say what they please."

Brussels, 14th February 1522.

[Italian, 7 pages.]

Feb. 14.

412. The DOGE and SENATE to VINCENZO PRIULI, Captain of the Flanders Galleys.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 67,
tergo.

As his consort, the Donata galley, has been detained in the waters of Biscay, while he proceeded on his voyage with the other two 1522.

galleys, desire him on his arrival at Hampton, should he not have been joined by the Donata galley, to commence notwithstanding the period of demurrage, according to the form of his auction contract.

On the expiration of the period of demurrage, should the third galley not be already released, or its arrival be delayed, he is then to remain at Hampton until the receipt of further orders.

Ayes, 182. Noes, 10. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian, 12 lines.]

Feb. 17.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii. p. 318.

413. VISIT of CHARLES V. to ENGLAND.

Advices from Brescia, transmitted on 16th February by Hironimo da Chà da Pesaro, Proveditor-General for the Mainland.

The brother of the Bishop of Trent writes from the castle of Stenech, in date of 13th February, that several letters from the Imperial Court announce that the Emperor and his brother Don Ferdinand are of one mind. The Emperor has given Don Ferdinand all the countries (paesi) of Austria, all the countries (paesi) of the lake of Constance, the duchy of Brandenburg (sic), and the county of the Tyrol; and by consent of the Electors and Princes of Germany, the Emperor leaves him as Vicar and Imperial Lieutenant there.

In March the Emperor is going by sea to Spain. The ships have already arrived. A fleet for the voyage having been prepared in England, the King of France sent six persons to burn it, but they were taken beforehand and hanged.

The relationship (parentela)* has been concluded between the Emperor and the King of England, who, during the Emperor's absence, has undertaken to sustain the war against France in the Low Countries. The King of England has let the Switzers know that any affront (dispiacere) offered by them to the Emperor will be taken by him (the King) as a personal injury. The Emperor has sent ambassadors of rank to the Switzers to persuade them to desert France, but there is great dissension among them.

In Flanders a very small measure (muid) of wine costs 15 "gros." The mother of the King of France sent 50 carts of good wine as a present to Madame Margaret, requesting her to reconcile the Emperor to her son, and offering to do the like on her own part, but they have effected nothing whatever.

[Italian.]

Feb. 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 106.

414. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor is content to make a truce with the King of France. King Henry and Cardinal Wolsey are therefore endeavouring to effect it, and the ambassadors are in London, but the King of France insists on having his duchy of Milan.

Dated from the 11th to the 18th February. Registered by Sanuto, 4th April.

[Italian.]

* The marriage of the Princess Mary to the Emperor.

1522.

Feb. 18.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 133.

415. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor has determined on going to England. Last Sunday the Count of Nassau, in his Majesty's name, announced this journey to all the gentlemen when at mass, and that it would be commenced on the 15th proximo, requiring all those who wish to follow his Majesty to look to their arms and horses. The Emperor promised to give them two quarters' salary,* of which they have not received one penny during the last nine months; and the third rate is to be paid them in England.

This journey of the Emperor's is supposed to be for the purpose of forming some alliance with the King of England, and obtaining money from him, there being, moreover, a report of the marriage of the King's daughter with the Emperor.

Some persons are of opinion that the Emperor will return to Flanders and go to Spain by way of Italy, but those of sounder judgment consider it certain that having gone so far as England he will continue his voyage from thence to Spain. This agrees with statements made by the Bishop of Palencia.

Brussels, 18th February 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Feb. 24.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 134.

416. The SAME to the SAME.

Yesterday the Emperor, together with his Spanish gentlemen, played at the cane game, in which his brother the Infant likewise took part. They were dressed in the Moorish fashion, and tilted first in the park, and then on the town square. It was a delightful sight.†

The preparations for the Emperor's journey to England seem to proceed slowly.

Brussels, 24th February 1522.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Feb. 28.

Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xliii. p. 122,
tergo.

417. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

Have this morning received letters from the Signory's ambassador in England, dated the 18th and 24th ult. By the former he announces a proposal made to him by Cardinal Wolsey for a league between the future Pope,‡ the Emperor, the King of England, the Signory, and others, no mention being made of France. In his second letter he writes that at another conference on the same subject, Wolsey told him he did not mean the league to be against any one, not even against the King of France, on whom he said the King of England did not intend to wage war, nor would the Cardinal ever counsel him to do so, unless compelled by extreme necessity; so that his intention was to form this league solely for the security and preservation of the confederates' dominions.

* "Due page a conto della lor provisione."

† "Fu delectevol spectaculo." An account of the cane game at Madrid, in 1649, is given in Lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion, p. 729, ed. Oxford, 1843.

‡ Adrian VI. was elected Pope, the 9th of January 1522.

1522.

As this proposal is worthy of the knowledge of King Francis, desire the ambassador to impart it to the King and Madame, praying his Majesty to keep the whole very secret. The Signory's reply shall in like manner be communicated to the King, with whom they intend to maintain their alliance.

Ayes, 23. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 0.

Memorandum.—The letter was written on the 24th instant, a duplicate being sent, and it was in cipher.

[Italian, 19 lines.]

March 1.
Senato Mar.
v. xx. p. 1.

418. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for payment of the following sums to Ludovico Falier, ambassador elect to the King of England.

Four months' salary for his own expenses and those of his attendants, at the rate of 120 ducats per month, according to the decree whereby he was elected	-	-	ducats 480
For horse furniture and trunks	-	-	„ 30
For the purchase of 11 horses, according to the decree	-	-	„ 150
For two couriers	-	-	„ 40
Gift to the secretary as usual	-	-	„ 30
		Ducats	730

Ayes, 166. Noes, 6. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 8 lines.]

March 1.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 69.

419. The DOGE and SENATE to the CAPTAIN of the FLANDERS GALLEYS.

Have desired the Ambassador Contarini to obtain letters from the Emperor for the release of the galley and ship detained in Biscay, and furnished him with a letter from the Procurator, Alvise Pisani, who thereby gave security in Flanders. Authorize him (the captain) to disburse in this affair from 1,500 to 2,000 ducats, to be passed to the account of average on the merchandise and freights of the galley and ship. Should the security given by Pisani not be for the full amount required by the Emperor, the Venetian merchants in England are to supply the deficit, the goods and freights of the Donata galley and ship being held accountable to those who give the security.

Ayes, 185. Noes, 6. Neutrals 3.

[Italian, 20 lines.]

March 1.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 135.

420. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor returned from Mechlin to Brussels on Wednesday. As it is now carnival time, he devotes himself to the pleasures of the season. He has ordered the performance on Sunday of a joust, in which he and the Infant will take part. Nothing more is said about his journey to England.

Brussels, 1st March 1522.

[Italian, 1 page.]

1522.

March 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii, p. 55.421. TOMASO CONTARINI to GIUSTINIAN CONTARINI.

Yesterday letters were received from Spain from the new Pope, dated the 26th ultimo. He will accept the dignity, and endeavour to adjust the affairs of Christendom. He has confirmed the Marquis of Mantua as gonfalonier of the Church. The affairs of Spain are quieted and in a fair way. The Emperor's journey to England is doubtful.

Brussels, 5th March 1522. Registered by Sanuto, 18th March.

[Italian.]

March 5.

Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 136,
St. Mark's
Library.

422. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Being yesterday with the Nuncio [Caracciolo] in the company of the English ambassadors [Sir Robert Wyngfeld and Sir Thomas Spinelli], was shown by them a letter from the English herald, dated Zurich, the 25th ult. This letter, however, they did not read, but they stated that the Switzers had received a protest from the Princes of Germany, to the effect that Milan was an Imperial "chamber," and therefore the Switzers must beware of what they are about. The English ambassadors also said that a Diet which had been convened was put off until the arrival of the English ambassador,—whose passage through Brussels he (Contarini) had already mentioned,—and that the Switzers who marched in favour of the French had returned home.

Last Sunday the Emperor jousted. On one side was his Majesty with eleven lords and gentlemen dressed in white, and on the opposite side the Infant [Don Ferdinand] with eleven others dressed in tawny. The Emperor excelled all his competitors, nor was there any one who came at all near him.* Such was the opinion of all present.

Yesterday they held a tournament, fighting in the Albanian fashion, first with spears and then with swords. In this encounter the Emperor likewise bore the palm, so that assuredly in his own person, whether in sitting his horse or in the use of his weapons, his Majesty did all that could be expected from an accomplished cavalier.

Returns thanks for having been appointed Sage for the Mainland.†

Letters have been received from Spain, but they make no mention of the Donata galley detained in Biscay.

Brussels, 5th March 1522.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

March 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii, p. 128.

423. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Conversations with Cardinal Wolsey, who hopes to conclude the truce, but the King of France would fain have the duchy of Milan. The Cardinal is negotiating for things to remain as they are, and the other matters to be discussed, as it will be easy to arrange about the Milanese.

* "Ne fu alcuno che ad una gran zonta se li acostasse."

† The appointment implied that the Republic was satisfied with Contarini. A similar compliment was paid to Giustinian whilst in England. (See his Despatches, vol. ii. p. 276, date London 28 June 1519.)

1522.

London, 8th and 10th March. Registered by Sanuto, 11th April.
[Italian.]

March 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 113.

424. ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, and VICENZO PRIULI, Captain of the Flanders Galleys, to the SIGNORY.

Concerning the galley detained in Biscay, when Surian spoke about its release, Cardinal Wolsey told him he would not write letters for its release because* he had been desired to say nothing more about it, adding that the Signory need no longer send galleys on that voyage, as they come so poorly loaded that no profit is made thence in England as formerly. He also complained of the Signory for aiding the King of France to maintain the war against the Emperor. In reply justified the Signory's proceedings.

Dated London, 10th March, and Hampton, 17th March. Registered by Sanuto, 6th April.

[Italian.]

March 13.
Contarini's
Original Letter
Book,
Letter no. 138,
St. Mark's
Library.

425. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

During the last four or five days there has been no further talk of the Emperor's departure for Spain. Don Ugo de Moncada and the Master of the Horse departed hence on the 11th for Zealand, to inspect the fleet there and have it put in order.

The Chancellor, Gattinara, said the Emperor intended to be at the seaside on the 10th of April, but left it doubtful whether he would embark in Zealand or at Calais.

The Count of Nassau went lately to Antwerp to raise money for the payment of the two quarters' salary (2 quartironi) due to the gentlemen of the Court. The people of Antwerp offered him 70,000 florins, equal to 35,000 ducats.

Has heard on good authority that the Emperor in this his need asked the King of England for a loan of 200,000 ducats, reducing his demand subsequently to one-half of that amount. The King required security of some sort or another, the particulars of which were unknown to him (Contarini); but the result was that the Emperor declined doing anything further in this matter. The union therefore between these two sovereigns appears to be less close than is reported at Brussels.

Brussels, 13th March 1522.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

March 17.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 69.

426. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Received his letters dated 18th and 24th January and 3rd February, addressed to the Council of Ten, acquainting them with the league proposed by Cardinal Wolsey. Thank the King and Cardinal

* "Li disse che 'l non volera far lettere per la sua liberation perchè li era sta imposto silenzio più non parlasse di questo." for their proceedings in favour of the State. For many years the link between England and the Signory has been equal in strength to that which bound them to any other sovereign.

1522.

Their truce with the Emperor is maintained inviolate, and they desire to make peace with him. During the present disturbances they have taken no steps at variance with the truce.

Have always acted towards the King of France as bound by their confederacy, according to the articles, of which they enclose a copy for the ambassador's use.

Abhor strife and discord between the Princes of Christendom, and hope therefore that the Cardinal, who has undergone incredible fatigue and vigils in order to make peace between the Emperor and the King of France, will now bring the negotiation to an auspicious close, the times being now changed, and Pope Leo, who perhaps thwarted it,* having died. Wolsey can do nothing that would contribute so much to the glory of the King of England and himself. Christendom would then be preserved from its powerful and formidable enemy, Sultan Solyman.

Ayes, 151. Noes, 29. Neutrals, 10.

[Italian, 41 lines.]

March 17.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 4,
tergo.

427. NEGOTIATIONS with ENGLAND and FRANCE.

Motion in the Council of Ten and Junta for communicating to the Senate the letters of the ambassadors in England and France to the Council of Ten, and all other letters relating to this matter.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 11 lines.]

March 18.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 70,
tergo.

428. The DOGE AND SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

Have made answer to their ambassador in England with regard to the league proposed by Cardinal Wolsey, that so great was their respect for the King of France, that they consider themselves allied with him as much as with any other prince, and purpose remaining thus perpetually; that they observed their truce with the Emperor, &c. (as in No. 426).

Ayes, 175. Noes, 18. Neutrals, 11.

[Italian, 61 lines.]

March 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 48.

429. The SIGNORY to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in FRANCE.

(Proposed by the Sages.)

The ambassador in England has written to the State, in date of — January, that Cardinal Wolsey told him it would be well for the Republic, besides the truce now current with the Emperor, to make peace. The Senate replied they were content to make peace, such as existed before the war with the late Emperor Maximilian.

All this to be communicated by the ambassador to the King of France.

[Italian.]

* “Che forse la difficultava.”

1522.

March 19.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 140.
St. Mark's
Library.

430. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

According to a statement made by the English ambassadors [Sir Robert Wyngfeld and Sir Thomas Spinelli] the ships of their nation have taken certain French vessels in the seas of Flanders, and when the French ambassador remonstrated, that this was an act of war, the King of England replied that if he purposed war, he should adopt another fashion, and that the ships had been captured for the freedom of navigation, as they belonged to corsairs, whose outrages in those harbours and seas were said not to have the consent of the King of France.

The King of England assumes the protection of the towns in Burgundy and Flanders, and promises to defend them against the King of France in case the Emperor goes to Spain; though at any rate it is said his Imperial Majesty will pass his Easter at Bruges.

Brussels, 19th March 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

March 20.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 141.
St. Mark's
Library.

431. The SAME to the SAME.

Has received a missive from the State concerning the "Donata" galley detained in Biscay, desiring him to obtain fresh letters for its release, or to send duplicates and triplicates of the old ones.

Having heard from the captain of the Flanders galleys that he had forwarded the original letters to Biscay, it seemed desirable to await the reply, because in the present state of affairs between the Signory and the Emperor any steps taken would be fruitless. The most he could obtain would be duplicates of the original letters; nor could they be transmitted otherwise than through England, as the road by land is closed. The English ambassadors [Wyngfeld and Spinelli] have received no orders respecting the galley.

Brussels, 20th March.

[Italian, 5½ pages.]

March 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. pp. 162.

432. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

King Henry is raising troops with all his might (a furia), and intends to invade Scotland.

London, 22nd March 1522. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd April.

[Italian.]

March 23.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 142.
St. Mark's
Library.

433. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Ambassador Surian forwarded to him from England the accompanying letters from the captain of the Flanders galleys, who also wrote to him (Contarini) detailing the actual state of the "Donata" galley detained in Biscay. Therefore, contrary to the intention announced in his despatch of the 20th, he determined to discuss the matter with the Bishop of Palencia. Yesterday narrated to him the seizure of the wines and other merchandise, and how much the trade of Venice was injured by the detention of the galley at St. Sebastian's. Requested him to obtain peremptory letters from the Emperor to the officials in Biscay. The Bishop replied that the Emperor was not accustomed to write a second time to any of his subjects until after the receipt of their replies to his first letters, but requested him (Contarini) to draw up a memorial for the pardon of the pilots who accompanied the galleys, and who had been banished for life from their native towns on pain of hanging. The Bishop said it was true that owing to the disturbances in Biscay there might be some difficulty, but he believed the Emperor's letters would be obeyed. Perceiving that the Bishop considered the result doubtful, wrote to Surian that the King and Cardinal might greatly aid the matter by writing warmly about it to the Emperor, and giving orders in conformity to their ambassadors at Brussels.

1522.

The Bishop said the Emperor's departure would take place speedily, that his voyage to Spain was quite settled, that he would keep his Easter at Calais, or perhaps in England, and that Contarini must prepare for the Spanish voyage, offering him a ship for himself, and every other necessary convenience.

Brussels, 23rd March 1522.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

March 23.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 143.
St. Mark's
Library.

434. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

After receiving the reply about the "Donata" galley from the Bishop of Palencia proceeded to the Chancellor [Gattinara]. Told him what had been done by the Biscayans, and requested his advice how to obtain strong letters from the Emperor.

Announced that he had received the security for 3,000 ducats from the Procurator Alvise Pisani. The Chancellor said the security must be for appearance on trial and payment of the award, and that the galley was worth more than 3,000 ducats. Replied that the value was less than Gattinara supposed, but the loss greater on account of the rotation (muda), and of the performance of the voyage at a bad season. The Chancellor insisted that the security must be such as he had stated, and inquired how he (Contarini) could expect him to advocate the Signory's cause at the Imperial Council board after the obstacles raised by the Republic to the passage of the lansquenets through Valcamonica.

Brussels, 23rd March 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

March 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 134.

435. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Including ships and galleons, King Henry has fitted out 32 sail to meet the Emperor, who, it is said, means to cross over to Spain, and will come to confer with the King of England.

London, 21st and 24th March. Registered by Sanuto, 14th April.

[Italian.]

March 27.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 145.
St. Mark's
Library.

436. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday letters arrived from Italy, written by the Duke of Milan, in date of Piacenza the 15th, announcing that the French and Switzers were posted between Pavia and Milan; that he was expecting Janin de' Medici,* then on the march with 100 spears and 2,000 foot; and that on the arrival of this force the Duke purposed going out of Pavia (sic) and attacking the French camp, which was said to comprise the troops of the Signory, although, according to the last advices, they had made a show of crossing the Adda.

* Giovanni de' Medici, delle bande nere.

1522.

This the Imperialists took much amiss, and they were yet more disturbed by the contents of an intercepted letter, brought to them by this same post, from the King of France to the Signory, dated the 26th [February], returning thanks to the State for the loan of 25,000 crowns, and asking for as many more in the course of the present month, and also expressing his intention to follow the advice given him by the State to come into Italy.

This intercepted letter was received by the Papal Nuncio [Caracciolo] at Brussels, and read this morning at the Imperial Council board.

In consequence of these advices his secretary, when at the palace this morning, was pointed at by everybody, and could scarcely show his face. Prays God that the result be good, most especially at this moment on account of the Flanders galleys.*

It was reported this morning that the Emperor had determined to depart hence next Thursday, the 3rd of April, and is sending Don Ugo de Moncada back to Zealand with money to pay the masters of the ships, and to make the other necessary arrangements respecting the fleet.

Brussels, 27th March 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

March 28.

437. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 14,
tergo.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta, that, in conformity with the vote of the Senate passed on the 1st instant, 730 ducats be given to the nobleman Lodovico Fallier, ambassador elect to England, for his despatch thither, out of the fund set apart for the Signory's ambassadors.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 4 lines.]

March 30.

438. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 146.
St. Mark's
Library.

Yesterday the Chancellor Gattinara invited him to dinner, after which he reproached the State with her policy towards the Emperor, and produced three letters and an extract from a fourth.

The first was from the King of France to Doge Antonio Grimani, on parchment, with the royal signature, and countersigned by Robertet, dated the 27th of February, from St. Germain-en-Laye. Finding it inconvenient to remit money to Mons. de Lautrec at Milan, the King requests the Signory to send him 25,000 crowns, as in the course of March they should be repaid at any place appointed.

The King thanks the Doge for the good advice which Lautrec had imparted in the Signory's name, that his Majesty should go into

* This extract and the following one contain particulars which were communicated by Contarini to Surian, as stated in date 22nd April; but as that letter itself does not exist in the Contarini copy book, its contents are given from the ambassador's narrative to the State.

1522.

Italy for the preservation and increase of the territories of France and Venice. In accordance with this advice, the King purposed departing from St. Germain for Lyons in six or eight days, and proceeding thence into Italy. On this advice, and on the allusion to increase of territory, the Chancellor laid much stress.

The second letter was from the King to his ambassador in Venice, charging him to present the first letter, and to do his utmost to obtain the 25,000 crowns.

The third letter, from the King to Lautrec, alluded to his having already supplied him with 25,000 crowns through Venice, and stated that he should receive 25,000 more through the same channel. He also mentioned his intended departure for Lyons. This third letter was dated the 28th February.

Finally, the Chancellor showed him (Contarini) a paragraph from another letter to Lautrec, informing him that his Majesty had supplied the Duke of Urbino and Renzo da Ceri with 22,000 ducats, which would yield good fruit in that direction, and therefore Lautrec, on his part, was to render them every assistance. This paragraph was on a separate paper by itself. The Chancellor said the rest of the letter had been sent to Rome, as it concerned matters there, that the paragraph quoted relates to a plan for revolutionising the kingdom of Naples, and that the Imperial Government was already acquainted with the plots and agreements in course between the Signory and the King of France.

Pretended that this was the first he had heard of these intercepted letters, and suggested that the French might have sent these letters for the express purpose of their being intercepted. With regard to the 25,000 crowns, said he did not believe in its grant, as the Signory unwillingly incurred her present expenditure for the troops furnished according to treaty.

With regard to the advice given to the King of France to come into Italy, said that Lautrec was anxious for this, and had probably written that such was the opinion of the Signory, but the presence of the King would prove disastrous to the State.

Touching the kingdom of Naples and increase of territory, told the Chancellor he would wager 100 lives against the Signory's ever having dropped the slightest hint of the sort, and that the Doge had pledged his head for the interests of the Emperor, and was content to hold in peace his actual possessions.*

The Chancellor replied that, if the King went into Italy, the Emperor also would appear there in person, or send a great number of troops; and that the Republic had declared in favour of the French more warmly than was necessary, and had made fresh levies.

Rejoined that the State did less than she was bound to do by the treaty.

The Chancellor then used these words: "I desire the welfare and quiet of Italy, but I suspect you will procrastinate until the French receive such a blow as may make you wish for what will

* It is probable that this "increase of territory" signified the five ports of Trani, Brindisi, Otranto, Pulignano, and Gallipoli, of which Venice was deprived in 1509.

1522.

then no longer be in your power, and then old stories will be revived."

The Chancellor said the Emperor would quit Brussels for Bruges before Easter, but many persons doubt this. The preparations are small, and the gentlemen [of the Court] have not yet received any money.

Encloses letters from the Ambassador Surian, dated the 26th, and one from the captain of the Flanders galleys.

Brussels, 30th March 1522.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

April 4.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 148,
St. Mark's
Library.

439. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Last Tuesday the Emperor assembled the deputies of all the provinces of Flanders in the great hall of the palace. The Infant [Don Ferdinand] and Lady Margaret were also present. The Chancellor, in his name, thanked the deputies for the pecuniary subsidy conceded to his Majesty this last year by their Commons, owing to which good results had been obtained, namely, the capture of Tournai and the recovery of Milan, and informed them that having now to go into Spain, the Emperor desired to take leave of them, and left the government of Flanders to Lady Margaret, and that the King of England had assumed the protection of all those provinces.

The Flemings, from the highest to the lowest, regret this departure, but none more than the Emperor himself, as he has been born and bred in Flanders.

Brussels, 4th April 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April 8.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 124.

 440. The SIGNORY to the AMBASSADOR SURIAN in England.

(Proposed by the Sages in the Senate.)

Reply to his letter concerning the complaints made by Cardinal Wolsey against the Signory, namely:—(1.) That the Signory is the power which gives money to France, and more than she is bound to give, and thus maintains the war in Italy. (2.) That the Signory has instigated the Turk to attack the King of Hungary, thus compelling the Emperor to send troops to assist him, as he is his brother-in-law, and this for the sake of preventing the Emperor from breaking the truce with the Republic. (3.) That an English merchant has been killed in the Venetian territory, and robbed of 40,000 ducats. (4.) That the Venetian galleys go to England empty, and cause the King more loss than profit. (5.) That they will not pay for the wools in ready money but by barter. (6.) That the wine measures are less than usual and the butts smaller, &c.

These charges were answered one by one, and confuted, and the letter clearly vindicated the Signory's rights. It was carried in the Council unanimously.

[Italian.]

April 8.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 76.

441. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

On the day before yesterday received his letters of the 23rd February and 13th and 16th March, containing sundry complaints made to him by Cardinal Wolsey. Are disquieted by the Cardinal's anger, as both by word and deed he has always favoured the interests of the State.

1522.

The accusation that the Senate had decreed an alliance with Sultan Solyman to the annihilation of the Emperor is absurd and impious. Venice has been the bulwark of Christendom against Turkish aggression, and protected the Apostolic See.

For the defence of Hungary her kings have been supplied by the Signory at various periods with upwards of 500,000 ducats.

As for the mission of a Venetian ambassador to the Turk, it has always been the custom of the State to send one to every new sultan, to congratulate him, and confirm ancient treaties, and Sultan Solyman had sent an ambassador to Venice, announcing his accession. The King of England, moreover, has approved the Signory's policy. In January last the Venetian ambassador [Marco Minio] quitted Constantinople on his way to assume the government of Candia, and the successor of the late "Bailo" is on the point of departure from Venice for the protection of Venetian subjects and merchants [in Turkey] as usual.

The report of a fresh treaty between Venice and the King of France, and of a loan furnished to him by the State, as acknowledgment for places promised them, is perfectly untrue. They did for the King of France what they were bound to do in virtue of the treaty.

The Signory has not given money, nor even the slightest military subsidy, either to Francesco Maria [Della Rovere, ex Duke of Urbino] or to the Baglioni family.

Deprecate the idea of their fomenting disturbances in Italy, as they have always sought peace and tranquillity among Christians, and especially a reconciliation between the Emperor and France. Desire peace with the Emperor.

Much documentary evidence could be afforded of deeds done by the Venetians heretofore in favour of the Apostolic See. Cardinal Wolsey had alluded to the triple league. When it was proposed for the defence of Pope Leo, the Cardinal deemed it mischievous, and urged the Signory to protract the negotiation. In accordance with the exhortations of so excellent and wise a Cardinal, they renounced the treaty, as appears by their letter to Surian, dated the 16th (sic, 19th?) of August 1521.

In reply to complaints on the part of the merchants, assure him their intention is to treat English merchants as lovingly as the native merchants of Venice.

Concerning that Englishman who is reported to have been plundered in the Venetian territory, and to have lost 40,000 ducats, it appears hardly credible that a single merchant should be the bearer of so considerable a sum. The circumstance had never reached their ears, yet they made inquiries through the Flemish and other merchants, but could not find that such a thing had ever happened.

The light cargoes of the Flanders galleys is occasioned by the scarcity of spices of late years, which proves more injurious to the State and her merchants than to anybody else.

1522.

Desire him to respectfully announce all these replies to the King and Cardinal.

The Signory wishes all prosperity to both of them, nor could any greater additional distinction accrue to the Cardinal, than the reconciliation of the two crowns [Imperial and French] through his perseverance.

Ayes, 154. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 101 lines.]

April 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 207.

442. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The muster of forces now making in England is said to be for an attack on Scotland. Cardinal Wolsey is still endeavouring earnestly to effect a truce between the Emperor and the King of France, in the territories beyond Italy. Preparations are being made for the coming of the Emperor, who will most certainly come to England for an interview with the King, and then cross over to Spain.

London, the 10th of April, at the 16th hour. Registered by Sanuto, 7th May.

[Italian.]

April 10.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 149,
St. Mark's
Library.

443. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

In the course of a conversation the Bishop of Palencia said to him, "Believe me that in Italy, besides those already on our side, we shall moreover have other friends, nor am I alluding to yourselves." Replied, that apparently they had the whole of Italy. The Bishop rejoined, "I am speaking of foreigners," and then, after inculcating great secrecy, said to him positively, "I am speaking of the King of England, who, even in Italy, assists us with what we need, namely money, as we are most abundantly supplied with every other requisite for the war."

Was also told by the Bishop that they had letters from the Pope, dated the 16th of March, and that in the list of the galleys destined for his Holiness' voyage to Rome was comprised the Flanders galley detained at St. Sebastian's. "What," said Contarini, "the other day your lordship blamed the master, saying that the Pope had asked him for his galley, and received for answer that he could not give it without permission from the captain, to whom he had written. Has he now received an answer?" The Bishop replied, "Such was the intelligence given us at the time. Now, by these last letters, according to the list of the galleys, this one of yours is included among them. I can tell you nothing more."

According to general report, the Emperor's departure from Brussels will be delayed until after Easter.

Brussels, 10th April 1522.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

April 11.
Senato Mar,
v. xx. p. 10.

444. The "DONATA" GALLEY.

Decree of the Senate that as the Pope had availed himself of the "Donata" galley, for his voyage to Rome, and as the merchants of Venice had ordered the purchase of merchandise in England sufficient for the freight of all three of the galleys, therefore the master or 1522.

partners of the "Donata" galley, with the consent and knowledge of the captain of the Flanders galleys, do hire one or two ships for the conveyance of such superabundant merchandise as may remain after completion of the cargoes of the two galleys, which are to await the said ship or ships in the port of Hampton during the whole of the month of May. Regulations concerning freight money demurrage, compensation, averages, &c.

An amendment was proposed.

For the original motion, 97. Kinsfolk excluded.

For the amendment: Ayes, 49. Noes, 9. Neutrals, 9.

[Italian, 34 lines.]

April 15.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 150,
St. Mark's
Library.

445. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 13th was told by the Chancellor that the Pope would certainly take the "Donata," and embark in it himself, because it was a safer vessel than any of the others. Does not know on what terms the Pope makes use of it.

The Emperor's departure for England is constantly postponed. It is said he will not depart hence until a fortnight after Easter. Many maintain that he will not quit Flanders this summer. The affairs of Italy, however, cause him thus to procrastinate, and he will regulate his departure according to their result. The Bishop of Palencia had asserted that the Emperor would go first to England, and then to Spain, but the Chancellor represents the voyage to be very doubtful. The gentlemen [of the Court] have not yet received any money.

Brussels, 15th April 1522.

P.S.—The ministry at Brussels, hearing of the descent of the 8,000 Switzers [into Italy] in favour of France, wrote off to the Tyrol for another levy of 10,000 lansquenets to descend in like manner. It is said the funds have been provided, but it is doubtful whether the men can be mustered so immediately, and the Imperial exchequer is quite exhausted. Unless England furnish the money, does not see whence it can be got.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

April 22.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 151,
St. Mark's
Library.

446. The SAME to the SAME.

On Good Friday received letters from the State, desiring him to obtain fresh safeconducts from the Emperor, for the navigation of the Barbary and Flanders galleys. Made the demand of the Chancellor yesterday, alleging the advantages and profit derived from these voyages by his Majesty's territories, which were chiefly engaged in similar traffic. The Chancellor said he would speak about them to the Emperor. Proposed going to the Emperor in the afternoon. The Chancellor desired him not to give himself that trouble, as in the morning his Majesty had taken a slight purge.

The English ambassadors [Sir Robert Wyngfeld and Spinelli] spoke to him (Contarini) lately about the intercepted letters written by the King of France to the Signory, with regard to the money demanded by him of the State, and his coming into Italy. On this subject they expressed themselves with great warmth, saying that the State showed itself more in favour of France than was becoming, and that but for Venice the French would already be out of Italy. From this language the State may infer what is the disposition of their sovereign, with respect to the King of France, against whom they would not express themselves so freely, unless they knew their master's mind.

1522.

As these intercepted letters will probably be communicated to the King and Cardinal in England, has forewarned the Ambassador Surian.

Forwards letters from Surian, the Captain of the Flanders galleys, and the Venetian merchants in London.

Brussels, 22nd April 1522.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

April 24.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 153,
St. Mark's
Library.

447. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 23rd sent his secretary to the Chancellor to inquire about the safeconducts. The Chancellor said he had been unable to mention the subject to the Emperor, who, on St. George's Day [23rd April], attended divine service in honour of the English Order of the Garter.

Went today to the palace, where the Emperor was attending mass in his private chapel. Conversed with the Bishop of Palencia, who in reply to his protestations that the Signory remained staunch to the Emperor, said, "You are deceived, for I likewise have been an ambassador, and noticed that when one power means to break with another, the first person imposed upon is the minister resident with the prince whose friendship is about to be renounced. Thus did King Ferdinand the Catholic when he made the truce with France,* for the first person he deceived was his own ambassador resident with the King of England. You wish to make the King of France supreme in Italy, and we are firmly resolved to obtain supremacy here in Burgundy. There are also other things which the King of France might give us. Remember that you drew Maximilian into the league of Cambrai by the hair of his head."

On the conclusion of the mass, requested the Emperor to prolong the safeconducts, which would expire in a few months, and alleged the advantages which would accrue to such of his Majesty's ports as the Venetian galleys frequented. The reply proved that the Chancellor had already spoken to the Emperor on the subject, and advised him to deny the request.

The Emperor said,—“The other safeconducts have still some time to run. During the interval I shall wait and see how the Signory proceeds, and act accordingly. It is not possible for the Signory at one and the same time to content two such very great enemies as the King of France and I.† Should the Republic be against me, I do not think fit to give her safeconducts; if my friend, she will

* In the year 1514; see Hume (vol. iii. p. 94), who quotes Petrus de Angleria, a Lombard; but this Bishop of Palencia, Pedro Ruiz de la Mota, was a born Spaniard, and his testimony is therefore more authentic.

† “Non è possibile che quella Signoria satisfaci in uno medesimo tempo a dui che sij “non grandissimi inimici insieme come il Re di Francia et io.”

1522.

not need them, as the navigation of her vessels in our waters will be secure."

Endeavoured to give assurance of the Signory's obsequiousness towards the Emperor, who rejoined, "I look at the Republic's deeds, which with regard to me are very sorry;" * and thereupon he entered his chamber.

Brussels, 24th April 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April 28.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 154,
St. Mark's
Library.

448. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 26th, when in the Emperor's chamber (having been invited to accompany him to mass at the cathedral), the English ambassador, Sir Thomas Spinelli, said to him in the presence of his colleague [Sir Robert Wyngfeld], and of the Nuncio, that the Emperor understood a place of his, called Postoina, had been surrounded by 10,000 Turks, adding, "and they passed through your territories,† where they did no damage whatever, a proof that they did not come without your connivance." These words, replete with that spite and ill-will which Spinelli bears the Signory, were uttered in a very vehement voice. Answered him that he ought not to form such an idea of the Republic, which had never failed to defend Christendom with the blood and treasure of her citizens, and with the loss of many of her towns and places, and that if the Turks were under Postoina the State would greatly regret the fact. Mentioned that during the past months the Signory had constantly warned the Emperor and other sovereigns of Sultan Solymán's preparations against Christendom, but no credence was conceded to their notices. Calmly and earnestly endeavoured to rid the bystanders of so evil an impression.

Having been thus apostrophized by Spinelli, complained to the Chancellor of this report. The Chancellor said the intelligence received by the Imperialists did not purport that the Signory had sent for the Turks; but that inference was drawn because, when the Emperor's ambassador at Venice announced their march, the State did not appear to hold it in much account.

Rejoined that in taking defensive measures against the common enemy, the Signory was compelled to avoid arousing suspicion, as in the end Venice would have to bear the brunt single handed, as had frequently been the case, and that it was impossible for the Venetians to make any resistance against 10,000 cavalry in the open field. Moreover that during last year he had often, even with some importunity, communicated to the Chancellor advices from the State concerning these Turkish preparations, which appeared to be disregarded, and malicious persons like Spinelli declared them fictitious.

Then carried his complaints to the Bishop of Palencia, who answered in a very different tone, saying that the Florentine Spinelli

* "Io vedo le opere di quella molto triste verso di me."

† Postoina is situated three or four leagues from the rivers Vipach and Isonzo, which separated the territory of Carniola from the Venetian Friuli.

1522.

was a madman and foul-mouthed;* and that really neither the Emperor nor any other person of intelligence believed the Signory had induced the Turks to attack Christendom, adding, "Yet are you the cause of this mischief, through the assistance given by you to the French in the affairs of Italy."

Asked the Bishop about the Emperor's departure. He replied they were expecting an English ambassador, who quitted London last Saturday, was coming post haste to Brussels, and is the identical Englishman who was ambassador there last winter [Sir Richard Wyngfeld], brother of the resident ambassador [Sir Robert Wyngfeld], Spinelli's colleague.

When talking with the Chancellor, mentioned how desirable it would be to make peace between the Emperor and France. He said the affair was in the hands of the King of England.

Brussels, 28th April 1522.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

April 28.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 155,
St. Mark's
Library.

449. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Chancellor, after telling him that the agreement between the Emperor and France was in the hands of the King of England, added that the affair had been communicated to Surian. Supposes this was an allusion to the league proposed to Surian by Wolsey.

Said he knew nothing about it, and that doubtless the news had reached Gattinara from England. The Chancellor rejoined, "We had the intelligence from Venice, and the Emperor receives advices from an individual who has a seat in your Privy Councils (Conseglì Secreti), through whom we know to a ducat the amount of money given by you to the King of France."

Brussels, 28th April 1522.

[Italian, $\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

May 1.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 156,
St. Mark's
Library.

450. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

Has received the Signory's letters with the copy of its letter to Surian, and the account of the seizure of the Emperor's courier by the Count Ugo de' Pepoli.

According to the third missive, of 12th April, forwarded its enclosures to the captain of the Flanders galleys.

The Emperor is expected to quit Brussels tomorrow.

Brussels, 1st May 1522.

[Italian, $1\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

May 3.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 157,
St. Mark's
Library.

451. The SAME to the SAME.

The Emperor departed hence yesterday.

The English ambassador [Sir Richard Wyngfeld], who had been expected at Brussels, would meet the Emperor at Bruges.

Brussels, 3rd May 1522.

[Italian, 1 page.]

* "Un pazo et licencioso nel parlar."

1522.

May 6.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 158,
St. Mark's
Library.

452. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Departed from Brussels on the 5th, and today reached Antwerp. The Emperor has gone to a place midway between Antwerp and Ghent.

Sir Richard Wyngfeld, who was to have awaited the Emperor at Bruges, has come on to Antwerp, where great honour was paid him by the Emperor, who sent the Governor of Bresse to escort him from his dwelling and back again after audience of his Majesty.

Is certain that Sir Richard Wyngfeld brought the Emperor money. The sum is represented to be considerable. The Imperial ministry transmitted part of it into the Tyrol for the payment of the 10,000 infantry now being raised there; and the Viceroy [Charles de Lannoy] will take part with him to Naples.

The marriage of the Princess of England to the Emperor is concluded; and the King is to send a gentleman to France to intimate the repudiation of her marriage to the Dauphin.

The Imperialists are in high spirits, and especially on account of the good news received from Italy.

Transmits letters from the Ambassador Surian, to whom he will forward the two packets just received from the Signory.

Antwerp, 6th May 1522.

[Italian, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ page.]

May 7.

File No. 5.
Signed Letters,
Chiefs of the Council of Ten.

453. The CHIEFS of the TEN to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

On the 11th of July 1510 it was decreed by the Council of Ten that no ambassador, proveditor, governor, or others employed out of Venice for the Republic should write on State affairs to any individual here, except the Signory, under penalty of 500 ducats and privation of their offices.

This decree the Council of Ten now confirms. No member of the college in Venice to write to any governor, proveditor, ambassador, or other representative of the State, any report of the discussions in the College. The same rule to be observed by all members of the Council of Ten and of the Senate, under penalty of 100 ducats each.

Signed:—Julianus Gradonico, C.C.X., Donatus Marzelo, C.C.X., Dominicus Capelo, C.C.X.

Memorandum.—The [secretary?] Pietro Brixiano to insert this letter in the commission given to all the Signory's governors.

[Italian, 25 lines.]

May 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 237.

454. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The French troops have marched to the borders of Spain. It is reported in England that the Emperor will not quit Flanders so speedily. The negotiation for the truce between the Emperor and the King of France in the territories north of the Alps (le cosse di là) continues.

Dated 9th May. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd May.

[Italian.]

1522.

May 11.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 159,
St. Mark's
Library.

455. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On that morning, at mass in the Cathedral, acquainted the English ambassador Spinelli with the information received from the Signory concerning the Turks, and vindicated the State from the accusations of that Florentine.

Spinelli answered much more civilly than was his wont, saying that he bore no particular hatred to any one, though he certainly had a general detestation of the French, on account of their evil practices; and that in the days of the late Emperor Maximilian, when accredited to the Lady Margaret, he, by order of his King, had performed sundry good offices for the Signory,* which ought, he said, at length to attend to the welfare of Italy and adhere to the Emperor.

The Emperor is to quit Ghent tomorrow, and will stop half way between this city and Bruges, where he is to arrive on Tuesday or Wednesday. Will follow him.

Ghent, 11th May 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

May 13.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 160,
St. Mark's
Library.

456. The SAME to the SAME.

Has just arrived at Bruges, simultaneously with the Emperor. Received there the accompanying letters from Surian and the captain of the Flanders galleys, announcing the arrival off England, at St. Edward's (San Doardo), of the "Donata" galley, which had been detained in Biscay. Has consigned the letters for transmission to the Imperial postmaster. There is a report at Bruges of an order from the King for the arrest of all Frenchmen in England.

Bruges, 13th May 1522.

[Italian, ½ page.]

May 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 252.

457. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The King of England has sent a herald to the King of France to declare war against him, and has despatched 20,000 infantry across to Calais. He has also detained the Signory's Flanders galleys, and would not allow the captain, Vincenzo Priuli, and the masters to depart. Cardinal Wolsey said the King chose to detain them from fear of their being captured by corsairs, and was also apprehensive lest they should join the French fleet and impede the passage to Spain of the Emperor, who had written to him about these galleys; but the King would dismiss them on the Emperor's arrival in Spain. He has likewise detained all the French merchants in England, and their effects. It is understood that the galley of Antonio Donado, in harbour at St. Sebastian's, has been allowed by the Pope to proceed on its voyage. It has apparently been blockaded by seven galleons and 12 Spanish barks, notwithstanding which it has arrived at Hampton.

London, — to 16th May, in cipher.

* These good offices were probably understood to have been performed in 1513, when Spinelli was at Lisle and Termonde, as appears by his letters in vol. VI., "State Papers," pp. 23, 25, 27.

1522.

These letters were forwarded from Lyons on the 26th of May by the Ambassador Badoer, who announced the arrival there of an ambassador from the King of England, but did not state the cause of his mission.

Registered by Sanuto, 5th June.

[Italian.]

May 16.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 161,
St. Mark's
Library.

458. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday thanked the Emperor for the letters written by him to Biscay, saying they had taken effect, as the Flanders galley detained at St. Sebastian's was at liberty. The Emperor made no reply, but his gesture on receiving this intelligence indicated astonishment, and he appeared not much to relish it.

Acquainted the Emperor in the next place with the contents of the Signory's letter concerning the attack on Postoina by the Turks, and the damage done by them. The Emperor rejoined, "But how is this? for here it is said that they were sent for by the Signory, who is so much my friend that she instigated them to ravage my territories; and that they did no damage to the Venetian places." Replied that the Turks had sounded the Isonzo, with the intention of crossing into the Friuli to lay waste that province, which was spared merely because the enemy had not reached so far. The Emperor then said, "I do not believe the accusation, but in truth thus has it been reported."

Contradicts the news of the arrest of the French in England.
Bruges, 16th May 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

May 19.
Misti Con-
siglio X.
v. xlv. p. 32.

459. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ROME.

By his letters of the 13th instant, are acquainted with what was told him by the Reverend English ambassador [Dr. Clerk]* concerning the good offices of the King of England in favour of the State. Is to tell him, in their name, that his offers are most agreeable to them, and that what they have done for him, or his, is much less than they would do at any time when the opportunity presented itself. Is also to testify to the extreme respect they bear to King Henry, as borne by them towards his ancestors, and that they desire the increase and glory of England, in which respect they do not yield to any other power.

Desire the English ambassador's good offices in favour of the State.

Ayes, 27. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 48 lines.]

May 20.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 162,
St. Mark's
Library.

460. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Announces the receipt of orders from the State to show the Emperor in secret the articles of the Signory's alliance with France, and receive his commands thereupon.

Went first of all to the Bishop of Palencia, who said he had the like from the Imperial ambassador at Venice. Read to him the last of the 17 clauses. The Bishop remarked that they now needed many alterations, and that mention must be made of the perpetual expulsion of the French from Italy.

* Richard Pace was also at Rome at this time.

1522.

Then went to the Chancellor, and communicated the transmission of the clauses. The Chancellor replied, "I know not for what purpose the Signory has sent these clauses." Said they had been sent in conformity with an injunction received from the Bishop of Palencia, in the name of the Emperor, who wished to see them, for the purpose of coming to some good arrangement by augmenting or curtailing them. To this the Chancellor replied, "I do not believe the Bishop of Palencia told you this by the will and commission of the Emperor, though it was indeed said that in order to ascertain whether the Signory had exceeded the obligations incurred by her, through the alliance, the Emperor wished to see the clauses. Should your Republic, however, wish to come to an agreement, she must speak in another form. You are well aware of what I told you heretofore concerning the negotiations with Maximilian, who was a much smaller sovereign than the present Emperor. You have given the King of France thousands and thousands of ducats beyond the amount to which you were bound. We have incurred great expense. You must speak, I tell you, in another tone. This present step taken by the Signory is a method of procrastination, and not for the sake of making peace or an agreement."

Contarini answered respectfully that, unless he was drunk at the time,* the Bishop gave him this commission, which he (Contarini) considered suitable and advantageous for both parties. Suggested that the Chancellor should devise some more suitable plan. The Chancellor replied, "We shall go to England, whose King will prove a good mediator, and promise on behalf of the Emperor." Made answer that the State required no further guarantee than the Emperor's own promise, nor any other mediation than that of the Chancellor himself, who had always had the Republic's interest at heart. Then took leave of him, being much dispirited.

Early on the following morning (having passed a sleepless night) went to the Bishop of Palencia with the determination of negotiating in another fashion (a la roversa), being aware that the failure of this negotiation proceeded from the firm belief of the Imperialists that the Signory offered nothing but words, and was heartily French, for often had the Bishop said to him, "You are not French, but arch-French."† On another occasion he said, "There are more Frenchmen at Venice than in Paris."

On arriving at the Bishop's lodging, found him in bed. Said he had been much shocked by the Chancellor's language. Adduced arguments to prove how much this peace would benefit both the Emperor and Venice. Announced the orders contained in the ducal missive of the 4th, which preceded the retreat of the Switzers and the capture of Lodi, so much to the disadvantage of the French.

The Bishop interrupted him, saying, "Did you tell the Chan-

* "Se non era allora imbrago."

† "Vui sete non Fransesi ma Fransosissimi."

1522.

cellor this?" Answered in the negative, and said that if the original proposal were changed the Republic would take the alarm, and doubt the sincerity of the Imperial Cabinet. The Bishop rejoined, "Don't distress yourself; be easy, for I will go now directly and speak with the Chancellor."

Subsequently met the Bishop at the Court. He had spoken to the Chancellor, and desired him (Contarini) to do the like both with the Chancellor and with the Governor of Bresse.* Did so.

Details the arrangements made by him with the Chancellor for the negotiation of a treaty between the Emperor and the Signory. The Chancellor's tone was much lower than on the preceding day. As to the proposal made by the Emperor, which he then denied, he said that it had since been confirmed to him by the Bishop of Palencia.

Bruges, 20th May 1522.

[Italian, 9 pages.]

May 22.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 163,
St. Mark's
Library.

461. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

This afternoon acquainted the Emperor with the commission received from the Signory concerning the treaty of alliance.

The Emperor replied, "Ambassador, I have always been very desirous of making some good agreement with the Signory. The Chancellor has informed me of your negotiations with him. I regret your having been too late; for earlier in the day a more advantageous adjustment might have been effected. Let the State, however, come to a decision, for on my part there will be no remissness."

All the energies of the Imperialists are directed to the expulsion of the French from Italy. It is the Chancellor who mainly exhorts the Emperor to attack them in Italy, and being an Italian he claims the merit of having freed his country from the barbarians. The King of England likewise appears to favour this policy,† being of opinion that he will thus humble France without aggrandizing the Emperor.

Should the Signory think fit to pursue the negotiation for peace whilst the truce is yet current, a special account should be sent him of all the rights of the Republic, coupled with counsel's opinion by some famous jurisconsult.

Has taken leave of the Lady Margaret, who will remain at Bruges until she hears of the Emperor's departure from England, when she will return to Mechlin. She said the Emperor was desirous of peace with the Signory.

The Emperor will depart hence tomorrow, and on Sunday will be at Calais, where 2,000 English have already arrived, and as many more are expected, for the purpose of convoying him across. Some persons maintain that this is the commencement of a muster of troops destined for an attack on France.

Bruges, 22nd May 1522.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

* The Governor of Bresse was the brother-in-law of the Chancellor Gattinara, and one of the chief ministers of Charles V. at this period. Like Gattinara he was a Piedmontese.

† Qu., that of placing Francesco Sforza in the duchy of Milan.

1522.

May 28.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 164,
St. Mark's
Library.

462. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 23rd the Emperor quitted Bruges, and stopped that evening at Newport. On Saturday he proceeded to Dunkirk, and on Sunday he arrived at Calais. On Monday his Majesty embarked and had a good passage, for in about three hours he came from Calais to Dover.

Cardinal Wolsey was waiting for him on the sands with a great number of English gentlemen.

The King of England is at Canterbury, but expected at Dover this evening to meet the Emperor, who will not depart hence until the arrival of his horses and baggage, the passengers alone having come across, and everything else being left behind.

Yesterday at Calais received the accompanying letters from Surian, dated ———, and at Dover others of the 23rd. Consigned them to the postmaster.

Dover, 28th May 1522.

[Italian, $\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

May 31.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 165,
St. Mark's
Library.

463. ANTONIO SURIAN and GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The last letter of me, Antonio, was addressed on the 29th instant to the Signory, to whom I, Gasparo, wrote on the 28th.

On the evening of that day the King of England, with part of his lords and gentlemen (having left the rest of them here), arrived at Dover to meet the Emperor. He came just as the Emperor was about to sit down to supper. So sudden was the announcement of the King's arrival, that the Emperor had scarcely time to meet him at the foot of the stairs of the palace, which is situated within the castle. The two sovereigns then doffed their bonnets and embraced, remaining thus for the space of two "misereres." After the exchange of many loving terms they again clasped themselves in each other's arms.

This done, the Emperor turned towards the gentlemen who had accompanied the King, greeting each of them graciously. The King on his part did the like by those who had come with the Emperor to the foot of the stairs. On reascending them, and entering the palace, the Emperor wanted to give the King the upper hand, to which he would never consent, but placed himself to the left of the Emperor. They went thus arm in arm to the hall where the table had been prepared for supper.

They remained talking there in the presence of Cardinal Wolsey and the Bishop of Durham for some twenty minutes, when the King withdrew into a chamber, leaving the Emperor and the Cardinal, who then sat down to supper together.

The accommodation at Dover being bad, we proceeded to Canterbury, but returned to Dover on the 30th May at 10 a.m., knowing that on that day the Emperor was to make his entry into Canterbury, and wishing to accompany him. We were the only two ambassadors who paid him this compliment, the Papal Nuncio [Caracciolo] and the whole of the Imperial court having preceded him to Canterbury, where they had fixed their residence.

On arriving at Dover on Friday, the 30th of May, the morrow of Ascension Day, we found that the Emperor was gone on board the King of England's costly (richa) and very large ship,* with his Majesty, to inspect it. So availing ourselves of the opportunity we visited Cardinal Wolsey, who received me, Contarini, most graciously, and told us he must subsequently have a long conference with us, adding, "Should the Signory choose to act in concert with my King, and follow our advice—that is to say, his Majesty's and mine—the result will prove to the profit and glory of the State."

1522.

We then accompanied the Cardinal to the sands, and found that the Emperor and the King had already landed and were on horseback there. We first presented ourselves to the Emperor, who embraced me, Surian, warmly; and I, Contarini, can assure the Signory that I never saw the Emperor greet any one more lovingly. We next addressed the King, who, when I, Contarini, was in the act of presenting myself and doffing my bonnet, spurred his horse forward to meet and embrace me. We can therefore assure your Highnesses that we were well and cordially received by both the sovereigns, who then rode towards Canterbury, being accompanied almost solely by English lords and gentlemen (who were, however, in great number), the only two ambassadors being ourselves. Among the Emperor's attendants were the Duke of Alva, the Prince of Orange, and the Marquis of Brandenburg.

On entering Canterbury at sunset they were met by all the clergy, and the Emperor was placed under the canopy on the King's right hand, Cardinal Wolsey being a little in advance of their Majesties, because, as Legate, he gave the benediction. With these ceremonies they went first to the church† and then to the Archbishop's palace, which had been prepared for the Emperor, where, after many loving compliments exchanged mutually, the two sovereigns took leave of each other.

This morning the King went to escort the Emperor from the palace, and they proceeded together to mass to St. Thomas's Cathedral. Whilst the mass was being celebrated, and we were in attendance on their Majesties, Cardinal Wolsey, who had withdrawn into one of the chapels of the cathedral, sent the Admiral, the Earl of Surrey, to fetch us to him, and on our appearance, said as follows:—

"Domini Oratores, I have sent for you to let you know that my King, as notified by me the other day to you, Messer Antonio [Surian], is anxious to do his utmost to honour the Emperor, and to secure his passage to Spain. For this purpose he wishes for your galleys now at Hampton, on board of which, as the Admiral told you, he desires to leave but 100 of your mariners in each, making good the deficiency with our own people, besides the Emperor's gentlemen who are accompanying him."

Knowing perfectly well that the English were determined to make use of these galleys, that they would take them despite all arguments to the contrary, and that any opposition would tend

* The "Henry Grace a Dieu." See Hall, p. 365.

† Christ's Church. See Hall, as before.

1522.

merely to excite anger, we therefore told the Cardinal that the wish of our Signory was to oblige the King and the Emperor in all things possible; but with regard to these galleys, we said they were not of such a sort as possibly had been supposed, being adapted solely to the stowage of merchandise; that it was requisite to man them with a very limited crew, and other officials, without whom they were not seaworthy, and by placing on board of them mariners unaccustomed to similar vessels they would be of no use; and that the English sailors would not comprehend the language of the Venetians. We also said that as two of the galleys were loaded, it could not but prove very detrimental to the Venetian merchants to unload them; and to avoid the loss of money and time which would be caused by their returning to England to load, they might go as they are, and the goods remaining for stowage on board the third galley might be distributed among the ships appointed to accompany the Emperor to Spain, and be transferred to the galleys on arriving there.

Cardinal Wolsey said instantly that this could not be done; but with regard to diminishing the crews, he gave directions for the Admiral [the Earl of Surrey] and Sir Richard Wyngfeld to confer with the captain of the Flanders galleys and the Venetian merchants; and should it be found 100 men would suffice, that number to be embarked, or more if necessary, even to the full amount of the present crews. The Cardinal promised in the name of the King to guarantee the galleys against all injury.

Perceiving this to be Wolsey's determination, we could only reply that we referred ourselves to the pleasure of the King and Cardinal, trusting that they would decide as if the galleys were their own property.

We expressed ourselves thus, as we were aware that the seizure had been determined on; and we therefore deemed it much better that the galleys should be given with the apparent consent and good will of the Signory than ungraciously.* Considering the nature of the present times, and the business on hand, we intend on the first opportunity to offer the Flanders galleys to the Emperor in person, and thus make a present of what we are unable to sell,† especially as we have been told by Wolsey that this grant of the galleys as convoy for his Imperial Majesty would be no less appreciated by him than by the King of England, and would benefit the negotiation on foot between the Emperor and the Signory.

This negotiation, the Cardinal said, had been communicated to him by the Emperor, and as some of its conditions appeared harsh to him, he was endeavouring to soften them, and hoped to succeed, being very well skilled in that art;—these were his precise words. He therefore desired us to go in advance of the King and himself to Greenwich, where he would confer with us at full length, and mention what would profit the affair.

* "Parene molto meglio che le habino, monstrando cum contento et volontà di V. Stà., che al contrario cum desgratia loro."

† "Donando quello non potemo vender."

1522.

This morning I, Contarini, was informed by the Bishop of Palencia that 4,000 infantry were expected hourly in England from Spain, it being intended (according to report) to employ them in Flanders. The Nuncio told us that 4,000 more English were to cross over to Calais.

The envoy from Madame Louise, the mother of the King of France, is understood to have arrived at Boulogne with the ultimatum concerning the truce, which will probably be rejected, owing to what has taken place in Italy.

This afternoon the Emperor and the King went together to Sittingbourne, in the direction of Altr [Eltham?], the present residence of the Queen. They will remain there one or two days, and proceed thence to Greenwich, and finally to London, the entry into which city will, it is said, be made in state on Thursday or Friday next.

Canterbury, 31st May 1522.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

June 4.
Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 40,
tergo.

464. REPLY of the COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the APOSTOLIC LEGATE in VENICE.

Have heard what he has communicated to them on behalf of Cardinal de' Medici.

With regard to "the office of no good" (el non bon officio) performed against him by the Signory's ambassador [in England], of which the Cardinal says he has received advice from England, are really unable to credit it, and consider it must proceed from evil reporters. Will write to the ambassador in England, and are ready to do anything to please the Cardinal.

And be it carried that the College write to the ambassador in England

Ayes, 23. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 25 lines.]

June 5.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 166,
St. Mark's
Library.

465. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

After dinner on the 31st of May the Emperor and the King of England departed together from Canterbury. After stopping at several places, they arrived at Greenwich on the 3rd of June,* and both lodged in the palace there.

On that same day, the 3rd, we arrived in London, where we found the masters of the galleys and the merchants, who acquainted them more minutely with the detriment and loss which they must incur should the galleys be unloaded and have to return from Spain to re-ship their cargoes. Although we had considered it for the interest of the State to consent to Cardinal Wolsey's demand, such being the firm resolve of the King of England, nevertheless we did not think it unfitting to confer with Wolsey again, and recapitulate the inconvenience and loss which must accrue, not only to the masters and to the merchants of Venice, but also to those of England. Should nothing else be obtained—nor do we anticipate any more important result—the Cardinal will at least be convinced of the enormous sacrifice caused by the loan of these galleys.

* According to Hall the arrival took place on Monday, the 2nd of June. He makes no mention of the Queen's residence at "Altr'," to which the Venetian ambassadors allude in their letter of the 31st of May.

1522.

We went therefore to Wolsey on the 4th, and told him the galleys could convoy the Emperor to Spain with their cargoes on board. The Cardinal remarked that he was very well informed on the subject, and in fact adduced all the arguments of which we had intended to make use; but he added, “These reasons would be valid, and the mischief prove very great indeed, if we insisted on the galleys accompanying the Emperor as far as Spain; so that, although I have not done so hitherto, I will now unbosom myself to you. We do not intend either your galleys or our own fleet to accompany the Emperor to Spain, but off Brest, in Normandy, some 200 miles from Hampton, for thus far there is danger from the French ships, but none at all beyond; and indeed it would be perilous for ourselves [to proceed farther?], as the French would injure our shipping, and might also land and damage this kingdom in various ways. So vouchsafe to give yourselves this slight inconvenience, and thus accommodate us and the Emperor. We will supply provisions, and pay the galley sailors taken into our service. You, in like manner, for your convenience detained some of our vessels in Candia, and all potentates do the like.”

Having replied very mildly, we presented the masters of the galleys to Wolsey, that they likewise might hear the whole, which was repeated to them word for word.

The Cardinal had previously discussed the treaty recently negotiated at Bruges by me, of which he had seen the minutes, or else they were in his possession. He offered to use his good offices in the matter, saying he would confer with us and the Imperial councillors about it on Saturday.

In Wolsey's antechamber we met the envoy of Madame Louise, the mother of the King of France, who was awaiting audience of the Cardinal; and we proceeded to visit the ambassador from the French Crown resident in England [the President Poillot?], who received us cordially, and announced the final decision brought by this envoy on behalf of Madame Louise, namely, that she would urge her son to agree to the truce beyond the Alps (citra montes), provided the King of England make truce with the Scots, whereupon he promises to remove the Duke of Albany from Scotland forthwith; and that Francis would pay the arrears of tribute in due season. Touching the damages done reciprocally, the ambassador said that commissioners must be sent from London to Calais, and that the King of France would appoint delegates to go to Boulogne to state his claims, compensation being then made mutually. With regard to the arrest of Englishmen in France, and of Frenchmen in England, the ambassador said his King would be the first to release the English, relying on the promise of their King to do the like by the Frenchmen in England. Lastly, the King of France demands the renewal of the treaty of London.* Such, the French ambassador said, was the ultimatum.

1522.

On the morrow I (Contarini) visited the Bishop of Palencia [Pedro Ruiz de la Mota], in order to ascertain what had been said and shown to Cardinal Wolsey, as the affair harassed me greatly, both on account of the French envoys now in London, as also from my knowledge of Wolsey's character. I wished also to obtain hints for the regulation of my discourse at the conference to be held with the Cardinal on Saturday.

I went therefore to the Bishop of Palencia, who told me that the particular truce, which was to take effect beyond the Alps, could not by any means be realized, though the general truce, both north and south of the Alps, might be arranged if the King of France chose, but the Bishop doubted his consent.

I mentioned what had been said to me by Wolsey, and the Bishop answered, laughing, "Really that fellow is a wonderful man;† he chooses to interfere in everything, and to do all himself; one must act according to his fashion."

The Bishop then commenced loudly vituperating Wolsey's arrogance.

I proposed to tell [the Cardinal] that being most anxious for this peace and confederacy, I had drawn up the writing unknown to the Signory, and inserted the clauses it contained upon my own responsibility.

The Bishop, in reply, swore by many oaths, that all I had told him had been kept secret, and not communicated to the Emperor or any one else, and that he merely mentioned to Wolsey that I was empowered to conclude the peace, so that I was at liberty at the conference to attribute everything to myself.

On coming home I found that Surian's secretary was returned from the envoy of Madame Louise, with the following account of his negotiations with Cardinal Wolsey.

The Cardinal said the Emperor would consent to nothing but a universal truce, and that the King of England insisted on the instant removal of the Duke of Albany from Scotland, whereupon the King would make truces with the Scots. Also that the King insists on the arrears of tribute being paid immediately; and should the King of France subsequently have need of the money he would find he is dealing with a generous and friendly sovereign.

Wolsey said there was no occasion for a renewal of the treaty of London, as the King meant to abide by the original agreements.

Later on that same evening we received letters from our colleague, Badoer, in France, dated from the 20th to the 28th of May, purporting that after the King of France declined to accept the universal truce, and to include the Duke of Milan, the English ambassador [Sir Thomas Cheney] quitted the French Court, and subsequently, on the 28th‡ at Lyons, an English herald [Clarencieux] proclaimed war in the name of his King.

* In October 1518. (See Giustinian Despatches, vol. ii. p. 228.)

† "In verità costui è uno mirabel homo."

‡ On the 29th, according to Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. III. no. 2292; but cf. no. 2290.

1522.

The French envoys in London have received similar intelligence, and are to depart on Sunday next, the 8th, being much surprised and astounded.

London, 5th June 1522.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

June 6.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 167,
St. Mark's
Library.

466. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The last three days have been passed by the Emperor and the King with the Queen at Greenwich, where banquets and other entertainments were given, such as pageants, jousts, and tournaments, wherein the King of England took part, and comported himself valiantly. Today, at about 7 p.m., they made their entry into this city.

The streets on their passage were decorated with tapestry, and at certain spots there were triumphal arches, in number eight, some of them representing the origin of the Burgundian order of knighthood, some the commencement of the Empire in the West; others the genealogy of their Imperial and English Majesties, and others the kingdoms possessed by them; all being well suited to the sentiments they were intended to illustrate.* Well nigh all the arches bore the following inscription:—

“Carolus, Henricus, vivanť defensor uterque; Henricus fidei, Carolus ecclesię.”

The entrance was made thus,—

First came a crowd of Switzers and other subalterns of the Court on horseback; then the English gentlemen and the Imperialists, in number almost 400, but the majority English, all dressed in black velvet, with very costly gold chains round their necks. They were followed by the heralds, who preceded the officials of the city of London, clad in scarlet. Next came the Imperial privy councillors and those of the King of England; among them sundry bishops and other prelates, in advance of the barons and lords, the last of whom, holding the chief post of honour, were the Duke of Suffolk and the Marquis of Brandenburg, each being the consort of a Queen.† They were followed by Surian and Contarini, and by the Papal Nuncio, behind whom came Cardinal Wolsey; then came the two masters of the horse of the Emperor and the King, with drawn swords in their hands, immediately in advance of the two sovereigns, both wearing doublets of silver brocade made on purpose for the occasion. Behind their Majesties were their Lord Chamberlains, together with some four great personages, after whom marched the archer guard of the Emperor, that of the King, and that of the Cardinal.

In this array their Majesties went first to the cathedral and then to their lodging in a palace lately completed for this meeting between these sovereigns.‡

* It is probable that the “histories” and inscriptions were devised by Alexander Barclay, the “Blake Monke,” author of “The Ship of Fools.” (See Chronicle of Calais, p. 83.)

† The Duke of Suffolk married the Queen Dowager of France, A.D. 1515, March 16, and the Queen Dowager of Arragon gave her hand to the Marquis of Brandenburg in April 1519.

‡ “Uno palazzo fornito novamente.” The Palace of Bridewell (see Cunningham).

1522.

The Emperor is expected to remain in London until Monday, and will then proceed on his way to Hampton.

London, 6th June 1522.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

June 7.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 168,
St. Mark's
Library.

467. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the entry of their Majesties into London, as detailed in the preceding letter, accompanied them upstairs to their apartments in the palace, going first to the Emperor's chamber, and then to the chamber of the King, who, laughing, called Surian to him, and said, "Tomorrow we must hold a conference with you, and see whether you choose to persevere in the league with France or rather to join ours."

Cardinal Wolsey, who was present, then invited us to dine with him on the morrow, saying they would meet the Imperial councillors; so today [7th June] we kept the appointment. The other guests were the Chancellor Gattinara, the Bishop of Elna, the Emperor's ambassador in ordinary resident at the English Court, Mons. de Roeux, the Bishop of Durham, the Master of the Rolls, Bishop elect of London [Cuthbert Tunstall], and Mons. de Hedin, ambassador of the Lady Margaret.

In the middle of dinner Wolsey commenced vituperating the French. He said that if peace was to exist in Christendom they must be exterminated,* as they were always fomenting strife and discord among the Christian powers. He entered into many details, showing in how many ways they had endeavoured to create enmity between the Emperor and his King, and that their oaths were worth nothing. He stated that the King of England and he had been as long suffering as possible, for the sake of establishing a general peace, notwithstanding which France had outraged them in a thousand ways. They sent the Duke of Albany to Scotland; they plundered; they did not pay the tribute, &c. He said the King of England was better entitled to the crown of France than his most Christian Majesty, and meant to possess himself of it. In this tone the Cardinal spoke at great length; and then announced that the envoy from Madame [Louise of Savoy] had been to him that morning offering a general truce with the exception of the duchy of Milan; but Wolsey replied that it was too late.

After dinner, all the guests, with the exception of the ambassador from the Lady Margaret, having assembled together, Wolsey commenced his discourse by saying that the King of England and his predecessors had always borne singular affection towards the Republic; and that although the Signory held Cyprus, which belonged to his Majesty,† he had never failed being the friend of Venice and

* "Necessario era extirparli."

† See also Giustinian's despatches of 1st April 1516 and 28th May 1518. I do not know when the claims of England to Cyprus were relinquished, but on the 25th of August 1634 the Venetian secretary Zonca wrote to the Signory, from London, that Secretary Windbank did not remonstrate with the Duke of Savoy for assuming the title of King of Cyprus.

1522.

doing her all the good he could, and lately [in September 1518] specified the State as his ally in the treaty of London.

Will not repeat the very bitter complaints made against the French by Wolsey, who stated that his King had declared himself the enemy of the King of France and his adherents, in virtue of the confederacy, allying himself so closely with the Emperor that a closer connexion could not be imagined. He therefore required of us, as the Republic's representatives, that Venice should, according to the treaty, declare herself the enemy of France, as otherwise the Emperor and the King of England would consider the State a hostile power, and would, first by letters patent, and then by a herald, announce this to the Signory; adding that from this time forth, should Venice give to the French any succour of troops, money, or provisions, the King of England would hold the State his enemy.

Made an amicable reply, thanking the King and Cardinal for their constant good offices in favour of the Republic, which would never fail in gratitude. With regard to Wolsey's two demands, said we could give no answer, but would write to Venice for instructions. Wolsey desired us to do so immediately.

The Cardinal then commenced to talk about the peace between the Emperor and the Signory, which caused the Chancellor Gattinara to narrate how his Imperial Majesty had always been desirous of it, and that so long ago as when at Ypres [in July 1520?] on his return from Spain, he proposed to Cornaro, the Venetian ambassador at his Court, that if the Signory chose to have perpetual peace with his Majesty, he would concede investiture and title in such wise that Venice might thenceforth hold her possessions with a clear conscience; or, if the State preferred a temporary peace and prolongation of the truce, the Emperor was equally willing to make the adjustment on those terms. To this, Gattinara said, the Signory made no reply, but communicated the proposal to France. He added that the quinquennial truce between the Emperor and the Republic was of a later date than her confederacy with France, which was therefore invalidated; yet the Signory had in several instances violated the truce. He quoted the stoppage of the Imperial couriers, the spoliation last winter of the 20 Spanish men-at-arms, the grant of money to the French, and the counsel given to the King of France to come into Italy.

Having listened to the reply made by us to these charges, Cardinal Wolsey said to me (Contarini), "You have a power from the State; let us make a triple league, both offensive and defensive, between the Emperor, my King, and the Republic, reserving place for the Pope." Replied that the power related solely to peace, and that even concerning its particulars I had no instructions. Wolsey rejoined, "Well, I will take upon myself the trouble of drawing up the articles of the triple alliance, both offensive and defensive, and I will modify everything, and deliver them to you two days hence." We promised on receiving the articles to transmit them to the State.

The Chancellor Gattinara does not very cordially assent to this alliance, lest Wolsey, for the sake of obtaining his intent with regard to it, diminish the sum of money demanded, which money seems to be the Chancellor's chief object. We then took leave of Wolsey, who told us he wished to remain with the Imperial councillors, as they purposed commencing the negotiations for a confederacy between the parties, implying that nothing whatever had been treated as yet, although at Bruges the Bishop of Palencia told me (Contarini) that all the matters of importance between the King of England and the Emperor had been already settled, as may with reason be supposed.

1522.

On quitting Cardinal Wolsey, we went to the lodging of the Bishop of Palencia, and were told by him that the King of France was on his way back from Lyons, proceeding towards Picardy, and that the French had made a foray in the direction of Calais.

On the 5th, Cardinal Wolsey told us his King was sending a great number of English troops to Spain for the Emperor's service in the war, and also to keep the Spaniards themselves more in subjection, by showing them practically that the King of England is allied with the Emperor "throughout."

Were informed yesterday by the French ambassador, Poillot, that after announcing the hostile league made by England against France, Cardinal Wolsey told him he would take the field in person, and raise 10,000 men with his own funds, selling even his sacerdotal garments for the purpose.

Understand moreover from the Bishop of Palencia that the Pope has exerted himself with the Switzers no less zealously than his predecessor, Leo, and that he continues to do so.

On Monday, the 9th, the King and the Emperor are to quit London, and by Corpus Christi Day mean to be at Winchester, near Hampton, where the Emperor will embark with the first fair wind.

Surian, being no longer able to forward letters through his colleague in Flanders, requests the State to give him notice if they can indicate other means of conveyance.

London, Saturday, 7th June 1522.

[Italian, 5½ pages.]

June 7.
Signed Letters,
Chiefs of the Council of Ten.

468. The COUNCIL OF TEN to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Through the Apostolic Legate in Venice, the Cardinal de' Medici has complained to us that you have used unbecoming language about him in England. Answered the Legate that of this they could not persuade themselves, and thought it proceeded from evil reporters, as such is not the custom of the Signory's ambassadors. Believe that such is the case, but give him warning, that he may know how to regulate his proceedings, and act with reserve.

[Italian, 9 lines.]

June 7.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 88,
tergo.

469. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

Have heard with great vexation the account contained in his letters of the 7th, 10th, and 16th ult., of what Cardinal Wolsey said to him about the letters he had received from the Emperor's court, concerning the Turkish forays in the Imperial territories. The 1522.

information is false. Wrote to him (Surian) on this subject on the 8th of April. The Signory had no hand in those forays. Deplore them vastly, owing to the imminent peril to the State. It is also untrue that they were effected without injury to Venetian subjects. In Dalmatia many human beings and animals were carried off, and the Turks daily committed ravages there.

To acquaint Cardinal Wolsey with the absurdity of the intelligence, and request him not to give ear to such reports.

Regret that the Emperor regards the Venetians as his enemies, on account of the assistance they have given to France. Venice continues to observe the truce with the Emperor, and has never given him cause for complaint. Cannot be blamed for what they did for France, having kept their faith. The Emperor has therefore no reason to instigate the King of England against the State.

Rejoice to hear that their friendship is reciprocated by his Majesty and the Cardinal, to the latter of whom he (Surian) is to give ample thanks for having borne in mind, as he said he had, the safety of the Flanders galleys. Are convinced that if he had pondered the serious loss caused to the Signory's subjects by the delay of the galleys, he would have endeavoured to effect the repeal of every prohibition, and favoured their speedy departure. Should the galleys not be despatched on the receipt of this letter, to beseech the Cardinal to perform his promise of taking the subjects and galleys of the State under his protection. To urge this to the utmost, so that they may commence their homeward voyage, and the Signory be enabled in due season to send the other relay [of galleys] as usual.*

Is moreover to thank the Cardinal for his good offices for the release of the Donata galley. The news of its arrival in England has proved very agreeable to the State. Attribute this to the Cardinal's intercession. Hope that by reason of the very well deserved authority which the Cardinal enjoys, his goodwill may benefit the State. Consider themselves eternally obliged to him.

Ayes, 171. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 57 lines.]

June 8.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 168,
St. Mark's
Library.

470. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

This morning (the 8th) accompanied the Emperor and the King to St. Paul's to mass, which was chanted pontifically by Cardinal Wolsey. The ceremony was attended by all the nobility of England, they and the Imperial court wearing most sumptuous apparel. On this occasion asked the Chancellor Gattinara for safeconducts for some noblemen, merchants of Venice, who were returning home. The Chancellor assented, adding, "You must accommodate us with these galleys of yours for this expedition of ours." Had no time to inquire for what expedition, but will endeavour to ascertain the particulars.

Has been told by the Papal Nuncio that the King of France, when answering a brief from Pope Adrian VI., did not choose to give him the title of Pope, but addressed him as Cardinal of Tortosa.

* In the original, "Paltra muda." 1522.

London, Sunday, 8th June 1522.

[Italian, ½ page.]

June 9.

471. HENRY VIII.

Patti Scioliti.

Letters patent to the Doge, Senate, and Signory of Venice, as parties to the treaty of London, 2nd October 1518.

Complains of the violation of the treaty by Francis I., his protection of Robert de la Mark, and seizure of Fonterabia. Narrates the negotiations of Cardinal Wolsey at Calais, and charges the State to declare herself the enemy of France.

London, 9th June 1522.

Signed: Henry R. Countersigned: Throckmorton.

[Latin, 41 lines. Original, parchment, with the great seal of England in wax.]

June 9.

Mantuan Archives.

472. ORAZIO to the DUKE OF URBINO.

In addition to what he wrote on the day before yesterday, informs the Duke that besides what was contained in the Papal brief to the Nuncio, the Pope wrote a letter to the Emperor about him (the Duke). Has been unable to see it, but knows it abounded in good will, and openly evinced the Pope's inclination to arrange the affairs of Urbino. Understood this through the Emperor's reply, which is being sent to Spain, with another of the like tenour. Will send [a copy?] to the Duke by the next courier, lest, if the Pope pass into Italy, the packet by way of Spain should arrive late. It will also be accompanied by the copy of one addressed to Don Juan Emanuel. Does not send by this post the Emperor's answer to the Duke's letter, because it is not signed, and there is not time for the despatch. At this moment the King [Emperor?] has signed it, and they are getting on horseback for Hampton, but will loiter for ten days on the way. Will follow his Highness to thank him and take leave. Expects to have to go as far as Hampton. Will return [to Urbino] leisurely, as there is no occasion for haste, most especially as he is travelling with a large company on its way back to Italy.

The Duke's affairs are proceeding prosperously. Was unable to obtain in time the signature to another letter, addressed to the Viceroy of Naples, also in favour of the Duke. Will endeavour to obtain it, as it indicates the Emperor's good will. Trusts it will reach Spain opportunely in the midst of these great undertakings.

Has not forgotten the little dog (cagnolo). Will do his utmost to obtain one, either male or female.

London, 9th June 1522.

Signed: Horatio.

[Italian. Copy.]

June 11.

473. NOTE by SANUTO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 264.

The Imperial ambassador [in Venice] seems to have received letters from Flanders, dated Brussels, the 27th of May, announcing that on the 26th the Emperor embarked at Calais for England, and 1522.

charging her to act against France. No arguments urged by them produce any effect; can only use fair words, which are of no use.

The other day they waited on the Cardinal respecting a bond given by a shipowner for wines imported by Maphio Bernardo. Wolsey promised to send for the customers and make them cancel it, but today he retracted his promise, and said he chose the wines to be landed and placed in deposit, a confirmation of the intentions mentioned by the Chancellor.

Hampton Court, Friday, 13th June 1522.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

June 13.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 170,
St. Mark's
Library.

475. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On Sunday, at the Court, the Bishop of Durham alluding to the conference held on the preceding day with Cardinal Wolsey, told Surian that to avoid entering into a chaos it would be well to make a general agreement with the Emperor without especial mention of the towns and places in possession of the State.

On the same day, when discussing the affair of Bernardo's wines, Wolsey expressed the like opinion to Surian, adding, "This alliance will include the Pope, the Emperor, my King, the Signory, and the Duke of Milan. You and he will be bound to defend each other's territories in Italy mutually, and the other allies will pledge themselves in the same manner. It is true you must pay money to the Emperor, because he wants it, but I can tell you that you will thus diminish your expenditure."

Wolsey seemed to take into account the expenses incurred by Venice for defence against Turkish invasion, and Surian endeavoured to exaggerate it.

Today the Cardinal told Surian and him (Contarini) that he was drawing up the articles of the treaty, and would show it to them shortly; and that a copy of it, together with the letters patent containing the intimation, should be sent to Pace, who would proceed forthwith from Rome to Venice. Touching these articles, Wolsey said word for word as follows: "This Imperial Chancellor is too exacting, and, encouraged by these successes of the Emperor in Italy, would fain rule the whole universe, but my King will mediate as a good and common friend."*

The ambassadors therefore suspect there is some difficulty about the sum to be disbursed by the Signory; but perceiving so much that is contradictory, will not assert anything, and refer themselves to the written document.

Remind the State that it is desirable to give cordial and honorable greeting to Pace, because, as frequently mentioned by Surian, he is the staunchest partisan of Venice in England, and, next to the Cardinal, is the most influential person about the King.

Hampton Court, Friday, 13th June 1522.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

* "Iste Cancellarius Cæsaris nimis petit, et ductus his felicibus successibus Cæsaris in Italia, vellet dominari toto orbi; sed Rex meus interponet se tanquam bonus et communis amicus."

1522.

June 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 270.476. MOTION in the SENATE by the SAGES.

That a letter be written to Antonio Surian, ambassador in England, in reply to what he wrote concerning the wish of the King for the Signory to make an agreement with the Emperor.

The State is much obliged to his Majesty, and wishes to know what terms he can obtain for them from the Emperor.

[Italian.]

June 14.

Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 45.477. MOTION in the COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA.

That the letters lately received from England, Rome, and Verona, addressed to the Council of Ten, concerning the negotiations now in course with France, Germany, and England, and all other writings relating to the matter, be all communicated to the Senate. The most profound secrecy to be observed, as recently decreed by the Council of Ten.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 7 lines.]

June 16.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 171,
St. Mark's
Library.478. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday the Court received intelligence of the sack and capture of Genoa, which caused great joy. On the 11th [Denis Poillot] the French ambassador and [Chavigny] the envoy from Madame [Louise] took their departure.*

The Spanish fleet, which was expected from Flanders, has not yet arrived in England. The Emperor's embarkation is therefore delayed; and in the meanwhile he will reside at Winchester.

Windsor, Monday, 16th June 1522.

[Italian, ½ page.]

June 16.

Sforza
Archives.479. TREATY of WINDSOR. (Imperial Counterpart.)†

Charles, &c.—At a time when the Sovereign of the Turks is threatening all the Christian powers, has sacked and ravaged Hungary, and meditates still greater undertakings, the King of the French is levying war in Christendom. After violating the treaties and breaking the peace whilst Pope Leo X. was still alive, he first openly attacked the States of the Church, and then, though to his own damage, invaded our own realms and dominions in French Flanders and Spain, without any previous defiance, and laid them waste with sword and fire. For this reason Henry King of England and France, Lord of Ireland, our very dear brother and uncle, deservedly styled "Defender of the Faith," having been requested in virtue of treaties to keep his faith and oath, as the French King has rejected equitable conditions of peace or truce, has declared himself his enemy.

Having met together, being both Defenders as well of the Catholic Church as of the orthodox faith, and desiring to secure peace

* See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, Hen. VIII., vol. iii. no. 2241.

† Concerning this treaty, the following note occurs at p. 308, vol. vi. part v., State Papers:—"The treaty of Windsor was concluded on the 19th of June 1522, between Henry VIII. and the Emperor Charles V. in person. It is remarkable that this treaty is not printed either by Rymer or in the 'Recueil des Traités de Paix.' The original among Christians, in order that the forces of Christendom may be combined against its cruel enemies, we have made this indissoluble treaty and perpetual peace.

1522.

(1.) This treaty is nowise to disparage existing treaties between Charles and Henry, though it is to take precedence of all others.

(2.) They shall henceforth heart and soul be united for the preservation of their persons, dignities, dominions, and revenues, by whomsoever unduly detained or occupied, declaring themselves friends of friends and foes of foes. This treaty to include any dominions hereafter acquired by them.

(3.) Should any potentate attack the Emperor, the King of England is to render assistance at his own cost; the Emperor doing the like by the King.

(4.) As the expedition against the Turks cannot be effected until chastisement be first inflicted on the guilty peace breakers among Christians, and as the root of this evil proceeds from the undue occupation by the King of the French of what belongs to others, the contracting sovereigns, having already declared themselves his enemies, will continue the war against him by land and sea.

(5.) Neither party to recall his army or fleet until each recover what belongs to him.

(6.) Neither to desist from the war without the consent of his ally; and should the enemy make proposals for peace they are to be communicated.

(7.) Mutual transit to be allowed through the territories of the contracting parties for vessels, troops, etc.

(8.) Any acquisition to be surrendered to the party to whom it rightfully belongs.

(9.) The enemies and rebels of each are to be deemed enemies and rebels of both, and banished.

(10.) Pope Adrian VI. to be invited to become the head of this league within three months.

(11.) If the Venetian Republic make peace or truce with the Emperor, and alienate itself entirely from the French alliance, and, according to the treaty of London [October 1518], declare against the French, the Republic is to be held as a confederate.

(12.) As the Switzers are well affected to the Emperor and the King of England, envoys are to be sent to them to renounce the yoke and alliance of France and enter into the present treaty. Should they fail to do so, the contracting parties are to endeavour through their envoys to prevent them from adhering to France, and to secure their neutrality.

(13.) No power to be included in the present treaty, save by consent of the contracting parties, who nominate as their friends and confederates the Kings of Hungary, Denmark, Portugal, and Poland, the Holy Roman Empire and its Princes Electors, Don Ferdinand, Infant of Spain and Archduke of Austria, Lady Margaret, Archduchess, widow relict of Savoy, and Countess of Burgundy, Cardinal de' Medici with the Florentine Republic, the Cardinal of Liege with the city of Liege, the Cardinal of Lyons with his dominions, the Dukes of Savoy, Milan, Juliers, and Cleves, the Marquises of Montferrat and Mantua, and the Bishops of Utrecht and Munster.

1522.

These articles, we, Charles Emperor elect, promise Henry King of England and France to keep and observe inviolate; and for their observance bind under mortgage (hypotheca) and bond all our goods wherever existing. And we have signed these our letters with our own hand, and commanded that our Great Seal be set to them.

Given in Windsor Castle, 16th June 1522.

Collated with the original by Philip Nicola, the Emperor's secretary.

[Latin.]

June 17.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 91.

480. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADORS accredited to the EMPEROR and the KING OF ENGLAND.

Have received Antonio [Surian]'s letters of the 19th, 22nd, and 29th May, and those written by Gasparo [Contarini], dated from Bruges on the 20th and 22nd May, and from Dover on the 28th. Were extremely glad to hear by the latter of the Emperor's safe arrival in England, and of the loving conferences between him and the King. The ambassadors are to congratulate the two Sovereigns.

By Surian's letters of the 19th May learn what the King said to him about the union between the Emperor, himself, and the Signory. For this gracious office on the part of the King are bound to him for ever. When on the point of answering this letter of Surian's, there arrived the despatch from Canterbury written on the 31st May.

The State is much gratified by the good offices which Cardinal Wolsey hoped to perform with the Emperor with respect to the negotiations. Are awaiting news of the communication which the Cardinal promised to make at Greenwich. The State must necessarily await this announcement to enable them to make a decisive answer; and the ambassadors are to notify this to the Emperor and to the Chancellor [Gattinara], lest they be surprised at the delay.

Although aware that to delay the despatch of the Flanders galleys is extremely detrimental to the Venetian nation, nevertheless, by reason of the Signory's ancient friendship with the King and his ancestors, it has been very agreeable to the Doge and Senate to have an opportunity of doing pleasure to the King by accommodating him with the galleys, of which he may dispose as of his own.

Desire that on quitting Spain they may come back with their cargoes without any impediment.

Ayes, 178. Noes, 14. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 60 lines.]

June 17.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 92.

481. The PROPOSED TRIPLE LEAGUE.

Reply made by the Signory to the Imperial Ambassador [on the 20th of June], in accordance with the letter to the Venetian Ambassador in England on the 17th.

Your magnificence on a former occasion demanded the Signory's reply to the Viceroy [Charles de Lannoy, Viceroy of Naples], and was told that the State having received letters from Contarini, ambassador with the Emperor, on the same subject, it was necessary in the first place to answer them, in order that the reply to the Viceroy might be to the like effect.

1522.

We inform you, therefore, that the State wrote to Contarini, announcing its intention of forming a union with the Emperor, but the Ambassador Surian, on the 19th May, wrote that the King of England had proposed to him a league between their two Majesties and the Signory. Subsequently, by joint letters from Surian and Contarini, dated Canterbury, the 31st of May, the Signory understood that Cardinal Wolsey had told them the Emperor had acquainted his King and himself with all the Signory's negotiations. As there were certain difficulties, the Cardinal hoped to devise a mode of adjustment, and desired Surian and Contarini to meet him at Greenwich, when he would let them know the decision, which the State is expecting hourly. Until then the Signory can give no reply. This you can announce to the Viceroy.

[Italian, 27 lines.]

June 17.

482. The PROPOSED TRIPLE LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 280.

The Senate sat in the afternoon. The Doge was present.

An apologetic letter to England was written and carried; the Signory requires the King to let them know what terms the Emperor would give them should they adhere to him and desert France.

Motion that a letter be written to Badoer, the Signory's ambassador with the King of France, who is at Lyons, sending him copies of the letters from England, and of the King's conversations with the Venetian ambassadors.

Francesco Contarini spoke against the motion, and moved for delay, on the ground that the letters of the late Emperor, which were sent to France, caused the formation of the League of Cambrai. Lunardo Mocenigo answered him. Mafio Lion, late State Attorney, showed that these letters would bring about immediate war with the Emperor and the King of England. He was answered by Donà da Leze.

The motion and amendment were put to the ballot, but Marin Zorzi, LL.D., counsellor, was in favour of delay.

For the motion, 84; for the amendment, 118; and this last was carried.

[Italian.]

June 19.

483. ANTONIO SURIAN and GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 307.

The Emperor is still here (sic), as the fleet has not yet arrived from Spain. The [Flanders] galleys have all been made to unload at Hampton, and the merchandise has been placed in warehouses. The like has also been done by the wine ship of Mafio Bernardo, in order to exact a certain duty, which the owners refused to pay. They therefore wrote to the ambassadors to mention this to Cardinal Wolsey, and to represent that it was wrong to have the ship unloaded.

1522.

With regard to the agreement, Wolsey said the articles were being drawn up, and he should send them to Rome to the English ambassador, Richard Pace, who would go to Venice to show them to the Signory, and, if approved, the agreement will be stipulated.*

London (sic), 16th and 19th June. Registered by Sanuto, 5th July.

[Italian.]

June 19.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 172,
St. Mark's
Library.

484. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Today went to Windsor from a distance of five miles thence, having been unable to find lodging in the town. Accompanied the Emperor and the King to the mass and procession, it being Corpus Christi Day. The two sovereigns wore the robes of the Garter, and all the knights of the order were habited in like manner, as usual.

After the procession and mass, their Majesties went with Cardinal Wolsey and the Chancellor Gattinara to the high altar, to which they summoned the Papal Nuncio, Surian, and myself (Contarini).

On the altar was a missal (open at the page representing the Saviour on the cross), whereon the two sovereigns took their oath. Then two instruments, filling several sheets of parchment, with pendent seals, were brought to them, besides two other smaller instruments, also on parchment.

Gattinara told me (Contarini) that the two first were the articles of alliance contracted between their Majesties, and that one of the two last was signed by the Emperor (commencing "Nos Carolus"), and the other by the King.

These instruments were exchanged by the Emperor and the King. The Emperor gave both of his to the Chancellor, and the King gave his to Cardinal Wolsey. After these ceremonies they celebrated those of the Garter, as usual.

The ambassadors having accompanied the sovereigns to their apartments, Wolsey invited the Papal Nuncio [Caracciolo], the Duke of Alva, the Marquis of Brandenburg, Surian, and myself to dine with him. While at dinner Wolsey said that the French had compelled England to go to war with them, and that the King of France never chose to listen to their admonitions, being of opinion that last year a league to his detriment had been stipulated at Bruges, though the act celebrated this day (the 19th) would convince the world that the conclusion took place now, and not at Bruges. The Cardinal sought to impress this on his guests. He had previously, on the 7th instant, in London, informed Surian and me that the Imperial and English ministries were on the point of commencing mutual negotiations.

After dinner, Cardinal Wolsey having withdrawn into his chamber, Surian acquainted him with the communication made by the Turkish ambassador at Venice, adding that it was suspected their object was to pick a quarrel with the State, and expatiating on the vast expenditure required for defensive preparations.

* Some of the particulars in Sanuto's summary do not exist in the Contarini letter book.

1522.

Wolsey replied that he saw the perilous state of Christendom, nor was it credible that Sultan Solyman would neglect the opportunity. He then alluded to the good will ever borne by England towards the Republic, and said that in conformity with the demand then made of us (Surian and Contarini), and which would be repeated at Venice by the Imperial and English ambassadors, it was very fitting that the Signory should declare against the French, according to the tenor of the treaty [of London, October 1518?].

We gave assurance of the Republic's gratitude to the King and the Cardinal, who then commenced speaking of the galleys. He said he did not mean them to go into Spain, but merely to accompany the Emperor beyond the enemy's confines; that this would much gratify the Emperor, and that he (Wolsey) caused the galleys to unload for the benefit of the State, for if they have their cargoes on board, and the agreement between the Emperor and the Republic fail to take place, both the galleys and the merchandise would run very great risk. He added that the "masters" had disgraced themselves extremely by declining to take the slightest possible step without pecuniary recompense from the King, who was very indignant, and had not Wolsey pacified him he would have proceeded to disagreeable demonstrations against their persons, but the Cardinal said he would not allow so old a friendship as subsisted between his King and the Signory to be broken for such a trifle, about which he made grievous complaints.

We answered in moderate terms, thanking him for his good offices in favour of the State, from whom we said we had received no orders about the galleys, though we well knew the Republic had a general wish to oblige the King in everything.

We said the Cardinal must not be surprised at the masters, as they are private individuals who really have a great amount of property at stake, and therefore remonstrated. Promised, however, to write to them, and use every possible effort to secure compliance with the wishes of the King and Cardinal.

Wolsey said nothing about the articles of the treaty, which he said on a former occasion he intended to show us, but during dinner the Bishop of Durham told Surian that the ministers had already settled what part of the treaty was to be communicated to us, and that we were to see it, though in secret.

Neither the Spanish nor the Flemish fleet has yet arrived at Hampton, but this morning we heard (the fact being confirmed to us by a letter from the captain of the Flanders galleys, dated Hampton, the 16th) that the English fleet would by this time have put to sea, or be on the eve of departure, but its destination was unknown. Some days ago, in London, we heard that it was bound for Spain, where apparently the English have some understanding.*

On Saturday the Emperor and the King will quit Windsor for Winchester.

This morning (the 19th) Surian was informed that the French have made several forays in the direction of Calais, and destroyed

* In the original, "dove par havesseno certi trattati;" i.e., where apparently the English and Spanish forces have to make some joint attack.

1522.

all the places belonging to England between that city and Boulogne and in that neighbourhood.

It is reported that the King of France has quitted Lyons, and ridden post to Switzerland. Others say he is going into Picardy. I (Contarini) was told so by the Chancellor Gattinara.

Surian apologizes for sealing the packet with his ring, as he went to Windsor solely to be present at the festival, and heard there accidentally that a courier would depart this evening. We therefore wrote with such accommodation as we could obtain in the house of the postmaster.

Windsor, Thursday, 19th June 1522.

[Italian, 4 lines.]

June 24.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 96,
tergo.

485. The DOGE AND SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

An audience was given this morning by the College to the French ambassadors. They denied that any truce between King Francis and the Emperor had been proposed in England, and knew their King would reject it. They requested a decision from the State respecting the Venetian men-at-arms in Cremona, and declared that the King of France would persevere in the undertaking.

(Read in the College on the 24th of June 1522.)

[Italian, 52 lines.]

June 26.
Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 173,
St. Mark's
Library.

486. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 20th the Count of Geneva [Philip of Savoy, Count of Geneva and Duke of Nemours], the brother of the Duke of Savoy, arrived at Windsor.* He was met by the Governor of Bresse and many other gentlemen of the Court. On the 21st the Emperor and the King quitted Windsor, and, having stopped at several places, always off the road, arrived at Winchester on the 24th.

Surian and I came another way, the country thereabouts being thinly peopled, and unable to afford lodging for one Court, still less for two. We arrived at Winchester on the 25th, and hoped the sovereigns would remain there until the Emperor proceeded to Hampton to embark. In this we were disappointed, as this afternoon the Emperor and the King went together to a village some seven miles off [Bishop's Waltham], containing but six or seven houses, so that neither the Chancellor nor the Bishop of Palencia could be accommodated there.

The whole Court, both Imperialist and English, was therefore ordered to Salisbury; but regardless of this command, we sent our purveyors to try and obtain accommodation of some sort in any village between Bishop's Waltham and Salisbury, in order to be at hand for negotiations, if necessary, although the sovereigns shun

* In date of Oudenarde, 12th December 1521, Gasparo Contarini wrote to the Signory that the Count of Geneva was then on the eve of departure thence for the purpose, it was supposed, of detaching the Duke of Savoy from France and bringing him over to the Emperor's side. It is probable that his appearance at Windsor in June 1522 was connected with this negotiation.

1522.

business. If unsuccessful, we shall go to Salisbury, like all the rest.

This morning, the 26th, Chancellor Gattinara assured me that the Emperor had never asked the King of England for the Flanders galleys, either as convoy to Spain or for any other purpose, and that all that had been done in this matter was done by desire of the English, who (he understood) meant to employ these galleys, together with their own fleet, which was already at sea, in an expedition against France. If it failed they would return immediately to Calais, and there land their infantry, amounting to from 10,000 to 15,000 men, who were to join the Emperor's forces in Flanders, and invade the French territory. The Chancellor had also heard that the King of France was gone from Lyons to Paris with the intention of passing into Picardy, this intelligence having been brought by the English ambassador [Sir Thomas Cheney], who has returned from France. The Chancellor added that it was reported from Italy that Prospero Colonna, hearing of the descent of a French force, sent infantry and men-at-arms to the passes to oppose them; but ascertained subsequently that these troops were destined for Genoa, which having fallen, they returned to France. Gattinara complained that the Signory was raising troops at the suit of France, and urging the French King's return into Italy for the recovery of the duchy of Milan. I replied that the State was raising troops for the security of her territories, because all Italy was in arms.

Winchester, Thursday, 26th June 1522.

Postscript.—This letter has been detained until the 29th. Our purveyors being unable to find us lodging, we determined to see what could be got. Yesterday morning we went first to Hampton, and then to a village three miles distant thence, and seven miles from Bishop's Waltham, where the Emperor and the King are now residing.

At Hampton we heard of the arrival there on that day (28th June) of the Papal Nuncio, the Bishop of Astorga, accredited by Adrian VI. to the Emperor. The Pope is said to have sent another Nuncio, the Bishop of Bari, to the King of France. The Nuncio Caracciolo and others say that the object of these missions is to make peace between the Emperor and France,—a very difficult affair, as matters are too far advanced.

When on the eve of departure from Winchester, we received the Signory's letters of the 7th, and will comply with their contents when able to see the Emperor and the King. We will also acquaint ourselves more fully about the removal of the guns from the Flanders galleys, as announced to us by the captain, who, we believe, gives particulars to the State in the accompanying letter.

Sunday, 29th June.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

June 28.

487. LETTER from BRUGES.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxiii. p. 355. On the 22nd of May, the Emperor went to England, and there espoused the King's only daughter, seven or eight years of age, whom he places as a pledge in the hands of the Lady Margaret, my 1522.

mistress here in Flanders, until the consummation of the marriage, so that in the course of time the Emperor will become King of England.

On the 3rd of June the King of England proclaimed war against the King of France in favour of the Emperor, who was present. A vigorous and cruel commencement has already been made in Flanders, and all tremble. In six days the Emperor quits England for Spain, and on his departure the King will land at Calais for the attack on France, of which he has the title. Madame Margaret my mistress, has two very powerful armies, one within the borders, towards France and Burgundy.* The result cannot fail to be very auspicious for the Emperor, as he is most Christian, and has the whole world at his disposal.

In 20 days, more or less according to the wind, you will have the Pope on the coast of Rome. An agreement is in course of negotiation between the Emperor and the Signory. A Papal Legate has arrived, a very distinguished person. I have shown him much kindness, and we live together like brothers. There will soon be universal peace throughout Italy.

Bruges, 28th June 1522.

[Signed:] Jo. Maria Chaneus, of Brescia, doctor and knight, in the service of the Archduchess Margaret.

Registered by Sanuto, 31st July.

[Italian.]

June 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 97,
tergo.

488. The DOGE AND SENATE to GASPARO CONTARINI and ANTONIO SURIAN.

Wrote to them on the 17th instant, stating that the Signory would make no reply respecting the negotiation with the Emperor, and the proposal made by the King of England to Surian about the triple league, until they knew what the Cardinal proposed.

Subsequently received the letters dated London, the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th inst. Are surprised to find that, when asked about these negotiations with the Emperor in the presence of Cardinal Wolsey, the ambassadors said they were awaiting a reply from the Signory. The ambassadors must remember having written the words uttered by Cardinal Wolsey in Canterbury Cathedral, which caused the reply to be delayed until the State became acquainted with the mitigation of the harsh terms to which Cardinal Wolsey alluded. When the Imperial ambassador [in Venice] reminded the Signory that it would be well to make a reply, they based their apology solely on the words of Cardinal Wolsey at Canterbury. Will send their reply on receiving the articles which Cardinal Wolsey offered to draw up. The Signory much prefers the triple league to any other adjustment with the Emperor alone, as they hold in great account the favour and protection of the King of England and Cardinal Wolsey.

Ayes, 208. Noes, 9. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 47 lines.]

* "La Ser.^{ma} Madama mia de qui à due potentissimi partiti, l'uno intra el confine verso Francia et Borgogna."

1522.

June 28.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 98.
tergo.

489. The DOGE AND SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

On the 23rd instant, in answer to his letters of the 10th and 11th, stated that although they wished the Milanese expedition to be continued, yet, owing to the tergiversation of the Switzers, it was the State's opinion the King of France would do well to accept the two years' truce on both sides. the Alps offered him by Cardinal Wolsey, because in the meanwhile the forces might be recruited. Requested the King of France, in accordance with his offer, to mention the Signory in the truce, considering the indissoluble union between Venice and France.

Ayes, 191. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 60 lines.]

June.

490. EMPEROR CHARLES V. to POPE ADRIAN VI.

Mantuan Archives. Reply to a letter from the Pope in favour of Francesco Maria, Duke of Urbino, and of the Marquis of Mantua.

London, — June 1522.

[Latin. Copy.]

June.

Mantuan Archives.

491. The SAME to DON JOHN MANUEL, Imperial Ambassador in Rome.

Letter on the same subject.

London, — June 1522.

[Spanish. Copy.]

July 4.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 174,
St. Mark's
Library.

492. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has received a letter of reproof from the State in reply to what he wrote from Bruges on the 20th of May about the articles which he had drawn up for an agreement between the Emperor and the Signory. Perceiving the quiet of the State to hang by a hair, was compelled to take an unusual course. When the Chancellor requested him to draw up articles of agreement, did not consent without making much opposition. Had he refused to draw them up, his sincerity would have been doubted, and the negotiation must have failed,—a result which, considering the news from England, and the events in Italy, appeared very injurious to the State.

Hampton, Thursday, 4th July 1522.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

July 5.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 175,
St. Mark's
Library.

493. The SAME to the SAME.

Late last evening at Hampton, where he (Contarini) was preparing for his voyage to Spain, the Emperor issued a proclamation ordering everybody to embark immediately, as he purposed proceeding on his voyage to Spain with the first fair wind. On the same evening received letters from the Signory, dated the 16th June, addressed to himself and Surian. Was unable to obey the orders they contained, because the King and Cardinal Wolsey departed from the Emperor at Bishop's Waltham. With regard to offering the galleys for the Emperor's voyage to Spain, the Signory will perceive that he does not make use of them, and that they remain in England at 1522.

June 28.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 98.
tergo.

489. The DOGE AND SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

On the 23rd instant, in answer to his letters of the 10th and 11th, stated that although they wished the Milanese expedition to be continued, yet, owing to the tergiversation of the Switzers, it was the State's opinion the King of France would do well to accept the two years' truce on both sides, the Alps offered him by Cardinal Wolsey, because in the meanwhile the forces might be recruited. Requested the King of France, in accordance with his offer, to mention the Signory in the truce, considering the indissoluble union between Venice and France.

Ayes, 191. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 60 lines.]

June.

490. EMPEROR CHARLES V. to POPE ADRIAN VI.

MantuanArchives. Reply to a letter from the Pope in favour of Francesco Maria, Duke of Urbino, and of the Marquis of Mantua.

London, — June 1522.

[Latin. Copy.]

June.

MantuanArchives.

491. The SAME to DON JOHN MANUEL, Imperial Ambassador in Rome.

Letter on the same subject.

London, — June 1522.

[Spanish. Copy.]

July 4.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 174,
St. Mark's
Library.

492. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has received a letter of reproof from the State in reply to what he wrote from Bruges on the 20th of May about the articles which he had drawn up for an agreement between the Emperor and the Signory. Perceiving the quiet of the State to hang by a hair, was compelled to take an unusual course. When the Chancellor requested him to draw up articles of agreement, did not consent without making much opposition. Had he refused to draw them up, his sincerity would have been doubted, and the negotiation must have failed,—a result which, considering the news from England, and the events in Italy, appeared very injurious to the State.

Hampton, Thursday, 4th July 1522.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

July 5.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 175,
St. Mark's
Library.

493. The SAME to the SAME.

Late last evening at Hampton, where he (Contarini) was preparing for his voyage to Spain, the Emperor issued a proclamation ordering everybody to embark immediately, as he purposed proceeding on his voyage to Spain with the first fair wind. On the same evening received letters from the Signory, dated the 16th June, addressed to himself and Surian. Was unable to obey the orders they contained, because the King and Cardinal Wolsey departed from the Emperor at Bishop's Waltham. With regard to offering the galleys for the Emperor's voyage to Spain, the Signory will perceive that he does not make use of them, and that they remain in England at the disposal of the King. Was also unable this morning to acquaint the Chancellor and the Bishop of Palencia with the cause of the delay of the Signory's answer to the proposal for adjustment, as they were much occupied with the Emperor at the Council board, and making arrangements for his departure.

1522.

Was informed by the Papal Nuncio, Caracciolo, that his new colleague, the Dominican monk the Bishop of Astorga, had audience on the morning before last, first of the King and then of the Emperor, and exhorted them both, in the Pope's name, to make peace or truce with France. The King replied that he had always been the most obsequious son of the Apostolic See, and desirous of union among Christians, but the King of France had committed so many outrages against him, all of which he enumerated one by one, that he would have neither peace nor truce of any sort with France, and chose to end the dispute sword in hand. While expressing himself thus the King was in a very great rage.

The same proposals made by the Nuncio to the Emperor met with a similar reply, his Majesty detailing the injuries received from France in like fashion as the King of England, but not so angrily, in accordance with his gentler nature.*

This afternoon acquainted the Chancellor (Gattinara) with the offer of the galleys, and with the cause of the delay with regard to the adjustment. The Chancellor replied that the Imperial ambassador had written the like from Venice, but the State was procrastinating.

Hampton Court, Friday, 5th July 1522.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

July 8.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 100,
tergo.

494. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO CONTARINI and ANTONIO SURIAN.

By their letters, dated the 13th, 16th, and 19th of June, perceive what was notified to Surian, first by the Bishop of Durham and subsequently by Cardinal Wolsey, scilicet, that a general peace and league ought to be formed. This is very satisfactory. Expect to find the conditions fair and reasonable, as they will be devised and drawn up by Cardinal Wolsey, and the cordial affection of the King and Cardinal towards the Signory's interests is very notorious, and in perfect accordance with the State's respect for the King's ancestors, for his Majesty himself, and for the Cardinal.

Assent to the proposal of Cardinal Wolsey and the Bishop of Durham that no special recognition or explanation should be made of all the towns belonging to the Empire now held by the State, in order to avoid entering into a chaos, and to arrive at a general conclusion.

Approve their reply to Cardinal Wolsey respecting the disbursement of money. Constant and excessive expenditure has been sustained by the Republic to secure her territory against the powerful military and naval armaments of Sultan Solymán, which are destined for the invasion of Christendom, as the accompanying newsletters will testify. It will be necessary for Venice to continue this expenditure, as the Sultan is young, very powerful, and extremely hostile to the Christian race. Have increased their fleet already to the amount of 50 galleys.

* "Ma non con tanto sdegno, juxta la sua piu mite natura."

1522.

Hope that on the receipt of this letter the galleys will have returned, or else that the King and Cardinal will grant them speedy despatch.

Ayes, 180. Noes, 11. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian, 51 lines.]

July 10.

495. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 350.

The Emperor and Contarini embarked for Spain on the 7th. The King of England has not yet dismissed the Signory's galleys, nor restored their guns. Still less will he allow Venetian subjects to export merchandise from England, unless first of all the State declare itself the enemy of France and prove its hostility by deeds. On this subject Cardinal Wolsey has spoken to him (Surian) at great length.

The French fleet is near at hand. The King is much irritated against France. He has prepared 18,000 infantry, and will send them across to Calais to invade France as soon as the French fleet is at a distance.

London, 10th July. Registered by Sanuto, 31st July.

[Italian.]

July 12.

496. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 356.

Told by King Francis that 10,000 English have crossed over to France, but as yet they have performed no exploit. The Emperor had arrived in Spain, and was mustering all his forces, with the intention of attacking France at Fonterabia. King Francis is intent on reinforcing the place, and has no thought for the affairs of Italy; so that he (Badoer?) finds himself in great trouble.

Dated 12th July. Registered by Sanuto, 11th September.

[Italian.]

July 14.

497. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 360.

King Francis is on the eve of departure for Blois, and has received intelligence through certain fishermen that the English crossed over to France, and encountered no small defeat at the hands of the French. Narrates his conversations with the King, who seems much to approve of the Signory's proceedings, and also of what was written to England.

Lyons, 12th and 14th July. Registered by Sanuto, 4th August.

[Italian.]

July 17.

498. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 176,
St. Mark's
Library.

Wrote from Hampton on the 5th that the Emperor had ordered the whole court to embark in the course of that day. His commands could not be executed. In the evening, while he (Contarini) was at supper with the captain of the Flanders galleys, the Emperor made his appearance at the waterside, and the captain, the masters, and all the Venetian noblemen put ashore from the galleys and presented themselves.

1522.

The captain and masters having kissed the Emperor's hand, he (Contarini) delivered the message contained in the Signory's letter of the 17th ult., offering the galleys for his voyage to Spain, and inviting him to inspect them immediately. The Emperor appeared pleased with the offer, and said it was too late to see the galleys then, but he would come on the morrow. Arrangements were made to do him honour, confections prepared, &c., but the Emperor did not keep his appointment, for he communicated next morning (the 6th), and embarked immediately after dinner. All his followers did the like, according to proclamation.

Throughout that day and night the fleet remained close to the town, and then on the 7th, with the ebb tide, dropped down to the harbour's mouth, and set sail with as fair a wind and as smooth a sea as could be desired. Last evening, the 16th, we entered the harbour of St. Ander. The Emperor landed instantly, but the whole court remained on board until this morning. The Emperor is expected to remain at St. Ander until the horses are landed and the passengers recover from the effects of the sea voyage. He will then proceed towards Castille.

The Pope is said to be at Taragona. It is not yet known whether he will have an interview with the Emperor.

Has heard from the English ambassador, the Florentine Spinelli, (the King of England having now no other ambassador resident with the Emperor,) that on the voyage he spoke a vessel termed by them a pinnace, which was conveying letters to his King from the Admiral [the Earl of Surrey] and Sir Richard Wyngfeld, who are on board the English fleet. The information received by Spinelli purported that they had taken two places in Brittany, one of which numbered 2,000 hearths [Morlaix?], and that they had advanced eight leagues, doing much mischief, and meeting with no resistance. This intelligence greatly rejoiced the Imperial court.

St. Ander, 17th July 1522.

P.S.—This letter has been detained until the 18th. Had audience of the Emperor, and congratulated him on his safe arrival in Spain, and on his success, which was communicated yesterday to him (Contarini) by the Chancellor.

The Emperor returned thanks, and then said, "I have news that the King of France has recalled his troops from Italy, and considers his affairs there hopeless. I trust in God everything will go well."

Before quitting England the Bishop of Palencia had a slight attack of fever, and is not yet convalescent.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

July 18.

499. ENGLISH INVASION OF FRANCE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 334.

This morning, in the College, the Frenchman, Mons. de Montmorency, showed a letter he had received from the King of France, stating that his troops had gained a victory over the English, who entered the French territory, and that ——— were killed. The 1522.

members of the College do not credit this ; it is French gossip, to benefit their affairs.

[Italian.]

July 21. 500. POPE ADRIAN VI.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 338.

Return of the courier who went to the Pope with the letter from the Signory. He brings a very bland reply dated ———, — miles from Vittoria, 3rd of July. The Pope thanks the State for the offers made to him. He has determined not to quit Spain until the spring, because the plague is in Rome, though he wishes to be there in order to arrange the affairs of the world. He had sent an ambassador to the King of England, exhorting him not to make war on France, and had done the like by the Emperor. They answered him that for fitting causes they could not do otherwise. The Pope writes that many potentates do not care to keep back the Turks, whom he urges the Republic to resist, for the welfare of Christendom. He praises the Signory greatly.

[Italian.]

July 22. 501. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 371.

It is hoped the Signory's galleys will be dismissed. His barber has died of the plague.

Dated 22nd July. Registered by Sanuto, 18th August.

[Italian.]

July 23. 502. THE FLANDERS GALLEYS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 338.

On the morning of the 23rd the Doge was not in the College, and several letters were read from the ambassadors Surian and Contarini, the last dated London, the 6th instant. The Emperor had not yet crossed over to Spain, but was to go on the 7th, as his fleet was all ready. The King had made all the Venetian galleys unload, and taken their guns, which he intended to place at a point where the French fleet was expected to land. The forces of the King of England were on the point of crossing over to Calais, in number 15,000 foot and horse. Vincenzo Priuli, the captain of the Flanders galleys, refused to deliver the guns, as they belonged to the Signory, and he had no commission to that effect ; so the English seized them, promising that they should be restored on the departure of the French fleet.

[Italian.]

July 24. 503. FLORENTINE MANUFACTURES FOR HENRY VIII.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 107,
tergo.

Motion in the Senate, that whereas the reverend ambassador of the King of England resident at Rome* has made an earnest demand of the Signory's ambassador there for free transit through the Venetian territory, without payment of any duty, for the under-mentioned pieces of cloth of gold and silk, which the King has had

* At the end of April 1522 Dr. John Clerk and Richard Pace were the English ambassadors at Rome. Pace remained there until August. (See "State Papers," vol. vi. pp. 88-120.)

1522.

wrought in Florence for his own use; and whereas it would be advantageous to the Signory, especially in these times, to gratify his Majesty:—

Put to the ballot, that by authority of this Council, Zuan Cavallante, or any other legitimate agent of the said King, be allowed to convey through the Signory's territory, and even through the city of Venice, duty free, the pieces of cloth of gold and silk specified in the list transmitted by the Signory's ambassador aforesaid; and that letters patent be made out accordingly.

Ayes, 148. Noes, 8. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 16 lines.]

July 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 109.

504. The DOGE AND SIGNORY to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Received letters from him and Contarini, dated 26th and 29th June. By his letter of 5th July are made acquainted with the reason which prevented the delivery to Cardinal Wolsey of the Signory's missive dated 17th June. Wish to hear what has been done by the Cardinal, who has doubtless given him (Surian) the form of the articles according to promise. The Reverend [Richard] Pace, by whom the Cardinal intended to send them, is on his way hither from Rome. Are anxious to receive them, having heard from Contarini that the Chancellor [Gattinara] had accused the State of procrastinating.

The Signory is awaiting the articles in order to be enabled to reply to the proposal for a triple league. Is to represent this to the Cardinal. Hope that the King and Wolsey will offer them reasonable terms. The quiet and maintenance of the Venetian Republic will be advantageous to Christendom.

Is to tell Cardinal Wolsey that the Chancellor [Gattinara] complained that the State was reinforcing her army, at the suit of the King of France, and urging him to come into Italy. The complaint had no ground of truth. The Signory sent all her cavalry some time since into their usual quarters, the infantry garrisoning the cities according to custom, and no reinforcements have been made. Have, moreover, given leave to their Provéditeur-General, Gritti, to return home.

Ayes, 188. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 45 lines.]

July 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 109.

505. The SAME to GASPARO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador with Charles V.

Have not yet received the articles of agreement between the Emperor and the Signory which Cardinal Wolsey promised to draw up. Suppose this delay to proceed from the Cardinal's having been occupied with arranging other matters between his King and the Emperor, prior to the departure of the latter for Spain.

Ayes, 188. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 42 lines.]

1522.

July 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 110,
tergo.

506. The DOGE AND SIGNORY to the CAPTAIN of the FLANDERS GALLEYS.

Received his letters of 21st June. Grievous loss and expense will be incurred by the "masters" and the merchants of Venice if the stay of the galleys in England be further prolonged, as is to be feared. Have therefore written to the King of England and Cardinal Wolsey to allow the immediate departure of the galleys. On obtaining this permission the captain is instantly to reload the goods, and as there will probably be more wools than the galleys can hold, the following regulations are to be observed.

All the merchants are to load by "rate" such wools as they have collected.

As the wools laden in the first instance will have paid duty, and must necessarily be re-shipped, the shippers who failed to obtain their "rate" on board the two first galleys are to be allowed it in the third.

Each shipper loading contrary to these regulations to be liable to penalty of 50 ducats for each bale (balon) thus loaded, and 25 ducats for each poke (poca), besides the freights. Such penalties to be applied to the use of the Arsenal.

Having done this, the captain is to come straight to Venice without touching at any place except in Sicily.

As the controller (cantaruol) of Hampton, by order of the King, has taken the guns of the Signory's galleys, and had them conveyed to a place 12 miles off, for the safety and defence of a large royal ship which is lying there, if the guns be not already restored the captain is to make suit for their restitution, and if that be delayed, he is then to obtain other guns for the security of the galleys. Should this be impossible, he is to divide equally the guns which remain on board the galleys, and set sail immediately. Warn him, however, not to depart against the will of the King.

Ayes, 163. Noes, 6. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 45 lines.]

July 31.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 177,
St. Mark's
Library.

507. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor remained at St. Ander until St. Andrew's Day, the 25th. Last evening he arrived at this place. Discussed many topics with the Chancellor Gattinara on the way hither. The Chancellor informed him that the King of England intends to persevere in the war with France, and thus render himself master of Scotland, making that kingdom his fief, and trying to get his sister [Margaret] and her son into his own hands.

With regard to Cardinal Wolsey, the Chancellor said he was a man of little religion,* and that during the negotiations between the Emperor and England, Wolsey rejected a clause which had been inserted respecting the defence of Hungary against the Turk, saying, "Let us first expel these Turks here at hand," meaning the French. The Chancellor also accused him of avarice, and stated that Wolsey was not ashamed to demand of the Emperor, for himself and some other personages of the English Court, an annual pension of twenty-two thousand ducats, saying that such was the amount received by them from France; to which terms the Emperor was compelled to agree, and he accordingly promised them this sum.

* "Che l'era uno homo poco religioso."

1522.

The Chancellor also said that Wolsey chose to meddle with the agreement between the Emperor and the Signory for the sole purpose of gaining a considerable amount of ducats from the Republic. And here Gattinara vituperated the embargo laid on the Flanders galleys by the King of England and the Cardinal, saying the Emperor would never have done such a thing. The Chancellor suspects that, were the slightest pretext afforded, they would seize the effects of the merchants, and appropriate to themselves the galleys likewise.

The Chancellor also stated that the Emperor was expecting two ambassadors from England, namely, Sir Thomas Boleyn—who together with the Grand Prior [Sir Thomas Docwra] was accredited to him last winter—and Dr. Sampson. On this he (Contarini) congratulates himself, as the Florentine, Spinelli, professes open enmity to Venice. Was told the other day by the Siennese ambassador, that during the voyage on shipboard Spinelli examined some Biscayans, from whom he elicited that the Signory's galleasses (not specifying whether they were those of Flanders or others) supplied the Infidels with iron. Spinelli drew up a precognition respecting this matter, and sent it to the King and Cardinal, that, in addition to other reasons, they might assign this one for the embargo laid by them on the galleys at Hampton. When at St. Ander Spinelli announced this to the Emperor, who answered him, "Verily the Venetians ought to pension you, in order to diminish the intense enmity you bear them." Spinelli also requested the Siennese ambassador to acquaint him (Contarini) with these his good offices to the detriment of the State. Imparted them to the Chancellor, who appeared to know nothing at all about the matter. He answered, laughing, "Who commissioned him to draw up a precognition?" This proved that the Chancellor held Spinelli in small account. The whole court, moreover, estimates him in like manner, considering him a spy rather than an ambassador.

The Emperor will depart hence tomorrow for Palencia, and there appoint the place of meeting for the Cortes; but first of all he will go alone from Palencia to Tordesillas to visit his mother [Queen Juana].

Aguilar, 31st July 1522.

[Italian, 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ pages.]

Aug. 1. 508. The PROPOSED TRIPLE LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxiii. p. 356. In the afternoon the Sages sat in committee to discuss the reply to England, and will make it tomorrow in the Senate.

[Italian.]

Aug. 5. 509. EMBASSY from HENRY VIII. to VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxiii. p. 361. The English ambassador, Richard Pace, is anxiously expected. He is coming from Rome to Venice with a commission from the King and Cardinal Wolsey, who is "alter rex," to conclude the 1522.

agreement and bring the articles. He is expected hourly. It has been determined to receive him with great honour, and to lodge him in the house ——— (in la caza).

[Italian.]

Aug. 5.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 178,
St. Mark's
Library.

510. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has been informed by the Chancellor that the King of France, through the Pope, is requesting the Emperor to make truce and peace with him, on this condition, that during the truce France is to retain the three fortresses now held by her in the Milanese, and on the expiration of the truce the fortresses to be provided with the same amount of troops, victuals, and ammunition as at present.

To obtain peace he was willing to cede the duchy of Milan, to pay the tribute for the kingdom of Naples, and to surrender Fonterabia, but he insisted on the marriage between his daughter and the Emperor taking place.

The Chancellor said he would approve of such a form of peace, could it be made; but consideration must be had for the King of England, the Emperor's confederate, whom it was neither possible nor fitting to desert. On this account the Chancellor came to the conclusion that neither peace or truce would be stipulated.

Palencia, 5th August 1522.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Aug. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 361.

511. DEFEAT of the FRENCH by the ENGLISH.

The Mantuan ambassador came into the College with the Chiefs of the Ten, and held a long conference. It is supposed they discussed some rout which the English had given to the French, for the French ambassador, who also had audience of the Signory, seemed to be very downcast.

[Italian.]

Aug. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 361.

512. LETTER to ANTONIO SURIAN.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages, and carried, for a letter to Antonio Surian, the Signory's ambassador in England, of the following tenor:—

On the arrival at Venice of the English ambassador Richard Pace (who, according to news from Rome, was about to commence his journey), the Signory will negotiate the truce and peace with the Emperor. Request the King to allow the Flanders galleys to depart. With regard to the King of France having broken the truce made in 1418 (sic)* whereby he showed himself the Signory's enemy, Surian is to state that the Republic acts upon the principle of never attacking any one.

[Italian.]

* Query 1518? There is no mention of any truce or of the treaty of London in the "Deliberazioni Senato," date 7 August, nor yet of the King of France, but possibly both one and the other were mentioned in debate, and Sanuto inferred that the letter was of the same tenor.

1522.

Aug. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 411.513. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

King Henry and the Cardinal refuse to dismiss the Republic's galleys until they receive the reply from Venice.

Dated 7th August. Registered by Sanuto, 25th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 7.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 111,
tergo.514. The DOGE AND SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

Since their last of the 19th ult. have received letters from their ambassador in England, who announces having been told by the King that he had charged his ambassador Pace, resident in Rome, to go to Venice and negotiate an arrangement between the Emperor and the State. The Venetian ambassador at Rome has also written about Pace's coming. Desire him (Badoer) to communicate this to the King of France. Will notify Pace's proposals.

Cardinal Wolsey and the King of England told the ambassadors Surian and Contarini that they chose to accommodate the Emperor for his voyage to Spain with the three Venetian galleys which are in Hampton harbour. For that purpose they caused the galleys to be unladen, and then took their guns, much to the detriment of the "masters" and merchants, but the Emperor set sail without making use of them. Although the ambassador has earnestly requested their dismissal, the Doge and Senate do not yet know whether it has been conceded. This likewise is to be communicated to King Francis.

[Italian, 26 lines.]

Aug. 7.

Senato Mar,
v. xx. p. 28.515. DETENTION OF THE FLANDERS GALLEYS AT HAMPTON.

Motion made in the Senate,—That as nothing is known about the departure of the Flanders galleys from Hampton, and as there is only sufficient wool in the city to afford work for one month; it is necessary to make opportune provision for the importation of wool, which is well nigh the chief source of livelihood for the population of Venice.

Put to the ballot,—That for the next six months Frankish wools from England may be imported by sea in native or foreign bottoms, or by land from the staple at Calais, on payment to the masters of the Flanders galleys, commanded by Vincenzo Priuli, at the rate of only one half of the freight to which the wools would have been subjected if loaded in the galleys according to the auction contract.

Ayes, 153. Noes, 6. Neutrals, 1.

This decree communicated to the consul in London, and proclaimed from the "Edict Stone" at Rialto.

[Italian, 16 lines.]

Aug. 8.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 112,
tergo.516. The DOGE AND SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Have received his letters dated the 10th and 13th June, giving a full account of his conferences with Cardinal Wolsey and the King. To repeat his congratulations on the successes in Scotland and Britanny, and to execute the commission given him on 17th June with regard to the articles drawn up by the Ambassador Contarini, and revised by the Imperial Chancellor (Gattinara). Have awaited the modification which the Cardinal promised to effect. The Venetian ambassador at Rome has just announced that the Reverend Richard Pace, who was coming with the King's commission, will depart thence tomorrow for Venice.

1522.

Will send their reply to all the proposals which he is to make. To assure the King in the meanwhile that the State is desirous of peace with the Emperor. Have given proofs of their goodwill towards him during the late disturbances. When, on lately evacuating Cremona, the French men-at-arms requested permission to quarter themselves in the Venetian territory, it was denied them.

Peace between Christians is greatly needed. Last year the Great Turk conquered Belgrade, Serimia [Servia?], and a great part of Hungary. During the last few months he has taken the fortresses of Scardona and Tuina (sic) in Croatia. He is now besieging Rhodes in person, with 300 sail and an army of 100,000 men,—a terrible and fearful thing to every nation, however remote, but above all to the Signory, whose neighbour he is. The Republic is compelled to incur excessive expenditure for the defence of her possessions.

The Captain-General is at sea. This was the reason why the State recalled her proveditors-general of the army, broke the infantry and light horse, and sent the Governor with all the men-at-arms into garrison. False therefore are the reports that the Signory's army in Italy is being augmented for the purpose of renewing the war in Italy. To acquaint the King and Cardinal with these facts.

The Imperial ambassador has had audience of the Signory, and read to them the articles of the league between the Emperor and the King of England, wherein place is reserved for the State, on condition that first of all, either by peace or truce, they should come to an agreement with the Emperor.

Request the King and Cardinal to draw up the agreement in an acceptable manner.

[Italian, 81 lines.]

Aug. 8.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 114.

517. The DOGE AND SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Hope the galleys will be set at liberty, as neither the Pope* nor the Emperor mean to make use of them. Wrote on the 29th ult. to the King and Cardinal.†

Again desire Surian to make urgent suit for the release of the galleys. His Majesty invited the State to send them, and interceded with the Emperor to obtain safeconducts for them.

The "masters," merchants, and oarsmen will be ruined. As the trade is not less profitable to the subjects of his Majesty than to the Venetians, trust that the release will be effected by the Cardinal

[Italian, 35 lines.]

* At the time of his election the Pope was in Spain, and departed thence by sea on the 2nd of August 1522.

1522.

Aug. 8.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 114.

518. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor.

The Emperor's ambassador has recently read to them the articles of the league between the Emperor and the King of England, but gave them no copy of the articles, one of which reserves place for the Signory, provided they first of all make peace or truce with the Emperor.

Are expecting the arrival of an English ambassador, the Reverend Richard Pace. Suppose his mission relates to this matter.

Send a copy of their letter to Surian.

Ayes, 164. Noes, 27. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian.]

Aug. 9.

Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 70.

519. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to FRANCESCO DONATO, Captain of Padua.

By his letter of the 7th are informed of what he has done with that English "mylord"* about the Rev. Richard Pace. Commend him for making every loving demonstration towards that "mylord"; to let him know that the coming of Pace will be agreeable by reason of his eminent qualities and rare endowments, and because he is known to bear affection to the State, according to the testimony of all Venetian ambassadors who have resided in England, and of the Venetian ambassador in Rome. The Signory is pleased that their affairs are to pass through his hands.

To acquaint Dom. Leonico,† who lectures (leze) to the aforesaid English "mylord," with the Signory's good disposition towards Pace, so that Leonico may, as of himself, bear witness to it.

To meet Pace on his arrival at Padua and welcome him, declaring how acceptable is his coming to the Signory, and that the State considers him as a native Venetian. To render Pace as well-disposed as possible.

To defray the expenses of Pace and his retinue; but should he lodge in the house of the aforesaid English "mylord," to furnish him with victuals sufficient for the board of himself and his attendants, and with corn for the horses.

Have heard that D. Leonico was tutor to Pace. Leonico is to accompany Pace as far as Venice, letting it appear that he performs this office spontaneously.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 33 lines.]

Aug. 11.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 72,
tergo.

520. REPLY of the COUNCIL OF TEN to a proposal made by the Apostolic Legate [Altobello Averoldi, Bishop of Pola] in Venice.

Have heard with pleasure the statement made by him on the 9th in the name of the Cardinal de' Medici.

* "quel Monsigr. Anglese." Reginald Pole?

† Tomeo Nicola Leonico, of Albanian origin, a learned Venetian scholar. He was Greek Professor at Padua, and a very virtuous man. He died in 1531 at the age of 75.

1522.

Have been informed by their ambassador in Rome that the Rev. Richard Pace, ambassador from the King of England and the Cardinal of York, would commence his journey in two or three days.

Ayes, 3.

Proposed amendment:—That this matter be delayed until Pace's arrival.

Ayes, 9. Noes, 12.

[Italian, 34 lines.]

Aug. 11.
Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 73.

521. REPLY by the COUNCIL of TEN and JUNTA to the Apostolic Legate on his departure from Venice.

Have been perfectly satisfied with his good proceedings.

Respecting the negotiation with England, inform him they are expecting Pace's arrival from Rome. He will doubtless favour the Republic's interests, according to his wont.

Have always wished for peace with the Emperor.

Ayes, 3. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 22 lines.]

Aug. 12.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 378.

522. ANTONIO SURLAN to the SIGNORY.

The Flanders galleys have not yet been dismissed. It is not allowed even to send merchandise from England to Venice by land until the receipt of the Signory's reply.

Has conversed with Cardinal Wolsey, who wishes to make an adjustment between the Signory and the Emperor, on condition that the Republic should pay 500,000 ducats for the investiture of the towns. Represented to the Cardinal that the sum proposed was too great, as the Signory has incurred and is still incurring vast expenditure for the outfit of galleys, &c.

The English no longer desire war with France, but that affairs should be quieted.

Dated 12th August. Registered by Sanuto, 31st August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 14.
Contarini's
Letter Book,
Letter no. 179,
St. Mark's
Library.

523. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has heard that the Emperor does not approve of the mission of a Papal Nuncio to France, as the Pope did not inform him of the appointment.

On the evening before last a knight of St. John's of Jerusalem, sent by the Grand Master, arrived here, having performed the journey in 40 days. He announces that Sultan Solymán was come to Rhodes with 200 sail, and had already landed troops and cannon to bombard the city. The Chancellor told him (Contarini) that the Emperor was sorry to hear this, and wrote instantly to Naples, desiring the grant of permission to the Rhodians to export thence provisions, artillery, and whatever else they may require, without payment of duty or gabel; and he will send some ships and barks to assist the besieged.

The Chancellor stated that the Imperial ambassador at Venice had written that the Signory had not given him any reply, saying 1522.

Pace. The Chancellor added, "Our ambassador also writes to us that you are good Frenchmen, and the State is sending her fleet, not to succour Rhodes, but to Corfu." Is apprehensive lest the Emperor should require the State to proceed to greater lengths than desirable against Sultan Solyman.

The Emperor has had several of the leaders of the commons in various places arrested. He has caused several to be beheaded, including Don Pedro —, cousin-german of the Count of Benevente.*

Palencia, 14th August 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Aug. 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 370.

524. EXPECTED ARRIVAL OF RICHARD PACE IN VENICE.

Some knights, doctors of laws, and others, members of the Senate, were summoned to go and meet the English ambassador, Dom. Richard Pace, of whose arrival at Ferrara intelligence has been received.

[Italian.]

Aug. 18.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 115,
tergo.

525. The DOGE and SENATE to ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome.

Having received a brief from the Pope dated the 9th August, announcing his embarkation for Italy, the Senate decreed that an embassy extraordinary of six individuals should be sent to congratulate him on his arrival at Rome.

Ayes, 150.

*Proposed amendment to the foregoing letter:—*That the election of the ambassadors be suspended until the Pope's arrival at Rome, and until the Senate become acquainted with the proposals of the English ambassador, who is shortly expected at Venice.

Ayes, 29. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 47 lines.]

Aug. 20.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 180,
St. Mark's
Library.

526. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

No intelligence has been received from England since our departure thence. Heard an unauthenticated rumour that the English who landed in Brittany had been repulsed by the French. The Emperor is to quit Palencia on Friday next for Valladolid, where he will hold the Cortes.

Delegates from Valencia have arrived at the court to beg pardon of the Emperor for the insurrection of the commons in that city some months ago. At Xativa some disturbance still prevails.

Palencia, 20th August 1522.

P.S., dated the 22nd.—The Papal Nuncio, the Bishop of Astorga, heretofore sent to England to the Emperor and the King by the Pope, has now arrived at Bilboa.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

* Robertson, on the contrary, writes that on the Emperor's arrival in Spain "he refused to shed any more blood by the hands of the executioner."

1522.

Aug. 20.

527. RICHARD PACE at VENICE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 372.

The ambassador from the King of England, Dom. Richard Pace, arrived today. The noblemen appointed went to meet him as far as the island of Santo Spirito.* He lodged at Cà Dandolo in "Calle delle Rasse,"† heretofore the residence of the Imperial ambassador, who is gone to live at San Severo in Cà Zorzi, for which the Signory pays an annual rental of 150 ducats.

On the 21st this English ambassador came into the College with the noblemen deputed to accompany him, and the Doge moved a few steps towards the edge of the platform to meet him. He was much caressed. He presented his credentials, and spoke in general terms. When the Doge rose, he addressed him by the title of "Veneranda Senectus,"‡ and they embraced.

[Italian.]

Aug. 21.

528. RICHARD PACE at VENICE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 378.

The English ambassador came into the College this morning and presented his King's letter dated ———, 22nd June 1522.‖ It purports that according to the articles of the league the Republic is bound to attack the King of France, as he was the first to violate them. He therefore beseeches the Signory to give him a speedy reply. Pace said, "This is the letter. Your Serenity will answer me concerning the other matters which I have to negotiate. I will come tomorrow and make my statement."

All the members of the Senate who had accompanied the ambassador were dismissed, and he remained in the College with a few of his own followers.

On the morning of the 22nd, two Sages for the Mainland, Ferigo da Molin and Francesco Contarini, were sent to bring Pace to audience. On entering the College, he said he would read the instructions which he had received from his King, and which were to the following effect:—That Pace was to come to Venice to persuade the Doge and Signory to comply with the articles of the league stipulated in ——— [London, 1518–1519?], and declare themselves hostile to the King of France for his having been the first to violate it. That the King of England and the Emperor, both by land and sea, intended to attack him, and that the Signory should do the like.

Pace also said that his King has determined to make war on the King of France for eight causes. First, because the King of France seized the kingdom of Navarre and took it from the Emperor, which he was not at liberty to do. Secondly, that he has given assistance

* By this it would appear that Pace came down the Po from Ferrara, instead of passing through Padua, to see Reginald Pole, as the Signory had anticipated.

† Cà Dandolo on the Riva de' Schiavoni. The house is yet standing; it is an inn styled "Albergo Reale." The Giustinian palace at San Moise, also an inn (the "Europa" on the Grand Canal), was inhabited by the English ambassador, Viscount Fielding, from February 1635 to February 1639. The Molin palace, in which Thomas Killigrew resided as ambassador from Charles II. in 1662, is also an inn, with the name "Victoria," or "Regina d'Inghilterra."

‡ Antonio Grimani, the reigning Doge, was born in the year 1485, and died in 1523, May 7. (See Cicogna, Inscriptions, vol. i., p. 170.)

‖ The original document is among the "Patti Sciolti," and is dated London, 9th June 1522.

1522.

to Robert de la Marck against the Emperor, a charge he can not deny, as his letters to that effect have been discovered. Thirdly, that he sent the Duke of Albany into Scotland contrary to agreements. Fourthly, that through the Duke of Albany he made the Scots wage war on the English. Fifthly, that he (the Duke?) sent to France the brother-in-law of the King of England, the Earl of Angus, married to the King's sister, the widow of Scotland, and caused him to be imprisoned there, the Duke of Albany cohabiting with Angus's wife.* Sixthly, that the King of France favours and harbours the rebels of the King of England, including Richard de la Pole, called "White Rose." Seventhly, that the King of France has taken several English ships. Eighthly, that on these accounts the King of England has determined to be revenged on the King of France. He therefore requests the Signory to declare herself. But as there are disputes between the Emperor and the Republic, and the truce is about to expire, and as the Emperor says it has been violated by the State, the King of England offers his mediation in these disputes, and will make an adjustment.

All this was stated in the King's letter. Pace caused it to be read twice, but would not leave it.

The Doge made answer that the Sages would consult and reply. Pace said he had ever been the servant of the State, and that the Signory would receive constant proof of his good offices.

[Italian.]

Aug. 25.

529. LETTER to HENRY VIII.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 376.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages, proposing a reply to the letter sent to the Signory by the King of England.

[Italian.]

Aug. 25.

530. REPLY by the SENATE to the IMPERIAL AMBASSADOR, DON ALFONZO SANCHES.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xxxiii. 116,
tergo.

Thank the Emperor for having invited the State to join the league between himself and the King of England.

The English ambassador, Richard Pace, has proposed the mediation of the King of England in all matters of a harsh and difficult nature, and that the Signory should detach herself from France. Replied to Pace that they were willing to accept the King's mediation. Had wished to see the modification of the clauses by Cardinal Wolsey in England; that being impossible, will send powers and instructions for the conclusion of peace to both their ambassadors. With regard to joining the league between the Emperor and England, when the peace is made there will be no difficulty about this.

As to declaring against the King of France, it seems to them a matter for great consideration until they are assured of an adjustment with the Emperor, especially as the Pope, by briefs and

* "Et esso Duca de Albania se impaza con la moglie." I do not know whether modern historians have recorded the imprisonment of Angus in France, and the charge of adultery brought by Henry VIII. against his own sister in 1522. In 1528, her "scandalous familiarity" with Henry Stuart was notorious, according to Lingard. These circumstances are mentioned in the King's instructions to Pace, printed in Strype's Memorials, vol. i. app. xiii. See also Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii. no. 2497.

1522.

through his Legate, has exhorted the State to make a general peace, having sent his envoys to the Emperor and to England and France for that purpose. The formidable forces of the Great Turk have taken Scardona and Tenina [Temisvar?], belonging to the King of Hungary, near the Venetian territory, and are now besieging Rhodes, to the universal peril of all Christians.

Ayes, 157. Noes, 43. Neutrals, 13.

[Italian, 54 lines.]

Aug. 25.

531. REPLY of the SENATE to the REV. RICHARD PACE.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 117.

Compliment him on his learning and abilities; are grateful for the good offices which he has always rendered to the State.

Thank the King for his proffered mediation. Are desirous of peace with the Emperor.

On the 13th ult. their ambassador in England wrote that the King said he (Pace) would bring with him the modified articles which Cardinal Wolsey promised to draw up. If the articles be fair and reasonable, the Signory will ratify the treaty. But should he (Pace) have no further communication to make, the State will send instructions to the Venetian ambassadors for the stipulation of the peace.

With regard to making a declaration against France, state that they have not assisted the French more than they were bound to do by their alliance with the King of France, but they have always observed their truce with the Emperor. When the French men-at-arms in Cremona lately asked permission to enter the Venetian territory, the State refused it, in order not to offend the Emperor.

To declare themselves the enemies of the King of France appears to them a step requiring great consideration, as they have no certain prospect of an adjustment with the Emperor, and the Pope has exhorted them to make a universal peace, announcing the mission of his nuncios to the Emperor, the King of England, and the King of France.

Sultan Solymán has taken Scardona and Tenina in Hungary, and is now besieging Rhodes. But should peace between the Emperor and Venice be effected by King Henry good results will follow.

Ayes, 195. Noes, 12. Neutrals, 6.

[Italian, 78 lines.]

Aug. 26.

532. RICHARD PACE, Ambassador at Venice.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 376.

In the morning he came into the College, and the reply of the Senate was read to him.

[Italian.]

Aug. 26.

533. PACE at VENICE.

Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 82.

Reply made to the reverend English ambassador, but modified (castigata) in the Council of Ten, for communication to the French ambassador in Venice, and sent to the Venetian ambassador in France, that he may communicate it to King Francis.*

Ayes, 29. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 40 lines.]

* Among others, the passage relating to the French men-at-arms in Cremona is omitted.

1522.

Aug. 27.
Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 83.

534. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

Inform him that Pace, the English ambassador from Rome, has required them on behalf of his King to desist from succouring France, and to detach themselves from her, offering his King as mediator for a peace between the Emperor and the State. Enclose a copy of their reply, to be communicated to the most Christian King with the greatest secrecy.

Today Pace and the Imperial ambassador entered their presence and repeated the aforesaid proposal. Each of them presented letters patent in the name of his sovereign, purporting that the Signory, being comprised in the league of London between the French and English Kings, should persuade the former to desist from the war against the Emperor and England, to restore the places taken, and to make compensation for damages, as otherwise the Republic is bound to declare against France. To this the Signory has not yet made any reply.

To request King Francis to keep this communication secret.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 2. Neutral, 1.

[Italian, 30 lines.]

Aug. 27.
Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 83.

535. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to ALVISE GRADENIGO, Venetian Ambassador in Rome.

A long account of their negotiations with the English ambassador Richard Pace, for communication to the Pope.

To detail the Pope's reply.

Ayes, 28. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 56 lines.]

Aug. 27.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 377.

536. DUCHY of MILAN.

The Imperial and English ambassadors came into the College together, desiring the Signory to write to the King of France to deliver the fortresses to the Duke of Milan.

[Italian.]

Aug. 29.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 404.

537. ANTÓNIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Wolsey is anxiously expecting the Signory's reply to Pace, and to Surian's letters. Should it be chosen to make peace, the Republic must restore the estates of the rebels.* The galleys have not yet been dismissed; the reply is awaited. The whole population of England is dissatisfied with this war, because they are made to pay, and do not approve of these affairs (ste cosse).

Dated 29th August. Registered by Sanuto, 20th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 30.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 118,
tergo.

538. REPLY of the SENATE to the IMPERIAL and ENGLISH
AMBASSADORS.

Since the reply given to the proposals made by both of them, they have entered the Signory's presence together, and presented letters patent from the Emperor and the King of England, and demanded an answer.

* Viz., of Venetian subjects who had adhered to the Imperialists.

1522.

Although the treaty of London was dissolved by the death of its principal, Pope Leo X., Venice still wishes for peace with the Emperor, but a declaration against France would be a matter of great moment, especially as they have no certainty of an adjustment with the Emperor. Will therefore await the resolve to be formed by the Emperor and the King of England, on the receipt of their previous reply.

In answer to Pace's inquiry whether, in the event of the King of France's return into Italy, the State would assist him; they remind him that the Signory lately refused, out of respect for the Emperor, to receive the French men-at-arms in the Venetian territory, when they quitted Cremona.

Ayes, 99-127.

Proposed amendment to the last clause.—With regard to your inquiry whether, if the King of France returned into Italy, we would assist him, we reply that if the Emperor welcomes us with a good peace or truce, we will satisfy his Majesty by not affording any favour to the most Christian King.

Ayes, 34. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 2-2.

Second amendment.—That the present matter be delayed until next Monday.

Ayes, 73-71.

[Italian, 28 lines.]

Aug. 31.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 119.

539. The DOGE and SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

Send a copy of their reply to the proposals of the ambassadors from the Emperor and England to be communicated secretly to the King of France.

[Italian, 24 lines.]

Aug. 31.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 378.

540. ANTONIO SURIAN, State Attorney.

In the afternoon the Grand Council assembled and elected as State Attorneys Piero Contarini and Antonio Surian, ambassador in England.

Motion made by the Sages and carried, that Antonio Surian having been elected State Attorney, (he being in the service of the State,) without salary, be allowed time to accept till three days after his arrival in Venice.

Ayes, 1085.* Noes, 103. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian.]

Sep. 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 380.

541. NEGOTIATIONS WITH ENGLAND.

The Senate sat in the afternoon, and the letters from the Signory's ambassador in England were read with the strictest injunctions to secrecy.

Motion made by the Sages, and carried, for a letter of reply to the ambassador in England, that with regard to the investitures he is to tell Cardinal Wolsey that the State, although liable to heavy expenditure, is willing to give the Emperor as much as 300,000

* In the year 1793 the Venetian noblemen eligible to the Grand Council were in number about 1,560; in 1522 they seem to have amounted to 1,660 and upwards, as seen by the "Consegi" in St. Mark's Library.

1522.

ducats, and send Surian a power (synichà) accordingly. Should the Emperor choose to prolong the truce for seven years, as proposed heretofore, the State would give him 50,000 ducats, for the sake of being able to attend to the Turkish affairs and to the welfare of Christendom.

Amendment proposed by the Sage of the Council, Polo Capello.—Surian to be authorized to stipulate payment of 400,000 ducats in instalments.* (Note by Sanuto, that the original motion in like manner stipulated payment in instalments.)

Original motion carried, and the greatest secrecy enjoined.

[Italian.]

Sept. 1.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 181,
St. Mark's
Library.

542. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 25th the Emperor quitted Palencia, and arrived at Valladolid on the following Tuesday. Encloses letters from the ambassador Badoer in France, showing that the report of the rout of the English in Brittany was untrue. Has been told by the Governor of Bresse that they have already disembarked at Calais, after taking a castle belonging to the King of France.

The English ambassador, the Florentine Spinelli, fell sick of flux some days ago at Palencia, caused himself to be conveyed to Valladolid, and expired there on the day before yesterday. He was of a very sinister and imprudent nature, and a most bitter enemy to the Signory.

As yet nothing is known of the two other English ambassadors, who are coming to reside at the Emperor's court. Since the Emperor's arrival in Spain nothing has been heard from England. Is surprised he has received no letters from Surian.

Valladolid, 1st September 1522.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Sept. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 423.

543. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor has mustered a large army, and no longer intends following up the attack on Fonterabia, but will send it to join the English forces in France, and attack Picardy.†

[Valladolid?], 1st September. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 1.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 120,
tergo.

544. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

An account of their negotiations with Pace and the Imperial ambassador. Send copies of their replies, for communication to the King and Cardinal. Enclose a missive to the King.

Give him, in accordance with the King's demand, full instructions respecting the five articles drawn up by the Imperial Chancellor. To procure a truce for the longest possible period,—for ten years at least,—with the disbursement of from 10,000 to 15,000 ducats per annum. Send him a power of attorney (syndicato) to conclude it.

* The 50,000 ducats related apparently to the annual payment, which in the course of seven years would have amounted to 350,000 ducats. Capello proposed giving an extra 50,000.

† I am at a loss to comprehend this entry, as it does not agree with the contents of the despatch in the Contarini Letter Book, dated Valladolid, 1st September 1522.

1522.

on the conditions mentioned in their instructions. Will not be bound to attack France, but only to refrain from assisting her.

The consent of Archduke Ferdinand is to be obtained for such matters as concern him.

P.S.—Have received his letters dated from 27th July to 11th August, alluding to a letter of the 4th, which they have not received. As it is of importance, desire him to send a duplicate. Have read the account of his conference with Cardinal Wolsey, about the peace with the Emperor. Are quite contented that the Cardinal, according to his desire, should be the negotiator (compositor) of this adjustment (appunctamento). Wolsey may promise himself anything that lies in the power of the State. Enclose a letter for him.

Rejoice at the King's successes. To congratulate his Majesty and the Cardinal thereupon.

Ayes, 128.

Proposed amendment to the foregoing letter:—

Should the ambassador be unable to stipulate the peace for 200,000 ducats, let him offer by degrees 300,000 ducats. If that sum do not suffice, he may raise it to 400,000 ducats, payable by instalments, at the most remote periods possible.

Ayes, 68. Noes, 15. Neutrals, 8.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

Sept. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 392.

545. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

Account of the coronation of the Pope [Adrian VI.], which took place in St. Peter's on the 1st.

The Pope summoned all the ambassadors to a consultation about Turkish affairs and succour for Rhodes. The English ambassador said, "The Signory has 50 armed galleys at sea; she might accomplish this." The Polish ambassador replied that the Signory alone, against so powerful an armada, is not sufficient. He (Gradenigo) also replied. Don Juan Emanuel, the Emperor's ambassador, said the Signory's ambassador spoke the truth, and this was confirmed by the Pope. Prior ———, the ambassador from Rhodes, was present. The Pope called the Protector of the order, Cardinal de' Medici, and desired him to arm two ships with 1,000 men each, and to send them to succour Rhodes.

The Pope has at heart the welfare of Christendom, and wishes to reform (riconzar) the Church. He told the Cardinals in consistory that it was wrong to keep such "cavi" [hoards?]; that each of them should be content with 6,000 ducats rental; and that many of them were not learned; so he chooses them to lead a new life.

Rome, 1st September. Registered by Sanuto, 5th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 2.

Deliberazioni
Senato Segreta,
v. xlix. p. 124.

546. PROXY or POWER OF ATTORNEY for ANTONIO SURIAN.

As Henry King of England, &c.* has offered himself as mediator for peace or truce between the Emperor and the Signory, the Doge

* This is the first Venetian document in which the title of "Defender of the Faith," conferred on Henry VIII. by Leo X. on 11th October 1521, is applied to him by the Signory.

1522.

and Senate appoint as their procurator, agent, factor, syndic, and negotiator Antonio Surian, their ambassador in England, causing the document to be furnished with their pendent leaden seal.
Dated 2nd September 1522.

[Latin, 44 lines.]

Sept. 2.

547. PACE at VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 391.

This morning the English ambassador, Richard Pace, came into the College, the Signory having sent for him. He was informed of the decision arrived at yesterday in the Senate, and requested to announce it to the King and Cardinal, in order that they may stipulate the adjustment.

He was pleased with this, and said he would write in good form.

[Italian.]

Sept. 2.

548. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to GASPARO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador with the Emperor.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 85.

Enclose papers relating to the negotiations of the English ambassador Pace, and the Emperor's ambassador with the Signory. Have empowered Surian to conclude the agreement.

Send him (Contarini) an ample mandate for the negotiation of peace or truce, but their intention is that the whole be conducted through the medium of the King of England.

Approve of the articles drawn up by him (Contarini), and revised by the Chancellor, except the words "that we may be enabled to attend to the right holy expedition against the Infidels, especially in these times." Wish them to be cancelled, if an opportunity offer.

[Italian, 32 lines.]

Sept. 2.

549. The SAME to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 85.

Acquaint him with the substance of their instructions to Contarini.

Ayes, 20. Noes, 9. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 27 lines.]

Sept. 9.

550. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 424.

King Henry has compelled the Flanders galleys to unload, and seized their cannon. He says openly that on no consideration will he release them until the Signory has made peace with the Emperor. The reply given to Pace has not reached London, where it is expected to arrive in two days.

London, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 14.

551. PACE at VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 398.

The ambassadors have frequent audiences. The English ambassador has quitted Cà Dandolo, and is gone to reside in the Doge's house at Santa Maria Formosa.* He (Pace) is somewhat indisposed.

[Italian.]

* As during the reign of Doge Antonio Grimani, he and his family resided in the ducal palace, their own mansion was apparently let.

1522.

Sept. 16.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 182,
St. Mark's
Library.

552. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Ten days ago the Imperial cabinet received news through a spy from France that the English in Picardy, together with the Flemish foot and the 3,000 Spanish infantry lately sent thither, had encountered the French, and the loss was great on both sides, but the English were victorious, and subsequently took a good town belonging to the King of France. This intelligence has not been confirmed. No letters have been received from Flanders or England.

The Emperor sent lately to seize the Bishop of Zamora, one of the chiefs of the commons, who was in the hands of the Duke of Najera. The Bishop is now confined in a castle called — [Simancas], two leagues hence.

The Emperor's confessor departed this life on the 14th, and leaves behind him the character of an excellent ecclesiastic.*

The Chancellor has acquainted him (Contarini) with the announcement made by the Imperial ambassador in Venice, concerning the delay of the Signory's decision until the arrival of Richard Pace. The Chancellor said, "Well! let the State trust to Cardinal Wolsey; they will see the result." Gattinara then repeated his former assertion, that Wolsey would fain obtain a sum of money from the Signory; and he did not seem to approve of this plan. Told him that the State wished for no other mediation than his own [Gattinara's], and waited for Pace's arrival only out of respect for the King of England.

Valladolid, 16th September 1521.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Sept. 16.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 117.

553. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate. As Antonio Surian, LL.D. and Knight, having resided with the King of England upwards of four and a half years, desires to return home,—Put to the ballot, that Lodovico Falier, appointed to that legation, depart for England within 20 days after the arrival of the safeconducts expected from the Emperor.

Ayes, 170. Noes, 23. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 17 lines.]

Sept. 20.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 183,
St. Mark's
Library.

554. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 18th received letters from Surian, with missives from the State, desiring him (Contarini) to obtain a safeconduct from the Emperor for Lodovico Falier, ambassador elect to England.

Went to the Emperor yesterday, and acquainted him with the newsletters from Hungary. The Emperor inquired whether the State had come to a decision respecting the proposed league. Explained the causes of the delay.

Then asked the Emperor for the safeconduct, and for the release of certain ships. The Emperor referred him to the Chancellor.

Requests to be recalled.

Valladolid, 20th September 1522.

P.S., 24th September.—Death of the Bishop of Palencia.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

* He was a Franciscan; see the letter dated Ghent, 30th July 1521.

1522.

Sept. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 427.

555. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The Signory's reply has been received, and by no means will King Henry release the galleys. Has held conversations with the King and Cardinal Wolsey about the Republic's answer. The King insists that the Signory shall first attack France, after which the agreement or truce with the Emperor will be discussed, and that the State shall send to the King of France demanding the restoration of Fonterabia to the Emperor within a certain period, or otherwise the Republic will declare war on France.

Cardinal Wolsey also abused the Venetians grossly. He says they are promise-breakers, and the lowest of all potentates (e infimi di tutti i principi), and that if they refuse to act as they have been desired, his King and the Emperor will wage war on them.

Wolsey, moreover, does not choose anything to be exported from the island, not even in the name of [other?] aliens, lest the Venetians should avail themselves of the opportunity. Many sailors and galley-oarsmen have departed for Venice.

London, 23rd September. Registered by Sanuto, 12th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 24.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 184,
St. Mark's
Library.

556. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor has received the following news from the Indies (delle Indie).

Don Hernando Cortes, the Emperor's governor of the island of Cuba, discovered Yucatan some few years ago, and sent the Emperor presents from the natives, as a mark of homage, namely a golden sun and a silver moon, with other gifts, of which the State received notice at the time, in a letter from the ambassador Cornaro.*

Subsequently Don Hernando advanced farther, and found that Yucatan, which he had believed to be an island, was connected with the main land which stretches westward. He landed there, and, on penetrating into the interior, discovered various castles and cities, inhabited by a more civilized race than he had hitherto met with. At length he reached a city called La Scaltezza [Tlascala],† which governs itself in a republican fashion, and is very extensive. It was at war with a great potentate, of whom mention will be made hereafter. He claims jurisdiction over Scaltezza [Tlascala], whose inhabitants choose to be free.

On arriving at Scaltezza [Tlascala], Don Hernando easily persuaded the inhabitants to tender obedience to the Emperor and acknowledge his sway, the Spaniards telling them that his Imperial Majesty was Lord of this world.

They next advanced some 60 leagues inland, where they found a salt lake some 60 leagues in circumference, the water ebbing and flowing as in most seas. In the centre of this lake was a very large city, called Tenustitan,* said to number upwards of 40,000 hearths, whose Lord is the potentate claiming jurisdiction over Scaltezza [Tlascala]; and his territory has a circuit of 100 leagues. He is held in great veneration by all his subjects, who obey him implicitly, and are very civilized, save with regard to religion, being idolators; and they sacrifice human beings to their idols. They have also another cruel custom, that of eating all the enemies they kill in battle. Their dwellings are commodious and well decorated (ben ornate). Their garments and the hangings of their houses are of cotton cloth. They have abundance of gold, and although it is not in circulation among them as money, they nevertheless appreciate it and make use of it for various kinds of ornaments. All their contracts are made by bartering one commodity for another; but for the purchase of any trifles which they require, and which cannot conveniently be obtained by exchange, they employ as money a certain fruit, which is rare in those parts, and resembles the almond.

* The letter was dated Valladolid, 6th March 1520, and is copied in Sanuto's Diaries, vol. xxviii. p. 297.

† Concerning Tlascala alias Los Angeles and its republican institutions, see Busching's, vol. 32, pp. 98-99, ed. Venice, 1780, and Robertson's Geography, pp. 862-864, ed. London, 1831.

1522.

This city and its sovereign, on the arrival of the Spaniards, surrendered to them, but subsequently on the departure of the greater part of the Spaniards, they rebelled, and slaughtered those who remained, eating them according to the custom of the country. Thereupon Cortes sent thither a strong body of Spaniards, with cannon, and a band of natives of La Scaltezza [Tlascala], the rival city of Tenustitan [Tenuchtitan], which was thus recovered, its sovereign resuming his allegiance to the Emperor.†

The inhabitants of these islands live on bread, made of Indian corn, and meat, their drink being a beverage resembling beer. They have no written alphabet, but indicate the most necessary objects by representations of animals and other things, after the fashion of the ancient Egyptians, though these characters do not serve for everything.

Such is the account given by the persons now arrived. Letters dated since their departure thence announce that the Spaniards who remained advanced so far that they reached the sea coast, though they do not explain whether it lay to the westward or southward.

On the 6th instant, there arrived at Seville one of the five ships [the Trinità?] ‡ which three years ago the Emperor sent in quest of the Spice Islands, with certain Portuguese who made their escape from the King of Portugal.

By this ship the Emperor has received a letter, of which he (Contarini) encloses a copy, as likewise the Italian translation given him by the Chancellor.

Thereby the State will perceive that they went 54 degrees beyond the equinoctial line, that is to say, as much below the pole opposite to ours as England is below our own. Then on the right, to the westward, they found that strait of 100 leagues,§ and they discovered

* The ancient name of Mexico was Tenuchtitan. (See Robertson's History of America.)

† According to Robertson the final surrender of Mexico took place on the 13th of August 1521.

‡ The "Trinità" seems to have been commanded by Juan Sebastian del Cano. Robertson (p. 891) was mistaken when writing that the "Victory" arrived at S. Lucar in 1522.

§ Magellan's Strait, discovered by him in 1519.

1522.

those islands where every sort of spice grows [the Moluccas]. They returned by the same course as the Portuguese, namely, by the easterly track, so they have circumnavigated the world. They have brought 600 cwt. of cloves and nutmegs, and every other sort of spice. The "master" * is expected, and on his arrival he (Contarini) will transmit farther particulars.

The government is very sanguine about these spices, the superintendence of which has been assigned to the Bishop of Burgos.† They already talk of establishing the staple and trade at Corunna.

This circumstance is expected to kindle war between the Portuguese and the Emperor. The other day in Valladolid the government arrested a courier in the service of the King of Portugal, on his way to France. They seized the letters of certain individuals which were with the King's letter, but this last was left intact. Does not know whether the courier has been released.

Valladolid, 24th September 1522.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Sept. 27.
Capi
Consiglio X.
Lettere
Sottoscritte,
File no. 5.

557. The CHIEFS OF THE TEN to GASPARO CONTARINI, Ambassador in Spain. ‡

There arrived here the other day a certain Hieronimo de Marin de Busignolo, a native of Ragusa. On presenting himself to the Chiefs of our Council of Ten he declared he had been sent by one Sebastian Cabotto, who says he is a Venetian, and now resident at Seville, where he receives a salary from the Emperor as his "pilot major" for voyages of discovery.

On behalf of this individual the Ragusan made the enclosed statement. Although it is perhaps unworthy of much credit, yet by reason of its importance we did not choose to decline Sebastian's offer of coming hither to explain his project. We have permitted Hieronimo to answer him, as you will perceive by the accompanying letter.

Contrive cautiously to learn whether Sebastian be at the Imperial Court, or expected there shortly, in which case you are to send for him, and give him the letter bearing his address. We have tied it up with another, directed to the secretary. Elicit as much as you can concerning his project. Should it seem well grounded and feasible, urge him to come hither. Should he not be at the Court, forward the letter to Seville through some safe channel, giving the person entrusted with it to understand that you received it from one of your private correspondents.

We send you summaries of letters from our captain-general, dated Candia, the 5th inst., with accounts of the affairs of Rhodes, to be

* The "master" here alluded to was, I believe, Magellan. He never returned, having been murdered by the natives of one of the Philippine Islands. A notice of his ship, the "Victory," will be found post, date 8 February 1526.

† Concerning Fonseca, Bishop of Badajoz, who was subsequently translated to Burgos, see Robertson's History of America.

‡ It will be seen hereafter, from these same archives of the Council of Ten, that whilst Sebastian Cabot was receiving pay and patronage from England in 1551, he made proposals to the republic of Venice, offering to act as unfairly by Edward VI. as he had been willing to do by the Emperor Charles V. some 30 years previously.

1522.

communicated to the Emperor, the Grand Chancellor, and the Bishop of Palencia.

Julianus Gradonico, caput Consilii X.
Andrea Mudesco, caput Consilii X.
Dominicus Capello, caput Consilii X.

[Italian.]

Sept. 27.

Capi
Consiglio X.
Lettere
Sottoscritte,
File no. 5.

558. ORDER from the COUNCIL OF TEN.

That the Treasurer of our Council of Ten be enjoined, from the moneys of the chest, to give a largess of 20 ducats to Dom Hieronymo de Marin, Ragusan, for reason good [i.e., on account of Sebastian Cabot].

Ayes, 16. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Sept. 29.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 121.

559. ENGLISH AMBASSADOR IN VENICE.

Put to the ballot,—that permission be granted to the ambassador of the King of England [Richard Pace] to bring into Venice, duty free, two kilderkins of wine, according to the terms of the auction.

Ayes, 110. Noes, 18. Neutrals, 0.

Permits were addressed to the office for the wine duties.*

[Italian, 3 lines.]

Sept. 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 432.

560. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

In a certain engagement the French have routed the English. Paris, 30th September. Registered by Sanuto, 20th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 421.

561. MAFIO BERNARDO.

Today there arrived here from England Mafio Bernardo, son of the deceased banker Beneto. He has been some months over there, to transact his commercial affairs. He went with Hironimo da Molin, who got two bubos, and recovered. Bernardo, who never deserted him, also got a carbuncle, which burst, so he then took to horse and came home. It is said he means to get himself made procurator, and will give 10,000 ducats.†

[Italian.]

Oct. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 466.

562. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

They had received news of the safe arrival of their fleet in England. ‡

* The persons who farmed the duties were probably liable to certain restrictions, at the option of the State.

† Bernardo's brother or nephew Francesco, at a later period, made peace between England and France, and in December 1546 Mafio Bernardo himself was murdered by hired assassins, and one of the ringleaders of the plot was Lodovico dalle Arme, a diplomatic agent accredited by Henry VIII. to the Republic of Venice.

‡ "Come haveano auto nova dil zonzer di l'armada soa a salvamento su l'ixola." Query, allusion to the expedition of Surrey, who renounced the siege of Hedin about the end of October and put his troops into winter quarters. (See Hume, vol. 3, p. 124, ed. London 1744.)

1522.

Cardinal Wolsey is still angry about the Venetian galleys; and King Henry has laid a fresh duty on all the merchandise in England.*

Dated 2nd October. Registered by Sanuto, 21st November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 5.

563. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 441.

Cardinal Wolsey is more determined than ever. King Henry, moreover, is sending one Dom Hironimo Adorno, brother of the Governor of Genoa, as his ambassador to Venice, to remonstrate. Suggests that the agreement should be made.

London, 5th October. Registered by Sanuto, 29th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 12.

564. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 186,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 10th the Emperor received letters from his ambassador at Venice, stating that the Signory spoke him fair concerning the agreement, and purposed sending a "power" to England and to him (Contarini) in Spain; but the Imperial ambassador considered this a mere feint for the purpose of gaining time.

Presented to the Emperor the State's missive congratulating him on his safe arrival in Spain. The Emperor returned thanks, and then said, "Well, Lord Ambassador, have you nothing more than this to tell me? The Signory still persists in not coming to a decision." Replied that the delay had been caused by the expected arrival of Pace at Venice on the 21st. The Emperor made no rejoinder, but commenced discussing other light topics (intrò in altri piacevel colloquij).

Valladolid, 12th October 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Oct. 13.

565. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 441.

Told by King Francis that the English intend to desist from their attack on France and return to England.

Poissy, 8th and 13th October. Registered by Sanuto, 29th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 13.

566. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS in VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 427.

This morning the English ambassador, Richard Pace, came into the College, and remained there upwards of two hours.

Francesco Bragadin, Sage of the Council, stated to him the rights of the Signory, and said the King did wrong not to release the galleys, and not to observe the articles of the safeconduct. He then read to Pace the words uttered by Wolsey to Surian, that first of all he insisted on the Signory's attacking France, after which the truce and agreement should be discussed. Bragadin told Pace that for this likewise his King was very much to blame on many accounts, so that the ambassador could not but admit the Signory is in the right.

* Qu., merchandise belonging to Venetian subjects.

1522.

The College determined to give up the negotiation with England, and to resume the negotiation with the Emperor through the Chancellor Gattinara.

[Italian.]

Oct. 15.
Misti
Consiglio X.
v. xlv. p. 102,
tergo.

567. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Are disappointed by his five letters, dated from 19th to 23rd September, giving a detailed account of his negotiations with Cardinal Wolsey. The English ambassador [Pace] inquired what were the contents of these letters, as he had received none but private letters.

Informed Pace that whereas both Cardinal Wolsey and the King had offered to become mediators for the peace between the Signory and the Emperor, he (Wolsey) now chose the matter to be negotiated in Spain, and the Imperial ambassadors in England had no powers. This was a great surprise to the Signory; but they were still more surprised to learn that the Cardinal and the Imperialists choose the State to commence by attacking the King of France.

Told Pace that before they took such a step it was necessary they should come to an arrangement with the Emperor, and that they were willing to stipulate the following condition:—That if the French return into Italy, the Republic should be bound to desist from lending assistance to King Francis. With this Pace seemed to be satisfied.

Proceeded then to speak of the detention of the Flanders galleys, sequestrated in England in violation of the "jus gentium," and of the great damage and loss incurred by the poor masters, merchants, officials, and mariners, many of whom had quitted England in despair, and died on the road, begging their bread. Observed also, that it was the King who caused the Emperor to give the safe-conducts.

Pace listened with surprise and regret, as it appeared to him that reason was on our side. He inquired whether these statements had been communicated to the King. Being answered in the negative, he insinuated that this had not taken place by the King's command (ex mente Regia), but he enjoined strict silence as to what he had said, and promised to write and use his good offices.

To vindicate the State, if necessary, but not to divulge the regret expressed by Pace, or his insinuation that Wolsey's reply to him (Surian) was not in accordance with the King's intention.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Oct. 16.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreto,
v. xlix. p. 131.

568. The DOGE and SENATE to ALVISE GRADENIGO, Ambassador in Rome.

It is well known to the Pope that the State has always been anxious for peace with the Emperor. For many months have they been aiming at this, the negotiation being in the hands of the King of England.

Ayes, 134. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 29 lines.]

1522.

Oct. 16.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 131,
tergo.

569. The DOGE and SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Ambassador in France.

Acquaint him with Cardinal Wolsey's reply to the ambassador Surian, and their negotiations with Pace.

Ayes, 133. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 55 lines.]

Oct. 18.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 187,
St. Mark's
Library.

570. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The post from England and Flanders has arrived. Has received the Signory's missive of 2nd September, and from Surian an account of his negotiations down to the 22nd, first of all with Cardinal Wolsey alone, and subsequently in the presence of the Imperial ambassadors.

Had anticipated the result, having been repeatedly told by the Chancellor [Gattinara], that through Wolsey the State would accomplish nothing, as the Imperialists object to the Cardinal's mediation.

On being informed by the Chancellor that the Imperial ambassadors in England had no mandate, either from the Emperor or from the Archduke Ferdinand, replied that the Signory had employed the mediation of the King of England at the Chancellor's desire; that subsequently Wolsey made an offer of his services, and Pace had given the State to understand that the Cardinal would mediate.

Gattinara rejoined, "You know what I told you heretofore: and now our ambassadors write to us that Wolsey wished to constitute himself mediator, on two accounts—to find favour with the Emperor, by making it appear he had negotiated successfully; and, secondly, for the sake of obtaining a good sum of money from the State. But you procrastinate."

Explained the causes of the delay.

The Republic's apology in answer to the proposal that she should declare against France has been accepted by the ministers at the Emperor's court. Mentions this, as Cardinal Wolsey in his usual fashion took the matter up very warmly.

The Emperor's troops and those of Valencia are now besieging Xativa.

Valladolid, 18th October 1522.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Oct. 26.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 188,
St. Mark's
Library.

571. The SAME to the SAME.

On the 21st was summoned to the house of the Chancellor. Found him with Mons. de Bresse, Mons. de Rœux, and the Comendador of Castile. The Chancellor made many complaints against the Signory, especially for not joining the league.

Has received letters from England. The commission to negotiate had been received by Surian, who, finding the Emperor's ambassadors were not empowered to treat, informed them instructions had been sent to Contarini in Spain, where the agreement would be concluded. The Emperor has therefore asked him (Contarini) whether he had a commission.

1522.

Replied that he had no directions from Surian. Describes several long discussions with the Emperor's ministers, who insisted upon his commencing the negotiations without further delay.

At length with great difficulty obtained a promise from them that the Emperor would wait six days, in which he (Contarini) was to decide whether he would treat, as the Emperor would never after resume the subject.

Is thus placed in great perplexity, for want of knowledge of the Signory's intentions; and his refusal to treat may cause the Emperor to suppose the Republic is procrastinating until the return of the French into Italy. Should the Emperor attack Venice in anticipation of such a step, it is certain that all Venetian property in England will be confiscated, the Chancellor Gattinara having asserted several times—and experience demonstrates the fact—that Cardinal Wolsey is seeking an opportunity of seizing the Signory's galleys.

It is also possible there may be a plot between the Emperor and the King of France, or some project of peace between them. Hears that the French complain that the Venetian forces will not fight, and that the State refuses to receive the French troops. The Republic can derive no advantage from England, because the Imperialists, considering Cardinal Wolsey venal, do not choose him to negotiate this affair.*

For these reasons has determined to commence the negotiation.
Valladolid, 26th October, 1522.

[Italian, 8 pages.]

Oct. 28.

572. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 455.

The English troops, after embarking in France for England, encountered a violent storm, which drove them to the coast of Brittany, wheretwo of the larger ships foundered. The natives attacked the other five ships and cut the English to pieces. "A captain of York" (sic) and a secretary of Cardinal Wolsey's perished.†

The King of France said to him (Badoer) that as the elements had commenced to be propitious to him, the Signory must not fail to assist him in recovering his duchy of Milan, as the castles of Milan and Cremona yet hold out for France; that most of the Swiss cantons would be on his side, and that he meant to come into Italy in person.

Blois, 28th October. Registered by Sanuto, 15th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 31.

573. The PROPOSED PEACE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 442.

Motion in the Senate by the Sages for a letter to the Signory's ambassador in Rome, desiring him to thank the Pope for his briefs to Emperor, the King of England, and Cardinal Wolsey, concerning the peace. To justify the Signory's proceedings to the Pope.

[Italian.]

* "Perchè costoro havendo il Cardinal per homo corruptibile de denarj non vogliono che lui la tratj."

† "E le altre nave n° 5 capitate in Bretagna; da quelli popoli le zente Englese erano state taiate a pezi, et che uno Cap° di Jorch era perito, et uno Secretario di Cardinal Eboracense."

1522.

Oct. 31.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreto,
v. xlix. p. 134.

574. The DOGE and SENATE to ALVISE GRADENIGO, Ambassador in Rome.

Informed by letters from their ambassador in England, that the Pope had sent briefs to the King and Cardinal, for the release of the Venetian galleys. Are grateful to the Pope.

Understand also how earnestly the Papal Nuncio [Ghinucci] had in the Pope's name besought the King and Cardinal to abstain from hostilities. Commend the Pope's good disposition, on account of the fierce projects of the Infidels.

Ayes, 154. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 49 lines.]

Nov. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 452.

575. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

The plague continues. The Pope has again written to England and the Emperor in excellent form concerning the agreement with the Signory.

Rome, 5th and 6th November. Registered by Sanuto, 11th Nov.

Note by Sanuto:—In the afternoon the Senate sat. The Sages proposed a letter to the Signory's ambassador in Rome, desiring him to thank the Pope for the briefs written to Spain and England. They also moved for a letter to the ambassador in England. Carried.

[Italian.]

Nov. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 444.

576. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages for the appointment of an ambassador to England.*

Scrutiny for an ambassador to England in the room of Lodovico Falier, who has refused. Elected, Zuan Antonio Venier, one of the Ten Sages.

Order of the Ballot:—

	Ayes.	Noes.
Marco Gradenigo, LL.D., late member of the Senate - - - - -	69	129
Bertuccio Soranzo, late " Auditor vecchio " - - - - -	58	141
Santo Moro, LL.D., late member of the Senate - - - - -	66	131
Marco Contarini, late State Attorney (Avogador) - - - - -	80	112
Hironimo Polani, LL.D., late member of the Senate - - - - -	70	127
Silvestro Memo, " Proveditor di comun " - - - - -	65	135
Carlo Capello, late " Auditor novo " - - - - -	51	147
Gabriel Venier, late State Attorney - - - - -	90	106
Agustin da Cà da Pesaro, late " Auditor novo " - - - - -	78	117
Cristofal Capello, late member of the Senate - - - - -	40	154
Troian Bollani - - - - -	41	160

* I transcribe the list of names to show the class of persons who canvassed the appointment of ambassador of England. Of the persons mentioned in this list, Lorenzo Priuli died Doge of Venice in 1559, and Nicolò da Ponte was also Doge at the time of his death in 1585.

1522.

	Ayes.	Noes.
Zuan Basadonna, LL.D., late member of the Senate - - - -	71	117
Francesco Morosini, LL.D. - - - -	58	130
Marco Contarini, late Treasurer (Camerlengo di comun) - - - -	95	103
Carlo Contarini - - - -	83	103
Zuan Antonio Venier, one of the Ten Sages	112	83
Marco Lando, late Captain in Candia -	66	113
Lorenzo di Priuli - - - -	97	95
Andrea di Priuli, LL.D. - - - -	73	112
Giustinian Contarini, member of the Senate	73	114
Nicolò da Ponte, LL.D., late member of the Senate, Lecturer in philosophy - -	57	141

[Italian.]

Nov. 6.

Senato Mar.
v. xx. p. 48.577. ELECTION of an AMBASSADOR to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate. Whereas, owing to the refusal of Lodovico Falier to go ambassador to England, it was decreed by the Senate on the 16 September, to appoint an ambassador in his stead; and whereas it is fitting to take pity on Giovanni Badoer, ambassador in France. Put to the ballot, that after the election of an ambassador to England, a nobleman be elected to replace Badoer.

Ayes, 166. Noes, 20. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 10 lines.]

Nov. 6.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 132,
tergo.578. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Whereas, according to the Act passed in the Senate on 16th September, an ambassador is to be elected in the room of Lodovico Falier, who has refused; and whereas it is fit to show the customary courtesy towards Zuan Badoer, ambassador in France, whose plight is such as the Council has just heard:

Put to the ballot,—that after the election of an ambassador to England, a Venetian nobleman be elected in lieu of Zuan Badoer, on the same terms (120 ducats per month) as Lorenzo Bragadin, who went as captain to Brescia.

Ayes, 166. Noes, 20. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 11 lines.]

Nov. 7.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 189,
St. Mark's
Library.579. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Account of his negotiations with the Imperial ministers. Sketches the character of the Chancellor Gattinara. He is very affable and courteous, has great authority with the Emperor, and is a bitter enemy to the French, his politics being the reverse of those professed by Mons. de Chièvres. He is rather sophistical and confused in his doings,* but extremely fortunate in his designs.

On All Saints' Day the Emperor appeared on a stage erected in the market place of Valladolid, accompanied by all the Castilian grandees. He caused 300 persons, who had headed the revolutionary commons of Castille, to be proclaimed rebels. Their estates, which have been confiscated, are expected to yield upwards of two millions of gold, as among these individuals were some whose incomes ranged from 10,000 to 12,000 ducats a year. The Emperor issued a second proclamation, pardoning all the other members of the Junta in Castille, much to the satisfaction of the commons.

* "E un pocho sophistico et sbaraglioso in le actione."

1522.

Has visited the two ambassadors from England [Sir Thomas Boleyn and Dr. Sampson].* They received him graciously, but are altogether hot for the war. Sees no sign of peace in that quarter. The Comendador of Castile has a similar belief concerning the intention of the King of England.

Valladolid, 7th November 1522.

Memorandum:—Forwarded triplicates of the foregoing on the 11th, with a few additional lines, apologizing for the omission of two paragraphs in the original concerning the English ambassadors and the supplies destined for Fonterabia.

[Italian, 6 pages.]

Nov. 8.

580. RICHARD PACE IN VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 446.

This morning the ambassadors from the Emperor and the King of England went into the College together, to say that the report still circulated of the coming of the French into Italy, and that therefore the Signory was to beware of supplying them with provisions.

[Italian.]

Nov. 11.

581. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii.
pp. 453-454.

Scrutiny for an ambassador to England in the room of Zuan Antonio Venier, who has refused. Elected, Lorenzo di Priuli, a young man of letters (homo studente et zovene). He and Marco Contarini had the same number of ballots; but when reballoted, Priuli obtained a majority.

Order of the Ballot:—				Ayes.	Noes.
Marco Antonio Michiel	-	-	-	40	148
Silvestro Memo, " Proveditor di comun "	-	-	-	66	129
Nicolò da Ponte, LL.D., late of the Senate,
Lecturer in philosophy	-	-	-	67	133
Giustinian Contarini, member of the Senate	-	-	-	65	122
Zuan Basadonna, LL.D., late one of the "X.
Sages"	-	-	-	72	123
Lorenzo di Priuli	-	-	-	99	89
Marco Antonio Sanuto, late " Auditor novo "	-	-	-	81	103
Carlo Contarini	-	-	-	89	101
Francesco Morosini, LL.D.	-	-	-	56	137
Troian Bolani	-	-	-	51	142
Hironimo Polani, LL.D., late member of the Senate	-	-	-	78	121
Marco Antonio Contarini, late " Avogador "	-	-	-	89	98

* Boleyn and Sampson arrived at Laredo on the 11th October 1522. (See "State Papers," vol. VI, part V., p. 98.)

1522.

	Ayes.	Noes.
Andrea de Priuli, LL.D. - - -	82	106
Cristofal Capello, late member of the Senate	43	140
Marco Gradenigo, LL.D., late member of the Senate - - -	68	127
Agustin da Cà da Pesaro, late " Auditor novo " - - -	72	122
Marco Lando, late Captain in Candia -	64	137
Alvise Morosini - - -	23	165
Carlo Capello, late " Auditor novo " -	53	135
Marco Contarini, late Treasurer, (Camerlengo di comun) - - -	99	89
Reballoted—
Lorenzo di Priuli - - -	111	75
Marco Contarini, late Treasurer - -	98	90

[Italian.]

Nov. 11.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 136.

582. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Have received his letters of 28th September and 5th October, respecting the Pope's briefs to the King and Cardinal for the release of the Signory's galleys. Have thanked the Pope, who ordered that the briefs should be repeated in the strongest and most ample form, for the purpose of effecting the release of all the three galleys. Write about this matter to the King and Cardinal. To do his best to effect the release.

Send the copy of a Papal brief to the Legate in Venice concerning the Christian expedition (in materia rei Christianæ), that he may read it to the King and Cardinal.

Ayes, 185. Noes, 6. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 28 lines.]

Nov. 11.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 136,
tergo.

583. DOGE ANTONIO GRIMANI to HENRY VIII.

Urging the King to grant the Venetian galleys detained in England free and full power to return home with all their gear, guns, and merchandise.

Ayes, 185. Noes, 6. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 37 lines.]

Nov. 11.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 136,
tergo.

584. The SAME to CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Wrote fully to the King and Cardinal on 30th July for the release of the Venetian galleys. Repeats the demand. Loss to the masters of the galleys, the merchants, and their crews. Hopes that permission for them to depart from England will be granted through the authority and favour enjoyed by the Cardinal with the King.

Ayes, 185. Noes, 6. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 14 lines.]

Nov. 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 457.

585. ALVISE GRADENIGO to the SIGNORY.

Encloses copies of the briefs written by the Pope to England for the release of the Signory's galleys.

Rome, 13th November. Registered by Sanuto, 18th November.

[Italian.]

1522.

Nov. 12.

Mantuan
Archives.586. HENRY VIII. to FREDERICK, MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

The good will which subsisted between himself and the late Marquis causes him to entertain great affection for the reigning Marquis. Has received from Sir Gregory Casali an account of his virtues and desire to oblige him (King Henry). Sends him two hobbies and some hounds, which have been consigned to Casali for transmission. Wishes to know if there is anything in England he would like.

Greenwich, 12th November 1522.

(Signed) Vre cousin et amy, Henry Rex.

(Countersigned) Petrus Vannes.

[Original. Latin.]

Nov. 17.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 134,
tergo.587. RICHARD PACE in VENICE.

Put to the ballot that, by the authority of the Senate, the reverend ambassador of the King of England be allowed to bring into Venice four kilderkins of wine, duty free, according to the terms of the auction.

Ayes, 178. Noes, 14. Neutrals, 2.

Mem.—Permits were made out.

[Italian, 3 lines.]

Nov. 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 455.588. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate by the Councillors, that Lorenzo di Priuli, ambassador elect to England, who has accepted, be allowed to sit in the Senate until his departure, without giving a ballot.

Carried; and he took his seat.

[Italian.]

Nov. 18.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter No. 190,
St. Mark's
Library.589. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Eight delegates have come from Xativa, one of the cities of the Junta, to tender obedience to the Emperor, and to let him know that their insurrection was caused by the oppression of the Valencian aristocracy.

Archduke Ferdinand has asked the Emperor for the duchy of Milan. The request was refused. After concluding the alliance with the Signory, the Emperor intends to give to the Duke of Milan for wife the Lady Eleanor, widow of the late King of Portugal.

Told by the Chancellor that the Portuguese ambassador has offered his King's sister to the Emperor, with a dower of one million ducats, besides the dower of the Lady Eleanor, and 50,000 ducats due for moneys lent to the Emperor by the late King Emanuel. The Chancellor said the Emperor delayed giving a reply, as it is requisite first of all to get an answer from England.

The King of Portugal offers the Emperor an annual pension, provided he relinquish the spice trade. This the Emperor rejects, having destined five ships for that voyage, to put to sea in the spring.* On account of this spice trade, a rupture between these two crowns is anticipated.

* It is stated in Gasparo Contarini's printed report of his embassy to the Emperor, that the person appointed to command these five ships was Sebastian Cabot; but, according to a letter of Navagero's, he did not set sail from Seville until October 1525, when his 1522.

The Emperor has heard of the arrival at the Azores of a ship from Mexico (Tenustitan), and the other places discovered by Ernardo Cortes, governor of the island of Cuba. By this ship Cortes sends gold in bars to the amount of 30,000 ducats, and wrought gold to the value of 100,000 ducats, as presents to the Emperor from the kings of those parts.

Valladolid, 18th November 1522.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Nov. 20.

590. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 486.

Informed by Cardinal Wolsey that the Emperor is sending an ambassador to the Signory to negotiate the agreement.

Note by Sanuto.—According to [private?] letters from England, two [Venetian?] noblemen had visited Cardinal Wolsey, and were told by him there was good hope of the release of the Signory's galleys, because a person had come to Venice with commission to make an agreement, and if that were effected they would be released immediately.

London, 20th November. Registered by Sanuto, 17th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 21.

591. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 136,
tergo.

The Senate having elected as ambassador to the King of England Lorenzo de' Priuli, who has accepted willingly, it is fitting that he should go there well acquainted with passing events.

Put to the ballot,—that he may attend this Council until he goes to his said legation, not giving a ballot.

Ayes, 163. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 7 lines.]

Nov. 21.

592. The DOGE and SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Ambassador in France.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 138.

Perceive by his last letters that the King of France had expressed his suspicions respecting the recent negotiations between the State and the Imperial and English ambassadors. Give an account of those negotiations. Utterly refused to attack France, as it would be a violation of their alliance with King Francis. Owing to that refusal, are unable to obtain the release of their galleys detained in England. Endure this injury for the sake of keeping faith with his most Christian Majesty.

The Emperor is sending to them Signor Hieronymo Adorno, as they have informed the French ambassador in Venice.

Ayes, 142. Noes, 43. Neutrals, 26.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Nov. 29.

593. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 502.

King Henry has allowed the merchants of Venice to export their merchandise. Hopes that affairs in England will proceed favorably. Dated 29th November. Registered by Sanuto, 31st December.

[Italian.]

1522.

Dec. 1.

594. GIROLAMO ADORNO, Imperial Ambassador to Venice.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 472.

The English ambassador, Dom. Richard Pace, came into the College. He stated that tomorrow Dom. Girolamo Adorno will arrive with an ample mandate from the Emperor and his resolve; and that it would be wise for the State to take heed to her interests, and take part with the Emperor and the King of England against France. The Doge said they would wait to hear what Adorno had to announce.

[Italian.]

Dec. 2.

595. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 521.

Hopes that the galleys will be released in two days.
London, 2nd Dec. 1522. Registered by Sanuto, 18th Jan. 1523.

[Italian.]

Dec. 4.

596. ADORNO in VENICE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii.
pp. 475-476.

This morning there came into the College the Imperial ambassador, Dom. Hironimo Adorno, accompanied by the other ambassador from the Emperor, by the English and Mantuan ambassadors, and by many Venetian noblemen. He was dressed in black satin and sables, and a servant supported him, as he is lame from gout. He is 40 years of age, has a small face, and a red beard. He had a very handsome retinue of 40 persons. When he entered the College the Doge descended from the platform to meet him. On the ambassador's being seated, the letter of credence from the Emperor was read, dated Valladolid, 4th of October. Adorno then said a few words, and demanded a private audience tomorrow morning, when he will have it in the presence of the Chiefs of the Ten.

[Italian.]

Dec. 6.

597. ADORNO in VENICE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 478.

In the afternoon the Sages sat in committee to discuss the reply to be given to the Emperor's ambassador, Dom. Hironimo Adorno.

The statement made by him yesterday in the College was to this effect. The Emperor, after his election, was anxious for peace with the King of France and the Signory his ally, and endeavoured to make peace with France through the King of England, who, being unable to effect it, had together with the Emperor declared against France. For the welfare of Italy and Christendom, they wished for friendship with the Signory, and to effect it the Emperor sent his ambassador, Don Alfonso Sanchez, and the King of England accredited Dom. Richard Pace. Adorno exhorted the Signory to abandon France and join the Emperor, which would produce happy results, and all disputes would be adjusted; otherwise war would ensue between the Emperor and the Signory.

The Doge took time to reply.

[Italian.]

Dec. 12.

598. REPLY of the SENATE to HIERONIMO ADORNO.Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 140.

The articles of agreement were discussed at the conference between the Emperor and the King of England. Cardinal Wolsey said he would undertake their modification, and send Pace here as 1522.

his ambassador, who, however, brought neither articles nor modification. Powers and instructions were sent to the Venetian ambassadors. In reply, the ambassador in England wrote that Cardinal Wolsey had changed his opinion, and that the matter was to be treated at the Imperial Court, but no news has been received from the ambassador with the Emperor. The coming of Adorno is most agreeable to the Signory. .

[Italian, 76 lines.]

Dec. 13.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 141,
tergo.

599. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

By their last, of the 14th ult., acquainted him with the expected arrival of Hieronymo Adorno to negotiate the peace between the Signory and the Emperor. Account of their negotiations with Adorno.

Not to use the power of attorney.

Ayes, 186. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 21 lines.]

Dec. 13.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 142,
tergo.

600. NEGOTIATIONS with ADORNO.

Modification by the College of a paragraph in the Senate's reply to Adorno, that it might be thus communicated to the French ambassador, and sent to the Venetian ambassador in France.

[Italian, 41 lines.]

Dec. 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii.
pp. 485, 486.

601. REPLY of the SENATE to ADORNO.

General account of the negotiations for peace between the Emperor and Venice. As Cardinal Wolsey was desirous of effecting it the Signory sent him an ample power for that purpose on the 1st of September last.

[Italian.]

Dec. 23.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 144.

602. REPLY of the SENATE to ADORNO.

Have listened attentively to all he has caused to be read to them in reply to their proposals. If the Emperor and the King of England desire peace for the tranquillity of Italy, it is necessary the State should have time for consideration, in order that the peace may be effected consistently with the safety and stability of the Republic. The Signory's sole object is to establish a durable arrangement with the Emperor.

Ayes, 107.

[Italian, 58 lines.]

Dec. 24.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 494.

603. NEGOTIATIONS with ADORNO.

This morning the Imperial ambassador, Dom. Hieronimo Adorno, was unable to come into the College with the others [Sanchez and Pace?], having been seized with gout. Two members of the College were sent to his house to inquire whether he had any further commission from Don Ferdinand, the Emperor's brother, who is Duke of Austria, and whose territories join those of the Signory. Adorno said he had no further commission. He is loading his baggage in order to depart shortly.

1522.

Today it is reported that 32 silver tankards (taze d'arzento) were stolen out of the house of the English ambassador, who is lodged in the Doge's house at Sta. Maria Formosa; so he did not, as invited, accompany the Signory to mass in St. Mark's Church. It is supposed he absented himself in order to avoid giving precedence to the French ambassador, on account of the enmity between them; yet does France precede the King of England everywhere (ancorachè per tutto Franza precieda il Re d'Inghilterra).

[Italian.]

Dec. 26.

604. PACE in VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 496.

On Christmas Eve, after the office and mass at St. Mark's, the English ambassador, Richard Pace, sent his secretary to request the Sage of the Council Francesco Bragadin to go as far as his house to speak to him. Bragadin, having consulted with the Sages [his colleagues?], did not go in person, but sent Andrea di Franceschi, the secretary of the Council of Ten, to hear what he had to say. Pace, perceiving that the person he wanted declined to visit him, said he had no further statement to make. Moreover, on Christmas Day and this morning he did not accompany the Signory. Yesterday, after the sermon, the College having assembled and heard this account from Franceschi, sent Pace's great friend, Daniel di Renier, a member of the Junta of the Council of Ten, and late sage of the Council, to speak with Pace at his house, where Renier often visits him, to learn what he had to say, and something about these negotiations with Adorno.

[Italian.]

Dec. 27.

605. The DOGE and SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Ambassador in France.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreto,
v. xlix. p. 145,
tergo.

In his last, of the 4th, he says nothing about preparations by the King of France for the Milanese expedition; on the contrary, it seems that the French forces will attack England. Wish the Milanese expedition to take place without delay. Desire information respecting any negotiations in France, either touching the affairs of England or those of Italy.

Adorno has been in Venice a month, and as he urges his despatch the Signory has appointed him auditors, in order to procrastinate. To announce this to King Francis.

Ayes, 65.

[Italian, 32 lines.]

Dec. 28.

606. QUESTION of PRECEDENCE between ENGLAND and FRANCE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. pp.
498, 499.

On Sunday the 28th, the day appointed for the Doge's banquet, he went to mass clad in crimson velvet lined with lynx's fur, and a satin cap. He was accompanied by the Imperial ambassadors Hironimo Adorno and Don Alfonso Sanchez, by the French ambassador Dom. Angelo di Fiorenza, and by the ambassadors of Ferrara and Mantua. The English ambassador [Pace] would not come, to avoid being placed below the French ambassador. The King of England bears the title "Rex Franciæ," and the King of France is called "Rex Francorum." Other patricians who had been invited were in attendance, including Vettor Morosini, of St. Paul's, the Doge's great friend, who goes into his chamber early every morning and remains in the College until they dismiss him, as he did with Doge Loredan. After mass they assembled in the palace to dine there, and subsequently a comedy was performed.

1522.

[Italian.]

Dec. 31.

Contarini's
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 193,
St. Mark's
Library.

607. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

According to your letter, of 27th September, I ascertained that Sebastian Cabot was at the court, and where he dwelt. I sent to say that my secretary had a letter for him from a friend of his, and that if he chose he might come to my residence. He told my servant he would come. He made his appearance on Christmas eve. At dinner time I withdrew with him, and delivered the letter, which he read, his colour changing completely during its perusal. Having finished reading it, he remained a short while without saying anything, as if alarmed and doubtful. I told him that if he chose to answer the letter, or wished me to make any communication in the quarter from whence I had received it, I was ready to execute his commission safely. Upon this he took courage, and said to me, "Out of the love I bear my country, I spoke heretofore to the ambassadors of the most illustrious Signory in England,* concerning these newly discovered countries, through which I have the means of greatly benefiting Venice. The letter in question concerned this matter, as you likewise are aware; but I most earnestly beseech you to keep the thing secret, as it would cost me my life."

I then told him I was thoroughly acquainted with the whole affair, and mentioned how Hironimo the Ragusan had presented himself before the tribunal of their Excellencies the Chiefs, and that the most secret magistracy had acquainted me with everything and forwarded that letter to me. I added, that as some noblemen were dining with me, it would be inconvenient for us to talk together then, but that should he choose to return late in the evening we might more conveniently discuss the subject together at full length. So he then departed, and returned at about 5 p.m., when, being closeted alone in my chamber, he said to me,—

"My Lord Ambassador, to tell you the whole truth, I was born at Venice, but was brought up in England,† and then entered the service of their Catholic Majesties of Spain, and King Ferdinand made me captain, with a salary of 50,000 maravedis. Subsequently his present Majesty gave me the office of Pilot Major, with an additional salary of 50,000 maravedis, and 25,000 maravedis besides, as a gratuity, forming a total of 125,000 maravedis, equal to about 300 ducats.

"Now it so happened that when in England some three years ago, if I mistake not, Cardinal Wolsey offered me high terms if I would sail with an armada of his on a voyage of discovery. The

* I have been unable to discover any trace of conversations held with Sebastian Cabot, by Trevisan, Capello, Quirini, Badoer, Pasqualigo, Giustinian, or Surian, who were the Venetian ambassadors in England from 1497 to 1522.

† "Io naqui a Venetia, ma sum nutrito in Engelterra."

1522.

vessels were almost ready, and they had got together 30,000 ducats for their outfit. I answered him that, being in the service of the King of Spain, I could not go without his leave, but if free permission were granted me from hence, I would serve him.

“ At that period, in the course of conversation one day with a certain friar, a Venetian, named Sebastian Collona, with whom I was on a very friendly footing, he said to me, ‘ Master Sebastian, you take such great pains to benefit foreigners, and forget your native land, would it not be possible for Venice likewise to derive some advantage from you ? ’ At this my heart smote me, and I told him I would think about it. So, on returning to him the next day, I said I had the means of rendering Venice a partner in this navigation, and of showing her a passage whereby she would obtain great profit ; which is the truth, for I have discovered it.

“ In consequence of this, as by serving the King of England I could no longer benefit our country, I wrote to the Emperor not to give me leave to serve the King of England, as he would injure himself extremely, and thus to recall me forthwith. Being recalled accordingly, and on my return residing at Seville, I contracted a close friendship with this Ragusan, who wrote the letter you delivered to me ; and as he told me he was going to Venice, I unbosomed myself to him, charging him to mention this thing to none but the Chiefs of the Ten ; and he swore to me a sacred oath to this effect.”

I bestowed great praise on his patriotism, and informed him I was commissioned to confer with him and hear his project, which I was to notify to the Chiefs, to whom he might afterwards resort in person. He replied that he did not intend to manifest his plan to any but the Chiefs of the Ten, and that he would go to Venice after requesting the Emperor’s permission, on the plea of recovering his mother’s dowry, concerning which he said he would contrive that I should be spoken to by the Bishop of Burgos and the Grand Chancellor, who are to urge me to write in his favour to your Serenity.

I approved of this, but said I felt doubtful as to the possibility of his project, as I had applied myself a little to geography, and bearing in mind the position of Venice, I did not see any way of effecting this navigation, as the voyage must be performed either by ships built in Venice, or else by vessels which it would be requisite to construct elsewhere. Venetian-built craft must necessarily pass the gut of Gibraltar to get into the ocean ; and as the King of Portugal and the King of Spain would oppose the project, it never could succeed. The construction of vessels out of Venice could only be effected on the southern shores of the ocean, or in the Red Sea, to which there were endless objections. First of all, it would be requisite to have a good understanding with the Great Turk. Secondly, the scarcity of timber rendered shipbuilding impossible there. Then again, even if vessels were built, the fortresses and fleets of Portugal would prevent the trade from being carried on. I also observed to him that I did not see how vessels could be built on the northern shores of the ocean, that is to say, from Spain to Denmark, or even beyond, especially as the whole of Germany depended on the Emperor; nor could I perceive any way at all for conveying merchandise from Venice to these ships, or for conveying spices and other produce from the ships to Venice. Nevertheless, as he was skilled in this matter, I said I deferred to him.

• 1522.

He answered me: "You have spoken ably, and in truth neither with ships built at Venice, nor yet by the way of the Red Sea, do I perceive any means soever. But there are other means, not merely possible but easy, both for building ships and conveying wares from Venice to the harbour, as also spices, gold, and other produce from the harbour to Venice, as I know; for I have sailed to all those countries, and am well acquainted with the whole. Indeed, I assure you that I refused to accept the offer of the King of England for the sake of benefiting my country, for had I listened to that proposal, there would no longer have been any course for Venice."

I shrugged my shoulders, and although the thing seems to me impossible, I nevertheless would not dissuade him from coming to the feet of your Highness (without, however, recommending him), because possibility is much more unlimited than man often imagines; added to which, this individual is in great repute here. He then left me.

Subsequently, on the evening of St. John's Day,* he came to me in order that I might modify certain expressions in the Ragusan's letter, which he was apprehensive would make the Spaniards suspicious. It was, therefore, remodelled, and written out again by a Veronese, an intimate of mine.

When discussing a variety of geographical topics with me, he mentioned, among other things, a very clever method observed by him, which had never been previously discovered by any one, for ascertaining by the needle the distance between two places from east to west, as your Serenity will hear from himself if he comes.†

After this, continuing my conversation with him concerning our chief matter, and recapitulating the difficulties, he said to me, "I assure you, the way and the means are easy. I will go to Venice at my own cost. They shall hear me; and if they disapprove of the project devised by me, I will return in like manner at my own cost."

He then urged me to keep the matter secret.

Valladolid, 31st December 1522.

[Italian.]

* Scil., 27th December, the Festival of St. John the Evangelist.

† Compare this with what is said about Sebastian Cabot's discovery concerning the variation of the needle, at pp. 29 and 30 of "The Memoir of Sebastian Cabot." I think it may be inferred that in December 1522 Cabot had only recently ascertained the fact here alluded to. Zurla says Tiraboschi is of opinion that Columbus, in his first voyage, performed A.D. 1492, was already aware of the variation of the needle, but in that case Sebastian Cabot would never have ventured to claim the discovery as his own in the year 1522, especially when conversing with so well informed a man as Gaspar Contarini, who, professing a certain knowledge of geography, would probably have been able to expose the imposture. The words in the original are, "Lui ragionando cum me di molte cosse di Geographia, fra le altre me disse uno modo che l'havea osservato per la via del bossolo di cognoscer la distantia fra due lochi da Levante al Ponente, molto bello, ne mai piu osservato da altri, come da lui, venendo, V. S^a potrà intender."

A.D. 1523.

1523.

Jan. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 523.608. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

King Henry will release the Signory's galleys on the following four conditions:—

1st. The Signory to give security to the amount of 100,000 ducats, as a guarantee that they will not side with France.

2ndly. The customs duties which are now paid [by the merchants of Venice?] by instalments to be henceforth paid in ready money.

3rdly. The Signory to undertake to send a squadron (una muda) of galleys annually to England.

4thly. The King to retain for himself the guns of the galleys.

Dated 1st January. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd January.[Italian.]

Jan. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 503.609. QUESTION of PRECEDENCE.

The Doge, apparelled in a mantle of crimson satin lined with ermine, with a cape, and robe of crimson satin beneath, entered St. Mark's Church with the French and Imperial ambassadors. The English ambassador did not come, in order not to take place below the French ambassador, who wanted to take precedence of Sánchez.

[Italian.]

Jan. 3.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 143.610. IMPORT PERMIT for RICHARD PACE.Put to the ballot, that a licence be given to the reverend ambassador from the most serene King of England to bring into Venice $3\frac{1}{2}$ kilderkins (amphore) of wine, duty free, according to the auction contract [stipulated with the farmers of the wine duties?].

Ayes, 175. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 3 lines.]

Jan. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 505.611. PACE in VENICE.Motion made in the Senate to give the English ambassador $3\frac{1}{2}$ kilderkins (anfere) from the office of the wine duties, and 12 kilderkins to the Imperial ambassador Hironimo Adorno.

Ayes, 175. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 2.

Jan. 5.

Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 195.612. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Understands on good authority that the King of France has fitted out four ships in Normandy to bring spices from the Moluccas, following the example of the Emperor, who, as already stated, is preparing five other vessels to repeat the voyage, which may possibly be thwarted by such rivalry, and the spice trade resume its track by way of Syria.

Valladolid, 5th January 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

1523.

Jan. 5.

Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 194.

613. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Emperor's sister, the Queen of Portugal, having become a widow, the Bishop of Cordova and the Count of Caura were sent to escort her hither. Her coming is postponed, she being apparently with child by the present King, her step-son.

Valladolid, 5th January 1523.

[Italian, $\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

Jan. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 533.

614. LODOVICO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England, to the SIGNORY.

The ambassador Surian being indisposed, he, Spinelli, writes the gossip (zanze).

If the King of France enters Italy, the King of England will muster troops and cross over to France, and send lansquenets over the Alps for the defence of the Milanese.

With regard to the galleys, the "master," Sebastian Falier, is negotiating their release by means of a bribe through Wolsey's physician.*

Dated 7th January. Registered by Sanuto, 31st January.

[Italian.]

Jan. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 506.

615. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

In the morning the French ambassador came into College. He is doing his utmost to thwart the agreement with the Emperor, and persuades the Signory to keep faith with King Francis and not to desert him.

This morning Hironimo Adorno went with his retinue to see the jewels of St. Mark; and in the afternoon he and his colleague Sanchez and the English ambassador went to the Legate [Tommaso Campeggio],† to speak to him about the matter now in course of negotiation.

[Italian.]

Jan. 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 535.

616. FRANCESCO CHIEREGATO, BISHOP of TERAMO,‡ to the MARQUIS of MANTUA.

We are occupied with the negotiations for the general war against the Turk, and for that particular war against that nefarious Martin Luther, who is a greater evil to Christendom than the Turk. It is not known what will be the result of these two most important matters. Prays God to bring them to the like good end as obtained by the first (sic). To this effect fails not to employ all possible diligence. Assures the Marquis that the affair of Luther is so rooted there, that a thousand men would not suffice to eradicate it;

* "Quanto alle galee, etc., trattava accordo per ser Sebastian Falier patron con il miedego dil Cardinal con dar fusseno licentiate perho ch  questo   cosa particular, et non publica, e altri avisi ut in literis." It will be seen hereafter, date 5th January 1531, that Wolsey's physician, Agostini, was a Venetian.

† See Andrea Morosini, Storia della Repubblica Veneziana, vol. 1, p. 75, ed. Venezia, 1782.

‡ The journal of Francesco Chiericato, Bishop of Teramo and Papal Nuncio at Nuremberg in the years 1522-1523, is quoted by Sarpi in his History of the Council of Trent.

1523.

still less can he, being alone by himself, accomplish this result. Will do what he can. Is subjected to threats, outrages, defamatory libels, and all such insults as can possibly be borne. Believes that the affair has gone such lengths that it can proceed no further. They have now commenced preaching that the sacrament of the altar is not the real (vero) sacrament, and should not be adored, but merely celebrated* in memory of Christ. They have also alleged that the blessed Virgin was entitled to no merit for bearing Christ in the holy womb, and that she had several children by Joseph, and they daily go from bad to worse. Prays God to stretch forth his arm. Still hopes that with the divine assistance it may be possible to apply some good remedy before the close of this Diet.

The Diet of Prague has ended, and the Bohemians promised the King more than he asked. Has received a letter from his Majesty [Lewis, King of Bohemia and Hungary,] stating that he intends to remain in Bohemia until the Purification [2nd February], and in the meanwhile will prorogue the Diet of Buda in Hungary.

This Diet of ours will also last until the Purification, though circumstances may delay it a few days longer.

Nuremberg, 10th Jan. 1523. Registered by Sanuto, 31st Jan.

[Italian.]

Jan. 10.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 149.

617. PROPOSED LEAGUE between VENICE and CHARLES V.

Summary of the articles read by the Imperial ambassadors to the three auditors and [by these last] to the Senate.

II. The Signory to retain peaceable possession of all the places now held by them.

VIII. Power to be reserved for the Pope and the King of England to join the confederacy, they being the conservators of this agreement and arbitrators in such differences as may arise thence.

IX. Both parties to name their confederates. The Emperor will name Florence and Mantua.

[Italian, 31 lines.]

Jan. 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 552.

618. ANTONIO SURLAN to the SIGNORY.

He is almost well. The oarsmen of the Signory's galleys have all departed.

London, 13th January. Registered by Sanuto, 17th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 19.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. xlix. p. 149,
tergo.

619. DECREE of the SENATE.

The Senate being fully acquainted with the negotiations for peace and confederacy with the Emperor, and the Imperial ambassadors pressing for a reply,—Put to the ballot that they be answered thus :—

I. With regard to the preamble there is no occasion to say anything, as it will hereafter be drawn up in suitable form.

* “ Et ch’el non si deve adorare, ma solo si deve fare, in memoria de Xto.”

1523.

VII. To the seventh article, respecting the comprehension of the Pope and the King of England, and their appointment as conservators of the league, the Signory reply that by reason of their respect for the Pope and his English Majesty, this is agreeable to them, but that the league cannot be concluded until the assent and ratification of the Archduke [Ferdinand] be obtained, and the mutual restitution of places taken during the war with the late Emperor Maximilian be negotiated.

IX. The last article is usual and very fair.

Ayes, 171. Noes, 37. Neutral, 6.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Jan. 19.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 125,
tergo.

620. RICHARD PACE.

Motion made in the Council of Ten with the Junta. The noble Georgio Cornaro, knight and procurator, to hold a private conference alone with the Reverend Richard Pace, the English ambassador resident here, and assure him that the Signory relies on him for concluding this holy peace as advantageously for the State as if the interests of his own King were concerned.

On this account, should his Lordship contrive with his usual address, according to the offer made by him, that the reply given today in the Senate to the clauses proposed by the Imperial ambassadors, be accepted, the Signory, to mark the love she bears his Lordship, will make him a present of 4,000 ducats; viz., 2,000 forthwith, and 2,000 after the mutual restitution shall have been made by both parties; and the State will never be ungrateful for his good operations.

Ayes, 9. Noes, 15. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 17 lines.]

Jan. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 523.

621. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

This morning the English ambassador came into the College, and the Signory complained bitterly to him, of the proceedings of his King, who will not release the Flanders galleys. Much was said on this subject. Piero Capello, sage of the Council, grew angry with Pace, using certain expressions which made the latter very wroth; and whereas Pace has hitherto exerted himself to effect the agreement, he has now cooled greatly.

[Italian.]

Jan. 31.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 535.

622. ENTERTAINMENT in honour of the IMPERIAL AMBASSADORS and RICHARD PACE.

Today the ambassador of the Marquis of Mantua sent to inform the Signory that next week he intends to give an entertainment at his own house to the Imperial and English ambassadors, and to invite 25 Venetian gentlewomen. He therefore requested that on this occasion the ladies might have leave to come dressed in cloth of gold and ornaments (foze), as before the Act.* So the Signory sent for the proveditors for sumptuary laws (pompe), requesting them to grant the permission. They said that as the Act had been printed, they were bound to enforce it, and could not give leave. The Signory, however, might pass a motion to gratify the Mantuan ambassador; but the motion was not made.

* A sumptuary law recently enacted.

1523.

[Italian.]

Feb. 2.

623. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 561.

Had hoped to obtain the release of the Signory's galleys, but the King is fitting them out in order to send them against the French fleet.

London, the 27th January and 2nd of February. Registered by Sanuto, 25th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 4.

624. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 543.

This morning the three Commissioners went to the house of Adorno, where the English ambassador was, for the reply, which they obtained.

[Italian.]

Feb. 4.

625. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 543.

Reading in the Senate of the reply made by the Imperial and English ambassadors to the six articles of agreement. With regard to the estates of the rebels, they are content with the 6,000 ducats per annum, which the Signory will give, in lieu of 5,000. Touching the investiture, they demand 250,000 ducats, of which 75,000 in ready money, and the rest in eight years. For the defence of the kingdom of Naples against France they are not satisfied with 10 galleys, but insist on having 15 light galleys armed. Also for the defence of the Milanese, they demand the same succour as the Signory gave the King of France when he held it. Concerning the other points there is no difficulty.

[Italian.]

Feb. 9.

626. IMPORT PERMIT for RICHARD PACE.

Senato Terra,
v. xxii. p. 49,
tergo.

Announcement made to the Signory by the reverend English ambassador, that during his seven months' residence at Venice he has had licence from the Senate to import 12 kilderkins (amphore) of wine, duty free, for his own use and that of his household. The supply not sufficing for his numerous retinue, he has obtained and consumed eight additional kilderkins, giving a bond for payment of the duties unless the Signory remit them. He therefore now requests that the bond may be cancelled, and permission given him to import seven more kilderkins.

As owing to the quality of the present times it is expedient to gratify his Lordship,—Put to the ballot, that our officials for the wine duty do cancel the securities given by the reverend ambassador for the aforesaid eight kilderkins, placing the amount to 1523.

account of the Signory, and allow him to import seven other kilderkins, debiting the Signory for the duty.

Ayes, 157. Noes, 29. Neutrals, 0.

Mandate made out on the 10th in conformity with the above-written motion.

[Italian, 18 lines.]

Feb. 13.

627. BULL-BAITING.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. p. 550.

In the afternoon bulls were baited as usual on St. Mark's Square. The Doge was there to see the sight, dressed in gold brocade and a cap of the same material, for the marriage of his grandson. The Papal Legate, [Tommaso] Campeggio, Bishop of Feltre, Adorno, the Imperial ambassadors, and the ambassadors of France, Ferrara, and Mantua were present. The Imperial ambassador [Sanchez] did not come, because the French ambassador will not give way to him; and the English ambassador did not attend, because he does not choose to take place below France. Some Genoese and Bolognese and other foreigners were also present.

[Italian.]

Feb. 16.

628. MARTIN LUTHER.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiii. pp. 570,
571.

Letter from ——— to the Cardinal St. Praxed, called de Monte, dated Ingolstadt, 16th February 1523.

From his letters addressed to the Sacred College [of Cardinals], and from the copy of the letter enclosed, the Cardinal will comprehend the proceedings of the Lutherans (quomodo cum Luterinis jam agatur).

A book has been brought here today, sent from Nuremberg, edited by Luther, and printed at Wittemberg, about the abolition of private mass. He thereby declares the priesthood, the missal, the cardinals, and bishops to be mummeries (larvie). He says the monasteries are anti-scriptural, foes of God, and most mischievous. Every one wonders that Frederick Duke of Saxony suffers such things in his towns and in his university; and that the Apostolic See has not withdrawn the faculties (privilegia) from a university so infected with every disease.

Wishes the Pope to see to this. In Lent there is to be a meeting of the Princes at Nuremberg. Prays God that they may consult to some good purpose.

II. Letter from Folchinaria to ———, dated at the University of Ingolstadt, St. Blaise's Day [3rd February], and enclosed in the foregoing.

Repeats his request to be at length released from his Saxon captivity and exile. The riots at Ingolstadt are proceeding; the altars of the saints are being destroyed, and the images of Christ crucified are being removed from the parish [churches?] and both monasteries. Laymen give communion to one another under both species; all private masses are abolished; all confraternities destroyed; the bequests of the dead are infringed; no priest that dies is replaced, but they reserve the revenues for the use of the poor.

1523.

Nobody dares celebrate more than one mass. Having done so in the language of the country, [the priest] then administers the communion to those who ask it, under both species, whether priests or laymen, placing the chalice on the corner of the altar, from which, having first delivered an exhortation, he then invites them to take the sacrament (quod se comunicent). Sometimes he communicates along with them; sometimes he gives communion to the others and abstains from it himself. They deny that it can be proved from scripture that the saints are already in heaven, but [admit] that they will go thither at the day of judgment (in extremo die); wherefore, as they do not pray for us, we worship them in vain. At Ingolstadt nobody fasts, nobody keeps any feast day except Sunday. The priests wed publicly. Nobody confesses, saying that confession is neither of divine ordinance nor necessary before communion, as the sacrament of the Eucharist suffices for the remission of sins; ergo previous confession is useless. Candles, holy water, and other ceremonies are quite abolished. They say that God himself has no need of light, but that he is himself the holy light of Christians (sed ipse sit lux alma Cristianorum); that it is not right to be burdened with laws, but to be free. Churchmen no longer shave the tonsure; they change their habit; professed monks abandon their monasteries. In short, all vows are dissolving. Therefore, ~~as he~~ (the writer) disapproves of all this, he is persecuted malignantly, and has determined to withdraw whithersoever the Lord may call him.

Signed: Folchinaria [Falckener?].

Registered by Sanuto, 28th February.

[Latin.]

Feb. 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 24.

629. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The Archbishop of has died. He is said to have left 200,000 ducats, of which the King will avail himself.

Cardinal Wolsey has sent to tell him (Surian) to see him on Sunday, when he should hear good news.

Dated 20th February. Registered by Sanuto, 20th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 20.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 199,
St. Mark's
Library.

630. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has received the Signory's order to obtain a passport from the Emperor for Lorenzo de' Priuli, ambassador to England. The passport is already made out, and merely awaits the Emperor's signature.

Having obtained duplicates, will send one through the ambassador in England, the other by way of Rome.

Dined the day before yesterday with the Chancellor [Gattinara], who announced the receipt of a letter from Hieronimo Adorno, dated Venice, 17th December. Concerning the agreement, the Signory had made three demands of Adorno: (1.) They required him to be provided with a power from Archduke Ferdinand. (2.) That the Pope and the King of England should promise to be conservators of the peace, the State not placing entire reliance on the Emperor.

1523.

(3.) That the places taken by both parties during the war should be mutually restored.

With regard to the Pope and the King of England, the Chancellor said that the Emperor consented to the Signory's demand. He added that the Emperor understood by way of France that the State was urging the French King to come into Italy, but such preparations were being made both in Spain and England that they should easily draw him back by the tail.

Said that the guarantee of the Pope and of the King of England for the peace was demanded by the State, not from any distrust of the Emperor, but merely to gratify the Pope and the King, who had perhaps volunteered their good offices for this adjustment between the Emperor and the Republic.

Concerning the war with France, the Chancellor said that the King of England would make a vigorous attack on Picardy and Normandy, having already mustered 100,000 combatants; that he would leave 30,000 to act against Scotland; 20,000 for the defence of the island; embark 10,000 on board the fleet, and cross over in person to Calais with the remaining 40,000.

Has been told that the Captain Gabiniglio was sent to Rome for a dispensation for the marriage of the widow of the late King of Portugal to his son, the reigning King, her step-son.

Valladolid, 20th February 1523.

[Italian, 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ pages.]

Feb.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 17.

631. ZUAN BADOER to the SIGNORY.

King Francis is going into Picardy, and has just spoken angrily against the Signory. Zuan Clemente Stanga, who (lately) resided in Venice (stava in questa terra), went post to the King to tell him that the agreement with the Emperor was proceeding, and it merely remained to sign the articles. The King is therefore writing a letter to the Signory. He is sending troops to Scotland to favour the Duke of Albany and the Earl of Suffolk [Richard de la Pole, White Rose] and act against England. He has sent 30,000 (sic) Switzers; he will have 12,000 (sic). Concerning the affairs of Provence, as Prospero Colonna threatened to march thither, the King is sending troops in that direction, and will send for the Switzers.

Poissy, — February. Registered by Sanuto, 15th March.

[Italian.]

[March.]

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 20.

632. The SAME to the SAME.

Fonterabia has apparently been succoured by the King of France. The Spaniards have retreated.

An English ship has been captured by the French. On board of it was much merchandise belonging to Venetian merchants in England.

Sent therefore to the King of France, requesting him to give orders for the safe custody of the effects of the Signory's merchants. The King did as requested, and also wrote letters directing that 1523.

should other vessels be captured containing Venetian property, it was to be preserved.

Undated. Registered by Sanuto, 18th March.*

[Italian.]

March 7.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 200,
St. Mark's
Library.

633. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

By the post from Flanders the Emperor has received news of a monster born in Saxony. A cow calved a calf with a man's head and broad shoulders, over which was a friar's hood. This is compared by the people here to Luther. Supposes the State will have received intelligence of this through another channel.

Valladolid, 7th March 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

March 7.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 201,
St. Mark's
Library.

634. The SAME to the CHIEFS OF THE TEN.

Sebastian Cabot, with whom you desired me to speak on matters connected with the spice trade, has subsequently been to see me several times, always telling me how much disposed he is to come to Venice for the purpose of carrying into effect his schemes for the Signory's benefit.

This day he informed me that he could not ask leave at present, lest they suspect him of intending to go to England, and that he must, therefore, serve for three months longer, on the expiration of which he would place himself at the feet of the Signory. Prays you to write him a second letter, urging him to come to Venice for the despatch of his affairs.

I write all that Sebastian has stated to me, and what he requires; your Highness will act as you may please.

Valladolid, 7th March 1523.

[Italian, ½ page.]

March 10.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 202,
St. Mark's
Library.

635. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

The ambassador from Portugal departed on Monday. Has been told by the Chancellor that he went away dissatisfied. He had requested the Emperor to make a compromise with his King about the spice trade, or at least that they should mutually relinquish these voyages until it was ascertained to which of them the Moluccas appertained. The Emperor rejected both demands, not choosing to resign the possession of these places, which belong to him.

Valladolid, 10th March 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

March 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 27.

636. ZUAN BADOER to the SIGNORY.

King Francis has embarked 500 spears and 10,000 Switzers for England in aid of Scotland. He says the Signory ought not to ratify the agreement now negotiating with the Emperor, as the latter would not abide by it, and immediately on its formation would league with France against Venice. He promised that he would never desert the Signory, and that he would make war in Italy. The King knows the agreement is not yet concluded, but he considers it settled.

* No date, but written probably at the beginning of March. The paragraph commences thus, "Fo continuato a lezer le lettere. In-quelle di Franza par Fonteralis," etc.

1523.

Poissy, 10th March. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd March.

[Italian.]

March 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 39.

637. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The King has released the galleys, but retains six pieces of artillery. The galleys are being repaired; the mischief is less than was supposed, but there will be no crews, many having departed. The galleys are forbidden to load merchandise belonging either to the Florentines or the Genoese. This last intelligence was contained in letters from the masters of the galleys.

Went to see 20 ships which the King means to fit out against Scotland, whither he has already sent commanders and troops.

Some Frenchmen went disguised to Calais, bearing the red cross, and attacked the English, carrying off six gunners into France.

The King of England sends Richard Pace, the ambassador at Venice, to Milan, and then to the Switzers, to persuade them not to join France against England and the Emperor.

Dated, 22nd of February and 6th and 11th March. Registered by Sanuto, 29th March.

[Italian.]

March 12.

Commemoriale,
v. xx. p. 177.

638. RICHARD PACE.

Letters patent from Henry VIII., authorizing him to settle all disputes between the Emperor and the Signory of Venice.

London, 12th March, 14 Hen. VIII.

Signed: Henry. Countersigned: Clerke.

[Contemporary transcript. Latin, 39 lines.]

March 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 74.

639. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

The King of France is making great preparations against the King of England by sea and land. He is expecting the Great Bastard [and means] to send him with "White Rose," [Richard de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk,] against the King of England.

Fonterabia has been succoured, and the ambassadors from the Grisons are expected, so that the King of France will have all the Switzers, except Zurich, but for this he cares not. He intends to undertake the Italian expedition and recover the Milanese.

Poissy, 12th March. Registered by Sanuto, 7th April.

[Italian.]

March 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 17.

640. NEWS from ENGLAND and FRANCE.

Report heard through the German Factory in Venice, that the King of France had been very ill, and, although young, had fallen apoplectic; but it was not true. He is preparing a large army against England, meaning to place White Rose [Richard de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk] on the throne, saying that the kingdom belongs to him.

1523.

Note by Sanuto.—Several Venetian noblemen who went to England on board the Flanders galleys have arrived in Venice by land, being unable to come by the galleys, as the King chose to keep them for himself. These noblemen say that the Scots were raising a great army against England, and the King of England was preparing a fleet and army against France; so that the war over there was proceeding more briskly than ever.

[Italian.]

March 15.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 7.

641. STATEMENT made by the AMBASSADORS of the ARCH-DUKE [FERDINAND] of AUSTRIA.

As the Signory refuses to surrender the places demanded at first, the Archduke now requires the restitution of Pordenone, Piamonte (sic), Castel Novo, and Belgrado, together with the other places taken in the late war.

The dispute with regard to Treviso and other places demanded, which are now in possession of the Signory, and which were held by them before the war, to be referred to the Pope alone, or in conjunction with the ambassadors from England, Hungary, Poland, and Portugal resident at Rome, for his or their decision.

In the meanwhile, until the case be decided, the Signory to pay the Archduke annually 60,000 ducats, after which peace and confederacy to be negotiated.

[Italian, 13 lines.]

March 16.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 7.

642. REPLY to the AUSTRIAN AMBASSADORS.

* * * In accordance with the promise given by the Pope and the reverend English ambassador, the Signory will be content to surrender the places now held by them, although of greater profit to their subjects than those to be given in exchange.

Ayes, 23. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin, 29 lines.]

March 17.

Mantuan
Archives.

643. ANGELO and GIOVANNI BATTISTA, Falconers, to FEDERIGO GONZAGA, MARQUIS of MANTUA.

Arrived safe in England with nine falcons. On the 12th of March presented them to the King, who was beyond measure pleased with them, and received the bearers most graciously. The falcons are still in their hands, because they could not be tried on account of the bad weather. The King is most impatient to see them fly. Have no doubt but that they will do their duty, as they are in excellent condition. Do not know when they shall depart, as they depend on the King, who is going tomorrow to Portsmouth to inspect his fleet, and chooses them to accompany him to fly the falcons.

Richmond, 17th March 1523.

Signed: Angelo et Zambaptista.

[Original. Italian.]

March 18.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. 1. p. 3.

644. The DOGE and SENATE to FRANCIS I.

Believe that he is thoroughly acquainted with the causes of the many and heavy losses incurred by the noblemen, citizens, and 1523.

merchants of Venice owing to the prolonged detention in England of the Signory's galleys and ships.

For this reason the merchants, unable to obtain their property by other means, adopted the following expedient.

They sought and are still seeking to ship what they could save in English or other vessels under the names of Ragusans, Florentines, Genoese, &c.

In this manner they loaded six vessels, of which two foundered at sea, two ran aground and were wrecked, the fifth put back into Hampton from stress of weather, and the other, on arriving in Brittany, was detained, apparently by Captain Antonio [Anthoine de la Fayette ?] and other captains in the King's service.

Thank him very affectionately, because, immediately on hearing this, he wrote to his Governor General in Brittany, desiring him to take good care of all the property, so that nothing should be damaged, for the purpose (as the State is very certain) of restoring to their subjects all their goods thus embarked,—a truly beneficent proceeding on the part of his Majesty.

[Italian, 43 lines.]

March 18.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 3.

645. The DOGE and SENATE to GIOVANNI BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in France.

Enclose copy of the Signory's letter to the King concerning the effects of the Venetian noblemen and merchants detained in Brittany by Captain Antonio and others, together with the English ship.

Ayes, 191. Noes, 2. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 20 lines.]

March 18.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 203,
St. Mark's
Library.

646. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Through Hieronimo Adorno the Emperor has heard of the capture of Rhodes by Sultan Solyman,* Adorno having received the news from the Viceroy of Naples, who sent him a letter dated Gallipoli in Puglia, 14th January, from Gabriel di Martinengo, giving an account of the surrender.

Valladolid, 18th March 1523.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

March 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 23.

647. The FLANDERS GALLEYS.

The secretary of the English ambassador came and told the Doge that he, Pace, had received letters from England to the effect that the King has given leave to the Signory's Flanders galleys to depart at their pleasure.

[Italian.]

March 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv.
pp. 23-24.

648. Last ILLNESS of ADORNO.

Hieronimo Adorno is very ill. He confessed and communicated, and settled his affairs during the past night. He is expected to die.

[Italian.]

* On the 22nd of December 1522.

1523.

March 20.

649. DEATH of ADORNO.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 24.

It was heard in the morning that the Imperial ambassador, Hironimo Adorno, died at the seventeenth hour. In the afternoon the bell of Sto. Mark's tolled double peals six times, and stately obsequies will be performed in his honour at St. Stefano, where he resided. He was 33 years of age. He seemed well inclined towards the Signory.*

[Italian.]

March 28.

650. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 88.

The galleys have been repaired and will set sail after Easter, but the crews are wanting. When asked for their guns, Cardinal Wolsey said, "Go and take them, they are distant three miles from the galleys."† The captain and masters are unable to obtain from him the grant of any of their demands, however small.

London, 28th March. Registered by Sanuto, 24th April.

[Italian.]

[March.]

651. The SAME to the SAME.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 90.

A Bishop [Bernard de Mesa, Bishop of Badajoz], whose see was saddled with a pension of 2,000 ducats for Cardinal Wolsey, has been resident in England as ambassador from the Emperor. When the Emperor went to England, he requested the King to remit (levare) the pension, and the King promised to pay it himself. The ambassador being now about to return to Spain, Wolsey demanded the pension, saying he chose to receive it from the Bishop, who has been compelled to give security, &c. There is, therefore, no longer the same good understanding as at first between the Emperor and England; and it seems that Madame Margaret, the governess of Flanders, allows Frenchmen passage on their way to Scotland.

The King is sending an ambassador to Rome, called the Elect . . . [Dr. John Clerk, Bishop elect of Bath], who is entirely the creature of Wolsey, both that he may aid him to obtain the pope-dom should Adrian VI. die, and also for the transaction of other necessary business. The King wanted to recall Pace from Venice [to England], but the Cardinal did not choose it; so the King is sending him to the Switzers, and he is to confer with this envoy on his way to Rome at Milan.

Undated. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

March 30.

652. ILLNESS of PACE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 39.

The English ambassador, Richard Pace, has been ill of late; he therefore was not present at the obsequies of Adorno. This day he came to the College, and communicated the advices received by him from England concerning the release of the galleys.

[Italian.]

* Pace's negotiations were affected by this catastrophe.

† Qu. at Calshot Castle?

1523.

March 31.

653. The FLANDERS GALLEYS.Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 13.

Motion made in the Senate for letters of thanks to be written to Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolsey.

[Italian.]

March 31.

654. DOGE LEONARDO LOREDANO to KING HENRY VIII.Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 7.

Letter of thanks for the release of the Flanders galleys, announced by Richard Pace, the English ambassador in Venice, and by the Venetian ambassador in England.

[Latin.]

March 31.

655. The SAME to CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Ib.

Of the same tenor.

[Latin.]

March 31.

656. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 13.

The Reverend Richard Pace having suddenly informed them that a courier is to leave Venice for England this evening, will not allow him to depart without letters from them. Commend the ambassador for his zealous and indefatigable exertions, whereby he has at length effected the release of the Signory's galleys, and of the goods belonging to her merchants. To thank the King and Cardinal.

Enclose letters for the King and Cardinal.

Approve of the ambassador's gentle hint to the King that he should grant reparation to the poor masters and mariners for all they have suffered, without any fault of theirs.

As the ambassador writes of his Majesty's great wish to have six of the Signory's bronze guns—two from each galley—the like demand having been made by the Reverend Richard Pace, desire him, although it subjects the galleys to great peril, by reason of the corsairs in the German Ocean, and of the pirate vessels of the Turks and other rovers in the Mediterranean, to announce the State's willingness to comply with his Majesty's desire, as by so doing they think to gratify themselves. Is therefore to consign the cannon at the King's pleasure; but in order that the return voyage may be made in safety, is to request the Cardinal to accommodate them with other guns, promising to return them by the next fleet destined for the Flanders voyage, which will set sail immediately on the arrival at Venice of the galleys now in England.

[Italian.]

March 31.

657. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to ANTONIO SURIAN.Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 13.

By the accompanying letter desire him to satisfy the King with regard to the six bronze guns belonging to the Signory, and to request that the galleys may be accommodated with other cannon for their safe return.

By this separate letter inform him that if unable to obtain cannon for the galleys from the King, he is to arrange with the 1523.

captain and masters, and procure other guns in the best manner possible, so that the galleys may make their voyage in safety.

[Italian.]

March 31.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlvi. p. 13.

658. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to ANTONIO SURIAN.

A few days ago the Reverend Richard Pace gave them to understand that amongst his other friends with whom he corresponds in England are the Bishop of London [Cuthbert Tunstall] and Sir Henry Marney, who (he says) have great authority and credit with the King; and he assured the Council that they will use their good offices with his Majesty in favour of the Signory on every occasion. Think fit therefore to give the ambassador notice of this, so that should he deem it advisable he may visit these personages apart one from the other, and request their favour. Should they have rendered any already, he is to express the Signory's thankfulness.

Of the receipt of this letter he is to give notice to the Chiefs of the Ten.

Ayes, 20. Noes, 2. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

April 4.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 204,
St. Mark's
Library.

659. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrival this day of a Papal messenger, who quitted the French court on the 14th ult. He confirms the surrender of Rhodes, and is also the bearer of very urgent, nay, threatening briefs from the Pope insisting on peace or truce being made with France, in order to resist the Turkish power, which now menaces the destruction of Christendom, especially of Italy.

An ambassador from the Prince of Muscovy has also arrived here.

Valladolid, 4th April 1523.

[Italian, 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ page.]

April 10.

Mantuan
Archives.

660. HENRY VIII. to FEDERIGO GONZAGA, MARQUIS of MANTUA.

Will not omit any opportunity for testifying his affection and goodwill towards the Marquis. Is now sending his well-beloved counsellor the Rev. John Clerk as ambassador to the Pope on most important business. Addresses these credentials to the Marquis in case Clerk go out of his way to visit him.

Richmond, 10th April 1523.

Signed: Henry R.

Countersigned: Petrus Vannes.

[Original. Latin.]

April 13.

Mantuan
Archives.

661. GREGORIO CASAL to FEDERIGO GONZAGA, MARQUIS of MANTUA.

Received the letter delivered to him from the Marquis by the falconers, and did his best to comply with its contents. The King was very well satisfied with the falcons, and much pleased with the loving letter, and with the present which he had been so anxious 1523.

to receive. The Marquis will hear from the falconers themselves how well the falcons flew. The Marquis can dispose of the King as much as any Prince. The King pledges himself to demonstrate this by experience, and requests the Marquis in case of need to make the trial. Refers him for further intelligence to the falconers.

London, 13th April 1523.

Signed: Gregorio Casale.

[Original. Italian.]

April 13.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 205,
St. Mark's
Library.

662. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Dined with the Chancellor today. In the middle of dinner the English ambassador* made his appearance, and seating himself at table, said he had just then been sent for by the Emperor, who, in the course of conversation, referred him to the Chancellor, with whom after dinner he drew aside. I passed with certain Sicilian barons into another chamber, and conversed with them until the conference ended.

When the ambassador came forth he accompanied me homewards. We are neighbours, and frequently converse together. I said I had waited for him, especially because my servants were much behind time in returning to fetch me. Commenced discussing the truce. The ambassador said with much warmth, "Know this for truth, that the Turks are not greater enemies of Christendom than the French; nor do they ever negotiate save with fraud and deceit.† They want a truce, but they want Milan; then they want the truce to continue four months, so that in the meanwhile the Turk in one direction and they themselves in the other may invade Christendom. I tell you that there will be a greater war than ever."

Inquired whether he should soon be despatching a courier to England. The ambassador replied, "The Emperor would fain have me send one tomorrow, the 14th instant, but it is not possible."

Valladolid, 13th April 1523.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 103.

663. ANTONIO SURIAN to ———.

Today the mass of the Holy Ghost was celebrated for the inauguration of the High Court of Parliament. I went to accompany the King, and in truth it was a very handsome ceremony. First of all, I went to the King in his chamber, and presented my masters of the Flanders galleys to him. He wore a long gown of plain crimson (de pian cremesino),‡ lined with ermine, with rather narrow sleeves well nigh in our fashion, and also a lined crimson cape precisely like an abbot's, save that the pendant over-hood behind was rather long. Over this he put a crimson mantle lined with ermine, open in front, precisely such as our Doge wears, with a long train borne by the Lord Chamberlain and by Lord Marney,

* Contarini does not give the name either of Boleyn or Sampson.

† "In verità sapiate questo, che li Turchi non sono maior inimici della Christianità di quello sono Franzesi; ne trattano cosa sì non cum fraude et cum ingano."

‡ Qu. with an unraised pile?

1523.

lately created a baron. The order of procession was as follows:—First went the lawyers, who are here called “men of the coif;” they wore gowns, with scarlet hoods and single mantles,* and a white linen coif on their heads, fastened under the chin, well nigh in the fashion of the sisters of humility (al modo quasi humel donna). Next walked the abbots of the kingdom, all dressed in their black cardinal’s cape, with the hood (capuzo) as worn by the Patriarch of Venice; this hood being open, spread to the breast from the shoulders, and displaying a lining of black satin.

The bishops followed, arrayed also in their cardinals’ capes, lined with ermine, and the hood, which in like manner when their heads were uncovered spread itself out, and displayed the ermine lining.

The barons, earls, and dukes came next, clad in scarlet gowns and mantles lined in the same fashion as the King’s, save that their mantles are divided and open above the right shoulder, they have no trains, and on the breast and shoulders they bear three bands of ermine.

After them came Cardinal Wolsey, and last of all the King, looking very handsome and grand with his fine presence (il tutto bello e grando con la sua bellezza).

He was preceded by the sceptre, carried by the old Duke of Norfolk, the royal lieutenant. The Earl of Exeter bore the sword, and the Earl of Devonshire carried a gold baton, with a hat at its extremity, said to be the one with which the Kings of England are crowned. It is of crimson velvet, surrounded by an ermine border (balzo), the crown being covered with certain long gold bands tied together at the summit, forming in the centre as it were well nigh a straight horn.

The ambassadors present were those of the Archduchess Margaret, myself, and the one from the Duke of Milan. On the way to the church we were placed between the abbots and the bishops, and on the return took our usual places. The mass was sung in the church of St. Dominick, the site of this new palace of the King’s [Bridewell]. The Bishop of Lincoln [John Longland], the King’s confessor, said the mass, on the conclusion of which the procession returned to a hall prepared for the occasion, with three rows of benches; and for a fourth, in the centre, were placed four long wool sacks covered with red cloth, as were all the other benches likewise.

At one extremity of the hall a platform was raised with a royal throne covered with cloth of gold. This the King ascended by four steps, and seated himself; Cardinal Wolsey being at his right hand, but on a lower level. The ambassadors were placed to the left, not seated, but standing against the wall. The dukes and barons sat according to their grade on the King’s right hand, and on the benches to his left were the prelâtes, and last of all the lawyers on the wool sacks. Including barons and prelates, we numbered 80 persons.

On the right hand, near Cardinal Wolsey, and from the same

* “Et mantelli di scarlato ugnoli.”—Qu. unlined.

1523.

bench, Dr. Tunstall, the Bishop of London, rose, and made a fine speech, in English, but so embellished and abounding with Latin quotations, that they enabled me thoroughly to comprehend the discourse; and we ambassadors had persons with us who interpreted the whole, which contains two principal parts. In the first, commencing with the words of the Psalmist, "Deus judicium tuum Regi da et justitiam tuam filio Regis," he dilated scientifically on the requisites needed for lawgivers, and subsequently he also discussed the spirit of the laws to be enacted by them.

The second part contained a definition of justice and its ends, "unicuique reddere quod suum est;" and he thence proceeded appositely to explain in a few words the cause of the present war in which the King of England is engaged against France. He commenced with the League of London, remarking that the King of France had violated it in several particulars, and was the first to attack the Emperor. He narrated in detail all the charges usually made by England against France, adding that, nevertheless, the King had not chosen peremptorily to proceed to war, but endeavoured in the first place by all means to bring the King of France to peace with the Emperor, even by sending the Cardinal last year to the Diet at Calais, and also as far as Bruges, where Wolsey underwent endless fatigue, and at length sacrificed his health to the peril of his life. Being unable to obtain any good result in this matter, the King was compelled to observe his oath, and for the maintenance of his rights most justly to embark in the present war.

In conclusion, Tunstall said, the King had therefore convoked the present Parliament, in order that after hearing the just causes which had made him undertake the present war, they, the Lords, and finally the whole kingdom, might be united and unanimous with his Majesty, who intended to prosecute this war with all his might, to the glory of the realm of England, most especially because good war at length produces good peace. Having spoken thus very learnedly for a full hour, the Bishop of London ended his speech. The King descended the throne, and came and spoke with us ambassadors, praising the speech made by Tunstall, who is in truth a very learned person. His Majesty apologised for the Cardinal (whose duty it was to perform this office) on the score of ill health, but said he would make a good speech in Parliament (in conclave) on the subject, and not fail in his duty.

We then accompanied the King to his chamber, it being nearly 2 p.m. when this ceremony terminated.

London, 16th April. Registered by Sanuto, 8th May.

[Italian.]

April 16.

664. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 105.

The galleys are being repaired. The French fleet has effected no landing in England.

Dated 16th April. Registered by Sanuto, 9th May.

[Italian.]

1523.

April 19.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 206,
St. Mark's
Library.

665. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

When conversing yesterday with Monsieur de Roeulx concerning the truce proposed by the Pope, was told by him that the King of England had expressly charged his ambassador at Rome not to assent to it unless the King of Scotland was excluded.

For the last few days it is reported that the Emperor's sister, the Queen of Portugal, is coming to the court.

Valladolid, 19th April 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

April 20.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v.l. p. 10, tergo.

666. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Send a duplicate of their former letter, containing instructions to be followed by him touching the guns of the Signory's galleys demanded by the King.

Note the words uttered by the King and Cardinal concerning the disputes between the Signory and the Imperial agents at Venice, and the wish of the King and Cardinal for an amicable adjustment. Were also informed of this through the copy of the King's letter to his ambassador [Pace].

The present state of the negotiation is as follows:—

After many conferences with the Imperial agents, the Signory gave an ultimatum, replete with equity and fairness, respecting such concessions as could be made to the Emperor, one of whose agents, Hieronymo Adorno, fell grievously sick and subsequently died.

The negotiations were then thwarted by the arrival at Venice of two ambassadors from the Archduke [Ferdinand]. It was supposed that they came merely to ratify in his Majesty's name what had been arranged with the Imperial agents; but the Archduke's ambassadors made demands so much at variance with the [previous] negotiations as not only to surprise and disturb the Signory, but also the Imperial agents themselves.

Do not doubt but that the King will have been fully assured of this by his ambassador [Pace].

The adjustment was thus impeded, the Signory's firm intention being that the treaty with the Emperor should include the Archduke (as they had been assured in his name), for the universal quiet of their mutual territories, which object alone induced them to take these steps, and not make other separate treaties with him, as now desired by his ambassadors.

The Pope, having been acquainted with these demands, has written an autograph letter to the Archduke, dissuading him from them, and exhorts the Signory to await the reply. Should it be such as hoped for by the Pope, and as always promised to the Signory, they will proceed to the completion of what has been commenced, in conformity with their wish for universal quiet, and to gratify the King of England, to whom and to the Cardinal he is to announce this good intention of the Signory's.

Enclose Turkish newsletters received yesterday from the Venetian ambassador in Hungary, for inspection by the King and Cardinal as usual.

1523.

Ayes, 184. Noes, 4. Neutral, 1.

[Italian, 48 lines.]

April 20.

667. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 82.

The English ambassador came into the College today, still urging the Signory to make the agreement with the Emperor, and not to attend to the words of Signor Renzo, now come from France.

[Italian.]

April 24.

668. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 207,
St. Mark's
Library.

Receipt of news on the morning of the 23rd, that the Bishop of Badajoz,* late Spanish ambassador in England, has arrived in Spain by sea, and is coming to the court; whereupon Sir Thomas Boleyn will go back.

Valladolid, 24th April 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

April 28.

669. COUNCIL OF TEN to GASPARO CONTARINI.

Lettere
Sottoscritte,
Capi
Consiglio X.

We received your letter of 31st December, touching your conference with Sebastian Cabotto; also your letter of the 7th March, acquainting us with his determination not to come hither until the expiration of three months. According to his desire, we enclose a letter drawn up in the name of Hieronimo de Marino, the Ragusan, touching his private affairs, in order that it may appear necessary for him to quit Spain. This you are to deliver to Cabotto, remotis arbitris, urging him to come hither. Marino is not in Venice now, nor do we know where he is, although the letter is dated here.

Andreas Fuscarenus, C.C.X.

Jacobus Michael, C.C.X.

Andreas Fosculus, C.C.X.

[Italian.]

April 28.

670. HIERONIMO DE MARINO to SEBASTIAN CABOT, residing in Spain.

Lettere
Sottoscritte,
Capi
Consiglio X.

Some months ago, on arriving here in Venice, I wrote to you what I had done to discover where your property was. I received fair promises from all quarters, and was given good hope of recovering the dower of your mother and aunt, so that I have no doubt, had you come hither, you would already have attained your object. I therefore exhort you not to sacrifice your interests, but betake yourself here to Venice. Do not delay coming, for your aunt is very old.

Venice, 28th April 1523.

[Italian.]

May 4.

671. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 182.

A week ago the galleys commenced lading. Details his conversations about them with the Cardinal and the King. Made application for the six pieces of artillery belonging to the galleys. He was referred to the Master of the Ordnance, and Cardinal Wolsey said he wished the Signory to accommodate him with six guns, to be conveyed by the galleys. When conversing with the King, elicited that he is not on good terms with the Emperor. The King blamed the Emperor's Chancellor [Gattinara] who counsels him, and who caused the transfer from England of the negotiations for the agreement with the Signory which were current in London. Details of other conversations held with Wolsey during the course of two days.

* Bernard de Mesa quitted England at the beginning of April 1524, and died soon after his return to Spain. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii.)

1523.

London, ——— to 4th May. Registered by Sanuto, 28th May.

[Italian.]

May 4.

Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 209.

672. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Bishop of Badajoz has arrived at the Court. Sir Thomas Boleyn will depart in two days.

Valladolid, 4th May 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

May 6.

Senato Mar,
v. xx. p. 66.

673. The VENETIAN FACTORY in LONDON.

Motion in the Senate.

The proveditors for the London factory duty are unable to examine the accounts in order that the debts, amounting to 3,000 ducats, may be liquidated, because in their office at Venice, of all the books of the factory from 1510 to 1520, they have only those of the years 1515 and 1518. It is requisite therefore to make provision that the costs of bills of exchange and their renewal, amounting to upwards of 1,000 ducats, as stated in the consul's letters from London dated 7th January, may not continue. But the consul has failed to send the books.

Put to the ballot—That the consul in London be charged to send to Venice to the proveditors for the factory* all the missing books from 1510 to 1520, and all the Acts passed in the Council of XII., together with the estimates, from 1510 to the present day. The present consul and his successors henceforth to send all writings relating to their office whenever required so to do by the proveditors.

The consul and his successors to keep this order exactly under penalty of 200 golden ducats, to be levied on their personal property for every omission; the fine to be paid within six months after their return to Venice. Should payment not be made on the expiration of that term, the scribes for the quota, under pain of loss of place, to proclaim them debtors at the palace; and they are to be ineligible to any appointment until they shall have paid in full the arrears due to the office for the quota.

The consul of the London factory, under the like penalty, to be forbidden ever again to raise any money by bills of exchange save by express order from the proveditors for the quota.

Ayes, 161. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 9.

[Italian, 34 lines.]

* In the original "cottimo," which I have invariably translated "factory," although the word signifies literally "quota," or amount of duties exacted by the State from Venetian merchants in foreign countries.

1523.

May 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 102.674. CHANGE of DOMICILE of RICHARD PACE.

In the morning the Signory and College, having assembled in the palace, determined to have the bells tolled, and to notify to all, the death of the Doge [Antonio Grimani].

Double peals were tolled at St. Mark's and at all the churches in Venice; the office and masses were ordained as usual. Briefs were addressed to every place under the seal of the senior counsellor, Andrea Magno, announcing the demise, and the noblemen abroad all received notice to come and elect the future Doge.

The Signory remained to dine in the palace on the upper story, as the [late Doge's?] furniture had not yet been removed.

The corpse, clad in the mantle, was in the "Portego."

The Doge's grand-daughters, wives of the two procurators, went to reside in Cà Guerrozi, the abode of the Doge's son, the Cardinal who is at Rome, as their own house at Sta. Maria Formosa is inhabited by the English ambassador Pace, who will quit it. The said procurators, Marco and Vettor, the Doge's grandsons, betook themselves to San Vido, to the house of their uncle, Vincenzo Grimani, to receive those who may go to condole with them; so thither people went accordingly.

[Italian.]

May 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv.
pp. 147, 148.675. ——— to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

This morning a post from Wittemberg brought news that Francesco Sickingen, who retreated to a castle on the borders of Lorraine, had surrendered to the Elector of Treves, the Count Palatine, and the Landgrave of Hesse. The forces of the Archduke [Ferdinand] are not supposed to have arrived in time for the victory, as it was only a week ago that they left Stutgard, from which place the camp was four miles distant. The reason of so speedy a surrender of the castle, which was said to be impregnable, is that the garrison commenced vacillating, as they knew not why they should run the risk of death and trouble. Some are of opinion that Sickingen was not there in person, but a gentleman of his sect [a Lutheran?], who was captured shortly before by the Count Palatine, affirms positively that he was there.

The Diet [of Inspruck] was to have closed today. The natives who sit therein wished to depart yesterday, but his Serenity the Prince [Ferdinand] sent them word to wait until today, as there was still business to be done. What it may be is not yet known; but of the two demands made by the Prince, namely, 6,000 infantry, paid for six months, and 150,000 florins, they will at any rate grant him one, at his Serenity's option.

The messenger of the Emperor's ambassador, who is at Venice to negotiate peace, has again returned; and whereas his Serenity [the Archduke] would fain have a truce for some years, and not peace, yet the Venetians prefer war to truce, as they suspect that his Serenity [the Archduke], after establishing himself, will then attack them.

An ambassador from England, by name Dr. Clerk, is expected here today on his way to Rome to the Pope.

1523.

At the commencement of next month the League of Swabia will attack the nobility of Franconia, who are for the most part highwaymen, and hostile to the Empire ; so it has been determined to punish them, and the commander of the army is already here, negotiating with his Serenity.

It seems that a tenth is to be exacted from all the ecclesiastics at Inspruck in the Pope's name, to be expended against the Turks. This measure does not much please the churchmen.

The most serene Prince [the Archduke] has caused all Luther's books to be burnt, and some days afterwards the bookseller who sold them was banished this town for a year. There are many in this country who would be Lutherans were they not afraid of his Lordship.

Inspruck, 13th May. Registered by Sanuto, 25th May.

[Italian.]

May 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv.
pp. 189, 190.

676. ANTONIO SURIAN to ———.

"White Rose" will cross over to England, because a battle has been fought between the Scots and English, in which the latter were worsted.

Dated 14th May. Registered by Sanuto, 5th June.

[Italian.]

May 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 113.

677. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

The Imperial and English ambassadors came into the College. They inquired whether the Signory had anything to negotiate, as Pace was obliged to depart. It was determined that the commissioners should go today to the Imperial ambassador ; but they did not go, because the Procurator Zorzi Cornaro chose to attend the Grand Council.

[Italian.]

May 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 194.

678. ZUAM BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Has held several conversations with the King of France. The Duke of Albany, "White Rose," and Lautrec have been sent with troops to cross over to England because Blois, ——— to 28th May. Registered by Sanuto, 10th June.

[Italian.]

May 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 183.

679. The BLACK PARLIAMENT.

Note by Sanuto.—In the letters from England account is given of the second sitting of Parliament, at which it was determined to elect four individuals, one for each of the ecclesiastical orders, with authority from them to assemble and decide. Cardinal Wolsey caused the election to be made of four individuals who are all his own creatures ; so he can dispose of them. He will make them give two-thirds of the [ecclesiastical ?] revenues. The Lords and others [the Commons ?], likewise, will impose a tax of 300,000 ducats, but it will be [in fact ?] 100,000.

1523.

Sixteen ships have arrived in Scotland with the King of Denmark, his wife, and children. The cause is not known. Some say that he wants to obtain a stipend from the Scots; others that the Danes have expelled him from his kingdom. He would not disembark, and remained out at sea.

[Italian.]

May 29.

680. NOTE by SANUTO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 183.

Three letters from England were read [today in the Senate], as written above, with this in addition, that the Queen widow of Portugal, the Emperor's sister, and step-mother of the present King, seems to be pregnant by her said step-son.

The King of England had written to Pace, his ambassador at Venice, desiring him to go on a certain mission. He now desires him to remain where he is, and to continue negotiating the agreement between the Emperor and the Signory. The King and Cardinal are dissatisfied with the Emperor. They say, "double-tongued" (bislinguæ), &c.

[Italian.]

May 31.

681. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Original
Letter Book,
St. Mark's
Library,
Letter no. 212.

It is said that on Tuesday next the Emperor will go to Medina, to meet his sister the Queen of Portugal, who has arrived there. He will accompany her to Tordesillas, and then return hither. Valladolid, 31st May 1523.

[Italian, $\frac{3}{4}$ page.]

May 31.

682. GREGORIO CASALE to FEDERIGO GONZAGA, MARQUIS of MANTUA.

Mantuan
Archives.

The falconers will have informed him how much his falcons pleased the King, and how much obliged he is to him.

Sends the Marquis the horses which ought to have been sent last winter, but Baptista, who had brought some from Italy, would not venture to take them at that season. Delayed moreover because he could find none to satisfy him, or that seemed worthy of the Marquis, as is the case at present, although he and the Master of the Horse have made very diligent search; but, unluckily for him (Casale), he could not find better or handsomer hobbies (chinee) either in London or in the country. Thinks there were never fewer. Beseeches the Marquis to pardon him, and to excuse the King, who wishes very much to get something worthy of his Excellency, towards whom he bears very great affection.

The King does not choose to send him greyhounds, as he has none suitable at present, suspecting that the English hounds would be disgraced by those of the Marquis. Now that the hunting season is commencing, there will be packs of hounds, and some choice ones, on a par perhaps with the Marquis's hounds, may be found; and should he deign to tell Baptista what sort he prefers, they shall be sent. Beseeches him also to order anything in England which he desires.

1523.

London, last day of May 1523.

Signed: Gregorio Casale.

[Original. Italian.]

June 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 224.

683. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The galleys are laden, and will depart on their homeward voyage in the middle of June.

London, 1st June. Registered by Sanuto, 30th June.

[Italian.]

June 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 190.

684. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Report to the Signory by Alvise Mocenigo, one of the three commissioners appointed to negotiate with the Imperial and English ambassadors, who informed the College that in lieu of the 200,000 ducats offered in the time of Adorno they now insisted on 250,000 ducats; that instead of 5,000 ducats for the fourth of the confiscated property of the rebels, they required 6,000; that the number of galleys offered for the defence of the kingdom of Naples must be increased from 15 to 20; and that the Signory must decide, because Pace meant to depart. The Doge replied that the Signory would consider and communicate their reply.

[Italian.]

June 6.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. I. p. 20, tergo.

685. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Put to the ballot, that our commissioners answer they acquainted the Senate with the proposals made by the Imperial ambassador, both as to the demand for 225,000 crowns, videlicet, 75,000 in ready money, and the rest in five years, and for 20 galleys with 1,500 infantry, or at least a thousand, and 6,000 ducats for the emigrants.*

That these demands surprised us, as the offers already made last January in the lifetime of Hieronymo Adorno exceeded the Signory's means, on account of the great cost incurred since the loss of Rhodes for their fleet and garrisons. Are of opinion that the Emperor should accept their last offer, namely, 200,000 crowns in eight years, 15 galleys, and 5,000 ducats for the emigrants.

To inform the Imperial and English ambassadors that the Signory

* Venetian subjects by birth, who had adhered to the Emperor during the league of Cambrai, and emigrated because their estates were confiscated. Amongst these emigrants was a Veronese, Count Nogarola, in one of whose daughters the Emperor Charles V. took great interest, at the time of the birth of Margaret of Austria at Valladolid, in the summer of 1523. The mother of Margaret of Austria, was called Van Geste, but it is possible that her maiden name was Nogarola. It is certain that at Burgos in May 1524, the Emperor gave a marriage portion to one of the daughters of the Count Girolamo Nogarola. The story of the marriage portion and of the birth of Margaret of Austria is told by Gasparo Contarini, date 23 May 1524 and 26 January 1525.

1523.

will not ratify the agreement until after the receipt at Venice of the mandate and assent of the Archduke Ferdinand.

Ayes, 76. Noes, 109. Neutrals, 10.

[Italian, 35 lines.]

June 7.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 214,
St. Mark's
Library.

686. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor was expecting three ships from the Indies. Gold to the amount of 60,000 ducats, and produce worth as much more, were on board of two of them. They have been captured by certain Frenchmen, and the third vessel, which was in ballast, escaped.

The Emperor has notified at all the seaports in Spain that any of his subjects recovering these prizes shall receive one-half of their value, it being supposed that the Frenchmen are still at sea, and on the look-out for another ship from the Indies freighted with gold to the amount of upwards of 300,000 ducats. Arrangements are being made for its safe convoy.

Valladolid, 7th June 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 234.

687. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The King wanted to make the galleys unload the wools because they had not paid certain duties.

The Bishop of Winchester, who is much about the King,* but is blind, has advised him to make truce with France, and to recal two captains† sent by Wolsey against France for the sake of keeping them at a distance from the Court. The Bishop says that money is expended fruitlessly, and it seems that the Cardinal is no longer in such great favour with the King as formerly.

London, 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 11th July.

[Italian.]

June 9.

Mantuan
Archives.

688. GABRIELE CESANO to BATTISTA ABBATI, Secretary of Federigo Gonzaga, Marquis of Mantua.

Will not fail to keep negotiations on foot, and endeavour to demonstrate his devotion to the Marquis.

The bearer, Battista Sambuello, has taken great pains to procure horses, and to deliver them in good condition to the Marquis, from the King.

Offers his services to Abbati, and requests that he will keep him in favour with the Marquis.

From the English Court (in curia invictissimi Angliæ Regis),
9th June 1523.

Signed: Gabriele Cesano.

[Original, Italian.]

June 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 196.

689. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

The Imperial and English ambassadors came into the College and demanded audience in presence of the Chiefs of the Ten. They said they had good news to give; that the mandate from the Archduke Ferdinand had been received by his ambassador; but they did not come with him, having hitherto negotiated this agreement by themselves. They requested the Signory either to authorize the commissioners, or to treat the agreement in the College, as they (the ambassadors) wished to bring it to a conclusion; and that this should be done speedily, because Pace was obliged to depart. The ambassadors withdrew, and were afterwards informed that the Signory wished to see the mandate and commission. The Doge evinced satisfaction at its receipt, so it only remains for them to exhibit it.

* "Qual è molto appresso il Re,"—who has much influence with the King (?).

† Qu., the Duke of Suffolk, general of the English army in France, and Sir William Fitzwilliam, vice-admiral, commander of the fleet in the Channel.

1523.

[Italian.]

June 12.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 21.

690. The PROPOSED LEAGUE.

The Senate having heard the Doge's report of what was said this morning by the Imperial and English ambassadors, and subsequently by the ambassador of the Archduke,—

Put to the ballot, that the Doge tell the Archduke's ambassador* that the Senate has well pondered his Prince's mandate, which appears to them a private power for the negotiation of matters between his Serenity and the Republic rather than with the Emperor. They therefore think that it would be well for the ambassador to write to the Archduke to send him a power to agree to whatever shall be stipulated between the Emperor and the Signory concerning his Highness in the peace and confederacy which are now being negotiated, as the Signory has always been assured by the Imperial and English ambassadors that the Archduke would do, to which effect his ambassador had read to the Signory a paragraph in a letter from him, dated Inspruck the 6th instant.

The like answer given to the other two ambassadors—Imperialist and English.

Ayes, 169. Noes, 11. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian, 20 lines.]

June 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 199.

691. The QUESTION of PRECEDENCE.

On Monday, the festival of San Vido, the Doge walked in procession as usual. Six ambassadors accompanied him, those of the Pope, the Emperor, France, Austria, Ferrara, and Mantua. The English ambassador was not present, because he will not take place below France.

[Italian.]

June 19.

Mantuan
Archives.

692. GABRIELE CESANO to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

The bearer of the present letter, Battista, is on his way to the Marquis with horses from the King. Does not let him depart without letters to remind the Marquis of his observance.

In a former letter acquainted the Marquis's secretary, Messere Battista, with the goodwill which the King bears the Marquis, and the wish he has to 'do what is agreeable to him, and that this is not the moment in which to execute the commands given by the Marquis to him (Cesano) when he quitted Mantua.

* Vido dalla Torre? See Deliberazioni Senato, vol. l., p. 87, tergo, 1524, 26 July :—
"Essendosi hora per partir de qui il Mco. D. Vido dalla Torre, orator del Serenissimo Archiduca," etc.

1523.

The King and Cardinal wrote also to this effect heretofore.

Will not fail to keep the negotiation alive, so as to be able to treat it in fitting time and place, and do what he can for the service of the Marquis, to whom he will notify the result by letter.

From the English Court (in curia invictissimi Angliæ Regis)
19th June 1523.

Signed: Gab. Cesan, secretary, &c.

[Original, Italian.]

June 21.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 215,
St. Mark's
Library.

693. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor sends 3,000 Spaniards to England, whence they will cross over to Flanders for an attack on France.

An English ambassador, a gentleman in waiting on the King [Sir Richard Jernyngham], has arrived at Valladolid. The State will doubtless have been acquainted with the object of his mission by the ambassador Surian.*

A few days ago the Emperor went to Medina, to meet his sister, the Queen of Portugal, and they then proceeded together to Tordesillas. They are expected to be at Valladolid tomorrow.

Valladolid, 21st June 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

June 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 238.

694. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The affair of the Flanders galleys has been arranged. They are off St. Edward's, about to set sail.

London, 22nd June 1523. Registered by Sanuto, 15th July.

[Italian.]

June 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 209.

695. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

The English ambassador came into College urging the despatch of what has to be done. He was told that as one of the commissioners, Zorzi Cornaro, was indisposed, they had been unable to go [to Pace?]. Pace said they might send the other commissioners, as everything will be stipulated according to the understanding between the Signory and Adorno.

[Italian.]

June 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 209.

696. NICOLÒ LEONICO.

Motion made in the Senate by the counsellors, that as a favour at the request of the ambassador from England, Dom. Nicolò Leonico be allowed to print his commentaries "in parvis naturalibus."

Carried.

[Italian.]

June 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. pp. 210,
211.

697. NEGOTIATIONS of PACE and his COLLEAGUES.

After the strictest injunctions to secrecy, the Doge rose in the Senate and stated that on Sunday last the secretaries of the ambassadors [Sanchez, Caracciolo, and Pace] went to the College, requiring the commissioners to assemble and conclude. They were told in reply that Zorzi Cornaro, one of the commissioners, could not attend, having a sore foot. Caracciolo having been to Cornaro, and finding him unable to move, went yesterday to the College with Sanchez and Pace, saying that as all the three commissioners could not act, it would be well to discuss the matter in the College, and said it might be concluded by granting 225,000 ducats for the investitures, 8,000 ducats in lieu of 4,000 ducats for the fourth part of the estates belonging to the outlaws, and 20 galleys for the defence of Puglia. The Doge said the State could not give more than 200,000 ducats and 15 galleys, and that instead of the 6,000 ducats [at first] demanded for the outlaws, the Signory would give 5,000. The Doge announced this as the ultimatum, and more than the State could afford by reason of the Turk. The ambassadors wished another appeal to be made to the Senate, for the grant at least of two of the demands, if not of all three. The Doge told them there was no occasion to return. Then this morning the Papal Legate, Campeggio, and Pace, the English ambassador, came into the College, the former presenting a brief of credence, and saying he had also received a brief urging the Signory to ratify the agreement, as he hoped it would be the cause of peace between the Emperor and France. The English ambassador also exhorted the Signory in like manner. Then the Legate said he would guarantee the Emperor's acceptance of the 5,000 ducats; and Pace said, "And I hold myself responsible for the diminution of the 25,000 ducats: so as your Serenity wills it, thus be the matter concluded." The Doge told them he was perfectly satisfied, but that it was requisite to have the consent of the Imperialists, for Don Alfonso Sanchez was somewhat indisposed. With this they departed, and in the afternoon Pace went to speak with the Doge, who, considering the vast importance of the matter, did not think fit to refuse, although forbidden to receive similar visits. Pace said he had been with the Imperial ambassadors, who consented, and were drawing up the articles. So the affair may be said to be concluded, but must remain secret on account of the great danger to which our Flanders galleys (worth a vast sum of gold) are exposed on their homeward voyage having to pass by French towns and harbours. The strictest secrecy was enjoined, the oath being administered a second time to everybody.

* Concerning the arrival of Sir Richard Jernyngham in Spain, see "State Papers," vol. vi. part 5, pp. 143 and following; also Harleian Catalogue, vol. i, pp. 178, 179.

1523.

The Doge also said that on Monday the French ambassador went into the College, desiring to know whether this Prothonotary Caracciolo brought any fresh commission, and whether he, the French ambassador, should write to the King of France to send "that personage" whom he had intended sending to the Signory. He stated that the Bishop of Bayeux will soon be in Venice.

The Doge told him nothing was concluded, and the State was procrastinating, but that her affairs were in danger, and the King of France would do well to make some arrangement. The ambassador departed not well satisfied.

The Doge having concluded this report, the whole Senate remained in suspense, for they would have wished for further delay, and the 1523.

commissioners appointed, namely, Mocenigo and Venier (Cornaro was absent, being sick), went into the chancery with the secretary Vielmi, to note the articles.

[Italian.]

June 23.

Senato Terra,
v. xxiii. p. 21.

698. PETITION of RICHARD PACE in favour of LEONICO the Hellenist.

The Signory has been requested by the reverend ambassador of the King of England, as Dom. Nicolaus Leonicus Thomeus purposes publishing a commentary concerning natural history, translated from Greek to Latin, and explained by him after the fashion of the ancients, to grant him the exclusive copyright.

Put to the ballot, that it be conceded to the said Leonicus that no one but himself may print, or sell when printed, his aforesaid commentary, either at Venice or elsewhere in the Signory's dominions, unless it be the person to whom said Leonicus shall choose to intrust the printing and selling of the same, under penalty of forfeiting the book or books, and paying a fine of 10 ducats for each book, of which fine one-third to be paid to the magistracy in receipt of the first denunciation, one-third to the informer, and the last third to the Foundling Hospital in Venice.

The copyright to remain in force for 10 years.

Ayes, 128. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 2.

The letters patent were made out on — June.

[Latin, 15 lines.]

June 24.

699. MARTIN LUTHER.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 145.

Letter presented to the Doge by the Mantuan ambassador, received from Inspruck, stating that the Archduke had caused all the books of Martin Luther, and their printer in person, to be burnt.*

[Italian.]

July 1.

700. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. 243.

The galleys set sail from the island on the last day of June. Dated 1st July. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd July.

[Italian.]

July 6.

701. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 254.

On the 4th instant the Flanders galleys set sail on their homeward voyage from St. Edward's.

London, 6th July. Registered by Sanuto, 30th July.

[Italian.]

July 7.

702. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 216,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 22nd ult. the Queen of Portugal made her entry into Valladolid. She was met by the ambassadors, by the Royal Council, and by all the lords and gentlemen of the Court. The ambassadors paid her their compliments, which she reciprocated, and would not allow them to kiss her hand. She came in a litter, the Emperor riding on her left hand, her ladies following behind. The streets through which she passed were decorated with tapestry, and she was accompanied thus to her abode, adjoining that of the Emperor.*

* See 13th May.

1523.

On the 24th, the festival of the Baptist, the Emperor, dressed in African costume, after hearing mass in St. John's church, went into the country, where he tilted, and all partook of a collation on horseback; after which they returned into the town and performed the cane game in front of the Queen's residence.

In order not to appear inferior to the Spaniards from their lack of proficiency in the cane game, the Flemish noblemen, the Prince of Orange, Marquis d'Arschot, Count d'Egmonde, and others, numbering 12 in all, held a tournament, jousting with spears, six against six; and the collision of their horses was so violent that three of them fell, both men and beasts, and two of the horses were killed.

In the afternoon, on the square, there was a bull bait. When it was at its height, the Emperor entered the arena with his companions of the morning, but in more costly apparel, for almost all wore gold brocade and tissue, some indeed having plates and sheets of gold (lame et piastre d'oro) on their raiment in the guise of embroidery. They attacked the bulls with spears, the Emperor being foremost, and in truth bearing himself bravely. When the bulls were despatched, the cane game was again performed, and lasted for an hour; whereupon the entertainment ended.

The English ambassador who arrived lately [Jerningham] has, together with his colleague [Sampson], been in secret consultation at the Chancellor's house, together with the Imperial councillors, Mons. de Rœulx and Mons. de Bresse.

Believes that Jerningham, in the name of his King, has strongly urged the Emperor to undertake something against France. Since Jerningham's arrival, therefore, the Emperor seems hotter than before for this attack on France. Arrangements are already made for provisions and military stores, and some captains have been sent to raise infantry. The onset is to be made apparently in two directions; the one by way of Flanders by the English, the other towards Spain by the Emperor, who it is said will take the field in person. On the 5th instant, when dining with the Chancellor and talking about the war, was told by him that he was preparing his tents, and that he (Contarini) should do the like.

Valladolid, 7th July 1523.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

July 11.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 217,
St. Mark's
Library.

703. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

When mentioning the capture by the French of the two ships from the Indies with the Emperor's gold, added that a farther supply of 300,000 ducats was on its voyage. Was assured of this by the

* The Emperor resided in the Covos palace, and it is probable that the Queen dwelt in the mansion of the Count of Benevente, where Anne of Austria was born on the 22nd of September 1601.

1523.

merchants, but, on investigating this last intelligence, discovered it to be false.

Valladolid, 11th July 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

July 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 279.

704. PIERO ZEN, Venetian Ambassador, and ANDREA PRIULI, "Bailo" at Constantinople, to the SIGNORY.

Detail their conversations with Achmet Pascia. He asked them about Martin Luther. The ambassador replied that he had written sundry works about a certain opinion of his, but effected nothing.

Dated 24th June to 11th July. Registered by Sanuto, 11th August.

[Italian.]

July 11.

705. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 234.

The ambassadors from the Emperor, England, and Austria had audience of the College today.

[Italian.]

July 17.

706. IMPORT PERMIT for RICHARD PACE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 240.

Motion made in the Senate by the whole College to remit the duty on 10 kilderkins (anfore) of wine belonging to the English ambassador.

Ayes, 137. Noes, 16. Neutrals, 9.

[Italian.]

July 18.

707. IMPORT PERMIT for RICHARD PACE.

Senato Terra,
v. xxiii. p. 30.
tergo.

Motion made in the Senate,—

That, by authority of this Council, permission be given to the reverend English ambassador to bring into Venice, for his own use and that of his household, 10 kilderkins (anfore) of wine, duty free; the duty to be placed to the account of the Signory.

Ayes, 137. Noes, 16. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian, 4 lines.]

July 23.

708. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 25.

Conference with the Imperial and English ambassadors.

The Imperial and English ambassadors, and the Papal Legate likewise, having demanded a speedy and positive reply, whereby they may clearly understand the Signory's intention concerning the treaty of peace and confederacy with the Emperor, it is necessary no longer to delay.

Put to the ballot, that our commissioners confer with the said ambassadors, and first of all concerning the second clause about what we hold, they may draw it up in this form:—That our Signory shall continue to possess peacefully, quietly, securely, and freely, without any disturbance of possession; and that the rest of the clauses do follow.

Ayes, 165. Noes, 20. Neutrals, 15.

[Italian, 10 lines. The passage in italics in Latin.] 1523.

July 26.

709. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 246.

The English ambassador came into the College about these agreements in course of negotiation, and concerning the instrument to be drawn up by him promising, in the Emperor's name, concerning the "rate." When ratifying the articles he will insert the clause without reserve (libere).

[Italian.]

July 26.

710. GASPARO CONTARINI to the CHIEFS OF THE TEN.Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 220,
St. Mark's
Library.

Sebastian Cabot, who has been residing at Seville, has returned hither on his way to Venice. He is endeavouring to obtain leave from the Imperial councillors to repair to Venice, and induce them to speak to me in his favour. This is what he tells me. Your Serenity shall be acquainted with the result.

Valladolid, 26th July 1523.

[Italian, ½ page.]

July 29.

711. The SAME to the DOGE and SIGNORY.Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 221,
St. Mark's
Library.

Five caravels have arrived at Seville with about 150,000 gold Castilian pieces. As the greater part has been already consigned to certain persons in Valladolid, but little remains for the Emperor.

Does not perceive any preparations in confirmation of the statement made by the Chancellor, that the Emperor would take the field in person. The eagerness for war displayed a few days ago has subsided; nevertheless, on many accounts, and most especially to satisfy the King of England, some warlike demonstration will probably be made. It is undeniable that the Government are by no means remiss in exacting pecuniary supplies.

On the day of the Magdalen a stately joust was performed in front of the apartments occupied by the Emperor and the Queen of Portugal. The jousts were 20 in number, 10 on each side. On one side was the Emperor with nine other lords and gentlemen, all unmarried; their opponents being the Duke of Najera and as many more lords and gentlemen, all married. The liveries were of two sorts, and very magnificent.

The appointed prize was 40 pair of perfumed gloves, worth upwards of 200 ducats, but it has not yet been awarded, as the jousts did not finish their courses. The first spear was run by the Emperor, who in truth becomes daily more and more admirable in military exercises.

The five caravels from the Indies have not arrived at Seville, but at the Azores, and have written for convoy from fear of the French fleet. The amount of gold brought by them exceeds the sum quoted above.

Valladolid, 29th July 1523.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

July 30.

712. DOGE ANDREA GRITTI to KING HENRY VIII.Lettere del Col-legio (Secreta),
File no. 7.

Returns thanks to the King for his good offices in favour of the peace and confederacy between the Signory and the Emperor, 1523.

which has been delayed by the death of Hironimo Adorno, and by the tardy transmission of the power from the Infant Don Ferdinand, as the King would have heard by letters from his ambassador, Richard Pace, who has so strenuously co-operated for the attainment of his Majesty's friendly and loving desire on behalf of the State, that no more manifest testimony could be wished for.

[Latin.]

July 30.
Mantuan
Archives.

713. HENRY VIII. to FEDERIGO GONZAGA, MARQUIS of MANTUA.

Expresses gratitude for his fresh assurances of affection, announced in the letter of the right reverend Cardinal de' Medici. Thanks him cordially. Accepts his offers gratefully, and wishes to reciprocate them.

Greenwich, 30th July 1523.

Signed: Henricus Rex. Countersigned: Petrus Vannes.

[Original, Latin.]

July 30.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. 1. p. 27.

714. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Conclusion and stipulation of their peace and confederacy with the Emperor.

In reply to his letters of the 15th and 17th instant, announcing the communication made to him by the Pope about the league between his Holiness, the Emperor, the King of England, the Signory, the Duke of Milan, the Florentines, and others, for the defence of Italy, had received a similar notice from the Papal Legate [Campeggio], according to a brief of credence.

Did not answer immediately, because they had been exhorted by the Pope, first of all, to conclude the peace and confederacy with the Emperor.

To offer due congratulations thereon to the Viceroy (should he be at Rome), to the Duke of Sessa and the other Imperialists, to the English ambassador [John Clerk, Bishop of Bath], and also to the Archduke's representative, should there be one at Rome.

Ayes, 159.

Proposed amendment—

That on account of the lateness of the hour the present letters be delayed until tomorrow.

Ayes, 47. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 38 lines.]

July 30.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. 1. p. 28.

715. The DOGE and SENATE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Postponed writing until able to announce the conclusion of the peace and confederacy between the Emperor and the Signory, which, to their extreme satisfaction, was, by God's grace, stipulated yesterday. The delay had been caused, first, by the death of Hieronymo Adorno, and then on account of the power from the Archduke, as also by reason of other difficulties, inevitable in a matter of such great importance.

1523.

Out of their devotion to the Emperor, and for the sake of adhering to the very sage suggestions of that most potent King and right reverend Cardinal, they sacrificed advantages of no slight import to the State, and removed every difficulty for the sake of concluding the business.

To this his Majesty's ambassador, the Rev. Richard Pace, can bear witness. Throughout these negotiations he has displayed so much diligence, address, and prudence, and performed such good offices on both sides, that they deservedly commend him, as he laboured incessantly until the conclusion.

Trust that the confederacy may be the cause of universal peace, and of very great benefit to the Christian commonwealth, to the perpetual honour and exaltation of his Majesty.

To communicate all letters to the King and Cardinal, assuring them of the Signory's affection and obligation for the excellent offices rendered by him (lei) and his ambassador aforesaid, assuring them of the gratitude of the State at all times, and that the King may rely on everything that can be desired from his true friends and confederates.

Ayes, 197. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 27 lines.]

July 30.

716. CONCLUSION of the LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 254.

A proclamation was made today by Gasparo della Vedoa, that on Sunday next a solemn mass will be chaunted at St. Mark's for the peace and league which have been stipulated. The ambassadors will accompany the Doge: so all are to come in good order and well arrayed, for the honour of the State.

The English ambassador wrote a letter to the Doge telling him that this agreement seemed mute, and that rejoicings should be made. Domenego Venier, sage for the main land, was inclined to move in the Senate for the bells to be rung and for bonfires to be burnt; but he had not the heart to make the motion, because the Doge said that he would speak against it for two hours, both to avoid irritating the King of France, and also on account of the Turk.

None of the articles of the agreement were read. It is between the Emperor, the Archduke [Ferdinand] of Austria, the Signory of Venice, and the Duke of Milan, through the mediation of the Pope and of the King of England. They have assigned the term of four months within which the King of France and the Duke of Ferrara are at liberty to become parties to it.

[Italian.]

July 30.

717. CONCLUSION of the LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxixv. p. 254.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages, for a letter to the ambassador in England, acquainting him with the conclusion of the peace, which the Signory had effected for the sake of doing what was agreeable to the King of England, and lauding the adroit operations of his ambassador, Richard Pace, who has comported 1523.

himself most excellently. The motion was carried by the whole College.

[Italian.]

July 31.

718. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 255.

The English ambassador came into the College this morning, and spoke about making rejoicings. He was told that such demonstrations were omitted on account of the Turk. Pace rejoined, "Tomorrow the Imperial ambassador resident here will dress himself in cloth of gold." The Doge made answer, "We also shall dress ourselves in cloth of gold."

[Italian.]

July 31.

719. MOTION and AMENDMENT made in the COUNCIL OF TEN with the JUNTA, concerning a present for RICHARD PACE.

Misti
Consiglio X.
lvi. p. 50.

The reverend ambassador of the King of England informed the Signory this morning that he intended to depart on Sunday next.

It is fitting to do him honour, both by reason of the trouble taken by him for the negotiation of the peace now concluded, and to keep him well disposed towards the Signory.

Put to the ballot—that by authority of this Council the aforesaid ambassador be presented with a collar worth one thousand golden ducats, the entire sum to be supplied by the chest of this Council, or by the mint from the gold [in ingots?] there. The amount to be replaced with the first money received by the governors of the revenues on account of the lapsed tenth (la X^{ma}. persa), and no other money order to be given until this reimbursement be made, under penalty of the punishment inflicted on thieves.

Ayes, 8—9. Noes, 6—0. Neutrals, 0—5.

Amendment—Leave out the words "one thousand golden ducats," in order to insert the words "eight hundred golden ducats."

Ayes, 14—14.

This amendment was again put alone, with no and neutral, and the votes were—

Ayes, 21. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0. Order made out.

[Italian, 12 lines.]

July 31.

720. DOGE ANDREA GRITTI to CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 7.

The Cardinal will have learned the cause of the delay of the ratification of the peace with the Emperor from the letters of the Ambassador Pace. Returns thanks to the Cardinal for his good offices, which so well become a true hinge of the Church of Rome (verum Romanæ Ecclesiæ cardinem). Pace's negotiations in this matter have afforded proof of the sincere good will borne to the Signory by the King and Cardinal.

[Latin.]

July 31.

721. The DOGE and COLLEGE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 7.

In addition to the letter written by them to him, concerning the conclusion of the peace with the Emperor, address missives to the King and Cardinal, which he is to present in suitable form.

[Italian.]

1523.

July.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 275.722. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

The King is very anxious for the agreement to take place. News received that the Emperor in person, with 15,000 infantry and 2,000 horse, was gone to recover Fonterabia, held by the French, and that he was battering the town.

London, — July. Registered by Sanuto, 6th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 269.723. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

The Imperial ambassadors Caracciolo and Sanchez, together with the English ambassador, the ambassador from the Archduke of Austria, and the ambassador from the Duke of Milan, Dom. Francesco Taverna (who will reside at Venice), came into the College. They spoke together about what is to be done. The English ambassador will depart in three days on his way to the Switzers, by commission from his King, to prevent the cantons from stirring in favour of the King of France.

[Italian.]

Aug. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 270.724. The QUESTION of PRECEDENCE.

On the morning of Sunday the 2nd the Doge, dressed in gold brocade, with a cap of the same material, came into St. Mark's Church to attend high mass, sung by the rector of St. Aponal, vicar of St. Mark's. The following ambassadors were present:—the Legate Campeggio; the Imperial ambassadors, Prothonotary Caracciolo and Don. Alfonso Sanchez, this last wearing a doublet (ropom) of gold lama, with a cape of crimson velvet; Dom. Richard Pace, the English ambassador, who has never hitherto gone in procession with the Signory on account of the French ambassador; the ambassadors from Poland, from the Archduke of Austria, from the Duke of Milan, from Ferrara and from Mantua; nine in all. It was a very beautiful sight.

[Italian.]

Aug. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 273.725. PRESENT to PACE'S SECRETARY by the SIGNORY.

Motion made in the Senate, and carried, to give 300 golden ducats to the ambassador of the Archduke of Austria, who is returning home, and 50 golden ducats to the secretary of the English ambassador. These sums were given accordingly.

[Italian.]

Aug. 4.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 39, tergo.726. PRESENT to PACE'S SECRETARY.

Decree of the Senate for presents to be given to the ambassador of the Archduke Ferdinand, to his secretary, and to the secretary of Richard Pace.

The Ambassador of the Most Serene "Infante," having taken leave of the Signory, to return to his lord, the Signory should treat him with their usual munificence, in like manner as done by the English ambassador.

Put to the ballot—that 300 golden ducats be given to the ambassador aforesaid, and 25 ducats to his secretary.

1523.

Also 50 ducats to the secretary of the reverend English ambassador above mentioned, to be given him in ready money, or in so much plate (arzenti), or in other effects, as shall seem most fitting to the College.

Ayes, 152. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 10 lines.]

Aug. 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 274.

727. DEPARTURE of PACE from VENICE.

This morning Dom. Richard Pace, the English ambassador, departed. He is going to Padua, and thence to Switzerland. The Governors were written to, to do him honour.

[Italian.]

Aug. 7.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlv. p. 52,
tergo.

728. GOLD COLLAR for PACE.

The treasurer of this Council having consigned gold to the amount of 800 golden Venetian ducats with which to make the collar for the English ambassador, according to the decree passed on the 31st ult.,—Put to the ballot that these 800 ducats which have been paid out be understood to have been really given in gold of the Venetian standard, such in fact being the amount of the said gold consigned as above.

Ayes, 29. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 8 lines.]

Aug. 10.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 222,
St. Mark's
Library.

729. GASPARO CONTARINI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Receipt of news from the Emperor's ambassador in Venice, that the King of France has promised the Signory to come into Italy in person. This intelligence is not believed, as the King would be apprehensive of the English in Picardy and Normandy, and of the Spaniards in the direction of Narbonne, where the Emperor will make sufficient provision. It is conjectured that the King of France will send the Duke of Bourbon to Milan.

Valladolid, 10th August 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Aug. 11.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. I. p. 30.

730. RECALL of ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

During the last five years the nobleman, Antonio Surian, LL.D. and knight, has served the Signory at the English Court with no mean praise to himself and to the Republic's satisfaction.

Put to the ballot—that our nobleman aforesaid do take leave of the King, the Cardinal, and other chief lords of the Court, and, after acquainting himself with all such English affairs as may be worthy of the knowledge, return to our presence, leaving his secretary in England until the receipt of further orders from the Signory.

Ayes, 159. Noes, 14. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 11 lines.]

Aug. 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxiv. p. 281.

731. RECALL of SURIAN.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages, and carried,—that permission be given to Antonio Surian, Venetian ambassador in 1523.

England, to take leave of the King and return home, his secretary remaining in England.

[Italian.]

Aug. 13.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File No. 7.

732. The DOGE and COLLEGE to ANTONIO SURIAN, Ambassador in England.

Having acquainted the Pope with the ratification of the confederacy, he wrote back praising and blessing so auspicious a work; wherefore the Signory has determined, on the following Saturday, which will be the festival of the Virgin's Assumption, to have the peace and confederacy proclaimed in Venice, and also in the Signory's other cities and places, with the usual solemnities and ceremonies.

To mention this in the Signory's name to the King and Cardinal, and to such other personages as he may think fit.

The Reverend Richard Pace quitted Venice a week ago.

As he has earnestly requested leave to return home, complaining lately of his health, it appears reasonable to put an end to his protracted and toilsome labours in England, which he has undergone advantageously for the interests of the State, with praise to himself, and to the satisfaction of the Signory. Therefore give him permission to take leave of the King and Cardinal, and after paying the usual visits to the chief personages of the Court, desire him to return home, well acquainted with all such English intelligence as may be worthy of the Signory's cognizance.

To leave his secretary in England for the present, until the State appoint another ambassador.

As the Ambassador Pace has promised on behalf of the King of England, with regard to the articles of the peace, that his Majesty will cause the Emperor to agree to the restitution of all seizures made mutually during the late war (which would serve not a little to consolidate the confederacy), is to endeavour to effect the fulfilment of that promise.

Moreover, according to the articles of the peace, the Pope and the King of England were declared its conservators and protectors. The Signory accepted the clause most heartily, and desires that very honorable mention of the fact should be made in the proclamation of the peace. To endeavour, before his departure from England, to prevail on the King to draw up some document to this effect in the fullest form possible, according to the clause in the treaty, the copy of which clause they enclose.* Believe the King will show himself prompt and ready to give the voucher.

Received his letters of the 3rd, 6th, and 17th July on the 11th August. When taking leave of the King, to use his utmost ability and eloquence to convince him thoroughly of the goodwill preserved by the State as an heirloom towards the powerful Crown of England and the Cardinal, recommending to them the Venetian merchants trading in England, and, last of all, apologizing for his own departure without awaiting the arrival of his successor.

[Italian.]

* I cannot find any note of this clause in Rymer or Dumont.

1523.

Aug. 14.

733. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 303.

The King of England has prepared 14,000 men for an attack on France.

Dated 14th August. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd September.

Note by Sanuto that last evening (13th August) the Imperial ambassador sent sure intelligence (certo avviso) to the College, that the Scots had taken the fleet on board of which the said troops were to have embarked.

[Italian.]

Aug. 15.

734. PROCLAMATION of the LEAGUE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv.
pp. 282, 283.

On Saturday morning the 15th high mass was celebrated by the Patriarch Antonio Contarini. There were carried in procession the armorial bearings of the League,—of the Pope, the Emperor, the King of England, the Archduke of Austria, of St. Mark and the Doge, and of the Duke of Milan.

The Doge wore a new dress made for the occasion; he was accompanied by the Papal Legate, Campeggio, by the prothonotary, Caracciolo, and Sanchez, and by the ambassadors from Milan, Ferrara, and Mantua.

The crier Nicoletto, dressed in scarlet, ascended the edict-stone, together with the Vice-Chancellor Gasparo di la Vedoa, also in scarlet, and after a flourish of trumpets, the proclamation was made.

It is said the belfries and the houses of the ambassadors will be illuminated this evening. The College has written orders to the towns for a similar procession and proclamation to be made there on this same day. The like will be done at Milan.

The French ambassador and Mons. de Villiers and Renzo di Cere stayed at home in sadness.

[Italian.]

Aug. 15.

735. PROCLAMATION by DOGE ANDREA GRITTI.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv.
pp. 282, 283.

Announcing the stipulation on the 29th of July last, of peace, &c. between the Emperor and his brother, Archduke Ferdinand, and the Signory and Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan, for the mutual defence and preservation of their territories in Italy.

Of this peace and confederacy the conservators are, the most holy Pope Adrian VI. and the most serene and most potent Lord Henry King of England.

[Italian.]

Aug. 15.

736. PROCLAMATION of the LEAGUE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 284.

This evening the belfries were illuminated, and during the day there was bell ringing, as a mark of rejoicing. At the Legate's residence there were fireworks and music; and to make a greater show the Milanese ambassador, who resided in the Signory's house at San Giorgio Maggiore, burnt bonfires and discharged artillery. There was also dancing.

[Italian.]

1523.

Aug. 16.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 223,
St. Mark's
Library.

737. GASPARO CONTARINI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Some three months ago Mons. de Beaurain went from Valladolid to England, and thence to Flanders. Yesterday he returned, and brings word that arrangements have been made in Burgundy for 18,000 infantry with which to wage war on France in that direction.

Nothing is known of the movements of the King of France, nor have any advices been received from England.

Valladolid, 16th August 1523.

[Italian, $\frac{3}{4}$ page.]

Aug. 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 286.

738. REJOICINGS at VENICE.

Last evening the belfries were illuminated on account of the league. There were also illuminations at the houses of the Legate and of the two Imperial ambassadors, but above all at S. Giorgio Maggiore, where the Milanese ambassador resides with the others. There was music on stages. In the evening 2,000 boats went to see the sight, which will be repeated this evening for the last time, the entertainments having been continued during three days.

[Italian.]

Aug. 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 338.

739. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Twenty thousand English are to invade France. Cardinal Wolsey tells him they will cross on the 28th. The news of the agreement between the Emperor and the Signory has been received. Went to the King and Cardinal, who were much pleased. He (Surian) and the Imperial ambassador made great rejoicings; and he in particular gave a grand banquet to the English lords (a quei signori).

Dated 20th August. Registered by Sanuto, 21st September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 20.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 30, tergo.

740. RECALL of the VENETIAN SECRETARY in ENGLAND.

The Senate lately gave licence to the nobleman, Antonio Surian, LL.D. and knight, ambassador in England, to return home, leaving his secretary there. As the secretary is not in good health, and for other reasons,—Put to the ballot, that our consul in London be charged to transact such business as necessary, according to the custom of Venetian consuls at other periods; and that the said secretary be commanded to return home.

Ayes, 168. Nocs, 11. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian, 8 lines.]

Aug. 21.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 224,
St. Mark's
Library.

741. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 20th letters arrived from the Emperor's ambassadors in Venice with the unexpected account of the stipulation of the treaty between his Majesty and the Republic.

This morning went with the Chancellor [Gattinara] to the Emperor, by whom he was received most graciously, nor had he ever seen him so cheerful or more contented. He would not allow his hand to be kissed, but embraced him (Contarini), and in reply to 1523.

his discourse, said, "In truth, I have always borne the Signory goodwill. During the last few days, the delay distressed me much, by reason of the suspicion entertained, which was generally injurious to the whole of Italy and to Christendom. I now see by the result that the report was false, and congratulate myself exceedingly on the common weal of Italy, which is now united, for the benefit of Christendom. I had the welfare of the Signory at heart, as much as my own."

Will not omit telling the Signory also of the embraces and greeting given him by the Marquis of Brandenburg, the Count of Geneva, Mons. de Beaurain, the Comendador Mayor, Mons. de la Chau, and others, who all acknowledged that the welfare of Christendom depended on this confederacy. The Chancellor rejoices beyond measure at this peace. Recommends the State to write to the Chancellor, and to the Count of Nassau and Mons. de Bresse.

Valladolid, 21st August 1523.

P.S.—This letter has been detained until the 24th.

This morning the Emperor attended mass in the church of St. Benedict, accompanied by the ambassadors and the Court. The mass of the Holy Ghost was sung as thanksgiving for the confederacy with the Republic,—a demonstration which the Emperor is accustomed to make whenever prosperous events befall him.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Aug. 25.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 31, tergo.

742. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in ROME.

Received his letters dated the 19th and 20th yesterday. Congratulate themselves on the Pope's convalescence in like manner as they regretted to hear of his illness.

In conformity with the advices sent to Rome from Milan about the coming of the King of France to Lyons, and his continued preparations for the attack on the Milanese, the Signory also has letters from their ambassador, dated Lyons, the 14th, giving well nigh the same information (as by the enclosed summaries), and confirming it, even after the King had heard of the conclusion of the Signory's peace and confederacy; with this, in addition, that the coming of the French may be expected, especially as the expedition against England, which was to have been effected through White Rose [Richard de la Pole], has been suspended and renounced.

Ayes, 205. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 5.

[Italian, 36 lines.]

Aug. 27.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 226,
St. Mark's
Library.

743. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

A Burgundian gentleman named Montfort has arrived with news of the passage across to Calais of 16,000 English infantry and 1,000 horse, who are to join 3,000 other horse and 4,000 German infantry, forming a total of 20,000 foot and 4,000 horse.

The Emperor departed on Tuesday morning before daybreak for Burgos. The Chancellor will follow on Saturday. I am to accompany him. From Burgos the Court will proceed to Lorgoño.

Valladolid, 27th August 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

1523.

Aug. 29.

744. NEWS of ENGLAND.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 300.

Report circulated by the Imperialists (at Venice) that the English had made truce with the Scots for 12 years, and that Mons. de Lautrec was in Scotland with 12,000 men for the defence of that country.

[Italian.]

Sept. 1.

745. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 307.

According to letters received here from England, the King was sending troops over to France. The Pope is very intent on providing money.

Rome, 1st September. Registered by Sanuto on the 5th.[Italian.]

Sept. 2.

746. GASPARO CONTARINI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 227,
St. Mark's
Library.

Arrived at Burgos on the 1st of September; on the 2nd presented himself to the Emperor, and accompanied him to mass. The Chancellor is in great spirits, and not only hopes for victory against the French, but considers it certain. From words uttered by him and others, since the arrival of the Frenchman La Motte,* is of opinion that the Imperialists have an understanding either with some great personage in France or with some French town.†

Was informed by the Chancellor that Andrea Doria, who with his galleys is now in the service of France, has sent to offer himself to the Emperor, who announced this to the Chancellor when on the road from Valladolid to Burgos, asking the Chancellor's advice. The Chancellor wrote back that the Emperor ought to accept the proposal.‡

Burgos, 2nd September 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Sept. 5.

747. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 309.

The Pope is very ill indeed, so that the Cardinals have commenced canvassing the popedom. It is reported here that the King of France has made a truce with the King of England.

Rome, 5th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 9th.[Italian.]

Sept. 5.

748. LODOVICO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England, to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 360.

Writes because the ambassador is ill. The English forces having landed in France, suffered loss; the French pursued them, and when the English wanted to embark some of them were killed.

* The agent of the Duke of Bourbon. His arrival was mentioned in letter no. 221, date 2nd August.

† According to a letter from Boleyn and Sampson, calendared in the Harleian Catalogue, the Duke of Bourbon had been negotiating with Charles V. and Henry VIII. ever since the close of 1522, but Contarini failed to detect the intrigue until after a lapse of eight months.

‡ The historians Guicciardini and Andrea Morosini do not date Doria's entry into the service of France until 1527. We now see that he was receiving pay from France in 1523, and that he was even then no less unscrupulous about changing sides than the Constable of Bourbon. Andrea Doria did not finally transfer his allegiance to the Emperor until the year 1528.

1523.

An ambassador from Madame Margaret has arrived on the island, and had audience of the King. The Cardinal believed that he was come to speak and consult about the expedition to be made, whereas he asked the King for a loan of money. Wolsey abused the ambassador, and would not give him anything.

London, 5th September. Registered by Sanuto, 28th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 6.

Patti Sciolti,
no. 802.

749. HENRY VIII. to DOGE ANDREA GRITI.

Never read any letters with greater satisfaction than those addressed to him by the Doge on the 30th July. No Christian Sovereign can exult more than he does at the news of the peace between the Emperor and the Signory. Congratulates himself and the whole of Christendom on the result, and above all, Italy; redoubling the exhortations sedulously addressed by him to the State. Expatiates on the very great pleasure derived from the statement contained in the letters of the English ambassador at Venice, and from the narrative of the Venetian ambassador in England. Returns very great thanks, and confesses himself yet more indebted for the weight attached by the State to his very loving counsel and sincere persuasions.

By means of this confederacy relies on bringing to reason, without much difficulty, such princes as perchance from mere ambition might act to the detriment of the Christian commonwealth.

Will use every endeavour to strengthen the alliance, and praises the exertions of Antonio Surian, the Venetian ambassador in England, extolling his singular prudence and erudition, and his extreme skill and address in negotiating.

Okyng, 6th September 1523.

Signed: Henry Rex.

Countersigned: Petrus Vannes.

[Original; parchment. Latin, 18 lines.*]

Sept. 6.

Patti Sciolti,
no. 803.

750. CARDINAL WOLSEY to DOGE ANDREA GRITI.

Expresses the satisfaction of King Henry and himself at the treaty stipulated between the Emperor and the Signory,† anticipating thence universal peace, which would have ensued long ago had it not been impeded by the immoderate ambition of certain Sovereigns.

Informs him that King Henry having, contrary to general expectation, received this very agreeable announcement, rejoices marvellously; and although he doubts not of the stability of the agreement, will nevertheless sedulously exert himself to render it daily more firm,—a bias which on every account he (Wolsey) purposes encouraging to the utmost.

Commends himself humbly to the Doge.

London, 6th September 1523.

[Original; paper. Latin, 26 lines.]

* This letter is also registered in the Commemoriale, v. xx. p. 291, tergo.

† That treaty was dated 29th July 1523. (See Commemoriale, vol. xx. p. 73., and Romanin, vol. v. p. 363.)

1523.

Sept. 12.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 228,
St. Mark's
Library.

751. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Informed by the Chancellor that an envoy has arrived from the Duke of Savoy to sound the Emperor concerning an adjustment with France, for which the Duke offers his mediation, and also asks permission to remain neutral in the war. The Emperor replied, that being in confederacy with the King of England, as likewise with the Pope and the Republic, he could not discuss such a matter save with their consent and knowledge. With regard to the neutrality of Savoy, he said that as the Duke was the subject of the Empire, and consequently of the Emperor, it was not fair that he should remain neutral to the prejudice of his Sovereign.

The Savoyard envoy added that the King of France was at Lyons, and had announced his intention of descending into Italy, notwithstanding the peace stipulated between the Signory and the Emperor, saying word for word as follows: "I hold those rascal merchants* in no account whatever, for they never keep faith, and in like manner as they have broken it with me, so will they do by the Emperor."

Remarked to the Chancellor that this charge might well be brought by the Republic against France, but the State had never broken faith with any one. The Chancellor, in reply to his details concerning the agreement made by the French at Cremona, said, "It is perfectly clear; never did I see faith kept so religiously as yours with the French;" adding that the King of France announced his intention of going into Italy to reconquer the Milanese, but said he should return in time to expel the Spaniards, the English, and the Germans, who, as now known to him, purposed invading France.

The five caravels from the Indies have at length arrived at Seville. Some persons say they bring about 300,000 gold pieces, equal to 400,000 ducats; others represent the amount as much greater. Of this sum the Emperor's share amounts to about 100,000 ducats, the residue being forestalled; though it is supposed that the want of money for the war will make them assign other funds for the creditors.

On board of these caravels there is much sugar and cassia; also hides and other merchandise, and a good number of pearls.

Burgos, 12th September 1523.

[Italian, 4½ pages.]

Sept. 15.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 230,
St. Mark's
Library.

752. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

In the course of conversation with the Chancellor, both last year, when riding together from Saint Ander towards Palencia, and now when discussing the faith kept by the French, was told by him that King Francis, first of all with Maximilian, and after his death at the conference of Montpellier [4 May 1519], proposed to the present Emperor through the Lord Steward [Gouffier de Boissi] the partition of Italy, as follows:—He was to take for himself the duchy of

* "Questi villani mercadanti."

1523.

Savoy and Brescia, Bergamo, and Crema, assuming the title of King of Lombardy, but acknowledging it as an Imperial fief.* He then bound himself, almost entirely at his own expense, to aid the Emperor until he should obtain all the rest. The minutes of this contract were drawn up, and the Chancellor said that he could show them to him. Subsequently, when the Provost of Utrecht was the present Emperor's ambassador in France, they (the French) urged the stipulation of this partition treaty; though it is perfectly true that since his Majesty's election to the Empire the King of France has always sought to humble him. In conclusion, the Chancellor said, "This, then, is the faith kept you by the French."

Burgos, 15th September 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Sept. 18.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 26, tergo.

753. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Are advised of the death of the Pope. To condole in the Signory's name with the Cardinals on this demise.

On the 14th the French troops crossed the Ticino without any opposition. They are quartered between Binasco and Biagrassa, some 15 miles from Milan, into which city and its suburbs Prospero Colonna has retreated with his troops, after placing a strong garrison in Pavia. Lodi has been abandoned by its governor, who went to Crema, whither the English ambassador, the Reverend Richard Pace, also betook himself from Milan. The Signory is intent on mustering the troops, and has given orders accordingly to our Provider-General not to lose any time in aiding the expedition, to secure which, additionally, they have determined to increase their infantry force to the amount of 10,000 men, and will raise another 200 men-at-arms. The Duke of Urbino, the governor-general of their army, is to leave that town (Crema) today. Are very anxious for his arrival.

Ayes, 180. Noes, 14. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian, 45 lines.]

Sept. 18.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 37, tergo.

754. The SAME to GASPARO CONTARINI, Ambassador with the Emperor.

Acquaint him with all the provision made and steps taken by them, that he may announce them to the Emperor, being very sure that he will have done as becoming his magnanimity and power in every direction, and that the King of England will have acted in like manner; nor do they doubt but that through the Emperor's care this French stir, which appears so brisk, will be quelled, so that the mutual territories may obtain perpetual peace and quiet.

The letter to be antedated 16th September.

[Italian, 71 lines.]

* "Che lui voleva haver il ducato di Savogia et Brexa, Bergamo, et Crema, et tor titolo di Re di Lombardia, cum recognitione però da l'imperio."

1523.

Sept. 18.

755. PRESENT from HENRY VIII. to ANTONIO SURIAN.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 37, tergo.

Motion made in the Senate.—By the relation of Antonio Surian, LL.D. and knight, lately returned from his embassy to England, the Senate has heard how well and worthily he bore himself during so long and laborious a mission, with very great application, vigilance, and cost, so that he deserves compensation from the Signory.

Put to the ballot—that by authority of this Council there be given to our aforesaid nobleman the 500 crowns presented to him by the King of England.

Ayes	-	115	-	119	} Undecided.
Noes	-	80
Neutral	-	3

Amendment.—That of the said 500 crowns only 300 be given him.

Ayes, 30. Noes, 43. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 6 lines.]

Sept. 21.

756. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxiv. p. 360.

The news of the Pope's death arrived here from Rome in six days.* King Francis told Badoer that he should therefore come into Italy. He also said that the English had crossed over to France to a port called Tripolto [Treport?], and were driven back.

Lyons, 21st September. Registered by Sanuto, 29th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 24.

Mantuan
Archives.

757. GABRIEL CESANO to Messer ABBATINO, Secretary of the Marquis of Mantua.

Acknowledges receipt of his letters. Requests that he will continue to give him news of the war, as, besides doing an especial favour to his (Cesano's) right reverend master, the King and Cardinal (Wolsey) will be greatly obliged to him, both one and the other being very desirous of intelligence.

They have mustered 15,000 English infantry, and 6,000, or at least 5,000, Burgundians, with 700 spears, against France. Hears that they entered the French territory on the 19th inst., to draw off the war from Italy; and by this time the Emperor will be in the field with a still greater force. Hopes therefore that the French will now fare badly. Desires him to send his letters under cover to Messer Jo. Gabriel Bonante, merchant at Antwerp, who is a very staunch Imperialist, and performs this office very willingly. Having no special courier, has always written to him (Abbatino) through Bonante. Repeats his recommendation of Messer Baptista Sambuello, because he loves him heartily.

* Pope Adrian VI. died at Rome on the 24th of September 1523, according to "L'Art de Verifier les Dates" (edition, Paris, 1770), but by the "State Papers," vol. vi. part 5, p. 178, it is seen that his death took place on the 14th of September.

1523.

The King is now at a distance of more than 60 miles from London, but in a few days he will be on his way back.

London, 24th September 1523.

Signed : Gab. Cesano.

[Original, Italian.]

Sept. 24.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 231,
St. Mark's
Library.

758. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrived at Logroño yesterday, having been preceded by the Emperor and the Chancellor.

A report had been circulated to the effect that the Duke of Bourbon had made an agreement with the Emperor. Yesterday the fact was confirmed by the Chancellor, who said that according to letters from Narbonne it appeared that the Duke of Bourbon was no longer in France, it being generally reported there that he had come to the Emperor.

At Logroño it is said the Emperor will give him his sister, the Queen of Portugal, in marriage; and possibly on this account the Emperor joins the camp in person. Having with him the Duke of Bourbon, who is said to be very popular in France, he might effect some great revolution there.

Letters from England, dated the 1st, announce the passage of the Duke of Suffolk to Calais with the English troops, who were on their march to besiege Boulogne, as the State will have heard more authentically from the Ambassador Surian.

Logroño, 24th September 1523.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Sept. 25.

Patti Sciolti.

759. HENRY VIII.

Letters patent announcing that he has become a party to the confederacy between the Emperor and the Signory of Venice, stipulated on the 29th of July 1523; that it has been formed through his persuasion; that he and the Pope Adrian VI. may be considered its conservators; and that the Venetian ambassador in England, Antonio Surian, having shown him its articles, he perceives them to contain nothing but what will manifestly contribute to the common weal, and vastly aid those who seek to repress the very iniquitous efforts of such as aim at the destruction of the entire Christian commonwealth.

Pledges his kingly word to give the treaty his utmost support, and to mediate between its framers in case of need.

Woodstock, 25th September 1523.

Signed : Toney.*

[Original; parchment, with the great seal in wax. Latin, 15 lines; dimensions, 17 in. by 8.]

Sept. 27.

760. ANTONIO SURIAN to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 91.

Has taken leave of the King and Cardinal and quitted the English Court. Eight thousand English have crossed over to Flanders 1523.

(di qua) with the Duke of Suffolk, to effect a junction with, and with 5,000 lansquenets (although Surian does not believe they will be more than 2,000) and 15 pieces of artillery. They mean to attack France. There is also a certain number of horse from Antwerp, 27th September. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 29.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 232,
St. Mark's
Library.

761. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the preceding morning was informed by the Emperor that the Duke of Bourbon had joined the 10,000 lansquenets and 500 Burgundian spears, destined for the attack on France. The Emperor added, "To tell you the truth, having had no news of this Duke of Bourbon, I was very much afraid lest some misfortune might have befallen him. Our league must now prepare both for defence and offence, and pluck this thorn from our foot."

It is not known in what fashion the Duke joined these troops. Some say that he brought about 50 spears with him, others more; many that he went quite alone, and that the King of France has imprisoned several gentlemen, his accomplices in this negotiation, which, as told him (Contarini) by the English ambassadors [Sampson and Jerningham], was commenced upwards of a year and a half ago.*

It is also reported that Mons. de la Trimouille, with 300 spears has been routed by the English. If this be true, the affairs of France are then considered by the Imperialists to be in a very sorry plight.

Logroño, 29th September 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Sept. 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. pp. 37,
38.

762. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Gives an account of the preparations for the conclave.

Announces the arrival of the English ambassador, Dom. Richard Pace, with whom he has conversed. Pace complains that the Signory has not done, and does not do, what they are bound for the Milanese, and that it would have been better had the agreement not taken place, as the Emperor would have made greater provision.

Rome, 29th and 30th September. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 52.

763. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

Six thousand Spaniards made an assault upon Bayonne, and would have taken it had not Mons. de Lautrec arrived.

The English are under Boulogne.

Lyons, 1st and 2nd October. Registered by Sanuto, 11th October.

[Italian.]

* i.e. in the spring of 1522, when the Emperor was at Brussels, before he went to England.

1523.

Oct. 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 66.764. ANTONIO SURIAN, late Ambassador in England, to the SIGNORY.

Having received the Signory's permission to return home, went to the King of England and the Cardinal on 9th September, and took leave of them. On the 14th crossed over to Calais, leaving the secretary [Lodovico Spinelli] in England to obtain certain letters from the King. On the 22nd the secretary in like manner, having obtained leave, quitted London. They have both arrived at Mechlin, and will visit Madame Margaret. The English troops have crossed over hither (pasate di qua).

Mechlin, in Flanders, 5th Oct. Registered by Sanuto, 17th Oct.
[Italian.]

Oct. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. pp. 86,
87.765. LETTER from ROME.

The Duke of Sessa told the Venetian ambassador that the [Arch]bishop of Bari had been sent by the King of France to Spain to negotiate an agreement. First of all, the King of France is willing to give his daughter for wife to the Emperor, with the duchy of Milan and the kingdom of Naples for dower. He refers his dispute with the King of England for arbitration to the Emperor. Should the Emperor not choose to make the proposed marriage, the King of France consents to absolve him from the payment of the tribute for the kingdom of Naples, and to renounce his rights to the duchy of Milan.

The Duke of Sessa said the Emperor would not accept any of these proposals (prestidi).

Rome, 14th October. Registered by Sanuto, 20th October.
[Italian.]

Oct. 19.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 234,
St. Mark's
Library.766. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 9th arrived at Pamplona with the Chancellor; the Emperor made his entry on the 12th. On Saturday the 10th news arrived of the death of Pope Adrian VI., of the descent of the French army into Italy, and of the retreat beyond the Ticino of Prospero Colonna.

Pamplona, 19th October 1523.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Oct. 20.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 236,
St. Mark's
Library.767. The SAME to the SAME.

Was told by the Chancellor that the Archbishop of Bari* proposed in the name of the King of France, that peace should be made by the Emperor's surrendering the Milanese and Tournai, France restoring Monterabia, and matters being placed on the same footing as before the war. Moreover, the treaty of Noyon to take effect by the marriage of the Emperor to the daughter of the King of France. Should this form of peace not please the Emperor, the King of France is willing to stipulate a truce, each party

* The Archbishop of Bari (a Spaniard in the service of Adrian VI.) arrived at Pamplona from Lyons on the 16th October, as stated in letter no. 234.

1523.

retaining what they hold on the day of signature, by which time the King of France expects to have recovered well nigh the whole of the duchy of Milan.

The Chancellor added that the object of the French is to commence a negotiation, and thus to render the King of England and the Republic of Venice suspicious; but that their artful devices are well known to the Emperor.

Pamplona, 20th October 1523.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Nov. 7.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 238,
St. Mark's
Library.

768. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

With regard to the peace which the Archbishop of Bari is negotiating, the Emperor has not yet given him any reply whatever, but has forwarded the proposal made by the King of France to England.

Understands that the King of France makes no mention of exchanging Tournai for Fonterabia, and on the contrary says he is willing to pay the King of England the pension for Tournai, although it be not restored to him.

Pamplona, 7th November 1523.

[Italian, 5 pages.]

Nov. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 192.

769. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

The Imperial army is prospering, and the English have taken certain places in France called Monon (sic), &c. [Montreuil, Dourlens, Montdidier?]

Lyons, 9th November. Registered by Sanuto, 13th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 161.

770. The SAME to the SAME.

The English in Scotland having captured a certain place, and made some prisoners, the Duke of Albany attacked them, recovered the prisoners, and drove the English back.

Lyons, 12th and 13th Nov. Registered by Sanuto, 25th Nov.

[Italian.]

Nov. 17.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 241,
St. Mark's
Library.

771. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday the Archbishop of Bari sent one of his secretaries to France with the Emperor's reply to the proposals for peace. The Chancellor told him that this reply was (to use his own term) a rigmarole (una longola); purporting that the Emperor, being leagued with the King of England, could stipulate neither peace or truce without his knowledge and consent, and, having written to him, awaited an answer.

Nothing is known of what the English are doing in France, nor yet of the Duke of Bourbon and the army in Burgundy.

Pamplona, 17th November 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

1523.

Nov. 21.

772. RETURN of SURIAN from ENGLAND.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 151.

This evening Antonio Surian, who was ambassador in England during four years and eight months, arrived here. He came through Germany and by Trent and Feltre to Treviso, and thence by land to Venice.

He was elected State Attorney (avogador di comun), and will take the place of Piero Contarini, whose term of service expires on the 3rd of January.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.

773. RETURN of SURIAN.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 154.

On the morning of the 23rd Antonio Surian, who had been ambassador in England, went into the College dressed in crimson velvet with a raised pile and a hood of cloth of gold. He was accompanied by many noblemen, among whom was I (Marin Sanuto).^{*} Surian walks lame; he got the gout on this legation. He entered the College hall alone with Lodovico Spinelli, because the present Doge does not choose more than three persons to accompany those who come from abroad, as of yore. He made but a brief statement, because he will deliver his report in the Senate.

[Italian.]

Nov. 24.

774. SURIAN'S REPORT.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 159.

Summary of the report made in the Senate on the 24th of November 1523, by Antonio Surian, late ambassador to England.

The King of England advances slowly (avia pocho), and had not the Signory ratified the agreement with the Emperor he, the King, would have made terms with France.

[Italian.]

Nov. 24.

775. HENRY VIII.'S PRESENT to SURIAN.Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. i. p. 52.

Motion made in the Senate, after hearing the report of the noble Antonio Surian, LL.D. and knight, lately returned from his embassy to England, which long and laborious mission was executed by him with very great application, toil, and cost, so as to deserve acknowledgment from the Signory.

Put to the ballot—that he receive as a gift the 500 crowns presented to him by the Most Serene King of England.

Ayes	-	115, 119	} Undecided.
Noes	-	80
Neutrals	-	3

Amendment—that of the 500 crowns he be given but 300.

Ayes, 30. Noes, 43. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian, 6 lines.]

Nov. 25.

776. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 241,
St. Mark's
Library.

Nothing whatever is known of the election of the Pope,[†] nor yet of the movements of the armies in Lombardy.

Letters were received yesterday from England, dated 4th October,

^{*} "Tra li qual Io vi fui."

[†] Giulio de' Medici was elected Pope, with the title of Clement VII., on the 19th of November 1523, and crowned on the 25th.

1523.

a very stale date. They contain nothing of importance save the announcement of immense preparations making by the Scots. The State will have received much fresher advices from those parts.

Pamplona, 25th November 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Nov. 29.

777. LETTER from INSPRUCK.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 188.

The Duke of Bourbon departs hence for Italy tomorrow. He will then go to Spain to espouse the Emperor's sister, and on his arrival there you will salute him as future King of France. I visited him today, and he greeted me lovingly. He is in great spirits, and considers the total ruin of the King of France quite certain by reason of a variety of schemes at which he hints without manifesting them.

It is true that at the critical moment, had these German captains in Burgundy not betrayed and deserted him immediately after being well paid, he tells me he should now be Lord of France in the Emperor's name, with the English army in Paris; "sed quod differtur non aufertur."

By the last letters the English army was three short leagues from Paris, and the French hope rested on 6,000 Switzers, who had not yet left their own homes, so that "the Lord Captain of Justice" will infallibly at length witness the ruin of France, about which I have written so many letters.

Inspruck, 29th November. Registered by Sanuto, 9th December.

[Italian.]

Dec. [4 ?]

778. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 185.

The Pope is sending Dom. Marchio *as Nuncio to England.

Rome, ———. Registered by Sanuto, 8th December.

[Italian.]

Dec. 5.

779. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 242,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 1st of December news was received here of the election of Clement VII.

Pamplona, 5th December 1523.

[Italian, 7 pages.]

Dec. 5.

780. The SAME to the COUNCIL of TEN.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 243,
St. Mark's
Library.

Contradicts the account given by the Venetian ambassador in France of the proposals made to the Emperor by King Francis. Asserts that peace was proposed through the restitution of Milan, and with the pension of 100,000 ducats for the kingdom of Naples, and by means of the marriage of the French Princess to the Emperor, the supremacy of King Francis being acknowledged

* "Melchior, the Pope's messenger," is mentioned in a letter of Wolsey's, dated December 1523. (See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. iii., no. 3659.) Qu., Melchior Langus, or Longhio, who was in England on 21st April 1524. (See his letter of that date, no. 821, post.) in Flanders, though the latter consented to pay the King of England the pension for Tournai, and yet made no demand for the surrender of that place; neither did he say that he would restore Fonterabia. Similar information was imparted to him by the English ambassador [Sampson or Jerningham], to whom all the articles were shown, the copy being despatched to England instantly. Elicited this also from the Archbishop of Bari, and understood from him in general terms that the reply was that "rigmarole" to which he alluded in his letter of the 17th.

1523.

Pamplona, 5th December 1523.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Dec. 11.

781. MARCO FOSCARI to the STATE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 195.

The Pope has elected nine cardinals, three for the affairs of Martin Luther, namely, Volterra, Ancona, and Cornaro; for Turkish affairs, Farnese, Campeggio, and Cibo; and for those of the Duke of Ferrara, Fiesco, Santiquattro, and Cesis; also one for the affairs of Denmark, namely, the Cardinal de Montibus.

Rome, 11th December. Registered by Sanuto on the 16th.

[Italian.]

Dec. 13.

782. LETTER from BERGAMO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 195.

News had been received at Milan, by letters dated the 14th of November, that the English army in France, besides taking Li Antere (sic), Corbie, and Bray, had also stormed and captured Croiers (sic) and Montdidier, killing 2,000 French infantry. Amongst the dead were Mons. de Neufville and his eldest son and two other personages of account.

A courier from the King of England had reached the Duke of Suffolk, desiring him to continue the war against France during the whole of the month, and the English were ravaging the territory greatly.

Bergamo, 13th December. Registered by Sanuto, 16th December.

[Italian.]

Dec. 14.

783. HENRY VIII.'S PRESENT to SURIAN.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 193.

Motion made in the Senate by the Councillors, Chiefs of the Forty, and the Sages.

Antonio Surian having been ambassador from the Signory in England during five years, and at great expense,—Put to the ballot therefore, that of the 500 crowns given to him by the King 300 be assigned him as recompense.

Balloted twice and lost.

First ballot:—

Ayes, 112. Noes, 74. Neutrals, 2.

Second ballot:—

Ayes, 112. Noes, 74. Neutrals, 2.

Nothing carried, the majority required being four-fifths.

[Italian.]

1523.

Dec. 14.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. I. p. 53, tergo.

784. HENRY VIII.'S PRESENT to SURIAN.

Motion made in the Senate.

On the return of Antonio Surian from his protracted and very laborious embassy to England, he, according to the law, presented to the "Procuratia" of St. Mark the 500 "crowns of the King" (scudi de Re), which make 461 "crowns of the sun" (corone dal sol) 3 livres and 10 pence (soldi), received from his Majesty.

As well known to the Senate, this nobleman has incurred great expense for the honour of the State, both by crossing the Channel twice and returning, first with the King and then with the Cardinal, besides costs on several other occasions, so that he is debtor to the agents of the faithful citizen Nicolò Duodo for 300 ducats.

Moreover, when returning from his embassy to Hungary he was made prisoner, and although he presented to the "Procuratia" of St. Mark the present given to him by the King, he received no indemnity.

As it well becomes the clemency of the Signory to take pity on those who, regardless of all toil, peril, and expense, attend diligently and laudably to the service of the State,—Put to the ballot, that in compensation for so much cost and toil incurred by our said nobleman, there be paid to the aforesaid Nicolò Duodo the debt of 300 ducats due to him out of the above-written 461 crowns, 3 livres, and 10 pence presented by Surian to the "Procuratia."

Ayes	-	112, 112	} Undecided.
Noes	-	73, 74
Neutrals	-	3, 2

[Italian, 17 lines.]

Dec. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. XXXV. p. 215.

785. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

King Francis is sending the secretary of the Archbishop of Bari to the Pope, to say he had been to the Emperor at Pamplona. The King is much irritated against the Pope, the Signory, and the King of England.

Lyons, 14th Dec. 1523. Registered by Sanuto, 1st Jan. 1524.

[Italian.]

Dec. 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. XXXV. p. 194.

786. RUMOURED DEATH of HENRY VIII.

Statement made in the College by the French ambassador, Dom. Ambrogio of Florence, on the authority of letters received by him from St. Quentin, dated 29th of November.

The Duke of Albany, regent of Scotland, had given a great rout to the English.

The English army in France, commanded by the Duke of Suffolk, had received letters from the deputies of the city of London called "the three Estates," desiring them to return immediately to England. The cause of this was unknown. Some said there was an insurrection in the island against the present King; others declared that he was dead. The ambassador also gave news of Martin Luther.

[Italian.]

1523.

Dec. 27.

787. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 215.

The secretary of the [Arch]bishop of Bari, arrived in Rome from France, told him the English had gone into quarters on account of the cold, and that the Imperial troops had crossed the Pyrenees.

Rome, 27th Dec. 1523. Registered by Sanuto, 1st Jan. 1524.

[Italian.]

Dec. 28.

788. VINCENZO GUIDOTO to the STATE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 223.

The Lutheran doctrine seems to gain ground, not only in Germany, but also in those places adjoining belonging to the King of Hungary, and latterly in Silesia, where the natives expelled a Catholic provost, and appointed one of the sect in his stead. They will no longer tolerate mendicant friars, or those of other orders, and adhere to the Lutheran creed. The King [of Hungary], together with his Council, sent therefore yesterday for the Legate,* requesting him to provide against this. The Legate replied that he would do so if his Majesty would not fail to lend him the secular arm; and the King rejoined that in two days he would make such provision as to convince his right reverend lordship that he, the King, and his entire realm are excellent Christians and most obsequious towards the Holy Apostolic see.

Dated 28th Dec. 1523. Registered by Sanuto, 7th Jan. 1524.

[Italian.]

Dec. 31.

789. MARCO FOSCARI to the STATE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 223.

The Pope has the affairs of Martin Luther much at heart, and has written to Germany.

Rome, 30th and 31st Dec. 1523. Registered by Sanuto, 7th Jan. 1524.

[Italian.]

A.D. 1524.

1524.

Jan. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 253.790. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the STATE.

Martin Luther is gone to the Diet at Nuremberg without further safeconduct, together with the Duke of Saxony. Having very many followers, he is therefore not afraid; and it seems that many preachers preach what he has written.

The Legate [Cardinal of St. Sixtus] has been unable to obtain the restoration of that bishop in Silesia who was deposed and a Lutheran appointed in his stead, as the King and Queen [of Bohemia] favour the Lutherans.

Possonia, 2nd, 7th, and 11th [January]. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd January.

[Italian.]

* Tomaso de Vio, Caitano, General of the Dominicans, Priest, Cardinal of S. Sixtus. See Report of Hungary by the Venetian Secretary, Francesco Massario, 5 October 1523, p. 18.

1524.

Jan. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 255.791. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the STATE.

Concerning the innovation that took place lately in Silesia. The Silesians removed the Christian bishop, and put in his stead a Lutheran. Nothing has been done as yet in this matter, nor do they talk of any further provision, unless it be to try and make some amicable adjustment to the satisfaction of the Silesians, who all side with the Lutherans (quali tutti dicono con Luteriani); and therefore, should further steps be taken, it is feared some tumult may take place to the detriment of this King of Hungary, although it is said here very publicly, even by the preachers in the pulpits, that in the Courts of the King and Queen there are as many Lutherans as there are in Germany, which is as full of them as possible. It is, moreover, said that they are favoured and encouraged (nutriti) by their Hungarian Majesties.

Advices have been received here purporting that Martin Luther and the Duke of Saxony have gone to the Diet of Nuremberg without a safeconduct, to refute the charges brought against them, though it is supposed that the Duke brought Luther in order to secure his own duchy, of which, it was whispered, that the Archduke intended to deprive him on account of the favour shown by him to said Luther.

Buda, 2nd January. Registered by Sanuto on the 24th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 5.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 249,
St. Mark's
Library.792. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor departed hence on the 2nd, and went to Vittoria. On the 30th ultimo the secretary of the Archbishop of Bari returned to France. Concerning this, made inquiries of the Chancellor, who said that the Emperor always had been ready for peace, and would continue so, but that he was allied with the King of England, without whom he could speak of neither peace nor truce; and then again, that having been the very great friend of the Pope when merely cardinal, still more, now that he had assumed the papal tiara, it would be impossible for him, the Emperor, to do or say anything without his knowledge.

Pamplona, 5th January 1524.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Jan. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 247.793. GIOVANNI BADOER to the SIGNORY.

It is reported here that the Imperial army has taken Salvatierra, Monleon, and Agramonte, that the King of England has made a three years' truce with the Scots, and that the Duke of Albany is to cross over to France with a Scottish force in aid of the King of France.

Lyons, 2nd and 7th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 21st.

[Italian.]

1524.

Jan. 8.

794. MARCO FOSCARI to the STATE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 231.

The Pope chooses by all means to expel the French from Italy, and says that the King cannot sustain such great expense. His Holiness is sending Cardinal Campeggio to the Imperial Diet at Nuremberg, concerning the affairs of Martin Luther.

Rome, 6-8 January. Registered by Sanuto on the 14th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 9.

795. HIERONIMO LIPPOMANO to ———.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 231.

A congregation has been held today. The vice-chancery was given to Cardinal Colonna, the legation of Bologna to Cardinal Cibo. Cardinal Campeggio was appointed legate in Germany for the Lutheran affairs; he stipulated three conditions, viz., 2,000 ducats before his departure, and that, should he die on this legation, the Pope is to give the bishopric of Bologna to his son, and to get a husband for one of his daughters, both these children being illegitimate.*

Rome, 9th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 14th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 9.

796. MARIA DA POZO to FRANCESCO SPINELLI.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 231.

Yesterday in Consistory Cardinal Campeggio was appointed legate in Germany to go to the Diet at Nuremberg and provide for the affairs of Martin Luther, who is making great progress, according to the statement of the Duke of Sessa's brother, lately returned from those parts. Unless steps be taken the danger is very great, and with difficulty can provision be made, by reason of the great favour he (Luther) enjoys there. It is said the Pope will make him cardinal to quiet him, provided he choose to accept the grade. These Lutheran affairs harass the Pope. Believes this will be the deluge of the Church, but trusts God will not permit such ruin of it and of the great prelates. Those in authority at Rome do not fail to take every precaution.

Rome, 9th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 14th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 19.

797. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 250,
St. Mark's
Library.

Arrived at Vittoria from Pamplona on the 11th.

Scarcity of provisions in the Emperor's camp under Fonterabia, but some grain vessels had arrived at St. Sebastian's from Seville, and seven ships from England, freighted in like manner.

A few days ago letters arrived at Vittoria from England, dated the 9th of December, and, from what the English ambassadors [Sampson and Jerningham] tell him, they purport that the Scots having mustered a very powerful army, and apparently intending to advance, the English, also in great force, moved forward to give battle, whereupon the Scots halted and the English did the like.

The Emperor has at length determined to grant Malta and Tripoli to the Order of Rhodes, renouncing the conditions exacted by him at first, to the effect that the French were not to exercise the jurisdiction enjoyed by them heretofore at Rhodes; a thing which would have put the whole Order in confusion. The reply of the Grand Master and the knights is expected. What the Emperor requires of the Order is, that they should swear fealty to him, and add two votes to the Council, one for Naples and the other for Spain.

* "Et che morendo lui in ditta legation, el Papa dagi lo Episcopato di Bologna a suo fiol, et maritar uaa sua fiola, tutti do naturali." 1524.

Vittoria, 19th January 1524.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Jan. 31.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 305.

798. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the STATE.

That bishop in Silesia having been expelled, and another of the Lutheran sect appointed in his stead, the King and his council, to quiet the people there, who are for the most part Lutherans, have sent thither two ambassadors, namely, the Marquis of Brandenburg and D. Filippo More, bishop of five churches; the reason being that the King wants assistance from Silesia against the Turks.

Has been told by the Rev. — that the Diet of Nuremberg would be very important both by reason of the princes assembled there and the matters for discussion, namely, 1st, the reform of the clergy, including the affairs of Martin Luther; 2nd, the provision to be made against the Infidels; 3rd, decision about the large firms, such as the Fuggers and others, which should be abolished, as they are said to be tyrannical, and in a manner so constituted that they alone monopolise all business and profit.

Possonia, 31st January. Registered by Sanuto, 20th February.

[Extract. Italian.]

Feb. 1.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 251,
St. Mark's
Library.

799. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has been told by Dom. Gabriel da Martinengo, that besides the other demands made by the Emperor of the Order of Rhodes for the grant of Malta and Tripoli, he requires the knights to take upon themselves the defence of Tripoli; a responsibility which Martinengo expects the Order to ponder and hold in great account. The Emperor also insists on their paying the fourth of the revenues of the priories and commanderies in his dominions, according to the concession made to him by Pope Adrian of all the ecclesiastical benefices in his realms. The knights apologize for not acceding to this demand, alleging the expenses incurred by them in the present war against the Turks, besides what they will have to disburse before they can domicile themselves in safety; but they would come to some compromise on this point, were the proposal to defend Tripoli cancelled.

The Queen Germaine, now vice Queen of Valencia, has caused the arrest in that city of some 150 persons who were members of the Germanada.

Vittoria, 1st February 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Feb. 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 271.

800. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The Pope commended the passage of the Adda by the Signory's troops. The French ambassador, Mons. de St. Marceau, has arrived at Rome. He is said to be the bearer of great offers from the King, in order to bring the Pope over to his side.

1524.

The English ambassador [Clerk] told the Pope that his King's troops had retired because of the winter season, but would return. The Spaniards had retreated from Salvatierra and marched upon Bayonne. St. Marceau wanted to lodge in the Pope's palace, and told the Pope it was unfitting, and would render the Emperor suspicious; but that on the arrival of Mons. de Beaurain, the Imperial ambassador, they might both lodge there.

The Pope told St. Marceau not to suppose that France was to have the Milanese; and the Archbishop of Capua [Schomberg] informed him (Foscari) that the affairs between the Pope and Ferrara would be arranged. The Ferrarese ambassador, Antonio de' Costabeli, says that his Duke will obtain Modena for a sum of money; which city the Emperor pawned to the Pope, to whom it seems that the King of France is willing to give Parma, Piacenza, Pavia, and Cremona.

Rome, 31st Jan. and 1st Feb. Registered by Sanuto, 5th Feb.

[Italian.]

Feb. 3. 801. NEWS from ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 267.

Arrival in Venice from England, by land, of Giovanni Capello, who had been a merchant there. Says he saw all the English troops disembark on the island [from France]. He stated that a triennial truce had been made with Scotland.

Note by Sanuto.—These news are bad, as the French will increase their forces in Italy.

[Italian.]

Feb. 8. 802. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 288.

The Duke of Sessa and other Imperialists suspect the Pope of joining the French. It is said at Rome that the Venetians prevented the lansquenets from crossing the Adda. Having no news from the Signory, knows not what reply to make. The Pope, however, is taking the good road (andava a bon camin). He and the English ambassador Pace were pleased with the decree of the Senate ordering the troops to cross, and the Pope refuses to join the league for expelling the French from Italy, and chooses to have Ferrara; and it is his firm opinion that the French must quit Italy (sic).

Rome, 5th and 8th February. Registered by Sanuto on the 12th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 10. 803. The SWITZERS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 277.

Motion made in the Senate by the Sages for a letter to the three Leagues of the Switzers, apologizing for the Signory's inability to grant their request that Venetian troops might not be sent in aid of Milan, as the State is leagued with the Emperor, and is exhorted thus to do by the Pope and the King of England; and reminding them of the love borne towards their communities by the Republic. And be it carried forthwith to give them immediately 100 golden Rhenish guilders.

Ayes, 139. Noes, 8. Neutrals, 5.

[Italian.]

1524

Feb. 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxv. p. 298.804. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The Pope, having been so much urged by the Imperialists, has sent an additional 30,000 ducats to Milan for payment of the troops. He praises the Signory much for the assistance given, and the Imperialists are satisfied with the Venetian army.

Letters have been received at Rome from England. In the spring the King will muster a large army for the invasion of France. St. Marceau and Carpi, the French ambassadors, have been to the Pope, saying they had a general mandate from the King of France to do everything. Nothing will be accomplished. The Pope told them he meant to be neutral. The English ambassador, Pace, has also a mandate from his King, and the Pope hopes that the truce will be stipulated.

Rome, 11-13 February. Registered by Sanuto on the 17th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 23.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 253,
St. Mark's
Library.805. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Announces the arrival of an agent from the Duke of Bourbon with letters for the Emperor, whom he advises to request the King of England to repeat his attack on France, as the King would do whatever the Emperor wished; but that he, the Emperor, on his part must not fail to prosecute the war for the sake of yet more encouraging the King, and giving support to the affairs of Italy.

Several cabinet councils have been held lately in the presence of the two Portuguese ambassadors, for the discussion of the dispute between the Emperor and the King of Portugal concerning the Spice Islands, discovered by that Spanish ship ["the Victory"] which returned last year.* It was determined to send six individuals on behalf of either sovereign to Badajoz, namely, three doctors and three others, that they may see to whom the islands belong. It is considered certain that they will come to no decision.

The King of Portugal does not cease tempting the Emperor with a good sum of money to cede this navigation to him; but the Imperial ministers are so impressed with the anticipated profits that, from what the Chancellor says, their demands have no limits.

Vittoria, 23rd February 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Feb. 28.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 254,
St. Mark's
Library.806. The SAME to the SAME.

Last night the Emperor received a letter from the Constable of Castile, announcing the surrender of Fonterabia. The garrison, in number 1,500, was allowed to depart with arms and baggage, leaving all the artillery and other ammunition, said to be in great quantity.

Vittoria, 28th February 1524.

[Italian, ½ page.]

March 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 81.807. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the SIGNORY.

The bishop of five churches and the Chancellor of Bohemia, together with the Marquis of Brandenburg, have returned from Silesia, whither they went as ambassadors from the King to expel

* "The Victory" arrived at San Lucar on the 7th September 1522. (See Robertson.)

1524.

the Lutheran sects. They did as desired; and the people there are content to assist the King. It seems that the priests have married.

Ofen, 6th March. Registered by Sanuto, 28th March.

[Italian.]

March [6]. 808. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvi. pp. 25, 26. The Pope wishes peace or truce to be made between the Emperor, France, and the Signory; and it seems that the French are content. The Imperialists have written to Spain, and also to England, by way of France.

Rome, ———. Registered by Sanuto, 9th March.

[Italian.]

March 10. 809. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvi. p. 46. The Pope was glad to hear of the capture of Garlasco by the Signory's commander-in-chief; and again urges the State to lend money, and to obtain Cremona, being already in possession of the castle. He added that it bordered on the territories of Brescia and Crema, and had belonged to Venice of yore. With regard to the truce, the Pope said he did not see how it could be stipulated. He has proposed the matter in consistory, and will write briefs all over the world, announcing this his good will; having also sent the Archbishop of Capua to the Emperor in Spain, for the same purpose.

Richard Pace, the English ambassador, is on the point of departure from Rome for England, and will pass through the camp. Pace when taking leave of him (Foscari) said, "Had Pope Julius chosen, he could have expelled the French from Italy, and subsequently steps might have been taken for the expulsion of the Spaniards likewise; thus should the Signory do."*

Replied that the Signory was doing her utmost to gratify and aid the Emperor, &c.

Rome, 9th and 10th March. Registered by Sanuto, 16th March.

[Italian.]

March 14. 810. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvi. p. 48. Details his conversations with the Pope concerning the affairs of Lombardy.

The Pope said the Signory would do well to purchase Cremona; she should obtain her towns, and aid the Duke of Milan to keep possession of his duchy. He added, "Cremona is really a fine jewel."

Report in Rome that the Duke of Milan, or rather the Spaniards, intend to sell Sarzana (now held by the Genoese) to the Florentines, for the purpose of raising money.

* This project of the English cabinet, announced by Pace to Foscari at Rome, in March 1524, was again resumed in 1606, at Madrid, as seen by a conversation between Sir Charles Cornwallis and the Venetian ambassador, Francesco Priuli. A despatch, dated Madrid 18 January 1607 (which will be duly calendared), shows that James I., to accomplish this scheme, purposed marrying the Princess Elizabeth to the eldest son of the Duke of Savoy.

1524.

The Archbishop of Capua [Nicholas Schomberg] has departed hence for Spain, by way of France, and is to cross to England. He will negotiate truce or peace between the belligerent powers.

The Pope has sent an ambassador to Hungary to encourage the King.

An ambassador has come to the Pope from the Jews in India, offering him 300,000 combatants against the Turk, and asking for artillery.

Rome, 13th and 14th March. Registered by Sanuto, 17th March.

[Italian.]

March 23.

811. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 77.

It is reported by way of Lyons that the Imperial army had taken Fonterabia. Also that the King of England had sent a messenger to the Emperor to tell him he would send troops across (di qua), but that he, the Emperor, was not to fail [in his promises] as he did last year.

Details threats of the French ambassadors (namely, the Lord Alberto of Carpi and Mons. de St. Marceau) against the Spaniards.

The Archbishop of Capua [Nicholas Schomberg], who departed on the 11th, rode post, and on the 16th arrived at Genoa. He was to embark there and go through Provence to Blois, where the King of France lay sick of the French disease.

The Pope is sending money into the Spanish camp.

The sister of the Cardinal Farnese, Madame Julia, heretofore the favorite of Pope Alexander, has died. The plague continues here, the deaths averaging from four to five per diem. The Pope is taking every precaution, and has ceased to give audience.

Rome, 22nd and 23rd March. Registered by Sanuto on the 27th.

[Italian.]

March 24.

812. The PROVEDITOR PESARO to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 78.

Has conversed with the Duke of Bourbon, who is very joyful, and says he will by no means give battle, as they are sure to conquer without risking an engagement.

Has also heard through spies that the French are fortifying Vigevano, and will decamp in two days, because the Admiral [Bonnivet] has received letters from the King desiring him to send all the Italian infantry and men-at-arms to France, to resist the English invasion. The Duke of Bourbon declares that France is not expecting any succour. The Spaniards fare badly without money. Don Morone urges them to fight a pitched battle, but both the Viceroy and the Duke of Bourbon are averse to this.

From the camp at Ottobiano (sic), 24th March. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.

[Italian.]

March 29.

813. PAOLO ZIANI, a Franciscan Friar, to the Franciscan FRANCESCO MAREM, Vicar of the Province of St. Antonio, Professor of Theology.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi.
pp. 194, 195.

We [i.e., the writer and the Legate Campeggio] arrived at Nuremberg on the Wednesday in Passion week. The Archduke

524

[Ferdinand] is at a monastery five leagues distant for his devotions. The Duke of Saxony, having heard of the coming of the Legate Campeggio to oppose the Lutheran opinion, departed in great wrath; and the Duke of Bavaria, a very Catholic person, on entering Nuremberg after our arrival, and finding it so Lutheran, went away in extreme anger, praising God for his escape from heretics.

In these parts the sincere faith of Christ is utterly cancelled; no respect is paid either to the Virgin Mary or the saints. On the contrary, it is said that those who employ their aid sin mortally. They deride the Papal rites, and call the relics of the saints bones of those who have been hanged. In Lent they eat meat openly, saying they do not consider it prohibited. Confession is neglected, as they say it should be made to God, and that auricular confession is a buffoonery. They generally communicate under both forms. They make a laughing-stock of the Pope and cardinals, and other ambassadorial ecclesiastics, by means of paintings and other caricatures. In short, they consider Martin their illuminator, and that until now they have been in darkness, and the indulgences are held by them like bread sold in the market place. In proof of all this, the Legate [Campeggio], to avoid scorn, did not enter Nuremberg as Legate ut moris est, neither did he give the blessing and absolution, but came in like a mere horseman, though he was accompanied by a most noble escort of all the Princes and part of the nobility, who (with the exception of the Duke of Saxony and Palatine) are sincere Christians. Some of the noblemen and the mass of merchants are all tainted, nay obstinate and unconvertible, so that at present neither the Legate's authority nor the will of the Princes, nor even the ability and erudition of my master, can stem so strong a current.

Martin is not at Nuremberg, nor will he make his appearance there, but, unless the Almighty stretch forth his arm, it will doubtless come to pass that as the Princes and part of the nobility remain staunch Catholics, whilst the people persist in their errors, they will some day cut each other to pieces. The Legate will remain at Nuremberg until October, perhaps to hold another diet in Germany, cum dieta dietam sub invocat; but in this matter diets profit little, because the free towns are really not subject to any one, so they cannot be curbed, and they are the abettors of Lutheranism, especially Nuremberg and Augsburg, the asylums of all converts.* In the other towns belonging to the Princes less open confession is made, but in short all are Lutherans, publicly or secretly.

Nuremberg, 29th March. Registered by Sanuto, 30th April.

[Italian.]

April 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 257,
St. Mark's
Library.

814. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The English ambassador, that gentleman of the King's chamber [Sir Richard Jernyngham] who came to Spain last summer to encourage the attack on France, perceiving that the army is now disbanded, took leave, and departed on the Wednesday in Passion

* "Perchè le terre franche nulli subiciuntur realiter, perchè non possano esser rafrenate, week. Visited him on that very morning, and is of opinion that he went away dissatisfied with the Spanish ministry.

1524.

The churchman [Richard Sampson] his predecessor remains, and being present at the interview, expressed himself as follows:—
“Would that I likewise were returning, for many reasons; including this one, that were I to remain here for many and many a day, I know not what service I could render my King, where there is nothing to be got;” implying that the Spanish realms are not so powerful as is supposed.

Burgos, 1st April, 1524.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

April 2.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 258,
St. Mark's
Library.

815. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Papal envoy, Dom. Bernardin da la Barba, besides acquainting the Emperor with the election of Clement VII., apologized for the Pope's non-compliance with three demands made of him by the Emperor and the King of England.

(1.) That his Holiness, like Pope Adrian, should declare himself a party to the league.

(2.) That he should contribute his share of the expenses.

(3.) That he should proceed against France by means of ecclesiastical censures.

The Pope rejected these demands for just reasons, inasmuch as with regard to declaring himself a party to the league like Pope Adrian, it was unnecessary, because, having succeeded to the popedom, and not making any declaration to the contrary, he was understood to be in the league. He added moreover that any such declaration would be unfitting, because he wished to make some adjustment between the Christian powers, and it would ill become him so to do if concerned in the matter.

With regard to contributing to the expenses, he excused himself because he had no money; and if he had any he should not think it right to postpone the defence of Christendom against the Turk for a war against France.

Touching the third demand about the censures, he said it did not appear to him there was any just cause for attacking the French with such weapons.

The Emperor and his ministers pretend to be satisfied with these apologies, but it has been said by them that his Holiness was a better Cardinal than Pope (che sua Santità era miglior Cardinal che Pontefice).

Burgos, 2nd April 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April [12].

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 164.

816. The SECRETARY of the BISHOP OF MANTUA to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

The Lutheran sect is making great progress, and at Nuremberg in two churches there are two preachers who preach and follow the doctrine of Luther. Also at Nuremberg they confess and communicate sub utraque specie, namely, with wine and the consecrated host.

Mantua 12th April. Registered by Sanuto on the 19th.

1524.

April 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 164.

817. The SECRETARY of the BISHOP OF TRENT to the ———.
Has received letters from Nuremberg, where the inhabitants communicate sub utraque specie secundum legem maledictam Lutheranam. It has, moreover, been ordered there, that for the future the relics of the saints are not to be exhibited publicly in the churches, but to be kept concealed; and all the images in the churches are to be destroyed.

Trent, 13th April. Registered by Sanuto on the 19th.

[Italian.]

April 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 161.

818. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The Pope has received letters from France from the Archbishop of Capua, announcing his departure for Spain. He would soon be with the Emperor, and on becoming acquainted with his will would go to England, so that he hoped the truce would be stipulated. Letters from Genoa, dated the 10th, announced the retreat of the French army upon Novara, and that the Venetian troops had done some damage to their rear guard.

From Germany it is reported that the Lutheran affairs are not favoured publicly, save by the Duke of Saxony.

The Lord Albert of Carpi [Pio Count of Carpi] told the Pope that the only way for him to maintain Italy is to give favour to the Signory, as the support of the Papal authority depends on the Venetians.

Rome, 14th and 15th April. Registered by Sanuto on the 18th.

[Italian.]

April 18.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 261,
St. Mark's
Library.

819. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrival at Burgos, on the 14th, of Nicholas Schomberg, Archbishop of Capua, on a mission from the Pope.

On Sunday, the 17th, the Chancellor Gattinara and Mons. de la Roche went to the English ambassador, Sampson, and subsequently conferred with Schomberg during two hours.

Visited Schomberg on the morrow of his arrival, and, together with the other ambassadors, accompanied him on that day to his first audience of the Emperor.

From conversations with Schomberg himself, with the Chancellor, and with the Florentine ambassadors, understands that he, Schomberg, assured the Emperor that the Pope desired nothing but his, the Emperor's, exaltation, and the general welfare of Christendom and of Italy, and that having expelled the French thence, the Pope did not wish them to return; and to prevent such an attempt, suggested that a truce should be stipulated, as preliminary to peace, Schomberg alluded to the exhausted state of Italy, and to her inability to supply money for the war, whereas France was less at a loss for funds; and finally he left the Emperor to consider whether in Spain he could make sufficient provision to meet this expenditure. He also mentioned the peril to which Naples and Sicily were exposed from the Turks, from whom should any danger arise, the French would assume a much higher tone than some persons suppose.

1524.

Such was the general proposal. With regard to details, Schomberg gave him (Contarini) to understand that the King of France would consent to the proposed suspension of hostilities "stantibus rebus ut stant." Schomberg also mentioned that the King of France had not chosen to say anything about the Duke of Bourbon.

The Florentine ambassadors told him (Contarini) that Schomberg had made three proposals on behalf of the Duke of Milan, which were approved by the Pope. First, that the Emperor should give him the investiture of the duchy. Secondly, that the Emperor should provide him with a wife. Thirdly, that the Emperor should give such orders as might prevent him from being tyrannized over by the Spaniards in the Milanese.

One of the Florentine ambassadors also told him (Contarini) privately that the Queen of France was very ill, and that should anything befall her the two crowns might be reconciled by giving Eleanor Queen Dowager of Portugal, the Emperor's sister, for wife to the King of France. Answered that this was inexpedient for two reasons: first, because by a very stringent oath the Emperor had promised her to the Duke of Bourbon; and, secondly, because the Emperor would be apprehensive of causing suspicion to the King of England.

On the afternoon of the 17th, when discussing this negotiation together, the Chancellor Gattinara said to him (Contarini), "Here we can do nothing; I will go to Italy, to Rome, where the whole will be concluded, as the English ambassadors will be there with their commissions, and the representatives of the Duke of Bourbon, and all the rest. The Archbishop [Schomberg] will go to England, without whom we can neither do nor say anything."

Schomberg says he is endeavouring to acquaint himself thoroughly with the opinions of the sovereigns as to the existing difficulties, and to obtain them in writing, in order that they might hesitate to deny the assertion of a friar.

Burgos, 18th April 1524.

[Italian, 8 pages.]

April 21.
Mantuan
Archives.

820. MELCHIOR LONGHIO to FEDERIGO GONZAGA, MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

By a letter of the Secretary Abbadino in the Marquis's name, learns the victory gained over the French by Paulo Lozasco.* Forwarded Abbadino's original letter to the Archbishop of Capua at the Imperial Court, for him to show it to the Emperor. Communicated it first of all to Cardinal Wolsey, the King being absent. Paid compliments in the Marquis's name to the Cardinal, requesting him to do the like by his Majesty. The Cardinal said that the King and himself class him, the Marquis, amongst the chief friends they have.

* This rout of the French by Paulo Luzasco is recorded both by Guicciardini and by Giovio.

1524.

The only English intelligence he can give is, that he hopes an alliance will now be concluded between the Emperor and the King.

Letters from the Emperor to his ambassador here [Louis de Praet], received on the 18th instant, make three proposals, the King to accept the one that pleases him best:—

(1.) Should the King choose to invade France on his own account from this side, the Emperor is content to let him take the Imperial men-at-arms and horse into his own pay, supplying them with ammunition, provisions, pioneers, and other necessities for the war, in such manner and at such price as if the Emperor were on the spot in person.

(2.) Should he choose to go in the direction of Bayonne, the Emperor will give 1,500 spears, 600 light horse, and 3,000 foot, all paid contributing, moreover, one-half of the cost of the artillery.

(3.) Should he choose to contribute [money] for half of the army of Italy, for the invasion of France, the Emperor is content to leave him* the whole of the Imperial army now there (in Italy), and should any Italian potentate be a contributor to it, the contribution to be paid proportionately. But above all, whichever of these proposals be accepted, the King of England to be in readiness here by the kalends of June.

These proposals have been made to Cardinal Wolsey, who does not seem to disapprove of them. Believes that the invasion of France by way of England will be adopted. It is supposed that in a week this decision will be formed.

London, 21st April 1524.

Signed: Melchior Longhio.

[Original. Italian.]

April 21.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 262,
St. Mark's
Library.

821. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

In order to become acquainted with the negotiations of the Archbishop of Capua [Nicholas Schomberg] has sought his society assiduously during the last few days, and has also conferred with the Florentine ambassadors, and with the Chancellor Gattinara.

Was told by one of the Florentine ambassadors aside, that the Imperial ministers want Schomberg, who is going to England, to exhort the King to supply money for the Italian undertaking. To this Schomberg would not accede, saying he should thus further the continuance of the war, and not an adjustment as desired by the Pope. On the other hand, the Milanese ambassador informed him (Contarini) that Schomberg had told him he should endeavour to procure this pecuniary subsidy from the King of England.

After this, in the course of conversation with the Chancellor, suggested that the King of England might cause more damage to the King of France at a cheaper rate, and injure him more, by aiding the Italian expedition, than by waging an expensive war in the enemy's own country; adding that he thought Schomberg would prove an excellent medium for impressing this on the King of England.

* In the original, "Cesare è contento lasciarli tutto il suo exercito Cesareo."

1524.

The Chancellor replied, "My belief is that the Archbishop will attend solely to the adjustment."

As the Chancellor is frank in his communications, most especially when it suits his purpose, is therefore of opinion that the Milanese ambassador had deceived himself.

The English ambassador, Sampson, has told him that the King of England commenced the present war unwillingly, and would accept terms if he could do so with honour. Sampson added that it was not desirable that the period of the truce should exceed one year, because when the term is long each party expects to carry its point, and thus the adjustment is thwarted; whereas a year suffices for the arrangement of all difficulties when disputants are thus inclined.

He also said that "somebody here" (meaning the Chancellor) opposed Schomberg's negotiations. In reply to his (Contarini's) enquiries, Sampson told him the King of England would not send an army into France this summer, but that a fleet would put to sea, and make a descent on the French coast. Has heard on good authority that Jerningham, who departed last Passion week, was charged to inform his King that, should the Emperor wage war against France both in Spain and Italy, he could not provide for the maintenance of the 3,000 horses in Flanders, in which parts the King must continue the hostilities alone, and the Emperor would do the like in Spain and Italy; or, if the King of England chose to send troops to Bayonne, the Emperor offered to give him the 3,000 Germans now on the spot and his men-at-arms. Supposes therefore that Jerningham went away not very well satisfied, and that on this account his colleague, Sampson, now says that no army will be sent into France by England.

Burgos, 21st April 1524.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

April 24.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 264,
St. Mark's
Library.

822. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Announces the intended departure of the Archbishop of Capua early on the following morning for France. He will confer there with the King, and then proceed to England.

Burgos, 24th April 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

May 6.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 265,
St. Mark's
Library,

823. The SAME to the SAME.

Schomberg departed on the 25th, via France, for England. The Chancellor Gattinara has renounced his intention of going to Rome, and Mons. De la Roche, who will leave in ten days, has been appointed in his stead.

Burgos, 6th May 1524.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

May 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 242.

824. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Letters have been received from the Archbishop of Capua in Spain, dated the 22nd of April. He details his conversations with the Emperor, who is content to make peace rather than a truce, and is 1524.

sending the Lord Chancellor [Gattinara] to Rome as his ambassador with an ample mandate.

The Archbishop of Capua was on the point of departure from Spain for England, to induce the King to accede to this agreement. The Pope said that Cardinal Wolsey wanted to negotiate it over there, to give himself authority, but the Emperor chooses it to be treated in preference at Rome.

The Pope is very intent on making this agreement for the sake of uniting Christendom against the Turks, and he rejoices much at the retreat of the French beyond the Alps.* The affairs of Luther also trouble him vastly, and the congregation of cardinals appointed for this matter meets daily. The deaths from plague vary from 10 to 20 per diem, but occur amongst the populace. Provision is made, but uselessly; the disease is expected to cease when the weather becomes hot.

The Pope has told him that the Emperor is sending bills of exchange for 120,000 ducats, to defray expenses in Italy, and when affairs there are despatched, he has desired the Duke of Bourbon to cross over to France with his troops. The Spanish fleet is at Cartagena with 8,000 infantry, including 2,500 lansquenets, and is bound for Provence. The Duke of Bourbon has sent a messenger to the King of England, to know whether he will certainly invade France. The Pope wishes the Spanish infantry to quit Italy, even should he have to send them [at his own cost?] against the Moors;† and he wants to make an agreement with the Switzers and the Christian powers to contribute to it.

The Grand Master of Rhodes is at Rome, and the King of France has written to him not to accept Malta, because in an intercepted letter addressed to the Emperor by the Viceroy of Sicily the latter writes that to give Malta to the Knights of Rhodes would be advantageous for his Imperial Majesty.

Rome, 12-14 May. Registered by Sanuto on the 18th.

[Italian.]

May 18.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter No. 270,
St. Mark's
Library.

825. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 17th, when attending mass with the Emperor, conversed with the English ambassador, Sampson, who said, "Truces are good for nothing, nor shall we on our part consent to one, but insist on war or peace; though my opinion is, that the war will be fiercer and on a greater scale."

On the 18th, in the course of conversation with him (Contarini), the Chancellor remarked, "There is no possibility of a truce; how could we abandon the Duke of Bourbon? Neither will the King of England consent to a truce. We have arranged for the passage of 500 spears, 1,500 light horse, and 20,000 foot from Italy into France under Bourbon's command. We shall have the 300,000 ducats, and then Mons. de Bourbon will receive 100,000 from the King of England, according to the promise given him. I fancy they will march by way of Nice, in Provence; and we shall go into Aragon to hold the Cortes, and advance into Languedoc that way. Moreover, I believe that the King of England will also cross over to France in the other direction."

* "Et è molto aliegro che Francesi vadino di la da monti.." Concerning the retreat of the French in April 1524, see Guicciardini, vol. iii. p. 429, et seq.

† "Che'l Papa desidera questi fanti Spagnoli escano de Italia, si ben li dovesse mandar contra Mori."

1524.

The Chancellor also said that the Emperor had made three proposals to the King of England, either that he should invade France in that direction, availing himself (not as a matter of right, but for his accommodation,) of the Imperial forces in Flanders, the Emperor on his part bearing the entire burden of the army in Italy destined for the attack on Provence; or, that they should divide the cost of the army of Italy, the quota of either party being estimated at 600,000 ducats.

If not, that they should unite for the undertaking against Guienne, for which the Emperor offered the King of England the 4,000 lansquenets now in Spain, together with other assistance, as already notified, on the authority of Jerningham, in his (Contarini's) letter of the 21st April.

The Chancellor also said that by letters from England it seemed the King was inclined to invade France in that direction. Thus the Signory will perceive the actual state of the Pope's negotiations for a truce.

Burgos, 18th May 1524.

[Italian, 7 pages.]

May 21.

826. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 258.

The Archbishop of Capua [Schomberg], has written to the Pope, that the King of France told him he was willing to make the truce, and that his army had retired from the Milanese and come back in safety with its artillery, because the Switzers would not fight.

The Archbishop also writes that the English had apparently crossed over to France, and were under Terouenne, but the King of France had well garrisoned the place. The King is willing to make the truce for two years, and Madame, his mother, does everything for its stipulation. The Emperor would have one for five years. It seems that France wished to negotiate the truce in England through Cardinal Wolsey.

Rome, 21st May. Registered by Sanuto, 25th May.

[Italian.]

May 23.

827. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 271,
St. Mark's
Library.

The Emperor has sent a gentleman of his chamber to England, for the purpose (Contarini understands) of persuading the King to cross over to France and to send troops thither; offering him his forces in Flanders, together with other assistance, for which however the King is to pay, though the Emperor promises that his army of Italy under the Duke of Bourbon shall cross the Alps and enter France, but without guaranteeing anything whatsoever.

A ship has arrived at Seville from the Indies with 40,000 gold pieces; the vessel comes from a land more to the westward than Yucatan, and which has been discovered lately.

Burgos, 23rd May 1524.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

1524.

May 25. 828. The ARCHBISHOP of CAPUA.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 257.

Note by Sanuto, that in private letters from Rome, dated the 21st, which he had seen, it was stated that the Imperialists there made great bonfires for the expulsion of the French from Italy; and the Archbishop of Capua wrote from Blois, in date of the 11th, that he had been to the Emperor in Spain, and was again returned to France, and would go to England. He is expected at Rome in the middle of June, as the Pope wishes to make a truce or peace between the powers, in order to attack the Turk.

[Italian.]

May 25. 829. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 262.

Has been told by Augustin Foieta that the news from England announced the intention of the King to give assistance against France, either by sending money for the camp in Italy or by crossing over to France with troops.

Rome, 25th May. Registered by Sanuto, 28th May.

[Italian.]

May 26. 830. A CONSPIRACY in ENGLAND.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 260.

Arrival in Venice from England, on the 25th, of Hironimo da Molin. He quitted London on the 21st of April. Nothing whatever is said about war.

Note by Sanuto.—Certain gentlemen in England plotted together to seize a sum of money on its way to the King from ———; they were to raise the cry of "Liberty," and to incite the people to change the government, saying the present King taxed them too highly. They were discovered, the company consisting of upwards of 40 individuals; and some being captured, five noblemen of the party were quartered.

[Italian.]

May 29. 831. CARLO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador at Milan, to the SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 267.

The King of England has written to the Duke of Bourbon to attend vigorously to the prosecution of the war in Italy, as he himself will not fail doing the like to his utmost over there.

Milan, 29th May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

June 1. 832. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 273,
St. Mark's
Library.

A courier from France announces the departure from the French court of the Archbishop of Capua for England on the 12th of May.

The Pope has written to the Emperor from Rome, in date of the 10th May, urging him to ponder the great preparations making by Sultan Solymán, and announcing that the Lutherans have summoned a council in a certain town in Germany, for the purpose of confuting the arguments adduced against Luther's tenets. This distresses the Pope greatly, and he earnestly requests the Emperor to apply a remedy, as such a demonstration is at variance with the edict issued by him at Worms [April 1521].

1524.

The Emperor replied that he would take such steps as due, expressing himself in general terms without descending to any particulars.

Burgos, 1st June 1524.

[Italian, 2¼ pages.]

June 6.

833. INVASION of FRANCE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 274.

The secretary of the Imperial ambassador came into the College and showed a letter, dated Stochar [Stutgard?], 24th May, addressed to the ambassador, announcing the passage through that place of Richard Pace, late English ambassador in Venice, who is coming well provided with the "authentic" document to accelerate the march of Bourbon into France; that is to say, he is bringing with him the pecuniary supply. He also said that the "Most Christian King" would invade France in person, meaning the King of England, who gives himself the title of "Most Christian," because Pope Leo styled him "Defender of the Faith" for having composed a work against Luther.

[Italian.]

June 7.

834. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 280.

Has had conversations with the Pope about the Duke of Bourbon, who means to invade France, and to send the fleet from Genoa into Provence to capture Marseilles. The Duke of Bourbon will not depart until the English cross. The Emperor is raising troops for the attack on France, and this he does in order that the King of England may send an army.

Rome, 7th June. Registered by Sanuto, 11th June.

[Italian.]

June 10.

835. ANTONIO SURIAN and FRANCESCO FOSCARI, Governors of Brescia, to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 282.

Dqm. Richard Pace, ambassador from the King of England, arrived post at Brescia from England on his way to Rome, where he expects to meet the Emperor's Lord Chancellor, Gattinara. Pace dined at Brescia, and previously Surian went to visit him at the inn. Pace told Surian that his King would not give another ducat to the Emperor, having already given him 200,000 crowns. Pace is moreover of opinion that for this year his King will send neither troops nor anything else against France.

Brescia, 10th June. Registered by Sanuto, 13th June.

[Italian.]

June 13.

836. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 274,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 10th instant the Florentine ambassador received letters from the Archbishop of Capua, dated the 3rd, from Tours, where the King of France then was.

The letters were in cipher, and purport that after his departure from Burgos, on the 25th of April, Schomberg arrived at the French Court on the 2nd of May. He remained there until the 12th, and then proceeded towards England, where he landed on the 16th.

1524.

On the 25th of May he was again at the Court of France and purposed departing thence for Rome on the 4th of June.

The Archbishop announces that the King of England has assented to the truce; and therefore Schomberg desires the Florentine ambassadors to urge the Emperor to do the like with all despatch.

The Imperial postmaster at Burgos has received letters from Lisbon dated the 8th instant. They purport that at the end of May some French vessels off Faro, in Portugal, near Cadiz, attacked the ship under the command of Beneto Zane, master, on board of which were said to be 4,000 pieces of kerseys; and the ship under the command of Zuane Francesco Giustinian, master, freighted with 3,000 pieces of kerseys. They captured the vessel commanded by Beneto Zane, and the Giustiniana ran ashore, but saved both crew and cargo, though the ship is lost. Some merchants of Seville have received similar intelligence by way of Seville. Prays God to comfort those who have encountered so great a disaster.

Burgos, 13th June 1524.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

June [13?].

837. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 288.

It is reported by letters from the Emperor's Court at Burgos that the Chancellor Gattinara had declined coming to Rome because he demanded very full powers, which were denied him; and if he went to Rome without ample authority, the ministers remaining in Spain would do many things against him; but he is sending Mons. de la Rochia.*

He also intends to send 3,000 lansquenets to Perpignan, that the King of England likewise may attack France; and he wrote to the Duke of Bourbon that after accomplishing the Italian expedition he was to go with the troops into France. The Chancellor also said that Pace, the English ambassador, was bringing 200,000 crowns into Italy. The Archbishop of Capua wrote in praise of the Emperor's liberality. He, the Archbishop, was going to England. The King of France consented to the truce, and told the Archbishop it would be well to arrange the affairs of the Milanese by marrying a relation of his [King Francis] to the Duke of Milan, giving him the duchy for dower. The Archbishop replied that first of all the truce should be stipulated. It seems that the King of France said that the Archbishop was a German poltroon. The Pope remarked to him (Foscari), "This King of France is proud, and in great want of money, for the term of payment of the money borrowed by him has arrived, so that should the Duke of Bourbon (with the party he has) invade France, the King of England and the Emperor making an attack in the other direction, he would doubtless be in a bad way."

Rome, ———. Registered by Sanuto, 18th June.

[Italian.]

* In "State Papers," vol. vi., part 5, p. 344, this Imperial minister is styled "Mons. de la Roche."

1524.

June 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 282.838. RECEIPT of LETTERS from FLORENCE by MAFIO BERNARDO the Banker.

News there that the ship of 1,000 butts belonging to Zuan Zane and brothers, when on its homeward voyage from England, loaded with wool and tin for a great amount, was fallen in with off Cape St. Vincent's by Frenchmen or, and they captured it. They also gave chase to the galleon of Nicolò Semitecolo and Co., returning in like manner from England, and it ran aground and foundered in the direction of Portugal. By the loss of these two ships Venice has suffered great damage.

[Italian.]

June 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 290.839. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The Pope told him he had letters from the Court in Spain dated the 24th of April. The King of England was going to send a certain amount of troops against France. The Pope had also received letters from the Archbishop of Capua, dated Montpellier the 11th, announcing his having been in England.

Rome, 13th and 14th June. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

June 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 285.840. LUTHERANS at STUTGARD.

Advices sent by the Marquis of Mantua to his ambassador at Venice, and read in the Senate.

The Archduke [Ferdinand] is there at Stutgard, and as the Lutheran sect is making greater progress than ever, he has caused two Lutherans to be burnt, one of whom was a preacher who preached that there is no longer a Christ (che non era più Cristo), as a new prophet was to come every 1,500 years, which period having now elapsed, another has appeared, namely, Martin Luther.

Note by Sanuto, that the "report" will perhaps be copied by him hereafter.

[Italian.]

June 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. pp. 289,
290.841. REPORT of FRANCE made by GIOVANNI BADOER in the College.

Had been assured by the Archbishop of Capua, the Pope's ambassador, who had been in France, Spain and England, and was returning to Rome, that all three of the powers consented to the truce.

[Italian.]

June 19.

Sanuto Diaries
v. xxxvi. p. 302.842. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Announces the arrival of the Archbishop of Capua. He has ridden post to France, Spain, and England about the truce, and reports that the sovereigns are inclined to stipulate it and will send the commissions.

Rome, 19th June 1524. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd June.

[Italian.]

1524.

June 20.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 275,
St. Mark's
Library.

843. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Announces the receipt of letters from England, dated the 3rd instant, enclosing a minute of the conditions offered by the King to the Duke of Bourbon, in conformity with which he will assist him to return to France.

Transmits a copy of the articles,* which was given to him by the Duke of Milan's secretary, who said he had been commissioned by his master to communicate everything to him (Contarini), adding, that he had received the minute from the Milanese ambassador in London, and shown it to the Chancellor Gattinara, who corrected it in certain parts where there were mistakes.

The individuals sent by the Emperor to Badajos to confer with the Portuguese delegates about the dispute concerning the Spice Islands, have returned re infectâ. According to report the King of Portugal has sent a fleet to those parts, and it is likewise said that the Emperor is fitting out another for the same purpose. It is, therefore, feared they may come to a rupture, unless the King of Portugal marry the Emperor's sister [Katharine], concerning which marriage nothing has yet been settled.

Burgos, 20th June 1524.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

June 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 315.

844. LUTHERANISM in VENICE.

Today at St. Peter's in the Castle (the Cathedral), after vespers, the Patriarch being present, a priest delivered a Latin sermon against Martin Luther, some of whose works were afterwards burnt.

[Italian.]

June 30.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 276,
St. Mark's
Library.

845. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

On becoming acquainted with the terms proposed by the King of England to the Duke of Bourbon, went to the Chancellor to ascertain the policy of the Imperial ministers in opposition to that of England.†

The Chancellor in reply to his enquiries respecting the preparations against France, and the probable proceedings of the English in that matter, said, "I indeed believe that on learning the Emperor's intentions, as announced to them by one of his gentlemen who has been sent over there, they likewise will invade France."

Knowing that the Chancellor dislikes Cardinal Wolsey, as he has often said so very plainly, to render him more communicative, rejoined, "The affair depends on the Cardinal's brain, which is constituted somewhat after a fashion of his own."

Gattinara then continued, "I tell you that, besides the brain, I believe his intention to be evil;‡ and it appears to me that he would ruin the universe to contrive that the Emperor may not seem superior to his King; and he is jealous because the English

* The Contarini letter book does not contain the transcript of the proposed agreement between Henry VIII. and the Duke of Bourbon.

† "La fantasia di costoro contra le cose di Anglia."

1524.

have done nothing, whereas the Emperor, both in Italy and Spain and previously in Flanders, has obtained many advantages over the French. Were this envy but legitimate, he would endeavour to surpass us by his own performance of greater feats ; but to me it appears of an evil nature."

The Chancellor did not commit himself further. Thinks he meant to infer that for the sake of checking the progress of the Imperial army Wolsey proposed to the Duke of Bourbon such overbearing and iniquitous terms.*

The Chancellor informed him that Sampson complained because after the capture of Fonterabia, the Imperialists did not march to Bayonne, and moreover disbanded their army ; although the English had returned from France some months previously.

The Chancellor also said, "I do not believe the thing can last, though the Emperor will never fail to keep faith in all that he has promised them."

After this, the Chancellor expatiated on the Emperor's firm resolve invariably to keep faith ; saying that he would prefer losing all he possessed rather than fail one atom in his promises, either to the King of England or to the Duke of Bourbon ; and that but for this his affairs with France would have been settled with a single word. This maxim of the Emperor's was in accordance, the Chancellor said, with the counsel he had always given him, and should continue to give, videlicet, never to break his word.

Greatly commended the sentiments thus professed by the Emperor and the counsel given by the Chancellor.

Burgos, 30th June 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

July 6.

846. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 277,
St. Mark's
Library.

Receipt at Burgos of letters from England dated the 19th of June.

According to report they purport that the King is preparing a powerful army for the invasion of France, and will take the command in person ; so the Archduchess Margaret is mustering her Flemish forces, having made truce with the Duke of Guelders.

The gentleman sent by the Emperor to the King had not reached the Court, but the courier who brought these letters met him at a distance of 20 leagues from London.

Burgos, 6th July 1524.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

July 17.

847. The SAME to the SAME.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 280,
St. Mark's
Library.

Was informed yesterday that the ship "Zana," captured by the French, having reached Bajona, a port in Galicia, was subsequently taken by some Biscayan vessels.

Applied for its release to the Chancellor, who referred him to the Doctor Caravaial.

By the present courier, according to the Pope's request, the Em-

* "Quelle condicione cussi altere et inique."

1524.

peror is sending very strong letters into Germany against the Lutherans.

Burgos, 17th July 1524.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

July 21.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 281,
St. Mark's
Library.

848. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Applied to the Emperor for the release of the ship "Zana," and took with him the English ambassador [Richard Sampson], who is his friend, for the sake of obtaining more favour, as the ship was bound from England, the cargo likewise being English; persuading him, moreover, that the interests of his nation were concerned in the matter.

Having presented themselves together to the Emperor, he (Contarini) stated the case and was well seconded by Sampson, who said his King would be gratified by the restitution.

The Emperor replied that he was disposed to do the State every kindness, but that he (Contarini) knew the maritime code,* namely that when a ship has been for twenty-four hours in the hands of the enemy and is recaptured, it becomes the property of those who make the prize, and therefore he could not fail to do justice to these Biscayans, to whom, and not to himself, the ship belonged.

Then requested that the decision might be delayed until the receipt of an answer from Venice. The Emperor said he would consider the matter and give a reply.

Burgos, 21st July 1524.

Postscript dated Valladolid, 2nd August.

[Italian, 6 pages.]

July 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 376.

849. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the SIGNORY.

The King has issued a proclamation ordering all Luther's works to be burnt, and imposing a very heavy penalty on his followers; and this by reason of the fire which took place at Villach, because all those who were present at the fire were Lutherans; yet is Luther's faction very great in Germany.

Ofen, 27th July. Registered by Sanuto, 17th August.

[Italian.]

July 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 353.

850. ADVICES from MANTUA.

The King of England was sending an army into France, and 200,000 ducats to the Duke of Bourbon to continue the undertaking.

[Italian.]

July 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 370.

851. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the SIGNORY.

The bull conceding plenary indulgence has arrived here; and a friar who preached in Hungary in German has been silenced; but

* "Ma che io sapeva le lege del mar."

1524.

the Germans who hold to Luther are dissatisfied, and the Hungarians confess and communicate.

Ofen, 27th, 29th, and 30th July. Registered by Sanuto, 11th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 7.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 283,
St. Mark's
Library.

852. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

In my letter of the 30th of June I mentioned what had been said by the Chancellor concerning the Emperor's dissatisfaction at the proceedings of the King of England, or rather of Cardinal Wolsey.

I have ridden the whole way from Burgos to Valladolid always in company with the Chancellor, some of whose remarks made in the course of the journey appear to indicate his present policy.

When I remarked that it would be desirable for the Emperor to marry, and inquired the age of the Princess of England, the Chancellor replied that she was but eight years old. I then alluded to the sister of the King of Portugal, as having declared that she would never marry anybody but the Emperor.*

The Chancellor rejoined, "She might possibly have him, although according to the prophecies† the Emperor is to become King of England by marriage; it might, however, befall him to espouse this Portuguese Princess in the first place, and then on her death to take the daughter of the King of England for his second wife."

I then exclaimed, "How can you at this moment abandon the Princess of England?"

The Chancellor continued, "The King of England might perhaps not keep his engagements, in which case we should be released from our obligations; moreover, in these negotiations for peace I know not how we shall manage with him, for he demands of the King of France as much territory as has been conquered by the Emperor, though I do not believe that France will grant it."

I cautiously hinted that although it would be desirable for the Christian commonwealth that some adjustment should be effected, yet everything ought to be done to retain England.

The Chancellor rejoined that it was requisite to make some agreement, which was requisite both for France and for the Emperor, and also by reason of the danger to be apprehended from Sultan Solyman. The Chancellor has talked constantly for many months of taking the Emperor to Italy, and then retiring to his own home in quiet.

Valladolid, 7th August 1524.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

* Isabella of Portugal took for her motto, "Aut Cæsar aut nihil." See Navagero's report in Cicogna's illustrations of the church of San Martino di Murano, pp. 252, 312.

† Concerning the Chancellor's faith in prophecies, see Cicogna ut supra, p. 186. See also the prophecy concerning Charles V., sent from England to Venice in December 1519, in vol. ii. of this Calendar, no. 1301. A photograph of that document has been deposited in the library of the Record Office, and besides vouching for the authenticity of the prophecy, it is a specimen of Sanuto's handwriting.

1524.

Aug. 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 371.

853. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER, Venetian Ambassador to the Duke of Milan, to the SIGNORY.

Advices have apparently been received of the passage into Flanders of from three to four thousand English, to join the Flemings in an attack on France.

Romano, 9th August. Registered by Sanuto, 12th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 369.

854. ADVICES from FERRARA.

Letters addressed to the Duke of Ferrara were exhibited to the College by the Ferrarese ambassador. They state that the Duke of Bourbon was prospering, and had received 100,000 ducats from the King of England.

[Italian.]

Aug. 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. pp.
377, 378.

855. INVASION OF FRANCE.

Extract from a letter dated Finale, 11th August. According to letters from Flanders of 16th July the English had not crossed.

Registered by Sanuto, 18th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 12.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 284,
St. Mark's
Library.

856. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Has conversed about the war with the English ambassador [Sampson]; finds him much more inclined towards peace than formerly. Perceives the like to be the case with the Chancellor and all the other personages of the Spanish Court, so that possibly, when writing to Rome, they will now give Mons. de la Roche fuller powers for the negotiation of peace.

Valladolid, 12th August 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Aug. 13.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlvii. p. 59.

857. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

In reply to his letter of the 4th, understand what the Pope told him concerning the mission by the King of England of the Rev. Richard Pace to the Switzers. Commend his Holiness for not sending his Nuncio with Pace, for the sage reason assigned by the Pope, but should have liked the Swiss negotiation to have been effected by means of his Holiness, for the causes mentioned in their last of the 6th July, and also for the establishment of the Duke of Milan, on whose stability they believe that the security of Italy greatly depends.

[Italian.]

Aug. 15.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 285,
St. Mark's
Library.

858. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the evening before last the Duke of Bourbon's gentleman, Mons. de Ursi [Lurcy], arrived at Valladolid, having quitted the coast of Provence on the 3rd instant. He states that the whole of that province, with the exception of Arles and Marseilles, has submitted to the Duke.

1524.

Imagines that the ministers at Valladolid are much elated by this intelligence, and doubts whether they will be so ready to stipulate peace or truces as they were apparently during the last few days.

Yesterday letters were received from England, dated the 17th and 18th of July. The King would do but little, unless the Provence expedition succeeded. Does not know what decision he will now form.

Valladolid, 15th August 1524.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Aug. 15.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 286,
St. Mark's
Library.

859. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Is informed by the Florentine ambassadors that they have received letters from England, dated the 17th ult., written by the Papal Nuncio [Ghinucci?], announcing the arrival there, on a mission from France, of a certain Genoese [Giovanni Gioachino Passano]. The King has since talked of raising 30,000 infantry to send against Scotland, which is in a poor state of defence, and the Duke of Albany absent. The Nuncio is therefore apprehensive lest this expedition against Scotland should render the war with France in that quarter yet slacker.

Valladolid, 15th August 1524.

[Italian, ½ page.]

Aug. 16.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 288,
St. Mark's
Library.

860. The SAME to the SAME.

Today when with the Chancellor I endeavoured to acquaint myself farther with the news from England, and was told by him that their letters thence purported that the Earl of Angus has fled from France, and promises to consign to the King of England his [the King's] sister and [her son] the King of Scotland; in consequence of which the King of England was making preparation against Scotland.

Concerning the Genoese [Passano] despatched by the mother of the King of France to England, the Chancellor said he had been in hiding there for some days, and Wolsey writes that he will not give any account of his negotiations by the present post, as letters travel insecurely owing to the corsairs, but purposes narrating the whole by the next courier.

The opportunity appearing fair, I urged the Chancellor strongly to maintain the friendship with England, and employed many arguments, which the Chancellor admitted; so I believe him now to be better disposed than he was formerly.

It is requisite first of all to sustain the fancies of the Chancellor, and then adroitly to dispel them, because he is a man of very small brains,* and when he once takes an impression, he then becomes obstinate. The path on which he was entering seemed very perilous. He would have commenced by estranging himself from the King of England, and then in conclusion, had the Emperor succeeded, he would have brought the Emperor into Italy. I therefore deemed it necessary to pursue the above-mentioned course, which has not proved fruitless.*

1524.

Valladolid, 16th August 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Aug. 17.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlvii. p. 59,
tergo.

861. The COUNCIL OF TEN AND JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Have received his letter of the 10th detailing his conferences, first with the English ambassador [Clerk], and subsequently with the Pope. Perceive what he said to the ambassador concerning the Switzers. Commend him for the prudence of his language; he did well to assure the ambassador of the sincerity with which the Pope was acting by the Switzers. Approve of what he said about contributing money for them, explaining that the excessive expenditure incurred by the State renders any disbursement impossible. Commend his having acquainted the Pope with the ambassador's proposal, as nothing could give them greater satisfaction than to prove to his Holiness their filial devotion. To persevere in similar offices.

Ayes, 24. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Aug. 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 417.

862. LETTER from ANTWERP.

The English have assumed the government of Scotland with the consent of the King of France, a proof that they are agreed. The King of England is the sovereign who with his money maintains the war waged by the Duke of Bourbon, for which undertaking he has supplied him with 200,000 crowns already.

Antwerp, 20th August. Registered by Sanuto, 13th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi., p. 402.

863. CARLO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador to Archduke Ferdinand, to the STATE.

Martin Luther's sect is on the ascendant (in culmine) more than ever, and on the arrival of the Emperor's letter the people would not obey it; and it is thought that they will cut each other to pieces. A second diet is to be held at Spires by the free towns.

Vienna, 25th August. Registered by Sanuto, 5th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi.,
pp. 402, 403.

864. CARLO CONTARINI to ANZOLO GABRIEL.

I visit Cardinal [Lorenzo] Campeggio occasionally; he is a most amiable person. He seems partial to me, for he invited me several times to dinner; there were many learned men amongst the guests, and thus the time passed discussing interesting topics. The Cardinal said yesterday he thought the Diet appointed for Martinmas at Spires would not take place, because the free towns, having received certain Imperial mandates about Martin Luther, have postponed their reply, and are now holding a diet amongst themselves at

* It is here seen that Contarini advocated the alliance between Charles V. and Henry VIII., for the sole purpose of preventing the Emperor from coming into Italy in person.

1524.

Spires. The Cardinal is of opinion they will not obey, to avoid subjecting themselves to the empire, according to their ancient system. I infer therefore that in lieu of the Diet, some disturbance will take place.

Vienna, 27th August. Registered by Sanuto, 4th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 289,
St. Mark's
Library.

865. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Receipt of letters from England, dated the 17th ult., to the effect that the King of Scotland had emancipated himself from the guardianship of the Duke of Albany and exacted the oaths of allegiance as King; that certain clansmen and adherents of the Duke of Albany had been arrested, and that the King of Scotland had taken the King of England for his protector.

On the morning of the 1st of September the Chancellor, having mentioned these circumstances to me, said,—

“Now think for yourself whether this was done with the connivance of France or not. The brother-in-law of the King of England arrives in Scotland pretending to have escaped from France! The whole thing was a fiction devised by the Cardinal.”

I am therefore of opinion that the Imperialists are well nigh utterly alienated from England.

I have also been told by the Milanese secretary that his Duke has received advices from England, Venice, and elsewhere announcing the intention of the Emperor to deprive him of his duchy.

Owing to the death of the Queen of France,* a report circulates at the Emperor's court that peace might be made by the marriage of the Queen widow of Portugal to the King of France. The Chancellor Gattinara, discussing this topic with my secretary, said that never by his advice would the Emperor form such an alliance, for if it were effected the King of France, by means familiar to him (per mezi familiarj), would instantly seek to compass the death not only of the Emperor, but also of the Archduke, his brother, this sister being the next heir to all their realms.†

Valladolid, 1st September 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Sept. 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 290,
St. Mark's
Library.

866. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

On the 22nd of August the Emperor was seized with fever, which immediately assumed the form of quartan ague, and down to this time he has had four paroxysms. The three first lasted 20 hours and upwards; the last was of rather shorter duration.

Had audience this morning of the Emperor, who, considering the duration of his paroxysms, is not much debilitated. I condoled with him tenderly but briefly, as the English ambassador had already been speaking with him at great length, whilst the physicians not only hinted, but said, that it was time for his Majesty to go to dinner.

* Queen Claude died at Blois on the 25th of July 1524.

† Concerning the suspicion that Leo X. was poisoned by desire of Francis I., see Guicciardini, vol. 3. p. 387, edition Friburgo 1775.

1524.

I said I would not annoy him with business, and was answered graciously. In reply to my remark that the malady required patience, I having had it in the same fashion, viz., a quartan ague which declared itself at once, the Emperor said, "It is true, one must perforce have patience."

With regard to business, the Emperor referred me to the Chancellor.

Valladolid, 1st September, 1524.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Sept. 8.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 292,
St. Mark's
Library.

867. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The quartan ague still clings to the Emperor, but the fits are of shorter duration than they were at first.

Valladolid, 8th September 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Sept. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi.
pp. 440, 444.

868. GIOVANNI FRANCESCO VALIER to the REV. SANTO QUERINI.

Had not the King of France been deceived by the King of England and Cardinal Wolsey, who crossed the Channel under pretence of making peace, the French forces would have routed the Emperor. No one acquainted with the nature of the people and princes of France, can suppose that they would choose to have for their masters the Emperor or the King of England, on whom Bourbon depends; and should their legitimate King be defeated, it would always be easy for them to delude Bourbon.

Rome, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 30th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi.
pp. 419, 420.

869. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador with the Duke of Milan, to the SIGNORY.

The advices from England, dated London, the 24th of August, were unimportant, save the following, that that "Most Christian" King had entirely arranged the affairs of Scotland, and expelled the adherents of the Duke of Albany and of France.

Pizzighettone, 12th Sept. Registered by Sanuto on the 16th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi.
pp. 424, 425.

870. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The English have entered Scotland and assumed the government, expelling the Duke of Albany and other Frenchmen, the regents for the King of Scotland.

Rome, 14th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 18th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 428.

871. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the SIGNORY.

The Viceroy [Charles de Lannoy] has received letters from Madame Margaret, and from [Praet] the Imperial ambassador in England. The King of England was using all diligence for the despatch of the 1524.

army to France ; there was no doubt of its crossing. For this undertaking the Emperor supplied him with 2,000 Flemish horse and 2,000 Germans, free of cost. The King of England has demanded of Madame Margaret 2,000 horse and 5,000 Germans, according to the agreement with the Emperor.

Pizzighettone, 18th Sept. Registered by Sanuto on the 21st.
[Italian.]

Sept. 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 6.

872. CARLO CONTARINI to ANZOLO GABRIEL.

Yesterday at the — hour, when there were not 30 persons in the market place (in piazza), the Lutheran merchant was at length burnt, whereupon 4,000 persons came instantly to rescue him, but he was already consumed; so it is thought his Majesty (quella Maestà) [qu. the Emperor or the Archduke] will thus render himself very odious to the people, and that one day or other there will be some great tumult.

Vienna, 18th September. Registered by Sanuto, 5th October.
[Italian.]

Sept. 20.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 293,
St. Mark's
Library.

873. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

At the foot of my last letter, of the 8th, I mentioned that down to the 22nd hour the Emperor had experienced no return of ague ; * that was the truth, but shortly afterwards the fit came on, though it was not very severe. The subsequent paroxysms continued at the same hour, until the last, which anticipated the usual period by two hours, and was much more severe than the others. It is feared that throughout the winter, or at least during the whole of the present moon, the Emperor will continue subject to this quartan ague.

The Florentine ambassadors have received letters from the Archbishop of Capua [Schomberg] dated Rome, the 31st of August. He announces, first, the death of the Emperor's ambassador, Mons. de la Roche ; secondly, that he himself was coming to the Emperor's court, but would first of all confer with the King of France ; thirdly, that all the ambassadors [at Rome], namely, the Imperialist, the Frenchman, and the Englishman, had written for the free transit of the couriers, in order that the replies concerning the negotiations for truce might be received more speedily.

I have been told by the Chancellor that in lieu of Mons. de la Roche the Emperor has appointed as his ambassador Dom. Gio. Bartolomeo [Gattinario], the Chancellor's cousin (consobrino), who is at Rome.†

On Thursday next, the 22nd, the Emperor is to go to a Carthusian monastery distant three leagues from Valladolid for change of air. He says he will thence go to Madrid, a warm town, and suited to his Majesty's quartan ague.

Valladolid, 20th September 1524.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

* This postscript has been omitted in the Contarini copy-book.

† Contarini gives the name Gattinario in a letter dated Madrid, 8th February 1525.

1524.

Sept. 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 431.874. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the SIGNORY.

News in letters from England, dated London, 25th August. The ambassadors from the Emperor and from the Duke of Milan have arrived and had audience of Cardinal Wolsey, who has decided in the King's name that should his Majesty not cross the Channel, he will send an efficient army, so that with the troops of Madame Margaret they may draw off the French army, according to the treaty. Wolsey said his army would be mustered by the 24th, and on that day, the 25th, he sent letters to Madame Margaret in Flanders to provide the necessary victuals in the direction of Picardy, where it is believed there will be a certain number of French men-at-arms, devoted to the Duke of Bourbon. Cardinal Wolsey also desired the Imperial ambassador to write to the Emperor that he on his part likewise must act; reminding him above all to provide pecuniary supply, as the King of England is not bound to any further contribution when he invades France.

Other advices from England were also received from the Duke of Bourbon's secretary there, dated the 31st of August. On that day the King of England sent to the Duke of Bourbon a person by name Master Gregory da Casalle,* assuring him that he (the King) had determined to send the army across the Channel, and to this effect had commissioned Madame Margaret, in addition to the promised 3,000 horse and 3,000 foot, to procure from Germany 2,000 cavalry and 5,000 lansquenets. Indeed so long back as last May he gave orders to the Duke of Suffolk and other captains to muster with all speed 14,000 English, and to commence their embarkation as soon as possible. The Duke of Bourbon's secretary does not think the King of England will cross save in the event of certain victory.

Pizzighettone, 22nd September. Registered by Sanuto on the 25th.
[Italian.]

Sept. 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvi. p. 434.875. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The Duchess of Sessa, daughter of the "Great Captain" [Gonsalvo of Cordova], and wife of the Duke, the Emperor's ambassador, has died. An English bishop [Edmund Audley, Bishop of Salisbury,] is also dead; the Pope has given his see to Cardinal Campeggio, legate in Germany for the affairs of Luther.

Rome, 22nd September. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.
[Italian.]

Sept. 28.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 294,
St. Mark's
Library.876. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor went to the Carthusian monastery on the 22nd as arranged, but is dissuaded by his counsellors from proceeding to Madrid. They tell him it is not expedient, considering the actual state of the war, that he should absent himself from the neighbourhood of Valladolid; so the move to Madrid is considered doubtful.

Some persons recommend his Majesty to go into Aragon. In the

* See "State Papers," vol. vi. part v. p. 333, letter dated The More, 31st August 1524.

1524.

meanwhile he will go to Tordesillas to arrange the giving away of his sister, the Infanta, to her consort the King of Portugal, and then come to Valladolid to settle the business of the Archbishop of Capua, whose negotiations about the truce will perhaps be more fortunate than they were last time.

Valladolid, 28th September 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Sept. 29.

Senato Mar,
v. xx. p. 134,
tergo.

877. EMBARGO on the FLANDERS GALLEYS in ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate concerning the embargo laid recently on the Flanders galleys in England, as also on the Venetian merchants and their property. The loss incurred by them was very great; a similar circumstance had never occurred, nor was it just to blend State affairs with those of private individuals, and thus subject them to loss. Provision must be made therefore to guarantee the galleys sent on the voyage to England, and the merchants and their effects, against the repetition of any similar embarrassment and loss, so that all may make this voyage or send their goods without any suspicion or fear.

Put to the ballot—That the Venetian consul in London be desired to inform the King that the State would be glad to continue the usual Venetian trade with England by means of galleys, but the recent embargo laid by his Majesty's order thereon, and on Venetian property and subjects, causing them much loss, renders the merchants of Venice apprehensive; but if certain of being secure, and not subject to any impediment, they would go to England and send their goods thither, to the benefit of his Majesty, and also to the satisfaction of the State. Request him, therefore, to make such permanent and inviolable provision that the Venetian galleys may go to, remain in, and depart from England in safety and unharmed, together with all Venetian subjects, merchandise, and effects, in such form as shall seem most fitting to his Majesty; he giving a safeconduct and public promise to that effect in ample terms for the voyages out and home, and for as long a period as possible, so that on receiving it the measure may be carried into effect according to what they believe to be his Majesty's intention, and that the usual trade of the Republic's subjects, carried on in England since a very long while, may not be interrupted.

The consul to announce what he has done by letter to the Signory; and in order that the galleys may be ready for the voyage when decreed, be the masters of the Arsenal charged speedily to fit out three of the new galleys now there.

Moreover, as it is requisite to provide against the scarcity of wool already commencing, the importation of wool into Venice to be allowed both by land and sea by any ship, as practised as heretofore—half freight being paid to the Arsenal—until the departure of the galleys destined for this voyage.

Ayes, 126. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 7.

Mem.—Letters were sent to the consul in London on 10th Oct.

[Italian, 38 lines.]

1524.

Oct. 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 295,
St. Mark's
Library.

878. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The following communications have been made to me by the Milanese secretary concerning the marriage and investiture of the Duke of Milan.

Towards both these matters the Chancellor Gattinara is as well disposed as possible, considering himself bound to the Duke, from whom he has received a fair estate, yielding an annual rental of 7,000 ducats, and also because he favours the interests of Italy. It moreover appears to him that by keeping Italy free, but inclined to and leagued with the Emperor, he achieves the greatness of his Imperial Majesty. On the other hand, Don Juan Manuel, who was ambassador at Rome in the time of Leo X.,* and is now one of the Emperor's chief counsellors, would wish the Emperor to take possession of the duchy, or else assign it to his brother the Archduke Ferdinand. Manuel has always opposed the Duke of Milan, and I know most positively through the Milanese ambassador, who quitted Burgos in May, that the Duke offered Manuel property worth 3,000 ducats per annum, which he refused.

The other counsellors are neutrals, or perhaps tend rather towards the opinion of Don Juan Manuel.

The Emperor, however, has always adhered to the Chancellor, who, in fact, has hitherto managed the whole; though he has indeed come to this, that such considerable sums having been expended to seat and maintain the Duke, it is fair that the Emperor should be recompensed.

With regard to the marriage, the Chancellor told the Milanese secretary not to broach the topic until he sees the result of the Duke of Bourbon's affairs.

I am compelled to proceed in this matter with great circumspection, especially as through the Milanese secretary, my very great friend, I know that the Chancellor, for the sake of favouring the interests of the Duke of Milan, avails himself of the authority both of the Pope and of the Signory, and tells the Emperor that should he not concede the investiture to the Duke of Milan, he would cause great suspicion to both these powers. I am therefore afraid lest, were I to say a word to the Chancellor, unless with the fairest possible opportunity, he might amplify it; and perhaps were I to utter anything as of my own accord (following thus the instructions received from the State), the Chancellor would represent it as a commission from the Republic. I have therefore as yet done nothing.

Valladolid, 1st October 1524.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

Oct. 3.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 296,
St. Mark's
Library.

879. The SAME to the SAME.

A week ago a Bergamasque, one Zuan Maria Brasiga, arrived at the Court as the agent of the Count Palatine and the King of France. The Emperor refused him audience, and referred him to the Count of Nassau and to the Chancellor.

* Manuel's arrival at Barcelona from Rome is mentioned in letter no. 196, date Valladolid, 26 January 1523. His negotiations at an earlier period are alluded to by the Venetian ambassador Vincenzo Quirini. (See Venetian Calendar, 1202-1509. Index.)

1524.

To the Chancellor apart Brasiga said that the King of France loved him, and that were the affairs of the Milanese arranged, not only would he leave him the castles and estates which he now holds under the Duke of Milan, but would add to them. The Chancellor replied that he did not choose the Emperor's affairs to depend on his, but rather that his should depend on the Emperor's, and that for himself he would not accept the half of France at the hands of her King.

To the Count of Nassau and to the Chancellor together Brasiga proposed, in the name of the King of France, that if the Emperor would concede him the duchy of Milan for his youngest son, that son should receive a wife from the Emperor, who should also be at liberty to name a regent of the duchy at his option.

This proposal having been rejected by the two delegates, Brasiga then said that, provided the reigning Duke were expelled, the King of France was willing to concede the duchy to Ferdinand Archduke of Austria, the Emperor's brother.

This second proposal the Emperor considered fraudulent, and made either for the purpose of commencing a negotiation, or else for the sake of rendering the Duke of Milan desperate and detaching him from the Emperor, so that he may throw himself into the arms of France.

This affair, as a very close secret, was communicated to me by the Milanese secretary, who has suborned the Emperor's secretaries, the Chancellor, and the whole Court, and who had heard the intelligence from the Chancellor and discussed it with him. He then communicated it to me.

The Chancellor also told the Milanese secretary that the Duke of Bourbon's gentleman [Lurcy] having complained to the Emperor that the Duke of Milan gave but very little assistance to Bourbon for his expedition in Provence, the Emperor replied that, considering the war and the plague, the Duke of Milan had done all he could.

Valladolid, 3rd October 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Oct. 5.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 297,
St. Mark's
Library.

880. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 29th a gentleman of the Emperor's chamber, named Mocaron, arrived at Valladolid from Flanders, with letters from Madame Margaret dated the 11th ult. She writes that the King of England had sent a gentleman of his chamber to her (the same who was ambassador to the Emperor, and quitted Burgos last Easter) [Sir Richard Jernyngham],* to say that as she had 3,000 horse in readiness, according to the treaty with the Emperor, he, the King, meant to reinforce them with an additional 2,000, although not bound to do so, and that with this army, the greatest that had ever attacked that kingdom, he would invade France in person.

The Lady Margaret answered that her troops were ready, and exhorted him to act according to his message; with which decision Jernyngham returned to England.

* Concerning the mission of Jernyngham to the Archduchess Margaret, see Wolsey's letter to Sampson, dated "the More," 26 September 1524. (State Papers, vol. vi. part v., p. 345.)

1524.

The small hopes entertained by the Imperial ministers in that quarter are much raised by this intelligence, and notwithstanding the approach of winter, and the apparent difficulty of sending an army into France at that season, they believe that the King of England, seeing that the Emperor has not failed in any of his promises, is rousing himself, and is determined on his part likewise to fulfil his obligations. They have written to him in strong terms, urging him either to cross over to France or else to send money to the Duke of Bourbon's army, according to the articles of their treaty; and they inform the King that for that army the Emperor has already disbursed some 400,000 ducats.

Valladolid, 5th October 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Oct. 5.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 298,
St. Mark's
Library.

881. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

I am told by the Chancellor that several princes have formed a confederacy, headed by the Duke of Saxony, in favour of Luther, and that the King of France is supposed by some to encourage it.

Valladolid, 5th October 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Oct. 5.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 299,
St. Mark's
Library.

882. The SAME to the COUNCIL of TEN.

The Emperor desired the Chancellor to tell the agent Brasiga that if the King of France wished to discuss peace it was unnecessary to speak of the Milanese, but that he should rather think of restoring the duchy of Burgundy, which belongs to the Emperor and is now held by France.

When talking on the 5th about the news of the invasion of France by the King of England, and of the suspicion formerly entertained by the Chancellor, he said to me,—

“By our letters from Flanders it seems certain that he will cross the Channel: and although he may have arranged his Scottish affairs through the medium of France, yet subsequently, having gained his object, he has probably raised some difficulty about the rest of their mutual agreements, and as the opportunity now offers itself, he will wage war on the King of France; for that Cardinal knows very well how to deceive when he chooses.”*

The Chancellor next dropped a word about Brasiga, the envoy from the Count Palatine. He said Brasiga sought to suborn him on behalf of France, but in that matter he was much mistaken. He gave no farther particulars, and being already acquainted with them through another channel, I did not evince any curiosity.

Valladolid, 4th and 5th October 1524.

[Italian, $\frac{3}{4}$ page.]

Oct. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii.
pp. 41, 42.

883. ZUAN FRANCESCO CONTARINI (brother of Carlo Contarini) to NICOLÒ BOLDO.

“Tell the most noble Messer Marin Sanuto that here one cannot even speak of Luther, still less have his works, as this Prince

* “Perchè quel Cardinal sa molto ben ingannar quando el vol.”

1524.

[Archduke Ferdinand] makes the Bishop of Vienna search for Lutherans, and if found woe betide them; so he must excuse me in this matter."

A painted caricature has been found on the door of the cathedral, representing an ass soiling Cardinal Campeggio (che cagava adosso il Cardinal Campezo), the Archduke holding the ass's tail; and beneath was written much abuse of the Archduke, the Cardinal, and Salamanca, purporting that they had come to suck the blood of one person and the other, and that unless they departed they would be cut to pieces speedily. The paper was removed and taken to the house of the Archduke's Lord Steward.

Vienna, 9th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 20th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 16.

884. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 300,
St. Mark's
Library.

Letters have been received from England dated the 28th of September. The Chancellor says the King talks of invading France, but alleges so many impediments as to show that he does not purpose doing anything whatever. He also tells the Emperor that he will have no truce with France, but either peace or war; so from that quarter the Imperial ministers have but indifferent news.

Am informed by the Florentine ambassadors that the Pope has complained to the Emperor, that in the letter written by him to Germany against Luther at his Holiness's request, mention is made of calling a council, which, under existing circumstances, the Pope considers impossible. The Emperor says that he inserted the paragraph about a council for favouring the Papal cause and diminishing the power of Luther, it appearing to him that this hint of a council might somewhat estrange the Germans from the Lutheran creed and reconcile them to the Romish Church, but that he was willing to write in any form the Pope pleased, and when forwarding the letter to the Archduke Ferdinand he desired him not to present it until acquainted with the wish of his Holiness.

The Emperor is still ill of quartan ague, although it is rather less severe, in such wise that the cold and hot stages do not last more than five hours.*

His Majesty is remaining at Tordesillas, and the Chancellor and the ambassadors are at Valladolid.

Valladolid, 16th October 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Oct. 16.

885. The SAME to the COUNCIL of TEN.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 301,
St. Mark's
Library.

In addition to the English news contained in the public letter, I am told by the Chancellor that, notwithstanding his promise, the King of England, since the first 100,000 ducats, has sent no farther supply to the Duke of Bourbon's army, and that the protest of the King, rejecting the truce and insisting on peace or war, proceeded from Cardinal Wolsey, who would fain keep the Emperor in such straits

* Each fit or paroxysm of ague consists of three stages, viz., the cold stage, the hot stage, and the sweating stage.

1524.

as to compel him to place this negotiation for peace or truce in his hands, but who deceives himself vastly, as the Emperor does not choose the affair to be managed by him.

I have heard from the Milanese secretary, who received the intelligence from Mons. de Traponis, the husband of the Chancellor's granddaughter, that the Emperor now talks of going into Italy; that the plan has the approval of all his councillors, including even those who were formerly opposed to it; and that 300,000 ducats have been put apart for the expenses of the journey.

Valladolid, 16th October 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Oct. 21.

886. The GOVERNORS of BRESCIA to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 49.

The English ambassador, Richard Pace, has arrived here, and is lodged in the house of the Podestà [Antonio Surian], who contracted a great intimacy with him during his (Surian's) embassy in England.

Brescia, 21st October. Registered on the 22nd.

[Italian.]

Oct. 22.

887. LETTER from BRESCIA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 63.

The English ambassador, Pace, is still here; he departs tomorrow. Brescia, 22nd October. Registered on the 23rd.

[Italian.]

Oct. [23?].

888. ANTONIO SURIAN, Podestà of Brescia, to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 64.

News received from the English ambassador the Reverend Richard Pace, during the three days of his sojourn here with me.

The Viceroy [Charles de Lannoy], having negotiated the truce, would never communicate it to Bourbon or to Pace, who declares he was authorized by his King to conclude it, and would have done so by this time had the particulars been confided to him. The Viceroy chose to procrastinate, and then the King of France, having gained the advantage, rejected the truce. Had Bourbon and Pace known in time, it could have been stipulated, Bourbon retaining the towns captured in Provence, to which France would have consented, as seen by intercepted letters; but the Viceroy did not choose Bourbon to be master of those towns by reason of the hatred he bears him, and he therefore kept the negotiation secret.

On the 28th of June last, Pace received letters from his King and from Cardinal Wolsey, desiring him to encourage Bourbon to persevere in the undertaking by assurances that the money would be ready, and that the English troops had been already sent across to Calais to join the Flemings for the invasion of France.

With this intelligence Pace gave Bourbon confidence to persevere, his hope resting on the King of England, and especially on the Cardinal.

It was arranged first for the Emperor to disburse 100,000 ducats, the King of England then contributing a like sum, this being done 1524.

by them alternately, until the prosperous conclusion of the undertaking.

Although the Emperor did not send his 100,000 ducats in time and all at once, but by dribblets, Pace nevertheless expended the 100,000 ducats belonging to his King.

The Emperor failed in the engagement, first, by not sending the money in time nor all at once, and moreover has latterly broken it throughout, not having remitted one penny of the second 100,000 ducats. So Pace in like manner refused to disburse the second 100,000 ducats payable by the King of England.

With regard to the troops, which Wolsey wrote last June he had sent to join Madame Margaret for the invasion of France, that statement was false. Wolsey sent but 100 infantry; so that at the commencement the Cardinal violated the treaty, as so few troops were insufficient for an attack on France.

On the 15th of September Pace received a letter from Wolsey purporting that the English troops were ready to cross whenever Pace gave the order. It was then, however, too late, as the promised pecuniary supply not having been sent from Italy into Provence, the Duke of Bourbon could no longer remain there. So Pace wrote back that it was superfluous, and therefore the English troops did not cross.

For this, Pace blames Wolsey greatly, as he has thus caused all these disasters, because if the King of England had sent his troops, the King of France would not have crossed the Alps.

Pace declares that so far as he knows, no agreement, either tacit or public, has been made between his King and France, though he suspects that the Cardinal may have some secret understanding with the Most Christian King through subornation, by reason of Wolsey's very base nature (pessima natura).

Pace founds his suspicion on the following fact, namely, that for the last two months Dom. Giovanni Gioachino [Passano], the Genoese who is accustomed to negotiate for France, has resided constantly in England. Pace assured me that so far as he knows, Giovanni Gioachino has not concluded anything whatever with the King of England.

Pace also told me that some while ago he received letters from a great personage, whose name he would not divulge, informing him that the King of France was crossing the Alps, dragged by the Pope (tirato dal Pontefice). Pace, however, does not credit this, and said that owing to certain things said to him by the Pope, and negotiated with him heretofore, he will never again believe anything, nor be a Christian, should the Pope be French.

Pace was going to Mantua, where he would remain until further orders from his King, and again promised to acquaint me with passing events, and with the Marquis's mind if able to ascertain it; and as a good friend he recommended himself much to Doge Gritti. Pace quitted this town at daybreak this morning.

Brescia, — October. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd October.

[Italian.]

1524.

Oct. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii.
pp. 78, 79.

889. LETTER of a SPY addressed to PAULO NANI, Bailiff of Verona.

The only news here is that the Archduke Ferdinand at Vienna has issued proclamations prohibiting all persons from following the tenets of Martin Luther, or believing in them, under penalty of prosecution and being beheaded. Some persons, scorning to be afraid, were discovered, and he caused two or three great personages to be beheaded; so he is shut up in a town, not daring to quit it, and the country is in confusion, as generally reported here.

Bolzano, 24th October. Registered by Sanuto, 30th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 96.

890. RICHARD PACE to ANTONIO SURIAN.

What you wrote on the 27th arrived at Mantua on the 28th with my secretary (notario). Your confidential and conscientious communications facilitate my proceedings. You are right in supposing that I know what France is plotting; her efforts are directed to the mastery of all Italy. I now understand the business better, but not in the light in which you see it. On the 26th I received letters from the Duke of Bourbon that 40,000 men are to defend Pavia; 100 heavy horse, an equal amount of light cavalry, 3,000 Spanish and Italian infantry will protect Lodi. Great stores of provisions have been collected in Cremona for support of the rest of the army, which is at Soratinum (sic), with all the commanders-in-chief. These are not bad measures, but full of forethought, because, if Pavia and Lodi be well defended, Milan will be of no use to the King of France, as no provisions are conveyed thither; neither can money be obtained there by reason of the absence of the merchants. The Imperialists have therefore done all that is required by the rules of strategy.

Were I a Venetian by birth, as I am by inclination, I should advise the Signory to join the Imperialists speedily, so as in this dilemma to terrify the enemy. This is the only road to victory, if the State desires the expulsion of the French from Italy. Should there be any who wish for such neighbours, they must have a stomach for food easier to swallow than to digest or evacuate. I hear that the King of France is about to attack Pavia; if defeated, his whole military reputation is lost; if victorious, his object is gained. At Pavia, therefore, he ought to be resisted to the utmost.

Mantua, 29th October.

Forwarded from Brescia to the Signory by Surian.

Registered by Sanuto, 3rd November.

[Latin.]

Nov. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii.
pp. 89, 90.

891. MARTIN LUTHER.

"Report" made to Paulo Nani, bailiff of Verona, by a trustworthy person who had been in Germany.

Was told by a person who came from the fair of Igna (sic) that the entire population there was exasperated against the Archduke Ferdinand about the affairs of Martin Luther, because he, the Archduke, had caused one of the chief personages there who held to the 1524.

Lutheran sect to be beheaded, and imprisoned certain others; issuing a decree, moreover, throughout the country that no one do adopt Luther's creed under pain of being sacked (sachigiati). Therefore the whole country was in an uproar, complaining of this, and saying that they chose to follow what creed they pleased.

[Italian.]

Nov. 6.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 302,
St. Mark's
Library.

892. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 23rd of October the Chancellor departed from Valladolid for Tordesillas accompanied by the ambassadors of England, Poland, and Florence.

The Englishman [Sampson] had to communicate a letter from his King, dated the 28th of September, relating to the passage of his troops across the Channel for the invasion of France.

The affairs of these ambassadors took the Chancellor to Tordesillas, but he also went to hold a cabinet council as to the course to be pursued in consequence of the retreat of the Imperial army from Marseilles into Italy.

The Chancellor remained at Tordesillas 13 days, and had but three brief interviews with the Emperor, who from listlessness caused by his malady, which is most irksome, avoids all business, especially such as is unpleasant. The Chancellor returned yesterday. Whilst he was at Tordesillas news arrived there of the march of the King of France with his army towards Italy. The whole Court is to arrive at Madrid on the 21st.

Business of every description is much impeded by the Emperor's quartan ague, which however diminishes daily.

Valladolid, 6th November 1524.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Nov. 6.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 303,
St. Mark's
Library.

893. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

After the Chancellor's departure from Valladolid, it came to my knowledge that the chief provision suggested by him was that the Emperor should give the investiture to the Duke of Milan for the sake of encouraging the population of Lombardy against the French, and to satisfy the other Italian powers.

Before quitting Valladolid for Tordesillas the Chancellor addressed a memorandum to this effect to the Emperor and the Council, and received an answer, purporting that all his fellow ministers approved it. He therefore departed with the certain hope of carrying his point, especially because some days previously Don Juan Manuel took leave of the Emperor, resigning his post of privy councillor on the plea of advanced years, so that he was compelled to take rest and renounce business; but in my opinion he resigned because he found he had less authority than he considered his due.

When the Chancellor arrived in person at Tordesillas and discussed this measure at the council board, all the ministers were unanimous, so it was reported that the deed of investiture had been drawn and that the document would be transmitted by this present courier. I hear that the Chancellor's grandson, Mons. de Traponis, purposes conveying it to the Duke of Milan himself.

1524.

Being acquainted with these facts, and knowing that Don Juan Manuel was absent, I determined to return to Tordesillas and give the Milanese secretary to understand that, in accordance with the injunctions of the State, I had a hand in the business.

I had intended to set out tomorrow, the 7th, but yesterday, the 5th, the Chancellor unexpectedly returned. In the course of conversation with him, in order to learn how the affair stood, and to be able to tell the Milanese secretary that I had broached the topic, I said, "I have heard that the Emperor proposes to give investiture to the Duke of Milan, a measure which would encourage the population of Lombardy, and render the rest of Italy grateful."

The Chancellor answered, making rather a wry mouth, "Nothing came of it."* He said nothing more; so I infer there is difficulty in conceding this investiture.

Valladolid, 6th November 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Nov. 18.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 305,
St. Mark's
Library.

894. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Was told today by the Chancellor that the Emperor was at a palace called the Pardo, a place convenient for the chase, distant two leagues from Madrid. No mention whatever is made of the quartan ague, a proof that it continues as usual.

Tomorrow will commence his journey to Madrid with the Chancellor.

Valladolid, 18th November 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Nov. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 180.

895. ANTONIO SURIAN, Podestà of Brescia, to the SIGNORY.

His very great friend, Dom. Richard Pace, the English ambassador, has arrived at Brescia from Mantua, and is lodged in his palace. Brescia, 23rd November. Registered by Sanuto on the 25th.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 182.

896. The SAME to the SAME.

The English ambassador, Pace, is still lodged in the palace. In the past night his (Surian's) wife gave birth to a son; will have him christened by the Signory's Captain-General the Duke of Urbino, and by the English ambassador Pace, and no others.

Dated 23rd November, at the 13½ hour. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 183.

897. REPORT concerning RICHARD PACE, the ENGLISH AMBASSADOR, communicated to the SIGNORY by ANTONIO SURIAN.

The Rev. ambassador Pace, who has lodged in my house during the last two days, departed this morning at daybreak, and rode to Logrado (sic), where he dined with the Duke of Bourbon, and having now returned, tells me as follows:

That the Duke of Bourbon, having returned from Soncino, says that the Viceroy told him he should not come to Brescia either today or tomorrow.

* "S. Mña. me rispose, constringendo uno poco il volto, non è stato nulla."

1524.

The reason why the Duke chose to confer with Pace was, that having understood that Pace was to return forthwith to England, he wished him to inform his King of the state of the Imperial affairs in the Milanese, thus, that within five or seven days the Imperialists would take the field with 10,000 lansquenets, 6,500 Spanish infantry returned from the expedition in Provence, 5,000 Italian infantry, 1,200 spears, and 1,500 light horse, which they have between the Ghiara d'Adda, Lodi, and Cremona.

His firm hope is that the Signory's troops will quickly take the field and join his command.

To this effect they have sent to Venice, and are daily expecting a favorable reply from the State, being confirmed in their hope because the Signory has constantly given them their word and firm promises that they will not fail.

Whether the Signory come forward or not, the Imperialists will take the field with from 20,000 to 22,000 infantry, 1,200 spears, and 1,500 light horse, and will march to Pavia to raise the siege, risking their lives for the defence of the Duke of Milan and the honour of the Emperor. They will also send some troops towards Marignano to threaten Milan and create a stir there.

The 4,000 lansquenets demanded by Bourbon heretofore, who have been with the Emperor during the last two years, are now being sent by him for the expedition against Provence, and Bourbon has ordered them to land in Languedoc, to harass those borders and do as much mischief as possible.

Bourbon likewise said that they would not fail to attack France in some other quarter, without however explaining himself, and appearing indeed to have as yet no proof of the fact.

Whether the French undertake the Neapolitan expedition or not, the Viceroy will by no means decamp or renounce his present enterprise, for if he is able to liberate the Milanese, the invaders of Naples, whether they succeed or not, will of necessity fare badly; and on the other hand, the loss of the Milanese [by the Imperialists?] would entail that of Naples.

Concerning the advices about the Pope and his alliance with France, the report is general, but the Imperialists do not believe it.

It is true the Duke of Albany has passed the Po with the troops, accompanied by Giovanni de' Medici, who has become French, but not (they believe) by the will of the Pope.

With regard to the reported articles of this agreement, such as the marriage between the King's daughter and the son of the Magnifico Lorenzino, the whole proceeds from the Datary [Matteo Giberti, Bishop of Verona], who wishes it, but it has not been concluded.

When the French crossed the Po Cardinal Salviati wrote apologetic letters to the Duke of Milan and the Imperialists, assuring them that this march did not proceed from ill will on the part of the Pope, as they would soon be convinced, and that they were therefore not to take the thing amiss; so the Emperor's commanders-in-chief believe the Pope to be still neutral.

The Imperialists immediately sent the Abbot of Nagera back to Rome to ascertain the Pope's intention in this matter, and to learn thoroughly whether he is French or not.

1524.

Pace is to go to Inspruck to the Archduke Ferdinand, and confidently hopes that he will make an ample demonstration by aiding the Imperialists with a good supply of troops. Pace says they will have no lack of money, as their friends will write to them to raise as many troops as possible, hinting but not affirming that they will be supplied with money by his English King. I do not know whether this is credible.

Pace assured me that on arriving in England, whither he is riding post, he will not cease urging his King to make a powerful demonstration by invading France, at the latest in the spring, and taking the command in person. He added bushels of bravadoes (sachi de grande bravarie).

He (Pace) says that the Duke of Bourbon has requested him to acquaint the King of England with all this discourse, and with this account of the Milanese affairs, beseeching his Majesty to ponder well how important it would be for him were the French to prosper in Lombardy, making themselves masters of the duchy of Milan and of the kingdom of Naples, and consequently of all Italy, as such would be the result; and how much it matters to England that France should not become so powerful; wherefore the King should not brook such injury, and provide against it betimes.

[Italian.]

Nov. 29.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 306,
St. Mark's
Library.

898. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Arrived at Madrid with the Chancellor on the 27th.

On the 28th, the day of the Emperor's quartan ague, he chose to hunt at the Pardo. In the evening the Archbishop of Capua arrived unexpectedly; so late today the Emperor returned here.

Madrid, 29th November 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Dec. 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 307,
St. Mark's
Library.

899. The SAME to the SAME.

On the evening of the 29th the Emperor sent for the Archbishop of Capua, who went to the palace accompanied by the Florentine ambassador [Giovanni Corsi].

In reply to the Emperor's inquiries, Schomberg said he was sent by the Pope, and that he came by desire likewise of the King of France.

"What!" said the Emperor, "now that the King of France has got Milan, he wants peace?"

The Archbishop replied, "Sire! he is more desirous of it now than ever."

From Schomberg himself I heard that, amongst other reasons assigned by him in favour of peace, he represented that both in Italy and Germany there are great embarrassments, and that they had perhaps been contrived by the Emperor's brother, the Archduke Ferdinand.*

Schomberg also proposed to the Emperor a congress at Avignon, to which France might send some such person as Robertet.

* "Et forsi per un suo fratello carnale erano sta manegiati."

1524.

With regard to England, Schomberg told me there would be difficulty on account of Wolsey, who chose to do everything himself. He then mentioned Pace, but added, "I don't approve of him, he is too vehement."* After this, he mentioned the name of Thomas More, with whom I have been acquainted both in Flanders and in England, and who is in fact learned and amiable.†

On behalf of the Emperor, he said he knew not whom to propose.

I remarked that the stipulation of a truce appeared to me as difficult as that of peace, when Schomberg rejoined, "But these delegates might also negotiate the peace."

On the 30th of November, St. Andrew's Day, I presented myself to the Emperor, and found him looking well, and well disposed; offered congratulations accordingly, and was received graciously. The Emperor appointed me an audience for the 2nd of December, the morrow of his expected ague fit.

Madrid, 1st December 1524.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Dec. 2.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 308,
St. Mark's
Library.

900. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

On the 6th ultimo acquainted them with all I had been able to elicit concerning the investiture of the duchy of Milan.

After the departure of the post, I was informed by the Milanese secretary that it conveyed the investiture to the Duke on certain conditions, but the Emperor's minister did not choose the matter to be known until after his acceptance of them. The Imperialists demand 800,000 ducats payable by instalments, and they also want the county of Asti for the Duke of Bourbon.

After the arrival of the Court at Madrid the Milanese secretary requested me to speak to the Emperor on the subject, the Chancellor having urged him to do so; and after consideration I deemed it fitting to satisfy him. The Emperor replied in general terms, to avoid the point, but the expression of his countenance and his gestures were gracious, neither adverse nor repulsive, but doubtful and irresolute.

Knowing that this would give great pleasure to the Chancellor, I communicated it to him, and twice he made me repeat the Emperor's rejoinder.

As the Comendador Mayor [of Castile, Don Juan de Padilla,] seemed dissatisfied with the Pope, saying "He could do much if he chose," I endeavoured to justify the Papal policy.

With regard to the loss of Milan, the Imperialists complain of the Duke, and say that had he made due provision and gone thither, the city would have held out.

The Florentine ambassador [Giovanni Corsi] was informed by Schomberg that the object of Wolsey's negotiations with the French was to compel the Emperor to accept terms of peace with King Francis.

Madrid, 2nd December 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

* "Poy disse, 'il Paceo,' ma subgiunse, 'è troppo vehemente, non mi piace.'"

† "Et è in vero docto et gentile."

1524.

Dec. 2.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 309,
St. Mark's
Library.

901. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Account of his audience of the Emperor on that morning. The Emperor listened to him graciously and attentively, and then said that his suggestions should have his consideration.

Madrid, 2nd December 1524.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

Dec. 4.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 310,
St. Mark's
Library.

902. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Yesterday the Archbishop of Capua had his first long conference with the Emperor.

A very great friend of mine [Giovanni Corsi?], to whom Schomberg unbosoms himself more freely than with any one at the Imperial Court, told me in the strictest confidence that Schomberg had counselled the Emperor first of all to take for wife the sister of the King of Portugal on two accounts; the one, that he might speedily have offspring to inherit so many realms; the other, because he would thus obtain a considerable sum of money as dower.

Schomberg also told the Emperor that the marriage of the daughter of the King of England would never take place either with his Majesty nor yet with France, as although the King of England might desire it, his subjects choose to have a King of their own, and not an alien, and that in time of war the English make use of their Princess as of an owl, with which to lure birds. The Emperor, not understanding the simile, inquired what he meant by "the owl," and when Schomberg explained it he laughed heartily, and seemed not to disapprove the hint.*

Schomberg next suggested another marriage to the Emperor, for the adjustment of affairs in Germany, and said it would be well to marry Eleanor, Queen Dowager of Portugal, the promised wife of Bourbon, to the Count Palatine, though I do not believe him to mean the Elector, but the Count Frederick, who was in Spain of yore, and is well known to the late Venetian ambassador there, Francesco Cornaro.† Thirdly, he proposed marrying the daughter of the Queen Dowager of Portugal by her consort the late King, to one of the sons of the King of France.

In the course of the conference Schomberg said to the Emperor, "Your Majesty will consult with your Council, and form such resolve as shall seem fit to you."

To this the Emperor replied, "Don't suppose that I now communicate everything to the Council; the truth is, that whilst Mons. de Chièvres lived he then ruled me, and would to God that he were now alive, as I know that he was prudent."‡

* In Italy, and at Dunstable in Bedfordshire, to this day, owls are used for the purpose of luring larks and other small birds, but apparently the sport was unknown in Spain or Flanders, and Schomberg had to describe it to Charles V.

† Count Frederick was the younger brother of the reigning Count Palatine, whom he succeeded. He it was who in 1519 went to Spain as chief of the deputation appointed by the Princes of the Empire to congratulate Charles V. on his election. The reigning Count Palatine, Louis IV., had a son, who seems to have died in childhood.

‡ "Al che Cesare li respose. 'Non pensate che Io comunichi hora ogni cosa, al Consiglio; vero è che quando Mons. di Chièvres viveva, che all'hora me governava, et Dio volesse che hora fusse vivo, perchè cognoscho l'era prudente.'" 1524.

Schomberg also told my friend that he did not believe that any of his proposals had been communicated by the Emperor either to the Chancellor or to the Council, and that the Governor of Bresse, who visited him, Schomberg, was sent, he supposes, by Gattinara to elicit something, of which the Archbishop said he became aware immediately.

Schomberg had a second audience of the Emperor, which lasted two hours, on that same evening of the 3rd.

The Florentine ambassador told me that Schomberg would go away dissatisfied, perceiving the Imperialists to be in favour of war rather than of peace; adding, "It is impossible to make peace and save the Duke of Milan, and this Chancellor chooses at any rate to save him. The Archbishop says that he has ruined the Emperor, and will do so utterly."

The Florentine ambassador also said that the Archbishop wants the Imperialists to send Mons. de la Chau to the proposed conference, he in the first place having an interview with Madame, the mother of the King of France, and then proceeding to Rome or wherever the delegates might be convoked, as La Chau was agreeable personally to Madame, and also to the Archbishop of Bari. The ministers, however, seem not to choose to send any fresh envoy soever; and the Chancellor wrote a reply to Schomberg's proposal, purporting that the Emperor could not treat either peace or truce without the consent of the King of England and the Duke of Bourbon. So Schomberg remains ill satisfied, though as yet he has not received a positive answer.

According to report La Chau is a French partisan and venal, so it is undesirable this mission should be confided to him.

Madrid, 4th December 1524.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

Dec. 6.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 311,
St. Mark's
Library.

903. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

This morning the Florentine ambassador said to me, "The Pope in the end must of necessity remain at enmity with the Imperialists, for they will either conquer in Italy, or be conquered. If victorious, they will hold him in no account, considering that they gained the day without his assistance."

He then added that Schomberg would go through France to England. I remarked that as no fresh agreement had been stipulated at Madrid, the journey to England appeared to me superfluous. The ambassador replied, "You say true, but you know the English well, and are aware how strange they would think it if the Archbishop came hither without going to them."

Madrid, 6th December 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Dec. 6.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 312,
St. Mark's
Library.

904. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

The Archbishop of Capua will take leave of the Emperor this evening, depart tomorrow morning, and go through France to England, unless the French prevent him.

Madrid, 6th December 1524.

[Italian, 1 page.]

1524.

Dec. 18.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 313,
St. Mark's
Library.

905. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Archbishop of Capua departed early on the morning of the 7th for France, and after conferring there with Madame [Louise] will proceed to England.

Letters were subsequently received at Madrid, dated London the 10th November, informing the ministers that the King had sent the mandate for the truce to Rome, and that in England they were acquainted with the capture of Milan by the French. The Imperialists resent this adhesion to the truce, seeing that before that event the King of England was so adverse to it.

The quartan ague still molests the Emperor.

Madrid, 18th December 1524.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Dec. 19.

906. ANTONIO SURIAN, Podestà of Brescia, to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 256.

Gives an account of the christening on the 18th of his son, who received the names of Angelo Joseph Nicholas. Mentions who the sponsors were; among them the English ambassador, Richard Pace, who stood by proxy.*

Brescia, 19th December. Registered by Sanuto on the 21st.

[Italian.]

A.D. 1525.

1525.

Jan.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 364.

907. CARLO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador at the Court of Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria, to the STATE.

In the duchy of Wurtemberg, belonging to the Archduke, some 8,000 had risen and raised flags, styling themselves "Defensores Scripturæ Evangelicæ;" they are Lutheran. So the Archduke has been obliged to send for the defence of his own territory the 4,000 foot and 600 horse destined by him for Italy, and he is daily intent on raising money.

Inspruck, ——. Registered by Sanuto, 27th January.

[Italian.]

Jan. 2.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 314,
St. Mark's
Library.

908. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Emperor is not yet free from his quartan ague, though it has so much diminished, that the paroxysms do not last more than two hours and a half, and he goes frequently to the Pardo into a forest to hunt.

The Queen of Portugal, the bride [Katharine of Austria], is preparing to join her husband, though still at Tordesillas with her mother [Queen Juana]. She will be accompanied by the Duke of Bejar and the Bishop of Sigüenza.

Madrid, 2nd January 1525.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

* "Il commesso dil Orator Pazeo Anglico." In "State Papers," Vol. i. p. 156, it is stated that Pace was at Trent on the 26th of January. He seems to have quitted Brescia at the close of November.

1525.

Jan. 7.

Misti
Consiglio X.,
v. xlvii. p. 119,
tergo.

909. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the VENETIAN PROVEDITORS GENERAL.

This morning received letters from their ambassador at Rome, dated the 4th. The Pope had concluded and signed peace with the most Christian King; he was to notify it on that day in consistory, and had already made the announcement to the Duke of Sessa (whom it perplexed and dissatisfied greatly), and to the English ambassador [John Clerk]. His Holiness would write briefs to the Christian Princes and to the Signory, exhorting them to suspend hostilities, and make peace.

Ayes, 20. Noes, 2. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Jan. 9.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 315,
St. Mark's
Library.

910. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 2nd instant the Queen of Portugal set out from Tordesillas to join her consort.

The Queen [Juana], her mother, although recourse was had to many crafty devices for the sake of tranquillizing her, witnessed the departure from a corridor (uno corrido), where she remained one whole day and a night; after which, of her own accord, she entered her chamber and took to her bed, remaining thus for two days; and no wonder, for this daughter was her solace. At present it seems that she is somewhat pacified.

Madrid, 9th January 1525.

P.S., dated the 10th.—Three caravels have arrived at Seville from the Indies. They bring 20,000 gold pieces for the Emperor, and 200 "marche" of pearls. It is said that many other caravels are expected with a quantity of gold.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

Jan. 9.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 316,
St. Mark's
Library.

911. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Has been informed by the Florentine ambassador that the Chancellor told him he believed that at any rate the Emperor would conclude his marriage with the Princess Isabella of Portugal, as the Imperialists have heard for certain through several channels that the Princess of England is to marry the King of Scotland.

Madrid, 9th January 1525.

[Italian, ½ page.]

Jan. 10.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 110,
tergo.

912. LEAGUE between CLEMENT VII. and FRANCIS I.

Motion made in the Senate, for a reply to be given to the Imperial and Milanese ambassadors.

Heard their recent request made on behalf of the Viceroy, for the junction of the Venetian forces with those of the Emperor. Have lately received letters from the Signory's ambassador at Rome, dated the 5th instant, announcing the peace concluded by the Pope with the most Christian King, reserving a most honorable place for his Imperial Majesty, the most Serene King of England, the most Serene Ferdinand, the Signory, and for the other Christian powers. Will read to their Lordships his Holiness's brief, whereby not only does he exhort the Signory to be at peace, but urges them to exhort their other confederates to do the like.

1525.

Ayes, 156. Noes, 8. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 70 lines.]

Jan. 15.

913. NEWS from CREMA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxvii. p. 232.

On the evening of the 12th there arrived the merchant Ambrosio Tercino. On 31st December he quitted Lyons, where it was said that a marriage had been made between the daughter of the King of England and the son of the King of France, on which account Mons. d'Alençon was going to England.

[Italian.]

Jan. 17.

914. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 317,
St. Mark's
Library.

The Emperor chose to hunt so indefatigably, curing himself thus in his own fashion, that the quartan ague has become double; a casualty ill suited to current events.

Madrid, 17th January 1525.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Jan. 23.

915. The SAME to the SAME.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 318,
St. Mark's
Library.

The Emperor's ordinary quartan ague has subsided, that of the extra day remaining; but as he now takes more care of himself, the physicians hope he will recover in the spring.

Madrid, 23rd January 1525.

[Italian, $\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

Jan. 26.

916. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 321,
St. Mark's
Library.

I have read a letter written from Rome by the Datary Giberti to the Archbishop of Capua, and shown to me by the Florentine ambassador [Corsi]. Amongst the reasons assigned by him for the peace made by the Pope with France is the following:—

In England Cardinal Wolsey despatched Mons. de Beaurain with a single word, namely, that his King would not give any assistance for the affairs of Italy, nor did he care even should the Emperor lose Lombardy. Giberti also wrote that the 50,000 ducats deposited by the King of England at Viterbo had all been remitted back by bills of exchange.

Still more to justify his policy, Giberti asserts that had the Pope chosen to act from interested motives, and not for the sake of laying the foundation of a general peace, he should rather have declared for the Emperor, as the Viceroy [Lannoy] made him very great offers, viz., to place the investiture of Milan in his hands, and on the conclusion of the war against the French to give him Ferrara; and as wife for Ippolito de' Medici, son of the late Julian, he promised the Pope the Emperor's [natural] daughter, born at Valladolid 18 months ago, creating him Duke of Ferrara; whilst to the son of the late 1525.

Lorenzino he promised the duchy of Bari. As security he pledged himself to place Gaeta and Taranto in the hands of the Pope.*

Madrid, 26th January 1525.

[Italian, 1 page.]

Jan. 28.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 322,
St. Mark's
Library.

917. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

I was told yesterday by the Florentine ambassador, that having justified the Pope's proceedings to the Emperor, in conformity with the instructions received by him from Rome in date of the 6th instant, the Emperor replied to him:—

"Ambassador! I can but take in good part what the Pope does, but at the same time, in humble language, I cannot but express the feelings of my heart.

"The Pope is well aware how, being a youth, and scarcely knowing what I was about, I entered on this war for him alone. I do not say for Pope Leo, but for him, for he ruled Pope Leo; nor were the mutual injuries between the King of France and myself of such a nature as to preclude adjustment. But at his instigation [i.e., of Cardinal Giulio de' Medici, prime minister of Leo X.] I waged the war, and he [the present Pope] has had very good proof how far one and the other of us may be trusted.

"By this war I have lost vast treasure, much soldiery, and my friends; and, what distresses me more, great part of my honour, greatly to the peril of my soul; though never could I have believed that the Pope would act thus, and detach himself from me.

"Notwithstanding this, however, I do not despair;† I do not purpose yielding to my enemy; nay, should the necessity arise, I would peril all my realms, and I trust in God that he will assist me, as he has done hitherto; nor ought I to distrust Fortune, who has hitherto favoured me. I also hope that, doing as I shall do, the Pope will again espouse my cause."‡

The Florentine ambassador also told me that there was a report at the Court of disputing the Pope's election, on the score of illegitimate birth.

Madrid, 28th January 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

Feb. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii, p. 395.

918. ANTONIO SURIAN, Podestà of Brescia, to ———.

Today I conferred with the agent of the King of England, and captain of 300 horse, Gregorio da Cassal, who performed the journey [from England] in nine days. § He brought a commission for Pace

* To the facts contained in this last paragraph Guicciardini makes no allusion, although evidently well acquainted with the correspondence of Giovanni Corsi, through whom they reached the knowledge of Gasparo Contarini.

† The Emperor's fortitude was not to be shaken either by the quartan ague, which had been shattering his frame ever since the 22nd of August, nor yet by political reverses of every description; it was rewarded by the victory of Pavia. The Emperor's biographers have not alluded to the state of his health at this critical period.

‡ The Emperor's speech to Giovanni Corsi, the Florentine ambassador, is quoted by Guicciardini (vol. iii. p. 454), but there are some additional touches in Contarini's account of it which appear to me valuable and worthy of publication.

§ By a passage in a letter from Wolsey to Henry VIII., date Westminster, 12 February, this account of Surian's is confirmed (see State Papers, vol. i. p. 157).

1525.

to go and reside at Venice, and in short exert himself that the Signory might fulfil the promises made to the League, viz., to send troops, &c. He is also the bearer of an order for the expenditure in favour of the undertaking, of 50,000 ducats, which the King of England has in Italy in the hands of the Bishop of Bath, his ambassador at Rome; and as Pace had pledged himself to subsidize lansquenets, &c., and to disburse on that account a certain amount of money, Cassal says he has brought bills of exchange to redeem this pledge; so that in short, besides all other liability and cost, the King of England is now expending 50,000 ducats. This, however, I do not believe, and consider all these statements to be frauds devised for the sake of compelling the Signory to side with the Imperialists. I have also heard from Cassal that the Bailli of Rouen has arrived in England as ambassador from the King of France. The Genoese, Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, has also for many days been residing, although secretly, in England on behalf of the King of France.

Cassalys moreover said there were now ambassadors in England from the King of Scotland to arrange the peace, one of whom was gone back to Scotland to receive orders for including the King of France in this peace. About this there was some difficulty, and possibly the new ambassador from France was come to arrange matters.

Brescia, 2nd February, at the fifth hour of the night. Registered by Sanuto on the 4th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 400.

919. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador with the Duke of Milan, to —.

Sir Gregory Cassalys arrived in the past night. He quitted England on the 18th of January, and brings letters from Cardinal Wolsey to the Duke of Milan, such as the Duke wished, for the English ambassador Pace is going post to the Signory. Report at Cremona that the Duke of Albany was still in the territory of Sienna.

Cremona, 3rd February. Registered by Sanuto on the 5th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 6.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 323,
St. Mark's
Library.

920. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Was told yesterday by the Florentine ambassador that the Emperor, when discussing current events with some of his gentlemen, expressed himself as follows:—

"I am expecting bad news both from Milan and from Naples; but I care not the least in the world (ma non ne facio un conto al mondo). I shall go into Italy, and thus have a fairer opportunity for obtaining my own, and taking my revenge on those who may have wronged me, most especially on that poltroon the Pope. Some day or other, perhaps, Martin Luther will become a man of worth."

I deem this language worthy of much consideration, above all as coming from the lips of the Emperor, who is very reserved in speech;

1525.

but in my opinion the whole proceeds from the talk and fancy of the Chancellor, who often discourses unreasonably

* Madrid, 6th February 1525.

[Italian, $\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

Feb. 6.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 406.

921. FRANCESCO DA CÀ DA PESARO, Podestà, and NICOLÒ VENIER, Captain of Padua, to the SIGNORY.

The Reverend Pace arrived here at the house of his King's nephew [Reginald Pole]. He is on his way to Venice as English ambassador to the Signory. He departed this morning.

Padua, 6th February (evening). Registered by Sanuto on the 7th.

Note by Sanuto.—Orders were given to send 20 noblemen to meet him at Fusina, and to prepare his lodging at S. Georgio Maggiore.

[Italian.]

Feb. 7.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 324,
St. Mark's
Library.

922. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Mons. de Beaurain arrived at Madrid from England on the 1st, with letters dated the 3rd of December, on which day he quitted the English Court. He brings word to the Emperor that the King of England says he has no obligation whatever to aid the war in Italy, nor will he interfere in that undertaking. With regard to waging war on France, he is always ready to invade that country provided a brisk attack be made from Spain, but he will not stir until he first see them in reality make war from the Spanish frontier.

Mons. de Beaurain represented to the King of England that the Emperor was willing that any conquests made in Italy in any direction—even of places belonging to himself, and although moreover obtained by his own troops,—should appertain to the King of England provided he make war on France and lend the Emperor 200,000 ducats, the Duke of Bourbon offering to contribute 50,000 of his own; which proposal the King of England rejected.

Three periods have passed without any return of the Emperor's quartan ague; so it is hoped that by observing a good regimen, and as the spring is now at hand, he may be thoroughly cured.

Madrid, 7th February 1525.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Feb. 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 409.

923. RICHARD PACE in VENICE.

Today the Rev. Richard Pace, English ambassador, who was in this town heretofore, and comes now from the Archduke, arrived at Venice by way of Padua. Some noblemen were sent as far as Fusina to meet him. His lodging was prepared at S. Georgio Maggiore, in the Signory's house, and his expenses were defrayed on the first evening.

[Italian.]

Feb. 8.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 412.

924. RICHARD PACE, Ambassador in Venice.

Today the English ambassador, the Rev. Richard Pace, came into the College. He came from Trent by way of Padua to visit the nephew of his King, who is studying there. Pace has had fresh 1525.

credentials from his King again to reside as ambassador with the Signory, he having been here in that capacity when the league with the Emperor was concluded. He was dressed in a long gown of black satin lined with sables, and accompanied by Andrea Badoer, knight, Gabriel Moro knight, and some doctors and other noblemen in scarlet.

When he entered the College the Doge met him at the foot of the platform, caressing him. When seated he presented the letter of his King and uttered a few unimportant phrases.

[Italian.]

Feb. 9. 925. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvii. p. 415. Today the English ambassador Pace came into the College, repeating what he said yesterday, and assuring the Signory that his King bore the Emperor love and good will, would aid the undertaking and the Duke of Milan against the French, and had desired that the 50,000 ducats at Florence should be sent into the Imperial camp; so the Signory likewise ought not to fail, &c. The Doge gave him words for words.

[Italian.]

Feb. 10. 926. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvii. pp. 433, 434. The Duke of Albany is at Monte Rosolo, 20 miles from Rome, and is coming to kiss the Pope's feet.

The Pope told me that perceiving the Imperialists to be prosperous, and in possession of 200,000 ducats; it being also said that the King of England would invade France, so that the King of France must renounce the Italian expedition; he wished to make a triple league between himself, the Signory, and the Florentines, so as at any rate to have the advantage (per potersi prevaler.)

The Lord Albert of Carpi told me it would be well for the Signory to send money to Rome for the despatch of the French troops on their march to the kingdom of Naples; that is to say, that the State should accommodate the King of France with 20,000 crowns.

Rome, 10th February. Registered by Sanuto on the 13th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 10. 927. FRANCESCO DI GONZAGA to ———.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvii. p. 436. The English ambassador has received an order from England to pay 50,000 ducats to the Imperialists on demand, and it seems there are strong letters concerning the ill will of the King of England to France.

Rome, 10th February. Registered by Sanuto on the 13th.

[Italian.].

Feb. 10. 928. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the STATE.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xxxvii. pp. 511, 512. The Bohemians agree to obey the Roman Church. They have mustered from 60,000 to 70,000 men for the recovery of certain castles seized by the Duke of Saxony and others, to which effect they are 1525.

instigated by the Papists (Pontificiis), not so much for that purpose, as to have an opportunity for making them march against the Lutherans.

Buda, 10th February. Registered by Sanuto, 27th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 11.

929. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 425.

Today the English ambassador Pace came into the College. He urged the junction of the armies, and requested the Signory not to infringe the articles stipulated through his mediation with the Emperor, assuring the State that such was the wish of his King, with other words on this subject. The Doge answered in general terms, and said it was not time to make any stir, until it should be seen what course the armies would take, as they were so near to each other.

[Italian.]

Feb. 11.

930. REPORT of ANTONIO ROMANELLO, who has⁴ been in the Spanish Camp.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. pp.
426-428.

On Friday the 50,000 ducats sent by the King of England arrived, and they gave half a rate of pay to the lansquenets.

[Italian.]

Feb. 14.

931. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 436.

Today the College gave audience to the four ambassadors, namely, Don Alfonso Sanchez (Caracciolo being indisposed), Pace the English ambassador, and the two from Milan [Taberna and Bilio]. The Imperialists made a long speech, urging the junction of the troops, that is to say, to march them at least to the banks of the Adda, as the allies would certainly be victorious, &c. Pace followed in the like sense, saying his King is the maintainer of this league, which therefore ought to be observed, and persuading the Signory to effect this junction. The ambassadors also presented a writing, requesting it might be read in the Senate. The Doge replied.

[Italian.]

Feb. 15.

932. PACE'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 442.

This morning the English ambassador came into the College, and exhibited letters from his King written to the English ambassador at Rome (who forwarded them to Pace), desiring him to assure the Pope that the King bore the Emperor good will, the peace and league between them being such as they always were, and that he will not swerve from this friendship, and means to be against France.

[Italian.]

Feb. 15.

933. RICHARD PACE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 444.

Motion made in the Senate by the counsellors, chiefs of the 40, and the sages, to pay the duty on ten kilderkins (anfore) of wine for the English ambassador.

Ayes, 146. Noes, 25. Neutrals, 4.

1525.

Feb. 15.

934. IMPORT PERMIT for PACE.Senato Terra,
v. xxxiii. p. 160.

As it is fitting to do by the Rev. Richard Pace, ambassador of the King of England, who has returned to this city, as is customary with regard to other ambassadors,—Put to the ballot that he be allowed to bring into Venice for the use of his household 10 kilderkins of wine duty free, the duty to be placed to the account of the Signory.

Ayes, 146. Noes, 25. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian, 7 lines.]

Feb. 16.

Deliberazioni.
Senato Secreta,
v. I. p. 117.935. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador at Rome.

On the 9th instant acquainted him with the arrival at Venice of the Reverend Richard Pace, and of his statement in the name of the King of England and of Cardinal Wolsey, together with the Signory's reply.

Although aware the Pope is intent on putting an end to the war, yet no means should be left untried to bring about peace. Desire him (the ambassador) to remind the Pope of the state of affairs in Lombardy. The Imperialists are more determined than ever on persevering in the war, especially being encouraged by the King of England through the mission of Sir Gregory Casal; and it should be remembered that although the most Christian King is stronger than the Imperialists, and has heart to persevere, yet is it no longer the depth of winter, which prevented him from being attacked by England, and in the spring such accidents might befall France through the Emperor, the King of England, and Flanders, as to compel his most Christian Majesty to renounce the attack on the duchy of Milan, and attend to what matters more to him; in which case his Holiness will comprehend the perilous condition in which he and we should find ourselves. Request him to take such steps betimes as are necessary for putting an end to the war, and above all for the safety of the mutual territories.

Have received the packet of letters sent by him on the 10th for delivery to Sir Gregory Casal. As he (the ambassador) mentions that the Pope, believing Casal to be coming in the name of the King of England to deliver a protest to the Signory, has written to his Majesty, persuading him not to molest the State, return thanks therefor to his Holiness. Having understood from the Rev. Richard Pace that on the 6th Sir Gregory Casal quitted the Imperial camp on his way to the Pope, without coming to Venice, retain the packet until assured of his arrival at Rome, when they will immediately return it.

Yesterday morning the ambassadors from the Emperor, from England, and from Milan had audience of us. The Imperialist most strongly urged the junction of our forces, as did the Rev. Richard Pace, declaring that on us depended the immediate release of the

* This letter of warning is remarkable, having been written nine days before the capture of Francis I. at Pavia.

1525.

Milanese. In reply recapitulated the causes which compel the State to delay.

[Italian, 82 lines.]

Feb. 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 508.

936. CARLO CONTARINI, Venetian Ambassador with Archduke Ferdinand, to the STATE.

His Highness is still molested in the duchy of Wurtemberg, and has sent thither one of the Dukes of Bavaria. The affairs of the Lutherans prosper more than ever, and since the agreement between the Pope and the most Christian King, the Archduke is held in small account.

Inspruck, 16th February. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 17.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
File no. 5.

937. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Perceive by his letter of the 5th what the Pope said to him about sending to make a levy of Switzers, wishing the Signory to defray one-third of the cost, requesting a reply, &c. To tell his Holiness that for defence of the mutual territories they are willing to pay one-third of the stipend required for 10,000 Switzers, the other two-thirds to be paid by the Pope and the Florentines. But as this Swiss reinforcement may arrive later than the need requires, considering that the Imperialists are more than ever determined to continue the war, being encouraged by the King of England, and as contrary to the expectation of the State the most Christian King may be compelled to renounce the present undertaking by reason of an attack on France, the Pope may imagine his own perilous situation and that of the Signory. Approve, therefore, highly of the proposal made to his Holiness by the Cardinals in consistory about raising troops, most especially perceiving that the envoys and offers of peace could effect nothing. Are of opinion that it would be very desirable for the Pope to increase his forces speedily, and to make the Florentines do the like. The allied armies of the Pope, the Signory, and the Florentines, if mustered immediately in a suitable position, would cause his Holiness's authority to be more speedily acknowledged and feared.

In his letter of the 10th he enclosed a packet for Sir Gregory Casal. Is to return becoming thanks to his Holiness for the paternal office which he performs constantly for them on every occasion, and to let him know that they have adroitly elicited from the Rev. Richard Pace that Sir Gregory Casal quitted the Imperial camp on the 6th on his way to his Holiness, and is no longer coming to Venice; so they detain the packet until certified of his arrival at Rome, when they will immediately forward it to him.

The ambassadors from the Emperor, England, and Milan had audience lately of the Signory; and first of all the Imperialist urged them very strongly to effect the junction of their forces, the English ambassador declaring in like manner that on them depended 1525.

the immediate delivery of the Milanese. In reply repeated the causes frequently adduced by them for delay.

Ayes, 131. Noes, 35. Neutrals, 17.

[Italian.]

Feb. 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii, p. 508.

938. CARLO CONTARINI to the STATE.

Very great disturbance in Germany. The Duke of Saxony is in the field with many of the free towns, and intends to attack the Dukes of Bavaria and the Cardinal of Salzburg, both of whom have already commenced raising troops. All this proceeds from Martin Luther, because it seems that the Cardinal said the Duke of Saxony was a heretic, as also did the Dukes of Bavaria; so that some stir will be witnessed.

Inspruck, 20th February. Registered by Sanuto, 27th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 24.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 328,
St. Mark's
Library.

939. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the preceding day had an interview with the English ambassador [Sampson]. Heard from him that his letters from England were dated the 3rd instant.

He said that the Chancellor of the Duke of Alençon had arrived at Calais on a mission from the King of France to the King of England, at whose court there were three Scottish ambassadors.

In the course of conversation gathered from Sampson that so long ago as when the King of France came into Italy [October 1524], he, by means of Gioachino [Passano], gave hopes of good terms and conditions to the King of England, but after making peace with the Pope [4th January 1525] he changed his tone. Sampson said that therefore should France, after obtaining the Milanese, condescend to a fair arrangement, he trusted there would be peace; but if the King soar aloft on the strength of the friendship contracted with the Italian powers, Sampson then anticipated that there would assuredly be a greater war than ever, and that the King of England would wage it, not slackly as hitherto, but in earnest, as due.

The Chancellor told him they had good words from England, and that Wolsey exhorts them to fight a battle, promising, if they win, to give them money for the invasion of France, and that if they lose the sum shall be disbursed for the recruitment of the army.

The Florentine ambassador showed him letters from the Papal Nuncio in England, telling him that the King is sending Pace to Rome and to Venice, to urge the junction of the Signory's army with that of the Emperor.

Madrid, 24th February 1525.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

Feb. 25. •

940. BATTLE OF PAVIA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxii, p. 495.

This morning, Saturday, the College having adjourned, and the Doge dining, a post arrived with letters from the Proveditor General, Piero da Cà da Pesaro, dated yesterday at the — hour. On their perusal by the Doge it was known that yesterday the 24th 1525.

the day of St. Matthew the Apostle, the armies gave battle, and the French were routed; they were still fighting. This intelligence was contained in a letter from the Imperial camp, written by Paulo da Bologna, on the 24th, at the — hour. Subsequently another letter arrived from the Proveditor General, dated the 24th hour. Paulo da Bologna was there at Brescia, having quitted the camp on that morning. He says the French army is routed, the King a prisoner and wounded; some say he is dead. The Admiral [Bonnivet] also has been killed.

The Doge sent immediately to notify this news to the Imperial, English, and Milanese ambassadors, who rejoiced and thanked his Serenity.

Note by Sanuto, that all five of the ambassadors, with very great joy and gladness, met together with a numerous company of their attendants, and of the Milanese emigrants, and went to the "Madonna de' Miracoli," to have a very grand "Te Deum" sung, with vocal and instrumental music, the vesper service being also performed in great state.

[Italian.]

Feb. 25.

941. REGINALD POLE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. p. 499.

This evening at Cà Dandolo, rented by the Paduans in Calle delle "Rasse," on the upper floor, the rehearsal took place of a comedy, composed by the Neapolitan Terene* (who dwells at Sta. Marina) for the company of the "Valorosi." The president (signor) of the entertainment was Agostin Foscari. The performance is announced for Carnival Monday, the 27th. Many old men of note were invited [to the rehearsal], and the Papal Legate was there in disguise; the ambassador from Mantua, a cousin (sic) of the King of England, who is staying at Padua [Reginald Pole], and some aged noblemen, but not many, among whom was I, Marin Sanuto. It was a very beautiful comedy, with interludes in verse and music, so that everybody praised it. The rehearsal ended at the seventh hour of the night. Among other things the actors were magnificently clad in brocade and silk, and the scene was admirably arranged, as likewise the hall; and in lieu of reservoirs (ruose)† there were 42 silver basins and ewers.

[Italian.]

Feb. 26.

942. BATTLE OF PAVIA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxvii. pp.
501, 502.

Today the five ambassadors had audience of the College, videlicet, the Imperialists, the Prothonotary Caracciolo and Sanchez, each

* Of this dramatist, Terene, I do not find any mention in Roscoe's list of Neapolitan academicians.

† In the Venetian dialect "roza" signifies a reservoir for irrigation, &c. It may be inferred that after the rehearsal there was a supper, before partaking of which the guests were served with water for their hands. In modern times these "roze" were called "lavelli." A very beautiful reservoir of this description is yet visible in the Palazzo Sanuto alias Vanaxel, at the "Ponte dell' Erbe;" the workmanship of this "lavello" is of the end of the 15th century or beginning of the 16th. There is also a good specimen of a "lavello," thus designated in the Government Departmental Catalogue, in the South Kensington Museum; date about 1500.

1525.

with a doublet of cloth of gold beneath, and a chain round his neck, the English ambassador Pace, and the two ambassadors from the Duke of Milan, Taberna and the Cavalier Bilio. They were joyful and in good spirits, and came with a very numerous retinue of Milanese, resident in Venice, of Genesese of their Adorno faction, and of Spaniards; they numbered about 100. Sanchez said, "You are timid! but we have nevertheless conquered." At length on being seated, Caracciolo spoke sagely and suitably, rejoicing at the victory and at the capture of the King of France, which would give peace and quiet to Italy. He said that in like manner as the Emperor, now 24 years old, was born on St. Matthew's Day, that day being one of great ceremony in Spain and throughout his realms, so on that same day had the Almighty given him so great a victory. Caracciolo added that they could have wished that the Signory's forces had been united with the Imperialists, making other sage remarks. The Doge replied that, immediately on hearing the news, the Signory gave notice of it to each of them, and now congratulated them; and with regard to the Venetian forces not having joined, there was good reason for this, as being so near the French, the Imperialists were liable to defeat, in which case those who remained, with the Republic's army, might have served as a reinforcement for the defence of the common territories, and also to guarantee the Signory, who has but this State, and if not guarded, the French might easily have turned their thoughts towards it. The Doge then thanked God for so good a result, which the Signory felt certain would give peace to Italy; and gave assurance of the observance borne by the Republic to the Emperor, the King of England, and the Duke of Milan. His speech was commended by the College.

On their departure the ambassadors asked for some gunpowder with which to make discharges of artillery, and for pitch to make torches with, as during three evenings they mean to have great rejoicings at their dwellings, videlicet, the Imperialists at Cà Zorzi at S. Severo, the English ambassador at S. Georgio Maggiore, and the Milanese at Sta. Giustina in Cà Pasqualigo. A ballot was made accordingly in the College to accommodate them with what they required for this purpose from the Arsenal; so this evening they made rejoicings, firing cannon, illuminating, &c.

[Italian.]

Feb. 26.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 331,
St. Mark's
Library.

943. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Repeats the account of his conversation with Richard Sampson. The ministers of Charles V. now promise themselves more from the King of England than they did during the last few months.

The Emperor is completely freed from his quartan ague.

At Madrid all supplies, whether of men or money, are utterly dormant, and the whole hope of the ministry is that a battle may be fought in Italy.

Madrid, 26th February 1525.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

1525.

Feb. 26.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 28, 29.

944. CARLO CONTARINI to the STATE.

The stir in Germany between the Duke of Saxony and the Cardinal of Salzburg and the Duke of Bavaria is greater than ever. The cause proceeds from the affairs of Martin Luther, because when the Diet was held last year at Nuremberg, the Duke of Bavaria and the Cardinal of Salzburg being invited thither, the Cardinal would not go, saying that he would not be present where heretics were defended and favoured, alluding to the Duke of Saxony. The Duke of Bavaria, on the other hand, went to Nuremberg, and finding himself at a grand banquet given in honour of the Duke of Saxony, meats were brought to table, although it was Friday. The Duke of Bavaria rose, and would not eat, saying publicly that such proceedings were too heretical. Hence arose this enmity. But, what is worse, the subjects of many princes and lords in Germany have rebelled, and will no longer obey or pay them their usual taxes, Saxony favouring them at the instigation of Martin Luther, so that his sect is now in the field 25,000 strong, and they have raised a banner on which is written, "Defensores Libertatis et Evangelicæ Scripturæ," the greater part of these people being [natives] of the free towns, according to report.

However unreasonable these things may appear, has not chosen to omit mentioning them, that the Signory may know the cause of this stir.

Inspruck, 26th February. Registered by Sanuto, 5th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 27.

945. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 10.

In the past night the Pope received letters from the Cardinal Legate Salviati, dated Piacenza, announcing the rout of the French camp and the capture of the most Christian King.

The English ambassador has been to the Pope to tell him that his King will never suffer the Emperor to seize more territory in Italy, and that he is of opinion the Duke of Milan should retain his duchy.

Rome, 27th February. Registered by Sanuto, 1st March.

[Italian.]

March 5.

946. LIST of GREAT PERSONAGES killed at PAVIA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 36, 37.

Francis, brother of the Duke of Lorraine, the English Duke of Suffolk, the White Rose, &c.*

[Italian.]

* In Fynes Moryson's Italy (A.D. 1594, p. 169), in the description of Pavia, is the following paragraph concerning Francis of Lorraine and Richard de la Pole. "Neere that (the castle) is the church of Saint Austine; there I did reade this inscription; written in Latin upon another sepulcher. The French King Francis the First, being taken by Cæsar's army neere Pavia, the 24th of February in the yeere 1525, among other lords, these were slaine: Francis Duke of Lorayne, Richard de la Pole, Englishman and Duke of Suffolk, banished by his tyrant King Henry the Eight. At last Charles Parker of Morley, kinseman of the said Richard, banished out of England for the Catholike faith by Queene Elizabeth, and made bishop here by the bounty of Phillip King of Spain, did out of his small means erect this monument to him."

"In a cloister of the same church is a sepulchre of this Charles Parker, Bishop, deceased in the year 1591."

1525.

March 5.

947. ILLNESS of PACE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 34. Note by Marin Sanuto.—Be it known that Pace, the English ambassador, is sick and unwell. The Signory sent physicians to him to visit him.

[Italian.]

March 5.

948. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 332,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 2nd instant Mons. de Selin (sic), one of the gentleman of the Emperor's chamber, was despatched to England to encourage the King to prosecute the war against France. The ministers now promise themselves more from him than they did previously; though the Chancellor has not so much faith in Wolsey's promises.

Madrid, 5th March 1525.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

March 6.

949. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Senato Mar,
v. xx. p. 146.

Decree of the Senate.

It being very fitting for our interests to have an ambassador with the King of England in these critical times, especially as we have heard that his Majesty wishes for one,—

Put to the ballot, that an honorable ambassador be appointed to the aforesaid King; the nominees to be eligible from any office, even from amongst ambassadors appointed elsewhere; and the person elected to be liable to a penalty of 500 golden ducats, besides all other penalties enacted by this Council against recusants.

The person appointed to receive 140 golden ducats monthly for his expenses, without having to give any account of them to the Signory; and four months' salary in advance (subventionone) to be given him here as usual by the cashier of the Council of Ten. The agent at Venice appointed by the ambassador to receive monthly 140 golden ducats in such form as not to cause the Signory any loss from the rate of exchange.

The ambassador to take with him 11 horses, including the one for his secretary and his servant, and two running footmen, and to depart at such time and with such commission as shall be assigned to him by this Council.

Ayes, 168. Noes, 19. Neutrals, 0.

Elected: Ser Lorenzo Bragadin.

[Italian, 17 lines.]

March 6.

950. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. i. p. 124.

Motion made in the Senate, as above.

Elected: Ser Lorenzo Bragadeno, who refused, there being elected in his stead Ser Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight.

[Italian.]

March 6.

951. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador at Rome.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. i. p. 126.

His letters, of the 2nd and 3rd, received this morning, give them the greatest satisfaction. Commend the Pope's rejection of a league with the Imperialists, and his mission of envoys both to the 1525.

Emperor and the King of England. He will perceive that they have sent ambassadors to the Emperor, and will do the like by the King of England. His Holiness should use all diligence and address to obtain the support of the said most Serene King. It is necessary to send in all haste to the Swiss cantons, to dispose them favorably towards Italy.

P.S.—Have this evening, with the Senate, elected as ambassador to the King of England, their beloved noble Lorenzo Bragadin, late captain of Brescia.

Ayes, 177. Noes, 17. Neutrals, 7.

[Italian, 65 lines.]

March 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 61.

952. GIACOMO CAPINI to ———.

The Duke of Wurtemberg is fighting in earnest for the recovery of his State. He has a great number of troops, because he is favoured by the Lutheran party; and certain princes (signori) of the League of Swabia secretly furnish money for their payment, at the request of Lutherans. The Imperialists at Pavia seem to hold this matter of no importance, and say that when the rout and capture of the most Christian King is known all will vanish into smoke.

Pavia, 8th March. Registered by Sanuto, 13th March.

[Italian.]

March 8.

Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
File no. 1.

953. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta with the intervention of the College.

The ambassador elect to the King of England being unable to depart so immediately (cussi presto), it is necessary in the meanwhile to send a secretary, that he may be with his Majesty at the same time as the Nuncio [Ghinucci] according to the Pope's suggestion.

Put to the ballot, that the College with the chiefs of the Council be authorized to elect one of the Signory's secretaries to proceed to the King with all speed; that he receive for his expenses 60 golden ducats per month, being dispensed from giving any account thereof, and three months' salary in advance before his departure; and that his agents here subsequently receive 60 golden ducats monthly, as aforesaid. Such commission to be given him as shall seem fit to this Council and Junta.

Ayes, 8; 9.

Noes, 7; 7.

Neutrals, 1; 0.

The oath of silence was administered.

[Italian.]

March 9.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreto,
v. l. p. 128

954. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

The nobleman Lorenzo Bragadin having excused himself from going to England on account of personal indisposition, have this evening elected the nobleman Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, late ambassador in Hungary, who immediately and willingly accepted.

[Italian.]

1525.

March 9. 955. CARLO CONTARINI to the STATE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 70.

The disturbances in Germany seem to abate, especially those in Saxony against the Cardinal of Salzburg and the Duke of Bavaria. There still remains the Duke of Wurtemberg, who was expelled his duchy, and who by assistance of the Lutherans has recovered many of his places; but the members of the League of Swabia have taken the field, being bound to maintain the duchy of Wurtemberg for the Archduke Ferdinand. All disturbance will now cease by reason of the rout of Pavia, which has humbled the pride of the Germans, who are averse to the aggrandisement of the Emperor and the Archduke.

Inspruck, 9th March. Registered by Sanuto, 16th March.

[Italian.]

March 12. 956. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 333,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the 10th of March the miraculous and astounding news of the victory obtained by the Imperial army over the French arrived at Madrid. A gentleman, by name Spinalosa, brought the intelligence through France, with a safeconduct received from the King at Pizzighettone on the 1st instant.

I was amongst the first who heard it, and went immediately to the palace, where I found the Emperor in a gallery, walking up and down, conversing with the Chancellor, Mons. de Bresse and Mons. de la Chau.

The Emperor walked seven or eight times from one end of the gallery to the other, he alone speaking the whole time (sempre parlando lei sola). At length, on approaching a window, the Emperor called me. I endeavoured to kiss his hand, which the Emperor would not permit, but received me very graciously. Having listened to my congratulations, which ended with a wish that he might ere long be crowned at Constantinople, he replied, "I thank you for this congratulation. This victory I acknowledge from none but God alone, who knowing my good will, rewards me far beyond my deserts. I could, however, have wished that the Signory's forces had joined mine as becoming."

I apologized for the Republic, saying, amongst other things, that the Pope having warned the Signory not to thwart the negotiation on foot between France and De Lannoy, it was deemed unadvisable to effect the junction.

The Emperor rejoined, "I believe the Republic's intention to have been good, and were it not so, I choose to suppose it good, and hope that for the future the Signory will no longer delay thus, but give ample satisfaction. As for myself, look ye, ambassador,* although many years have perhaps elapsed since any sovereign had such an opportunity as I have for executing his intention, I nevertheless thank God for this opportunity, in order that not only my friends, but my enemies likewise, may know that I never had any other wish but to pacify Christendom and turn my forces against the Infidel."

* "Quanto a me, mirate ambassator."

1525.

I made a brief reply, and again urged the Emperor to let me kiss his hand. This the Emperor declined, but dismissed me very graciously.

On the morrow the Emperor confessed, went processionally to mass, and heard a sermon. He was accompanied by the ambassadors and other personages, and wore a frieze cape and jerkin. He did not choose any sign of rejoicing to be made, and neither by word nor deed evinced the slightest mark of arrogance at such great good fortune.

On the evening of the 11th the Papal Nuncio, Baldassar Castiglione, made his entry into Madrid, and was met in the Emperor's name by the Count of Miranda and two bishops.*

On the 12th I visited the Chancellor. I told him I was sure the Almighty had made him the Emperor's prime minister, in order that being an Italian he might benefit Italy, in like manner as the Lord made Joseph the Hebrew great with Pharaoh King of Egypt for the benefit of his Hebrews. I then endeavoured to justify the Signory's policy.

Gattinara rejoined, "You have spoken to me as to an Italian, and as an Italian will I answer you. We may thank God for having so good a sovereign, for I do not see that either the Pope or the Signory allege any good reason in self excuse. I complain because it seems that you say, the Milanese being invaded, you are not bound to furnish the subsidy. Speaking as a jurist, you are aware that, without any exception, the act of incurring an obligation is optional; but when assumed, its performance becomes necessary."

In reply I observed that the Republic had more at stake than the Emperor, and could not risk a battle. That Pavia being well garrisoned and well supplied with provisions, the King of France would have been routed of himself without any necessity for exposing the armies of the Emperor and of Venice to manifest peril. That therefore the Imperial commanders had either done wrong to run the risk, or must have taken a different view with regard to the plan of the campaign. In conclusion, I quoted the example of Fabius Maximus when opposed to Hannibal.

To this the Chancellor made no reply, but requested me to write to the Signory not to distrust the Emperor's goodness and clemency. I promised compliance, as the counsel of despair, by whomsoever followed, is always perilous.

Madrid, 12th March 1525.

[Italian, 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ pages.]

March 13.

957. DOMENICO PIZZAMANO to his Brother GREGORIO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 82.

The Duke of Albany is in daily expectation of vessels for the shipment of his troops. They are selling their horses, and many persons go from Rome to purchase them. The infantry has disbanded. The Pope, on hearing that the Spaniards had crossed the Po, was much agitated; he is in suspense and harassed. The Duke of Sessa solicits him constantly, and it is considered certain he will make terms with the Imperialists. He (the Pope) appears to be a man of very faint heart and will (homo di pochissimo cor e voglia). He hopes that the King of England will disagree with the Emperor, and the Papal Auditor,* whom he was sending to England, and had reached Sienna, is recalled by him, and expected at Rome hourly. The Pope says he has made provision otherwise, and that the Auditor was dependent on the Imperialists, wherefore he had recalled him; but it is suspected that his Holiness will come to an agreement with the Imperialists, although today he seemed better disposed than he has been hitherto since the capture of the King; it is feared these are feints. The Auditor is again being sent to England, and is about to proceed on his journey. The French fleet is said to have been seen off Leghorn, and is coming hither to embark the Duke of Albany's forces; it is said they have taken some Moorish (galley) fustes, and sunk two.

* A collection of letters written by this Nuncio was published at Padua (1769-1771, two vols. in 4to.; Comino). The first letter from Spain (vol. I. p. 147) is dated Madrid, 14th March 1525, and the last, Burgos, 10th December 1527 (vol. II. p. 147).

1525.

Rome, 13th March. Registered by Sanuto, 18th March.

[Italian.]

March 14.

958. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 335,
St. Mark's
Library.

On the morning of the 12th, when in the Chancellor's chamber, I heard him say, laughing, "I know not what the English will choose to do now; whether they may like to make war on one unable to defend himself."

I understand that when the Genoese ambassador congratulated the Emperor on this victory obtained by him at so very early an age, he replied, "I have heard that once upon a time your Genoese wanted to give themselves up to the old King Lewis of France; and that he answered, 'I give you to the devil, because you are so changeable;' and thus I can say, that if not by Genoa, I have been well served by all Italy."

These words the Emperor uttered ironically, meaning that all Italy had disserved him, with the exception of Genoa.

The Chancellor Gattinara is a good Italian, and heartily laments that his countrymen should not have participated in this victory.

I believe he will use his good offices in favour of the Signory.

Madrid, 14th March 1525.

[Italian, 1 page.]

March 15.

959. DOM. — SUARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador in Spain, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 162.

On the 10th, at about noon, a courier arrived from Italy, having passed through France, with the miraculous news of the victory over the French and the capture of the most Christian King, together with the rout of his whole army, and with small loss to the Imperialists.

Will narrate briefly a few remarkable particulars concerning the mode in which the Emperor received this joyful intelligence.

The courier, on entering the palace, was taken into his Majesty's chamber, where he found him talking with two or three persons about Italian affairs, and said, "My Lord, the battle was fought under Pavia, the King of France is a prisoner in your Majesty's power, and his whole army has been destroyed."

* "Auditor di Camera," Ghinucci.

1525.

On hearing this alone, the Emperor remained as it were immovable, and said, "El Rey de Francia sta preso en mi poder y la batalla sta gagnada para nui!!" and without further speech, and not choosing to listen to anything more at the moment, he withdrew into another chamber by himself, and kneeling before a picture of the Virgin which he keeps at the head of his bed, remained thus for a short while, giving thanks to God and to Christ's mother for so great a mercy vouchsafed him. He then came forth and desired to be acquainted with the whole in detail; and the courier, having brought no letter, said he had for witness the safeconduct written in the King's own hand, enabling him to pass through France in safety. So the Emperor, being assured of the truth, ordered the publication of the news, but forbade any public rejoicing, save a procession to the praise of God and prayers for the dead, the victory having been gained against Christians. He said that he hoped in God to obtain another greater mercy against the Infidels, and that then public rejoicings should be made.

The news being proclaimed, an infinite number of nobility flocked to the palace, and his Majesty went forth publicly into a very spacious corridor (corritore), the only persons [admitted being the ambassadors and the lords and chief gentlemen.

All the ambassadors offered their congratulations separately, and it was wonderful to remark that neither by the Emperor's countenance nor by his gesture was any change perceptible in his usual bearing on an occasion of such great and notable gladness; a thing unrecorded of any other prince, or but of few, however prudent they may have been; and his Majesty's self control is the greater by reason of his youth. It is entirely attributed to greatness of mind, for he is neither elated by prosperity nor depressed by adversity.

The ambassadors having withdrawn to make way for others, we together repeated to each other the prudent and very gracious replies received individually. Although all were of equal tenour, yet from several expressions the one given to the English ambassador was very remarkable. The Emperor said that he considered God's mercy so much the greater, as it had been granted him from direct divine goodness and not from any merit of his own; wherefore on three accounts, he held it in great esteem; first, because he thus knew that he was in favour with God; secondly, because he now had it in his power to prove his constant desire to place Christendom at peace; and, thirdly, as he should be enabled to pardon his enemies, to grant remission to those who had injured him, and to benefit his friends and dependants who had rendered him good service.

His Majesty remained until nightfall, giving his hand to those who wished to kiss it. The next morning, after confession, he went processionally to mass at a church dedicated to the Virgin, distant one mile from the town. After hearing high mass of the Holy Ghost chaunted, he returned. He was clad in a cape and doublet of black cloth of frieze, as worn by him constantly since his attack of quartan ague, from which he has now quite recovered.

1525.

Madrid, 15th March. Registered by Sanuto, 21st April.

[Italian.]

March 16.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 336,
St. Mark's
Library.

960. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Nuncio having said that many unjust complaints were made against the Pope, the Emperor replied that God had made him king of men and not king of tongues. Castiglione rejoined that he vouched for the Emperor's good will towards the Pope. The Emperor continued, "They tell me, however, that he gave passage to the Duke of Albany, who marched into the kingdom of Naples." Castiglione declared that the Pope, being unarmed, could offer no opposition, so that the Duke took the passage for himself instead of its being given him.

Concerning the stipulation of peace with the King of France, the Chancellor said to me, "Although the Emperor might claim the whole of France, as King Philip the Handsome was dispossessed by Pope Boniface, who conferred the kingdom on the Emperor Albert, and moreover as Emperor, qui est Dominus Orbis, he might demand acknowledgment (recognitione) from the Crown of France; nevertheless, he merely requires his own, which is but little."

The Chancellor then specified the duchy of Burgundy with all that was held by Duke Charles, saying, "The province belongs to him by the same right as that whereby he holds the kingdom of Naples; Languedoc appertains to the Crown of Arragon, and Dauphiné is an Imperial fief."

With regard to the Duke of Bourbon, the Chancellor said that the Emperor would give him his own territory and some possessions belonging to himself, freeing him from dependence on the Crown of France, and giving him his sister for wife.

Madrid, 16th March 1525.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

March 16.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta.
v. 1. p. 128.

961. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate.

Important events rendering it necessary to despatch with all speed our beloved noble Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, elected ambassador to the King of England, he having readily accepted,—

Put to the ballot—that there be given to him out of the moneys destined for this purpose five months' subsidy for his expenses, at the rate of 140 golden ducats per month, amounting to 700 golden ducats; also for the purchase of horses, 150 ducats; for trunks, 30 ducats; for two couriers, 40 ducats, at the rate of 20 ducats each; and as a gift to his secretary for his outfit, 80 ducats.

The ambassador aforesaid may take with him on this embassy silver utensils to the value of 400 ducats at the Signory's risk, as granted to the other ambassadors; the said utensils to be registered and valued by the officials of the new accountant's office, according to the regulations of the State.

Ayes, 172. Noes, 15. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian.]

1525.

March 20.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 337,
St. Mark's
Library.

962. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Today had an interview with the Chancellor, who announced the receipt of letters from the Imperial ambassadors in Venice, dated the 21st and 22nd February, purporting that the Republic persisted in the same reply as before, although their demands were moreover urged by the Rev. Richard Pace on behalf of the King of England. Repeated the excuses already made by him to Gattinara and to the Emperor.

Madrid, 20th March 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

March 20.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 338,
St. Mark's
Library.

963. The SAME to the COUNCIL of TEN.

As stated in my public letter of the 16th, the Chancellor specified the demands made by the Emperor on France. In reply, I said, "This you want for yourselves, but then what shall you want for the King of England." Gattinara rejoined, "Verily the Emperor will care very little about the King of England."*

Madrid, 20th March 1525.

[Italian, 1 page.]

March 21.

Parti Comuni
Consiglio X.

964. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta by the chiefs.

Having to despatch with all speed as ambassador to the King of England the nobleman Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight,—Put to the ballot, that there be given to him, out of the "limitation moneys" set apart for the ambassadors, the subsidy for five months for his expenses, at the rate of 140 golden ducats per month, amounting to 700 golden ducats.

Also for the purchase of horses, 150 ducats; for two couriers, 40 ducats; and 80 ducats as a gift for his secretary.

Be it further enacted that on the expiration of the four months after his departure the treasurer of this Council do remit monthly to his agent here, out of the "limitation moneys" destined for ambassadors, 140 golden ducats, for one month's salary in advance.

As he will have to spend money for couriers, boats, escorts, and guides, he is to keep a distinct and separate account of these things from time to time; and as the accounts arrive here, they are to be balloted for in the College and the money orders issued by the chiefs of this Council to its cashier, as done with regard to all the other ambassadors; the cashier to pay the money to his agents.

Ayes, 28. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 1.

Factum mandatum camerario Consilij et successoribus ut exequantur.

[Italian.]

March 21.

Parti Comuni
Consiglio X.

965. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta by the chiefs.

The nobleman Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, now appointed ambassador to the King of England, is at this present proveditor for the Salt Office, charged with the superintendence of the deposit chest.

1525.

That the Signory's affairs in that office may not sustain injury—
Put to the ballot, that should Ser Lorenzo Orio depart hence before the election of his successor, the College, with the intervention of the chiefs of this Council, do charge some member of the Salt Office to take possession of the said chest, and superintend it until a cashier be elected in his stead by this Council.

Ayes, 29. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

March 26. 966. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 341,
St. Mark's
Library.

The bastard brother of Mons. de Beaurain arrived here yesterday from the Archduke of Austria, having quitted him after his receipt of the news of the battle of Pavia. He came by way of England where he announced the intelligence to the King, who, he says, made great demonstration of rejoicing.*

On the 24th instant letters were received from England, dated the 22nd February. The King announces his readiness to make war on France, but some of the Emperor's ministers suspect the letters to be antedated, and that they were despatched after the receipt there of the news of the victory.

Madrid, 26th March 1525.

[Italian, ½ page.]

March 30. 967. CARLO CONTARINI to ——— (a private letter).

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 139.

The Lutherans who rose, with the banner inscribed "Defensores Scripturæ Evangelicæ et Libertatis," are now in the field, having increased their numbers to 40,000. They refuse to pay any contributions but the rent of what they hold, so that the princes are in great embarrassment, and have sent hither to ask the Archduke for assistance. He has promised them 400 foot and 400 horse and two pieces of artillery. Including their other forces, they will thus have 15,000 foot and 15,000 (sic) [1,500 ?] horse. The commander-in-chief of the undertaking is the Duke of Bavaria. The Lansquenets will scarcely be brought to march against the Lutherans, who are their relations and friends.

Inspruck, 30th March. Registered by Sanuto, 11th April.

[Italian.]

March 31. 968. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 108.

Ser Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, who is going ambassador to England, departed this morning. He will remain three days at Padua, to make preparations, and then his commission will be sent to him.

[Italian.]

* The letter presented to Henry VIII. by Mons. de Beaurain's brother, dated Inspruck, 26 February, has been published by Sir Henry Ellis. (Original Letters, vol. I. series 1., p. 257).

1525.

April 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 342,
St. Mark's
Library.

969. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the day before yesterday inquired of the English ambassador what news he had from England since the battle of Pavia. Sampson replied that the King was inclined towards war, having already formed a project for the recovery of Normandy, Guienne, and Gascony, and hopes that the Emperor will invade France both from Italy and from Spain.

The Archbishop of Capua [Schomberg] writes from Rome, "The Venetians are well armed, and talk not as cowards, but like brave men; whereas the Florentines on the contrary are very much afraid."

Madrid, 1st April 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 180.

970. DOM. SUARDINO, Mantuan Ambassador in Spain, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

The King of England would wage a brisk war against France, and urges it here, but words are given him in reply until the decision of France be known concerning the conditions sent to Italy. If the terms be not accepted, the Emperor will wage war in France together with England. Burgundian outlaws are being sent into Flanders, so that they may be on the borders there, and the Emperor expects to make the conquest easily by means of his partisans in that province.

Madrid, 3rd April. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

April 4.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 344,
St. Mark's
Library.

971. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Was told by the Florentine ambassador that this morning he and the Papal Nuncio had a conference with the Chancellor about the proposals made by the Pope to the Emperor.

The Emperor is perfectly satisfied that the offensive and defensive league of Italy against the Turk should be stipulated, with such additional clauses as the Pope might propose; but the Emperor does not choose the King of England to be mentioned as one of the principal contracting parties, and makes it appear that he is dissatisfied with him.

Madrid, 4th April 1525.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

April 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 121.

972. RICHARD PACE.

This morning the English ambassador informed the College that he had received letters from England, dated 10th March. The King had sent money to the Imperialists and intended to wage war on France.

[Italian.]

April 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 124.

973. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion carried in the Senate by all the sages, for the commission to be given to Ser Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, ambassador on his way to England.

1525.

To go by way of Germany, and to Inspruck. To confer there with the most Serene Prince Archduke [Ferdinand], then go to the Lady Margaret in Flanders, and subsequently proceed to England. To assure the King of the Signory's good will, and that he is sent on account of the important events which have taken place. Should he find the King opposed to the Emperor, to change the words of his commission and act reservedly.

[Italian.]

April 5.

974. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 133.

Motion made in the Senate by the councillors and sages, for the commission to be given to Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, appointed ambassador to the King of England.

To go by way of Germany. On arriving at Inspruck to present himself to the Archduke Ferdinand, accompanied by the ambassador Contarini. To acquaint him with their observance and respect for the Emperor, and with their great affection for his Serenity (the Archduke). To justify the Signory's proceedings, as in their replies to the Imperial ambassadors at Venice, of which they enclose a copy. Concerning the negotiations between his Serenity's commissioners and those of the State, refer him to their ambassador at Inspruck, who is thoroughly acquainted with the whole.

To proceed thence to Flanders. Should he pass through any place in which the Lady Margaret be resident, to congratulate her in the Signory's name on the felicitous and victorious proceedings of her nephew, the Emperor.

To proceed to England, and on arriving in London, after presenting his credentials to the King, to assure him of the Signory's perpetual observance, and of the esteem in which they hold his love and good will. To impress this upon his mind, expatiating on the Signory's affection for him, of which he (Orio) has had constant proof when sitting in the Senate. To add that, in order to consult with his Majesty about current events—and to cultivate, as they always have done, his Majesty's love, and their own observance towards him—he, Orio, is to remain there as his Majesty's most obsequious servant. Such is to be the substance of his statement at his first audience; and from day to day his operations, negotiations, thoughts, and endeavours are all to be directed towards confirming his Majesty's good disposition with regard to the Signory's interests, assuring him constantly of the perpetual reverence of the State, and of their desire for his utmost prosperity and grandeur (amplitudine).

After his first audience of the King, to visit the Queen, present his credentials, and address her in such general and grave terms as shall seem fitting to him.

Charge him, moreover, in virtue of their letter of credence, to visit Cardinal Wolsey in their name. As well known to him, the Cardinal deservedly enjoys supreme dignity, favour, and authority with the King and country. To perform the same office with him as with the King in the most ample and affectionate terms possible, thanking him for the good will and love borne by him towards the Signory and all their merchants and subjects; recommending them to him at such time as shall seem fitting and opportune. In all his doings and conversations with the Cardinal his chief thought and endeavour will have for object to keep him well disposed, as he is, towards the interests of the State, assuring him of the great account and esteem in which they hold his admirable and most estimable qualities, and of their wish for his utmost grandeur and exaltation.

1525.

Having performed this office, is to obtain private audience of the King, and acquaint him with the intention of the State to persevere in their confederacy with the Emperor, being convinced that their design is reciprocated by his Imperial Majesty, from whom nothing has been heard in Italy since the rout of the French and the capture of the most Christian King. Immediately on hearing news from the Emperor, will impart it to him for communication to the King, whom he is to beseech in their name, that in like manner as they have hitherto considered him the chief protector of their State, so will he deign for the future to persevere in his loving precept (instituto) with regard to them, they being in truth his most obsequious servants.

Should the King or Cardinal (of whom he is also to obtain a private audience) make any allusion (but not otherwise) to the Signory's army not having joined the Imperialists at this last engagement, to conform himself to the reply given to the Imperial ambassadors in this matter, as by the copies sent to him. He will thus be enabled to reply more positively, and to induce the King to admit the validity of his excuses.

Not to omit visiting such prelates and other great personages as are admitted into his Majesty's Privy Council and find favour with him, as also such other persons as he shall think fit.

During his embassy he is to continue from day to day, with all circumspection and assiduity, to notify to the Senate all the negotiations, resolves, and proceedings in those parts; and he is also to write all that happens to him, to the Signory's ambassadors at Rome and with the Emperor.

At his first audience of the King and Cardinal, or at such other time as shall seem most fitting, to bear ample testimony to them of the adroit, loving, and prudent offices performed at Venice by the Rev. Richard Pace, his Majesty's ambassador, for the benefit of the Signory's affairs; they also having heard from Rome that the English ambassador there acts in like manner.

[Italian.]

April 5.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 133.

975. The DOGE AND SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, LL.D. and Knight, the Signory's Ambassador, on his way to England.

Have instructed him to tell the King, at his private audience, that it is the intention of the State to persevere constantly in the confederacy between them and the Emperor. As possibly on his (Orion's) arrival in England, the King may no longer be so well disposed towards his Imperial Majesty, nor on such good terms with him as they now imagine, by reason of the altered state of affairs, 1525.

before performing this office with the King and Cardinal, he is to ascertain what understanding exists between the Emperor and the King, and so to execute or modify his present instructions.

When performing the office enjoined him in praise of the Rev. Richard Pace to the King and Cardinal, to take good heed (as they understand that the said ambassador is not in great favour with the Cardinal), not to make the eulogium so strong in his (Wolsey's) presence, as he would do were the Cardinal absent, at his audience of the King.* Think fit to give him this warning, referring themselves however to his prudence, and to what he shall know to be requisite in accordance with the times.

Ayes, 175. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

April 5.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 141, 142.

976. CARLO CONTARINI, to ———.

The movement of the Lutheran peasants continues raging, and although some of their houses have been burnt and some of the insurgents killed, yet they do not yield. They have sent six of their comrades to Augsburg to know if the inhabitants will join them, requiring an answer within two days, and are encamped under a town belonging to the Bishop of Ulm, which it is said they will obtain; and woe to the Bishop!

These gatherings of the peasants increase greatly. They say they will free themselves, that they are worse than slaves, that the whole country is disorganized. In all the churches of Germany they now preach the Lutheran doctrine. Lent is no longer observed. The peasants say they merely require freedom for their property and persons, such as is enjoyed by the subjects of the Venetian Signory; and this they notified to the Archduke Ferdinand. Apparently they are in the right, for should a peasant choose to emigrate, or to give his daughter in marriage abroad, he has to pay a fine like a bondsman, and when the head of a family dies, the masters take half of the best of the property. Their shout is "Liberty," and for the rest they would be content Inspruck, 5th April. Registered by Sanuto, 12th April.

[Italian.]

April 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. pp.
232, 234.

977. DOM. SUARDINO to [the MARQUIS OF MANTUA].

The Nuncio [Castiglione] has exhorted the Emperor in the Pope's name to induce France to accept fair terms, so as to give peace to Christendom, unite against the Infidels, and extirpate the deeply rooted scourge of Lutheranism, so prejudicial to the Catholic faith.

Should France reject such conditions as shall be deemed just, and the Emperor think fit to continue the war, the latter will remain justified before God, and the rest of the Christian powers will excuse him. The undertaking cannot but prove difficult unless his Imperial Majesty secure the good will of the Italian powers, whereby he would be enabled to do what he wishes in France. The Pope therefore offers to unite them, and lays very great stress on including England, so as subsequently to attack the Turk, an undertaking desired by the King, and which becomes him.

* This serves to date Wolsey's persecution of Pace, to which allusion is made by Shakespear, Henry VIII., act ii., scene 2.

1524.

The Emperor told the Nuncio in reply that he needed no assurance of the Pope's love, never having doubted it, notwithstanding all that has taken place; and said he would hold the Pope's loving suggestions in great account, and be guided throughout by his counsels. Touching the offer of a defensive league, the Emperor took blame to himself for not having been the first to make the proposal, and wished it to be offensive and defensive against the common enemies; but he wished the union to be limited to their two selves, leaving place for the others to join it, saying that it will be more easy for the two to unite, rather than so many; and the Pope and the Emperor being leagued, it will facilitate the agreement with the others.

The Nuncio not being authorized to accept this proposal, the matter was referred to the Emperor's agents in Italy.

The Emperor's refusal to admit England into this union at present, proves very clearly—what might however have been known by other signs—his dissatisfaction, although they (the Imperialists) are now urging England to do great things against France, so that should she reject the terms sent to her, the Emperor may obtain through England by force that which France will not concede for love.

The Emperor will not allow any one to speak otherwise than well of the most Christian King, and his Majesty himself praises him rather than otherwise (più lo lauda che altro).

Madrid, 7th April. Registered by Sanuto, 16th May.

[Italian.]

April 10.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 137,
tergo.

978. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador at Rome.

The English ambassador's statement, that the Signory had made presents to the Viceroy and other personages at Milan, for the purpose, &c., is utterly false. To assert accordingly, whenever spoken to on the subject.

Ayes, 149. Noes, 19. Neutrals, 10.

[Italian.]

April 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 134.

979. LORENZO ORIO to the SIGNORY.

Has arrived here. Is expecting the secretary, Andrea Rosso, from Roveredo on the morrow, to receive instructions about what has taken place with the commissaries of the Archduke of Austria concerning the boundaries, so as to be able to speak about them.

News has been received here of the insurrection in Germany of 60,000 peasants, and that the Archduke is raising troops against them.

Trent, ———. Registered by Sanuto, 10th April.

[Italian.]

April 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 153.

980. CARLO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

On the 12th Dom. Lorenzo Orio, ambassador, on his way to England, arrived. The Archduke being abroad at a distance of four 1525.

leagues from Inspruck, he will have to wait three or four days for audience. It is said that 4,000 of the insurgent peasants have been cut to pieces. Is of a contrary opinion, because even the noblemen of the Archduke's Court have been sent against them.

Went to meet Orio, and the Count of Salamanca, hearing this, sent two councillors and the house steward to do the like. The Archduke will return tomorrow. Orio is lodged with him (Contarini).

Inspruck, 13th April. Registered by Sanuto, 19th April.

[Italian.]

April 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 153.

981. LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador on his way to England, to the SIGNORY.

Gives an account of his journey, and of the great scarcity at the hostels; 12 "carantani" each person, and three for stabling. Spends eight ducats per diem. Will negotiate [with the Archduke].

Inspruck, 13th April. Registered by Sanuto, 19th April.

[Italian.]

April 14.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 145.

982. REPORT current in Venice that foreigners had received letters, viâ Florence from England, dated the 22nd March. The King, on hearing of the capture and rout of the King of France, made a handsome present of money to the bearer of the intelligence, and laid an embargo on all foreign vessels in the islands.

[Italian.]

April 15.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 190.

983. ZORZI STORIOM to ———.

Arrival of Beaurain from Spain. He has conferred with Madame [Louise] the Regent during two days. He is the bearer of the proposals made to the most Christian King, namely, that his Majesty was to cede Italy and Burgundy; to espouse the Emperor's sister the widow, Madame Eleanor; to surrender Guienne to the Emperor, Picardy to the King of England, and Provence to the Duke of Bourbon; but to this France will not consent. News has been received of the arrival of the Duke of Albany in Provence from Rome with the armada. His coming causes general dissatisfaction.

Lyons, 15th April. Registered by Sanuto, 30th April.

[Italian.]

April 17.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 179.

984. LORENZO ORIO and CARLO CONTARINI, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Orio will depart tomorrow on his way towards England. The insurgent peasants have taken Ulm and its Bishop, and found there 3,000 ducats and 14,000 silver livres. The Archduke is gone to the Diët; so there is great disturbance in Germany. Many peasants are in arms, and the lansquenets returning from Italy join them. The Archduke has given Orio an ample safeconduct.

Inspruck, 17th April. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

1525.

April 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 151.985. RICHARD PACE in the Venetian College.

The English ambassador had audience of the College, and said letters had been received from England, dated the 22nd March, purporting that on hearing of the capture of the King of France and the rout of his army, the King of England was very greatly pleased, and caused all the ships and vessels to be detained for the transport of troops into France, as he will assuredly assume that undertaking. He (the ambassador) then said that in England France was held in less account than she is in Italy.

[Italian.]

April 19.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 345,
St. Mark's
Library.986. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Understands through a sure channel that the Imperial ambassador resident in England [De Praet] has written to the Emperor informing him that, before the battle of Pavia, a post with his (the ambassador's) letters addressed to the Emperor was stopped by the English,* and that Cardinal Wolsey took the letters and read them.

From another less authentic source hears, moreover, that the Cardinal sent for the ambassador, and desired him in his usual haughty language not to write any more, without first showing his letters to him, the Cardinal.†

The Florentine ambassador has been informed by the Papal Nuncio in England that in this intercepted correspondence the Imperial ambassador wrote that Wolsey had abused the Pope vastly.

The thing has been taken much amiss at Madrid. Understands, through the Chancellor, that the Emperor has written to the King of England complaining of this circumstance, and telling him that although he, the Emperor, supposes the King wishes to live with him as a brother, and that this act did not proceed from the King, yet he should be more certain of the fact were the King to make suitable demonstration against those who have been the cause of this, meaning the Cardinal.

Hears that now Wolsey apologizes, saying that, wanting to arrest certain gentlemen robbers,‡ this courier was seized as one of their men; a very frivolous excuse.

Madrid, 19th April 1525.

[Italian, 1½ page.]

April 19.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 346,
St. Mark's
Library.987. The SAME to the SIGNORY.

Five days ago the Emperor received letters from his ambassador in England, dated the 27th ultimo, purporting that the King was much bent on war with France, and that he was sending two ambassadors to the Emperor, namely, the Bishop of London and Sir Richard Wyngfeld, late ambassador to the Emperor in Flanders.

* The seizure was made on the 11th February (see "State Papers," vol. vi. p. 213).

† "Che non scrivesse più, se prima non li monstrava le sue lettere."

‡ "Alcuni gentilhomeni ladroni."

1525.

By this post the English ambassador [Sampson] resident at Madrid has not received one single letter.

Madrid, 19th April 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April 19.

988. CARLO CONTARINI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 181.

The Ambassador Orio departed yesterday morning. The Archduke gave him a very experienced equerry of his own for his guide, and a patent, so that he will go in perfect safety. Contarini accompanied him a distance of five Italian miles beyond Inspruck. Orio paid his respects to the Archduke and his consort, executing his commission admirably. He gave respectful greeting, and made general offers.

Inspruck, 19th April. Registered by Sanuto, 27th April.

[Italian.]

April 21.

989. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador at Milan, to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 171.

The Genoese secretaries here have received letters from the Imperial Court. The Emperor says that the King of England, on receiving the news of the victory, dismissed the French ambassador.*

Milan, 21st April. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd April.

[Italian.]

April 21.

990. LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador on his way to England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 204.

Arrived here in three days from Inspruck. Was well received by the governors of the town, which is a very fine one, like Cremona. Was obliged to go through Bavaria to avoid the insurgent peasants. On the road saw many fires kindled by the peasants, whose dwellings were being burnt by the other party, so that they have rendered the war very cruel. Will depart for Ulm tomorrow. A person has arrived here, at Augsburg, from England, whither he conveyed the news of the capture of the most Christian King, and says that in England they are most certainly preparing to invade France. All in this town are Lutherans. This Lent they all eat meat, and such is their custom; and today, Friday, they all eat meat. The nuns and friars intermarry, so that all follow Luther.

Augsburg, 21st April. Registered by Sanuto, 4th May.

[Italian.]

April 24.

991. RICHARD PACE and REGINALD POLE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 171, 172.

On St. Mark's eve the Doge came to church to vespers in ducal state. He wore a crimson satin mantle and cap, and the ermine cape. The ambassadors of the Pope and of the Emperor were with him, and also the English ambassador Pace, who was clad in a long black velvet gown. The ambassadors from Milan, Ferrara, and

* John Joachim di Passano, originally a Genoese grocer, subsequently a diplomatist and Lord of Vaux.

1525.

Mantua were also present. A cousin of the King of England, who is studying at Padua, son of a sister (sic), aged, by name Reginald de la Pole (Renaldo de la Pulla), White Rose, was there, dressed in black damask as a gownsman; he was placed to the right of the councillors. The sword was borne by Ser Simon Lion, master of the Arsenal, his companion being Vincenzo Zantani, captain of the Alexandrian galleys.

[Italian.]

April 26.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 347,
St. Mark's
Library.

992. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The caravels from the Indies [Mexico?] have arrived, and bring 100,000 gold pieces for the Emperor.

The ministers at Madrid think of preparing for war. They are expecting the two ambassadors from England. Should they accept fairer terms, and not insist on those mentioned heretofore, namely, that the English should have the whole of France, I believe the Emperor will league with the King of England.

Mons. De la Chau has arrived in Portugal. The King makes a difficulty about consigning to the Emperor's care the daughter of the Queen Dowager [Eleanor], for which purpose chiefly La Chau was sent thither.

Arrived at Toledo on the 24th. The Emperor to make his entry in state tomorrow.

Toledo, 26th April 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

April 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 178.

993. RICHARD PACE.

The English ambassador Pace came into the College today, and took leave to go to Padua for a few days to recruit himself.

The Doge bade God speed him, and gave orders for letters to be written to the Signory's governors there to do him all possible honour, and to render such service as he might require.

[Italian.]

April 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 209.

994. CARLO CONTARINI, Ambassador with Archduke Ferdinand, to the STATE.

The Archduke has sent one of his gentlemen to negotiate with the peasants. The messenger from the Duke of Milan who conveyed the news of the victory of Pavia to England has arrived at Inspruck on his return. He says the King was making great preparation to invade France, and believes that by this time the troops will have commenced crossing.

Although part of the peasants have consented to a truce on certain terms, the rest continue their march. All this proceeds from Luther.

Inspruck, 24th and 30th April. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.

[Italian.]

May.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 232.

995. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the STATE.

The ambassadors from Bohemia who were to have come for the ratification of the clauses stipulated by the Legate Campeggio, who is at Buda, have not yet arrived.

1525.

Intelligence received of the agreement made between the King of Poland and the Grand Master of Prussia [Albert of Brandenburg], who has been given other titles, so that from spiritual he has become temporal. The Legate Campeggio ponders (pondera) this ill fashion, adopted without the knowledge of the Pope or of the Legate, or of any other dispensation. The Grand Master confesses himself a Lutheran, and it is said that the King of Poland gives him in marriage his daughter by his first wife, promising him in the event of his, the Duke's, death, that the duchy shall be inherited by the Duke's brother, Marquis Joachim, who is also of the house of Brandenburg. The Duke has written letters to Buda, announcing that a Lutheran, having been arrested in Lower Germany and condemned to be burnt, was taken three times to the stake, but the fire took no effect upon him; thereupon they beheaded him, but with great difficulty. The Duke adds that the Church of God should rejoice greatly, and make signs of gladness, as a new martyr has entered the kingdom of heaven. The Duke is thoroughly Lutheran.

Buda, — May. Registered by Sanuto, 16th May.

[Italian.]

May 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 348,
St. Mark's
Library.

996. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

The Chancellor says that at a short distance from Genoa an ambassador from the King of Tunis has been captured. He was on his way back from France, with letters from the French to the King of Tunis, affording proof that they had arranged together for an attack on Sicily and Gerbi; the King of Tunis pledging himself to aid the French in Sicily, they on their part assisting him for the recovery of Gerbi.

Toledo, 29th April 1525.

P.S., dated 1st of May.—Letters have been conveyed to England by the comendador Penalosa, who brought the Emperor the news of the victory. He has a safeconduct from the King of France for his return.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

May 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 274, 275.

997. DOM. SUARDINO to [the MARQUIS OF MANTUA].

Beaurain acquainted Madame the Regent at Lyons with the terms which the Emperor demands of the King of France. Her reply was much at variance with them. She said the King would marry the Emperor's sister, the one promised to Bourbon, and take her daughter for the Dauphin; that his Majesty would renounce the affairs of Italy, and make peace and perpetual union, but that the restitution of the territory demanded by the Emperor was unreasonable. • Beaurain having announced the Regent's opinion by an express, it is inferred that the King's reply will be of the same tenour; so as it is thought at Toledo (the conditions offered by the Emperor being reasonable) that France will consent to everything, and peace be made between the two Crowns. Nothing is thought of now but provision for the war against France in case the King's reply be as aforesaid, and positive orders have been sent to Italy for Bourbon to come to Spain, and it is said that on his arrival the marriage will take place.

1525.

In the meanwhile two ambassadors are expected from the King of England for the express purpose of waging war on France; but should his most Christian Majesty accept the terms offered him, the Emperor would more willingly make an agreement with him than with England. In case of refusal England requests him,* and he is sending Penalosa thither, though he will go by land as far as Lyons. Should war be made in France, it is intended to send the corps now in Italy, and the Emperor with another corps under Bourbon will also enter France, England on her part having another army there; and it is believed that Bourbon, entering France by the Spanish frontier, will produce a great effect.

Toledo, 1st May. Registered by Sanuto, 26th May.

[Italian.]

May 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 208.

998. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On the last day of April the Pope went to sleep at S. Giovanni, and supped with Cardinal Colonna. On the morning of the 1st of May his Holiness went to St. Paul's to mass, which was said by Cardinal Colonna in the presence of the cardinals and all the ambassadors, namely, from the Emperor, England, the Archduke, Milan, and Florence. After mass the league stipulated between them was published. The Pope told him (Foscari) that the English ambassador will give no more money to the Spaniards. His Holiness believes his King to have cooled about making war on France. Was told by the Right Reverend of Capua that he believes the said sovereigns [the Emperor and the King of England?] are not agreed (non siano d'accordo).

Rome, 1st and 2nd May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.

[Italian.]

May 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 238.

999. LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador on his way to England, to ——— (a private letter).

Since his last from Augsburg has been in great trouble and peril in a besieged city, and compelled to perform very rough journeys over mountains and by unusual passes, dodging in a thousand ways to avoid the rabid and sanguinary German peasants, who have placed all Germany in tumult and confusion. Is well nigh ruined by the cost; but reached Mayence today, and is out of danger. Will depart tomorrow morning for Cologne with two boats, which he could not hire for less than 24 ducats, although in other times he could have had them for six. The reason is, that all are in arms; in the villages and territory there remain but lads and women; and the cities have been abandoned by the greater part of the artisans to follow the armies. For not only have the peasants risen against their masters, the lords and grandees, but the townspeople have rebelled against the clergy, and compelled them to be content with so much of their revenues as may suffice for food and raiment, leaving the rest at the disposal of the city for expenditure on the common need, for the general and public benefit. Should this excitement continue, the whole world will be thrown into confusion. In six days will be at Antwerp, where he hopes to find letters from the State, which are more than necessary, both for the honour of the State and for his own. On the road he heard that the King of England was preparing troops for the invasion of France, as written by him also from Augsburg; and at Mayence it is said that the King will cross over to Normandy and proceed straight to Paris.

1525.

Mayence, 2nd April. Registered by Sanuto, 16th May.

[Italian.]

May 3.

1000. CARLO CONTARINI to the STATE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 216.

The peasants are making more progress than ever; it is said they have re-instated the Duke of Wurtemberg, and that they will appoint him their captain against the Archduke.

It was reported yesterday that the Grand Master of Prussia, of the Teutonic Order, has married the daughter of the King of Poland, with an express stipulation that all the property, even such as is ecclesiastical, be hereditary. This intelligence is held of great importance at Inspruck by reason of the affairs of Martin Luther, to whom the King of Poland had always hitherto been opposed, whereas the King now seems to be of Luther's opinions. A very great quantity of Lutheran books has been sold at the fair of Bolzano.

Inspruck, 3rd May. Registered by Sanuto, 9th May.

[Italian.]

May 4.

1001. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 209.

Letters from France state that Mons. de Lautrec has been sent towards Picardy to oppose the English.

Milan, 4th May. Registered by Sanuto, 6th May.

[Italian.]

May 7.

1002. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 351,
St. Mark's
Library.

Letters have been received from Rome announcing the conclusion of the league between the Pope, the Emperor, the King of England, and the Archduke of Austria.

Has presented the Signory's letter to the Emperor, who returned thanks, and said, "I am a bad Latin scholar, I will send the letter to the Chancellor."*

There are letters from the Indies announcing the discovery of some very large cities, where upwards of 300,000 people had been baptized owing to a miracle.

Has not yet seen the letters, but in a future despatch will give a detailed account of their contents.

Toledo, 7th May 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

* "Io son mal Latino, invierò le lettere al Cancellier."

1525.

May 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 275, 276.

1003. The SECRETARY of the DUKE OF MILAN resident with the Emperor, to [the DUKE of MILAN?].

The secretary of Mons. de Beaurain arrived from Lyons on the 18th April, and announces that Madame the Regent and the French assert their authority, saying that if the Emperor will release their King for money, they will ransom him willingly, but that they must not expect the alienation of any state from the Crown (ma che da alienar stato da la Corona non si mirasseno).

Should the King of France not accept the proposals made by the Emperor, Mons. de Béaurain is ordered to march the army upon Lyons or Avignon.

In the event of war being waged on France, the Emperor has determined that the Duke of Bourbon is to go to Spain for two reasons; first, to avoid the inconvenience caused last year by his intrigues (occulte similtate) with the Viceroy; secondly, because after his marriage with the Queen of Portugal, being sent with the army by way of Perpignan, the Emperor hopes greatly to facilitate the expedition against France, both through the friends who will declare themselves, perceiving him to be the Emperor's brother-in-law, and also on account of the assistance expected from the King of England, to whom, on the 1st of May, the Comendador Penalosa was sent in secret—it is said, to obtain money.

On the same day a courier was sent to Portugal to Mons. de la Chau, now there on a mission from the Emperor, whom, it is hoped, the King will supply with a considerable sum of money.

The Cortes of Castile have been summoned to assemble at Toledo on the 20th May, to raise money.

Two English ambassadors are expected, being accredited to the Emperor, to conclude "de summa rerum et quid agendum."

[Toledo,] 29th April and 7th May. Registered by Sanuto, 26th May.

[Italian.]

May 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 228.

1004. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Was told by the Pope that according to advices from England, dated 11th April, great preparations were making to invade France. It seems that according to the agreement the King of England promised to give the Emperor money, provided he assisted him to conquer France; but it seems that the Emperor does not wish him to do so, as there are no signs of preparation for war on the part of his Imperial Majesty.

Rome, 8th May. Registered by Sanuto, 12th May.

[Italian.]

May 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xviii.
pp. 242, 243.

1005. MARCO FOSCARI to the SIGNORY.

The Pope has received letters from the ambassador [Nuncio?] in England, to the effect that the King was preparing to invade France with a powerful force, and purposed having himself crowned there as king, and was awaiting a reply from the Emperor with regard to making terms with the most Christian King or not. The Pope says this will be the cause of discord between the English King and the Emperor, though England cannot invade France with an army until 1525.

the end of June. His Holiness also said that, as a good pastor, he had sent an envoy to the Emperor to negotiate an agreement between him and the most Christian King.

Rome, 5th and 8th May. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

May 8. Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. pp.
251, 252.

1006. MARCO SPAVENTO to LUNARDO GIUSTINIAN.

Had a very dangerous passage across the Alps. In the Grisons and in Switzerland the greater part of the people are Lutherans; and whereas when in Italy I believed this to be an affair of small consequence, so do I now consider it most important. In confirmation of these words, being at Coir on Easter Sunday, heard a Lutheran priest preach with very great commendation (il qual havea grandissimo favore), and on that day the usual blessing of the eggs and other things was omitted. The communicants were but few, and the greater part of them Lutherans, who had confessed in the Lutheran fashion. During our two days' stay at Coir every person we spoke to was a Lutheran, and so well acquainted with Luther's doctrine as to defy exaggeration. The boys and girls from eight to ten years of age, in support of their tenets, answer you by evangelical precepts, better than many doctors of divinity could do in favour of the Catholic faith. A book has been printed lately entitled "De vera et falsa religione," concerning which all are instructed; very startling dogmas being propounded. Unless therefore the Almighty stretch forth his arm, there will be none but Lutherans in these parts. They say they are united in their opinion with the whole of Swabia. And now all the populace has risen against the nobility of the free towns in Germany to abolish many institutions favorable to the nobility and adverse to the people; and this by the advice and assistance (consigli et opera) of Martin Luther, the five letters of whose name are said by them to signify Lux vera totius ecclesiæ Romanæ.

Lyons, 8th May. Registered by Sanuto, 20th May.

[Italian.]

May 10. Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix.
pp. 4, 5.

1007. GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary of Lorenzo Orio, to his Brother, LODOVICO SPINELLI.

Wrote from Mayence. The Papal Auditor [Ghinucci], on his way to the King of England from the Pope, was captured by the peasants, and paid 1,200 crowns ransom; he then continued his journey by way of Lyons, and quitted Antwerp for London yesterday. Did not mention this in his former letter, because he, Spinelli, was tired and in the stoves of Germany, which disgusted him, being full of butter (buttiro) and stench.

Many days ago Luther issued a book for his followers concerning the unjust and unreasonable taxes with which the Church burdened the people of Germany, whom he exhorted not to bear them. Hence arose this great movement and insurrection well nigh all over Germany, which, to free itself from such unbearable tyranny, took up arms against all the ecclesiastics, as also against the nobility, including even the nuns. The people desire to live in freedom, without being subject to any one, and their power increases hourly; for whereas at first they seemed willing to be subject to the Emperor, they will now no longer obey even his Majesty; and this determination they have already shown by making themselves masters of the marquisate of Wurtemberg, which belonged to the Archduke, many of whose stipendiaries they have killed. They are most hostile, and indeed open enemies, to the Pope and the whole Roman Church, and say they will have no other faith than that of Luther, to which the greater part of the German ecclesiastics have adhered, the sexes intermarrying with each other, as, for instance, a friar with a nun, and a priest with a woman of the world (una mondana), which is done everywhere, and publicly, the same marriage ceremonies being observed as among laymen; yet they could not save themselves from being deprived of [their temporal property], leaving them only enough for their food and lay apparel (vestito civile).

1525.

Gabels and taxes (dacij) are also abolished, this system having been already adopted throughout the duchy of Saxony, where Luther is. Hunting and fishing are no longer reserved solely for the nobility, for now it is allowable for all to hunt and fish like the lords themselves. In short, they revive the liberty of the golden age, when the fields were without boundaries, and no one had anything of his own. Then with regard to religion, they (the peasants?) do not differ in the least from Luther, having abolished eves (le vigilie) and the eating of fish, and all the holidays except Sundays. In the meanwhile this sect makes such progress, that last Lent, when in many places the Franciscans Observant and the Hierynomites chose to preach, in the first place nobody attended their sermons, and they were moreover maltreated and called to account for the meaning of what they preached; so that the best they can do for themselves is to be silent and remain quiet, and they can no longer show themselves anywhere. The peasants allow nothing but the mere gospels and epistles of St. Paul, and wherever they pass they remove all the bells. All these things are freely practised in Germany, where there is no longer any master, the bishops and other prelates having all taken flight. But here in Brabant and Flanders, as the Lady Margaret enforces the law most severely, the people dare not declare themselves openly, though in their own houses they live in Luther's fashion. Many of the chief persons of Antwerp assure me that, were the peasants to take that road and approach the city, 20,000 men, all Lutherans, would take up arms. In fact, this sect has taken such root throughout Germany that there is no visible remedy whereby to extirpate it, nor could the Church in those parts suffer greater persecution even were the Turks to come. The free towns, and those of importance, such as Cologne, Mayence, and others, whose churches combine spiritual and temporal authority, have compelled all the clergy to become citizens like the laymen, and they enjoy no additional prerogative beyond that of mere laymen. The surplus revenue, after deducting what is required for their maintenance, goes to the community to feed the poor; and by a public instrument they have sequestered from the churches and alienated all similar property, which is to be enjoyed by married and unmarried persons, and no longer conferred by the Roman Church, which they deride as a vain thing.

1525.

Today the ambassador [Lorenzo Orio] has attended to nothing but to the fashioning of his robes and making such preparations as necessary. On Saturday we are to go to the Lady Margaret at Mechlin, and from thence to Calais. Our passage across will be somewhat perilous, on account of the French fleet lately fitted out at Boulogne, which does very great mischief, capturing vessels daily. Since our arrival at Antwerp we have heard of the loss of several, with much cloth and kerseys belonging to Venetian subjects, and amongst the rest Messer Stefano de Nadal has lost 200 pieces of kersey. On arriving at Calais we shall not fail to obtain information from the English captains and governors, and not put to sea unless sure of no danger from the French fleet. I pray God that the embassy may come to a good end after so many difficulties and perils, fresh ones arising hourly. The alarm subsided greatly, owing to a constant report of the invasion of France by the King of England, which has now much abated; nor is any supply of troops mentioned, but only money, his Majesty having obtained (induto) the sixth of all the revenues, and already commenced levying them. We shall understand this more clearly on arriving in England. Could my paper contain more, I am afraid I should not yet come to an end.

Antwerp, 10th May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.]

May 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 2.

1008. LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador on his way to England, to ——— (a private letter).

Greatly fatigued after his long, toilsome, and perilous journey, made to escape the rage of those abominable peasants who have risen in Germany and for his good fortune thanks God. The Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] has departed hence, being appointed Papal envoy to the King of England. Ghinucci, on his way from Italy, was seized by the peasants, who plundered and kept him prisoner until he paid a ransom of 1,200 crowns, and to avoid falling in with another band of peasants he took the road through Lorraine.

The distance from Antwerp to Calais is 200 miles, and to reach England the sea must be crossed to Dover, a passage of 40 miles, very perilous on account of the sea, and also because the French have fitted out ships at Boulogne, distant 25 miles from Calais; and in sailing from Antwerp to England it is requisite to steer 14 miles in the direction of France, for the advantage of the tide and avoidance of shoals; so that there is great risk of being captured by the said Frenchmen.

¶ On arriving at Antwerp used all diligence to ascertain what preparations were being made by the King of England for the invasion of France. Was informed that, on hearing of the capture of his most Christian Majesty, the King dismissed the French ambassador [Passano] in London, and then laid a tax of one-sixth on all personal and landed property, and sent to Flanders for the purchase of horses, of which 300 were bought. Nothing else has been done, and the people complain, saying they will not pay ; so on this account it is generally supposed that England will not invade France for the present.

1525.

It was said subsequently that the Emperor had ordered the fitting out in Biscay of 300 ships, to be employed in Flanders and not in Italy ; for if destined for the Mediterranean they would have been armed at Barcelona. It is also reported that the Emperor inclines to peace, and has sent to Portugal to conclude his (the Emperor's) marriage with that King's sister.

The Duke of Albany and Renzo da Ceri have arrived at Lyons, where Madame, the mother of the most Christian King, is resident, with Monsr. de Vendôme and Monsr. de Lautrec, and all the chief personages of Paris. Monsr. d'Alençon, the brother-in-law of his most Christian Majesty, died there on his return from Italy, of grief for the capture of his King.

Understands that the envoy sent to the Emperor, to negotiate the affairs of the most Christian King, has returned "re infecta," because the terms demanded of him were unfair. The Duke of Bourbon was to be restored to his entire territory, and also to have Provence and Languedoc ; the Emperor to receive the whole of Burgundy and the territory beyond the river Somme, which divides Picardy from the county of Nau ; and the King of England likewise to be satisfied ; so that the French crown would be despoiled of well nigh all its territory. For this reason no arrangement was made.

Will quit Antwerp in two days, and go to Mechlin to the Lady Margaret.

Antwerp, 11th May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.]

May 13.

1009. ANONYMOUS LETTER from INSPRUCK.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 241, 242.

All the peasants of Germany have taken up arms against the bishops and nobles ; their resolution is not to obey the Pope or his ministers. All the clergy live in the Lutheran fashion, and swear to observe the Gospel, and to acknowledge God alone and the Emperor. They number 200,000 armed infantry, not all in one place, but scattered here and there. They have established posts and give safe-conducts and patents, governing themselves like a republic ; their title being, "Nos de Ligâ Christianâ deffensores verbi, etc., Dei."

At Inspruck there is great alarm, most especially as at Brixen the peasants have taken up arms and sacked the canons. They have also surrounded the castle in which the Bishop's attendants are, with the intention of killing them and sacking the episcopal castle.

The Grand Master of Prussia is at Inspruck ; he has renounced the Order, and married the daughter of the King of Poland, taking as dower the State of Prussia.

Today a gentleman from Spain has arrived at the Archduke's court. He says the Emperor is at the Pietà [Alcazar?] at Toledo, and that the King of England is ready to invade France, and merely awaits the Emperor's decision.

Inspruck, 13th May. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

1525.

May 13.

1010. FRANCESCO GONZAGA to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. pp.
240, 241.

Yesterday in consistory a letter was read, addressed to the Pope by Madame Louise of Savoy, mother of the King of France. She thereby announces that certain persons of the Lutheran sect had commenced showing themselves there. To remedy this, she, together with her council and government, have made choice of some churchmen who lead good lives, are learned, and well instructed in the Christian faith, charging them to visit the places where this heresy is published, to try and diligently ascertain whence the errors proceed and provide against them in the best manner possible, reproving and chastising the delinquents as they might think fit.

She requests the Pope to give such authority and power to the commissioners as would enable them to exercise their office without hesitation, and satisfy all who wish to be good Christians.

The Pope and the College of Cardinals regretted this fresh disturbance, but were glad to have been warned, and that provision had been made; and they commended and confirmed it as requested by the French King's mother.

Rome, 13th May. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

May 16.

1011. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 352,
St. Mark's
Library.

Intelligence received by the Emperor from the Indies that to the west the Spanish captain had discovered another large city, and that many thousands of human beings had miraculously embraced Christianity.

Encloses copy of the letters.* One point is worthy of consideration, namely, that beyond the mountain mentioned by the Spanish captain, there are places where spices grow. Thus, by following the western course, the Spaniards have arrived near the eastern extremity of the globe.

On the night of the 12th Gio. Borto. Gattinara arrived from Rome with the articles of the league between the Pope, the Emperor, the King of England, and the Archduke of Austria.

The Chancellor told me that the King of France said to Mons. de Beaurain that he would let the Emperor cut off his head rather than consent to anything against his honour. He also made earnest suit to be brought to Spain for a conference with the Emperor, when he would show the Emperor clearly who were his friends and who his enemies.

The Chancellor also said that the King of France had written an autograph letter to the Emperor, though not a very long one, signing himself the Emperor's slave, and recommending himself to him most humbly. The letter purports that he offers himself and all his forces to the Emperor to accompany him as his captain, either to take his crown at Rome, or in the expedition against the Infidels.

* The copy does not exist in the Contarini Register, but Marin Sanuto has preserved it in his Diaries, vol. 39. p. 41. The letter is written by Pedraria Davila, who styles Pizaro Picaro, which was perhaps the original name of that captain. "Picaroon" in English signifies "plunderer," in Spanish "rogue."

1525.

The ambassadors of the King of England [Tunstall and Wyngfeld] have landed in Galicia.

In my presence and that of others the Chancellor, when telling the Portuguese ambassador about the damage done to Portuguese shipping by the French, said, "If we cannot agree about an offensive league, let us at least make a defensive one against these French, the enemies of peace."

Toledo, 16th May 1525.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

May 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 262.

1012. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY. Advices received from Turin, and from the Court of the Duke of Savoy.

The Duke of Albany is going to Genoa. A messenger from England, a ducal chamberlain, who came through France, asserts that the English are making great preparations. The treasurer, Gregory da Casal, has been sent to the Duke of Bourbon, and on the 10th inst. the Duke of Suffolk was to advance towards Picardy with the first corps of 15,000 men, Cardinal Wolsey following with the second corps in yet greater number, and then the King in person with the main body. The English will act against Paris in a different form to what they did two years ago.

On the authority of the Duke of Bourbon's treasurer and others, it is reported that money arrives in plenty from England and Spain to encourage the undertaking against France from these borders and where necessary.

Milan, 21st May. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd May.

[Italian.]

May 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
pp. 267, 268.

1013. The SAME to the SAME. The Emperor would wish to have the Princess of England with him, as she is to be his wife, but the King of England delays sending her.

Milan, 22nd May. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 22.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 353,
St. Mark's
Library.

1014. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Told by the Duke of Calabria that the King of France said to Mons. de Beaurain that the Emperor was not in the least bound to the King of England, as the King of France could show the Emperor letters from him, proving that, had the victory of Pavia been delayed ten days, England would have declared for France.

Toledo, 16th May 1525.

P.S., dated the 22nd.—The French envoy Brion says the Emperor insists at any rate on having Burgundy, and that the French will not give it him. Brion, in the name of the King and of Madame, told the Emperor that it would be well for him to make some demonstration of war, to enable them to condescend to certain terms—more to the satisfaction of the kingdom—as their deference for the opinion of the country prevented them at present from acceding to some of the Emperor's demands.

1525.

The Chancellor considers this an approach to war, as it is impossible for the Emperor to make certain demonstrations without proceeding farther, when retreat would be difficult. The Chancellor gave Brion to understand that the Emperor would be compelled to ally himself with the King of England; in which case the war could not be quelled in the manner anticipated by the King of France.

The Chancellor is therefore of opinion that the result of these negotiations will be warlike.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

May 23.

1015. DOM. FRANCESCO GONZAGA to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii. p. 276.

Letters from Spain, dated the 5th inst., purport that although the Emperor is firmly bent on the French expedition, should the agreement with the most Christian King not take effect, the difficulty of obtaining money for the undertaking is so great that they do not know how it can be accomplished, especially as the King of England makes a difficulty about furnishing subsidy for the design, save so far as needed for his own individual interest. It is also reported that the Emperor has sent to Portugal for the King's ultimatum about the negotiation for his Imperial Majesty's marriage with the Portuguese Princess, and to know precisely the sum of money on which he can reckon. It is supposed that on account of the expedition against France, they persist in reporting that the King of England on his part will act, though it is not known whether any steps have yet been taken.

The affairs of the Germans proceed badly, as usual; the Pope believes them to be worse than is said, having received information that all the provinces are in confusion.

His Holiness wishes the Legate to set out to France and Spain in three weeks at the furthest, but it is thought that he cannot be ready so soon, considering the many things required by him for his outfit.

Rome, 23rd May. Registered by Sanuto, 26th May.

[Italian.]

May 27.

1016. LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 85.

Arrived in London after the vesper hour on the 24th. Was received honorably in the name of the King and the Cardinal of York, although his Majesty was 20 miles off, taking his pleasure as usual with the Queen. Went yesterday to pay his respects to the Cardinal, who received him graciously, evincing so much regard and kindness that the bystanders, most especially the Venetian merchants and the rest of the Italians who accompanied him as a mark of honour, were surprised, being aware that it is not the custom of his right rev. Lordship to evince towards any ambassador, whether from the Pope, the Emperor, or others, such respect as he showed to him, in such wise that when the Signory's name was mentioned he several times doffed his bonnet, a compliment very rarely, and perhaps never, paid by him to any ambassador. His 1525.

(Orio's) secretary, Gasparo Spinelli, says that he was present at the time of the interview between the Kings of France and England [Field of the Cloth of Gold, 1520], which was attended by the Cardinal; and when the three Venetian ambassadors, Giustinian, Badoer, and Surian, went to visit him, never did his right rev. Lordship raise his bonnet, notwithstanding their eminent qualities. The Cardinal then spoke in such honorable terms of the State, and made such hearty offers for its service, and in honour of him (Orio), that it would be impossible to exaggerate them,—a mode of proceeding which at this first conference has procured for him very great repute, and he hopes to do very well for the Republic's interests in this legation. It would have been to his advantage had he received advices from the Signory concerning Italian events, about which the Cardinal asked him earnestly. He apologized for having had no news whatever since his departure, on account of the circuitous road he took by reason of the disturbances in Germany.

London, 27th May. Registered by Sanuto, 27th June.

[Italian.]

May 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxviii.
p. 289.

1017. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

According to letters from Genoa the most Christian King and the Viceroy were to embark as today, the 29th, the provisions being already on board; and the Viceroy is said to have promised to return hither within 40 days, coming by way of Rome. It is also said the Duke of Bourbon will go to Spain to marry Madame Eleanor; and he asked the most Christian King for his fleet, consisting of 10 galleys, which his Majesty granted him willingly. A person who was lately at Genoa with Bourbon has asserted that Bourbon said to the most Christian King, "If you attempt to deprive me of my wife, beware! and if you leave her to me, you will have the best friend you can get;" and his Majesty is content. Letters had also been received, dated the 17th, from Madame Margaret to Bourbon, giving him an account how, with the English ambassadors there, she has proposed certain articles in the Emperor's name, viz., that the Emperor be bound to give 3,000 horse to the King of England, and 10,000 foot, at his (the King's?) cost (a sue spese), and a number of vessels for the conveyance of troops to France; the King offering, or being bound, to cross over to France with the whole army in the course of June. He (Venier) desired to ascertain this from Bourbon himself, and went to his house, but found that he was out riding (era cavalcato).

Milan, 28th May. Registered by Sanuto, 30th May.

[Italian.]

May 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 7.

1018. CARLO CONTARINI to the STATE.

The death of Duke Frederick of Saxony is confirmed. His brother Duke John is also sick. The peasants have been routed, and many killed.

Inspruck, 28th May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

1525.

May 29.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 45.

1019. VINCENZO GUIDOTO, Venetian Secretary in Hungary, to the STATE.

The Legate Campeggio is still at Buda (dili), and has caused the arrest of two Lutherans, namely, the parish priest of St. George's, for having married, and a provost of St. Mary's.

Buda, 29th May. Registered by Sanuto, 13th June.

[Italian.]

May 31.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 4.

1020. The GOVERNORS of VERONA to the STATE.

Send a letter from the Bishop of Trent, announcing the death of the Duke of Saxony,* and that the Duke of Bavaria had cut to pieces 20,000 peasants.

Verona, 31st May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.];

June 1.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 356,
St. Mark's
Library.

1021. GASPARO CONTARINI to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Brion departed on the 26th ultimo. It is said he offered the Emperor the Venetian territory and all the rest of Italy; I do not believe this report to be entirely false.

The Bishop of London and Sir Richard Wyngfeld arrived from England at Toledo on the 24th of May, and had audience of the Emperor. They subsequently held frequent conferences with all the Imperial counsellors at the house of the Chancellor.

Their proposals are not entirely to the taste of the Imperial ministry, and from their countenances and language they seem not well satisfied.

I conversed on the subject with the Governor of Bresse, who said the Portuguese wish for war, and that the people of England, having paid heavy taxes without any result, and now perceiving the Emperor to have gained at less cost a glorious victory, are inclined for war, and even should Wolsey wish to advocate peace it is not in his power to do so.

The Chancellor had previously hinted to me that Tunstall and Wyngfeld had no commission to make peace.

I am informed that the English ambassadors proposed giving the Emperor a large sum of money on account of the marriage;† and for the grant of Bayonne some say that the King offers to place the Princess of England in the Emperor's hands, while others maintain that the Imperialists demand this concession from the King.

I have not heard in detail the claims of the English ambassadors, but I hear they demand the kingdom of France, and urge a speedy decision.

The Emperor is much embarrassed, as his means of carrying on the war against France are small, and he would be compelled to submit well nigh entirely to the King of England. On the other hand, the obstacles to peace with France are, the promise given to the Duke of Bourbon, the slight trust reposed by Imperialists in

* Duke Frederick of Saxony died on the 5th May 1525 (see L'Art de Vérifier les Dates).

1525.

Frenchmen, and the loss of the opportunity for recovering Burgundy and humbling the Crown of France.

I am inclined to believe in war with France, which would be the safest for the Italian powers.

Same caravels arrived lately at Seville from the Indies, bringing a certain amount of gold and a piece of artillery for the Emperor made of gold, silver, and metal; also a great quantity of small pearls and some live tigers (tigre vive). The value of the gold, including the piece of artillery and the consignment received a few days ago by the last caravels, amounts to 100,000 ducats, for account of the Emperor.

Toledo, 1st June 1525.

[Italian, 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ pages.]

June 2.

1022. FRENCH PIRATES IN ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. pp. 6, 7.

The ambassador of the King of England [Richard Pace] informed the College that he had received letters from England dated the 4th May, announcing that from stress of weather certain French corsairs had been driven upon the English coast, where they were seized, together with what they had plundered from Venetian subjects.

If the Signory or the merchants will send some one to obtain their property, with letters from the Signory, the ambassador will also write, and everything will be recovered. The Doge thanked him. Pace then asked for the reversion (expectativa) of a broker's patent in the German warehouse for a bastard (uno putanazzo) born of a German and a Venetian woman; so they promised him to have it put to the ballot at his request.

[Italian.]

June 2.

1023. ENGLISH AMBASSADOR in VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 7.

The English ambassador, Pace, said (in the College) that according to letters from England his King would cross over to France with his army, and merely awaits the Emperor's order. He then added that the State ought not to abstain from concluding the agreement with the Emperor for 20,000 ducats.

[Italian.]

June 3.

1024. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
Secreta,
File No. 9.

On the 1st of May the Viceroy [of Naples, Charles de Lannoy] proclaimed the league concluded by him between the Pope and the Emperor, and sent envoys urging the Signory to confirm the league stipulated between them and the Emperor. Replied each time that they considered the league good and valid, as at the period of its ratification; and their ambassador at the Imperial Court wrote that the Emperor also considered it valid. Nevertheless, after the many replies given to the Viceroy, the matter remains as by the four rejoinders made on the 22nd April and 1st, 12th, and 27th May, of which copies are enclosed. Orio will thereby comprehend all that has occurred, and is to inform the King and Cardinal making such use of the documents as expedient for the interests of the State. The Imperial ambassador at Venice, on hearing the Signory's last reply, said he would notify it to the Viceroy, from whom they have heard nothing further.

1525.

Have heard from Milan of the arrival of the Viceroy at Genoa on the 24th ultimo, together with the most Christian King, they having quitted Pizzighitone on the 18th. According to report the Viceroy had determined to convey the King to Naples by sea; some saying, moreover, that he would take him to Spain. Learn from a letter dated the 29th that they are to embark at Genoa, on board an armada numbering 15 galleys and five brigantines, the Viceroy having left the command of the army to the Marquis of Pescara until his return, which he said would take place in 40 days.

Orio has been informed of the wish of the State to effect a settlement with the Archduke Ferdinand. A commissioner from his Highness has since arrived at Venice, and they have commenced treating with him, in order to conclude what was proposed at Worms. Hope in a few days to see the result.

[Italian.]

June 3.

1025. LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England, to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 85.

Has been in constant expectation of audience of the King, who is taking his pleasure at a distance of many miles from London. Yesterday received notice that his Majesty would see him on Monday at Rumford, whither he will go for that purpose.

No greater preparation for the invasion of France is being made than such as was announced by him from Antwerp; so it seems that everything is suspended until they hear what is intended by the Emperor, and should he attack France, the King of England will do the like, but not otherwise.

According to news received in London from Lorraine, 24,000 Lutheran peasants have been cut to pieces by the Duke of Lorraine and his brother with the assistance of the French. It is also confirmed and certain that the Duke of Saxony has died a natural death.

Moreover, there have been great disturbances in England, the people having risen on account of a certain tribute imposed by the King, who demanded a universal property tax of one-third for the war; so on perceiving this insurrection against the Cardinal, the King sent two great personages, namely, the Duke of Suffolk and the Marquis of Monfort [Dorset?] to quiet them, and repealed the tax.

London, 3rd June. Registered by Sanuto, 27th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.

1026. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 23.

The Duke of Bourbon has received an express from England, informing him that the King will undertake the expedition and invade France.

Milan, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 7th June.

1525.

June 4.

1027. ZUAN FRANCESCO CONTARINI to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. pp.
46, 47.

The messenger from England said by word of mouth that the rising there against Cardinal Wolsey had been entirely quelled by the King, but at Inspruck this is not credited.

Inspruck, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 14th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.

1028. CARLO CONTARINI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 46.

The peasants of the country have risen, and will no longer pay tithes to the priests or prelates.

Last evening the Archduke sent to tell him that he had received a post, who came from England in three days, with news that the people there and many noblemen and gentlemen (signori) of that island had risen against the right reverend Cardinal of York, but that the King sought to quiet them as much as he could.

Inspruck, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 14th June.

[Italian.]

June 6.

1029. GASPARO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 357,
St. Mark's
Library.

Through their delegates in the Cortes, the kingdoms of Castile request the Emperor to marry the sister of the King of Portugal; so the order for the recal of Mons. de la Chau has been cancelled, and he is desired to remain there.

On the 2nd instant the English ambassadors despatched a courier to England, the reason being that the Imperial ministers have treated them to a rigmarole (li hanno dato una longola), saying that their commission was insufficient, and must be couched in another form.

At 11 p.m. on the 3rd instant Don Ugo de Moncada arrived at Toledo, and on the morrow, Whit Sunday, he remained alone for three hours with the Emperor, who then went to vespers; after which he summoned his Council, Don Ugo likewise, being in attendance.

On the 5th I asked the Chancellor what news Moncada brought. The Chancellor replied, "Really the King of France makes great offers, and takes the right road. First of all, he is willing to renounce to the Emperor his claims in the kingdom of Naples and his pretended rights in the duchy of Milan. In like manner he renounces the supremacy in Flanders and his rights in Tournay and the county of Artois. With regard to the line of the Somme, which Duke Charles of Burgundy possessed, not as his own property, but as security for 400,000 ducats or florins, he is willing to disburse that sum to the Emperor. Touching the duchy of Burgundy, he is content that the matter be discussed de jure, and if it belongs to the Emperor he will restore it to him freely. Should it not belong to the Emperor de jure, the King is then willing to take it on account of dower, either for himself, should he marry the Queen Dowager of Portugal [Eleanor of Austria], or as dower for her daughter, should this last marry the Dauphin; with the condition that should these marriages prove childless, the duchy of Burgundy do revert to the Emperor or his heirs.

1525.

"He likewise offers, should the Emperor choose to go with his army either against the Turk or into Germany or Italy, to supply half the forces, or to pay one half, at the Emperor's option. Should the King furnish troops, he chooses them to be under the command of the Duke of Bourbon. He moreover offers to come in person, should the Emperor desire, placing at his disposal the whole French fleet, which he would send to Barcelona, manning it with the Emperor's own troops, in case the Emperor passes into Italy.

"As a wife for the Duke of Bourbon he offers Madame Renée,* promising to restore all his territory; and touching his claims on the county of Provence, that a judicial investigation be made whether it appertain to him or not, and according to the decision de jure so be it done.

"He also makes reasonable proposals about England.

"As security, he offers to place all his children in the Emperor's hands.

"I see no difficulty in this, save the marriage of the King of France to the Queen Dowager of Portugal, she having been promised by the Emperor to the Duke of Bourbon; and this I say, provided the Parliaments of France ratify all the offers made by the King."

Has never seen the Chancellor Gattinara so well inclined as at present towards the agreement with France.

Toledo, 6th June 1525.

[Italian, 2½ pages.]

June 8.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 358,
St. Mark's
Library.

1030. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Chancellor and the Governor of Bresse have received briefs from the Pope, conferring the grade of Cardinal—the Chancellor for himself,† and the Governor of Bresse for his brother, the Bishop of Maurienne; the promotion to take place in the Ember days of September.

On the morning of the 3rd the Florentine ambassador [Giovanni Corsi] came in great haste to me, and said, "This King of France (may God damn him!)‡ has offered the Emperor to give him all your territory at his own cost; and then, should he accept them, he offers him the other Italian states likewise; but I can tell you positively that the Emperor does not choose to have war in Italy."

The Chancellor, when talking with the Nuncio [Castiglione] about the conditions of the peace with the King of England, said, "Should he get the arrears of tribute due to him, and the payment continued in future, he may be well satisfied."

The Chancellor has also said to me, "Matters are taking a good course; once for all, the Emperor does not choose to have war in Italy."

Toledo, 6th to 8th June 1525.

[Italian, 2¼ pages.]

* The second daughter of Lewis XII. and Anne of Brittany. In June 1528 she married Hercules of Este, son of Alfonso Duke of Ferrara.

† The Chancellor Gattinara did not avail himself of this brevet for the rank of Cardinal until the 13th of August 1529.

1525.

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 31.1031. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Was told yesterday by Sir Gregory Casal, who is here in the name of the King of England, that his Majesty is well disposed towards the Signory, and that he, Sir Gregory, on his way hither met the Ambassador Oriò crossing the sea, but being bound to Calais, he was thus unable to perform such office as due with him.

Milan, 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 10th June.

[Italian.]

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 75.1032. ANONYMOUS LETTER received by a MERCHANT at CREMA.

Mons. de Brion, who quitted the most Christian King at Genoa, has not yet arrived at Lyons. Jean de Selve, President of the Parliament of Paris, has departed on his way to Spain to the Emperor; and Dom. Gioachino [Passano] is gone to England, where (it is said for certain) the King has arrested the Imperial ambassador for a certain amount of money claimed by him as a debt due from the Emperor.

Lyons, 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd June.

[Italian.]

June 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 44.1033. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Intelligence has been received that the six French galleys have arrived at Genoa, to be manned by Spaniards. The Pope told him that the most Christian King would be taken to Spain and not to Naples, and desired this information to be kept secret.

His Holiness has also received advices from England, purporting that the King has written to the Emperor that he will send 200,000 ducats into Italy for the pay of the Emperor's army, wishing it to invade France, and that the Emperor also should remit a similar sum, lest the undertaking fail for lack of funds, as the King will do his utmost against France.

Rome, 9th and 10th June. Registered by Sanuto, 13th June.

[Italian.]

June 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 47.1034. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Duke of Bourbon has received letters from the Imperial Court at Toledo, dated the 28th May. The Emperor writes to him that he is sending Penalosa to the King of England to urge him to invade France in person, or should he not choose to do so, to provide a good sum of money and send it to Spain, as his Majesty will march his army into France, and cause him, Bourbon, to go to Spain for that purpose.

In the course of conversation the Duke of Bourbon said to him (Venier), "My lord, you may believe that the voyage of the most Christian King to Spain does not proceed from the Emperor's desire, but by the will of the Viceroy."

Milan, 11th June. Registered by Sanuto, 14th June.

1525.

June 12.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 360,
St. Mark's
Library.

1035. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, Venetian Ambassadors accredited to the Emperor, to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Chancellor said to the Florentine ambassador, "Don Ugo [de Moncada] and the Viceroy [De Lannoy] urge the Emperor to attack Italy and conquer it for himself; but the Emperor chooses peace and not war in Italy."

The Florentine ambassador also states that Don Ugo said to him [Corsi], "You Italians have a good advocate;" and when Corsi inquired who that advocate was, Moncada replied, "The Emperor is a good advocate for you."

Toledo, 12th June 1525.

[Italian, $\frac{1}{2}$ page.]

June 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 56.

1036. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Duke of Bourbon intends going to Spain by sea. He is ordered so to do by the Emperor, because, as the King of England does not cross over to France in person, the Emperor will not go to France in person, but will send Bourbon to command the troops in the direction of Perpignan, and attack France.

Milan, 12th June. Registered by Sanuto, 15th June.

[Italian.]

June 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 109.

1037. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On the 5th the King, who was at Windsor, sent two nobleman to him, one by name Lord Gillesland [Dacre?], the other Cavr. — Danse [Sir John Dauncy], who with a great number of horsemen accompanied him to his Majesty. Arrived at Windsor in the evening. Next morning they escorted him to the palace where his Majesty was with the Cardinal and the Dukes of Suffolk and Norfolk and the illustrious Marquis [of Dorset] and well-nigh all the knights of the Garter, whom the King had assembled in honour of his (Orio's) conference with him.

After presenting his credentials, and saluting the King in the Signory's name, alluded to the great account in which his Majesty was held by the Signory, and to the immense obligations conferred by his late father, and by his Majesty himself, on the State, their citizens, and merchants. Announced his appointment as resident ambassador.

Notified the Signory's grateful sense of Cardinal Wolsey's good offices in favour of the Republic, and those of the English agents at Rome and Venice, commending the wisdom, prudence, and address of the Right Reverend Richard Pace, whose proceedings, dictated by his Majesty, were approved by the Signory.

Sir Thomas More, a man of singular and rare learning, and in great favour with the King and Cardinal, returned thanks to the State for having sent an ambassador, declaring that the King would be as ready to gratify the Republic, as if he had a seat in the Venetian Senate. More then said that the King's good will towards the State was hereditary, and would be perpetual, and also commended Cardinal Wolsey for his demonstrations in favour of the Signory, such having been in accordance with the will of the 1525.

King. More then spoke in like terms of the negotiations of the Reverend Richard Pace and of the King's other agents in Italy.

This public ceremony being ended, went to mass, after which dined with the Cardinal, who afterwards took him to the Queen's chamber, where he was received so graciously as to surprise all the bystanders.

At the close of this audience the King took him by the hand and led him to a window, calling thither Cardinal Wolsey, and having made everybody else withdraw. The audience being then private, he (Orio) informed the King that the Signory were firmly bent on maintaining the confederacy stipulated two years ago with the Emperor, as they conclude the Emperor continues of this mind, and are the more confirmed in this belief because they know the Emperor to be allied with the King, whom he then urged to persevere in his hereditary protection of the State. The King then repeated the offers made at his public audience, saying that he wished for the best possible adjustment between the Emperor and the State, and that lest it should prove detrimental to the Republic the Signory must act with reserve, as they had done hitherto; and if any difficulty remained, he (the King) offered his mediation, provided the Signory desired it. After repeating the promise of his most powerful favour, the King inquired in what position the Signory's affairs with the Emperor were. Was then compelled to confess that he had received no letters and could give no information, which the King greatly regretted. Can do no more, having written letters, both public and private, to members of the College, without ever receiving any reply. Returned therefore to London, because his secretary is ill; hopes he will soon recover.

Is in such favour with the Cardinal and the King and Queen, and the whole kingdom is so satisfied with him, that should things proceed as he hopes, his service may prove agreeable to the State.

The King will be in London tomorrow, because he intends to confer a dukedom on a natural son of his, who is seven years old, and also to give him considerable territory. He has legitimatised him, and loves him like his own soul (et amalo quanto l'anima sua).*

On returning from the Court met the Flemish ambassadors [the Sieur de Bevres and the President of Mechlin] on their way to the King, with a gentleman [Penalosa] from Spain, who went in the first place to the Lady Margaret. Wished to ascertain the object of this gentleman's mission, but was obliged to await his arrival in London.

On visiting this gentleman elicited that he was come to notify to the King the Emperor's opinion that, in case the King of France refuses to make any restitution of the provinces occupied by him belonging to the Emperor, to England, and to the Duke of Bourbon, he (the Emperor) should invade France and the King of England should do the like. The King replied that this matter was of great importance, and that he had not yet made up his mind, but would do so, and communicate it to his ambassadors with the Emperor. From this answer the Imperialists in England infer, that for the present the King will not make any expedition against France. Is of their opinion.

* Henry Fitzroy was created Duke of Richmond on the 18th June 1525. (See Burke's "Extinct Peerages," p. 207.)

1525.

London, 12th June 1525. Registered by Sanuto, 1st July.

Note by Sanuto.—In the public letters Orio writes that the King said to him, laughing, "The Pope likewise used a little sleight of hand again yesterday (certe garbinelle erri ancora), but the Emperor is a good body (è bona persona).

At the private audience, when the King offered to adjust the differences between the Emperor and the Signory, he said, "The Pope did wrong to cancel his alliance, first with the most Christian King, and then with the Emperor likewise;" and with regard to the agreement now in course of negotiation, the Cardinal said, "You should procrastinate, and will thus effect it more advantageously."

The Spaniard who arrived in London from the Emperor told him (Orio) that the King spoke the Emperor fair, but would not wage war on France; adding, "The Emperor would do well not to make any agreement with the Signory, but he is unable to accomplish any of the projects desired by him, unless he be on terms with the Republic;" and, in conclusion, he expressed his conviction that at any rate the agreement would be stipulated for a smaller sum than had been originally demanded.

[Italian.]

June 13.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 361,
St. Mark's
Library.

1038. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, Venetian Ambassadors accredited to the Emperor, to the SIGNORY.

Navagero and Priuli made their entry into Toledo yesterday. They were met by the ambassadors from Florence, Genoa, Ferrara, Mantua, and Sienna, and the Milanese secretary.

The Emperor sent the Bishop of Cuenca and the Admiral of the Indies [Diego Columbus, the eldest son and heir of Christopher] to meet them. They had audience today, and their reception was gracious. The Emperor would never allow them to kiss his hand.

Toledo, 12th and 13th June 1525.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

June 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 65.

1039. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

On the demise of Duke Frederick of Saxony he was succeeded by his brother, Duke John, who is also at the point of death. He has a son, a young man much beloved and desired by all.*

Inspruck, 13th June. Registered by Sanuto, 19th June.

[Italian.]

June 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 91.

1040. FRANCESCO GONZAGA to ———.

The Emperor has written an autograph letter to the Pope in the most loving terms possible. He ratifies the league and confederacy made in Italy without altering anything. Although Count Baldassare [Castiglione] writes that pecuniary supply is being raised for the war in France, and that England insisted much on attacking with a very large army, the Pope nevertheless is of opinion that the most Christian King's voyage to Spain will change the plans and projects formed hitherto, and that an agreement will be effected; nor does he think it will be detrimental to Italy.

* Duke John survived until 1532, and was succeeded by his son, John Frederick the Magnanimous.

1525.

Rome, 13th June. Registered by Sanuto, 29th June.

[Italian.]

June 14.

Lettere
del Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 9.

1041. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

The Viceroy having departed from Genoa with his most Christian Majesty on board, the fleet went to Portofino, distant thence about 20 miles, and remained there some days. Have received intelligence from Milan and elsewhere that, by order of the most Christian King, six of his galleys were sent from Marseilles to Genoa, where the French crews disembarked and were replaced by Spaniards. They then all together, numbering 21 galleys, quitted those waters on the night of Thursday the 8th, and with the most Christian King and the Viceroy steered towards Spain.

[Italian.]

June 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 55.

1042. REGINALD POLE in VENICE.

It is Corpus Christi Day, and the Doge, clad in cloth of gold with a crimson satin mantle and crimson ducal cap, came to mass in St. Mark's Church, with the ambassadors from the Pope, England, Austria, Milan, Ferrara, and Mantua, the Emperor's ambassador not being present on account of indisposition. Behind them with the councillors was the nephew of the King of England, who is studying at Padua, and who walked with Dom. Giacomo da Pesaro, Bishop of Paphos.* Next came the councillors with the pilgrims of rank,† &c.

[Italian.]

June 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 63.

1043. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the SIGNORY.

Count Gerardo di Archo, who was sent by the Duke of Milan to the Switzers, has returned, accompanied by an ambassador about the affairs of Count Ludovic Borromeo, whom the Switzers wish to have restored to his estates, to which the Duke will not consent; so that this matter is being negotiated.

Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador, is on his way to Rome, where he will remain until further orders from his King

* The portrait of this prelate, by Titian, is yet visible in the church of the "Frari" at Venice, the picture having been ordered by the Bishop for the Altar of the Conception. Titian's receipts for the sum paid for this work exist in the archives of the Gradenigo family, which inherited the Pesaro property. The last of the Venetian Pesari died an exile at Bath in the present century.

† The Venetian galleys which conveyed pilgrims to the Holy Land took their departure after Ascension-tide, and their appearance on St. Mark's Square on Corpus Christi Day is recorded in Sir R. Guylforde's Pilgrimage, A.D. 1506.

1525.

Casal has told me that if the Imperial army advances, he shall return and accompany it.

Milan, 16th June. Registered by Sanuto, 18th June.

[Italian.]

June 16.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 363,
St. Mark's
Library.

1044. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Chancellor has received letters from England to the effect that the King, whether in waging war or making peace, referred himself thoroughly to the Emperor.

In reply to our remark that the English ambassadors at Toledo professed to have neither mandate nor power for the conclusion of peace, the Chancellor answered, "They will doubtless find it when needed."

Today the Governor of Bresse told us that the Emperor insisted on the duchy of Burgundy. We are of opinion that the King of France will cede Burgundy from sheer weariness of imprisonment.

Toledo, 16th June, 1525.

[Italian, 3 pages.]

June 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 96.

1045. FRANCESCO GONZAGA to ———.

The Emperor's secretary Perone [sic, Antoine Perrenot ?] is going to Rome, both to acquaint the Pope with the causes which induced the determination to take the King to Spain rather than to Naples, (the Viceroy likewise on quitting Genoa having apologized by letter to his Holiness, for not giving him earlier notice of the change of plan, as it was formed suddenly by commission from the Emperor), and also for certain other reasons, as by the last letters from England it seems that the project of war against France had somewhat cooled, which is attributed to their having heard of the French King's voyage to Spain. This probably makes the King of England suspect that if the Emperor and France effect an agreement together, all consideration for his Majesty will be dispensed with.

Rome, 17th June. Registered by Sanuto, 30th June.

[Italian.]

June 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. pp. 68-
69.

1046. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the SIGNORY.

The Imperialists are expecting letters from Spain, their delay being attributed to the Emperor's negotiations with the King of England, the King of Portugal, and the King of France.

Should the first proceed, the two others will be at an end, because if the King of England gives the Princess to the Emperor, the latter can no longer negotiate with the King of Portugal, who only desires to marry his eldest sister to the Emperor. With the most Christian King there is nothing to be done, because if the English King insists on Guienne and part of Picardy, and lays claim to the Crown of France, the Emperor, as his ally, cannot give ear to the most Christian King. If the Emperor listens to the King of Portugal the first negotiation ceases; but should the King of England not insist on the marriage of his daughter, the Emperor might co-operate with him in the other matters.

1525.

On the other hand, if the Emperor listens to the most Christian King the first negotiation with the English King will cease entirely, and his Imperial Majesty remain with France and Portugal. Such are the reports.

Milan, 18th June. Registered by Sanuto, 20th June.

[Italian.]

June 18.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 364,
St. Mark's
Library.

1047. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

We have had an interview with the Bishop of Osma, President of the Council of the Indies, and the Emperor's confessor.

The confessor said he was glad to see the two new ambassadors at the Court, because there was a person who sought to sow discord between the Emperor and the Republic, that person being the King of France, who, through the Comendador Penalosa, informed the Emperor that he would show him letters, whereby the Emperor would be well enabled to know his friends and enemies. We replied that this conveyed no accusation against the Republic; and the confessor continued, "He mentioned especially the Signory of Venice. Moreover, letters arrived from Italy a few days ago vituperating the Republic vastly, so that they are in great disrepute at this Court." To this we made answer that good men and those who were envied had always their slanderers, and that a captive to get out of prison would give and offer everything, but that they well knew the Emperor's ears were not so open to all evil speakers.

This last remark, concerning the Emperor, was corroborated by the confessor, but he did not enter into any further particulars.

Toledo, 18th June 1525.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

June 22.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 365,
St. Mark's
Library.

1048. The SAME to the SAME.

Whilst the Court was in daily expectation of news of the arrival at Naples of the King of France, and of the squadron which was to bring the Duke of Bourbon to Spain, letters arrived at Toledo on the morning of the 20th, dated Barcelona the 17th.

They purport that on the 15th, off Collioure,* a fleet of 20 galleys and other sail were seen steering towards Spain. On the 16th this fleet anchored off Rosas for provisions, and on board of it were the King of France and the Viceroy [De Lannoy], who set sail from Villa Franca, in Provence, on the 11th.

Yesterday we went to the Chancellor to hear how this so unexpected an event had come to pass. We understood, through several channels, that the Chancellor had not the slightest knowledge of this intention. He told us that it was indeed the Emperor's wish that the King of France should be brought to Spain, as announced by him, the Emperor, to the Viceroy, but he ordered the King's removal to Naples, on account of the dangers of the Spanish voyage; so that this intelligence, although agreeable to the Emperor, was a surprise to him.

* A port six leagues to the south of Perpignan.

1525.

The Viceroy subsequently obtained the six galleys of France, which he manned with his own crews; and as the King had given orders that the rest of his fleet was not to stir, the Viceroy was then of opinion that he could bring him to Spain in safety.

Concerning various matrimonial alliances which were talked of, the Chancellor said that the Duchess of Alençon wished to marry the Emperor. When we replied that the Emperor should negotiate and end by marrying the Princess of Portugal, the Chancellor answered, "We are awaiting an answer from England; until then we can form no resolve." We then expressed surprise that Tunstall and Wyngfield had brought no decision, most especially concerning the marriage. The Chancellor replied, "They merely came with a commission about making war; I also believe that, with regard to the marriage of the Princess, they incline to the King of Scotland, for the sake of uniting those two kingdoms. I know not; we shall see the result."

Toledo, 22nd June 1525.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

June 26.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 367,
St. Mark's
Library.

1049. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

The King of France is in a palace near Barcelona, where he was well received by the municipal government.

Letters from Rome, dated the 23rd and 24th ultimo, announce great disturbances in Germany, owing to the Lutheran affairs, concerning which the State will be much better informed through another channel.

Toledo, 26th June 1525.

[Italian, 1 page.]

June 28.
Lettere del
Collegio,
Secreta.
File no. 9.

1050. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

To return ample thanks to the Cardinal for the loving and honorable demonstration made towards the representative of the Signory. The Duke of Bourbon and other personages, the Imperial commanders in Italy, having urged them to decide about the proposal made heretofore in the name of the Viceroy with regard to the 120,000 ducats demanded of the State for his Highness's need in Italy, the Imperialists have consented to accept the 80,000 ducats, payable in two instalments. To this effect the Signory have drawn up a writing and sent it to Milan. Will acquaint him with the result.

Concerning the progress of the Spanish forces quartered in the territories of Ferrara, Parma, Piacenza, and other places in the Milanese, understand that, with the exception of some 2,500 Spanish foot in the Ferrarese, the rest have recently marched towards Monferrat, for the purpose, as reported, of attacking Saluzzo, which city, however, is (they understand) very well garrisoned, and some French troops are mustering for its defence.

About a month ago an ambassador arrived at Venice from the Grand Turk ("Signor Turco," Solyman II.) concerning certain affairs of private individuals who claimed damages from Venetian subjects. The Signory justified the matter by a true statement, and he departed yesterday well satisfied.

1525.

Since their last have heard nothing further respecting the voyage of the most Christian King and the Viceroy to Spain. The Bishop of Bayeux [Lodovico di Canossa] came lately from Rome to Venice,* being sent by the most Serene Regent of France, the mother of the most Christian King. He besought the Signory's good offices, for the release of the most Christian King, with the Pope, requesting his and our intercession with the Emperor; because, if the Almighty grant the most Christian King his liberty, he would hazard his life and kingdom for the benefit of the Christian religion, and not attack any sovereign in any quarter; and France was well prepared for defence. The Signory promised to use their good offices.

All these particulars have been communicated to the Rev. Richard Pace, with whose proceedings they daily become more and more satisfied. Suppose that, with his usual diligence and assiduity, Pace has imparted all the intelligence to his Majesty and the Cardinal.

Enclose news-letters respecting the progress of the peasants in Lower Germany, the insurrections in Hungary, and those which have taken place at Constantinople, for communication to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

June 28. 1051. LETTER written by the COLLEGE to ENGLAND, respecting what it has been determined to give the Emperor, that it may be communicated to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

June 29. 1052. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY. An ambassador has arrived here from France. The King has created his natural son, by name Henry, aged seven years, Duke of Buckingham (Beuchingen), with an annual rental amounting to 40,000 ducats; also Earl of Richmond and Viceroy,† so that he takes precedence of everybody; and on this occasion certain ceremonies were performed.

Dom. Giovanni Gioachino [Passano], ambassador from France or from Madame the Regent, has arrived in London. He conferred with the Cardinal, and negotiated an agreement between France and England; but the King apparently demands Boulogne, which having been refused him, it seems that at length the agreement has been concluded by payment of a considerable sum of money, France being also bound not to make any agreement with the Emperor without the consent of the King of England.

London, 23rd, 25th, 27th and 29th June. Registered by Sanuto, 17th July.

[Italian.]

* The biographers of Lodovico Canossa make no mention of this embassy, though they allude to the fact of his being at Venice in the month of July 1525.

† Lieutenant-general of all the King's forces north of Trent, and warden of the marches of Scotland. (See Burke's Extinct Peerages, p. 208.)

1525.

June 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 157.

1053. LORENZO ORIO to ——— (a private letter).

The King came to London for the festival of the Corpus Domini, and on the following Sunday, the 18th, created a natural son of his, aged seven years, by name Henry, Earl of Nottingham and Viceroy, and subsequently Duke of Richmond and Donisan [Somerset?], conferring on him, in conclusion, the highest grade in the kingdom, so that now he is next in rank to his Majesty.

After this the King created his nephew * Earl of Exeter, making two of his cousins, one a marquis, the other an earl; and of four other gentlemen two were made earls, and two viscounts, with great ceremony and festivity.

The King then returned to Windsor, and will continue taking his pleasure during the hot weather, though on Corpus Christi Day, both his Majesty and he (Orio) and many others wore gowns lined with lynx's fur, because it was cold.

Has been marvellously well received, and with great honour, but complains of having had no letters from the Signory or any news from Venice.

It seems that the Queen resents the earldom and dukedom conferred on the King's natural son and remains dissatisfied, at the instigation, it is said, of three of her Spanish ladies, her chief counsellors; so the King has dismissed them the Court, — a strong measure, but the Queen was obliged to submit and to have patience.

London, 29th June. Registered by Sanuto, 17th July.

[Italian.]

June.

1054. NEWS FROM SPAIN.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 147.

Perusal in the Senate of intercepted letters received from Rome, having been written from Spain to Cardinal Colonna by his envoy there.

The envoy had been well received by the Emperor and the grandees. He urged the Emperor to go to Italy for his coronation, because if he lost so good an opportunity he would regret it hereafter. Told him also that in case of need his master (the Cardinal) would go to Spain to meet him, which pleased the Emperor, who is going to Saragossa and Valencia for the Cortes, to obtain as much money as possible. He will then go Barcelona, to be nearer Italy, as he is inclined to go thither, for which purpose he will hold the Cortes in Castile, Aragon, and Valencia, hoping to obtain 800,000 ducats. The grandees have informed him that before his departure they wish him to marry, and exhort him to take the Princess of Portugal, with whom he would receive a million of gold, and not the English Princess, about whom he thought less than of the first named. * He will marry before quitting Spain.

Toledo, — June. Registered by Sanuto, 12th July.

[Italian.]

July 1.

1055. RICHARD PACE in VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 107.

The English ambassador, Richard Pace, came into the College, saying he purposed going for a few days to Conegliano for change of air.

[Italian.]

* Henry Courtenay, Earl of Devonshire.

1525.

July 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 109.

1056. NEWS from ENGLAND and GERMANY.

At noon the courier, Zuan Gobo, arrived from England with letters from the Ambassador Orio, dated 10th June;* also from the Ambassador Contarini at Inspruck, dated the 26th. The Doge read them to the Grand Council.

Zuan Gobo said by word of mouth, that the Diet at Inspruck had been dissolved re infectâ, and that certain peasants had been routed by 16,000, but 1,500 noblemen and gentlemen were slain.

[Italian.]

July 4.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 369,
St. Mark's
Library.

1057. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

The Comendador Penalosa returned from England four days ago. The Emperor had sent him to the King to announce his readiness to wage war on France, though, at the moment having no money, it was requisite that the King should accommodate him with a considerable sum.

With regard to the marriage, the Emperor required the King to send his daughter to Spain.

Should the King refuse his consent, the Emperor then demanded absolution from the oath taken by him with regard to this marriage, because for the satisfaction of his subjects it was necessary he should marry.

Penalosa was desired to communicate his instructions to the Archduchess Margaret, and should she alter them in any part, he was to consider the alteration as made by the Emperor.

The Archduchess cancelled the last clause concerning absolution from the oath; and Penalosa, on arriving in England, merely acquainted the King with the first two proposals, to which he now brings back a refusal, accompanied with many apologies. He is also the bearer of an ample power for the English ambassadors. The Emperor's ministers make friendly demonstrations towards the English ambassadors, and profess to acquaint them with the whole of the negotiation for peace with France. For the truth of this we do not vouch.

On the arrival of the King of France at Barcelona he had a slight attack of fever, and so remained there some days, and then embarked on galley-board for Valencia. On the voyage he landed at Tarragona, where he lodged in the castle. Some 500 Spaniards mutinied against the Viceroy, and went to his quarters to take his life, but he escaped through a window, and wandered over the fields the whole of that night. The mutineers then proceeded to the castle. The King of France was there with the Captain Alarçon, and hearing the noise he went to a window, at which instant a harquebuse shot passed within a span of his head, so that he had a narrow escape.

Toledo, 4th July 1525.

[Italian, 3½ pages.]

* This letter is dated 12th June. See no. 1037.

1525.

July 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 129.1058. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Emperor chooses his sister Madame Eleanor to be the wife of the Duke of Bourbon, and the latter is to proceed to Spain to consummate the marriage (per finir ditte nozze). The Emperor orders the Marquis of Pescara to continue in command of the army in the Milanese during the whole of the present month. At the time when he gave that order his Imperial Majesty knew nothing of the most Christian King's departure with the Viceroy.

The marriage of the Princess of England to his Imperial Majesty is much urged, and as security she is to be placed in the hands of the Emperor's aunt, Madame Margaret. Great efforts are also made to give the Emperor the sister of the King of Portugal. It is reported in Spain that there are secret negotiations on foot for that purpose; but the Emperor does not disapprove of the betrothal of Madame Eleanor's daughter to the Dauphin.

Milan, 4th July. Registered by Sanuto, 7th July.

[Italian.]

July 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 134.1059. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope had received letters, dated London, from his Nuncio, that an envoy had arrived there from the Emperor to conclude the marriage with his Majesty's daughter, she receiving a dower of 400,000 ducats.

The Cardinal answered him, in the King's name, that he would conclude nothing until after the receipt of a reply from his ambassadors with the Emperor.

Rome, 5th July. Registered by Sanuto, 7th July.

[Italian.]

July 5.

Consiglio X.,
Parti Secrete,
Filza prima.1060. COUNCIL OF TEN AND JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador at Rome.

Their ambassador in England has been graciously received by the King and Cardinal. No warlike preparation was being made, and two ambassadors were expected from the kingdom of France.

Ayes, 23. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian.]

July 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 182.1061. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

King Henry answered the Spanish ambassadors [De Praet and Peñalosa] with regard to his daughter's marriage to the Emperor, that the King would not consent to it. Cardinal Wolsey recommends the State not to make any agreement with the Emperor, because the Spaniards are detested. The Spanish ambassadors urge the King to invade France, and he gives them fair words.

London, 5th July. Registered by Sanuto, 28th July.

[Italian.]

July [5 ?].

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 183.1062. LORENZO ORIO to the CHIEFS of the TEN.

Has spoken to the French ambassador, Giovanni Gioachino [Passano], who told him that the affairs between the King of England and France were already, as it were, concluded, and the 1525.

former will give his daughter in marriage to the Dauphin. Understands, moreover, that the Emperor sent to demand the King's daughter, and that he would take her to wife, receiving 400,000 ducats for residue of the dower, including what has already been paid him. Should the King refuse to give him his daughter, the Emperor then demands 200,000 ducats. But they will give him nothing, and the Cardinal commends the Signory for delaying any payment to the Emperor.

San Luco (sic), ———. Registered by Sanuto, 28th July.

[Italian.]

July 6.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 370,
St. Mark's
Library.

1063. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Announces the proffered resignation of the Chancellor Gattinara. The Emperor displeased with the Viceroy, De Lannoy, for having sent a love letter from the King of France to the Queen Dowager of Portugal.

Toledo, 6th July 1525.

[Italian, 1 page.]

July 9.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 371,
St. Mark's
Library.

1064. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

The Viceroy, De Lannoy, made his entry into Toledo on the evening of the 6th; and on the morrow was closeted alone with the Emperor for four hours. In the afternoon the Emperor assembled the Council, which sat till nightfall, the Chancellor not being present on account of his proffered resignation. The Chancellor returned to office on the 8th of July; excellent news for all the Italian powers, and for all negotiators at the Imperial Court.

Today the English ambassadors were summoned to the Chancellor's house to receive information concerning the negotiations in course.

Death of the Marquis of Brandenburg, the husband of Queen Germaine, widow of Ferdinand the Catholic.

Toledo, 9th July 1525.

[Italian, 4 pages.]

July 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 140.

1065. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope told him that according to letters from Spain, dated 17th June, the Emperor had sent money for the outfit of 50 galleys, and would come into Italy this year for his coronation. He has dismissed the French ambassadors, being determined to wage war on France, and not to accept the agreement. Should France commence hostilities he will attack her by sea and land, and the Cortes which he is about to hold will give him for this purpose 4,000,000 (sic) of gold and 600,000 ducats. He is determined by all means to give his sister, Madame Eleanor, to the Duke of Bourbon. The Pope sends 10,000 ducats to the Archduke Ferdinand, to assist him against the peasants.

Arrival at Rome of the envoy from the Duke of Milan, who told the Pope that he is willing to join the league, provided France consent to his holding the Milanese and give him for wife Madame 1525.

Renée, the King's sister-in-law, or else the Duchess of Alençon, with an understanding that, in case any power molest the Duke of Milan, Italy shall be bound to aid him with 12,000 infantry and 1,000 men-at-arms.

The Pope informed him (the Venetian ambassador) that the negotiations were proceeding favorably, and that the Signory should have 20 galleys for the undertaking; the Duke of Milan likewise fortifying his towns, under pretence of fear of the French. The Pope also wishes the Venetian troops to march towards Piacenza; so he is very hot for the conclusion of the league. Lord Albert of Carpi sends his secretary to France to obtain the consent of Madame, the Regent. The Pope is convinced that the King of England will join Italy.

Rome, 7th and 9th July. Registered by Sanuto, 12th July.

[Italian.]

July 10.
Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 372,
St. Mark's
Library.

1066. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

Today the Duke of Bourbon's agent, Mons. de Lursi, dined with us.

He said that Montmorenci, the French ambassador, told the Emperor that the King of France was his slave and prisoner, but that it depended on the Emperor to render the King his brother, and to form relationship with him. The Emperor replied that he was the King's brother, so far as one sovereign might be styled the brother of another, but he had never been, nor was he, his friend; and he had no sister whatever [to give him], as the one he had, belonged already to Monsr. de Bourbon. We do not know whether these words should be credited.

Montmorenci had a long conference with the Queen Dowager of Portugal. After his (Montmorenci's) departure, Lursi told her he was acquainted with all that Montmorenci had said to her, and repeated it. She admitted the whole, and then, in a long discourse, Lursi endeavoured to deter her from marrying the King of France. He said that of the King personally, he neither would nor could speak evil, as he was a very gallant sovereign; but she must first of all remember that she would pass under the yoke of Madame the Regent, who was a most terrible woman,* and would treat her like a servant wench; that in the next place the King's amorous temperament would always render her the most jealous woman in the world, and that he moreover had been and was much diseased with pox, which malady the late Queen caught from him and died of it; that the children which the Queen of Portugal might bear the Emperor could not hope for high station, as on the King's death, the Dauphin, his successor, would seek to aggrandize his other brothers, and that it would be much if she even obtained a revenue of from 10,000 to 20,000 ducats, though it was true that, if the children of the King by his first wife were to die, her own children would inherit the Crown. The same result would however be obtained by her marrying Monsr. de 1525.

* "Una terribilissima dona."

Bourbon, the next heir to the throne; independently of which she might be well satisfied with the certain inheritance for her children of such a territory as that of Monsr. de Bourbon, who would always be on a par with a King of France.

To these arguments the Queen replied that she meant to do whatever should be commanded her by the Emperor, her lord, whose will she would never dispute in anything.

Have written all that was told us, though possibly more than really took place.

Toledo, 10th July 1525.

[Italian, 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ pages.]

July 11.

1067. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 194.

The Cardinal urges the Signory to delay making the agreement with the Emperor. News had been received here of its rejection, the Emperor having refused the Signory's proposals; so the Cardinal said to him (Orio), "Tell them not to make terms, because my King will make an agreement with France and with the Pope and you, and not allow any stir to be made, and Spain and France, and England likewise, must remain at home."

The Bishop of London has received advices purporting that certain Spanish troops had marched towards Narbonne, which is considered untrue.

11th July (no date of place). Registered by Sanuto, 31st July.

[Italian.]

July 14.

1068. DOM. FRANCESCO GONZAGA to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 190.

Letters from England, dated 28th June, state that the English King, on hearing that the most Christian King had been taken to Spain, was displeased and dissatisfied with the Emperor, so that he desists from making war on France, as was also asserted previously; and thus it is certain that France is secure from war in that quarter.

Rome, 14th July. Registered by Sanuto, 28th July.

[Extract, Italian.]

July 15.

1069. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 374,
St. Mark's
Library.

Mons. de Montmorenci departed for France on the 11th. On his way thither he will confer with the King, between whom and the Emperor he has stipulated a truce, to which the English ambassadors likewise are parties. This truce is to last throughout December to the 1st of January, and will be observed on land, so that the Emperor's couriers and those of the King may pass mutually through the territories of the two Crowns during the whole of this period without further safeconducts. Mons. de Montmorenci was also the bearer of a safeconduct from the Emperor for Madame d'Alençon and 300 horse, the King, on the other hand, having signed a safeconduct for Monsr. de Bourbon to come to Spain by sea.

We have conferred with the Chancellor Gattinara concerning a pecuniary grant demanded from the Republic on behalf of the Emperor.

1525.

Gattinara answered our apologies with a smile, saying, "I will speak plainly to you, not as the Emperor's Chancellor, but as an Italian. In the first place, you must know that the Viceroy [of Naples, De Lannoy] had no power from the Emperor to give any written confirmation whatever of the old alliance, nor has he ever spoken about this; so that if you choose to disburse 80,000 ducats to oblige the Emperor, without drawing up any other writing, and abide by the old one, we will accept that sum. If you require a fresh document to be drawn up, as I perceive you to hint—and I advise you to obtain such—you must then draw on that treasury of yours.

"You know that I am an Italian, and anxious for the welfare of Italy; once for all, let us get these Spaniards (who go plundering and destroying everything) out of the country. The way to get them out is to pay them, so let us find the money. Then you perceive that these two sovereigns are always proposing mutual agreements. If you knew what has been suggested, and how much we have been pressed—the King of France offering first of all to exhibit letters or papers which would convince the Emperor, then proposing to furnish half the troops, or money to defray half the expenditure—if you knew the whole, you would perceive that my advice is good, and you would arrange your affairs today rather than tomorrow."

On the following morning, the 13th, we went to the Viceroy [De Lannoy], who received us graciously, and at the close of the conference said, "I recommend the State to secure herself today rather than tomorrow; you perceive that an adjustment is now in course of negotiation between these two sovereigns. God knows what may be arranged. I purpose favouring the State to the utmost; let them give 120,000 crowns, and the document shall be made out."

We told him it was impossible to pay so considerable an amount, and requested audience of the Emperor.

De Lannoy conducted us upstairs, and the Emperor came forth from a closet into the chamber. We then repeated what we had said to the Chancellor.

The Emperor replied that he had already announced his intention of establishing peace in Italy, and not waging war there; that to this effect he on the preceding day had sent the investiture to the Duke of Milan, that it might no longer be said that he, the Emperor, desired that territory for himself; that he did not consider the alliance broken, but was unacquainted with the Signory's view of the matter, and that if the State considered a written reconfirmation necessary, he would give it. With regard to the complaint about the galleys* he said, "You know very well that there was no bad faith—that is to say, deceit or malice—and even had there been any I had cause for it. I have spent much more money than I should have done had your forces joined mine in due season, as they would then have been in the field some months previously. The difference is small—only 40,000 ducats—I am certain the Signory will not haggle about this. I will send the power to my ambassador at Venice, and there the matter will be settled.”

* In letter no. 324, date 7th February 1525, there is an account of the arrest at Almazarron of the masters of the Barbary galleys by the officials of the Romish Inquisition on a charge of selling bibles. It was subsequently said that the Spaniards had intended to seize the galleys, but timely notice given by Gasparo Contarini to the captain averted the danger.

1525.

To our expostulations the Emperor answered, laughing, “I am now poor, I must incur vast expenditure; you are rich, and not obliged to spend so much: you must assist me.”

We rejoined, also laughing, that all ambassadors on quitting his Majesty received some present, and as we (Contarini and Priuli) were returning home, we besought him not to make a difficulty about the amount, and thus confer on us the honour of going back with credit.

The Emperor said, “Had you the power, something might be done.”

We again urged him so to modify the order given to his ambassador. The Emperor laughed, without making any farther reply, and dismissed us with a joyful countenance.

Subsequently we discussed this matter with the Chancellor, who said he did not think Monsr. de Bourbon would be content to break off his marriage with the Queen of Portugal. He then read letters from the Bishop of Trent concerning the movements of the rustic Lutherans in Germany (the peasants’ war), especially in the Tyrol. He also said the Emperor was expecting news from England, and that he would not comply with the wishes of Wolsey, who wanted to make peace with the King of France, reserving place for the Emperor, but that they (the English?) were to have their pensions, and other things besides.* Endeavoured to elicit from Gattinara what these “other things” were, but he did not seem to specify anything save payment of the arrears of pensions.

Today the President of the Parliament of Paris [Jean de Selve] made his entry into Toledo.

Toledo, 15th July 1525.

[Italian, 11½ pages.]

July 18.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 9.

1070. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Note what the Cardinal said to him, that the Signory had again signed the confederacy with the Emperor, and that he was surprised he had received no advice of this. The Cardinal judged rightly, for had such a conclusion been effected, it would have been announced to him (Orio) for communication to the King and his right rev. Lordship.

To inform them that, after the Duke of Bourbon and the other Imperial commanders had consented to accept the 80,000 ducats, the Signory drew up a writing and sent it to Milan, and as there was not a sufficient power from the Emperor, they took time (si è scorsi), and no agreement was concluded; neither did more than what is above written take place. When next letters are sent to England giving news of such importance, and he receive no similar intelligence from the Signory, he is to deny it positively, as if it were true they would have given him notice.

* Qu. Tribute and pensions promised to Wolsey and other ministers. In the original, “ma che haveriano le loro pensione, etiam qualche altra cosa.” Concerning pensions paid by the Emperor to Cardinal Wolsey and other English ministers, see before, pp. 259–260.

1525.

In their letter of the 28th announced the arrival at Venice of the Bishop of Bayeux, who was sent from Rome by the most Serene Regent [Louise of Savoy]. He was followed by Dom. Lorenzo Fassan with his commission. Dom. Lorenzo went on to Rome to perform the like office with the Lord Albert of Carpi, who by the Pope's order has sent his secretary, D. Sigismondo, to the Regent in France, to obtain from her and from the kingdom a valid mandate to proceed to such negotiations as his Holiness shall deem expedient for the liberty and security of Italy and for the benefit of France.

Are glad to hear that an adjustment has been made between his Majesty of England and the kingdom of France. If effected, it must prove to the benefit, not only of France, but of Italy, and on its conclusion his Holiness, the Venetian Signory, and the other Italian potentates will be encouraged to join the aforesaid union. Should the adjustment take place, he is to inform the King and Cardinal that it is the will of the State, in conjunction with the Pope and the Duke of Milan, to join the said union with the kingdom of France.

Are moreover informed by their ambassador at Rome, in date of the 5th and 9th instant, that the Pope told him he had heard from the English ambassador there that his King was most excellently disposed in favour of Italy, and that the Pope had desired the Papal auditor [Ghinucci] so to contrive that his Majesty do persevere in his goodwill, and had determined that Sir Gregory Casal should return to England for this purpose; requesting the Signory to order him (Orio) to assist the Papal Auditor. Therefore, should he perceive that the King and Cardinal persevere in this excellent purpose, he, conjointly with the Papal Auditor, when a fitting opportunity presents itself, is to endeavour to confirm the King and Cardinal in their bias.

To use all diligence to obtain a copy of the mandate whereby the adjustment between England and France is to be effected, that they may be convinced of its validity, and see whether it is authenticated by the Regent and kingdom of France, or by authority received by the Regent from the most Christian King, her son, or in virtue of what form of mandate the adjustment will be concluded.

[Italian.]

July 18.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File No. 9.

1071. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Satisfied to hear how graciously he was received at his first audience by the King, and that he visited the Queen and the ambassadors of the Lady Margaret. Commend his proceedings.

The accompanying summaries, for communication to his Majesty and the Cardinal, will show what has reached the State concerning the disturbances in Germany. Have heard nothing new with regard to Hungary and Constantinople, nor of the Spanish forces in Italy, which, it is reported, have joined these of Savoy, and intend to march against Saluzzo, although that city is said to be well garrisoned.

1525.

[Italian.]

July 20.
Lettere del
Collégio
(Secreta).

1072. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Acquaint him with the Turkish news, that he may communicate the same to the King and Cardinal.

Have heard that the Grand Turk (Signor Turco) is fitting out his armada in haste, to undertake an expedition in the spring.

[Italian.]

July 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 229.

1073. LORENZO ORIO to the SIGNORY.

The plague is raging most violently in London, the deaths amounting to 50 per diem. The King is in the country. Narrates his conversations with the Cardinal, and how a maritime truce had been stipulated between the Emperor and France. The Cardinal said that he also purposed going into the country, and that the King would never consent to the Emperor's making himself monarch of the world; and he exhorted the Signory to procrastinate the agreement with the Emperor, having received letters to the effect that the Pope gives similar advice. The Cardinal heard of the arrival in Venice of the Bishop of Bayeux, which pleased him greatly, and that the Signory is forming a league with France, as the King of England will do everything [that is to be desired], notwithstanding his relationship with the Emperor. Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, the French ambassador in London, told him (Orio) that he had received letters from Lyons, dated the 16th July, authorizing him to conclude the agreement between England and France, and he expects the commission to that effect to arrive in England on the 24th July.

London, 13th, 15th, and 21st July. Registered by Sanuto, 13th August.

Note by Sanuto, that there were two other letters addressed to Chiefs of the Ten.

[Italian.]

July 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 253.

1074. DOM. SOARDINO [to the MARQUIS of MANTUA?]

Has heard from an authentic quarter that the marriage negotiation on the part of Spain has somewhat cooled, because Portugal sought to include clauses concerning the disputes about the Moluccas and Malacca, the matter being of very great pecuniary importance by reason of the spice trade. Though to this the Emperor would not give ear, yet he continues the negotiation, without, however, abandoning the one with England. At Toledo it is supposed that he acts thus to let England and Portugal know that they must outbid each other for the amount of dower; so as yet it cannot be known on which of the two Princesses the choice will fall.

Toledo, 21st July. Registered by Sanuto, 25th August.

[Latin.]

1525.

July 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 169.1075. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Imperial commanders have received letters from Spain dated 27th June.

The marriage contract between the Emperor and the sister of the King of Portugal has been signed and settled, and Bourbon told me that this was done with the consent of the King of England, who will give his daughter in marriage to the King of Scotland, his nephew.

The Duke of Bourbon also says that the Spanish grandees do not choose his Imperial Majesty to quit Spain until after the pregnancy of his wife, as chosen by him.

Milan, 22nd July. Registered by Sanuto, 25th July.

[Italian.]

July 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 167.1076. NEWS HEARD BY MARIN SANUTO.

Letters arrived at Florence from Spain, purporting that the marriage between the Emperor and the sister of the King of Portugal was concluded, and that the Emperor had dismissed the English ambassador.

[Italian.]

July 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 190.1077. FRANCESCO GONZAGA to ———.

Letters from England, dated 28th June, state that the King, when he heard that the most Christian King had been taken to Spain, was displeased and dissatisfied with the Emperor, and therefore abstains from waging war on France.

Rome, 24th July. Registered by Sanuto, 28th July.

[Italian.]

July 25.

Original
Letter Book,
Letter no. 378,
St. Mark's
Library.1078. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, to the SIGNORY.

Yesterday the English ambassador, Sir Richard Wyngfeld, departed this life; his malady was flux. The Bishop of London and the senior English ambassador [Richard Sampson] remain. There are as yet no letters from England. They await a reply about the marriage, the Emperor having informed the King that all Spain compels him to contract the marriage with Portugal.

Toledo, 23rd July.

P.S., on the 25th.—We have been told by the Viceroy of Naples that the affairs of Castile are still undecided. We believe that they are awaiting the reply from England to conclude this marriage with Portugal, as we understand that the second grant of 400,000 ducats is conceded by the Cortes to the Emperor on condition of his taking the Portuguese Princess for wife.

[Italian, 2 pages.]

July 26.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 217.1079. LETTER FROM LYONS.

The King of England is said to have sent two ambassadors to the Emperor, to state his opinion that the most Christian King should be released from captivity for the benefit of Christendom 1525.

on payment of a pecuniary ransom to the Emperor, who would err were he to claim any territory belonging to the Crown of France, and the King of England would oppose such a pretension.

Lyons, 26th July. Transmitted by Surian, Podestà of Brescia.
Registered by Sanuto, 11th August.

[Italian.]

July 26.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 264.

1080. DOM. SOARDINO to [the MARQUIS of MANTUA?]

During the last few days, on the arrival of the Viceroy and Montmorency, close conferences being held about the agreement, it seemed to the English ambassadors that they were not made privy to the negotiations. So they went in anger to the Emperor, telling him they had reason to believe that matters were being transacted but little to the repute of their King, an adjustment of which they knew nothing being negotiated in their very teeth, and that their King was not of such small authority as to admit of their putting up with this. They therefore asked leave to return to England. Much was said to pacify them, and much was needed, before they would take patience, and the Emperor was obliged to give a written promise, binding himself to make neither peace nor agreement with France without communicating every detail to the King of England, and obtaining his assent. Thus were the ambassadors quieted; but the well informed are of opinion that, although the English may expect to receive a greater amount of tribute than hitherto, and security for future payments [from France], yet the Imperialists will not be deterred from making peace on this account, despite the assurance given by the English ambassadors to him (Soardino) that their King will never make peace unless he receive a part of the territory which he claims, and which is now held by France. But should Burgundy be ceded [to the Emperor] they will find themselves deceived, as the Emperor does not consider himself under any obligation to England; on the contrary, he thinks that she has done him disservice.

Toledo, 26th July. Registered by Sanuto, 28th August.

[Italian.]

July 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 182.

1081. LEAGUE between ENGLAND and FRANCE.

Perusal in the Senate of letters from Madame the Regent, dated Lyons, 16th June, addressed to the French ambassadors in Venice, the Bishop of Bayeux [Canossa] and Dom. Ambrosio da Fiorenza.

The agreement with the King of England is well nigh concluded. The Regent had heard of their audience, and of the Signory's goodwill towards the league.

[Italian.]

July 28.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 155,
tergo.

1082. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Informed by the French ambassadors that the Regent wrote to them, in date of the 17th instant, that she hoped to make a good adjustment with the King of England, and that the Duke of Savoy had arrived at Lyons.

1525.

He is to communicate this to the Pope, assuring him of the Signory's respect.

[Italian.]

July 29.

1083. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 240.

The President of Rouen [Jean Brinon] arrived as ambassador from France to stipulate the league, and has set out on his way to the King, together with the other ambassador, Dom. Giovanni Gioachino [di Passano].

London, 26th, 28th, and 29th July. Part in cipher. Registered by Sanuto, 18th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 1.

1084. LETTER from CREMA.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 199.

The Cavalier Scena, a Milanese outlaw, arrived here today; he quitted Lyons on the 16th ult. The agreement between the King of England and France was considered certain there, and the captains and troops who had marched in the direction of Picardy, from suspicion of England, were returning to Lyons.

Crema, 1st August. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 4.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.

1085. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

On the 2nd instant the Duke of Bourbon quitted Milan for Savona, where he was to embark for Spain on board the Imperial fleet, the Emperor having sent for him that (according to report) he may marry Madame Eleanor, his Imperial Majesty's sister. Two hours after the Duke of Bourbon's departure the Marquis of Pescara also quitted Milan for Novara, and from what they understand the Spanish forces now quartered in the Milanese have orders to proceed into Piedmont, and are already on the point of marching.

The Duke of Milan, who lately had a fever, is now doing well, and it is hoped he will soon recover, though he keeps his bed to secure convalescence. Understand that the disturbances in the Tyrol have somewhat subsided, and tend towards an adjustment; those at Salzburg continue.*

Have nothing farther from Rome concerning the new agreement, as the Pope is awaiting the return of Dom. Sigismund, or letters from him, he having been sent by his Holiness to France to ascertain what decision has been formed there; and the Signory will do the like, so as to decide for the best. Will acquaint him with the reply brought by Dom. Sigismund. To make use of the above-written advices as may seem to him advisable, performing such offices with the King and Cardinal as familiar to him.

[Italian.]

* By a marginal note it appears that the rest of the letter was to be transcribed in cipher when copied for the ambassador.

1525.
Aug. 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 242.

1086. MARCO ANTONIO LONGIN, Secretary of Carlo Contarini, to his brother ZUAN HIRONIMO.

Germany is so entirely Lutheran, that when they carry the Host to the communicants there is nobody but a forerunner with a lantern and the mass bell; still less do they attend vespers. They go solely to the sermon, whither all flock universally, both great and small, with great devotion; and there are few who do not possess the book of the Epistles and Gospels, viz., the New Testament. They go to the sermons as to a lecture; and nothing is preached but the interpretation of the pure Gospel. In other places, such as Nuremberg and Strasburg, the mass has been almost entirely abolished, and the altars destroyed, being considered rather idolatrous than otherwise. Concerning Luther's books, I will say nothing of their high repute, and how eagerly they are purchased and perused. They bear various titles, and amongst them has seen one "De Libertate Christiana," which implies great things (che dice di gran cose). Luther's whole faith, in short, consists in loving God above all things, and one's neighbour as one's self; and he maintains that so many external ceremonies are unnecessary, because Christ by his passion made atonement for everything (ha satisfatto ad ogni cosa). Luther also alleges many other facts and arguments.

Since our stay at Augsburg two friars have married, one with a nun, the other with a woman of the world (una mondana), notwithstanding which, they remain friars. The prior of the monastery of St. Dominic has been expelled both from the monastery and the town because he was much opposed to Luther.

Augsburg, 4th August. Registered by Sanuto, 20th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 5.
Cicogna Copy
of the Navagero
Despatches,
Letter no. 380.

1087. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO
PRIULI, Venetian Ambassadors with the Emperor, to the SIGNORY.

Some caravels have arrived from the Indies with gold. We have been told by the Chancellor that they bring 150,000 gold pieces for the Emperor, but he does not know the standard, as very often they are accustomed to send very base gold, so that the amount in ducats does not correspond with the number of the pieces.

Some days ago we were informed by the Portuguese ambassadors of the arrival at certain islands of seven caravels with a great quantity of spices.

The account is confirmed by persons thoroughly acquainted with Portugal, who say six ships have reached the Azores with 30,000 quintals of pepper, 3,500 quintals of ginger, 500 quintals of cinnamon, very few cloves, and no nutmegs or mace.

Toledo, 5th August 1525.

[Italian.]

Aug. 5.
Cicogna Copy
of the Navagero
Despatches,
Letter no. 381.

1088. The SAME to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

We have heard on good authority that there are letters from Flanders announcing intimate negotiations between England and France, and that the marriage was being stipulated between the Princess of 1525.

England and the Dauphin, whom they meant to proclaim King. We hear also that the Duchess of Alençon is going back to France. This intelligence, although very secret, has much disturbed the ministry; so yesterday and the day before, the Chancellor, the Count of Nassau, and the Comendador Mayor assembled at the house of the old English ambassador [Sampson], together with the Bishop of London (Sampson being indisposed), and they remained there a long while.

Toledo, 5th August 1525.

[Italian.]

Aug. 6.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix.
pp. 282-919.

1089. ANONYMOUS LETTER from ——— to Messer ———, Doctor at Milan.

Bourbon, on being deprived of the dukedom, quitted his territory at the instigation of England and the Emperor, not because he aspired to another duchy, but because he was promised the Emperor's sister in marriage, and assistance to be made and maintained King of France, on condition of acknowledging it as a fief of the Crown of England, and giving certain provinces to the English, to the Flemings, and to Spain, as stipulated at length in the articles between the Emperor and England drawn up to this effect, and for the marriage of the Emperor to the daughter of the English King. These things were established and based on good faith; and their breach must have proceeded from some other quarter than from the Emperor.

The kingdom of Castille has offered the Emperor an additional 400,000 ducats if he will marry the Princess of Portugal, as she is a Spaniard; but his Majesty remains firm in favour of the English Princess, provided the King do not fail him, and with a message to this effect he despatched the English ambassadors.

Inspruck, 6th August 1525. Registered by Sanuto, 7th Sept

[Italian.]

Aug. 9.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 220.

1090. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King of England has sent two ambassadors to the Emperor, announcing his opinion about the release of the King of France, and the integrity of the French territory.

Milan, 9th August. Registered by Sanuto, 11th August.

[Extract, Italian.]

Aug. 10.
Cicogna Copy
of the Navagero
Despatches,
Letter no. 388.

1091. GASPARO CONTARINI, ANDREA NAVAGERO, and LORENZO PRIULI, Venetian Ambassadors with the Emperor, to the SIGNORY.

Mons. Brion has returned from the King of France, bringing the power from Madame [Louise] to conclude the truce. Brion, the Archbishop of Ambrun, and the President of the Parliament of Paris, have held several conferences with the Emperor and his ministers. We have been told by the Chancellor that there was some difficulty, because the French desire to include the Scots as their confederates, and to this the English ambassadors will not consent; so it was agreed to discuss this point with the King of France, and thus nothing is settled.

1525.

The Cortes of Castile have not yet decided. The Chancellor told us they were awaiting the reply from England about the marriage. We believe this to be true, because the kingdom consents to give the Emperor the second 400,000 ducats on condition of his marrying the Infanta of Portugal.

Gasparo Contarini and Lorenzo Priuli intend to depart for Venice tomorrow.

Toledo, 10th August 1525.

[Italian.]

Aug. 11.

1092. THE TRUCE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix.
pp. 231, 233.

Paper of the truce between the Emperor, France, and England, dated Toledo, 11th August 1525, signed by François de Tournon, Jean de Selve, and Philippe Chabot.*

Registered by Sanuto, 21st September.

[Copy, Italian.]

Aug. 12.

1093. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Cicogna Copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.

The day before yesterday the truce with the King of France was concluded, but they did not choose to call it a truce, in order to prevent the merchants of either power from trading in the towns of the other; so they called it "an abstinence from war," for the mere negotiation of peace without any further intercourse—the agreement to last until the 1st of January, and to be published before the 10th of September on all the frontiers of either party. The Emperor and the King of England are named on one side; the King of France on the other.

In the meanwhile the Duchess of Alençon is at liberty to come and negotiate the peace, as likewise any other ambassador from either party, coming and going without any safeconduct; couriers passing in like manner on their way to France, Italy, and elsewhere.

The King of France is to arrive at Madrid today, and will remain there.

When passing through Guadalaxara, a place belonging to the Duke dell'Infantazgo, one of the principal grandees of Spain, the King was received with much honour, the Duke giving him grand banquets and entertainments, and causing games to be performed for him. On his departure he also received many presents, including a horse whose furniture was said to be worth upwards of 5,000 crowns.

He bears his prison admirably, and in all the places through which he passes is so well greeted by reason of the extreme affability and courtesy evinced by him towards everybody, that he is well nigh adored in this country.

Toledo, 12th August 1525.

[Italian.]

Aug. 13.

1094. DOM. SOARDINO to [the MARQUIS of MANTUA ?].

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix., pp.
308, 309.

The truce concluded was not a general suspension of hostilities. It is to be proclaimed throughout Spain on the 10th of September,

* This paper is alluded to by Tunstall and Sampson in their letter to Henry VIII., "State Papers," vol. vi. p. 475, where it is stated that the document is printed in the "Recueil des Traités" tom. ii. p. 101.

1525.

and will last until the 1st of January. The parties mentioned are solely the Emperor and the King of England on one side, and the most Christian King alone on the other; but the English have not chosen to agree to it. According to report, couriers and others despatched by these princes, and bearing safeconducts or patents, may go to and fro by land.

The French ambassadors at Toledo say that the Duchess of Alençon had already set out to embark at Aigues Mortes, with the intention of landing at Valencia. Until her arrival, nothing more will be concluded about the release of the most Christian King, who for the last two days has been in Madrid.

Toledo, 13th August. Registered by Sanuto, 12th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 237.

1095. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King of England has sent two ambassadors to Spain, to tell the Emperor his opinion that the King of France should be released for the benefit of Christendom and its defence; that should the Emperor have incurred expense, compensation might be paid him in money, but that no part of France be dismembered; and should the Emperor think fit to diminish that kingdom, the King of England would disapprove of the measure, and be vexed thereat, saying well nigh that he would not put up with it.

Milan, 14th August. Registered by Sanuto, 17th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 356.

1096. LORENZIO ORIO to ——— (a private letter).

On the receipt of letters from the Signory, about forming a league in Italy for the maintenance of the States there, spoke to the Cardinal, and narrates his reply, so that the affair will be brought to a good pass. The agreement between the King of England and France has been concluded and signed, as likewise the marriage [contract] of the Princess to the Dauphin, the articles having been sent to France for signature. The Signory is mentioned therein. On Saturday the Princess went to her principality of Wales (sic) with a suitable and honorable escort; and she will reside there until the time of her marriage. She is a rare person and singularly accomplished, most particularly in music, playing on every instrument, especially on the lute and harpsicord (arpicordo).

The plague continues in London, and will increase greatly. Goes very frequently to the Court of the Cardinal, and to that of the King, at a distance of 20, 30, and now 40 miles from London, where lodging can be had solely in the palace.

London, 14th August. Registered by Sanuto, 30th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 17.

1097. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On the 18th August the truce was proclaimed between England and France, to last until the 1st of December. His Majesty is takin his pleasure in the country. Cardinal Wolsey directs everything; appoints Sir Gregory Casal, the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci], and the Bishop Usardinense* [ambassadors to Rome?]; and is sending two ambassadors† to France to negotiate the agreement between the two kingdoms. Pace, the English ambassador at Venice, has received leave to return home, and although others wrote to him in the King's name to go back [to Venice?], his Majesty ordered him not to obey them and to come straight (e vengi di longo). This letter of leave was written by the King's order without the knowledge of the Cardinal.

1525.

In reply to an announcement from the Pope concerning a league, and to remarks thereon by Giovanni Gioachino [di Passano], the Cardinal said that three demands must be made of the Emperor; first, that he do release the most Christian King; secondly, whether he will wed the Princess [Mary] without any further sum of money than that already received for dower; and thirdly, whether he purposes going into Italy with an army for his coronation; in which case—and not otherwise—a league might be formed.

The Emperor has written to the King of England to know whether he will give him the Princess with a dower of 400,000 ducats in ready money; and if not, whether he will release him from his oath and promise of marriage, so that he may marry elsewhere.

The King will give the Princess, but no increase of dower.

London, 10–18th August. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

Aug. 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 266.

1098. MARCO ANTONIO LONGIN to his Brother ZUAN HIRO-NIMO.

On quitting Augsburg, went to the free town of Ulm, which (if Augsburg is Lutheran) may be styled most Lutheran, as are all the other free towns; but to speak more properly, they tend towards downright heresy rather than to anything else. They disregard masses and other offices, and the few which they perform are for the most part in German, so that the masses may be intelligible to the populace. Above all, they are regardless of burying their dead in consecrated ground, many of whom are carried into the fields beyond the town, to avoid paying the priests. Has also heard that the members of the League have beheaded a person who, besides many other heresies, trampled under foot the host, as if it had not contained the real body of Christ.

They eat meat on Fridays and Saturdays, and on the eves, and do other things too long to narrate, in such wise as to be so tainted with this pest that none but God can extirpate it.

On quitting Ulm, entered this duchy of Wurtemberg, where apparently there are not many Lutherans, and the inhabitants are better disposed towards their duty, for books have been lately

* "Et lo episcopo Usardinense;" qu. Worcester. Ghinucci became bishop of this see in 1523.

† Sir William Fitzwilliam and Dr. Tayler.

1525.

printed here against Luther in reply to many of his works. Will endeavour by all means to obtain them.

Tubingen in Wurtemberg, 18th August. Registered by Sanuto, 29th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 21.

Copy of the
Navagero
Despatches
in the Correr
Museum.

1099. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Receipt by the Emperor of news from Italy, that the Pope and Venice were negotiating an agreement with France, and together with the Duke of Milan and all the rest of Italy would form a defensive league. The Duchess of Alençon has embarked at Aigues-Mortes, and the Emperor sent Don Ugo de Moncada to meet her at Valencia. Don Ugo is of opinion that there will be war. The Emperor is determined not to make peace unless they give him Burgundy. Long ago the Cortes agreed to pay 400,000 ducats in three years for the service in ordinary. With regard to the other 400,000, they attached the condition that the Emperor was to marry the sister of the King of Portugal. It is now decided that the Cortes of Castile will raise this second sum, which the Emperor accepts conditionally, in the event of his making the marriage, leaving it uncertain, in order not to break off the negotiation with England until peace or war with France be decided.

Has been told as a great secret by the Florentine ambassador that the Emperor, speaking to the Nuncio about the Italian league, exclaimed, "Can God allow the Pope always to listen to that cowardly traitor"—and then, not remembering the name, after remaining a short while in suspense, he added—"Gian Matteo!" [Giberti]. This was strong language and of great weight, as coming from the lips of the Emperor, who is so discreet (modesto) in all his actions, and most especially in speech, as to be irreproachable; but anger overcame his habitual moderation, showing how much he considers himself hurt by these negotiations; of which he lays all the blame on Giberti.

Toledo, 21st August 1525.

[Italian.]

Aug. 22.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.

1100. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

[Glad to hear of the confidential and loving communication made to him by Cardinal Wolsey, attesting the good will of the King and of his right rev. Lordship towards the maintenance of the liberty, not only of the Venetian Signory, but of all Italy. To return thanks to the King and Cardinal for so loving an office towards the State and all Italy, adding that the State is most anxious for the maintenance of the liberty of Italy, and to see all Christian powers at peace, for the benefit of the Christian religion.

[Concerning the negotiations proposed by the Bishop of Bayeux on behalf of France, approve his (Orio's) prudent reply to the Cardinal, justifying himself on the plea of not having at the time received the Signory's letters of the 18th July. On the 11th July the Pope sent his Nuncio to the Regent of France to assure her of the favorable disposition of his Holiness, of the Venetian Signory, of the Duke of Milan, and of the other potentates of Italy towards an understanding with France for the preservation of Italy. As no intelligence has hitherto been received of the Nuncio's arrival at the Court, the Signory, suspecting him of having met with some accident, has urged the Pope to send a second Nuncio to effect the understanding with France. Are now again assured, both by his (Orio's) letters, and by advices which the Bishop of Bayeux has received from the Regent, that the King of England has made an adjustment and confederacy with France, much to their satisfaction. Consider this a confirmation of Cardinal Wolsey's conference with him (Orio), and assure the King and his right rev. Lordship that the Signory is inclined to give ear to the aforesaid negotiation proposed to them by France, and to urge its conclusion. The suggestions of the King and Cardinal will greatly encourage the Regent.

1525.

To beseech the King and Cardinal to persevere in their laudable purpose, as the Signory will do the like. Consider it indubitable that the King will not fail doing what is necessary for the liberty of Italy, whereon depends the general quiet of Christendom, as his Majesty has expended such sums and done so much to place the Duke of Milan in his duchy, and to keep him there.]*

That the Duke of Bourbon has quitted Vercelli, on his way to Genoa, to proceed to Spain, having been sent for by the Emperor.

Some days ago two commissioners arrived in Venice from the Archduke Ferdinand. Are negotiating with them the conclusion of the treaty of Worms, for the tranquillity of the Signory's subjects.

[Italian.]

Aug. 26.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File No. 9.

1101. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Have heard from their ambassador at Rome, in date of the 22nd, that the Pope is more eager than ever about the confederacy of the Italian powers with France for the maintenance and quiet of Italy. The Pope, on hearing that Dom. Sigismund had not arrived at the Court of the Regent of France, and suspecting some mischance had befallen him, has now dispatched the Florentine, D. Leonardo Spina, to the Regent, with all necessary instructions. The French ambassadors at Venice, urged by the Signory, do not fail to aid the conclusion of the confederacy. Seeing the great benefit which will accrue to all Italy from this confederacy, have done their utmost to effect it, and the more heartily since hearing of the alliance projected, and now ratified and published, between his Majesty of England and the kingdom of France,—an evident sign that the King and Cardinal are excellently inclined towards the design proposed to the Signory by France for the preservation and quiet of the State of Venice, of the Duke of Milan, and consequently of all Italy, whereon the tranquillity of Christendom depends.

* The bracketed passages were always ciphered when transmitted to the ambassadors by letter, although there is occasionally no marginal notice to that effect in the files or drafts.

1525.

To praise and extol this most holy resolution formed by the King and Cardinal.

By letters from Rome, dated the 22nd, understand that Sir Gregory Casal wrote thither from Brussels that Dom. Sigismund had not gone to France, neither would he go. To inquire adroitly, on his own account, of the said Sir Gregory Casal what he knows about Dom. Sigismund.

[Italian.]

Aug. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 271.

1102. The VENETIAN GOVERNORS of BERGAMO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Enclose a letter from Corio [Coir?] dated 16th August, written by Mons. Giugnes to Peace has been made between the most Christian King and the King of England. Nothing better could be done for France, and as Venice has no fear of England, the rest may be held in small account. Truce has been made with the Emperor for six months in the ultramontane territories. From this truce, Italian affairs are expressly excluded, and it is supposed that peace will follow.

The King's sister, Madame d'Alençon, has departed for Spain with a very noble retinue, and she is expected to bring back the King. The Emperor has taken [for his wife] the daughter (sic) [sister] of the King of Portugal. The King of England is greatly dissatisfied with him, because he was affianced to his (the King of England's) daughter. This was the chief cause of his making peace with France; and he will give his daughter to the Dauphin, as settled heretofore.

Bergamo, 27th August. Registered by Sanuto, 31st August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 30.

Cicogna Copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.

1103. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The King of France is at Madrid, and is expected to remain there until the affairs are concluded. He makes himself so popular, and is so courteous, gracious, and generous, that words cannot exceed it. The Spaniards, who are not accustomed to such treatment, adore and love him, more perhaps than some people would wish. Nothing is talked of but of him. Were he brought to Spain again he would come after a different fashion, for he has so conciliated everybody that the things one hears said amongst Spaniards are too monstrous. The King bears his imprisonment quietly, but is much disappointed, for he expected immediately on arriving in Spain to have an interview with the Emperor, and thus arrange his affairs easily. He therefore requested to be brought here; but so far as can be seen hitherto the Emperor does not choose to see him until the affairs are concluded.

Toledo, 30th August, 1525.

[Italian.]

Sept. 2

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.

1104. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

By the Emperor's order the prothonotary Caracciolo has quitted Milan for Venice.

1525.

The Duke of Milan improves daily in health. The united Imperial army is for the most part in the territory of Vercelli and thereabouts, and expect a reinforcement of 5,000 lansquenets [a fact in direct contradiction of what they had heard from the Court of the Emperor, who was said to have dismissed the lansquenets hitherto in his service in Italy].* The Duke of Bourbon is at Vercelli, and announces that he shall soon depart, to embark for the Imperial Court. The Imperial fleet which is coming to take him has been seen off Toulon. Will announce the result, as usual, to the King and Cardinal.

Have received advices that in the county of the Tyrol a great number of peasants have again risen, and are under Trent, battering the castle, which is held by the Bishop with some 700 infantry including those in the castle and in the town.

Are also informed that about 25,000 peasants have risen in Germany, and under a certain commander are marching to join those now besieging the Bishop of Gurk [at Salzburg].

The Signory's letters from Constantinople, dated the 19th, announce that the Grand Turk (Signor Turco) had beheaded the Aga of the Janissaries, and many of the Janissaries were also put to death for the insurrection, as notified heretofore.

To announce all these facts to the King and Cardinal as usual.

[Italian.]

Sept. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 334.

1105. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Details many negotiations between King Henry and the French ambassadors and Cardinal Wolsey concerning the peace and understanding between them. Finally, by his letter of the 3rd September, announces having been told by the Cardinal that peace is concluded between France and the King of England; they are friends of friends, and foes of foes. Both parties have mentioned the Signory as their ally and good friend. The agreement was to be proclaimed on the 6th. They purpose sending to the Emperor to tell him to release the King of France for a sum of money, as it is not reasonable that he should remain a prisoner. The Signory likewise is to make a similar intimation to the Emperor, protesting that unless this release be effected, they cannot do otherwise than wage war on him.

In other letters to the Council of Ten, concerning the league in course of negotiation with the Pope, Orio mentions that the Cardinal said the Signory ought to conclude it, and that he would be the chief champion of the league, and not allow the Emperor to come into Italy with an army for his coronation.

The College therefore immediately forwarded the English advices concerning the league and the peace with France to the Signory's ambassador at Rome, for communication to the Pope.

London, 27th, 29th, and 30th August and 3rd September.
Registered by Sanuto, 22nd September.

* See note on p. 474.

1525.

Note by Sanuto.—Richard Pace, the English ambassador, lately returned from Padua to Venice in ill health, and chose again to reside in the Cà di San Marco, on the island of S. Giorgio Maggiore.

[Italian.]

Sept. 4.

1106. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 334.

Has conversed with the Cardinal, who told him that the peace with France would be proclaimed on the 6th, and that he was sending letters in the King's name to the Pope, urging him to exhort the Emperor to release the most Christian King. The Cardinal said that the best thing would be to conclude the Italian league with France, most especially as France offered so to do, and that his King would do the like for the benefit of Italy, lest the Emperor render himself her monarch, on which account the King of England made peace with France.

London, 4th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 22nd.

[Italian.]

Sept. 5.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.

1107. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

The Duke of Milan has had a relapse, and is in great danger. The matter is of very great importance by reason of what might befall the duchy, especially as the reinforcement of lansquenets mentioned in their last has by forced marches already descended into the Milanese. The Marquis of Pescara, moreover, has been lately to confer with the Magnifico Morone at Pavia, it is said, about the affair of the 100,000 ducats which the Duke is bound to disburse to the Emperor forthwith for his investiture.

Feel bound to announce these particulars to the King and Cardinal, whose extreme wisdom and prudence will judge of what importance the Duke's death would be when coupled with the increase of the Imperial forces. As the King and Cardinal have at heart the affairs of Italy, rely on their favouring her security. The Duke of Bourbon is still at Vercelli, and the report of his going shortly to Genoa is credited, the Imperial fleet having arrived at Savona for his conveyance to Spain.

The peasants who were besieging Salzburg had engaged the army of the nobility, commanded by D. Nicolò Salma, and been victorious. The peasants who rose lately towards Trent are understood to have been pacified.

Arrival in Venice today of the prothonotary Caracciolo, who, as already mentioned, has been sent by the Emperor. Will write an account to him (Orio) of all that takes place.

[Italian.]

Sept. 8.

1108. LETTER from MILAN.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. pp.
302, 303.

According to letters from Lyons, dated 6th August, the truce between Madame [Louise] and the King of England has been concluded for three years, and between Madame and the Emperor for six months. In France certain men-at-arms and the lansquenets are being disbanded, and the like will be done with the Italians.

1525.

The Duke of Bourbon was at Pavia on the 8th, and was to depart on the morrow on his way to embark at Savona.

The truce made between the Emperor, France, England, the Infant, and Madame Margaret has arrived (è venuta); it is to commence on the 11th instant, and to end on the 1st of January next.

Milan, 8th September. Registered by Sanuto, 12th September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 301.

1109. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The sea disagreeing with the Duchess of Alençon, she quitted the galley at Marseilles, and proceeded to Spain by land.

The English ambassadors would not consent to the mention of Scotland in the truce, so the most Christian King promised to obtain the English King's approval, and thus the truce was signed.

The Duke of Milan is better; so the Duke of Bourbon is moving to Savona to embark on board the fleet for his passage to Spain, and the Marquis of Pescara is going to Vercelli.

Milan, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 12th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 17.

1110. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The peace has been concluded between the King of England and France; it was negotiated in London by Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, and a reply is awaited from Madame the Regent, whether she approves of the clauses as they stand. It has been proclaimed in London, and sent for proclamation to Boulogne, Paris, and Rouen. They are expecting the ratification from the Regent. There remains a certain difference about 60,000 crowns on account of damages; and owing to the capture of three ships after the truce had been made, but before its publication, two judges, the Chancellor of London* for the King of England, and the Chancellor of Alençon for France, have been appointed to decide this question.

Sir Gregory Casal is returning as ambassador to Rome.

London, 9th September. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 41.

1111. The SAME to the SAME.

The Cardinal is very intent on the league.

Mons. d'Aubigny, the brother-in-law of the Chancellor of Alençon, has arrived in London from Lyons as ambassador to the King.† He told him (Orio) that the Regent of France inclines towards the Italian alliance, and is sending the Duchess of Alençon to Spain to tell the most Christian King not to make terms with the Emperor, as the King of England would aid his release, and that she purposed sending troops into Italy, and an ambassador to the Signory. On hearing that the Duke of Ferrara was going to Spain,

* Sic; i.e. Dr. Tayler, Master of the Rolls.

† See "State Papers," vol. i. p. 158 (note). Sanuto writes, "Monsignor di Obigni, cugnado dil cancelier di Lansom, orator di Franza," &c.

1525.

she expressed great surprise, saying, "Who gave him leave?" and intended to deny him passage through France.

London, 10th September. Registered by Sanuto, 13th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 13.

Cicogna copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.

1112. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The Emperor is at Segovia.

The King of France for two days had constant fever, which then became double tertian ague; many say he is in danger. The Emperor has sent one of his own physicians, and the Viceroy [De Lannoy] to him. Should he get worse, it is said the Emperor will go to him in person. It is also said that the Emperor will give his sister, the Queen of Portugal, to him for wife.

The agent of the Duke of Bourbon, Mons. de Lursi, tells me that when he quitted the Emperor at Segovia to go to his master, he inquired whether his Majesty had anything to say to the Duke. The Emperor replied that the Duke would be welcome, and that he was anxious to see him, and to demonstrate the love he bore him. De Lursi rejoined that this was not his meaning, and that he wanted to know what he was to say about the marriage of the Emperor's sister. The Emperor replied that there was no occasion to mention the subject, as she was already the Duke's (perchè già era del Signor Duca), and that he would not break his promise should the Duke choose him to keep it. De Lursi had told him (Navagero) that the Duke would never change his mind, and had written to him frequently to inform the Emperor that he asks neither territory nor money, nor any other thing save his sister, whom he had so often promised; and that the Emperor always made the same answer, that he would never break his promise.

Should this be true, De Lursi considers any agreement [with France] the more difficult, especially as unless Bourbon marry either the sister or the sister-in-law of the King of France (which would come to pass should the Emperor bestow the Queen of Portugal on the King) the Duke could not regain his territory; nor is it reasonable or credible that the Emperor would make any agreement without stipulating its restitution.

A report is current that an agreement is already made between England and France; and Mons. de Montmorenci affirmed this to the Emperor with his own mouth; but the English ambassadors here [Sampson and Tunstall] deny it. They say they have lately received letters from their King, and declare not only that no agreement has taken place, but moreover that their King is ready to attack France whenever the Emperor chooses; and that the French circulated this false report for their own benefit. Many persons are of a different opinion, but this is what the English say.

Toledo, 13th September 1525.

[Italian.]

Sept. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xi. p. 41.

1113. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Went yesterday to ——— to see Cardinal Wolsey, who received him very lovingly. Communicated the advices received from the 1525.

Signory. His Lordship said, "The Pope demands too much of France for making the league; he wants to have the kingdom [of Naples] for himself."

The Cardinal then said that it would be well to make the Italian league, with the insertion of three clauses; first, that the King of England will be the conservator of the Italian States; secondly, that he will oppose those who seek to obtain territory in Italy; thirdly, that he does not choose the French to have dominion in Italy.

Letters have been received from Spain announcing the death of the Marquis of Brandenburg, the brother-in-law of the most Christian King (sic), who, riding in haste to see the said King, his brother-in-law, fell from his horse, and died in two days. Mons. de Buren,* the chief person in authority with the Emperor, had also died.

The King is sending the Papal Auditor, Bishop of ——— [Worcester, Ghinucci], to encourage the Pope to make the league; but he will be preceded by Sir Gregory Casal, who is the Signory's friend, and will be more speedy than the Bishop.

In the course of conversation the Cardinal told him (Orio) that the Pope was between the Datary [Giberti], the partisan of France, and the Archbishop of Capua [Schomberg], an Imperialist, so that it is not in his power to form such a decision as would be for the benefit of Italy.

London, 14th September. Registered by Sanuto, 13th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 18.
Lettere del
Collegio Secreta,
File no. 9.

1114. The DOGE AND COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Having received no news from him since the 29th July, suspect his letters have miscarried. To send duplicates by way of France and Germany. To endeavour to learn whether besides the truce concluded lately between the Emperor, the most Christian King, and the King of England, there was any other understanding, public or secret, between France and England alone.

The Prothonotary Caracciolo, together with the ambassador Sanchez, had audience of the Signory; and after presenting credentials from the Emperor, his reverend Lordship first gave assurance in the Emperor's name of the excellent will he bore the Signory. Next, limiting himself to details, he said the Emperor was well satisfied to ratify his confederacy with the State, but demanded the restitution of their estates to the outlaws,† and money in lieu of the infantry which the Signory are bound to supply for the confederation; also 120,000 ducats for payment of the Emperor's army here in Italy. Enclose a copy of their reply for the King and Cardinal. The Prothonotary Caracciolo did not seem satisfied.

The Duke of Milan is recovering, but the physicians do not pronounce him out of danger. The Signory's ambassador has frequently insisted on visiting his Excellency, but hitherto none except his usual intimates have been admitted.

* "Beuren" in MS.

† See note on p. 320.

1525.

The Duke of Bourbon quitted Parma lately, proceeding by way of Lomelina to Saona for embarkation on his projected voyage.

The 2,000 (sic) lansquenets who lately entered Italy to re-inforce the Imperial army are in the Ghiara d'Adda; but they are ordered to cross the Po and join the Imperialists, who are quartered in Piedmont and the neighbouring territory.

By letters from Constantinople, dated 9th August, are informed that within a fortnight the Magnifico Ibrahim Pasha was expected from Cairo with a large sum of gold. The Grand Turk (Signor Turco) has ordered him a most honorable reception in a new and unusual form. It is said that great news will be heard on his arrival at Constantinople.

The Rev. Richard Pace, being lately at Padua, was seized with a nervous (fastidiosa) disorder, which deprived him of sleep; so he determined to come to Venice, where he has been for the last week. The Signory being very anxious for his welfare and health, both as the representative of the King of England, and also by reason of his own most worthy qualities, did not fail to send him physicians, &c. whilst at Padua, by means of the governors there; and subsequently at Venice did whatever could conduce to his recovery, and will continue so to do. At this present, by God's grace, he is in a very good state; and they hope he will soon recover his former health. [To impart this to the King, and should he (Orio) think fit, to the Cardinal likewise,]* giving the Signory notice of the execution of this order by letter.

[Italian.]

Sept. 21.
Cicogna copy of Navagero's Despatches, in the Correr
Museum.†

1115. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

During the last few days the King of France became much worse, so that the Viceroy and the physicians in attendance on him sent an express to the Emperor, saying they did not expect him to live more than a few hours, and that if he, the Emperor, meant to come, he should do so immediately. The Emperor had already quitted Segovia, and received the intelligence at a distance of some six leagues from Madrid, whither he rode post immediately.

On his arrival he found the King dozing, and did not choose him to be roused, but waited until he awoke of himself. He then entered the chamber, and they told the King that it was the Emperor himself.

When the Emperor approached the bed the King endeavoured to raise himself as well as he could, and embraced the Emperor, saying in French, "Emperor, my lord, here am I, thy servant and slave."

The Emperor replied that he was not such, but his good friend and brother; that he hoped the King would be such to him; that he was also to be cheerful, and to think of nothing but his recovery, because on the arrival of the Duchess of Alençon good peace would

* The words in brackets were to be written in cipher.

† On the death of the Cavalier Cicogna, his library passed to the Correr Museum, which now possesses two copies of the despatches written from Spain by Andrea Navagero.

1525.

ensue between them, as he (the Emperor) only required what was fair, and supposed that the King on his part would not fail to do what was right, and would, therefore, be soon at liberty.

The King said that it was for the Emperor to command, as he could but obey.

Heard this narrative from trustworthy persons who were present at the interview; and these words and a few others having been said, the Emperor departed.

That night the King seemed to improve greatly. On the morrow, the 19th, the Emperor visited him again, and used fair and loving language to comfort him, telling him that he (the Emperor) was returning to Toledo. The King made answer that he had already confessed and communicated, and did not know what would become of him; that though he rather expected to die, at any rate he recommended himself to his Majesty; that if he lived he would be the Emperor's good servant, but, should he die, he besought the Emperor not to take more from his children than was right, and to protect them should they be wronged by anyone.

The Emperor comforted him as well as he could, telling him to attend to his recovery, and that he (the Emperor) would never fail to do his duty. He then quitted the chamber, and whilst walking about the castle, the Duchess of Alençon arrived. The Emperor went to meet her, and found her in tears, ascending the stairs. He embraced and kissed her, and after saying a few words, took her into the King's chamber and left her there. He then mounted on horseback, and went to a place distant two leagues from Madrid; and late on the next day, the 20th, he arrived at Toledo, where many persons are of opinion that the King of France pretended to be worse than he was, in order that the Emperor might go and see him. Amongst those who entertain this belief is the Chancellor, who affirms the fact, and says the Emperor did very wrong to go there, but that having chosen to go, he ought immediately to have released the King. The Chancellor says this by reason of his intense hatred to the French, but through a sure channel I know the King to have been most grievously ill, and that he is not yet out of danger.

The silver and gold cannon sent to the Emperor from the Indies by Hernando Cortes, the governor of those regions, about which so much has been said lately, has arrived at the Court; it is accompanied by a live tiger. Has seen both one and the other. The animal is not a tiger, as they call it, but a panther, and a very beautiful beast. The piece of artillery is about the size of a demi-culverin, and very well made, but it does not seem to be made of silver or of gold, but of a certain mixture inferior to tin; if silver, it is very base (molto basso) and worth little; but now that it has been seen, those who wish still to keep it in the repute which it enjoyed before its arrival, say it is of silver, but not worth more than three ducats the mark. It is said that, together with these things, the Emperor has received many other presents, besides 63,000 gold pieces, which are less than 63,000 ducats.

By the caravel which brought these things for the Emperor, Hernando Cortes has sent to his wife, whom he lately married in Spain (and choosing her to be of illustrious birth, he took her without any dower, and she has not yet been sent to him), 25,000 ducats, and 1,500 ounces of plate, for her outfit, all of which have for the present been sequestered. It is supposed in Spain that Hernando Cortes appropriates everything to himself (usurpi ogni cosa), and sends the Emperor but little; for which reason (I hear on good authority, though they keep it very secret), they are to send out another governor, namely, the Admiral of the Indies, a man who is esteemed and wealthy, the son of Christopher.* I do not believe that the business is yet settled, because a messenger has arrived at Toledo from Hernando Cortes, announcing in the name of his master, that he had obtained information about certain cities at no great distance from the place where he then was; that they were very powerful, and their kings very wealthy and at war with each other; that some of them had demanded aid from him, Hernando, which if granted, he should subdue the whole of that country—a feat beyond comparison much greater than any effected by him hitherto; but, should the Emperor choose him to assume this undertaking, he demands permission to defray its cost with the money hitherto sent from thence to Spain, as it would yield very great honour and profit.

1525.

The hope of so great a result may perhaps cause Hernando Cortes to be retained in his post.

On the 2nd of May a fleet of 24 sail quitted Seville for the Indies. Advices have been received announcing its arrival at Hispaniola on the 2nd of June—a fine passage, for the distance from Seville to the Canaries is 300 leagues, and from thence to Hispaniola 900, in all 4,800 miles.

Another fleet of 28 sail, bound for another part of the Indies, is also in readiness at Seville, and, according to report, it will depart in 15 or 20 days.

The captain of this fleet is one Sebastian Cabot,† a Venetian; he is going to make new discoveries, and in Spain their hopes of these Indies increase daily, and they think about them more and more, and believe that they will at length obtain the spices (le spiciarie) likewise by that track, and by a much shorter voyage than the one performed by the ship Victory.

Toledo, 21st September 1525.

[Italian.]

Sept. 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 109.

1116. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sir Gregory Casal being about to depart for Italy, went to dine with him. Casal showed him his commission, to go first to France, to urge the Italian league. He says that, according to the secret commission, the King of England will give 25,000 ducats monthly for the expenses of the war, and be the conservator of the league. In two days the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] will depart, and is in like manner going to Rome.

The Cardinal is expected at Richmond, where Orio will visit him.

Dated 22nd September. Registered by Sanuto, 28th October.

[Italian.]

* Christopher Columbus died at Valladolid in 1506.

† According to the American, Biddle, he did not quit Seville until April 1526.

1525.

Sept. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 338.1117. REPLY of the COLLEGE to the AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

Will do their utmost, through the Venetian ambassador in Spain, to effect the release of the most Christian King. The league with France has rather cooled. Thank the King and Cardinal for the conferences held with their ambassador.

[Italian.]

Sept. 23.

Lettere del
Collegio
Secreta.
File no. 9.1118. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Yesterday morning received his of the 27th and 30th ultimo and 3rd and 4th instant. Are extremely satisfied with his diligence and assiduity.

Are far above all pleased by the loving communication made to him by the Cardinal concerning the peace signed and sealed between the King of England and the most Christian King and the kingdom of France, together with the honorable mention of the Signory as comprised in it by both parties. To present himself to the King and Cardinal, congratulate them on the conclusion of the peace, and return thanks for the inclusion of the Signory by the King as his confederate.

To extol their holy purpose of using the influence which they possess to reconcile all the Christian powers, especially the Emperor and the most Christian King, and of endeavouring to obtain the latter's release, so that he and his resources may be available for the present need of Christendom, as sagely hinted by the Cardinal. To offer them everything in the Signory's power to aid their laudable purpose. In accordance with the Cardinal's suggestions, will write to the Venetian ambassador at the Emperor's Court to do his utmost for the release of the most Christian King.

Finally, to offer the Cardinal whatever can redound to the profit, honour, and increase of that most powerful Crown, and of his right reverend Lordship.

Will comply with the Cardinal's earnest exhortation with regard to the alliance between Italy and France. France had apparently somewhat suspended the desire demonstrated by her for its conclusion, although the Pope sent several envoys and wrote frequent letters urging the transmission of a mandate to settle the business, and the Regent and kingdom of France were made acquainted with the Signory's firm resolve. To make this statement to the Cardinal, praying him to persevere in his most Christian purpose.

Touching the Signory's negotiation with the Prothonotary Caracciolo, after the reply given by them, Caracciolo wrote to the Emperor, and is awaiting an answer before presenting himself again to the Signory. For some days he has kept his bed from fever.

Having found in Orio's packet a parcel of letters for Sir Gregory Casal, delivered in Cardinal Wolsey's name for transmission, and understanding his right reverend Lordship was desirous that they should be sent to Rome with the utmost speed, forwarded them instantly express by one of the Signory's messengers (uno nostro cavallaro), limiting him to two days' time for their consignment to the Venetian ambassador at Rome, to whom they have written desiring him to see to their delivery in all safety. To announce this to the Cardinal in proof of their wish to do whatever may be agreeable to him.

1525.

Concerning affairs in Germany, understand that in the county of Ferrete* 15,000 peasants have again risen, and the Archduke [Ferdinand] has sent a large number of horse and foot to quell them.

The Spanish forces in Italy are in their usual quarters, nor is it heard that they purpose moving. .

[Italian.]

Sept., 24.

Copy of the
Navagero
Despatches,
Cottier Museum.

1119. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

The King of France is much worse, and news of his death rather than of any improvement is expected hourly. The whole Court is disturbed, as this event would disconcert all its projects. The Emperor, having a soul which is neither much elevated by any good fortune that may befall him, nor depressed by adversity,† says, "Dominus dedit, dominus abstulit," and declares that he is more sorry for the King himself than on any other account.

On the 22nd news came that he was a little better; then yesterday morning several posts brought word that he was at the point of death; subsequently, in the evening, a messenger arrived saying that the physicians had still some hope, having discovered that he had an abscess in the head which caused such depression as to make it appear that he was dying; this, although a very dangerous disorder, was less discouraging than to see him at the last extremity. This morning likewise it is confirmed that he is a little better, but fresh couriers arrive hourly, some saying one thing and some another.

It is certain that he is very ill, and if he lives he will do much.

After the Emperor's return from Madrid he determined to press (stringer) the negotiation with England, and on the 22nd sent for the English ambassadors. They remained the whole of that day in consultation and made their proposals, concerning which on the morrow the Emperor sat in Council until the first hour of the night; and it is believed that the matter will very soon be decided. Hears that they mean to make a new league and ally themselves more closely than ever, and that the King of England is content to release the Emperor from his promise given to marry the Princess Mary.

The Imperialists are of opinion that this close alliance with England will greatly facilitate their adjustment of French affairs—should the King live—and no less in the event of his death. They also expect it to dissipate the league said to be forming in Italy, and consider it a good device for intimidating all parties; so they urge its conclusion in order that it may be known speedily, and on the arrival of the Duchess of Alençon at Toledo the whole will be settled.

Toledo, 24th September 1525.

[Italian.]

* Ferrete, the capital of the county, is situated at a distance of two leagues to the west of Basle.

† "L' Imperatore come è di animo che nè se alza molto per bona fortuna che il occorra," &c., &c.

1525.

Sept. 24.

Copy of the
Navagero
Despatches,
Correr Museum.

1120. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Spoke to the Nuncio [Castiglione] about the report that the Italian powers had formed a league against the Emperor. The Nuncio replied that the Imperialists throw the blame on the Pope, and maintain that he is at the head of it, whereas in fact he alone thwarted it. Of this the Nuncio said the Emperor was aware; for many days ago he informed the Emperor in the Pope's name that the Pope had been requested to negotiate this league, and by whom, but that his Holiness would not do so—that, on the contrary, he intended always to be the firm ally of the Emperor. Endeavoured to ascertain from the Nuncio who was the person said by him to have requested the Pope to form this league, but could elicit nothing. Subsequently the Florentine ambassador [Giovanni Corsi] told him that the Nuncio had shown him a letter from the Archbishop of Capua in which, amongst other things, were the following words: "The Signory of Venice still braves it, and reproaches the Pope with having been too hasty in allying himself with the Emperor."

Continuing his efforts to discover the person thus denounced by the Pope to the Emperor, heard on very good authority that the Pope says he was requested by the King of England, who now seeks by all means to unite Italy against the Emperor.

The Imperialists have announced this to the King of England, and he, on the other hand, accuses the Pope; so that one does not know whom to believe, nor can the truth be learnt, save by the result.

Toledo, 24th September 1525.

[Italian.]

Sept. 26.

1121. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xxxix. p. 351.

The Pope said to him that had he known of the peace made between England and France he would not have given leave to the Duke of Ferrara to go to Spain. The Duke promised him not to negotiate anything with the Emperor detrimental to the Papal States.

The Pope further stated that he knew not how France could make a demonstration against the Emperor, Madame the Regent having sent her daughter the Duchess of Alençon to Spain, with a great part of the nobility of France, whose King was moreover the Emperor's prisoner. The Pope nevertheless exhorts the Signory not to settle with the Imperial ambassadors, and has answered the letters of the King of England, telling him that England is at a distance from Italy, whose borders join the territories of all the powers; adding, "If France and Switzerland would but unite with Italy?" He also said he was expecting his envoy the Datary [Giberto] from France, and that the King of England had written to him that he did not think it advisable at present to show himself the open enemy of the Emperor on account of the debt for the money which he lent him lately, and he is therefore desirous of being styled the conservator of the league.

The Pope also said that the Emperor had written to the King of 1525.

England that he will not make war on France at present by reason of the truce between the two crowns.

Rome, 26th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 29th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 27.

1122. TREATY between ENGLAND and FRANCE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 2.

Proclamation of a treaty of peace between France and England. Place reserved for the confederates of the contracting parties, who are to announce their adhesion within four months from the day of the proclamation; the parties thus named by France being the Pope, the Kings of Scotland, Portugal, Hungary, and Navarre, the Signory of Venice, the Dukes of Savoy, Lorraine, Guelders, and Ferrara, the Switzers, and the Marquises of Montferrat and Ferrara.

Lyons, 27th September 1525.

Signed: "Louise."

Countersigned: "Robertet."

Registered by Sanuto, 1st October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 109.

1123. SIR GREGORY CASAL to CANOSSA, BISHOP of BAYEUX, French Ambassador in Venice.

Announces his arrival at Lyons, and that he had found the Regent and the Council well disposed towards the league. They are drawing up a certain writing, which Robertet will put into cipher and forward in two days or sooner.

The English insist on the following articles:—

The most Christian King to renounce his claims on Milan. To give 40,000 ducats per month for the expenses of the war. To furnish 500 spears in the French fashion and the fleet of galleys ready manned, both to be paid out of the 40,000 ducats. To fit out some ships at his own cost, and to make the Switzers march. The Duke of Milan to remain in his duchy, and pay an annual pension of 13,000 crowns to the Switzers.

After obtaining the kingdom of Naples and routing the Imperialists, the League to aid the release of the most Christian King, and to give one of his kindred for wife to the Duke of Milan. In the event of the latter's death, the duchy of Milan to be inherited by Maximilian, his elder brother, now in France.

Lyons, 28th September. Registered by Sanuto, 28th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 30.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 162, tergo.

1124. The DOGE and SENATE to ANDREA NAVAGERO, Ambassador with the Emperor.

By letters from their ambassador in England are informed Cardinal Wolsey had announced to him the conclusion of the new peace between his King and the most Christian King and France, both parties making honorable mention of the Signory. This peace was to be proclaimed in London on the 6th instant. The Cardinal expressed a desire on the part of the King and himself for 1525.

the release of the most Christian King, for the benefit of the Christian religion. To effect this they were resolved to leave nothing untried, and would desire their ambassadors with the Emperor to press this upon him, and have their suit backed by the Legate Salviati, resident at the Imperial Court. This request would also be seconded by the French ambassador and other envoys accredited to the Emperor, and the Cardinal urged him (the Venetian ambassador) to write to the Signory, that when the Legate and the English ambassadors, with those of the other powers, present themselves to the Emperor for this purpose, the Venetian ambassador should accompany them. In compliance with the wishes of the King and Cardinal, desire him (Navagero) to acquaint the reverend English ambassadors with the satisfaction of the State at being included by their King in the new treaty of peace, and with the Signory's readiness to do whatever may be agreeable to England. When, therefore, the Papal Legate at the Imperial Court, with the ambassadors there—or the majority of them—present themselves to the Emperor to represent the general wish of the Christian powers—that the most Christian King be released—he (Navagero) is to accompany them, especially as by letters from Rome the Signory understands that, at the request of the King and Cardinal, the Pope has charged his Legate to perform this same office.

P.S.—Should the Legate not go in person, he (Navagero) is to abstain in like manner, but is to acquaint the English ambassadors with the order received from the State, to present himself together with the Legate, according to the request of Cardinal Wolsey.

Ayes, 193. Noes, 10. Neutrals, 5.

[Italian.]

Sept. 30.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. pp. 22, 23.

1125. DOM. AUGUSTINO GERMANELLO to ———, at Mantua.

Fresh advices have reached Rome, confirming the peace between the King of England and the French. Has been told by La Fayette (el Foietta) that there were letters from Cardinal Wolsey to his ambassador at Rome, dated 9th September, telling him of this peace, of which he would send him the articles in his next, as they were not yet engrossed; that this peace had been made to the Emperor's satisfaction and with his participation; and that the King of England consents to his Imperial Majesty's marriage with the Princess of Portugal.

The Senate of Rome has caused a most notorious witch to be burnt at the Campidoglio. She had compromised many females, including even gentlewomen, and accused many great men who had intercourse with her. She did wonders by the art of magic, and amongst the rest made a dog speak, and sent it to deliver messages wherever she thought fit. She also perpetrated many other horrible crimes, for which she has suffered the due penalties of the law. To avoid defaming a number of persons who were mentioned in the trial (processo), the Pope gave orders for it to be burnt.

Rome, 30th September. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

1525.

Oct. 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 18.1126. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope told him he had letters from Spain, dated 3rd October, informing him that the most Christian King had been out hunting well guarded. The Cardinal Legate Salviati had not yet arrived at the Imperial Court. Mons. de Montmorency told the Emperor, on behalf of the most Christian King, that the King of England would not make an agreement with his Majesty, nor give him anything whatever. His Holiness has received letters from Lunardo Spina in France, telling him that the Regent, who is at Lyons, had sent an envoy to the Signory, who will not make an agreement with the Emperor.

Sends a copy of the proclamation of the peace between France and the English King, together with a supplement. They had news [at Rome] of the Duke's departure from Ferrara for Spain, concerning which journey there was much discourse.

Rome, 1st October. Registered by Sanuto, 6th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 4.1127. DEPARTURE of RICHARD PACE from VENICE.

Yesterday, by order of the College, the Sage of the Council, Ser Francesco Donado, knight, and the sage for the main land, Ser Zaccaria Bembo, were sent to the English ambassador Dom. Richard Pace, who from illness could not come into the College to take leave of the Doge on his, Pace's, return to England, and according to a decree of the Senate they presented him with a chain of the value of 800 ducats. He goes by way of Bassano, and the Signory's governors were ordered to treat him with every attention and with honour, and to go and meet him on his entry into Treviso and Bassano.

On the morning of the 3rd he departed on his way to Treviso.

[Italian.]

Oct. 2.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 9.1128. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Are expecting to hear from him about the new peace concluded between his Majesty of England and the most Christian King and France, which, as he wrote, was to be proclaimed in London on the 6th, most especially as they have received a copy of the proclamation of the peace which was made at Lyons on the 22nd ultimo; the Signory being named therein, on behalf of the most Christian King and the kingdom of France. Are anxious to hear what has taken place in England.

The Duke of Ferrara departed from Italy on the 25th ultimo, on his way to the Emperor's Court, passing through Mantua and Cremona. The health of the Duke of Milan continues improving, and he is free from fever.

With regard to German affairs, the lansquenets in the neighbourhood of Trent are in their usual quarters.

The Imperial army makes no further stir, save that its Spanish infantry in Piedmont attacked some 2,000 Italian foot soldiers, who, having been dismissed by the most serene Regent, were on their 1525.

march from France. This took place notwithstanding the safe-conduct for their passage, given by the Marquis of Pescara.

[Have written to their ambassador at the Imperial Court to support the proposal to be made to the Emperor by the Legate and other ambassadors for the release of the most Christian King, as suggested to them by Cardinal Wolsey.]* To announce this to the King and Cardinal, and to tell them likewise that their ambassador, the Rev. Richard Pace, quitted Venice today for Padua, on his way to England. His malady continues to prevent him from sleeping, and in truth his Lordship had great need to depart hence, as the climate disagreed with him vastly. Throughout his sojourn at Venice have performed every possible good office for his recovery, both out of respect for those whom he represented and for himself individually, as he is a worthy personage and much beloved by the State.

Letter read to the Sages on both benches, and afterwards by the Secretary Caroldo to the Doge and Counsellors in the Council of Ten.

[Italian.]

Oct. 3.

1129. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Cicogna copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.

The negotiation with England, the speedy conclusion of which he announced in his last, is apparently delayed.

Today heard from a very trustworthy person, as a great secret, that yesterday a courier arrived from England bringing the Emperor news that peace between the King and France had been concluded. The English ambassadors at Toledo continue the negotiation notwithstanding, and even yesterday they conferred with the Emperor.

Toledo, 2nd October 1525.

P.S., dated the 3rd.—Has again heard that the account of the peace between England and France is true. The English ambassadors themselves do not deny it, but say it is merely an agreement about future tribute (le pensioni), of which their King has thus secured payment for himself. From other persons in Toledo hears that they are agreed about the tribute (le pensioni) past and future, and that the peace is made, and that they are to be friends of friends and foes of foes.

Late on the 3rd the Duchess of Alençon entered Toledo. The Emperor went to meet her as far as the Square, but without the ambassadors. He was not accompanied by many attendants of any other rank.

[Italian.]

Oct. 3.

1130. DOM. SOARDINO to [the MARQUIS OF MANTUA ?].

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 82.

During the first two days when the King of France was considered as it were dead, the Emperor held long conferences with the English ambassadors, who denied the agreement which the French said had been made with their King. The day before yesterday the President of Paris arrived in great haste at Toledo from Madrid, with news that the most Christian King's health had improved greatly. A discussion at great length took place on the morrow with the President, and when it was known that the health of the King had improved greatly, the Viceroy went to Madrid under pretence of visiting him. Having there had a long conversation with the Duchess of Alençon, he returned to Toledo, where she is expected today or tomorrow. The King is now free from fever, and as all questions have been so well ventilated, it may be supposed that after her arrival the affair will be arranged in one way or the other. Is of opinion that if the agreement [between France and England,] be true, the French, knowing themselves to be in a much better position, will not so easily cede Burgundy. If, as asserted by the English ambassadors, the news of the treaty be untrue, in that case France will perhaps give better terms; but the result will be known on the arrival of the Duchess of Alençon.

* This passage was to be put into cipher.

1525.

Toledo, 3rd October.

P.S., dated the 4th.—Talking today with the English ambassadors, was told by them that they had lately received letters from England, and are informed that their King has in fact made a certain agreement with the French about the pension to be paid in future, but that nothing more had been stipulated. They said the like to the Legate [Cardinal Salviati], so that they are beginning to admit what they have hitherto denied. Believes that this intelligence was received by them several days ago, but concealed. Is confirmed in his opinion that this agreement between the Emperor and France will not be so speedily concluded, as French prospects have improved greatly, and the Emperor insists positively on the unconditional surrender of Burgundy.

Registered by Sanuto, 23rd October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 6.

1131. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Cicogna copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.

The King of France had a relapse lately, and is said still to have a little fever, though it is not known for certain how he is, for he has less liberty than at first, and those about him do not choose any particulars to be known.

Toledo, 6th October 1525.

[Italian.]

Oct. 8.

1132. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 41.

Conversed about the league with the Pope, who has heard from England that the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] is coming to Rome. The peace with France has been proclaimed in England in a different form to the proclamation made at Lyons, as the English treaty includes the Emperor, the Archduke of Austria, his brother, and the Lady Margaret. An envoy from the Emperor had arrived in London to demand the Princess of England in marriage, as it seems that the Emperor will not marry the sister of the King of Portugal.

Rome, 8th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 13th.

[Italian.]

1525.

Oct. 10.

Cicogna copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.

1133. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Amongst the articles of the "reported" peace* between the Emperor and France, none has seemed more strange and unfair to the French than the one which requires the King to renounce all his friends and confederates. It appears to them that their King is thereby placed in total servitude, and all his friends rendered hostile to him if he abandon those who have served and assisted him, particularly as this clause binds him to desert Robert de la Marck and the Duke of Guelders, which the French will never do, and if they did they would be considered most ungrateful.

It also seems that this clause was inserted to exclude the King of England from the peace made by him with France, which peace has greatly exasperated the Imperialists.

Since the receipt at Toledo of certain news of the peace between England and France, the Emperor has sent to Mons. de la Chau in Portugal, desiring him to conclude the marriage with the King's sister, and the Legate has already received the dispensation from Rome; so the Court is expected to go soon to Seville, where the marriage will take place.

Toledo, 10th October 1525.

[Italian.]

Oct. 11.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 38.

1134. HIERONIMO LIPPOMANO, Bailiff and Captain at Bassano, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The English ambassador, Pace, arrived here yesterday. In accordance with the Signory's orders, showed him all possible honour and attention. Today Pace departed for Primolano. Sent in advance desiring the landlord of the inn there to do him honour and make no charge, as the Signory would pay for everything; so he departed extremely well satisfied.

According to advices from Trent the 4,000 infantry under the Bishop of Brixen, who were marching with him to recover his territory, went back to Trent, having had an encounter with the peasants.

The Bishop there has caused two peasants to be beheaded at Trent, has amputated the hands of others, and put out the eyes of certain delinquents. Some 120 of the said peasants, whom he has in prison, will also be punished severely by him.

Bassano, 11th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 13th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 12.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.

1135. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Received his letters of the 10th and 14th ultimo, which announced the communication made to him by Cardinal Wolsey concerning events in England, [and the sage discourse and opinions of the King and of his right reverend Lordship touching the welfare and liberty of Italy, together with the offices performed by the latter, both through letters to the Regent of France, by word of mouth

* "Della pace, che si dice."

1525.

with her ambassadors in England, and with the Pope, having sent as ambassadors to him the Papal Auditor (Girolamo Ghinucci)* and Sir Gregory Casal. To see his Majesty, and in the Signory's name return most ample thanks.†

The Duke of Milan's health continues to improve, so that in a few days the physicians expect him to be quite well.

Ambassadors from the Grisons have been to Milan, demanding the restitution of the fortress of Chiavenna and other places in the Valtellina, and promising to sign a peace and convention with the Duke; but being unable to come to terms, they went away discontented, and on their return seem to have been made prisoners by the warder of Mus, the truce with them having expired. A reinforcement of troops and provisions has been put into the fortress of Chiavenna. The whole country of the Grisons is consequently in arms, and threatens to renew the war in the Milanese.

The Duke of Ferrara had been with the Marquis of Pescara at Vercelli, and was continuing his journey towards Spain.

Disturbances between the nobility and peasants of Carinthia.

[Italian.]

Oct. 14.

1136. ANTONIO VANIOL to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 121.

A messenger has arrived from the Duke of Ferrara, again demanding a safeconduct, in case he do not go to Spain by sea. They [the Regent and Council] have requested the Duke to come to Lyons, but will not allow him to go to Spain until a reply from the King of England as to whether they should grant him transit is received. Sir Gregory Casal and the Papal Auditor, ambassadors from the King of England, will depart for Rome in haste.

Lyons, 14th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 3

[Italian.]

Oct. 15.

1137. The SAME to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 121.

A nephew of Giovanni Gioachino, the French Ambassador in England, has arrived, bringing word that the King urges France to league with Italy. He is very warm against the Emperor, and desires the release of the most Christian King, and for this purpose he is sending his ambassadors to Rome. The Regent is doing everything for the King's release, to effect which she would give Burgundy, but the Lords of the Council are not of this opinion. The two English ambassadors have departed.

Lyons, 15th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 30th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 18.

1138. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.

To continue keeping the King and Cardinal acquainted with important events in Italy, announce the receipt of advices last evening

* It is stated by Guicciardini (vol. iv. p. 12), that immediately after the battle of Pavia, in 1525, Clement VII. sent Ghinucci to England. He had been made Bishop of Worcester in 1523.

† This passage was to be put into cipher.

1525.

and this morning from Mantua and from their ambassador at Milan, as likewise from Crema and Brescia, purporting that the Signor Hieronimo Morone,* on a summons from the Marquis of Pescara, under pretence of a consultation about various matters, went to Novara and was arrested by him. Morone was the chief personage in the duchy of Milan, and ruled everything absolutely, especially as the Duke is still indisposed. The Lansquenets have also entered Lodi, and the Spaniards are in Pavia, as he will perceive in detail by the enclosed copies of these advices. To impart this important intelligence instantly with the utmost secrecy to the King and Cardinal, that they may make such provision as is necessary for the preservation of the duchy and the rest of Italy. Have sent immediate notice of this to the Pope. To give a detailed account of whatever he hears concerning this matter.

The health of the Duke of Milan is such that little reliance can be placed on his life.

[Italian.]

Oct. 18.

1139. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 67.

Told by the Pope that the English ambassadors, Sir Gregory Casal and the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci], had quitted Lyons for Rome. Also that the General of the Franciscans [Quiñones] had favoured Friar Francesco Giorgio, which pleases his Holiness, as Friar Giorgio is a learned man.†

Rome, 18th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 21st.

[Italian.]

O
Le
Collegio,
(Secreta)
File no. 9.

1140. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

After the arrest of Morone and the entry of the Lansquenets into Lodi in the name of the Emperor, and of certain companies of Spanish foot into Pavia and of others into Alexandria, the Marquis of Pescara sent one Brancamonte to the Duke of Milan to justify the arrest of Morone for having plotted against the State. The Duke replied, "You have come to me; do you think thus to cause my death? I shall not die until it please God, and am greatly surprised that the Marquis of Pescara should have dealt thus with me, for I am sure Morone has not erred in any respect, still less have I;" adding strong language to this effect. Sending for one of his secretaries, he dictated a letter in substance as above, and then said to Brancamonte, "You perceive that I myself dictated the letter; tell the Marquis what you have witnessed."

Understand that the Marquis of Pescara has quitted Novara, and pushed on to a place called Bel-reguardo, on this side of the Ticino, having sent in advance his men-at-arms and infantry, who are at Binasco and other neighbouring places, distant 10 or 16

* Prime Minister of Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan.

† Concerning the Franciscan Friar, Francesco Giorgio, who subsequently wrote in favour of Henry VIII.'s divorce from Katharine of Arragon, see Burnet.

1525.

miles from Milan. The Marquis del Guasto has done the like with the troops under his command at Alexandria beyond the Po.

Some 700 infantry have entered Milan in the Duke's name, and will, it is said, make resistance.

Enclose copies of letters written by the Marquis of Pescara to the community of Milan, together with the answer given him, for communication to the King and Cardinal, together with the other advices.

P.S.—Having detained their letter until today, the 23rd, send a copy of certain advices from Milan received this morning, to be communicated with the others to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

Oct. 22.

1141. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 170.

Not having received letters from the Signory, went to Cardinal Wolsey for news. They talked together about the agreement made with France and Spain. The Cardinal resented the interference of the ambassador of the King of England without his order. He said that after the stipulation in London of the peace between the King and France, the Emperor wrote a letter to the King of England, purporting that the most Christian King was with him, and that he (the Emperor) was willing to comply with his English Majesty's wishes. But the Cardinal perceives that the Emperor intends to have supreme authority in Italy; so it would be well for the Signory to guard her towns carefully, and conclude the Italian league with France. The King of England will be its conservator, and will also declare even against the Emperor because he does not choose the Signory to be wronged, as she is her cordially.

After a suitable reply from him (Orio), the Cardinal said Sir Gregory Casal had been sent to Lyons to Madame the Regent, and subsequently to the Pope, with an ample commission. The Papal Auditor had likewise gone to Rome as ambassador. The Cardinal also announced the receipt of advices from Spain; that the most Christian King was ill, and the Duchess of Alençon had arrived at Madrid.

London, 27th September.

Has visited Giovanni Gioachino [di Passano] and the Cavalier* of Alençon [Jean Brinon], the French ambassadors, who told him that Madame [the Regent] is disposed to stipulate the Italian league, and that the Emperor cannot come into Italy at present, being intent on his marriage with the Princess of Portugal. The Spaniards have taken some French ships since the truce was made. The Lady Margaret is gone to Holland. Writes by way of Germany. Here in London people are dying of the plague.

London, 30th September.

Has visited Cardinal Wolsey at ———, 12 miles from London, in order to acquaint him with the Signory's missives of the 19th to the 23rd September, concerning the proposals made by the Prothonotary Caracciolo and Sanchez, the Imperial ambassadors to the

* "Cancellier" in date 13th October, see ante, p. 478.

1525.

Signory, and the reply given them. The Cardinal approves the reply, and says nothing should be concluded, as the Emperor meditates deceit. The Regent [Louise of Savoy] has written to London that the Pope asks too much; he requires the kingdom of Naples for himself, 50,000 ducats per month to be given him by France, and the fleet. The Signory also demands too much. The Cardinal added that the league ought to be made; that he had written to France to agree to it; and that he had received letters from Rome from the Prothonotary Casal, the brother of Sir Gregory, who is at Lyons, that the Pope was well disposed to make the league: so it ought to be concluded. He (Orio) told the Cardinal he wished to speak to the King, and an appointment was made accordingly. The Cardinal chooses Italy to remain free (in libertà), as the Emperor wishes to render himself monarch of the world, and to make the Pope say mass for him.

London, 9th and 15th October.

Giovanni Gioachino has departed for Calais, to bring 50,000 ducats from France on account of the pensions, and 10,000 ducats for Madame Mary, the King's sister, Queen Dowager of France, to whom France also restores her territory (il suo stado), of which Giovanni Gioachino has taken a lease for 29,000 ducats per annum, subject to confirmation.

London, 22nd October. Registered by Sanuto, 8th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. x.

1142. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Has been with the English ambassador [Clerk], who told him that Sir Gregory Casal and the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] are coming to the Court as his Majesty's ambassadors, having been to Lyons to persuade France to stipulate the Italian league.

Rome, 23rd October. Registered by Sanuto on the 30th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. pp. 88, 89.

1143. The PROVEDITOR GENERAL PESARO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Hears from Lyons that one Gregory [Casal] had departed thence. He is the English ambassador appointed to the Signory of Venice, and is going subsequently to Rome.

Verona, 24th October. Registered same day.

[Italian.]

Oct. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 100.

1144. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

At the 19th hour today Sir Gregory Casal arrived here from England. He is on his way to Rome, and will perhaps go to Venice. He comes from Lyons.

Milan, 24th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 311.

1145. DOM. SOARDINO to [the MARQUIS OF MANTUA?].

Has been told by the English ambassadors that they have again received letters from their King concerning the commission given them with regard to the peace between France and the Emperor; and although their King has made an agreement with France, it related merely to the pensions due heretofore and to security for future payments, so that he has done nothing which can be considered hostile to the Emperor. Here they [the Imperialists] dissemble, pretending to believe what they say.

1525.

Toledo, 24th October. Registered by Sanuto, 4th December.

[Italian.]

Oct. 25.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
Letter no. 9.

1146. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

The Duke is from day to day recovering his health.

The Marquis of Pescara has proceeded to Pavia, and continues sending troops to all the cities and places in the Milanese to secure them for the Emperor.

To advise the King and Cardinal of these facts.

[Italian.]

Oct. 25.
Deliberazioni
SenatoSecreta,
v. l. p. 165.

1147. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Approve of the Pope's writing to England, and also to the Switzers. Now that the Grisons are stirring, and dissatisfied on account of the proclamation made against them, they will readily succour Italy; so his Holiness should gain the Switzers.

[Italian.]

Oct. 25.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 103.

1148. The VENETIAN GOVERNORS of BERGAMO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador, has arrived from Milan, and is going to Brescia. He dined with them, and in the course of conversation said that France was well disposed. They provided him with horses as far as Brescia, but he has only one companion.

Bergamo, 25th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 26.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 104.

1149. NICOLÒ TIEPOLO, Bailiff of Brescia, and PIERO MOCE-NIGO, Captain of the same, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Captain Mocenigo, whilst superintending the construction of the tower (torrion), was accosted by Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador, who arrived from Bergamo. He praised the building greatly, and they then went together to dinner, after which Sir Gregory sat down to write, and then gave them a packet of letters for transmission to Venice, addressed to the Bishop of Bayeux. Sir Gregory said he was going post to Rome, to do good service for the Signory and for Italy, adding other words about the good disposition of France towards Italian affairs. The Captain Mocenigo provided him with horses as far as Mantua, and in the afternoon he departed.

Brescia, 26th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.

[Italian.]

1525.

Oct. 26.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 261.1150. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Has been to "the Moore," a place belonging to Cardinal Wolsey, to which the King came. Dined with the Cardinal, to whom he communicated all his intelligence and the reply given to Bayeux, telling him that the Signory congratulated the King on the peace with France, and thanked him for including the Republic therein. Informed him also that the Signory had written to the Venetian ambassador in Spain, to go [with the other ambassadors] to the Emperor, to demand the release of the most Christian King.

His Majesty was with the Cardinal, together with him (Orio) and the secretary [Gasparo Spinelli]. The King drew a little (si tirò un poco da parte) aside with the Cardinal, and then said much in praise of the Signory, and about the love he bore the State, commending what had been done. He says he will not fail to uphold the liberty of Italy (non è per manchar alla libertà de Italia), and that the league with France ought to be concluded. He also announced the receipt of letters from his ambassadors in Spain. The Duchess of Alençon had been unable to make the agreement, because the Emperor demanded Burgundy, and the most Christian King would not cede it. So the league must be concluded, for defence, &c. The King continued the conversation, saying that the State must not give money to the Emperor, and that the Duke of Ferrara will not have the passport to go to the Emperor.

London, 26th October. Registered by Sanuto, 24th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 261.1151. The SAME to the SAME.

Giovanni Gioachino, who went for the money, is returned from Calais, and brought him (Orio) duplicates of the Signory's letters written in September. Giovanni Gioachino went to speak to the King. Will endeavour to ascertain what he has brought back. The two English ambassadors on their way to France [Sir William Fitzwilliam and Dr. Taylor] have departed.

London, 27th October. Registered by Sanuto, 24th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 121.1152. LUDOVICO CANOSSA, Bishop of Bayeux, French Ambassador in Venice, to AMBROSIO DA FIORENZA.

Has been visited by Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador to Rome, who came to Garzano from Mantua to speak to him, accompanied by Lodovico da Fermo. Details conversations between himself and Casal concerning his commission and what he had done in France, and other particulars. After supper Casal returned for the night to Mantua, and is going to Rome. Ambrosio da Fiorenza is therefore to communicate the whole to the Doge.

Garzano (in the Veronese), 27th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 30th.

Note by Sanuto, that it was a sage letter.

[Italian.]

1525.

Oct. 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 165.1153. MARCO ANTONIO LONGIN, Secretary of Carlo Contarini, to ZUAN FRANCESCO CONTARINI.

Transmits the work written by Luther against the peasants. The towns hereunder mentioned have become Lutheran, viz., Strasburg, Nuremberg, and Ulm, but not so entirely (ma non così del tutto),* and the other free towns in succession, some more and some less; also Zurich in Switzerland. In the above-mentioned towns they no longer celebrate mass or the offices, and have reduced their churches to mosques, that is to say, to white walls. The general opinion is, that the affairs of Germany are more embarrassed than ever, and that the princes will at length have to wage war against the free towns.

Luther has composed a work, "De instituendis scolis." † He no longer replies to those who write against him, but leaves the task to his followers, viz., to Philip Melancthon, of Zurich, and Joannes Ecolampadius. ‡ Has procured a new work of Melancthon's, namely, the funeral oration composed by him on the death of Duke Frederick of Saxony. On arriving at Augsburg, where we expect to be in a fortnight, I will endeavour to obtain some others.

Tubingen, 28th October. Registered by Sanuto, 8th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 30.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.1154. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

A strong suspicion prevails at Toledo that the Signory has made an agreement with England and France. This is spoken of publicly. Understands that the Emperor does not entirely believe it. Some persons mention the Pope likewise; others say that he is not a party to it. They also declare that the Switzers are comprised in this agreement, part of them being paid by England, part by France, and part by Venice. Finds it difficult to answer those who speak to him about this matter.

Toledo, 30th October 1525.

[Italian.]

Oct. 30.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 9.1155. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador
in England.

The Ghiaradadda is full of Imperial troops, and they are collecting great supplies of victuals, and will also bring artillery. The Duke of Milan's health has improved, and he begins to transact business.

With regard to the negotiation with the Imperial ambassadors relative to the peace between the State and the Emperor, the Prothonotary Caracciolo, having been for some days dangerously ill, and finding himself lately a little relieved, requested the Signory to appoint representatives to go to his dwelling to discuss the affair with him and the other ambassador, Sanchez. Therefore sent one of the

* In date 28th August 1525 Ulm was stated to be more Lutheran than the other free towns.

† Sanuto wrote the title thus, "De inscuendis scolis." There is no mention of the work entitled "De instituendis scholis" in the "Commentaria Joannis Cochlaei de actis et scriptis Martini Lutheri Saxonis." The book composed by Luther in 1525 probably had for object to establish charity schools.

‡ By this it would appear that up to the year 1525 Ecolampadius still adhered to Luther, whom he afterwards deserted for Zuingle.

1525.

Signory's counsellors, a sage of the Council and a sage for the mainland, as customary. Acquaint him with this, so that should anything be said he may be able to reply authoritatively.

[Italian.]

Oct. 31.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 166,
tergo.

1156. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador at Rome.

Have written to their ambassador with the Emperor, charging him to act in concert with the Legate. In the meanwhile the result of the negotiations between the Emperor and the most Christian King will be witnessed, without ceasing to carry on the negotiation with France, or to encourage the good disposition of the King of England in favour of Italy, which the Pope will ascertain more thoroughly.

Ayes, 172. Noes, 13. Neutrals, 8.

[Italian.]

Oct. 31.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 146.

1157. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sir Gregory Casal and the Papal Auditor, late in the service of the Pope, have arrived at Rome as ambassadors from the King of England. The Pope has given audience to Livio Gretto, and, after considering his proposal, said it would be well to revolutionise the kingdom of Naples; but before answering him his Holiness intends to give audience to the English ambassadors.

The Pope has also written to the Legate in Spain [Salviati] to tell the Emperor to keep the Duke of Milan in possession of his territory, as otherwise Italy would resent it.

Rome, 31st October. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd November.

[Italian.]

Nov. 1.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 146.

1158. The SAME to the SAME.

The Pope told him he had given audience to Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador, who stated that he had been at Lyons, and in his King's name exhorted the Regent to make the league with Italy. She expressed her willingness to do so on certain conditions. Casal said his King would join the league, but insists on a pension from the kingdom of Naples. Should the present Duke remain in possession of the Milanese, the King demands an annual tribute of 100,000 ducats and France 50,000. The Archbishop of Capua [Schomberg] said to him (Foscari) that it would be well to write to the Emperor to put another Duke in Milan, and that if Italy wished the present Duke to remain, she must give his Majesty a million of gold.

Rome, 1st November. Registered by Sanuto on the 2nd.

[Italian.]

Nov. 3.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 261.

1159. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Letters from France, dated 17th October, announce the failure of the Duchess of Alençon's negotiations with the Emperor, because the most Christian King will not accede to his demands, and his Majesty has written to the Regent to conclude the league.

[London], 3rd November. Registered by Sanuto on the 24th.

[Italian.]

1525.

Nov. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 160.1160. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Conversed with the Papal Auditor, the English envoy, who told him his King was excellently disposed towards the affairs of Italy, and would aid the league, which ought to be concluded, but his Majesty requires an acknowledgment of 100,000 ducats from Italy, and Madame the Regent demands 50,000 on the Milanese. The Papal Auditor also said that his colleague, Sir Gregory Casal, who was charged with this business, had been at Lyons, that his King and the Cardinal were well disposed, and that he (Ghinucci) understood the Emperor had remitted 200,000 ducats to Italy. He vastly praised the Signory's ambassador in England, Lorenzo Orio, who, he said, enjoyed very great favour with the King and Cardinal.

Rome, 3rd November. Registered by Sanuto, 7th November.

[Italian.]

Nov. 4.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. 168,1161. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

The Marquis del Guasto, with a good number of men-at-arms and infantry, passed into the Ghiara d'Adda, and quartered thereabouts. Subsequently, on the 2nd instant, the Marquis of Pescara quitted Pavia, and entered Milan in the evening with 200 spears, a good number of light horse, 3,000 foot, and 18 pieces of artillery. He sent immediately to tell the Duke that he was come to take the city and castle in the Emperor's name. To announce this intelligence immediately to the King and Cardinal, to whom it will prove unexpected. To request the aforesaid King and Cardinal, with their usual wisdom, to consider the great importance of the present Spanish movements, and apply such remedies as shall seem fit to their prudence and experience.

Ayes, 175. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Nov. 4.

Cicogna copy
of the Navagero
Despatches.1162. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The Chancellor told him yesterday that the Signory was agreed with France and England, that they were fortifying themselves and raising troops, were expecting the Duke Maximilian [Sforza], and would not come to terms with the Emperor. The causes of this suspicion are as follows: the malady of the Duke of Milan [Francesco Sforza]; and the report, confirmed by letters from Italy, that should he die the Italians would not have any other Duke than Maximilian, and that Hironimo Morone was negotiating his [Maximilian's] removal from France and establishment in the duchy, with the favour of the Switzers and the Signory. Although the Duke Francesco is now well the report does not cease, especially as it is also said that Venice has joined the league with France and England.

Toledo, 4th November 1525.

[Italian.]

1525.

Nov. 7.

1163. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 261.

Sent his secretary, Gasparo Spinelli, to the Cardinal for news. The Cardinal said that Giovanni Gioachino had announced to him the receipt of letters from France, dated 17th October, that the agreement with the Emperor would not take place, and the King has written that they must negotiate the league. The Cardinal told him to write to the Signory to negotiate the defensive league with France, because the Emperor purposes making himself monarch [of the universe], and the Pope is timid; and the State should no longer refrain from concluding it, as, after taking Milan, the Emperor will choose to have the Signory's towns, and Padua and Venice. The Cardinal used strong language, and said he had written to the Regent in France to conclude the league. The secretary thanked his Lordship, who then told him that the Duke of Bourbon had departed for Spain, with a fleet of 18 galleys, namely, 11 belonging to the Emperor, three to the Order of Rhodes, and four to the Pope, and with two barks. This fleet the Emperor may detain, reinforce, and proceed with to Italy. The secretary then complained that a Ragusan ship, hired in the Thames by the merchants of Venice, had been well nigh captured by four French vessels, so it was compelled to put back and discontinue the voyage. The Cardinal spoke wrathfully about this to Giovanni Gioachino, saying it was not according to the agreement in negotiation between France and England, and therefore orders must be given for secure navigation in those seas. Giovanni Gioachino replied that he would write to France so that the navigation may be free.

The Prothonotary Casal writes from Rome, in date of the 23rd, concerning church benefices, but says nothing about the capture of Morone.

Sir Gregory Casal writes from Lyons on the 12th, that the conclusion of the league with Italy was in a fair way, and Madame the Regent was sending a commission to the Bishop of Bayeux to stipulate it. The Duke of Ferrara would not go to Spain.

[London], 7th November. Registered by Sanuto on the 24th.

Note by Sanuto.—According to the letter from England detailing Orio's conversation with the King, his Majesty said, "Beware lest the Signory give money to the Emperor, as he would wage war upon you with it; and be careful not to make a league, most especially with France, unless all promise, for it happened to me to make a league with France against the Emperor, for which I spent money, and the King of France did nothing."

[Italian.]

Nov. 8.

1164. MOTIONS concerning ENGLAND made in the SENATE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 170.

Motion for a letter to the ambassador in London, commending his proceedings, and the sayings of Cardinal Wolsey, because the Imperialists purpose seizing the Milanese; informing the ambassador also that the Marquis of Pescara has demanded the castles of Milan and Cremona. The letter to be antedated 4th November.

Also that a second letter be written in date of today, acquaint-1525.

ing the ambassador with the proposals made by the Marquis of Pescara to the Duke for the surrender of the castles, and directing him to urge the King] to make provision, as the Emperor is determined to make himself master of the Milanese, and then of all Italy; nor can Venice alone prevent him.

Ballot for the two letters.

Noes, 5. The rest ayes.

[Italian.]

Nov. 8.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 169,
tergo.

1165. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Regret the suspense in which the Cardinal and the ambassador were kept by the delay to which their despatches were subjected, although no opportunity for forwarding them by way of France, Germany, and Rome was neglected.

Gratified to learn that Cardinal Wolsey shows himself daily more and more inclined towards the maintenance and liberty of Italy and well affected towards the interests of the State.

To thank the Cardinal. Beseech his Lordship to persevere in his beneficial purpose, especially since these most important movements of the Imperialists in the Milanese.

Enclose copy of the reply made to the Imperial ambassadors, in the name of the Senate, concerning the three articles proposed by them.

Ayes, 175. Noe, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Nov. 8.
Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

1166. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Went yesterday to the English ambassadors, and executed the commission in the Signory's letter of the 30th September. They thanked the State greatly, and said they would write to the King and to the Cardinal, acquainting them with this readiness to comply with their wishes, but the Legate* had not yet received his instructions from Rome, and they had no commission to attempt the release of the King of France. They therefore await intelligence from Rome, and a new ambassador from their King [Dr. Edward Lee], who will soon arrive at Toledo. Should the Legate and the other ambassadors go to the Emperor, will do as commanded by the State.

Toledo, 8th November 1525.

[Italian.]

Nov. 14.
Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

1167. The SAME to the SAME.

The English ambassadors have made no demand soever of him. Necessary to proceed cautiously in the matter, by reason of the great suspicion which the Imperialists entertain of the Signory, especially as the French say that Venice and the Pope are with them. The

* The Legate Salviati. His expected arrival at Barcelona on the 19th or 20th July is mentioned in Letter no. 378, date 23rd July 1525. He entered Toledo on the 29th September. See Cicogna, S. Martino di Murano, p. 180.

1525.

Legate has not yet received any order from Rome to obtain the release of the King of France, and will make the demand in general terms to avoid increasing suspicion.

Hitherto the English ambassadors do not show much warmth about the matter, and say that nothing whatever has been told them by the French, neither have they made any communication to them [the French].

Toledo, 14th November 1525.

[Italian.]

Nov. 17.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

1168. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Informed by the Legate [Salviati] that he had heard from the Emperor himself, that the English ambassadors demand he should pay them the arrears of pensions which were due from France during the years whilst England was waging war on France as his ally, and which the Emperor bound himself to pay.

To this the Emperor replies that according to the agreement now stipulated with the King of England, France promises to pay him these arrears, and it is not reasonable that England should receive payment twice. In the agreement they have given another name to these pensions, and they are at liberty to call them what they please, but still he (the Emperor) is not bound to pay what has been already received.

Toledo, 17th November 1525.

[Italian.]

Nov. 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 329.

1169. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On receipt of the Signory's letters, dated 18th October, spoke to Cardinal Wolsey, acquainting him with the arrest of Morone by the Spaniards, and the peril of the duchy of Milan. His Lordship said, "The league must therefore be made with France, either with the Pope or without him. The Signory must ally herself closely with France. You should not lose time."

The Cardinal moreover wishes the Signory to send a secret ambassador to France, and to fortify the Venetian towns, without waiting for the Pope, who (Wolsey said) is not aware of the enmity borne him by the Emperor.

The Cardinal then said that Sir Gregory Casal would already have reached Venice and Rome; that he would send letters to Casal in the King's name and his own for the Pope, urging his Holiness to conclude the league; and that he would tell the French ambassadors in London to write to Madame the Regent to conclude the league without delay.

Yesterday the King's almoner [Dr. Lee] departed as ambassador to the Emperor in Spain, in lieu of the President of London [Tunstall, Bishop of London] who is returning.

Pace, late ambassador to the Signory, has arrived in London. Will visit him.

London, 17th November. Registered by Sanuto, 7th December.

[Italian.]

1525.

Nov. 19.

Communi
Consiglio X.1170. EMBASSY in ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta by the chiefs.

Have heard from the nobleman Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, ambassador in England, by letters dated the 7th inst., concerning the loss incurred by him when receiving the money. Therefore to provide for his indemnity,—

Put to the ballot, that the moneys for his expenses be given to his agents in broad gold florins, as was enacted with regard to the Signory's ambassadors at Rome. -

Ayes,	18	19	} Nihil captum.
Noes,	8	6
Neutrals,	1	2

[Italian.]

Nov. 21.

Lettere
del Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 9.1171. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

The Marquis of Pescara has been making constant proposals, replies, and rejoinders to the Duke of Milan, but all of one tenor, persisting in his demands, especially with regard to surrender of the castles of Milan and Cremona, &c. The Duke has constantly refused, and reserves the right of exculpating himself to the Emperor from the false charges to which he has been subjected. On the 13th the Lansquenets, having occupied the suburbs of Milan, surrounded and blockaded the castle, placing sentries, raising bastions and such other bulwarks as seemed necessary to them. On the other hand, the garrison of the castle cannonades their quarters briskly every day, causing them some loss. According to report the castle is determined on defence, hoping for succour from the other Christian powers. The Imperialists are endeavouring to muster a number of sappers (guastadori), to make trenches round the castle, but can only find a few to undertake the service. They have imposed two subsidies at Cremona and other cities in the Milanese, to obtain as much money as possible, but almost everybody hesitates to pay, being aware of the importance of the measure. The Duke is understood to be convalescent. The Marquis of Pescara is not in a good state of health, being troubled with a grievous wearisome disease.

To communicate this intelligence immediately to the King and Cardinal, and request they will render effective assistance.

A French gentleman named Robodanges has been sent express by the Regent to the Bishop of Bayeux [Canossa] and the Magnifico Dom. Ambrosio [da Fiorenza], her ambassadors with the Signory, bringing letters and powers to conclude the union with Italy according to the articles in the enclosed copy. Send also the reply of the Senate, in order that, if spoken to, he may answer veraciously.

Yesterday received letters from Rome, dated the 16th, informing them that the Lord Albert of Carpi had received the same powers from the Regent as those addressed to her ambassadors at Venice. He had communicated them to the Pope; and they were to confer together, modify certain articles, and send them back to the Regent for confirmation. To request the King and Cardinal not to fail furthering this negotiation for the liberty of Italy.

1525.

[Italian.]

Nov. 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. pp. 356,
358.

1172. DOM. SOARDINO to [the MARQUIS OF MANTUA].

Should the Emperor choose, money will be found for the Marquis of Pescara. Notwithstanding the necessity for adjusting matters between the Emperor and England, they are very dissatisfied with each other. The Emperor is willing to refund the money received on account of the Princess of England's dower, so there is no dispute on that score, though the Emperor requires time, and the King insists on immediate payment. This however will be arranged, but England demands of the Emperor the pensions which were withheld from her by France during the period when, for the Emperor's sake, the King of England was the enemy of France. The Emperor replies that he bound himself to pay the money in case the French failed to do so; but now that England has made terms with France, and France has paid a considerable sum of money solely for arrears of pensions, he is released from his promise. This position England denies, saying that France paid the sum on some other account. A dispute therefore exists, which may perchance create some mischief, though he (Soardino) knows that the Emperor told a certain person that this would not cause any quarrel between them; but the Emperor has shown dissatisfaction, and the like feeling is evinced by the English ambassadors in their conversations.

Toledo, 21st November. Registered by Sanuto, 14th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 347.

1173. THEODORO TRIULZI to ———.

The Duchess of Alençon is still in Spain negotiating the agreement, which will be effected. On the 28th, mass was chaunted pontifically at Lyons, in the presence of the great personages of France and the English ambassadors; and they swore to the league and peace between France and England.

Lyons, 29th November. Registered by Sanuto, 12th December.

[Italian.]

Dec. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 383.

1174. CARLO CONTARINI to ANGELO GABRIEL.

The Lutheran sect has made such progress that in these parts they follow no other doctrine. The only masses said are those in the Lutheran fashion, briefly and simply repeating the Epistle and Gospel, all in the German tongue, and consecrating before the people and aloud; and those who attend the mass all communicate without confession. Books against Luther are no longer to be had. All the churches except the cathedrals are despoiled, without images, without candles. Meat is eaten every day without distinction, and no attention paid to holy days. They preach against the mass, and 1525.

say it was devised by Lucifer; they call prayer execrable (la oratione appellano maledetta).

Augsburg, 4th December. Registered by Sanuto on the 17th.

[Italian.]

Dec. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 425.

1175. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

London, 20th November.—Cardinal Wolsey told the two French ambassadors to write to France to conclude the Italian league, and they sent a despatch accordingly.

24th November.—The King has written to Sir Gregory Casal's brother, the prothonotary, who is at Rome, to go as ambassador to the Signory. Pace is ill; does not admit visitors.

1st December.—On receiving the Signory's letters of the 25th and 29th October, with the reply given to the Imperial ambassadors, sent his secretary to announce the same to Cardinal Wolsey, who commended the reply, saying he had letters from Milan acquainting him with the entry of the Marquis of Pescara with the troops, that he purposed blockading the Duke in the castle, and that the Duke will resist. The Cardinal then expatiated on the necessity for hastening the league with France, exhorting the Signory to that effect. He had also received letters from Sir Gregory Casal at Rome concerning the Pope's willingness to make the league, although he had sent the marriage dispensation to the Emperor, and absolution from his promise given to the Princess of England. The secretary having informed the Cardinal that the Signory continued the negotiation with the Imperial ambassadors, the Cardinal said, "The Signory does not perceive their ruin," and urged the stipulation of the league; adding, "The King and we (il Re e noi), at the cost of our own substance, will not tolerate the domination of Italy by the Emperor."

Has conversed with the French ambassador Giovanni Gioachino, who told him the Emperor would not make an agreement, unless he obtained Burgundy. The French ambassadors have despatched a messenger to Madame [Louise] with the details of what the Cardinal had said to them. France has remitted the money for the pension due to the King of England. 40,000 crowns have already arrived at Boulogne, and his Majesty has sent for the money.

6th December.—The French ambassadors have despatched another post to France. Sent his secretary to Giovanni Gioachino, who told him Cardinal Wolsey had received letters from Flanders, informing him that the Emperor wrote to his aunt Madame Margaret for advice as to the negotiation with the most Christian King, and whether he should release him; telling her to raise 800,000 ducats, and to sell part of his territory (stado) in Flanders. Madame consulted her chief advisers, and it was determined to write to the Emperor not to release the King for the present, but to proceed to Italy for his coronation, establish his dominion there (domini quella), and then consider the King of France. They would provide him (the Emperor) with money, and had already sold to the value of 12,000 ducats of his annual revenues.

Registered by Sanuto, 28th December.

[Italian.]

1525.

Dec. 11.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.1176. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

In a conversation with the Nuncio [Baldassar Castiglione], who is an old friend of his, elicited that when they commenced in Italy negotiating the league with France, he always acquainted the Emperor with all his intelligence in the name of the Pope, because the Pope wrote everything to him, both about the Duke of Milan, and the King of England, who was the head of the Italian movement, and also that the Signory had made the agreement, and did not cease urging the Pope to do the like.

Toledo, 11th December 1525.

[Italian.]

Dec. 11.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.1177. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The negotiations for the marriage between the Queen Dowager of Portugal and the King of France continue. The Viceroy [De Lannoy] intrigues the more willingly, as it is the severest blow he can inflict on the Duke of Bourbon, to whom he is most hostile. The Chancellor does not assent to any of these arrangements with France, and would wish the Emperor first of all to adjust the affairs of Italy. He is very dissatisfied at his not doing so, and being unable to quit the house, having for many days had a fit of the gout, he sent to tell the Emperor to beware of what he is doing, as this agreement with France may be the ruin of his prospects. The Chancellor does not believe the King of France will ever keep his promises to the Emperor, and should they give him the Queen of Portugal, it will be still worse; for if heretofore the King attempted to poison the Emperor, at a time when he had nothing to gain by his death, he would more likely do so having a wife, through whom, the Emperor dying, and the Infant [Archduke Ferdinand] having no children, he would inherit so many kingdoms. With regard to receiving the Dauphin as a hostage, he says they must not trust to that, as the Dauphin not being known in Spain, the French might even give the second-born son and say he is the Dauphin.

The English ambassadors demand 800,000 ducats of the Emperor, part on account of money lent him by their King, and part on account of the pension due from the King of France, which the Emperor bound himself to pay. Besides this money, they also demand Tournai; and some persons affirm to their having said that, with the exception of Burgundy, their King lays claim to one half of whatever the Emperor shall get from France, because the agreement was that in case the war undertaken by them succeeded, the Emperor was to have Burgundy, and the King of England Guienne; the rest to be divided in half.

Has conferred occasionally with the English ambassadors, but they are very close (homini strettissimi) and tell him nothing.

Toledo, 11th December, 1525.

[Italian.]

Dec. 14.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 386.1178. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador, had complained to him of the Pope.

Rome, 14th December. Registered by Sanuto on the 18th.

[Italian.]

1525.

Dec. 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. pp. 373,
374.

1179. PROPOSED MARRIAGE of PRINCESS MARY.

Statement made by an anonymous reporter who quitted Milan on Sunday the — December.

In a shop there heard of the arrival of a person from Lyons, who said the English ambassadors were negotiating a marriage between the Dauphin and the daughter of their King.

[Italian.]

Dec. 16.

Communi
Consiglio X.

1180. EMBASSY IN ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta by the Chiefs for payment to Ser Lorenzo Orio of the monthly salary for his English embassy, as noted in the present register on 29th November last.

Ayes, 27. Noe, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Latin.]

Dec. 18.

Patti Scioliti.

1181. HENRY VIII. to DOGE ANDREA GRITI.

Letters patent acquainting him with the treaty between England and France, dated at the Moore, 28th August 1525. Mentions having included the Doge and Signory, and transmits copy of the articles concerning Venice (as in Rymer, vol. XIV. pp. 48 and following).

Richmond, 18th December 1525.

[Original, parchment, with the great seal in wax. Latin, 59 lines, broadside. Dimensions, 2 feet 1 by 2 feet 10.]

Dec. 20.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 395.

1182. MOTION made in the SENATE for a Reply to the FRENCH AMBASSADORS.

The Signory's answer to their proposals for the league was owing to their wish for the Pope to join. Now perceive that they will have to bear a heavy burden, their contingent amounting to 30,000 infantry, 2,000 men-at-arms, and 5,000 light horse, in case they make the league with France alone. Are willing to contribute their third, but wish France to prevail upon the King of England to contribute a third likewise.

[Italian.]

Dec. 20.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 181,
tergo.

1183. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Have heard with satisfaction the good office performed by the Cardinal for the security of Italy and of the Venetian Republic by writing to Rome and to France. Perceive the Cardinal considers Italy liable to disturbance by the Emperor, an opinion confirmed from the Imperialists having blockaded the Duke of Milan in the Castle of Milan, and issued decrees in the name of the Emperor, who is in possession of the whole of the duchy, with exception of the two besieged castles. In accordance with the Cardinal's opinion, have negotiated the alliance between Italy and France. The matter is still being treated at Rome, the articles having been sent to them from France, and in their last, they transmitted a copy.

1525.

Their ambassador at Rome urged the Pope to come to a decision, and his Holiness was remodelling the articles, but said that as he was expecting an envoy from the Emperor, one Don Michiel Herera, he thought it advisable to await his announcement. For this reason, and on account of the Pope's own interests, it is possible his Holiness delays his decision. The State single-handed cannot do what is required for the general need; they must beware of the Imperial army, and of the facilities at the disposal of the Archduke Ferdinand for an attack on their territory. Have not failed, however, to comply with the Cardinal's suggestions by urging the Italian confederacy, in order to provide efficiently for the general safety and quiet. Have also again and again acquainted the Pope with the dangers now threatening Italy and Christendom, and the ease with which they may be averted. Are certain the Cardinal himself, through Sir Gregory Casal, has performed the like office. But although the Cardinal has caused the French ambassadors in London to write to France to hasten the settlement, and the Signory in like manner continues to press the French ambassadors at Venice, nevertheless, delay has intervened. Can therefore do nothing but wait until the King and Cardinal recommend the Regent to transmit such instructions to Venice that the conclusion may be effected.

The Marquis of Pescara having departed this life, the Imperialists are in great difficulty, having lost a brave and experienced military commander.

[Italian.]

† Dec. 20.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. I. p. 182.

1184. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Cardinal Wolsey should continue writing to France in order that a decision be formed. The Signory has not failed to convince the Regent of their resolution. The dilatory negotiations at Rome prevented them from sending their envoy to France, but will do so immediately. As the State alone will have to bear the burden for all Italy, at such cost by sea and in every quarter as is impossible for them to support, it will therefore be necessary for the King of England to concur in this understanding, and render assistance becoming his vast resources. In return, his Majesty will receive such recompense through the duchy of Milan, to the honour and profit of the King and Cardinal, that they will remain satisfied. To urge the King and Cardinal to this effect.

[Italian.]

Dec. 20.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. I. p. 183.

1185. The SAME to the SAME.

Arrival at Rome of the Emperor's envoy, D. Michiel Herera. He informed the Pope of the Emperor's good will towards him and all Italy, and has shown his Holiness certain clauses, based upon the league stipulated heretofore between his Holiness and the Emperor, concerning Reggio and Rubiera. The Pope, perceiving that he was not authorized to consent to the Duke of Milan's retaining the duchy, 1525.

induced the Duke of Sessa and the envoy aforesaid to agree to the term of two months, to write to the Emperor for his consent that the Duke of Milan be a free sovereign in his duchy, and that the Imperial forces depart thence. The Imperialists keep these negotiations on foot to procrastinate, and in the meanwhile to get possession of the castles of Milan and Cremona, and establish themselves in the duchy, to facilitate the execution of their projects.

To communicate the whole to the King and Cardinal, that they may suggest such a remedy as shall seem fit to them.

Moreover, the Imperial ambassadors having urged them to decide about reconfirming the peace and confederacy, the Signory answered them on the 8th that for the present they could form no determination by reason of the fresh events which had taken place in the Milanese, the Duke being one of the confederates, and that they wished to know the opinion of the ambassadors concerning the result. The ambassadors replied that, on the arrest of Morone, and after the charges brought against the Duke of Milan, the Emperor desired the Marquis of Pescara to make himself master of the Milanese, and that should the Duke of Milan not be guilty, he would receive no harm whatever. On the other hand, should he have erred, and the Emperor not choose to pardon him, or should he die, his Imperial Majesty then intends the duchy of Milan to be held by the person to be denominated in his stead in their peace and confederacy, but the ambassadors named no one in particular. As they pressed for a reply, the Signory answered, that in obligatory contracts the specific denomination of all the contracting parties forms the chief basis; and as their Lordships made a vague and ambiguous proposal as aforesaid, the State must suspend its opinion; but that their Lordships, who represented the Emperor, knowing that the Italian powers wish for the maintenance of the Duke of Milan in that duchy for the general quiet of Italy, should perform such good office with the Emperor as to their prudence might seem fit; assuring them that they would always find the State most firm in its devotion towards his Imperial Highness.

To communicate the whole to the King and Cardinal, that they may know what has taken place in this matter.

Enclose for his guidance their answer to the French ambassadors at Venice.

Ayes, 207. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian.]

Dec. 20.
Deliberazioni
Senato Segreto
v. l. p. 183,
tergo.

1186. MOTION made in the SENATE for a Reply to the French Ambassadors, the BISHOP OF BAYEUX and D. AMBROSIO DA FIRENZA.

The allied forces must be such as to suffice for the certain release of the Milanese, and to effect all that is necessary for the general security and quiet. That their Lordships may know the Signory's opinion, remind them that the Regent [Louise of Savoy] informed the State she thought they should amount to 30,000 foot, 2,000 men at-arms, and 3,000 light horse, together with a good train of artillery. Believe that she and her council, being most experienced in warfare, considered these forces necessary for the success of the undertaking; and as Italian affairs are now brought to such a pass, that the State of Venice must bear the burden for all Italy, they will furnish one-third of the aforesaid amount.

1525.

As the King of England is united with France the Regent might prevail upon him to contribute some portion of the remaining two-thirds.

Care must be taken that the infantry supplied either by France or England be efficient troops, including a band of Switzers and lansquenets; all the rest to be good foot soldiers.

Hope that the King of England will willingly accede to this union, he having assured the Regent and the Signory (through Sir Gregory Casal) of his excellent disposition. For this his laudable assistance the Regent might offer him some suitable recompense from the duchy of Milan.*

Should this come to pass, there will be both solidity and repute, and everything that can be desired for an undertaking.

With regard to the fleet, the Regent to mention what she considers necessary, as the Signory will do what is agreed upon.

Request the ambassadors to obtain a sufficient power, so that in God's name the matter may be settled.

Think it necessary for the Regent to declare and promise that she and the kingdom of France will come to no agreement with the Emperor, without the consent and inclusion of the confederates, giving proper security for the observance of what may be stipulated between France and the Signory.

Accept the offer made by the Regent and the kingdom of France to attack the Emperor on the French frontier.

The ambassadors to keep this resolve of the Signory's a very great secret, and not to give any notice of it to the Pope; but they should write to the Lord Albert of Carpi to urge his Holiness, who will comprehend the imminent perils of Italy, and perform such good office as becoming.

Assure the ambassadors that the State is thoroughly well intentioned with regard to the prosperity of France and the release of the most Christian King.

Should the French ambassadors not seem satisfied with this reply, and allude to the delay which might be caused by the negotiation with the King of England, they are to be told that the Signory considers the adherence of his English Majesty necessary, to render the league integral and secure, and capable of effecting both the release of the most Christian King and the recovery of the Milanese, together with the maintenance therein of the Duke. †

To announce the Signory's opinion to the Regent and kingdom of France, who they are assured will not fail to do their utmost with England. Will do the like by means of the Venetian ambassador in London, as speedily and earnestly as possible.

* "Et la prefata Serenissima Regente li potra offerir de tale laudabile opera quel recompenso del stato de Millano che sia conveniente."

† "Come de la recuperation del stato de Millano, et conservatione del Duca in quello."

1525.

Should the Regent and kingdom of France, on hearing this opinion, have anything else to propose for the benefit of the undertaking, the Signory will always adhere to such plans as may cause the release of the most Christian King, the recovery of the Milanese, and the maintenance of the present Duke therein,* together with the security of Italy, which involves the advantage and the security of France.

Ayes, 160. Noes, 34. Neutrals, 18.

[Italian.]

Dec. 23.

1187. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 486.

On the day before yesterday received three sets (mani) of the Signory's letters. Went to the Cardinal at Richmond and acquainted him with their contents. The Cardinal said, "Does it not seem strange to you that the Emperor should desire to rule not only the Signory's territory but all Italy and make himself monarch" (of the universe)? On this account the Cardinal recommends the conclusion of the league with France, and sees no other remedy. Should the Pope consent, be it so; if not, let the Signory league with France, and the King of England will be the conservator of the league. The Cardinal said he had letters from Sir Gregory Casal at Rome, that the Pope is willing to make the league, so that it is unnecessary to continue negotiating. From the Court of France, in date of the 12th November, the Cardinal heard of the Milanese expedition,† and that the Emperor was dissatisfied with the Signory. Showed the Cardinal the reception (ricevuta) given to the Imperial ambassadors, which, however, the Cardinal was already aware of, and approved. Relative to the news from Flanders, the Cardinal said Brabant will not grant the Emperor a benevolence. From France it was reported that they were fitting out an armada of 25 galleys. Said that he would go to the King about these advices. The Cardinal answered, "The King is at a distance—does not remain fixed—goes here and there on account of the plague," and he dissuaded him (Orio) from going thither. Pace's brain is affected (a mal nel cervello); he wanders, owing to a melancholy humour which had seized him. He says he has no longer anything in the world,—that the King has taken all from him. They comfort him and say it is not true, and that the King loves him. He is better, however, within the last three days.

London, 11th December.

A Frenchman, Mons. Edoardin (sic), has arrived in London; he went to the [French] ambassadors, and to the court of the Cardinal; so, to learn something, sent his secretary thither, and he spoke to the Frenchman, whom he had formerly known. The Frenchman gave him fair words, and said he was come to acquaint his Majesty with the proposal made by the Emperor to him (King Francis) which he had not chosen to accept without his Majesty's advice, it seeming to him that the Emperor's demands were very unfair (molto inoneste). Edoardin added, that the Cardinal told him to conclude the league with Italy, because the most Christian King's release would follow, and the King of England would be the conservator of the league and assume its protection. That he (Wolsey) had told Giovanni Gioachino, the French ambassador, to go to France and effect the conclusion; and that he had received letters from Sir Gregory Casal at Rome, who does not doubt but that the Pope will form the league with France and the Signory, although he is negotiating an agreement with the Emperor through his Legate, the articles of which were being drawn up.

* "Et conservatione del presente Duca in quello."

† The entry of the Imperialists into Milan.

1525.

Edoardin then told him that the French had fitted out six ships of 2,000 butts each in Normandy, destined for Provence, where they will join the other squadron which is being prepared there, and that both by sea and land France will do her duty against Spain; also that Giovanni Gioachino was returning to France, and that he (Edoardin) would go back to the most Christian King at Madrid.

Cardinal Wolsey told his (Orio's) secretary that Sir Gregory Casal had written to him from Rome that the Pope was well disposed, and was drawing up the articles of the league with France; and the English ambassadors write from Lyons that the Bishop of Macon* had sung high mass, and the Regent had sworn to observe the articles of the treaty with England.

London, 15th December.

Giovanni Gioachino has gone to France, and taken charge of Orio's letters. London, 7th (sic) December.

Went yesterday to Cardinal Wolsey, who said he had heard from the French ambassador, the President of Rouen, who remained in London, that a commission had been sent from Lyons for Robadanges (sic) at Rome. The Cardinal also said he had letters from Lyons, purporting that France would make the league with Italy; and from Rome he heard, in date of the 28th [November], that the Pope is sending the marriage dispensation to the Emperor, and that France is cajoled with words. He had also letters from the Archbishop of Capua and from the Spanish Court in date of the 6th, announcing the conclusion of the Emperor's marriage with the sister of the King of Portugal; and that the most Christian King has offered the Emperor three millions of gold, namely, one million immediately, and the rest within one year; but the Emperor insists on having Burgundy and Picardy, in short half France, and moreover wants Languedoc. The Cardinal also mentioned that the Marquis of Pescara had died at Milan. He then said that the King was sending the prothonotary Casal, who is at Rome, the brother of Sir Gregory, as his ambassador to Venice; that he would be the bearer of the articles of the agreement between England and France, in which the Signory is named; that it would be well for the State to ratify them, as the King will always give aid, in case of need; and the commission is to be sent to Rome to the prothonotary, who will also go to the Duke of Ferrara, to persuade him to join the league and be its commander-in-chief.

* "Matisponiense;" qu. Matisconensis, i.e. Mascon. The Bishop alluded to was Claude de Longvy; see "Gallia Christiana," vol. iv., col. 193, 194.

1525.

Cardinal Wolsey then told Orio that he had founded a college for students at Oxford, and wished to obtain books from Rome and Venice; and to have copies made on good paper of the Greek manuscripts which had belonged to the late Cardinal of Nicæa* [Bessarione], and to the late Cardinal Grimani, which are in the monastery of St. Antonio. Requests the Signory to oblige him, as he will consider it a very great favour.†

London, 23rd December. Registered by Sanuto, 9th January.

[Italian.]

Dec. 24. 1188. NOTE by SANUTO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 407.

Letters have been received from Lorenzo Orio in England, dated 22nd–25th November, containing nothing of importance.

By private letters [from Orio] it is heard that Zuan da Leze (the natural son of Ser Donado da Leze, Lord Lieutenant of Cyprus), who played most excellently on the organ (organo), went to England anticipating that the King would give him a stipend, and having played, it seems that the performance did not please his Majesty; so Zuan da Leze hung himself—a very horrible case, and of evil nature.

[Italian.]

Dec. 24. 1189. NOTE by SANUTO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 408.

Having written above that Zuam da Leze, the natural son of Ser Donado, hanged himself in London, as our ambassador writes in date . . . , the particulars are as follows:—

He was a consummate musician, most especially on the “clavicimbalum,”† and having had a very perfect instrument made here, he went with it by land to England at a cost exceeding 100 ducats, believing that the King, who delights in music, would give him a salary, as he did to the Crutched friar of Cà Memo, for whom he provided largely, and subsequently Memo departed for fear of his life, and is said to be in Portugal.

Zuam da Leze on arriving in England, played before the King, who it seems was not much pleased, and made him a present of 20 nobles, equal to ducats; so Zuam da Leze in despair, being at table in company, stabbed himself in the breast to commit suicide, which was prevented. They dressed the wound, and put him to bed; but he rose in the night, and hung himself with his dagger-girdle (con la cintura di la sua cortella)—a very lamentable case. He was . . . years old, highly accomplished, and dearly loved by his father, who has no other children, and is Lord-Lieutenant of Cyprus.

[Italian.]

* Nicæa in Bithnia.

† A catalogue of the books of Cardinal Bessarione may be read at pp. 31–55 of the work, entitled “Bibliothecæ Venetæ Manuscripta Publica et Privata. Opera Jacobi Philippi Tomasini” (Utini, Typis Nicolai Schiratti, MDCL.) In the same vol., pp. 1–19, there is also a list of the MSS. of Cardinal Domenico Grimani, in the monastery of St. Antonio.

‡ See Ellis's Letters, 2nd series, vol. i., p. 273; note respecting Henry VIII.'s musical instruments.

1525.

Dec. 28.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. 1. p. 185.

1190. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Received his letters of the 6th. Surprised at what he writes as to the statement made in London by Sir Gregory Casal, that the Pope suspected the agreement would be stipulated between the Emperor and the Signory, because the Pope was informed of all the negotiations with the Imperialists, and approved them. When on account of indisposition the prothonotary Caracciolo demanded a conference, his request was granted to avoid suspicion of a wish to break off the negotiation, and they immediately acquainted the Pope with this proceeding, which was approved of; and that subsequently occurred was communicated to his Holiness.

Have not failed urging the Pope to join the league between Italy and France, it not being fair that the Signory alone should bear the burden for all Italy. Perceive, however, that the Pope delays his resolve owing to the promises made to him in the Emperor's name by the Legate Salviati, and by his Imperial Majesty's agents at Rome, all for the purpose of gaining time, securing his affairs in Lombardy by making himself absolute master of the Milanese, and consequently rendering Italy subservient to him.

Have therefore acted according to the advice of Cardinal Wolsey, and disregard the Pope's indecision. Have answered the French ambassadors approving the formation of a league between the Regent and kingdom of France, his Majesty of England, and the Signory, as by the enclosed copy of their reply. Congratulate themselves on the assurance given by Cardinal Wolsey that on the ratification of the league his King would join it, as they hope and trust he will do; so that through the aid of that most powerful kingdom, and the wisdom, prudence, and authority of the King and Cardinal, the union may produce such good effects as will prove to the honour, glory, and benefit of his Majesty, of France, and of Italy. As success depends on despatch, and considering what he writes concerning the pecuniary supply now raising in Flanders by the Lady Margaret, by the Emperor's order, he is to urge the Cardinal to write again to France, so that the Regent may not delay, and the King of England give his assent, as from this union will proceed the release of the most Christian King.

Ayes, 188. Noes, 9. Neutrals, 7.

[Italian.]

Dec. 30.

1191. NICOLO VAROLA to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 519.

The French ministry complain greatly of the Pope, and praise the Signory. The Lord Albert of Carpi wrote from Rome that the English and Venetian ambassadors did everything with the Pope to prevent him from making a truce for these two months, so that the Pope has a bad name in France.

A person has arrived at St. Severin sent by the Duke of Milan [Francesco Sforza] to his brother Maximilian, informing him that he will hold the castle; and the defenders within write that should the Duke die, they will keep it for him (Maximilian), who showed the letter to him (Varola).

1525.

Giovanni Gioachino [Passano], late ambassador in England, has come to the Regent at St. Severin on a mission from the King and Cardinal Wolsey. He says the King is exerting himself strenuously for the release of his most Christian Majesty, and has sent a post to Rome and Venice, and to the English ambassadors in Switzerland.

St. Severin (eight leagues from Angoulême), 30th December 1525.
Registered by Sanuto, 18th January.

[Italian.]

A.D. 1526.

1526.

Jan. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 461.

1192. The VENETIAN GOVERNORS of BERGAMO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Told by Domenico, the Brescian, a courier, who quitted the Imperial Court at Toledo on the 15th December, that the Emperor would give his sister, Madame Eleanor, for wife, to the most Christian King, Madame Eleanor's daughter to the Dauphin, and the daughter of the King of England to the King of Scotland.

Bergamo, 3rd January. Registered by Sanuto on the 5th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 613.

1193. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

An ambassador has arrived incog. from the Duke of Guelders. He went to Cardinal Wolsey, who has the entire management of the realm, and informed him that the Duke had been taken under the protection of the most Christian King, now a prisoner; wherefore the Duke requests the protection of the King of England. The Cardinal answered him, "If the most Christian King is a prisoner, he is not dead; his Majesty here has joined France, and will not fail to assist him."

Thereupon the ambassador departed well satisfied, Cardinal Wolsey having told him that the Duke of Guelders had been mentioned in the peace between England and France.

Has spoken with the French ambassador, the President of Rouen, who thanked him for the office performed by the Signory's ambassador with the Emperor, in conjunction with the English ambassadors, for the release of the most Christian King.

On account of the plague the King is moving about the island with a few of his attendants, as two of them died of plague in his dwelling. He leaves everything in charge of Cardinal Wolsey, who keeps a great court, and has comedies and tragedies performed.

London, 3rd January. *Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.

[Italian.]

* Sanuto does not explain the cause of the delay of this and the following letters, which ought to have arrived at Venice before those of the 9th, 13th, and 17th of January, transcribed by him on 3rd February.

1526.

Jan. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. pp. 571,
572.

1194. ZORZI STURION to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Madame the Regent has the gout and fever. Some say she will go to Lyons, others to Paris, because the Council wishes to deprive her of the government of the kingdom. The Council will approve the league made with the King of England, but not promise him money until after the release of the most Christian King. France is not satisfied with the regency, and wishes to do what was done of yore when the kings of France were prisoners. Therefore, to give herself repute, Madame circulated a report that the agreement was about to be concluded, but there is little hope of its taking place; at least he is told so by Robertet.

Roussillon, 4th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 30th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 613.

1195. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Details conversations held by him with the French ambassador, the Chancellor of Alençon [Jean Brinon], who stated that some troops had been mustered on the frontier of Flanders with the intention of making war, but Madame the Regent wrote, forbidding them to make any further stir at present; and it seems that the truce with the Emperor, which expires with the calends of January, has been prolonged for a fortnight. France, however, is intent on making the league with Italy, and, should no agreement take place with the Emperor, will attack Flanders, so that the Emperor would find occupation there, but not be able to obtain money thence. The French ambassador also said that letters had been received from the English ambassadors in Spain [Tunstall and Sampson], who urged the Emperor to repay the money lent to him by their King, but his Majesty told them they were commencing their negotiations at the feet, whereas they ought to talk of the head; that is, they should first treat the renewal of the joint league, and then discuss the affair of the moneys. They also state that the Emperor will delay his marriage with the Princess of Portugal until the holidays.

Mons. de la Motte, the envoy from the Duke of Bourbon, has arrived; he is come to thwart the league with Italy; so that the Signory will do well to conclude it quickly, as these foreigners change their minds.

London, 4th January. Registered by Sanuto, 9th February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. lx. pp. 572,
573.

1196. ZORZI STURION to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Yesterday and today the Council sat; it is intended to send envoys to the Pope and to the Signory, and Giovanni Gibachino [di Passano] is returning to England.

Roussillon, 8th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 30th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 595.

1197. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The French ambassador [Jean Brinon] told him he had letters from Lyons, dated the 28th December, announcing the arrival in France of the Duchess of Alençon. She had done nothing in Spain.

1526.

The Lord Chancellor, Mons. de Lautrec, and Robertet remained at Lyons. They were awaiting Giovanni Gioachino. The ambassador also said he had been to Cardinal Wolsey, as the King did not give audience, and that Wolsey told his secretary he had received letters from Rome yesterday, dated 8th December, announcing the arrival of an envoy from the Emperor, and that the Archbishop of Capua [Nicholas Schomberg] assigned four reasons for the Pope's not detaching himself from the Emperor:

- 1st. On account of Luther.
- 2nd. Because the Emperor has got money by his marriage.
- 3rd. France cannot be relied on.
- 4th. The Emperor and the most Christian King will be agreed, and have a secret understanding together.

The letters also stated that the Pope held daily conferences with the Imperial ambassador.

This intelligence displeased the Cardinal, and he wrote to the Pope not to make an agreement with the Emperor, as the Lutherans are quieted, and hostile to the House of Austria; secondly, that the Emperor got but little money by the Portuguese dowry; thirdly, that the King of England would be surety to the Pope for France; fourthly, that the most Christian King has not made any agreement with the Emperor unknown to the King of England, for the Duchess of Alençon would not have returned to France had it been otherwise.

Advices received in England from Biscay, dated the 17th ult., state that the King is agreed with the Emperor, but the report was circulated by the Spaniards.

From Flanders it is reported that Madame Margaret is raising troops against France.

La Motte, who came to England, is not the Duke of Bourbon's La Motte, but a Fleming.*

London, 9th January. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 10.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. l. p. 187,
tergo.

1198. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Perceive that the King and Cardinal persevere. Giovanni Gioachino [Passano] having been sent to the Regent for the purpose mentioned, will arrive at the French Court at the same time as Mons. Robadange, who quitted Venice on the 23rd.

In his last letter mentions having been told by the Cardinal that the King had desired the prothonotary Casal to come as his ambassador to the Signory. To assure the Cardinal that any demonstration made by his Majesty will be agreeable to the State. Derive singular satisfaction from the King's favorable bias towards the State. On the arrival of the prothonotary will acquaint him with his statement on behalf of the King and Cardinal.

Are expecting to receive the list of the books of which the Cardinal * Concerning La Motte see also date 9th February 1526.

1526.

wishes to have copies, and will readily oblige him in this and anything else required by him from Venice.

Have received letters from their ambassador with the Emperor, dated the 15th ultimo, announcing the renewal of the negotiations between his Majesty and the most Christian King, to whom there had been sent the Viceroy and Don Ugo de Moncada, together with the Secretary Alemani. It was said the agreement would take place. A similar notification has been received from Rome in date of the 4th, and also from Milan; but there was no certainty of the conclusion.

In the meanwhile to assure the King and Cardinal that, happen what may, the Signory will be closely united with his Majesty, considering him the protector of Italy and of the State. Should news of the conclusion reach England, to ascertain how it is received by the King.

Should the conclusion of the agreement between the Emperor and France have failed, to continue urging the King and Cardinal to join the union with France and the Signory.

If the agreement has been effected, and disturb the quiet of Italy, it cannot but prove most vexatious to the King of England, who should conciliate (intertengi) France to the utmost, and by his wisdom and prudence contrive (as he easily may) that the agreement produce no effect calculated to disturb the quiet of Italy.

Are certain that, happen what may, France will always be united with the King of England for the benefit of Italy.

Ayes, 199. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian.]

Jan. 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 521.

1199. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Letters having arrived in date of England, 21st December, the prothonotary Casal came to him, to say he had been appointed by the King ambassador to the Signory. Narrates the conversation between them thereupon. The prothonotary will depart for Venice in two days.

Letters from England have also been received by the Pope. The King and Cardinal recommend the formation of the league, but the King does not say that he will join it and disburse money, or give security for France.

Rome, 12th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 18th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 521.

1200. The SAME to the SAME.

The Pope will give the English ambassadors an answer in three or four days. The Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] showed him (the Venetian ambassador) his commission from the King of England to proceed to Venice, and prevent the Signory from making terms with the Emperor, and to urge the conclusion of the league. Sir Gregory Casal also showed him the draft of his commission from Cardinal Wolsey, authorising him to act. Sir Gregory alleges that he told the Pope that the King will not openly declare himself a party to the league in order that the Pope may be the controlling power.

1526.

Rome, 13th January. Registered by Sanuto, 18th January.

[Italian.]

Jan. 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 595.

1201. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

A gentleman was sent yesterday by the King to conduct him (Orio) to his Majesty, whom he found at a place distant 7 miles from London. Cardinal Wolsey was with his Majesty, who, having drawn him and his secretary aside, spoke to them about the league, saying that the love he bore the Signory caused him to make it, and that he would be surety for France. He then added that he had received letters from Rome; that he suspected the Pope of having already declared himself an Imperialist, of having made an agreement with the Emperor, and of confirming the first articles, by which he was to give the Emperor 50,000 ducats, and withdraw his troops from the Milanese, the Duke being left in possession; that mischief was being negotiated against the Signory, as his Majesty had told them ten months ago; and that the articles had been sent to Spain for the Emperor's ratification, after which the Pope will approve them. The Signory should therefore delay the agreement with the Emperor, and not give him money. The King abused the Pope, saying that Capua [Schomberg] and Salviati were the cause of this; wherefore, for the welfare of the State and of Italy, the league should be concluded with France and with the Duke of Ferrara. The King will write to the Regent about this, and the Signory ought not to hold aloof, because, as the King said, "The Emperor on coming into Italy will make fresh demands, and by means of the moneys received from you will retain your territory, for the Emperor keeps faith with no one. I accommodated him with money, and of the promises which he made me not one did he perform; neither does the Pope keep faith with any one. The Emperor's marriage will not supply him with funds; they promised him a dower of a million of ducats, and he received but 400,000, the rest being made payable in three years. From Spain he will get little; in Flanders he will have to defend himself against France."

Replied, that the league had need of his Majesty's protection.

The King rejoined, "The Datary [Gian Matteo Giberti, Bishop of Verona] writes that we have an understanding with the Emperor. This is untrue. I lent him 500,000 crowns, and he would ~~not~~ delay his marriage, but concluded it without even awaiting my reply. I sent to ask him for the money, and he answered that he did not know whether he was my debtor, and that he would send me an ambassador." The King added other words.

London, 13th January. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 540.

1202. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sir Gregory Casal does not urge the stipulation of the league, and the King of England is willing to guarantee the observance of 1526.

the articles of France.* Sir Gregory also showed him a summary of the articles of the peace made [by England?] with France, and the league, contra quoscumque, the Signory being mentioned by all the parties; the Duke of Milan likewise is named. The Imperial ambassadors told the Pope they would join the league within four months. The Lord Albert urges the Pope to send an ambassador to France, even should the King be released; so the Pope said he would send Roberto Acciaiuoli, who is at Florence.

The prothonotary Casal has quitted Rome on his way to Venice, as ambassador from the King of England. He is the bearer of the articles of the peace between France and his King. He is going to Ferrara to urge the Duke to join the league, and will be at Venice in a week.

Rome, 16th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 23rd.

[Italian.]

Jan. 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 595.
596.

1203. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY . . .

On receiving the Signory's letters of the 21st and 22nd November, went to the King. The Cardinal was with him. Communicated everything to them, including the reply given to the Imperial ambassadors, and stated what had been negotiated with the French ambassadors as to the league. His Majesty said the league should be concluded speedily, and a place reserved for himself, although he does not now choose to be mentioned, but he will be its conservator and protector, and will not brook the Emperor's taking Italy, or doing wrong to the Signory. He says that in Spain he has the means of preventing the Emperor from coming into Italy; that the Emperor's marriage will give him but 250,000 ducats, which he is to receive next March, and which he will soon spend. The King further states he will induce Madame the Regent to give two-thirds of the sum required for troops in the war against the Emperor, as she wishes to release her son. He said also, "The Pope will turn and join the league, although he has promised a thousand times to be with the Emperor." He had heard from Spain that on the 26th November the Duchess of Alençon departed on her way back to France, and was followed on the 2nd December by the French ambassador, re infectâ.

He added that, if the Signory distrusted France, he would promise for her; that on the following morning he would speak to the French ambassador; and that he (Orio) was to remain where he was for the night. Next morning the President of Rouen [Jean Brinon], the French ambassador, arrived, and dined with Cardinal Wolsey, as did he (Orio) likewise. The Cardinal told them that as the Pope would declare against the Emperor, the league should be concluded, the Signory defraying one-third of the cost and France two-thirds. They then went all three to the King, who told the French ambassador to write speedily to the Regent to make the league with Italy, saying he would write to his ambassador in Venice, the Prothonotary Casal, to speak to the Signory, and promise in his name.

* Query, the articles of agreement between the Emperor and France.

1526.

London, 17th January. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd February.

[Italian.]

Jan. 19.

1204. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 541.

The Pope has informed Sir Gregory Casal that he is content to make the league, in case the Emperor do not accept the articles, provided the King of England join the league, and be its conservator, and security for France. The Pope showed him how the mandate was to be drawn up. The Datary [Giberti] told him the like, and that he advised the Pope to this effect.

Rome, 19th January. Registered by Sanuto on the 23rd.

[Italian.]

Jan. 25.

1205. PROTHONOTARY CASAL.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 550.^a

Lorenzo di Priuli, knight, and 30 other noblemen were desired by the Signory to meet the ambassador from the King of England, prothonotary Casal. He quitted Rome on the 16th.

[Italian.]

Jan. 25.

1206. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Venetian Ambassador in England.

Lettere
del Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 9.

Glad to hear, by his letters off the 3rd and 4th, of the prudent reply by Cardinal Wolsey to the ambassador of the Duke of Guelders, who had departed well satisfied.

The Right Rev. Prothonotary Casal has arrived at Venice, and this morning entered the presence of the Signory. Gave him a gracious reception. The English ambassador assured them of the regard of the King and Cardinal for the Signory, and of their wish to benefit the Christian religion, Italy, and the Venetian Republic. The Signory replied in suitable terms.

The Spanish troops have shifted their quarters from Milan to the territories of Pavia, Lodi, Novara, and Como; the lansquenets remain in Milan. The Emperor's Italian troops have moved from the territory of Asti to Alexandria and that neighbourhood.

The Imperial agents at Milan have repeatedly urged the city to take the oath of allegiance to the Emperor; but the Milanese have invariably refused, thus showing their intention of freeing themselves from servitude.

The Duke of Milan is still blockaded in the castle. The garrison makes frequent sallies, bringing in provisions. The Duke is in fair health, and hopes for succour and release.

P.S.—Have heard by letters from Lyons, dated the 11th, that Robadange had arrived there with the Signory's decision, which was approved of by the French Government.

[Italian.]

Jan. 26.

1207. PROTHONOTARY CASAL.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 552.

Today the ambassador from England, Prothonotary Casal, arrived here. He comes from Ferrara, having travelled in a barge from 1526.

Francolino to S. Giorgio Maggiore. In the evening the Old Accountants' Office provided his supper, as usual. He has 12 persons with him and expects six more, so his attendants will be 18 in number. This Prothonotary is by birth a Bolognese, but brought up (nutrito) at Rome.

[Italian.]

Jan. 28.

1208. PROTHONOTARY CASAL.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 552.

The ambassador from the King of England, Prothonotary Casal, clad in a rochet and purple mantle, came into the College. He was accompanied by Lorenzo di Priuli, Knight, Andrea Mocenigo, LL.D., and other doctors, members of the Senate, in number about 20. The Doge went to meet him, and seated him beside his own person. He presented the credentials from his King, and uttered a few general phrases, referring himself to the private audience. The Doge gave him good greeting, saying he was welcome, and that the Signory was glad to see any representative from the King of England, and would give him audience when he pleased.

[Italian.]

Jan. 28.

Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
Filza 1.

1209. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR and to the "BAILO" at Constantinople.

For the notification of current events to the Grand Signor, as required by the good peace between the Porte and the Signory, inform them that on the day before yesterday an ambassador from the King of England arrived at Venice. He had been at Rome in a private capacity as prothonotary, and notified to them the league made lately between the King of England and the kingdom of France, through the mediation and intervention of the French King's mother as Regent of the realm, in virtue of the authority received from the King, her son, to facilitate his release.

The prothonotary is come to reside in lieu of the other ambassador from England, who quitted Venice lately.

The Ten and Junta therefore charge the ambassador and Bailo to acquaint the most Serene Grand Signor (Serenissimo Gran Signor), through the Bashaws, with what is aforesaid, declaring the intention of the State to continue perpetually at peace with the Grand Signor.

[Italian.]

Jan. 30.

1210. PROTHONOTARY CASAL.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 559.

The Doge sent Antonio Surian, LL.D., and knight, and Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., sages for the mainland, to S. Giorgio Maggiore for the English ambassador, the Prothonotary Casal, to bring him to the private audience.

On entering the College, he said that his King had sent him hither with the copy of the articles concluded with France, in which the Signory had been nominated by both parties.

This copy he left for the Signory's inspection, as transcribed hereunder.

[Italian.]

1526.

Jan. 30.

1211. ENGLAND and FRANCE.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 559.

Treaty of peace between England and France, dated Richmond, 17th December 1525-6 (as in Rymer, vol. xiv. p. 48, and Dumont, vol. iv., pt. I., p. 436).

[Latin.]

Jan. 30.

1212. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 672.

Madame the Regent has written from Lyons in date of the 16th (January) to her ambassadors in England [Brinon and Passano], that the Signory is willing to make the league with France; the King of England to be a party. A French ambassador, by name Captain Guillaume Guiles (sic), is coming to England.

There are 12 French vessels in the Thames, which have taken some Spanish ships and scuts (scuti) bound from Flanders; so that navigation in these seas is no longer safe, as the French say they are at liberty to attack their enemies wherever they find them; and no provision is being made in England.

Madame Margaret's ambassador has waited on Cardinal Wolsey to enquire what he (Orio) was negotiating. Wolsey replied that his business related to the affairs of the Turk; so the Flemish ambassador was satisfied.

The Papal Nuncio* is the creature of the Archbishop of Capua, an Imperialist. He acts as a spy, as intimated by Sir Gregory Casal from Rome to Cardinal Wolsey, who therefore treats him with reserve; and he (Orio) will do the like.

London, 30th January. Registered by Sanuto, 26th February.

[Italian.]

Feb. 1.

1213. IMPORTANT NEWS from ENGLAND.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 583.

On this morning the College gave audience to no one; but the letters were read, the oath of secrecy being administered to everybody, as they are in fact important, most especially those from England.

[Italian.]

Feb. 5.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 9.1214. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Letters from Lyons, dated the 29th ult., inform them that Mons. de Montmorency had arrived there with the complete ratification of the agreement between the Emperor and the most Christian King. To acquaint the King and Cardinal with this intelligence.

The King will not fail, with the Cardinal, to discuss the matter, and tell him (Orio) what should be done, which he is to communicate with all speed. Are convinced that with the Regent, as also with his most Christian Majesty, when established in his kingdom, the King and Cardinal will use every good office to prevent disturbance in Italy. The Signory is most firmly bent on the closest union with his Majesty, so as to have him for protector of the State; which he (Orio) is to affirm solemnly.

* Melchior Laugus. He was recalled by the Pope in February, and replaced by Uberto di Gambara.

1526.

The Prothonotary Casal has been to the Signory, and repeated the assurance of the King's and Cardinal's goodwill towards the State. They reciprocated, and gave assurance of their observance towards the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

Feb. 6.

1215. CASAL IN VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 603.

On the morning of the 6th, the English ambassador [Prothonotary Casal] had audience of the College. He is very incapable, and inexperienced in statesmanship (qual è molto inepto e non pratico di stato).

[Italian.]

Feb. 8.

Mantuan
Archives.

1216. KING HENRY VIII. to FREDERICK [GONZAGA], MARQUIS of MANTUA.

Returns thanks for his loving letter, and for the present of two (so called) peregrine falcons, one of which died on the way, but the King is no less gratified than if it had arrived alive. Has detained the falconers who brought them, by reason of their skill in falconry, that the birds may be more carefully tended. Requests the Marquis to consent to his admitting these persons into his household.

Greenwich, 8th February 1526.

(Signed) Henricus Rex.

(Countersigned) Petrus Vannes.

[Original, Latin.]

Feb. 8.

1217. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

The Portuguese took the ship "Victory"* to Malacca at the time of its capture. Part of the crew were killed, others left at a desert place, and all means taken so that nothing should ever be known of them; but one man, 80 years old, contrived to get to Portugal in a ship manned by Portuguese.

He immediately wrote the whole account of the ship, and his narrative came to the knowledge of the King of Portugal, who set him free. This man has lately arrived in Spain and reported as above.

The Legate says he is commissioned by the Pope to do his utmost that the Milanese be retained by the present Duke [Francesco Sforza], and the Pope will not allow the duchy to be given to the Duke of Bourbon. Should the Legate be told that at the time of the Duke of Milan's illness the Pope assented to the nomination of Bourbon, he is to reply that so far as the Pope individually is concerned he may have consented, but that the King of England objects, and the Pope, being allied (collegata) with him, cannot dissent from his views. Should the Legate find the Emperor obstinate, and that the refusal would render him the enemy of Italy, the Pope, to avoid bringing destruction on himself, desires the Legate to consent. Friar Nicholas [Schomberg] has also written in the Pope's name to the Legate, authorizing the consent in the last resort, but the Legate, without further instructions from Rome, will not retract what he has said.

* See before, date 24th September 1522; also Cicogna, p. 186.

• 1526.

Has also been told that the Pope apologises not only to the King of England but also to the Signory.

Toledo, 8th February 1526.

[Italian.]

Feb. 10.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 672.

1218. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The merchants have received news from Flanders of the agreement made between the Emperor and the most Christian King. Went to the Cardinal, who does not believe it, and, together with the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Duke of Norfolk, said there were no letters from Madame Margaret; and yet Zuam Alemanno writes from Lyons that this agreement was concluded on the 14th. It seems strange to the Cardinal not to have advices from his ambassadors in Spain, so he does not believe the news. He says it would be well to conclude the Italian league with France; that his King does not choose to be mentioned as principal, though he will be its conservator and promise for France; and subsequently it will be seen what his Majesty will do. Cardinal Wolsey has written to the Prothonotary Casal, his ambassador at Venice. The Captain de Guiles (sic) has arrived from Lyons; he went to the Cardinal, who is firm in saying that he will promise, &c.

It is reported from Boulogne that the most Christian King and the Duke of Bourbon have taken flight for France. The Cardinal desired him (Orion) to assure the Signory that the King of France (quel Re) will not brook the aggrandizement of the Emperor so that he gain glory. Death of the Queen of Denmark, the Emperor's sister; she resided in Brabant, having been expelled from Denmark with the King her husband. Letters received from Mons. Du Prat, at Lyons, about the agreement, which Cardinal Wolsey does not credit, because he has letters stating that since the 19th of December none have been received from Spain by the Regent. The King will not join the league at the commencement, but place must be reserved for him.

London, 10th February. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 12.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 33.

1219. The SAME to the SAME.

Letters having arrived from Lyons, dated the 29th January, sent to the French ambassador [Brinon], who told him that the letters announced the conclusion of the agreement, and the arrival of Montmorency at Lyons from Spain; and Giovanni Gioachino [di Passano] was about to return to England with the articles of agreement.

Went to Cardinal Wolsey, who does not believe that the King of France will observe the articles, and said the Signory need not be alarmed on this account, as the King and he (the Cardinal) would be the protectors and defenders of the Signory and State of Venice, even at the cost of treasure, and of their own lives; and that on the French King's arrival in France, the Signory must attend to forming the Italian league with his Majesty.

1526.

Whilst talking thus together, the French ambassador came by chance to the Cardinal, who told him that the most Christian King was bound to wish well to the Signory for having done all that was possible to obtain his release, and that England has the State of Venice under her protection and will not permit any wrong to be done the Signory.

The French ambassador replied that the Cardinal's words would be commands for his King, who regarded the King of England as his father, and moreover loved the Signory; and that he would write the whole to his Majesty.

Acquainted Cardinal Wolsey with the contents of the Signory's letters about the books of the late Nicene Cardinal [Bessarione, Archbishop of Nicæa]. Cardinal Wolsey returned many thanks, saying it was impossible to do him a greater favour, and that he would give a list of the books.

London, 12th February. Registered by Sanuto, 6th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 19.

1220. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 49.

Yesterday, according to an appointment made with Cardinal Wolsey, went to the King at Greenwich, where his Right Rev. Lordship also was. Communicated to him the letter of the 10th January; whereupon the Cardinal besought the King to act, &c. His Majesty spoke most kindly of the Signory, saying he never had failed, and never would fail. Discussing this agreement between the Emperor and the King of France, he said that from the letters of his ambassadors in Spain he knew of nothing but what related to England, and that the other articles would be communicated to his Majesty by the Imperial ambassador in London. The King then said he would write to the King of France, and send an ambassador to urge him to have at heart the welfare of Italy, especially the State of Venice; adding, "Write to the Signory not to be apprehensive; they will suffer no harm on this account."

In the midst of this conversation the Spanish ambassador [Pena-losa?] arrived and announced the aforesaid agreement, merely mentioning the two particulars ut supra. Thereupon his Majesty told him that he had received letters from the King of France, from whom the truth comes, purporting that he is his very dear brother, with whom he has discussed all his affairs, and he acquaints him with the summary of all the articles, in accordance with the information transmitted by the English ambassadors [in Spain and France?]. Thereby the King of France is to restore Burgundy to the Emperor, with the exception of three of its best towns, viz., Auxerre, Beaune, and Châlons, which are retained by his most Christian Majesty as the dower of the Emperor's sister. The King then said, "He will not observe the articles: and first of all, with regard to ceding Burgundy, he cannot do so without the consent of the parliaments; and so also he is prevented from renouncing the superiority (superiorità) of Flanders. In the next place, our assent is needed for the renunciation of the dominion of Tournai ; and the interests of his son, the Dauphin, are concerned in the cession of the duchy of Milan : so that he will find many reasons for not keeping his promises. In conclusion, write to the Signory that we will not fail doing everything for them, and that they need fear nothing, as the Emperor will not come into Italy this year, because he has no money ; and what he will now get for the dower will be spent by him in celebration of his marriage, and Flanders cannot give him any money. The Signory would do well to delay the agreement with the Emperor."

1526.

London, 19th February.

"An excellent letter." Registered by Sanuto, 12th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 23.

1221. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xl. p. 668.

The Pope is sending D. Paolo Vitorio to France, and the Prothonotary Gambara to England ; and an envoy from the Emperor is expected at Rome.

Rome, 21st and 23rd February. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Feb. 25.

1222. ENGLISH AMBASSADOR in VENICE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 667.

On Sunday the 25th, in the morning, the English ambassador, Prothonotary Casal, came into the College. He said he had letters from Rome from his brother [Sir Gregory Casal], his King's ambassador, enclosing a summary of the articles of agreement between the Emperor and the most Christian King. On comparing them with those received from Rome by the Signory, they were found to be identical.

[Italian.]

Feb. 25.

1223. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 85.

Nothing further heard about the articles of agreement or the release of the most Christian King.

Yesterday Cardinal Wolsey, in pontifical array, sang mass at St. Paul's in great state, and published the peace made between the Emperor and the most Christian King. In the evening there were entertainments and bonfires at the houses of the ambassadors, including his own, and also in some houses of French residents in London.

The English and Flemings are dissatisfied with this peace, saying the King [of France] will not observe the articles. Cardinal Wolsey is anxious to hear of the King's release, and, when acquainted with his arrival, will send an ambassador to exhort him to league with Italy and his Majesty.

London, 25th February. Registered by Sanuto, 26th March.

[Italian.]

Feb. 28.

1224. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 85.

Letters having arrived from Rome and France, went to Cardinal Wolsey, who said he heard from Rome that the Pope had not 1526.

concluded the agreement with the Emperor, and is dissatisfied with him for having made terms without his knowledge; nor is he (the Pope) even mentioned in it. The King [of England] wrote to the Regent mother to conclude the league with Italy. Cardinal Wolsey therefore says the King will be its conservator and protector. The Cardinal then added, "The Pope would fain form a secret understanding with our King, and gives him notice of the Turkish preparations against Hungary, saying he has held consistories, and will give assistance so far as his forces and those of the Cardinals admit. His Holiness wishes the King to aid him with money, and has sent him the letters received from his (the Pope's) ambassador in Hungary, Baron ———."

The Cardinal said he wrote to the Pope in reply, that his King and himself would not fail to give Hungary all possible assistance.

By the letters from France, the Regent had arrived at Blois, and taken the King's two sons as hostages to Bayonne; and it seems that the Emperor insists on detaining the Dauphin until the cession of Burgundy.

Cardinal Wolsey has not yet received the particulars of the articles, but the English ambassadors in France write that Giovanni Gioachino, who is returning as ambassador to England, was to bring them, and would depart for this purpose in two days.

The Cardinal said he was of opinion the most Christian King would not observe the articles, and desired him (Orio) to write to the Signory to be under no apprehension, and that the French Parliaments would not comply with the agreement; so the Cardinal thinks the affairs with the Emperor will be compromised for a sum of money.

The Cardinal also told him (Orio) that the Signory should by no means make an agreement with the Emperor, but procrastinate, and send ambassadors to France to the King; and he believes that the Emperor will humbly come to terms (vegnira molto humile).

London, last day of February. Registered by Sanuto, 26th March.

[Italian.]

March 1.

1225. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 34.

The Pope told him that the King of England was sending four ships into Provence to join the French fleet.

Rome, 1st March. Registered by Sanuto, 6th March.

[Italian.]

March 2.

1226. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

The Regent has acquainted them with the conclusion of the peace. Now their ambassador at the Papal Court writes that the Pope has sent D. Paulo Vettori to France, to attend the most Christian King after his release. Mindful of Cardinal Wolsey's opinion that the Signory should have an envoy in France, have sent the secretary Andrea Rosso to the most Christian King, to congratulate him and ascertain his disposition with regard to the affair of Italy. Will subsequently elect an ambassador, but thought fit first to send the secretary.

1526.

The Imperial ambassadors resident at Venice have presented letters from the Emperor, dated Toledo the 26th January, notifying the conclusion of the peace and confederacy with the most Christian King, and the marriage of the Queen, the Emperor's sister, with his most Christian Majesty. The ambassadors added that they were ordered to continue the negotiation for the agreement with the Signory. On the morrow they declared they had received the Emperor's ultimatum. First, touching the Duke of Milan, his Imperial Majesty will ascertain whether the Duke is guilty; if not, he is to remain; otherwise the Milanese is to be given to the Duke of Bourbon.

Secondly, satisfaction to be given to the Archduke Ferdinand according to the agreement; restitution to be made by both parties.

Thirdly, the Signory to restore to all emigrants* their entire property.

Fourthly, though satisfied with the clause binding the Signory to give troops, the Emperor requires an additional clause to the effect that no delay do take place, and that the Signory do pay to the Emperor 200,000 ducats.

The Signory answered in general terms, taking time to reply. To communicate the whole to the King and Cardinal, adding that the State proceeds with reserve.

The Great Turk has lately taken important steps. He has imposed a tax of 15 "aspres" per head on all his subjects, both citizens and peasants. He has sent commands to the "Beglarbei," "Sanzachi," "Tunazati," and all others in receipt of pay, to be ready at the next command to take to horse (cavalcar, march?) under pain of capital punishment; and in Greece he has given orders for the collection of supplies of victuals, corn, and straw. All the galley crews are to be enrolled, and in readiness for service. In the arsenal and in all other places many more hands are employed than usual, and besides repairing the old galleys, he has given orders for the construction of 50 new "bastard-galleys," 50 light galleys, and 20 large "palandrie" for the conveyance of horses. He is having 2,000 falconets made, besides basilisks, having caused 20,000 muskets to be made last year, although he had a large supply of old ones. In short, from these great military preparations it is inferred that the Great Turk will make an attack by land and sea.

By subsequent letters, understand the Great Turk has increased the tax from 15 "aspres" per head to 20, and given orders that 100 galleys at least, including light and "bastard," are to be in readiness, completely found, by the moon of this present month of March.

To communicate the whole to the King and Cardinal as usual.

[Italian.]

* In the original, the word which I have translated "emigrants" is "forastieri," i.e. Venetian subjects living abroad, whose estates had been confiscated for their adherence to the Imperialists during the war of the League of Cambray.

1526.

March 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 85.1227. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Received from them the articles of the agreement, with which he had previously become acquainted in England, and which were printed in Flanders, in England, and France. This publication in print has been taken amiss, but the secret articles cannot be ascertained.

Having also received the Signory's letters of the 5th and 21st February, went on the 2nd March to Cardinal Wolsey at Hampton Court, and imparted the news to him, and also the advices from Lombardy.

The Cardinal said he had received letters from the King's ambassador at Venice, Prothonotary Casal, mentioning the honours paid him, the wisdom of the Doge, and the good greeting given him.

The Cardinal is anxious for the arrival of Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, who will bring the articles of the agreement, and on the arrival of the most Christian King in France, the King and Cardinal will send their ambassadors, as already stated.

Said he would go and communicate his news to the King. The Cardinal dissuaded him, saying that he purposed going to his Majesty on the morrow, and would perform this office,

London, 3rd March 1526. Registered by Sanuto, 26th March, [Italian.]

March 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 16.1228. PROTHONOTARY CASAL.

Early on the morning of the 5th, letters arrived per post.

The English ambassador came into the College. He spoke about current events, and said that the Signory ought to urge his King to assist Italy, instead of Italy being urged by his Majesty [to assist herself]; so they must not fail writing to him frequently, as his King does everything for the benefit of Italy and conservation of this most illustrious State.

[Italian.]

March 7.

Lettere
del Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.1229. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Have received his letters of the 12th ult.

Are of opinion that his most Christian Majesty on arriving in France will not swerve from the wise counsel of the King and Cardinal, and therefore request them to do their utmost for the benefit of Italy. To expatiate hereon, and on the trust reposed by the State in the King and Cardinal. Consider his Majesty their protector.

The ambassador Sanches (the Rev. Caracciolo being indisposed) has appeared before the College. Read to him their reply. Sanches, having consulted with Caracciolo, returned and expressed dissatisfaction at the reply, saying they wished for a declaration of the State's intention, especially about the first clause with reference to the Duke of Milan, and touching the last with respect to the money demanded; earnestly requesting an answer. Gave it in more express terms, as by the enclosed copy, which he is to communicate to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

1526.

March 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 85.1230. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

In England they have not yet received any news of the arrival of the most Christian King in France. The Signory need fear nothing, for, as Cardinal Wolsey has said, the King of England takes the State of Venice under his protection.

London, 11th March. Registered by Sanuto, 26th March.

[Italian.]

March 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 116.1231. The SAME to the SAME.

Told by Cardinal Wolsey he had received letters from Rome and Spain. The former purported that the Pope had sent an envoy to the most Christian King not to observe the articles, and that he would absolve him from the oath taken; and his Holiness exhorts the King of England to do the like. The letters from Spain state that Madame the Regent, whilst travelling towards Bayonne, was seized with a fit of the gout. She had not yet decided whether she would give as hostages the King's two sons, or the 12 personages of France. The most Christian King had been indisposed on his journey. The Cardinal was also informed that the French ambassador, Giovanni Gioachino, would come to England with the articles, after having taken the instructions of the most Christian King. The Cardinal added that on the arrival of the King of France, the King of England would send an ambassador to persuade him to come to terms with Italy and not adhere to the agreement made with the Emperor. The King of England will not consent to the Emperor's aggrandizement. And in conclusion the Cardinal said, "Write to the Signory to send ambassadors to the most Christian King for the above purpose, and to rest assured that my King will not allow any injury to be done the State."

London, 17th March. Registered by Sanuto, 9th April.

[Italian.]

March 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 63.1232. ENGLISH AMBASSADOR IN VENICE.

Today the English ambassador, Prothonotary Casal, by birth a Bolognese, came into the hall of the Grand Council, and remained there while several appointments were conferred by ballot. He was attended by the Sages for the orders, who accompanied him home to his dwelling at S. Georgio Maggiore.

[Italian.]

March 20.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.1233. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Approve what the King said, that on the most Christian King's arrival in France, he will ensure his having a good understanding with England and the Signory. He will perceive by their replies to the Imperial ambassadors, that they have adhered to the suggestions of the King and Cardinal, as always in this and every other matter, his Majesty being the protector of the State.

Is to be assiduous in acquainting them with the conversations and opinions of the King and Cardinal.

1526.

Enclose summaries of important news from Constantinople, for communication to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

March 27.

1234. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 92, 93.

On the arrival of the most Christian King in France, the King of England will send ambassadors to him.

Rome, 27th March. Registered by Sanuto, 31st March.

[Italian.]

March 28.

1235. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 122.

The French ambassador, the President of Rouen [Jean Brinon], received news of the arrival of the most Christian King at Bayonne on the 17th. Rode immediately to Greenwich to the King. Cardinal Wolsey was there, and also the French ambassadors [Brinon and "the Captain de Guiles"?], who had dined with his Right Reverend Lordship. Heard this news from them, and the good will of his most Christian Majesty; and that the King of England had immediately despatched an ambassador, by name . . . , [Sir Thomas Cheyne],* to congratulate him.

Heard from Cardinal Wolsey that the Pope had written to notify the mission of an envoy to the most Christian King, to deter him from ratifying the articles.

They then went to the King, who acquainted them with the arrival of the most Christian King, and showed them a letter in French with his signature, which he desired his (Orio's) secretary, Gasparo Spinelli, to read. Therein the King styles him brother more than brother, saying he is under immortal obligation to him, he having been the cause of his release; and that he will write further to him subsequently. His Majesty continued that he had sent his ambassador [Sir Thomas Cheyne], who, together with Dr. Tayler, also ambassador in France, will urge the most Christian King to league with Italy, and not to observe the articles stipulated with the Emperor, nor to tolerate the latter's aggrandizement. The King also wishes the Signory to send ambassadors to France to prevent the ratification of the articles; and he has written to the Pope to absolve his most Christian Majesty from the oath, according to the intention announced by him (the Pope) to the King of England, and for the benefit of Italy to join the league, to which he (the King of England) will become a party. The King also said that on the arrival of Giovanni Gioachino, he should know the personal intention of the most Christian King, who has written to him that he will learn things which cannot be communicated except by word of mouth. His Majesty [of England?] declares that all he does is for the benefit of Italy, and especially of the Signory.

London, 24th and 28th March. Registered by Sanuto, 10th April.

[Italian.]

* See "State Papers," Vol. VI. p. 528.

1526.

April 2.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 141,
142.

1236. ANDREA ROSSO, Venetian Secretary in France, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Today had audience of the King in Council. His Majesty said he was content to stipulate the league to assist Italy, provided the Pope, the Signory, and other powers do not fail [doing the like?]. His Majesty will have great regard for the Signory, towards whom the Emperor bears ill will, for when the agreement with Spain was being treated, the Emperor never would consent to the inclusion of Venice (notwithstanding the King's utmost efforts), saying he had other accounts to settle with the Republic; so the King made the convention as he best might, without naming the Signory. The Emperor with his own lips told him that he was perfectly resolved upon coming into Italy for his coronation, but lacked funds for the purpose. The King is therefore content to make the league with Italy, but with fewer articles than were stipulated with Madame the Regent, as he is now at liberty, and regardless of his sons' remaining three or four years in Spain, because he knows they will be well treated, and, being lads, will learn the language and form friendships, which one day or other may be of use to them. The King then said he would make the Switzers attack the Milanese; send 500 spears into Piedmont, and troops towards Fonterabia; and cause the King of England, who would join the league, to send forces through France (di qua), to the frontiers of Narbonne and Bayonne.

Mont de Marsan, 2nd April. Registered by Sanuto, 18th April.

* [Italian.]

April 3. 1237. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries, The English ambassador here at the Court, by name Dr. Tayler, v. xli. pp. 142, has persuaded the King not to ratify the clauses.
143.

3rd April. Registered by Sanuto, 18th April.

* [Italian.]

April 3.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 168.

1238. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On receipt of the Signory's letters dated 2nd March, announcing the reply given to the Imperial ambassadors, and the mission of Secretary Rosso to the most Christian King, together with the summary of the articles, went to Cardinal Wolsey, acquainted him with the whole, and requested him to desire the English ambassadors in France to communicate all events to Rosso, who had been charged to do the like by them. The Cardinal replied he had already done so, but would repeat the order, and that the Doctor [Tayler] wrote to him that the most Christian King had not ratified the articles. He commended the answer given to the Imperialists, and said nothing about the summary of the articles; but solely that he (the Emperor?) might possibly go to Rome, or cross over to Sicily with his forces, instead of marching into Hungary.

The Cardinal then said the Pope had written about the Turkish preparations, wishing his Majesty to contribute a certain sum of money for transmission into Hungary for its defence. He was expecting Dom. Giovanni Gioachino from France, who will be the bearer of the most Christian King's intention and will.

London, 3rd April. Registered by Sanuto, 26th April.

[Italian.]

1526.

April 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 104.1239. ENGLISH AMBASSADOR in VENICE.

Motion made in the Senate by the councillors, chiefs of the ~~Forty~~, and sages of the council, for the English ambassador to import, duty free, five kilderkins (anfore) of wine.

Ayes, 191. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

April 4.

Senato Terra,
v. xxiv. p. 78,
tergo.1240. FRENCH AMBASSADOR in VENICE.

The French ambassador, the Bishop of Bayeux, having imported 24 kilderkins, two buckets (bigonci), and three quarts of wine, for his own use and that of his household,— Put to the ballot, that the duty on the wine be charged to the Signory.

Also the duty on five kilderkins imported by the reverend ambassador of the King of England.

Ayes, 191. Noes, 7. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

April 9.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.1241. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The Imperialists are much perplexed about the duchy of Milan. They would fain have Italy to guarantee them against France, in whom they do not trust; and wait to see what the King of France will do. The Emperor's advisers are few, and their opinions conflicting.

Yesterday an express was sent to Germany about the Lutheran affairs, which are raging more than ever. Some say the Princes of Germany will renounce the Pope; but the Emperor has written to them not to do so. This may be a feint to intimidate the Pope and make him consent to the Emperor's wishes. The Infant [the Archduke Ferdinand] urges the Emperor strongly to go to Italy to obtain the duchy of Milan for him, and hopes after the Emperor's coronation to be elected King of the Romans. Were the Emperor to be crowned, the Electors would never elect the Archduke Ferdinand because they deem him too dangerous a man.

Seville, 9th April 1526.

[Italian.]

April 10.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.1242. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

In pursuance of the Cardinal's advice, have elected two ambassadors to congratulate the most Christian King.

One of these will reside with his Majesty, and correspond with him (Orio), so that he may communicate such intelligence as expedient for the general good to the King and Cardinal.

In pursuance of the custom of the State, have elected two ambassadors, who are to go to the Emperor to congratulate his Majesty and his most Serene Consort on their marriage; after which, one is to return, and the other to go to the King of Portugal, to congratulate him. To communicate this to the King and Cardinal.

Add their satisfaction at his Majesty's having sent an ambassador to the most Christian King. Anxiously await what Giovanni 1526.

Gioachino may report concerning the disposition of his most Christian Majesty. The more assiduous he (Orio) is to keep the King and Cardinal well pleased, the better will he comply with the desire of the State.

Have heard from Milan that the Imperialists continue besieging the castle as usual, and that the garrison lack provisions, but are in hope of succour, the delay of which would be very perilous.

[Italian.]

April 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli.
pp. 204, 205.

1243. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Arrived here from Mont de Marsan with the Papal Nuncio Dom. Chiapino on the 6th. Found here the ambassadors from the Emperor, from England, from the King of Portugal, and from the Duke of Savoy. The King came by the Garonne, in a handsomely decorated fuste (fusta). On disembarking he entered the city in state, under a canopy of cloth of gold, between the Cardinals of Lorraine and Vendôme. The Pope's ambassador, Dom. Chiapino, walked with the Grand Master of Rhodes, the Emperor's with the Duke of Vendôme, the English ambassador with Saint Pol, the Portuguese ambassador with Mons. de la Guiche (Gisa). The Portuguese put himself forward to precede the Englishman. He (Rosso) was with Mons. de Lautrec, and the Savoyard did not make his appearance. The English ambassador,* perceiving that the Portuguese ambassador proceeded to take precedence of him, complained loudly (brontolava assai), saying, "That is not his place." So the King, on hearing this, sent to tell the Portuguese to take his own place, and he not choosing so to do, the King sent him a second message, to go home and retire (li mandò a dir l'andasse a casa e si levasse). The Portuguese said he would do so, but continued in the procession, saying it was going straight the whole way to his house. So the King lost patience (si stancò), and sent the archers to compel him to give way; and thus he departed. On entering the cathedral the Te Deum was sung, and the King swore to observe the privileges of the city, which was hung with tapestry, &c. The King was then accompanied to his dwelling. Was told his Majesty chose him to attend the ceremony that everybody might know how well the King was disposed towards the Signory, and that he had caused the Savoyard ambassador to absent himself an account of the controversy about precedence.

Lautrec told him that he hoped the mandates would come soon, and that the King was sending presents to the Queen [Eleanor of Austria], to keep the marriage negotiation on foot until the mandates arrived.

Bordeaux, 10th April. Registered by Sanuto, 1st May.

[Italian.]

* Dr. Tayler. Sir Thomas Cheyne, who succeeded Tayler, arrived at Bordeaux on the 6th April, and delivered his credentials on the 9th April, the day of the King's entry; but could not have had audience until after the ceremony of the procession. (See State Papers vol. vi., p. 531 note.)

1526.

April 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 206.1244. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The envoy from England [Cheney] came to offer congratulations on the King's release, and requested him not to ratify the articles stipulated with the Emperor.

Bordeaux, 11th April. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd May.
[Italian.]

April 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 238,
239.1245. DOM. CHIAPINO, Papal Envoy in France, to the MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

Invited by the King to attend his entry into Bordeaux. On disembarking his Majesty mounted a mule, and placed himself under the canopy,* between the two cardinals, Bourbon on the right and Lorraine on the left. By the side of Lorraine was the Grand Master of Rhodes; he (Chiapino) came next, with Mons. de Vendôme; then the Imperial ambassador with Saint Pol, followed by the English ambassador with Mons. de Glissa [Guiche?]; and last of all the Secretary of the Venetian Signory with Mons. de Lautrec. The ambassador from Portugal was also there, who, wishing to precede the English ambassador, the master of the ceremonies told him repeatedly to go to his lodging or else to give place to the Englishman. As would he do neither one thing nor the other, the King sent the Lord Steward, Mons. de Montmorency, who, being unable to convince the Portuguese by fair words, told him plainly to go his way (che se ne andasse al suo viaggio), as the most Christian King did not choose to offer such an affront to the King of England for the sake of honouring Portugal. To this he replied that he would go his way, which was that they were taking; and he continued advancing on a line with the Imperial ambassador, so that the Lord Steward was compelled rudely with a push (con suo urto da male), and by force of four halberdiers, to thrust him out of the procession. At this, by his countenance, the Imperial ambassador evinced very great displeasure, though he said nothing. It seemed very strange to everybody, even supposing the Portuguese to have been in the right, that he should not have departed immediately when desired to do so in the King's name.

Bordeaux, 12th April. Registered by Sanuto, 11th May.

[Italian.]

April 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 139.1246. The BAILIFF and CAPTAIN of CREMA to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

A gentleman of Crema last night met a servant of Alvise Triulzio on his way from France to his master at Brescia.

The servant told the gentleman that on the arrival of the most Christian King in France, Madame the Regent presented him with two millions of gold, and counselled him not to observe any of the promises which he had made to the Spaniards. It was also said that the most Christian King was increasing his fleet (armata); and at Lyons, and throughout that part of France which the servant traversed, it was said publicly that the King of England had sent to offer his forces to the most Christian King against the Emperor.

* In the original, "smontato sua Maestà di dave, montò sopra una mula, et erano sotto baldachino in mezzo delli due Cardinali," etc.

1526.

Crema, 15th April. Registered by Sanuto, 17th April.

[Italian.]

April 16.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 8,
tergo.

1247. The DOGE and SENATE to the VENETIAN AMBASSADORS in ROME.

As the most Christian King suggests the transmission of a power (syndicato) to England, the Signory approves of the measure.

The ambassadors are to impart this to the Pope.

Ayes, 179. Noes, 17. Neutrals, 7.

[Italian.]

April 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 135.

1248. MOTION made in the SENATE.

That a letter be written to the Signory's ambassador in England, with a modified copy of the letter from France, desiring the ambassador to request the King to be the protector of the league; announcing also that the Signory had written to Rome.

The motion was carried unanimously.

[Italian.]

April 17.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 60,
tergo.

1249. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Heard from their secretary Andrea Rosso, resident with the most Christian King, that the King is inclined to conclude the league with the potentates of Italy, and desires that the King of England do join it, and be its protector and conservator. Informed also by their secretary aforesaid that the most Christian King had written to the King and Cardinal. To make this announcement in the name of the State. As the Pope is to be one of the chief parties to the league, wrote to Rome in conformity with the suggestions of the King and Cardinal, and await a reply, that they may know how to regulate their conduct with regard to sending the mandate to him (Orio) to conclude in England, according to the request made to the Venetian secretary by the most Christian King. To return thanks to the King and Cardinal for their good offices with the most Christian King in inducing him to league with the potentates of Italy; for, as they well know, he will be stimulated by the conviction that the King of England will co-operate for the attainment of so salutary a result. Know what great authority and esteem the powerful crown of England has always enjoyed both with the most Christian King and with the Pope and the rest of Italy. It is important to use despatch, seeing that the castles of Milan and Cremona are ill provisioned, so that unless speedily succoured the Duke cannot long hold out. To beseech the King and Cardinal speedily to complete so good and necessary a purpose. To give advices to the secretary Rosso, with whom he is to correspond, for the furtherance of the present undertaking.

Ayes, 184. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian.]

1526.

April 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli.
pp. 206, 207.

1250. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King of England is expected to join the league. Dom. Giovanni Gioachino is gone to him, and will return with the King's decision. The English ambassador here says that his King will not declare himself against the Emperor for the present, but will render pecuniary assistance.

Cognac, 17th April. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd May.

[Italian.]

April 18.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 12.

1251. The DOGE and SENATE to ANDREA ROSSO, Venetian Secretary in France.

Pleased to hear it has been settled to send D. Giovanni Gioachino to England with offers to the King, who, as stated by him several times to the Venetian ambassador at his Court, cannot be better inclined than he is, to join the league for the benefit of Italy. The King and Cardinal urge the Signory to effect it.

Although they have written many letters to the said ambassador announcing their intention to join the league, and their wish for the King to be a party to it, have not failed now to write again, as suggested by his most Christian Majesty, alleging the account in which the power of England is held universally; wherefore the King's adhesion to the league will confirm the Pope's intention of doing what he can—and ought to do—for the benefit of Italy, as they believe to be his wish, and thereby establish a similar determination on the part of all the other Italian powers, and of the Switzers. Commend him much for having written to the ambassador in England giving him notice of what happens; he is to continue doing so, they having desired Orio to do the like by him.

[Italian.]

April 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 173.

1252. CARLO CONTARINI to the STATE.

All the Swiss cantons have pronounced against Luther, except Zurich, which requires that its vicar, by name Zuinglius, who has written and printed many things in favour of Luther, should first of all be confuted; and therefore a council has been convoked at Basle, which will be attended by many noblemen, and take place on the 15th of next month.

Tubingen, 19th April. Registered by Sanuto, 28th April.

[Italian.]

April 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 259.

1253. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Yesterday afternoon went to King Francis, who drew him aside to a window, and swore on the word of a gentleman that he will make the league with the Pope and the Signory, and also comprise the King of England, not so much for his Majesty's own advantage as for the liberty of Italy. The King said that, in order to make the King of England join the league, he has sent to promise him the money due to his English Majesty from the Emperor.

Bordeaux, 21st April. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

1526.

April 22.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 226.1254. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Having received three letters from the Signory, went to Cardinal Wolsey, and spoke to him about joining the league. His Lordship assured him of his King's goodwill towards the preservation of Italy, and the weakening of the Emperor's supremacy. He then said that Dom. Giovanni Gioachino had arrived from France, with the confirmation of the articles of the peace between his most Christian Majesty and the King of England, as approved by all the four estates of France (li 4 stadi dilla Franza).

This matter had been discussed by them; but nothing was said as yet about current events, Giovanni Gioachino having merely told them that the most Christian King was in the right path, and would not observe the articles [of the agreement made with the Emperor].

Then imparted the news of the Turk to the Cardinal, who said it was very important, and that Sultan Solymán would take Hungary, as it did not seem that any provision was made to resist him, which was a bad thing for Christendom. In conclusion, the Cardinal said that on the morrow he should go to the King at Greenwich. Will proceed there himself the day after, as on the preceding day his Majesty will be occupied in giving audience to the French ambassadors.

The Papal Nuncio, the Prothonotary di Gambara, has arrived in London to exhort the King to join the league. Gambara has been with him (Orio), and said he would communicate all that passed.

London, 22nd April. Registered by Sanuto, 7th May.

[Italian.]

April 24.

Mantuan
Archives.1255. KING HENRY VIII. to FREDERICK [GONZAGA], MARQUIS OF MANTUA.

Is aware of the Marquis's wish to render him service from his letters, and from many other indications of goodwill.

To mark his (the King's) sense of this affection, salutes him (the Marquis) through the present letter, and by means of his well-beloved attendant Tarabin, a Modenese warder,* who is going to Italy for his own affairs, and those of the King himself.

Tarabin is charged to acquaint the Marquis with the King's goodwill by word of mouth, and to present him with two hobbies (gradarios equos), and some mastiffs and hounds (molossos venaticosque canes).

The King considers these gifts very small, but trusts the Marquis will accept them as a testimony of sincere affection.

Should there be anything which the Marquis would wish to receive from England, he is to let the King know, through Tarabin, and he (the King) will have the pleasure of contenting him immediately.

Waltham, 24th April 1526.

Signed: Henricus Rex.

Countersigned: Petrus Vannes.

[Original, Latin.]

* "Castellunum Mutinen'." By Mr. Brewer's Calendar, 14 April 1515, it appears that Tarabin was then a messenger employed by the deputy of Calais.

1526.

April 25.
 'Deliberazioni
 Senato Secreta,
 v. li. p. 16,
 tergo.

1256. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

By their last of the 16th, sent him a copy of letters dated 24th and 28th ultimo, received from their secretary Rosso, resident with the most Christian King. He will thereby have fully understood the firm resolve of his Majesty to conclude a league with the potentates of Italy, for the maintenance of her liberty, and his great wish that the King of England should join the league, and be its protector and conservator. Suppose he will have heard the whole from the King and Cardinal and from the secretary Rosso. Also informed him that after the perusal of Rosso's letters they sent an express to their ambassador at Rome, desiring him (the Pope having to join the league as its chief), to urge his Holiness to draw up the articles and transmit them immediately to his agent in France, so as to effect so desirable a conclusion. Yesterday received letters from the ambassador, dated the 22nd, enclosing the articles, of which they forwarded a copy to the secretary in France for the prevention of any delay.

In their last letter they informed him that on receipt of the clauses from Rome they would send them to him, together with power to ratify, according to the intention of his most Christian Majesty. Now transmit to him a copy of the clauses as re-settled by the Pope from those drawn up by the Regent [Louise of Savoy] before the release of the most Christian King, together with an instruction apart from his Holiness, addressed to his Nuncio in France.

By these clauses he will perceive the honorable place reserved for the entry into this league of the King of England as principal, and also as protector and conservator, with other honorable and suitable conditions deserving the magnanimity of his Majesty, and the consummate prudence, experience, and counsel of the Cardinal.

On the receipt of letters from Rosso announcing the ratification of the clauses by the most Christian King, to announce their contents in the Signory's name to his Majesty and the Cardinal, and urge the King immediately to join the league as principal contracting party, and also to be its conservator and protector, according to the desire of the other confederates, and to the holy purpose of his Majesty, as also in accordance with his well-deserved title of "Defender of the Christian Faith."

Ayes, 184. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian.]

April 25.
 Deliberazioni
 Senato Secreta,
 Filza, no. 6.

1257. POWER from the DOGE and SENATE for LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

To stipulate in their name a perpetual league, confederacy and union with the Pope, the most Christian King of France, the King of England, Defender of the Faith, the Lord Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan, and with any other kings, princes, states, commonwealths, and nations, even ultramontane.

To act as shall seem fit to him, having full power for the purposes aforesaid, and for all others. The State promises to ratify all his acts, and not to infringe them under any pretext; as security for which have ordered the present document to be furnished with their pendent leaden seal.

1526.

Dated 25th April 1526.

Read to the full College, and published in the Senate.

[Original draft, Latin.]

April 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 286.

1258. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Went to the King at Greenwich, having been preceded by the Papal Nuncio, the prothonotary Di Gambara, who had audience first; after which entered and communicated the contents of the Signory's letters to his Majesty, who said, "The Emperor does not wish for peace with your Signory." The King suspects he will cross over to Italy, and that he is intent thereon. He then said that Giovanni Gioachino had returned from France, and that the most Christian King asks whether, having his two sons prisoners with the Emperor, he ought to make the league with Italy, and what he should do to obtain their release. His Majesty wishes him to join the league, and says he himself will be a party to it, in order that the Emperor may not become monarch of the universe. The King acts thus, moreover, by reason of the love he bears the Signory. He also said he was sending the Cardinal to London to speak with the French ambassadors about this league, and that he would conclude it in England; wherefore he (Orio) was to write to the Signory to send mandates to that effect. His Majesty declared that he had the interests of the Signory at heart.

Sends [the list] of Cardinal Bessarione's Greek books, which Cardinal Wolsey wishes for; and above all the Cardinal begs that a rare book belonging to Dom. Marco Dandolo may be sent to him.*

London, 25th April. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

April 26.

Navagero Despatches.
Cicogna copy.

1259. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The English ambassador [Edward Lee] states he can come to no settlement with the Emperor about the money due from him to his King. The Imperial ministers have spoken to him about making a new league, but his King will not consent unless he can pacify Christendom. His King will not easily brook (patir) the Emperor's coming into Italy.

Seville, 26th April 1526.

[Italian.]

April 27.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1260. The DOGE and SENATE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

He will receive their last letters through the Secretary in France, whom he is to acquaint with the English news, the French intelligence being communicated to him in return.

[Italian.]

* In Tomasini's Catalogue of the contents of Venetian libraries I do not find any clue to the title of the rare book in the possession of Marco Dandolo, of which Cardinal Wolsey wished to obtain a copy in the year 1526.

1526.

April 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 260.1261. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Was told by the King that as the King of England has not yet declared himself, he has written to him again, and hopes he will join the league. Told the King the Signory had written to England. His Majesty said he was sure of the Signory, adding, "but the Pope?" He also announced the receipt of letters from England, purporting that the King enters the league.

The King will therefore wait ten days for the mandates after the arrival of the Viceroy.

Cognac, 29th April. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

April 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 286.1262. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The French ambassadors, that is to say, the President of Rouen and Giovanni Gioachino, have no mandate to conclude the league in England.

Yesterday high mass (una messa solenne) was sung by Cardinal Wolsey, and the King swore to the agreement with France. He then gave a dinner, and danced the whole day, after which he dismissed the ambassadors that they might write for the mandates. Has sent his letters by a foot post (uno fante), to whom he gave 25 crowns.

Subsequently went to Cardinal Wolsey, who spoke about the league, saying it would be well to stipulate it in England, and to insert two clauses; first, that none of the allies be allowed to make terms with the Emperor without the consent of the other parties to it; and, secondly, that the sum to be paid by each of the colleagues for the release of the French King's sons be specified. A captain of the league to be also appointed. The prothonotary Gambara said he would write to the Pope, and he (Orio) said he would do the like by the Signory, and hoped to receive the mandates.

Cardinal Wolsey has also written to France, urging the stipulation of this league, and that on account of the present danger the conclusion should be effected speedily. He says that the Emperor is acquainted with all and each of the current negotiations, and recommends the Signory to keep this design secret.

London, 30th April. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 206.1263. NOTE by SANUTO.

In the letters from France, date 10th April, there was a passage in cipher that a gentleman from the King of England had arrived to tell the most Christian King not to keep the promises made to the Emperor.*

[Italian.]

May 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 225.1264. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Heard from the Pope that the English King was well inclined to act and join the league. Sir Gregory Casal gave him a similar account, and said he would write to his brother, the prothonotary at

* See Rosso's letter of 11th April.

1526

Venice, to impart the news to the Signory. Returned thanks, and besought his good offices.

Rome, 1st May. Registered by Sanuto, 5th May.

[Italian.]

May 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 261.

1265. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Went with Chiapino to the King, who expressed indignation against one Abbatis, because letters* from the latter to the Duke of Bourbon had been intercepted, telling Bourbon he should be Duke of Milan, and that the Signory consents to this. His Majesty said, "Write to the Signory to have him seized, for if I could get the rogue, he should go the galleys as he deserves."

The King then said that the Viceroy [of Naples, Charles de Lannoi] would arrive at Cognac on Saturday; he had reached Bayonne, and took it amiss that no one was sent to meet him. The King has therefore despatched one of his gentlemen to keep the Viceroy three days at Bordeaux, and on his reaching Cognac will lodge him in the castle, and amuse him until the arrival of the mandates.* Should he talk of breach of promise, the King will challenge him, and says he shall be challenged to single combat by one of his own grade; and if he says in the Emperor's name that the King has broken faith with him, he will tell Lannoi that he challenges the Emperor to fight with him. The King then said there were letters from England dated the 24th April. The King of England is willing to join the league, but insists on certain articles, viz., that none of the allies may make terms with the Emperor unless with the consent of their colleagues; and he would fain have an understanding about Boulogne, &c. The King [of France] replied that everything could be arranged by sending a mandate to Cognac, and his Majesty spoke about this to the English ambassadors [Dr. Tayler and Sir Thomas Cheyne]. The King added, that it would be well for the ambassadors to see Chiapino and Rosso with him, and told them that the English King and Cardinal are ambitious of being parties to the league; so they are satisfied.† Spinalosa is come back from Spain, and the Admiral departs for Burgundy with 500 spears.

Cognac, 1st May. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

May 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 225.

1266. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope told him he had answered the English ambassador, desiring him to write to his King to join the league, in which case he should receive the 8,000 (sic) ducats due to him from the Emperor.

Rome, 2nd May. Registered by Sanuto, 5th May.

[Italian.]

May 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 261,
262.

1267. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The most Christian King told him he had received letters from England dated 14th April. The King [of England] is willing to join

* "Mandati," powers or commissions from the allies.

† "Quel Re e quel Cardinal è glorioso volendo intrar," &c.

1526.

the league with the Signory, and to contribute 25,000 crowns monthly.

Robertet inquired when the mandates would arrive. Having received the Signory's letters, announcing that they had sent the mandate, and exhorted the Pope to do the like, he (Rosso) replied accordingly. Robertet rejoined, "We know the Signory will comply, but with regard to the Pope, we have not the requisite conviction." The King delays the Viceroy [Charles de Lannoi] until the mandates arrive; and he also announced his intention of sending Mons. de la Morette to England.

Cognac, 4th May. Registered by Sanuto, 18th May.

[Italian.]

May 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli., pp. 287,
288.

1268. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Viceroy [Charles de Lannoi] arrived within three leagues of the court yesterday, and will make his entry tomorrow. His most Christian Majesty had received letters from the King of England, who is expecting the mandates for the stipulation of the league.

His Majesty told him (Rosso) that Mons. De la Valle had returned from Spain, where it was said that if the King of France were still there, they would not release him. His Majesty observed, "I will take good care not to return." He is going to Blois, and then to Paris.

On receiving the Signory's letters of the 25th and 26th, went on the morning of the 17th to Robertet, and told him he had received the mandates. Robertet took him to the King's chamber; it was the 15th hour, and his Majesty had not risen, as he goes to bed after midnight. He was very glad to hear of the arrival of the mandates, and said a conference should be held on Thursday, and that he would swear to the articles of the league on the day of the arrival of the Viceroy, to whom he would however give good greeting, and delay him. He then said he had letters from England, that the King would give for his share to the league 25,000 crowns monthly, and ransom his most Christian Majesty's sons, by giving the Emperor two millions of gold in two instalments.

[Cognac], 7th May. Registered by Sanuto, 21st May.

[Italian.]

May 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 256.

1269. LORENZO ORIO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Has been with the Cardinal, who is awaiting the mandates from the Pope and the Signory, in order to negotiate and conclude the league. The French ambassador, Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, had told the Cardinal that the Signory, having been mentioned by both Kings in the peace, might therefore be considered as included in the league. The Cardinal replied that this was untrue, as the Signory had not given an answer within the appointed time with regard to accepting and ratifying, &c.

An English gentleman has arrived in London from France. The [French] King had not ratified the agreement with the Emperor, and the Viceroy [Lannoi] and the Captain Alarcon had come to Cognac to urge its ratification.

1526.

By this gentleman received letters from the secretary Rosso in France, dated Cognac, 30th April, giving an account of events there.

The French ambassador, the President of Rouen [Jean Brinon], departed yesterday on his way back to France, the King having given him a chain worth He was accompanied to the sea side by Dom. Giovanni Gioachino [di Passano, Lord of Vaux].

London, 7th May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

May 10.

1270. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 288,
289.

The Viceroy [Charles de Lannoi] has made his entry [into Cognac], having been met by Mons. de Vendôme, Mons. de S. Pol, Mons. de la Guiche, Mons. de Lautrec, and others. He was accompanied by the Captain Archom [Alarcon], the Duke of Traieto, and the Duke of ———, with 200 horse. He lodged in the castle; and in a hall, handsomely decorated with tapestry, the most Christian King embraced him on his arrival; after which they went into the garden, and conversed there awhile. The Viceroy brought four letters, from the Emperor, from the Queen [Eleanor], and from the King's two sons. The King sent part of a wild boar to him (Rosso); and a saker belonging to Mons. de Lautrec, having quarried a large bird, his Majesty sent it to the Viceroy, with a message, thus, "This bird is not an eagle." The Viceroy's companions are very suspicious. Chiapin and Rosso then went to the King, requesting him to conclude the league, because the castles of Milan and Cremona could hold out no longer, and beseeching him not to allow the Viceroy to proceed to Italy. His Majesty replied that he would neither allow him to do so nor to return to Spain. The King then entered the council chamber, which was attended by the two envoys Chiapin and Rosso, who exhibited their mandates, urging the conclusion of the league. They were then dismissed, and on being re-admitted the Lord Chancellor [Du Prat] said his most Christian Majesty would stipulate the league, and that they were to leave copies of their mandates.

The King says the Viceroy told him to observe the articles of agreement, and that his Majesty replied he would take the advice of his Council, because that which it is in his power to do of himself he will do, but that which requires counsel shall be answered by him with his Council, as the Emperor did when his Majesty was in Spain; for to whatever was proposed, he said he would consult with his Council. The President of Paris also said to the Viceroy, "Did I not tell you when in Spain that the King cannot promise to give Burgundy?"

This morning, the church being most sumptuously hung with cloth of gold and silk, a mass was sung by the Cardinal of Lorraine, there being present the Viceroy, the Imperial ambassador, the two English ambassadors [Tayler and Cheyne], the Papal envoy, and himself (Rosso). The King swore to the peace made with the King of England. After this ceremony his Majesty caused the Lord Steward to give a dinner to all the ambassadors, but the Imperial ambassador did not attend. In the afternoon Dom. Chiapin and he (Rosso) went to the King, and urged him to conclude the league. His Majesty said he would do so by all means, and send for them into the council chamber; adding, "The King of England does not wish the league to be made without him, and this suffices to prevent him from making an agreement with others without the consent of the allies. He is also desirous that the league be stipulated in England, which is a bad plan; it is better to make it here, and to leave him place for his adhesion."

1526.

The King also said the Viceroy told him he had a negotiation on foot for another agreement, and should wish to depart for Italy on Tuesday, but that he (the King) would delay him; and that he was sending Mons. de la Morette to England.

Chiapin has received letters from the prothonotary Gambara, dated London, 29th April, and showed him (Rosso) the instructions received from the Pope. Touching the kingdom of Naples, the Pope demands the right to assign an annual revenue of 40,000 ducats thereon to such person as he shall think fit.

[Cognac], 10th May.* Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 11.

1271. LETTER from HENRY VIII.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 225.

The English ambassador, Prothonotary Casal, came into the College and exhibited letters from his brother, Sir Gregory, at Rome, announcing the receipt of letters from the King, dated 17th April, expressing goodwill towards Italy.

[Italian.]

May 11.

1272. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 289,
290.

He and Chiapin went to Madame [Louise of Savoy] and to the Lord Steward, to hasten the stipulation of the league. Went alone to Robertet, and Chiapin went to the Lord Chancellor and to Mons. de Lautrec. Robertet said it would be well to hasten, lest the castles of Milan and Cremona be lost; moreover, that delay might cause the Pope to change sides. Robertet swore that the King purposes to stipulate the league. The Chancellor and Lautrec said the like to Chiapin.

The King has gone out hunting with the Viceroy. Before he went Chiapin and he (Rosso) presented themselves to his Majesty, who said to them, "Although I am going to hunt abroad, do you attend the Council." Accordingly in the afternoon they attended the Council, in which the articles were read. There was a difficulty about finding those negotiated in the time of Madame the Regent, which differ from the present, as they purpose inserting the following clauses:—That no agreement may be made with the Emperor unless he make restitution to the allies, &c. Also, that a term be assigned to the Emperor for releasing the French princes, in consideration of such a sum of money as shall seem fit to the allies. Also, that the Emperor do remove his troops from the Milanese, and do not go into Italy save with the consent of the allies, and in such form as shall seem fit to them. Also, that he allow the Pope, the Signory, the Duke of Milan, and the Florentines to retain what they possess. Besides these, there were certain other clauses, to which he (Rosso) and Chiapin consented. The members of the Council desired them (Chiapin and Rosso) to leave the articles, because neither the President of Paris nor the Bishop of Tarbes, who sat therein, had seen them, they having been in France.* And they said they would give their reply tomorrow. The Council also discussed the stipulation of the league in England, and it was settled that it would be better to conclude it at Cognac, giving power to the King of England to join it. He (Rosso) and Chiapin then spoke to Madame. She swore that the King purposes to stipulate the league, and said the present delay is not injurious; nor will his Majesty do anything with the Viceroy. She added, "The King of England writes that he disapproves of the Duke of Milan's remaining in his duchy."†

* Although there is no date of place in Sanuto's extract, it appears from "State Papers," vol. vi. p. 537, that the French court was still at Cognac on the 27th May 1526.

1526.

His most Christian Majesty desired him and Chiapin to speak to the English ambassadors, as they did, and were told by them that they (Tayler and Cheyne) had no commission from their King to stipulate the league. The Viceroy was visited first by Chiapin, and then by him (Rosso). He is dissatisfied with the Signory. Understands that in the Viceroy's house they say, "This King wishes to bind us by doing us honour! we require something more than honours."

On the day when the peace with England was sworn to, the King wore a doublet (zipon), which he showed to him (Rosso), of cloth of gold, on which were 28 diamonds, a very handsome ruby, and pearls, to the value of 140,000 ducats. Also on his cap he had the carbuncle which the Signory gave him on the death of King Lewis, as his Majesty told him.

[Cognac], 11th May. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 12.

1273. The COUNTESS SOMAGLIA to ———.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 300,
301.

The Viceroy arrived on the 8th with Alarcon and the Duke of Traietto; they were accompanied for a league by all the Princes of France and by the greater part of the emigrants (foraussiti). The King's archers, in number about 300, all clad in new uniforms, and the Swiss guard, 80 in number, awaited him drawn up in line within the palace. The King was in a large hall, hung with silk arras at the entry, and thence went to meet him, giving him greeting and caresses. Both then withdrew to a window in the hall, where they talked a long while in the presence of the other lords. The Viceroy used strong language (parole grande), and at the same time gave the King two letters, one said to be from the Emperor, the other from the Lady Eleanor. After perusal of the letters and

* The President of Paris and the Bishop of Tarbes quitted Toledo for France on the 30th November 1525, as appears by the despatches of Andrea Navagero; and apparently they had not arrived when the articles were presented to the Council.

† "Il Re de Ingalterra scrive non li piacer ch'el Ducha di Milan resti in stato." It may be inferred that Henry VIII. had already determined if possible to obtain the duchy of Milan for his natural son Henry Fitzroy.

1526.

further discourse, the Viceroy was taken to Madame [Louise of Savoy] in her chamber. She received him most graciously, wishing to kiss him, according to the custom of France. He would only kiss her hand ; but he afterwards kissed the Duchess [of Alençon] and all the other ladies. - At length he was taken to his lodging, which had been prepared in the King's own palace. Three chambers leading one into the other were assigned to the Viceroy ; the first entirely of gold brocade ; the second of green velvet embroidered with stories and fables, a most beautiful thing, and the bed and bed furniture wrought in the same fashion ; and the third chamber was all of crimson velvet with gold ciphers, with another suit of bed furniture to match. Alarcon had a chamber and a wardrobe (guardaroba) hung with arras, and the Duke of Traietto the like. They all ate apart, and were served alike.

On the 9th instant a banquet was given in the palace to the ambassador of the King of England by the Lord Steward of France, as commissioned by his most Christian Majesty.

On the morning of the 10th great preparation was made in the palace-church for the King to confirm the oath pledged to England, which had hitherto been taken by Madame alone. Mons. de St. Pol, Mons. de [la Guiche], and Mons. de Chavigni, the captain of the archers, had to go to the English ambassador's house and accompany him to the palace for the ratification of the treaty, a great demonstration on the part of the King, which did not much please the Viceroy, who together with the English ambassador was the first to enter the church. The King arrived shortly afterwards, accompanied by all the Princes of France and by the knights of the Order [of St. Michael], and also by the Viceroy and all the ambassadors. The Viceroy was first next the King ; then came the Pope's ambassador, followed by the Emperor's and by the Venetian, and by all the other lords as they pleased, for no order whatever was kept. Thus accompanied, the King went to the church, where the mass was sung by the Cardinal de Bourbon, served by two archbishops, with trumpets and fifes, in great state. Then followed the oath and ratification of the peace, which did not greatly please the Viceroy, as hitherto he has been unable to ascertain the King's intention touching peace or war with the Emperor.

On the 12th the King desired the Lord Steward to invite the ambassadors from the Pope and from the Signory of Venice to dine in the palace, as they did ; nor did this please the Viceroy. There are various opinions about the agreement between the Emperor and the King, and between the King and the Italian powers. The secret is in the breast of the King, and of a few others, but ere long will be manifest.

The Count Palatine arrived at the Court yesterday, being on his way to the Emperor. Today the King hunts for the amusement of the Viceroy, and tomorrow he gives him a banquet and entertainment with masks. Madame Rénée is expected shortly at the Court and it is said she will marry the King of Navarre.

Cognac, 12th May. Registered by Sanuto, 27th May.

[Italian.]

1526.

May 13.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1274. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Are expecting to receive from him additional details of what has been announced by Giovanni Gioachino concerning the new league, and also of what took place subsequently.

Have noted the good offices rendered to him by the prothonotary Gambara, the Papal Nuncio in England. Have heard of the Pope's suggestion that they should write to him (Orio) to have a good understanding with this Nuncio. Warn him to proceed cautiously and reservedly with the prothonotary, as they are acquainted with his past actions, but to show no distrust.

To mark what they write concerning the proposal made to them by the English ambassador [Giovanni Casal]. Should anything be said on the subject in London, to reply as they did at Venice.

[Italian.]

May 13.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 331.

1275. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On the 7th and 11th May the ambassador wrote by way of France, describing his conferences with Cardinal Wolsey, after which the ambassador, Dom. Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and knight, departed this life late on the 12th of May, his death being caused by two glandular tumours (do giandusse) and a carbuncle.

"I pray God to give rest to his soul; he was much beloved in England, and the loss of so able a man is greatly regretted. I remained with him to the last, but at length quitted the house, and am lodging at a hostel with part of the ambassador's establishment. As Cardinal Wolsey has a great dread of the plague, I shall have to remain for some days away from his right rev. Lordship, and thus be unable to transact any business." Requests pecuniary supply, and wishes to know what to do with the ambassador's attendants, who are now all at his charge. The mandate for the conclusion of the league is expected. Should the Signory please to address it to him, he will use his good offices, as becomes a faithful servant.

The French ambassador, the Chancellor of Alençon [Jean Brinon], quitted London today, on his way back to France. Visited him; he will use his good offices with the most Christian King in favour of the Signory. Dom. Giovanni Gioachino [di Passano] has not returned from the sea side, whither he went to accompany the other ambassador on his way home.*

Sends this letter express, for its safe delivery.

London, 13th May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

May 15.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli.
pp. 294, 295.

1276. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King says he has received letters from England dated the 8th, whereby the King of England urges his most Christian Majesty to make the league with Italy, and to give power to him to join within the period of three months, during which interval he will have his merchants and their property removed from Spain, and will try to obtain the money due to him from the Emperor before he declares war against his Imperial Majesty. The most Christian King said he wishes the King of England first of all to join the league, and to promise a monthly subsidy of 15,000 crowns. Things are now brought to such a pass as to cause great doubts about the result. The Viceroy has sent twice to Spain, and the mission of Mons. de la Morette to England on behalf of the King of France has been suspended.

* As Brinon was both Chancellor of Alençon and President of Rouen, this statement is irreconcilable with the last paragraph in Orio's letter of 7th May.

1526.

The English ambassadors [Tayler and Cheyne] have dined with Chiapin. They communicated everything, and said they strongly suspected that the King of France will make terms with the Emperor; and they purpose speaking to him about this.

Cognac, 15th May. Registered by Sanuto, 26th May.

[Italian.]

May 16.
Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
Filza 1ma.

1277. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

With regard to the King of England, to tell the Pope in confidence that as the King of England and Cardinal Wolsey have so often promised not only to join the league, but to lend it their favour and assistance, the Council of Ten are therefore of opinion, although the prothonotary Gambara writes that the King will not at once declare himself against the Emperor, that he will in fact do so as protector of the league, and find an opportunity for acting as desired. This the King constantly and solemnly affirmed to the Signory's ambassador, whose letters are more recent than those of the prothonotary Gambara. Moreover, he (Foscari) wrote on the 1st instant that the English ambassadors at the Papal Court had received letters from their King, dated the 17th ult., announcing not only that he would join the league, but also contribute money.

All means should therefore be employed to include the King and Cardinal in the league under any name soever, but if possible as confederate.

[Italian.]

May 16.
Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
Filza 1ma.

1278. The SAME to the SAME.

Send copies of French despatches (dated from 21st April to 1st May), that the Pope may see how the most Christian King perseveres in his firm intention to effect the union, and awaits anxiously the mandates from his Holiness and the Signory. On their arrival he would conclude the matter. Rosso writes that his most Christian Majesty told him he had received letters dated 24th April from Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, informing him that the King and Cardinal wished the league with Italy to be made, the King consenting to join it.

[Italian.]

May 16.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta).
File no. 10.

1279. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

The ambassador of the King of England presented himself lately saying he had received letters from his brother, Sir Gregory Casal, his Majesty's ambassador at Rome, announcing the commission given him by the King and Cardinal to transmit their letters addressed to Sir Gregory to Venice for communication to the Signory. They set forth the constant good disposition of the King and Cardinal, and their wish for the speedy conclusion of the new league. The ambassador observed that before concluding the league a clause should be inserted, that none of the contracting princes should treat with any prince not included in this treaty without the consent of the others. This he desired because, his King being a creditor of the Emperor for a considerable sum of money, the other contracting princes should co-operate with him for its recovery.

1526.

They answered the ambassador that they heard gratefully how well inclined his King and Cardinal were to the conclusion of the league, and thus knew that all Italy and the Signory were under great obligation to them. Assured him that amongst the clauses resettled by the Pope, and sent to France and England, was one whereby none of the confederate princes might treat with any one not comprised in the league without the consent of the other contracting powers; and therefore his Majesty, as principal contracting party, and also as conservator and protector of the league, might be assured that the princes named in the league would be no less anxious for the advantage of himself and the Cardinal than for their own. Thereupon the ambassador took leave.

[Italian.]

May 17.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1280. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

On the 14th received letters from their Secretary Rosso, dated Cognac, the 1st instant, giving a full account of the excellent disposition of the most Christian King, and his great wish for the arrival of the mandates from the Pope and the Signory, so as to be able to conclude the new league. Great hope is entertained there that the King of England will join it as chief contracting party, and as its conservator and protector.

To go to the King and Cardinal, beseeching them earnestly and respectfully no longer to delay entering the league, and laying before them, besides other reasons, that the castles of Milan and Cremona are straitened for victuals, so that they cannot long hold out, and should they fall into the hands of the Imperialists it may be easily understood how much this result would thwart the wishes of the King and Cardinal, and the general welfare of Italy. To insist on the danger of delay, and give notice of the whole to the aforesaid secretary in France.

Send copies of two paragraphs in Rosso's letters; also a letter of their own, touching the request made to them by the prothonotary Casal.

Have desired him (Orio) to proceed cautiously with the prothonotary Gambara, without, however, evincing distrust. Have been subsequently confirmed in this opinion by letters from their ambassador at Rome, dated the 11th inst., purporting that, by letters of the 21st April from the prothonotary, the Pope was informed that the King of England would not join the league as principal contracting party, because he had no just cause to break with the Emperor, though the King was very willing to be the protector and conservator of the league. Consider this very strange, and at variance with what they hear through other channels, both by letters of the 17th April, written by the King to his ambassador at Rome, which he [Sir Gregory Casal] forwarded to his brother, the prothonotary, who communicated them to the State, and also by his (Orio's) letters of the 22nd April, all giving assurance of the excellent disposition of the King and Cardinal, and of their desire for the conclusion of the league. This is also confirmed by the letters of Secretary Rosso, who gives fair hopes to the like effect, the most Christian King declaring that he had similar letters from his ambassador in England, dated the 24th April. Are therefore surprised by the contradictory statement attributed to the prothonotary Gambarà.

1526.

[Italian.]

May 17.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 287.

1281. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope told him he had indifferent news (non bone nove). The prothonotary Gambarà writes that the King wishes to stipulate the league in London. The Pope then said that Gambarà had been the cause of this result, and that he (the Pope) had sent letters to France for the conclusion of the league, as they should not wait for the King of England by reason of the danger of losing the castles of Milan and Cremona. Sir Gregory Casal thanks the Signory, having had letters from his brother, the ambassador in Venice [John Casal, prothonotary], about the entry of their brother into the Signory's military service, which Sir Gregory greatly desires.

Rome, 17th May. Registered by Sanuto, 24th May.

[Italian.]

May 18.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 332.

1282. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King says that the King of England must be allowed three months to join the league, and that the English ambassadors are very suspicious.

Cognac, 18th May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

May 18.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 24.

1283. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

The Pope will have heard of the auspicious resolve (resolutione votiva) of the King of England to join the league and contribute money, as told to Dom. Capino by the most Christian King; so that, by God's grace, everything proceeds favorably.

Ayes, 197. Noes, 1. Neutrals, 1.

[Italian.]

May 19.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 332,
333.

1284. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The English ambassadors went to the King yesterday about this league. The King of England writes he had heard of the arrival of the Viceroy at Cognac, and that his most Christian Majesty must not keep his promises, but conclude the league with Italy, and leave him three months' time to become a party. Chiapin and Rosso told the most Christian King to modify the clause about the King of England, offering him—should he choose to join the league—territory in Italy yielding 300,000 (sic, 30,000?) ducats annual revenue, and 10,000 ducats rental for Cardinal Wolsey. This pleased the King, and they remained satisfied.

1526.

Cognac, 19th May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

May 21. 1285. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNROY.

Sanuto Diaries, v. xli. pp. 332, 333. He (Rosso) and Chiapin went to the King, who was at dinner. His Majesty took them into a wardrobe chamber (una guardaroba), swearing he had communicated that day, and that the Lord Steward told him they (Rosso and Chiapin) were afraid the league would not be concluded. He then said, "I shall make the league with Italy, and will send Mons. de la Morette to England to exhort that King to join it. I did honour to the Viceroy because he saved my life at the battle, and was the cause of my release. Morette will vindicate my conduct to the King of England against the charge of negotiating an agreement with the Emperor through the Viceroy." With regard to concluding the league, the King said the Chancellor was old and naturally lazy (e di natura pigro), but that the articles would indubitably be stipulated.

Cognac, 21st May. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

May 22. 1286. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

Lettere del Collegio (Secreta), File no. 10.

Received the communication made to him by the King. Have gladly heard the confirmation from the King of his extreme regard for the State and their affairs. To assure his Majesty of the Signory's eternal obligation, and perform the like office with Cardinal Wolsey. Perceive that the King urged him to write in haste for the mandate and instructions necessary for the conclusion of the league, he, together with his Council, having determined to join it as a principal contracting party. Have already complied with his Majesty's request by sending powers to France, to be transmitted to England. Have hastened the despatch the more, knowing that the castles of Milan and Cremona (whose importance for the liberty of Italy is notorious to everybody) were straitened for provisions, and could not long hold out. Considered it therefore absolutely necessary to succour those castles; but this cannot be done before the conclusion of the league.

By letters from Rome understand that the Pope has received letters from his Nuncio in England, purporting that the King wishes the league to be stipulated there, whereas the Pope was desirous of its being concluded in France, so that on its conclusion the castle of Milan might be the more speedily relieved. This is also the Signory's wish. Not that his Holiness and the Signory do not desire all honour and glory for the King and Cardinal, but, owing to the peril to which the fortresses of Milan are exposed, should the ratification of the league be referred to England, the delay which would be caused by the journey could not but prove injurious, with evident risk of the Duke's being unable to maintain himself in the Milanese. This is one of the chief objects of the confederacy, and has always been desired by the King and Cardinal, who are very well aware that the loss of these fortresses would endanger the undertaking, and the projects for the liberty of Italy.

1526.

If aware that the league has not yet been ratified in France, and it be doubtful where the ratification is to take place, to go to the King and Cardinal in the Signory's name, and request them immediately to send powers to their ambassadors in France, with orders to ratify there. If, on the other hand, the most Christian King should have sent powers to his ambassadors in England to ratify there, then to ratify the league in England.

In case the King of England has already consented to join the league, and sent powers to his ambassadors in France to ratify there, to thank his Majesty, and assure him of the Signory's desire to gratify him in all matters.

Have comprehended the request made to him by Cardinal Wolsey for copies of the books, &c.,* but as they have not yet received the list of them (l'indice de quelli), to let his right reverend Lordship know that, on receiving notice of the sort of books he wishes for, they will endeavour to gratify his wish, being always ready so to do whenever the opportunity offers.

[Italian.]

May 22.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1287. The DOGE and COLLEGE to LORENZO ORIO, Ambassador in England.

The league should be concluded in France, and not in England. Much disturbed by the delay, and by the increasing risk lest the castles of Milan and Cremona surrender from want of provisions. The Pope feels similar vexation, and is dissatisfied with his Nuncio in England, the prothonotary Gambarà, whom he accuses of having been the cause of this confusion, and of having acted contrary to his Holiness's will and commission. The Pope has again sent express to D. Capino, to do his utmost to ratify in France; and in case he should be unable to accomplish this, he has sent powers for the ratification in England.

[Italian.]

May 22.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1288. The SAME to the SAME.

Letters from their secretary in France, dated from the 7th to the 13th instant, announce receipt of the powers from the State to conclude the league there, and the firm disposition of his most Christian Majesty and his Council so to do.

[Italian.]

* The letters following the word "libri" appear to be "etiam etc.", but by Sanuto's Diaries it is seen that Cardinal Wolsey's demand was for Greek books, so that "etiam etc." was probably a slip of the pen for "Greci."

1526.

May 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 334.1289. LEAGUE against CHARLES V.

Summary of the clauses concerning England in the league made, signed, and sealed at Cognac on the 23rd (sic) May 1526, between Pope Clement VII., Francis I., King of France, the Signory of Venice, the Duke of Milan, and the Republic of Florence, against the Emperor Charles V.*

The Emperor, upon payment to the King of England of what he owes him, to be received into the league.

An honorable place to be reserved in the league for the King of England, who is to join it within the term of three months, and on his entry he is to be the principal and protector of the league; the King of France being under great obligation to him for having aided his release.

Should the King of England join the league, he is to pay 25,000 ducats per month, there being given to him, out of what shall be gained from the enemy, territory in Italy for his natural son to the amount of 30,000 ducats annually, and 10,000 ducats annually to the Right Reverend Cardinal of York, to be derived from territory, of which he demands the investiture in perpetuity.†

The contracting parties to name their colleagues and adherents, amongst whom the King of England is named by the Pope, the most Christian King, and the Signory of Venice.

Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Italian.]

May 23.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 339,
340.1290. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Commentary on the clauses of the confederacy, called "Most Holy," between the Pope, the King of the French, the Venetians, Duke Francesco Sforza, and the Florentines against the Emperor.

Allusion to the attempt made to tamper with the good faith of the King of England and of Cardinal Wolsey, by means of Italian donations (largitionibus Italicis).

Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.

[Latin.]

* This treaty is in Dumont (vol. iv. pp. 451–455), with the date 22nd May. In the heading he alludes to its having been published by Frederick Leonard (tom. ii. p. 246) and by Raynaldus. It is not in Rymer.

In Robertson's History of Charles V. (p. 312, ed. London, 1831), the Holy League of Cognac is mentioned, and especially the clause whereby "a principality in the kingdom of Naples, of 30,000 ducats yearly revenue, was to be settled on Henry VIII." (the historian not saying one word about the King's natural son), "and lands to the value of 10,000 ducats on Wolsey, his favourite." The authorities quoted by Robertson are Goldast and Pallavicini.

In the biographical notices of Henry Fitzroy and Wolsey I do not find any mention of the pecuniary advantages which were to be derived by them under the 18th article of the treaty of Cognac, thus numbered by Dumont, but which, according to Sanuto, seems to be the 21st.

† In Dumont the paragraph about Fitzroy and Wolsey is printed as follows:—
"Dabuntque Majestati suæ, sive Illustrissimo ejus Filio naturali, pro se ac successoribus suis, unum dominium in Regno Neapolitano, titulo Ducatus, aut Principatus, annui census ad minus triginta millium ducatorum; alterum pariter dominium in Italia annui census decem millium ducatorum, pro se ac successoribus suis, Reverendissimo Domino Cardinali Eboracensi, cujus quidem prudentiæ, labori, ac vigilantia multum debet universa Christianorum Respublica."

1526.
May 23. 1291. The HOLY LEAGUE.
Sanuto Diaries, v. xli. pp. 340, 341. Clauses of the confederacy above mentioned.
Registered by Sanuto, 2nd June.
[Latin, 11 pages.]
- May 25. 1292. The BAILIFF and CAPTAIN of CREMA to the DOGE and SIGNORY.
Sanuto Diaries, v. xli. p. 299. The Viceroy [Charles de Lannoi] and his companions entered Cognac on the 8th, the King having prepared a very pompous entry for them. He came to see whether the King would keep his promises.
On Ascension Day the peace with the King of England was confirmed with great pomp and display, there being present in the church the Viceroy and his companions; and all that the Regent did, during the King's stay in Spain, was confirmed. On the morrow the envoys from the Pope, England, and the Venetians sat in council with the whole French ministry (the Viceroy and the other Imperialists taking no further part in the matter), and they made great promises (e feceno di bello).
At Cognac nothing is attended to but dancing and entertainments, and masquerades, and jousts, and many other amusements.
Crema, 25th May. Registered by Sanuto, 27th May.
[Italian.]
- May 25. 1293. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.
Sanuto Diaries, v. xli. p. 427. Went to the King to thank him for having concluded the league. His Majesty said that the Viceroy told him he suspected it, and that he, the King, replied that nothing was yet settled but he should negotiate with the powers. The Viceroy then requested him to await the reply from Spain about Hesdin, but the King declined. His Majesty added that the English ambassadors had told him that their King is urgent for the league with Italy, but he did not tell them it was already concluded. He wishes to receive its ratification.
Cognac, 25th May. Registered by Sanuto, 12th June.
[Italian.]
- May 27. 1294. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.
Sanuto Diaries, v. xli. p. 426. Since his last letter, dated the 13th May, announcing the death of the Ambassador Orio, has been wandering about the island. Was obliged to go a distance of 60 miles to find a lodging, such was the panic caused by this death; and much greater caution than usual is now observed. Was therefore put to great expense. Has six horses and 11 attendants. Returned subsequently to London and spoke with the Papal Nuncio, the prothonotary Gambarà, who said he had letters from Rome from the Pope, desiring him to urge the King of England to write to the most Christian King to conclude the league, and attack, &c. The prothonotary wished therefore to speak to the Cardinal, but was unable to do so, his right reverend Lordship being indisposed at Richmond, and having also declined to receive the French ambassador.

1526.

Has received the Signory's letters addressed to the deceased ambassador, together with the mandate for negotiating the league, which is of no use, not being in his name.

Lives expensively (sta con spesa), and has had money in advance for his maintenance from Stefano Fasan, whom the ambassador left his executor. Should the Signory intend him (Spinelli) to remain, requests to be provided with money, and with instructions as to the late ambassador's attendants, and the other plague patients who are living apart. Wishes the horses now in his charge to remain with him, as he will have to follow the King and Cardinal about the island. Cannot go on foot, and if he rode it would be very expensive.

London, 27th May. Registered by Sanuto, 10th June.

[Italian.]

May 28.

1295. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 325.

The Pope has received letters from the prothonotary Gambara in England, dated 20th April. The King would not be the first in the league, but wishes it to be made, and will join it subsequently. The Pope says he has 20,000 ducats at Bologna with which to raise infantry. The Pope sends Ruccellai to France to stipulate the league, because the Emperor holds his Holiness in small account.

Rome, 28th May. Registered by Sanuto, 1st June.

[Italian.]

May 30.

1296. MARCO ANTONIO LONGIN, Secretary of the Venetian Ambassador in Austria, to MARIN SANUTO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 383.

The proceedings in the free towns still continue, especially the preaching, pure and simple, of the Word, which suffices for those who receive it, without further precept.

The places and towns which reformed, did so with the consent of the whole Senate and population.

Among these new reformers some dissension remains concerning the Eucharist, and this has caused many of them to withdraw, and to cool in the undertaking. Zuinglius and Ecolampadius have stated their opinions more clearly. A debate was to be held in Switzerland, and it was said that Zuinglius refused to attend; but the debate commenced on the 19th instant at Baden (Bada), near Zurich. Ecolampadius has gone thither, as also Eckius (Eccio) and Faber (el Fabro) to represent the other side. Four presidents have been elected, and two secretaries (notarij). The Switzers invited Erasmus, who excused himself on the plea of ill health. The dispute will turn chiefly on the Sacrament. They (Zuinglius and Ecolampadius?) do not deny that it is a Sacrament, nay, they affirm that all Christ's words are Sacraments*; but that the host should not be adored as if the body of Christ were present there. Should this last dogma be sustained, does not know what opinion can be henceforth formed of the Church of Rome.

Spire, 28th May.

* "Et perhò costoro non negano quod sit Sacramentum, imo omnia verba Christi esse Sacramenta." 1526.

P.S., 30th May.—The Duke of Saxony and the Elector of Hesse have determined to support the reform of the Church. The Marquis of Baden and both the Brandenburgs follow them. Others have the same policy under consideration; but carnally rather than spiritually.

Registered by Sanuto, 7th June.

[Italian.]

May 31.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 572.

1297. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Narrates his conversations with the Papal Nuncio, Prothonotary di Gambara, who knew that the league had been concluded, and was told by Cardinal Wolsey that he intended marrying the Princess of England to the Duke of Orleans, the most Christian King's second son, that he may reside in England and become popular there. Wishes to receive the mandate, to enable him to conclude the league on the arrival of Mons. de la Morette from France. The Cardinal has written to the [French] King not to allow the Viceroy to pass into Italy.

The Cardinal will not receive him until after the expiration of 40 days' quarantine.

London, 31st May. Registered by Sanuto, 28th June.

[Italian.]

June 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 427–
428.

1298. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The English ambassadors asked the King to give a commission to Mons. de Morette, who is going to England, authorizing him to negotiate the league there. His Majesty answered that there was no occasion. The King of England will send a herald and ambassadors to the Emperor to demand the release of the sons of the King of France, and that the Emperor and the King of France should make peace together.

Angoulême, 1st June. Registered by Sanuto, 12th June.

[Italian.]

June 2.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 230.

1299. DEATH of the VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

On the morning of the 2nd no letters were read, save one from the secretary in England announcing the death of the ambassador Orio.

[Italian.]

June 2.

Deliberazioni
Senato (Secreta),
v. li. p. 25.

1300. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Received letters from France announcing that the most Christian King had concluded the league with D. Capino and Secretary Rosso, and that the same was signed by the commissioners of his Majesty, and by the agents of the Pope and of the Signory, reserving a most honorable place for the King of England to join the league within the term of three months.

Ayes, 210. Noes, 5. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

1526.

June 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 453,
454.

1301. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Chancéllor said that the most Christian King had provided money for the first payment of the Switzers, videlicet, bills of exchange on Venice for 30,000 ducats, as he would send 10,000 ducats direct from France to Italy. These bills of exchange, to the amount of 60,000 ducats, had been received from England, on security.

Angoulême, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 16th June.

[Italian.]

June 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 572.

1302. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Mons. de la Morette has not arrived. The Papal Nuncio told him that the King of England purposes sending an ambassador to the Emperor to demand the release of the sons of the most Christian King on payment of a ransom. Should he refuse, the English ambassador is to take leave of his Majesty, and the other ambassadors will do the like.

London, 4th June. Registered by Sanuto, 28th June.

[Italian.]

June 5.

Deliberazioni
Senato (Secreta),
v. li. p. 25,
tergo.

1303. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for the appointment of an ambassador to England.

The nobleman Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and Knight, the Signory's ambassador to the King of England, having died,—

Put to the ballot, that an honorable ambassador be elected to the aforesaid King; the individual appointed not to refuse under penalty of 500 ducats, besides all penalties imposed upon recusants.

To receive for his expenses 140 golden ducats monthly, like the ambassador deceased; and to be exempt from showing any account of the same to the Signory. Besides the moneys to be advanced here as usual for four months' subsidy, the ambassador's agents in Venice to receive monthly from the cashier of the Council of Ten 140 golden ducats; provided that the Signory suffer no loss from exchange. To take with him 11 horses, comprising those of the secretary and his servant, and two running footmen; and to depart within a month, with such commission as shall seem fit to the Senate.

Ayes, 155.

Amendment.—The ambassador to be elected from any place, office, or governorship, and to receive 150 ducats monthly, as assigned to the ambassadors lately appointed to France. The members of the College to be bound to despatch him from Venice within one month, under penalty of 500 ducats to be exacted from each of them. The person elected not to refuse, ut supra.

Ayes, 38. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 0.

Elected on the 6th June, Francesco Contarini.

[Italian.]

1526.

June 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 366.1304. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion in the Senate for a letter to Gasparo Spinelli, secretary in England, to remain there with four horses, and 50 golden ducats per month for his expenses. To send home the attendants of the deceased ambassador Orio, paying their wages up to the time of his death with his (Orio's) money. Moreover, to urge the King to join the league. A mandate to be sent to Spinelli, such as was received heretofore by the ambassador Orio. An ambassador to be forthwith elected for England, to be eligible from all places and offices, with a salary of 140 golden ducats (monthly), and to incur a penalty in case of refusal.

The Sages for the Orders moved for the letter, with the amendment that the ambassador be eligible even from offices yielding 150 ducats per month.

Bortolo da Canal ascended the tribune and proposed the appointment of an ambassador of distinction (uno orator honorato), but no answer was given him. Thereupon Marin Sanuto mounted the tribune, and continued his narrative thus—"And I spoke, and well. First, I enquired whether Pesaro had refused to go to France. The Doge replied in the affirmative, and said that his excuse had been accepted. I rejoined, 'Appoint some one in his stead, with this condition, that one of the two ambassadors do remain in France, and the other go on to England.' I then discussed the importance of sending a mandate to England, because Cardinal Wolsey would wish fresh matters to be treated there, and this ought not to be done, the league having been already concluded in France; nor is anything more required save to urge the King of England to join the league as he promised. I spoke at length and well, and satisfied well nigh the whole Senate, including the 40 new members, who were much pleased with my speech.

"Ser Antonio Surian, LL.D. and knight, answered me ill, saying it was requisite to send the Signory's assent, and to appoint another ambassador to the King, as the election had been made. He was not satisfactory with regard to the mandate, nor would the Senate agree to it; but the Doge and the College were of opinion it was necessary. I, on the contrary, said the mere letter of credence would suffice.

"Ser Gasparo Malipiero, late Chief of the Ten, then went to the tribune and supported my opinion, that the ambassador should be balloted for and elected separately, the letter also being balloted for apart. He moreover said that there was no occasion to send the mandate. And the College withdrew the letter to my very great honour.

"The motion was therefore made simply to elect an ambassador to England, with 140 golden ducats per month for his expenses, to be eligible from all places and offices, with a penalty of 500 ducats (in case of refusal); "to depart within one month with such commission as shall be given him by this Council; to take with him ten horses, including the secretary's horse and the servant's horse, and two running footmen."

[Italian.]

1526.

June 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 576.1305. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Received the Signory's missives of the 13th, 16th, and 17th. Pressed for audience of the Cardinal, saying he had certain things to communicate, but his right rev. Lordship sent his secretary to request him to delay until the term of quarantine had expired, as a month had not elapsed since the demise of the ambassador. The Cardinal's secretary is named Peter Vannes. Communicated to him the contents of the letters, and the state of Milan castle, which was in manifest danger of being taken; and said that as the league had been concluded, it was wished the King of England should join, he having been the sovereign who urged its formation.

Peter Vannes said they were acquainted with the whole, and expected Mons. de la Morette from France.

The Prothonotary di Gambara, having been to Richmond to the Cardinal, on his return came to him (Spinelli) and narrated his conversation with the Cardinal, who assured him of the King's goodwill towards the affairs of Italy, and said that on the arrival of Mons. de la Morette* the King would not join the league until after having sent his ambassadors to the Emperor to summon him to release the sons of the most Christian King, and to vacate the Milanese (the most Christian King giving him a fair sum of money), in order that the general peace may be made. Should the Emperor refuse, the King of England will declare war against him. The Cardinal said that the stay of the Legate [in Spain] was injurious, wherefore it would be better for him and the Venetian and English ambassadors to quit Spain; and that the mandates should be sent to England, so that, should the Emperor choose, he might either negotiate an agreement or join the league.

Gambara uses his good offices, and has been commissioned by the Pope to act in concert with the Signory's agents.

Buda (sic), 6th June. Registered by Sanuto, 30th June.

P.S.—Arrival in London of Mons. de la Morette. Has visited him, but the conversation was brief, Morette being fatigued (battuto) by the sea voyage. Should Morette not go to the Court tomorrow, will visit him again. Dom. Giovanni Gioachino is also in London. Has received letters from Secretary Rosso, dated the 24th [May?], announcing the conclusion of the league.

[Italian.]

June 6.

1306. DOM. SUARDINO to ———.Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 8, 9, 10.

Since the Emperor's arrival here, all persons who demanded the despatch of their affairs in Italy have been referred to Dom. Hugo di Moncada. His Imperial Majesty is vastly inclined to come into Italy, and get possession of the duchy of Milan. His commanders tell him the castle cannot hold out long from want of provisions. They request funds to enable them to continue the siege, and urge him to accept from France a considerable sum of money in lieu of Burgundy. Experience, however, shows that the Emperor's

* "E zonto sarà Monsignor della Moretta non vol intrar in la liga se prima non mandi," &c.

1526.

affairs proceed more prosperously when conducted contrary to reason and tardily than when they are managed otherwise. Here they regret to hear of the confirmation of the friendship with the English, made with so much pomp in France, nor do they approve of Madame Rénée's marriage with the King of Navarre.

Granada, 6th June. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd July.

[Italian.]

June 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 7.

1307. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Visited the Papal Nuncio, Prothonotary Gambarà, who had conferred with Cardinal Wolsey, to know the result. The Nuncio said Wolsey showed him the articles of the league, and discussed those relating to his King's becoming a party, saying that were he to join the league, he should insist on a promise from the allies for the payment of the money due to him from the Emperor. Also, with regard to his right rev. Lordship, they must give him territory in Italy yielding 10,000 ducats, which territory he chooses to have in the Milanese, as it seems to him only fair that, if the King disburse 25,000 crowns monthly to carry on the war, he ought not at once (di prima) to lose his money. So the mandates should be sent, and the league will be stipulated with such additional clauses as are necessary.

Touching the news of the Turk's marching into Hungary, the Cardinal said an envoy had come to his King from the King of Poland, on account of certain Poles who had been condemned for Lutheranism. The Polish ambassador also told him (the Cardinal) that the King of Poland had been requested by the Turk to make a truce, but refused, unless it were to include his nephew the King of Hungary; which truce was to last five years. The Cardinal said he would await the next letters from Rome as to whether this truce would take effect; if not, he would give him (the King of Poland?) assistance.

Has spoken to the French ambassador, Dom. Giovanni Gioachino, who said the money claimed by the King [of the Emperor] was not so much as stated by them [the King and Cardinal].

London, 7th June. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd July.

[Italian.]

June 8.

1308. The BROTHERS CASAL.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 388. Motion made in the Senate by the sages of the Council and of the main land.

The English ambassador at Rome and the Prothonotary Casal, ambassador from the King of England to the Signory, having requested that their brother Francesco Casal, who has 100 light horse in the Imperial camp, whom he offers to bring over to our side; and as it is advisable to oblige the representatives of the King of England;—Put to the ballot, that Francesco Casal be taken into the Signory's pay with 60 light horse, and 30 ducats [monthly?] for his personal services.

Ayes, 180. Noes, 10. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

1526.

June 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 389.1309. LETTER to the SECRETARY in ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate by the sages of the Council and of the main land, and by those for the Orders (Francesco Contarini, sage for the main land, being absent), for a letter to Gasparo Spinelli acknowledging receipt of his letter of the 13th ult., announcing the death of the ambassador Lorenzo Orio, which they lament greatly.

Charge Spinelli to remain, and tell the King and Cardinal they have elected an ambassador to reside with his Majesty.

Moreover, as a league has been concluded in France between the Pope, the most Christian King, the Signory, and the Duke of Milan, for the conservation of their respective territories and the liberty of Italy, and as his Majesty has promised to join the league as its chief, principal, and conservator, they therefore "pray" him so to do, thus greatly benefiting Italy, effecting her preservation, and obtaining eternal renown for himself.

Desire the secretary to remain in England until the arrival of the ambassador, with four horses, receiving for his expenses 50 golden ducats monthly; to pay the attendants of the deceased ambassador with the ambassador's own moneys up to the day of his demise; and then to give 10 ducats to such as choose to come away for the expenses of their journey.

Announce, moreover, the mission of a mandate, empowering the secretary to act as attorney in the Signory's name.

Amendment proposed by Marin Sanuto, and recorded in his own words, thus—

"And I, Marin Sanuto, caused the proposed mandate to be read by the secretary Nicolò Sagudino, who composed the letter, and he read the mandate made out for the ambassador Orio on the 25th of April last, mutatis mutandis.

"I then mounted the platform, and opposed the transmission of such a mandate, thus worded, and made a most excellent speech, and well nigh the whole Council approved my amendment, and I converted the Doge (et voltai il Serenissimo), who was opposed to me, the whole Council listening attentively. And after I had finished speaking about the mode and form as noted above, the entire Council rejected the mandate, and the sages amongst themselves knew not what to do, but at length ordered the mandate in my fashion, persuading the King of England to join the league, and that should the other ambassadors of the allies have a similar power, Spinelli was to make use of it, and not otherwise. This was as it should be. The letter and the mandate were then balloted for, the Council cancelling the word 'pray.' It was then read in the proper form. The entire Senate voted for it."

Ayes, 179. Noes, 4. Neutrals, 6.

[Italian.]

June 8.

Senato Terra,
v. xxiv. p. 89.1310. MOTION in the SENATE.

Put to the ballot,—that D. Francesco Casale be accepted and taken into our pay with 60 light horse, and with a personal stipend of 30 ducats "per paga."

Ayes, 180. Noes, 10. Neutrals, 0.

Copy sent to the Proveditors-General.

[Italian, 16 lines.]

1526.

June 8.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta.
v. li. p. 30,
tergo.

1311. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England.*

Have immediately elected an ambassador in lieu of the deceased Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and Knight, and will despatch him shortly. To announce this to the King and Cardinal.

The league has been stipulated in France between the most Christian King, the Papal Nuncio, and the Signory's secretary, wherein an honorable place is reserved for the King of England. The State is convinced that the chief causes of this conclusion have been the sage suggestions and counsels of the King and Cardinal, as imparted to the Signory by his Majesty's ambassador resident with them.

To congratulate the King and Cardinal on the aforesaid conclusion, and do his utmost to persuade them that for the greater solidity of the league the King should join it as soon as possible. The State does not fail using every exertion with the Pope to succour the castle of Milan, which is in very great want of provisions. To inform them that the articles of the league having been ratified and transmitted by the Pope to France, the Signory has done the like today (8th June), and sent the same to the Secretary Rosso. Should the King wish the ratification to be made formally in England, have sent a revised mandate to give, if necessary, the Signory's assent. In order that, until the arrival of the ambassador, he (Spinelli) may support himself, have assigned him 50 golden ducats per month for his expenses, of which he is not bound to render any account to the Signory. Is to keep four servants and four horses, including the one for himself; the said servants to be selected from the deceased ambassador's household, whose arrears of wages are to be acquitted, up to the receipt of this present letter, with the said ambassador's moneys. Such persons of his household as were taken by the ambassador from Venice, and choose to return, are to receive from the secretary for the cost of their journey 10 crowns each. The four horses to be kept by the secretary, he is to select from those of the ambassador, and notify their cost to the Signory, that it may be paid in Venice to the ambassador's representatives, whose orders concerning the rest of the horses are to be obeyed by him. Not receiving any, he is to deliver the horses to such of the household as return to Venice, with orders to consign them to the representatives aforesaid.

To attend to whatever concerns the profit and advantage of the State; and to transmit frequent and speedy advices.

[Italian.]

June 8.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta.
v. li. p. 31,
tergo.

1312. POWER transmitted to GASPARO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England.

Andrea Gritti, Doge, and the Senate of Venice, &c. On the 22nd May an alliance was stipulated between the Pope Clement VII., the most Christian King of the French, the Doge and Signory, and the Prince Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan.

* Spinelli is the "Secretary of Venice" to whom allusion is made in Wolsey's letter to Henry VIII. dated 10th July 1526. (See State Papers, vol. i. pp. 135, 162.)

1526.

In that alliance an honorable place was reserved for Henry VIII., King of England, as principal confederate, and as its protector and defender. Knowing the prudence and fidelity of their secretary, Gasparo Spinelli, resident with the King of England, the Signory hereby appoint him their legitimate representative, procurator, and mandatary, to confirm, approve, and ratify the aforesaid agreement and league in such valid form as shall seem fitting to him, promising to observe the said ratification. These presents to be sealed with the Doge's leaden seal, and to be signed in his own hand.

Dated on the day above written. The Doge's signature to be given in these words:—

Andreas Gritti, Dux, manu propria.

[Original draft, Latin.]

June 8.

1313. CARLO CONTARINI to the SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 474.

The Elector of Treves made his entry into this place in armour, with 100 men-at-arms, as if going to war. The Archbishop of Cologne arrived today. The diet is to be held here. Reported that 6,000 foot and 2,000 horse, commanded by the Duke of Saxony, the Landgrave of Hesse, and ———, had mustered to favour Luther's affairs.

Spires, 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 18th June.

[Italian.]

June 8.

1314. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 7.

The Papal Nuncio has received letters from Rome, with the mandate from his Holiness. When a similar document from the Signory arrives the Cardinal will proceed.

On delivery of the Signory's letters, requested audience of the Cardinal, 25 days having elapsed since the death of the ambassador. The Cardinal sent word that he was willing to see him. Is therefore to have audience tomorrow of his right rev. Lordship, but will say nothing about the mandate sent to the deceased ambassador.

It is understood the Imperial ambassador has been to the King and Cardinal with very conciliatory letters (lettere molto humane) from the Emperor, so that the Cardinal is somewhat soothed, and says that for the present year they cannot send forces (non si potria mandar armada), even were the King to join the league.

Dom. Giovanni Gioachino has provided 40,000 ducats,* the annual amount of pension due from the most Christian King.

London, 8th June. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd July.

[Italian.]

June 13.

1315. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 66.

M. de la Morette, the French ambassador, arrived, and had audience of the King and Cardinal on the Informed by the Papal Nuncio that La Morette urged the King and Cardinal to join the league, and thereupon they asked to see the articles, which La Morette said he had not got; so he was answered that the reply should be given after their perusal. That evening a courier brought the articles, which La Morette sent to Cardinal Wolsey, who after reading them said that some of them required addition and modification (castigation), especially with regard to the clauses relating to the King of England, as the allies must promise his Majesty not to make any agreement with the Emperor until he shall have paid his debt to the King. He also wishes that the lands (stato) which are to yield him 30,000 ducats annually should be situated in the duchy of Milan, and not in the kingdom of Naples, giving it to be understood he would like Crema. La Morette told him that the cost of its custody would exceed the revenue. The King and Cardinal wish therefore for the arrival of the mandates in order to resettle the said clauses, and will then join the league, and render assistance.

* In the original, "ha fatto provision di ducati 40 milla," etc.

1526.

Sir Thomas Cheyne, late ambassador in France* to conclude the league, greatly eulogizes the Signory's secretary, Rosso, and Dom. Capino.

London, 13th June. Registered by Sanuto, 11th July.

[Italian.]

June 14.

1316. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 66.

Dined today with Mons. de la Morette, who is returning to France, having received a letter from the [French] King, desiring him to accompany the troops which his most Christian Majesty is sending into Italy. La Morette told him that when the King and Cardinal read the articles, they were much pleased to find that three months' time had been left for the King's inclusion in the league.

London, 14th June. Registered by Sanuto, 11th July.

[Italian.]

June 14.

1317. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

On the 9th the Imperial ambassador presented letters from Don Ugo de Moncada, dated Milan, the 6th instant, and added that the Emperor, having sent Don Ugo into Italy with full power and commission, the Signory should send power to their ambassador there to that effect.

The Imperial ambassador also said that as the Emperor's military commanders at Milan were assured that the Signory was mustering troops, the State was to declare in what manner they, the Imperialists, were to treat them.

To these demands, after having called into the College the Papal Legate, the Bishop of Bayeux, his most Christian Majesty's ambassador, and the English and Milanese ambassadors—acquainting them with everything—the Signory on the day before yesterday replied as by the enclosed copy, which they send, that he may be able to give a true account of what took place.

* See "State Papers," vol. vi. pp. 528, 536, 542. At p. 528 Tayler, in a letter to Wolsey, styles Sir Thomas Cheyne "a gentylman of hys [Majesty's] Secrete Chambyr."

1526

The danger of losing the castle of Milan increasing daily from want of provisions, they have, with the Pope, been long arranging to relieve it. On the 12th instant the Signory's Captain General and the Proveditor General took the field with upwards of 900 men-at-arms, 800 light horse, and 10,000 foot (besides the garrisons of the Venetian cities), with a train of artillery. Will also have a good band of Switzers. The Pope and the Signory spare neither cost nor anything else, considering that by virtue of the treaty they will be assisted both by the most Christian King and also by his Majesty of England. Of this are the more convinced, having heard from their Secretary Rosso, in date of the 3rd instant, that the most Christian King had assured him the King of England had determined to join the league, and was about to send two ambassadors extraordinary with a herald to the Emperor, to demand that he release his most Christian Majesty's sons on payment of a fair ransom, that he allow Italy to remain tranquil and quiet, and do not proceed thither for his coronation, save with such a number of troops as could cause no suspicion, but receive the crown in Spain; the King of England consenting to receive the debt due to him from the Emperor in such territories as suited his Imperial Majesty. Should these demands be refused by procrastination, the ambassadors were to declare war against the Emperor.

The most Christian King told the secretary that if the Signory's ambassador at the Emperor's court were invited to assist at this demand, with the Legate and the French and English ambassadors, he was to do so. Wrote therefore to him accordingly. To mention this to the King and Cardinal, beseeching them that his Majesty be pleased to join the league as soon as possible and render speedy assistance, and thus urge on the most Christian King, who has collected his contingent according to the treaty, and who only awaits the ratification by the Pope and the Signory.

It pleased them much to hear from Secretary Rosso that Sir Thomas Cheyney, late his Majesty's ambassador in France, and now returned to England, did good service with the most Christian King for the benefit of Italy, and especially of the Signory. To return suitable thanks on this account to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

June 15.

1318. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 530-
531.

Has been told that the Signory wrote to the Venetian ambassador in England to urge the King to send ambassadors to the Emperor to demand the release of the French Princes, and that the Pope should do the like (e così fassi il Papa).

[Angoulême], 15th June. Registered by Sanuto, 25th June.

[Italian.]

June 16.

1319. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 547-
548.

In the past night the Secretary Comaere (sic)* who went with the Viceroy's envoy to Spain to persuade the Emperor to make the

* "A secretary called Comacler" is mentioned in "State Papers," vi. 590.

1526.

general peace, and to negotiate an agreement with his most Christian Majesty, returned. The Emperor replied he would make no other agreement than the one already made by him; and should the King of France wish for war, he would do the like. The most Christian King is therefore anxious to receive the ratification of the league by the Pope and the Signory, and will publish it in the presence of the Viceroy; he also wishes letters to be sent to England persuading the King to join the league. The most Christian King moreover said that the Emperor purposes passing into Italy for his coronation; so the King wishes to know, first, whether if the Viceroy insists on passing into Italy, the King can forbid his doing so, after having given him a safeconduct; secondly, whether he should prevent the Imperialists from passing to and fro between France and Italy, or not. The Papal envoy answered Robertet on behalf of the league, thanking the most Christian King for the announcement. He approved of writing to England to beseech the King to join the league speedily, and requested that passage into Italy might by all means be denied both to the Viceroy and to the other Imperialists. The Chancellor said he would speak to the King, and see that thus it be done.

Angoulême, 16th June. Registered by Sanuto, 26th June.

[Italian.]

June 17.

1320. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 548.

The Chancellor, having spoken to the King, told them (Chiapin and Rosso) that his Majesty was satisfied with what was said yesterday, and orders have been already given for letters to be sent to the passes, purporting that henceforth no one is to be allowed to pass. Should the Viceroy demand passage through Italy it will be denied him; and on the arrival of the ratification, the league will be published in his presence. The King will then go to Blois and Paris. He has written to England, requesting the King to send to the Emperor to demand the release of his (the French King's) sons, and to require him (the Emperor) to make a fair agreement; protesting that otherwise he (the King of England) will declare war. The most Christian King prayed them (Chiapin and Rosso) to write to England. Wrote to the Secretary Spinelli.

Angoulême, 17th June. Registered by Sanuto, 26th June.

[Italian.]

June 19.

1321. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 570,
571.

Told by the Chancellor that the league would be published solemnly on Thursday the 21st instant, and that they intended to speak to the English ambassador about the nomination of his King, who has not yet joined the league. Letters from England announced that Mons. de la Morette was expected there.

Angoulême, 19th June. Registered by Sanuto, 29th June.

[Italian.]

June 21.

1322. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. pp. 571,
572.

This morning Mons. de Lautrec, Mons. de Vendôme, and the Marquis of Saluzzo conducted Dom. Chiapino and him (Secretary Rosso) to the King's chamber. His Majesty came forth between 1526.

two Cardinals, followed by them (Chiapino and Rosso) and by the English ambassador [Dr. Tayler].* His Majesty then went to the Church of St. Dominick, which had been most excellently prepared with hangings of cloth of gold, &c. After high mass, Dom. Ambrosio da Fiorenza, late ambassador to the Signory, delivered a Latin oration in praise of this league, commending the English King extremely, as its conservator, an honorable place having been left for him to join it. The league was then proclaimed with a great flourish of trumpets there, and also in various parts of the town, and before the dwelling of the Viceroy, who, together with his companions, is much disheartened.

Angoulême, 21st June. Registered by Sanuto, 29th June.

[Italian.]

June 21.

1323. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Commemoriale,
v. xxi. p. 27.

Letters patent by Francis I., King of the French, stating that the Pope has sent to his Nuncios at the French court a brief containing the names of those whom he wishes to be comprised in this treaty on his behalf, thus:—

“With regard to adherents (exteros), our very dear sons in Christ Henry King of England, whom, as we bear him all affection, we wish to be a party to this most honorable alliance, as becoming so great a Prince, most lovingly inclined towards us and this Holy See, and the Defender of the Faith; and we charge you to take especial care of this.”

Angoulême, 21st June 1526.

Signed: François.

Countersigned: Robertet.

[Contemporary transcript, Latin, 55 lines.]

June 23.

1324. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 64.

Today he and the Papal ambassadors [Acciajoli and Chiapino] were sent for by the King in Council. On arriving there the Lord Chancellor told them there were letters from England from Mons. de la Morette, who had been sent to persuade the King to join the league and declare himself against the Emperor. At his first audience the King and Cardinal congratulated themselves on the conclusion of the league, but with regard to joining it they require the modification of certain clauses concerning his Majesty. Cardinal Wolsey said, “My King demands but a trifle from the Milanese, namely, the county of Asti, and the 50,000 ducats annually from the Duke;” adding that for the liberty of Italy the King contented himself with little, and that should they join the league, they wished for the insertion of an article forbidding any adjustment with the Emperor until payment of the money due from him to the King of England, who demands two millions of gold. This would render the war interminable, and Dom. Giovanni Gioachino says the credits (i liquidì) amount but to 280,000 ducats, the rest being for old debts. The most Christian King considers the demand for the 280,000 ducats fair, but requires the items to be specified.

* In “State Papers,” vol. vi. p. 536, it is seen that Tayler’s colleague, Sir Thomas Cheney, had been recalled before the Court quitted Cognac.

1526.

The King of England also wishes the 30,000 ducats annual revenue to be assigned to him in the Milanese instead of in the kingdom of Naples, and to have a title of Duchy or Principality (un titolo di Ducato o Principato); and in like manner that the 10,000 ducats for Cardinal Wolsey be also derived from the Milanese. They require a promise to this effect from the Pope and from the Signory, to each of whom they wish the most Christian King to write accordingly, as these terms can be easily granted. They also say that as the English ambassador on his way to Spain to demand the release of the most Christian King's sons will shortly arrive in France, therefore the Pope should instruct his Legate in Spain to act in concert with the English ambassador, the Signory giving similar instructions to the Venetian ambassador there. The French ministry said that they would write word to this effect.

Angoulême, 23rd June. Registered by Sanuto, 9th July.

[Italian.]

June 23.

1325. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Senato Terra,
v. xxiv. p. 90.

Report made by the State Attorney, and certificate by the physician Lunardo Butiro, that the malady of the noble Francesco Contarini renders it impossible for him to perform the embassy assigned him.

Put to the ballot, that the excuse of our said noble Francesco Contarini on the plea of personal ill health be accepted.

Ayes,	145	} Not carried, a majority of three-fourths being required.
Noes,	73
Neutrals,	3

Re-balloted:—

Ayes,	150	}
Noes,	69
Neutrals,	2

Certificate of Butiro on the file.

[Italian, 11 lines.]

June 23.

1326. CASAL'S NEGOTIATIONS.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 511.

The English ambassador, Prothonotary Casal, showed the Doge a very long letter from his brother Sir Gregory Casal, dated Rome, 19th June.

It was read in the Senate, and details the statement made by Don Ugo de Moncada to the Pope. Sir Gregory urges the Signory to send an ambassador to England with a mandate to make the league, as his King and Cardinal Wolsey have been the cause of its stipulation with France.

[Italian.]

June 24.

1327. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

To go to the Cardinal, thank him for his excellent offices, and assure him that they acknowledge the league to be the work of his hands, and worthy of his great ability, counsel, and wisdom. To beseech him to contrive that with all possible speed the King do 1526.

join the league as a principal contracting party, because although the Pope and the Republic are now doing their utmost, not merely in fulfilling the articles of the confederacy, but in furnishing double the amount to which they were bound, yet to secure victory they require the favour and assistance of his Majesty, and also of the most Christian King.

To request the Cardinal not to fail urging the most Christian King to speed these supplies.

The Papal army is at Piacenza, having thrown a bridge over the Po, to join the Signory's forces, which have pushed forward towards the Adda, numbering 900 light horse, 1,000 men-at-arms, and 10,000 picked infantry, besides 5,000 in garrison in the Venetian cities. At the joint cost of the Pope and the Signory from six to seven thousand Switzers have been subsidized. Although they have hitherto hesitated to come, suspecting that the Bishop of Lodi, who was charged to bring them, did not intend that they should serve the aforesaid league, yet they have now determined to advance. If therefore the junction of the Signory's army with that of the Pope and the Switzers be soon effected, the relief of the castle of Milan will be attempted in such form as to warrant hope of success.

Have elected as their proveditor at sea the noble Alvise Darmer, who will be charged to further the interests of the league in the west. He will depart hence for Corfu in two or three days, to levy 12 galleys besides his own, and then proceed on his destined course westward.

The Imperialists mustered at Milan on the 18th. The inhabitants, on hearing of the new league, moved by love of the Duke, and to free themselves from tyranny, rose against the Imperialists. After two days' fighting the people were worsted, and many cut to pieces, not without loss to the Imperialists. The popular leader, D. Pietro Pusterla, having capitulated, quitted Milan; and those who remained were sacked, but on fair terms (patisceno uno honesto sacho). The Archduke [Ferdinand] has ordered the Lansquenets to join the Imperial army, and to attack the Venetian places on his frontiers, in order to divide the Venetian army. These places have sufficient garrisons, and the Signory will endeavour to prevent the passage of the Lansquenets either through the Venetian territory or by way of the Grisons.

Had appointed an ambassador to England, but he has been seized with a troublesome malady, and is not in a state to depart. Will wait a few days to see whether he recovers, and if not, will elect another.

Have heard that on the 17th instant the army of the peasants in Germany again routed the nobles, killing 4,000 of the latter, amongst whom is said to be D. George Freundsberg, who has not been found.

[Italian.]

June 25.

1328. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Deliberazioni
Senato
(Secreta),
v. li. p. 37.

Motion made in the Senate for the immediate despatch of an ambassador to the King of England.

Put to the ballot, that an honorable ambassador to the King of England be elected, to incur a penalty of 500 ducats for refusal, besides all other penalties against recusants. To receive 140 golden ducats per month for his expenses, &c.

1526.

To depart within 20 days.

Ayes, 170. Noes, 52. Neutrals, 0.

June 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 524.

1329. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for the appointment forthwith of an ambassador to England.

Note by Sanuto :—"It would, however, have been better that one of the two ambassadors destined for France, namely, the one who is to return, should have gone on to England; but I did not choose to speak, though I should have found many of my opinion."

[Italian.]

June 25.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xli. p. 525.

1330. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Scrutiny for an ambassador to England, in lieu of Ser Francesco Contarini, who could not accept on account of ill health :—

	Ayes.	Noes.
Ser Hironimo Polani, LL.D., and member of the Junta - - - - -	83	145
Ser Alvise Valaresso, member of the Senate - - - - -	68	167
Ser Giacomo Semitecolo, late treasurer - - - - -	41	186
Ser Alvise Bon, LL.D., late State attorney - - - - -	115	108
Ser Zuan Dolfin, late State attorney - - - - -	15	216
Ser Gabriel Venier, late State attorney - - - - -	87	138
Ser Andrea Loredan - - - - -	35	194
Ser Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., State attorney - - - - -	141	84
Ser Orio Venier, late one of the ten sages - - - - -	81	144
Ser Christofal Capello, late of the Senate - - - - -	54	170
Ser Marco Antonio Contarini, late State attorney - - - - -	105	115
Ser Hironimo Querini, late of the Senate - - - - -	79	144
Ser Lodovico Falier, late a member of the X. offices - - - - -	97	130
Ser Antonio Surian, LL.D., and Knight, sage for the mainland - - - - -	57	172
Ser Marco Foscari, late ambassador to the Pope - - - - -	50	175
Ser Zuan Alvise Navaier, late sage for the mainland - - - - -	120	100

Thereupon the aforesaid Marco Antonio Venier, being called before the Doge, seemed inclined to excuse himself, but at length consented to go willingly.

[Italian.]

June 26.

Comuni
Consiglio X.,
v. ii. p. 35.

1331. VENETIAN SECRETARY in ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta, for payment by the Council's Treasurer of 100 broad golden ducats to Gasparo Spinelli, secretary in England, for two months' salary at the rate of 50 golden ducats per month, so that he may have the means of 1526.

remaining in England until the arrival of the Signory's ambassador, as decreed in the Senate.

Ayes, 27. . No, 1. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

June 27.

Lettere del
Collegio,
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1332. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England.

To repeat their requests to the King and Cardinal, for his Majesty's entry into the league. To assure the King and Cardinal that his Holiness and the Signory persevere in their opinion, in proof of which, on the 24th instant at daybreak, the Venetian captain general attacked Lodi, and took it after giving battle to the garrison, 1,500 strong. Next day he captured the castle, which the Marquis del Guasto attempted to succour with a strong body of troops, who were repulsed and pursued to within 10 miles of Milan, many of the enemy being killed or captured. The gain of this city is most important, especially by reason of its position. Yesterday the Papal army was to cross the Po to join theirs, from which junction they anticipate the best results, with the assistance of his Majesty by his speedy entry into the league, and by the contribution of the effective aid which he has so often promised. As the Archduke is preparing to invade their territory, it behoves them, in addition to the great expense caused by their army, to provide their towns with garrisons of horse and foot; so it will be impossible to continue without assistance.

The Imperialists have concentrated their forces in Milan and Parma, which places they intend to fortify. Will acquaint him with what takes place, that he may communicate it to the King and Cardinal. The ambassador appointed continuing indisposed, have elected in his stead the nobleman Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., who will depart immediately.

[Italian.]

June 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 15.

1333. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Went to the Pope before he robed for celebration of the mass, and read to him the letters announcing the capture of Lodi. It pleased him, and he said he would do everything, but that the allies must act speedily.

He then performed mass in chapel very devoutly, and on coming forth there stood the hackney, which the Duke of Sessa presented as tribute [from the Emperor] for the kingdom of Naples. As the usual 1,000 ducats were not forthcoming, the Pope said he accepted it in part payment. The Duke, with a notary, then gave his Holiness a certificate declaring his inability to obtain the money by reason of the current events.

After the mass the Duke of Sessa, in the presence of the Cardinals, asked leave of the Pope to depart, which was granted.

He (the Venetian ambassador) then had audience, and the Pope spoke to him about the letters received with regard to publishing the league, as the ratification by the Signory had reached France, and that touching the King of England it would be well to ponder the mode in which mention should be made of him. His Holiness then said that he had letters from Guicciardini, announcing the good order in which the Venetian troops were, and that the armies had taken the field together. The Pope observed that everything would proceed well, provided Milan castle were succoured, and he wished the army to be reinforced by Italian infantry rather than by Switzers, perceiving that this is also the opinion of the Signory, with whom he said he would write to Guicciardini to act in perfect concert.

1526.

The Pope added he understood the Signory had taken into their pay the brother of Sir Gregory Casal, the English ambassador at Rome, and of the Prothonotary at Venice. He praised him for being a man of great courage, and said he was the person who saved the army when the Imperialists quitted Marseilles, by getting possession of Ventimiglia. He then said that bills of exchange for 100,000 ducats had arrived at Genoa from Spain, so that for whatever mart they may be destined, steps must be taken to prevent their proceeds from being sent out of Rome, or sold; and that he will have all bales and packages searched; and that the like must be done at Venice.

Rome, 29th June. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd July.

[Italian.]

June 30.
Sanuto Diaries.
v. xlii. p. 78.

1334. ANDREA FRANCESCHI (ROSSO?), Venetian Secretary in France, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

His Majesty sent for him and for the Papal ambassadors, Acciajoli and Chiapino, and told them he had received letters from England to the effect that the King will join the league.

Told by Robertet that in four days the King of France will quit Angoulême for Tours and then proceed to Paris, to be nearer at hand, because the King of England wishes to speak to him. As the most Christian King is desirous that England should declare against the Emperor, the conference will take place.

Angoulême, 30th June. Registered by Sanuto, 13th July.

[Italian.]

June 30.
Deliberazioni
Senato (Secreta),
v. li. p. 57.

1335. The DOGE and SIGNORY to ANDREA NAVAGERO, Ambassador with the Emperor.

Yesterday received letters from their secretary in England, dated the 29th ultimo. Learn that the Papal Nuncio had been with Cardinal Wolsey, who said the King had determined to send an ambassador to the Emperor, to propose that he should desist from the attack on the Milanese and on Italy, and release the sons of the most Christian King. Should his Imperial Majesty decline the proposal, it was to be intimated to him that the King would immediately join the offensive league, and cause the Legate and the French and English ambassadors in Spain to take leave instantly. Should he (Navagero) understand that the Legate and the French and English ambassadors, after making this demand with him, take leave of the Emperor and depart, in that case he is to do the like, and on obtaining a safeconduct to return home.

Ayes, 179. Ndes, 6. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian.]

1526.

July 1.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.1336. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Venetian Secretary in England.

To tell Cardinal Wolsey that the Signory, having heard his right rev. Lordship's intention, have desired the Venetian ambassador with the Emperor, in case the Legate and the English and French ambassadors take leave of him, to do the like.

After the capture of Lodi the Papal army crossed the Po on the 26th, and joined the Signory's army the same day. They have advanced towards Milan. By the last letters the two armies were at Marignano, and purposed approaching yet nearer to Milan, in which city the Imperialists seem to intend fortifying themselves, especially in the direction of the castle. Will let him know what happens, for communication to the King and Cardinal.

Glad to hear of the good offices performed by the Papal Nuncio in London, expressive of the indissoluble union between the Pope and the Signory. To notify to Gambara the Signory's devotion to his Holiness.

[Italian.]

July 1.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 19, 20.1337. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On receiving the Signory's letters with the copy of those from France, and the form of publication of the league, went to the Pope, requesting the ceremony might be performed on Thursday. His Holiness said he would celebrate it on Sunday, as it was not possible to do so before, it being requisite to examine the form, and add a few words without changing the substance, and also to consider in what way the King of England should be mentioned.

The Pope will perform the ceremony pompously, and will have the proclamation printed throughout the Papal towns. Time is also required for the person who will deliver the customary oration concerning the league.

Rome, 1st July. Registered by Sanuto, 4th July.

[Italian.]

July 3.

Senato Mar,
v. xxi. p. 17.1338. DECREE of the SENATE.

As the despatch of the noble Marco Antonio Venier, ambassador elect to the King of England, should not be delayed,—

Put to the ballot, that as subsidy for four months, at the rate of 140 golden ducats per month, the said ambassador do receive in all 560 golden ducats. Also, for the purchase of horses (at the rate of six livres and four "soldi" per ducat) - 150 ducats.

As a gift for the secretary	-	-	30	"
For coverings and trunks	-	-	30	"
For two couriers, 20 ducats each	-	-	40	"

Ayes, 192. Noes, 10. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian, 10 lines.]

July 4.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 198.1339. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Had spoken to the French ambassador [Giovanni Gioachino di Passano], who told him he had treated with the King concerning the mutual obligation for neither party to make agreement with the 1526.

Emperor unless he release the French princes for a ransom of a million of gold, and repay the money lent to him by the King of England. Cardinal Wolsey had given him a schedule of the remodelled clauses, in case the King of England join the league. The Cardinal stating that mandates would be needed to resettle the clauses, and Giovanni Gioachino had arranged many of the necessary corrections in the margin. Went with the Papal Nuncio to Cardinal Wolsey, and advocated the entry of the King into the league. The Cardinal said the King would never join until after communication with the Emperor, and that some of the articles required alteration.

When the Cardinal asked about the mandates, the Nuncio Gambara said he had the one from the Pope, and he (Spinelli) said he had only to assent and to include his Majesty in the league. The Cardinal rejoined, "Enough."

Then went to the French ambassador to acquaint him with what he had told the Cardinal about the mandates, which pleased him much. Will return to Giovanni Gioachino, who uses his best offices. The Bishop of Bath, ambassador to France, is on the point of departure; he is also commissioned to negotiate a marriage between the Princess of England and the most Christian King's second son, now a prisoner in Spain.*

London, 4th July. Registered by Sanuto, 30th July.

[Italian.]

July 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 34.

1340. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made and carried in the Council of Ten and Junta, for the payment of certain moneys, as usual, for the despatch as ambassador to England of Ser Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D.

[Italian.]

July 7.
Parti Comuni,
Consiglio X.,
v. ii. p. 39.

1341. VENETIAN AMBASSADOR in ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Council of Ten and Junta no longer to delay the despatch of Marc' Antonio Venier, LL.D., ambassador intended for the King of England.

Put to the ballot, that the treasurer of the Council, from the moneys of the limitation fund appointed for the ambassadors, do give said ambassador as subsidy for four months, at the rate of 140 golden ducats† per month, in all - 560 golden ducats.

Also, at the rate of 6 livres and 4 soldi per ducat—

For the purchase of horses	-	-	150	„
As a gift for the secretary	-	-	30	„
For coverings and trunks	-	-	30	„
For two couriers, at the rate of 20 ducats each	-	-	40	„

On the expiration of three months after his departure, viz., at the commencement of the fourth month, the said treasurer and his successors to pay from the aforesaid fund to the ambassador's

* Concerning this mission of John Clerk, Bishop of Bath, see "State Papers," vol. i. p. 168, letter from Wolsey to the King, dated Westminster, 19th July 1526; and vol. vi. p. 542.

† The golden ducat in the year 1526 was worth 7 livres and 4 soldi.—See Galliccioli, vol. i. p. 376 agents in Venice 140 golden ducats monthly, so that he may always have one month's salary in advance, provided no loss be thus incurred by the Signory on account of exchanges.

1526.

To defray his costs for couriers, should he need boats, escorts, and guides, to give him for that purpose 200 golden ducats, of which he be bound to give particular account, and should he require more, to give advice here, that such provision may be made as expedient.

Ayes, 26. No, 1. Neutral, 1.

Order made out for the treasurer of the Council and his successors.

[Italian.]

July 7.

1342. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 180,
181.

The King has received letters from the King of England, who had modified certain articles of the league. The most Christian King said:—"To this we would consent, provided once for all he declare himself against the Emperor, and that, without sending other ambassadors, he write to his present ambassador in Spain, to propose that his Imperial Majesty do release the French princes."

Ruport (sic), 7th July. Registered by Sanuto, 27th July.

[Italian.]

July 8.

1343. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 42, 56.

Religious ceremonies performed in Venice for the publication of the league on Sunday, the 8th of July 1526. Sumptuous decoration of St. Mark's Church; attendance there of the Dôge, with the Papal Legate, the French ambassador, the Bishop of Bayeux, the English ambassador, Prothonotary Casal, the Milanese ambassador Taverna, the Ferrarese ambassador Jacopo Thebaldo, and the Mantuan ambassador Giovanni Battista de' Malatesti.

Procession round St. Mark's square, and pageants exhibited by the religious confraternities.

The "Scuola della Misericordia" displayed 28 angels, bearing the arms of the powers forming the league—the Pope, France, England, and the Doge.

The "Scuola della Carità" sent forth five footmen (fanti) representing the patron saints of the confederates, followed by their attendants. There was St. Ambrose, signifying Milan, and the Duke behind him; St. Mark, representing Venice, followed by the Doge with the ducal bonnet on his head; St. George in armour, with the King behind him, was symbolical of England. These pageants made a very fine show. Then came one in the garb of a prophet, with a scroll in his hand, inscribed with the words,— "Si Deus pro nobis quis contra nos?" and he was followed by a Saul, with another motto.

The "Scuola" of St. Rocco sent forth 13 prophets on foot, with as many admirable legends (ditti) relating to the league. Amongst them was Joshua, with the Doge's arms and the motto,— "Propter hoc lætatum est cor meum."

The motto of Milan was,— "Omnia quaecumque voluit Dominus fecit." 1526.

St. Mark's motto was,—

“ A Domino factum est istud.”

That of England,—

“ Domine, in virtute tua lætabitur Rex.”

France bore,—

“ Misericordias Domini in æterno cantabo.”

The Pope's motto was,— “ Confirma hoc Deus quod operatus est in nobis.”

There was also a stage, with Noah sacrificing to God in praise of peace, when delivered from the deluge, with the dove and the olive branch in its beak, and the motto,—

“ Hoc est signum fœderis.”

The Carmelite friars had two stages, on one of which were the confederates, the Pope, the King of France, the King of England, the Doge of Venice, and the Duke of Milan; and all stood worshipping an image of the Virgin in Carmelite array, namely, a large open mantle, under which to receive them all.

The friars of St. Stephen's (Austin's) represented, on a stage, a damsel on foot with the globe (mondo) in one hand, and in the other a wheel, which she turned with her right hand, representing Fortune.

Another stage bore the Pope, with a mantle of cloth of gold and a handsome papal mitre, the Kings of France and England, the Doge with the ducal cap, and the Duke of Milan. Before the Pope, and in front, stood Italy despoiled, and the lion came and freed her.

A third stage carried the Father Eternal, with a live dove over his head, bearing the Imperial crown aloft, in the act of crowning him.

The friars of St. Francis appeared with their novices apparelled (vestiti) with four silver baskets in their hands, as usual, containing flowers, and inscribed with many apposite legends, amongst which, on one of the baskets, was the following,— “ Pecuniæ omnia obediunt.”

The friars of Sts. John and Paul represented the Pope on foot in a rochet, followed by the Kings of France and England, all preceded by their servants. Then came the Doge, with the ducal cap on his head, in armour, the image of our most serene prince, with a beard and gilt cuirass; the Duke of Milan following, also in armour.

St. Mark's “Scuola” had a stage with a ship, at whose helm was St. Mark, and behind St. Mark was the serpent, the Duke of Milan's crest. On the sail were the arms of the Pope and of the Kings of England and France, which filled the sail. The ship was empty, and nearly capsized in coming down from the choir, but was kept back. To speak more correctly, the sail was the Pope; the body of the ship, the King of France; the mast, the King of England.

St. John's “Scuola” had stages with two mountains in silver, behind each of which was an old woman. On the summit of one of the mountains was a legend, thus, “Venetia plena divitiis;” and on the other, “Hic Venetiis aurum et argentum.” 1526.

Then three horses were carried, their riders being the following three colleagues :—

On one the Duke of Milan, preceded by a number of running footmen clad in silk and brocade.

On another the King of England, with his Englishmen on foot in advance.

On the third was the King of France, in like manner preceded by his Frenchmen on foot, all in very costly array.

The inscriptions on the stages of the Minor Friars were as follows :—One stage bore St. Peter, the Pope, and the angel ; St. Peter presenting the pastoral crozier to the Pope, and saying to him,— “Constanter pugna pro ovibus quæ vocem tuam audiunt, ut in pace sine injuria vivant.”

Whereupon the Pope replies,—

“Pastoris nomen mihi amplius non vindico, nisi hos rapaces lupos longius a stabulis propulsavero.”

The angel then shows the Pope the cross, saying,—

“In hoc signo vinces.”

On another stage was St. Denis and the King of France, to whom St. Denis says,— “Triumphandum est tibi ut coronam hanc tuto possideas eja ! Age— rumpe moras—nocuit differre paratis.”

The King of France answers,—

“Deo optimo maximo et tibi gratias, Dionisi, qui me servastis, ne gauderent inimici. En bella maxima bella ordior fugiant a facie gladii.”

Another stage bore St. George and the King of England, whom St. George addressed thus,— “Cum bonis ambula et ceptis, Rex maxime, fave, Res tua nunc agitur—si sapias crede momenti.”

The King replies,—

“Gressus meos dirige in semitam mandatorum tuorum ut non confundar ; dii votis aspirent.”

On another stage was St. Ambrose, saying to his enemies—

“O nimium ausi, fines repetite vestros alias moneo ; Non capit cecos Italia terra viros.”

To which the enemies make answer,—

“Date fugiendi copiam : utinam domesticos liceat vidisse Penates.”

On another stage was St. Mark, addressing the ambassadors of the league thus,— “Quid petitis trepidi ?”

The Milanese ambassador replies,—

“Perpetuum inter Venetos et Principes nostros fœdus sanciri, et rebus Italiae melius consultum sit, et nos omnes in pace sine injuria vivamus.”

St. Mark rejoins,—

“Nil timeatis—consilium, aurum polliceor : sunt omnia salva hæc duce ; primos cupientem gressus sequimini.”

The Cardinal Legate says,— “Si quantum Venetus vigor suos terruit hostes, nec consilium usque aut aurum belli materia deficit ; nunc potis-1526.

simum Sanctum Marcum sperandum nobis est veteranum jam leonem, et se et socios non magis auro, quam sano consilio tutaturum."

A land soldier and a sea soldier talking together say,—

"Terra marique pugnamus, nil præsunt insidiæ."

Then there was a dialogue between Victory and Prudence. There was also Fortitude, but she had no inscription. The inscription of Prudence ran thus,—

*"Dic mihi, virgo potens, geminis quo laberis alis?
Nobile cui donum laureaserta paras?"*

The distich of Victory was as follows:—

"Accipe quæ rogitas; omnes his fœdere junctis Hostibus hæc victis laureaserta ferent."

Then there were the bearers of the baskets filled with silver vessels, and carrying the following inscriptions. The first,—

"Quisquis habet numos securû naviget aurû, Fortunamque suo temperet arbitrio."

The second,—

"Quod vis numis presentibus opta Et veniet; clausum possidet arca Jovem."

The third,—

"Aurum belli materia."

The fourth,—

"Per aurum victoria."

The fifth,—

"Obediunt omnia pecuniæ."

The sixth,—

"Divitiæ se affluent, nolite timere."

After the procession the decorations were removed immediately from every place, including such as were in front of the church, lest they should be injured by the sun.

The only personage in the palace was the cousin of the King of England, by name Reginald Pole. He is studying at Padua, and came hither to the house of the English ambassador to see this pageant, which was a very beautiful one.

[Italian.]

July 8.

1344. THE HOLY LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 56.

Account of rejoicings for the league. The English ambassador [Prothonotary Casal], resident at San Giorgio Maggiore, made an illumination with lamps, and burnt a boat on the canal.

[Italian.]

July 10.

1345. LETTER TO ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 69.

Motion made in the Senate, by the sages of the Council and the sages for the orders, for a reply to the letter from Gasparo Spinelli, secretary in England.

Are content to modify the articles respecting the King of England, and have written to France that his Majesty and Cardinal Wolsey should be urged to join the league, praising the Cardinal greatly. To notify the publication of the league, and the mention of the King of England as its protector. Transmit advices from the camp.

1526.

The motion was carried.

Neutrals, 5.

[Italian.]

July 10.

1346. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 69.

This evening the bells were rung at St. Mark's, and the Legate and the French ambassador burnt bonfires, but the English ambassador did nothing.

[Italian.]

July 10.

1347. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 41,
tergo.

He will perceive what was written to them by their secretary in France concerning the proposals made by Cardinal Wolsey, to the effect that the league be bound not to desist until the Emperor acquit his debt to the King of England.

Are of opinion the King of England's demands should be granted, provided he join the league; and they wish the Pope to use his influence, so that the annual rental of 30,000 ducats guaranteed to the King of England in the kingdom of Naples may be exchanged for the like sum in the duchy of Milan.

Ayes, 196. Noes, 5. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

July 10.

1348. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 48,
tergo.

Have received his letters announcing what the Papal Nuncio said to him about his conference with Cardinal Wolsey concerning the clauses of the new league, which had been sent to him from France. Perceive his right reverend Lordship gave it to be understood that he did not think the clauses contained sufficient guarantee for payment of the Emperor's debt to the King, and therefore, before the entry of his Majesty into the league, it was necessary for the Pope and the Signory to send sufficient powers to England for the better modification of the treaty. Suppose the Cardinal will have made a similar announcement to him. Desire him to say that the State will not fail to do their best to gratify him. As they foresee how much repute and lustre will be added to the league by the accession of a King so great, so powerful, and so magnanimous, together with the most sage counsel and authority of his right reverend Lordship, will, therefore, not cease to exhort the Cardinal to induce the King to join the league as soon as possible. To expatiate hereon, and add that yesterday, after high mass, the league aforesaid was proclaimed.

The Papalists have had important skirmishes with the Imperialists, whom the Signory's forces always repulsed to their disadvantage, so that the Venetians have advanced even to the walls of Milan, where they are quartered; and it is hoped that the undertaking will succeed.

Have received notice that on the 7th instant the Papal and Venetian armies were under Milan and made a vigorous assault.

1526.

They found the Imperialists in great force, determined to resist, having on the preceding day been reinforced with men and money by the Duke of Bourbon. Having raised certain platforms, the Imperialists battered the two armies, doing no slight damage to the infantry. The Signory's captain-general and the other commanders therefore decided upon a retreat, the two armies marching in good order, driving back some Imperial infantry who made a sally, and retiring to Marignano, where they halted for the benefit of the undertaking, to await the French and Swiss troops, which the Signory understands are on the point of entering Italy.

Ayes, 134. Noes, 5. Neutrals, 2.

[Italian.]

July 10.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 240.

1349. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The French ambassador [Giovanni Gioachino di Passano] stipulated with the Cardinal the mutual obligation between England and France to the effect that the one was not to make any agreement with the Emperor without the consent of the other, and that even were the French princes released, France should not come to terms with the Emperor unless he acquitted his debt to the King of England. Giovanni Gioachino told him (Spinelli) that this would be of no detriment to the Italian league, about which it had been his wish to insert certain words, but Cardinal Wolsey refused, saying that he requires 30,000 ducats annual rental for the King and 10,000 for himself, to be derived from the Milanese, and not from the kingdom of Naples.

Today (10 July) having received the Signory's missives of the 14th June, went to the Cardinal, and informed him of the great expense incurred by the Signory for the benefit of Italy, as counselled by the King of England and his right reverend Lordship, wherefore his Majesty should join the league, &c. Cardinal Wolsey replied,—

"The King for his honour cannot join the league, neither ought he to do so.* Our subjects have capital in Spain and elsewhere under the Emperor to the amount of four millions of gold. In the next place, it would be requisite to wage war and cross over to Calais at a cost exceeding 500,000 crowns; and were the King of England to become protector of the league, certain fresh clauses must be inserted, as his Majesty has ties with the Emperor. But on the arrival of the mandates he will negotiate."

The Papal Nuncio, Prothonotary Gambara, having received letters from Rome dated the 10th [June], urging the King to join the league, went also to Cardinal Wolsey, who replied ut supra, and said it was desirable that his Majesty should remain neutral for the present, and that he had already determined to send an ambassador to the Emperor to demand the release of the most Christian King's sons and would now send a gentleman post haste with letters to that effect, as the ambassador would be too long on the road. The Cardinal then said that first of all the articles of the league must be
* resettled, and that his King would be a good medium for negotiating

* "Il Re non pol intrar nè die per suo honor."

1526.

the general peace. When asked by the Papal Nuncio what the King of England would contribute, the Cardinal answered, laughing, "We shall indeed give you nothing," nor would he ever explain himself. He commended the reply made by the Signory to the Imperial ambassador about treating an agreement with Don Hugo de Moncada on his arrival at Milan, and insisted on knowing what assistance the league would give the King of England (he having to be its conservator), should his Majesty attack the Emperor.

The Papal Nuncio spoke subsequently with Cardinal Wolsey apart, expatiating on the interest of the Church, the King of England being "Defender of the Faith," but could never elicit more than has been mentioned above.

London, 10th July. Registered by Sanuto, 7th August.

Note by Sanuto.—That these letters were staler than the others, which came through France.

[Italian.]

July 11.

1350. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 68.

Motion made in the Senate, by the sages of the Council and of the mainland, for a letter to the secretary in France, acquainting with the publication of the league with very great pomp, and giving the Signory's consent to the two clauses concerning the King of England.

A letter was also written to Rome, consenting to the two clauses about the King of England, and to pay one-third of the cost of the 4,000 infantry. His Holiness will therefore write accordingly.

[Italian.]

July 14.

1351. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 240.

Sir Thomas More, his Majesty's secretary, has returned from France with the articles of the "mutual obligation" (mutua obligation); and the ambassador [Giovanni Gioachino?] said he would sign the second draft [of the treaty], which the most Christian King might ratify subsequently, should he think fit.

Returned with the Papal Nuncio to Cardinal Wolsey, and made the same demands as mentioned in the former letter, but his right rev. Lordship limited himself to general expressions, saying that the King insisted on repayment of the money due to him from the Emperor. Inquired the amount, and the Cardinal said, "Upwards of seven millions of gold," though the Nuncio Gambara knows for certain that it does not exceed 280,000. He said further that there was an article in the league to the effect that, with regard to the coming of the Emperor into Italy, the allies should abide by the decision of the Pope and the Signory; and the Cardinal wished the King of England likewise to be mentioned. Rejoined that the Pope and the Signory had been mentioned because they were the most interested in the matter. Cardinal Wolsey disapproved the proposal with regard to endeavouring to include the Duke of Ferrara in the league, and to make him captain-general.

The gentleman who was to go to Spain has not yet departed, still less the Bishop of Bath, ambassador elect to France.

1526.

Nothing will be done. Sends a copy of the mandate demanded from the Signory, and of the articles of the league requiring revision. Considers it desirable to temporize and give fair hopes, lest the King and Cardinal change sides and join the Emperor.

London, 14th July. Registered by Sanuto, 7th August.

[Italian.]

July 15.

Lettere del
Collegio

(Secreta),

File no. 10.

1352. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

To press the King and Cardinal no longer to delay joining the league.

The Papal and Venetian armies are at Marignano, expecting the Switzers. The Pope is more warmly inclined than ever towards the present undertaking, and spares no cost or anything else for its accomplishment. The Signory is acting in like manner. Nothing is wanting save the immediate adhesion to the league of the King of England. To do his utmost to effect this result.

[Italian.]

July 16.

Senato Terra,
v. xxiv. p. 98.

1353. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Put to the ballot, that the noblemen, Sebastian Giustinian, Knight, and Lorenzo Bragadin, ambassadors to the most Christian King, may take with them silver utensils to the amount of 400 ducats each, at the Signory's risk, to be valued as usual by the new accountants' office; and so in like manner with regard to the noble Marc' Antonio Venier, LL.D., ambassador elect to the most Serene King of England.

[Italian, 9 lines.]

July 16.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 102.

1354. EMBASSY TO ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for a "permit" authorizing Ser Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., ambassador on his way to England, to take with him plate (arzenti) to the amount of 400 ducats at the Signory's risk.

Ayes, 157. Noes, 2. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

July 17.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 217.

1355. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Encloses copy of a letter written by the King of England to the Emperor, and other writings for the Signory's inspection.

London, 17th July. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd August.

[Italian.]

July 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 238.

1356. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Told by the Chancellor [Du Prat] that an ambassador from the Emperor [Don Inigo de Mendosa] on his way to England had come to the King [of France]; he is a Spaniard, and fell ill on the way. He was not aware of the conclusion of the league, having quitted the Imperial Court before it took place. He requested a safe-conduct to cross over to England. The King said there was no need for a safeconduct, and that he could go freely, notwithstanding which, orders have been given to stop him on the frontier.*

526.

Chateau, 18th July. Registered by Sanuto, 7th August.
[Italian.]

July 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xx. p. 128.

1357. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Told by the Pope that the castle of Milan is in very great danger, and that the Colonna faction has 7,000 infantry at S. Germano; so a diversion should be made by sending the army into the kingdom of Naples. Tomorrow therefore the Pope purposes despatching the Papal Auditor† post haste to France, and from thence to England, to urge the King to join the league. His Holiness will send him on galley board as far as Marseilles, that he may go quickly.

Rome, 18th July. Registered by Sanuto, 20th July.
[Italian.]

July 19.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1358. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Since their last of the 15th some 150 infantry sallied forth from Milan castle on the night of the 16th, who, having broken through the troops on guard in the trenches which surround the castle, forced a passage for about 500 persons, including themselves, women, pioneers, and lads, well nigh all of them, save a few, prostitutes, got through the trenches, and escaped. Understand that 100 of them have already reached the Venetian camp. The besieged were suffering from great scarcity of food; so, in order to hold out as long as possible, they determined to rid themselves of these supernumeraries, and are most anxiously expecting succour. Part of the 5,000 Switzers have already joined the allied armies, and part will arrive tomorrow or next day. The camp quits Marignano this morning, marching in such wise as to be near Milan on Saturday morning to succour the castle.

The Duke of Bourbon and the other Imperial commanders are in Milan with upwards of 10,000 efficient troops, bent on defence, and insisting constantly on reinforcements of Lansquenets, which, it is said, the Archduke Ferdinand will send them in great numbers from several quarters; and in the event of their coming, the Imperialists, assisted by their forces in Cremona, Pavia, Alexandria, and other places of the Milanese, might take the field with a numerous army.

Repeat their instructions to him to entreat the King and Cardinal most urgently to join the league forthwith.

One thousand five hundred Lansquenets of those who sided with the peasants who were routed by the nobles having appeared on

* In "State Papers" (vol. vi. p. 545, note 3), it seems that when Bishop Clerk remonstrated with the Chancellor of France about this seizure, the answer was, that Mendoza did wrong not to demand a safeconduct.

† Sanga, who is the Nuncio alluded to here, was not "Papal Auditor," that office being filled at this time by Ghinucci.

1526.

the borders of Cadore and Cividale, and requested passage through the Venetian territory on their way to the Valtellina, the Signory granted it, and they are already on the point of taking that road; so, if necessary, the State will be able to make use of them for the present war occurrences.

The ambassador appointed to his Majesty is ready to depart.

[Italian.]

July 20.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 47,
tergo.

1359. VENETIAN EMBASSY TO FRANCE.

Commission from the Doge and Senate to Sebastian Giustinian and Lorenzo Bragadino, Venetian ambassadors on their way to France.

To remind the most Christian King, and urge him to do all he can with the King of England, so that the latter no longer delay joining the confederacy.

[Italian.]

July 21.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 50.

1360. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador at Rome.

Are certain that his most Christian Majesty will come to the undertaking readily, and also approve of the Pope's sending the Nuncio [Sanga]* from France to England to urge the King to join the league.

[Italian.]

July 24.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 53.

1361. The DOGE and SENATE to the Venetian Secretary SABADINO in Switzerland.

To urge the despatch of the safeconducts for the two Venetian ambassadors on their way to the most Christian King, and the other apart for the nobleman Marc' Antonio Venier, LL.D., appointed ambassador to the King of England, and who will depart immediately, as written by them to him (Sabadino) on the 13th inst.

[Italian.]

July 24.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 53,
tergo.

1362. The DOGE and SENATE to ANDREA ROSSO, Venetian Secretary in France.

The Pope orders the Nuncio [Sanga], whom he is sending to the most Christian King, to proceed subsequently to England to urge the King to join the league, and to ascertain what he means to do for the benefit of the undertaking, he having been the first author of the league. To request his most Christian Majesty to do everything in his power to that effect.

[Italian.]

July 24.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 56.

1363. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Having had no letters from him since those dated the 17th and 18th ult., repeat their instructions addressed to him in previous despatches.

* "John Baptista Sanga, a veray honest man, well lernyd," &c. (See Clerk's letter to Wolsey, 12th August 1526, State Papers, vol. i. p. 543.)

1526.

His Majesty's reverend ambassador resident at Venice [Prothonotary Casal] states that his King was not content that the assignment of the 30,000 ducats to be given him by the league in Italy, and likewise the 10,000 ducats for Cardinal Wolsey, should be made in the kingdom of Naples, but would prefer deriving the sum from the duchy of Milan; inquiring therefore the Signory's opinion, and how they purposed to obtain his debt from the Emperor. Cannot give a positive answer, being without advices from England. To declare that the State will be content and inclined to do whatever may prove to the satisfaction, honour, and benefit of his Majesty and his right reverend Lordship, being sure that the rest of their confederates are of the same mind.

The Papal and Venetian armies on the 19th advanced from Marignano to within a mile of Milan. Are advised today that 2,000 Papal and Venetian infantry have taken Monza and stormed the castle, in which were 200 foot soldiers. Although the place is not strong, it is an advantageous position, and detrimental to the Imperialists, who used it as a magazine for great part of the provisions on their way to Milan from the hill of Brianza (dal monte de Brianza).

In the daily skirmishes the Imperialists have always been repulsed with loss by the Signory's forces. There are upwards of 10,000 able-bodied men in Milan preparing for defence, and reinforcements are expected from beyond the Alps.

Ayes, 208. Noes, 2. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

July 25. 1364. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries, Ser Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., having resigned the post of
v. xlii. p. 152. State Attorney, Ser Anzolo Gabriel was elected in his stead.

[Italian.]

July 27. 1365. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries, With regard to the King's going to Lyons, the Chancellor told
v. xlii. p. 273. him this was not the moment for his Majesty so to do, lest he disappoint the King of England, who wishes to speak with him on the French side of the Channel; so he will go first to Paris. He will perform the obsequies of the Queen [Claude] there, and fulfil certain vows.

Amboise, 27th July. Registered by Sanuto, 14th August.

[Italian.]

July 27. 1366. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Sanuto Diaries, The Milanese ambassador came into the College, and showed letters
v. xlii. p. 273. from his Duke with advices from England, in accordance with what was written to the Signory, viz., that the King will not join the league. He demands a revenue of 40,000 ducats in the Milanese between himself and the Cardinal, and wishes to reform the articles of the league.

[Italian.]

1526.

July 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 183.1367. LETTER to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for a letter to the secretary in England, with a copy of the articles of the league, desiring him to urge the King to join. For the secretary's instruction, inform him that Rosso, the secretary in France, writes that the King of England has made some addition to the clauses of the league relating to himself individually, to which the Signory will consent, provided he become a party to the league.

Noes, 2.

[Italian.]

July 28.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 59.

1368. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

The castle of Milan has surrendered. By virtue of the capitulation the Duke and his followers went out of the castle on the 25th, and joined the allied armies, accompanied by the Count of Caiazzo and his company of 200 light horse.

The Duke was met by the Signory's Captain-General and other commanders of the two armies, who accompanied him to his quarters.

The Duke is much dejected on account of his long illness, and of the constant hardships and famine endured by the garrison. The commanders of both armies have dissuaded the Duke from going to Como and performing other acts in accordance with the capitulation, alleging he could ill trust the Imperialists. It seems, nevertheless, that his Excellency is inclined to take possession of Como at once, because he suspects the Imperialists.

Have desired their commanders to promise him the State will do its utmost to re-establish him. Therefore, as their proveditor-general proposed to blockade the Imperialists in Milan, the Signory has approved this opinion. Expect the reinforcement of the men-at-arms from the most Christian King, and that of the Switzers, in four days at the furthest. Solicit the despatch of the others who are to be raised, and likewise the residue of the 40,000 ducats for the first instalment of pay. Desire this the more earnestly because D. Georgio Fronsperg, by order of the Archduke Ferdinand, is mustering a considerable body of Lansquenets near Trent to reinforce the Imperialists.

To communicate this intelligence to the King and Cardinal, requesting them no longer to delay his Majesty's entry into the league.

The Pope has sent a secretary, Zuan Baptista Sanga, to the most Christian King on board one of Doria's galleys to Marseilles, with orders to urge his Majesty to send with speed his men-at-arms and Switzers into Italy. Sanga, after performing this office in France, is to proceed to England to press the King to decide upon entering the league immediately. To watch for his arrival, and treat him in such form as expedient for the benefit of the league. By letters from their secretary in France, dated the 2nd instant, understand advices had been received from England, announcing that the King had resettled the articles of the league in such parts as related to himself. Should the King and Cardinal speak to him on the subject, to assure them that the State will always be well disposed towards whatever may be to his honour and satisfaction, and that such is the desire and intention of all the princes their confederates. Should the King and Cardinal inquire the Signory's opinion, to tell them that there had not been sufficient time to write and receive a reply, the State not having received any notice from him on the subject.

1526.

Departure from Venice of the ambassador Venier.

Ayes, 205. Noes, 2. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

July 28.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

1369. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The Count Palatine has told him so much about the disturbances in Germany and the progress made daily by the Lutherans, that the object of his mission seems rather to ask aid of the Emperor than to give him hope of receiving assistance from Germany.

Granada, 28th July 1526.

[Italian.]

July 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 188.

1370. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Ser Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., ambassador to the King of England, departed yesterday. He will go by way of Bergamo, and then through the Grisons to France.

[Italian.]

July 30.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 279.

1371. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On the receipt of the Signory's letters went to Cardinal Wolsey and urged the King's entry into the league.

The Cardinal said that his Majesty would not join it, and that first of all the eight clauses of the league must be settled.

The Bishop of Bath, the English ambassador appointed to France, is going partly about matters for adjustment between the two Crowns, and partly to negotiate the marriage of the Princess [Mary] to the most Christian King's second son.

The Bishop of Bath told him he would urge the most Christian King to send into Italy the subsidy to which he is bound by the treaty.

To assist Hungary the King of England is sending thither 100,000 ducats. The abbot Don Inico de Mendoza is expected in London from Spain; and letters from the Lady Margaret in Flanders announce the rout of the armies under Milan, the news being contained in letters from the Archduke [Ferdinand] dated 23rd July.

London, 19th, 29th, and 30th July. Registered by Sanuto, 15th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 1.

Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
Filza 1ma.

1372. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

On the arrival of Dom. Gio. Batt. Sanga at the French Court the Pope and the Signory will ascertain the intentions of the 1526.

most Christian King. Although his Majesty is negotiating the release of his sons with the Emperor, the confederates may rest assured he will keep his promise concerning the projected alliance. The most Christian King is united with the King of England, who is sending to France the Bishop of Bath, to conclude the marriage of the English Princess to the French King's second son. Thus the ties between the two crowns, in conjunction with the Pope and the Signory, will repress the Emperor's ambition. By this union between the most Christian King and the King of England, Defender of the Faith, together with the Signory, his Holiness need take no heed for the Lutheran sect, which is opposed to the true faith.

Ayes, 27. Noes, 2. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Aug. 3.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1373. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Nothing new has taken place in Lombardy save that the Duke of Milan went to Como, escorted by the Signory's troops, and desired the Imperialists to evacuate the city. The answer was, he would be well received, but nothing was said about the evacuation of the city. So his Lordship returned to the camp, and went from thence to Lodi, where he now is.

To communicate the whole to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

Aug. 3.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 343.

1374. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

In his last announced the news received from Flanders, and sent a copy of the letter written by the Archduke to the Lady Margaret. Nothing further having appeared, believes the news to be false.

The Abbot Inico de Mendoza is expected to arrive tomorrow. The object of his mission is to negotiate with the King about the Emperor's debt to him, and to confirm the friendship with the house of Burgundy. Is therefore of opinion that the King of England will not join the league. Received news of the capture of Lodi; the Cardinal was much comforted by it, and greatly commends the Signory's Captain-General [Francesco Maria della Rovere, Duke of Urbino]. The Cardinal has departed for Hampton Court, and will subsequently proceed to Oxford, where he is founding a magnificent college (dove fa un bellissimo gymnasio).

London, 3rd August. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 4.
Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
Filza 1ma.

1375. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Cardinal Wolsey says that the Pope and the Signory need not be apprehensive lest the most Christian King, to improve the terms of his children's release, act to the detriment of the league. The Cardinal was sure of this, because the King of England had bound France to confirm the alliance formed between them. To announce this to the Pope.

Ayes, 26. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 3.

[Italian.]

1526.

Aug. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 244.1376. SER MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, LL.D., Ambassador to England, to the SIGNORY.

Is awaiting the safeconduct.

Brescia, 6th August. Registered on the 8th.[Italian.]

Aug. 7.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 359.1377. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On receipt of the Signory's letters announcing the events at Cremona, went to Hampton Court and read them to Cardinal Wolsey, telling him that he (Spinelli) had always said the news from Flanders was untrue, although the Archduke's letter had been sent, because from that quarter they never transmitted the truth. The Cardinal was pleased; but when pressed for the King to join the league, his Lordship said he could not do so at present, in order not to sacrifice the ancient friendship with Burgundy, and his ties of kindred with the Emperor, as also on account of his subjects who have property in Spain, Flanders, and Burgundy; and it would be requisite to await a reply from his ambassadors. He then thanked the Signory for having desired the Venetian ambassador to act in concert with the English ambassadors, and told him in secret that the treaty of mutual obligation had been ratified.

Comes to the conclusion that the King cannot join the league.

London, 7th August. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.[Italian.]

Aug. 9.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 252.1378. EMBASSY to ENGLAND.

Motion made in the Senate for the commission for Ser Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., ambassador on his way to the King of England, in lieu of the late Lorenzo Orio, LL.D. and Knight (appresso quella Maestà et Reverendissimo Cardinal). To go through France, and to make such announcement as due to the most Christian King. To proceed subsequently to England, and urge his Majesty there and the right rev. Cardinal of York to join the league.

Touching the articles of the league relating to his Majesty and the Cardinal, the Signory is willing to do everything.

The ambassador to retain with him Gasparo Spinelli, the secretary in England, and to receive for his own expenses 140 golden ducats per month, he having already received 500 ducats.

Is to keep the Papal and French ambassadors in England well pleased (ben edificato), to give notice of what happens, &c. The present commission to be dated 1st of August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 10.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.1379. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

By letters from their secretary in England dated the 10th ult., are informed that the Cardinal told him, with regard to the King's entry into the league, that his right rev. Lordship wishes the treaty (capitulation) to be revised. He has therefore sent the Signory eight articles for revision. Transmit a copy of the articles and of the form of a mandate given by the Cardinal to the Secretary.

1526.

Replied they would inform the Pope, as the head of the league, that they might be enabled to write to France, and together make some arrangement. Should be glad to learn the opinion of his Holiness in this matter. Are of opinion that the reply should not be delayed, as procrastination might render the King suspicious, which would not be to the purpose.

Ayes, 191. Noes, 19. Neutrals, 5.

[Italian.]

Aug. 11.
Deliberazioni
Senato
(Secreta),
v. li. p. 67.

1380. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Have received his letters enclosing a copy of the articles of the league, to be revised at the suit of the King, together with the form of the powers to be sent by the Pope to his Nuncio in England and by the Signory to their ambassador for the execution of what the King and Cardinal seem to desire. Perceive what the Papal Nuncio said to the Cardinal on the subject, and are glad to learn from his right rev. Lordship's reply that he is disposed to persevere in inducing the King to favour the league.

To tell the King and Cardinal that the State, being most closely allied with the Pope, are bound to conform themselves to his will in everything. Therefore, after reading the mandate, forwarded it to their ambassador at Rome, to communicate it to the Pope and inquire his opinion thereon. Are convinced the Pope will readily comply with the wish of the King and Cardinal; the Signory being of the same mind. On receiving the reply from Rome they, together with the most Christian King, their confederate, will acquaint his Majesty of England with what may be expedient. To urge the King and Cardinal to employ their good offices in favour of the league.

The Lombard armies have not undergone any change, save that the commanders of the Papal and Venetian armies sent Malatesta Baglione, Captain of the Roman infantry, with upwards of 7,000 Venetian foot soldiers, 300 spears, and 900 light horse, to attack Cremona, with hopes of success.

[Italian.]

Aug. 11.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 359.

1381. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Papal ambassador received letters from Rome, desiring him to urge the King to join the league. He went to the Cardinal, who said he required security, first for the 40,000 ducats annual revenue to be given to the King and himself in the Milanese, and then that the articles sent should be revised. Though the Papal ambassador insisted on knowing whether England would join the league, the Cardinal did not say what he required before either attacking Flanders or giving pecuniary subsidy.

The English have notified to France that the King wants their cloths to be sold there, saying this would be the first step towards removing the trade from Flanders.

An ambassador has arrived in London from the Lady Margaret. The Papal ambassador inquired his mission; he replied he was come in lieu of a certain provost [the Provost of Cassel] who was here before, and whom the Lady Margaret had recalled. The new 1526.

ambassador deferred speaking about peace with the Emperor until the coming of the Abbot Mendoza, who has been detained in France while on his way to England.

London, 10th and 11th August. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 11.

1382. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 859.

Arrival at the French Court of the Papal ambassador, Giovanni Battista Sanga, who is proceeding to the King of England. The order to conclude the treaty of mutual obligation has been received from France. The draft of it did not mention the duchy of Milan, and prohibits one party from negotiating an agreement with the Emperor without the other.

The Papal ambassador [Gambara], who acts with him, is going to the Cardinal at Hampton Court, and insisted on his (Spinelli's) accompanying him.

London, 11th August. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 12.

1383. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 342,
343.

Told by the King and the Chancellor that they were expecting Dom. Giovanni Gioachino from England, and that the mandates should be sent to the secretaries [Rosso and Spinelli?] to facilitate the modification of the articles, so that the King of England may join the league. They then said that the English ambassador, the Bishop of Bath, would arrive tomorrow,* and that they should see what he brings.

Amboise, 12th August. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 13.

1384. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 358.

Last evening the Bishop of Bath, ambassador from the King of England, arrived, and made his entry without pomp, because he had not chosen to announce his coming. Today visited him, and apologized for not having gone to meet him. The Bishop said it was his wont to come thus, and he made great offers of service to the Signory, adding that he would urge the King of France to do what he had promised for the league, and that he had been commissioned by the King [of England] to afford the league all favour, and to act in concert with the Papal Nuncio and him (Rosso); making it appear that he had received letters from his King to that effect.

Amboise, 13th August. Registered by Sanuto on the 28th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 15.

1385. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 279.

The Pope told him he was sending the revised articles of the league for stipulation with the King of England; that the power to ratify should be sent to England, as it would be well for

* Concerning this mission of John Clerk, Bishop of Bath, see State Papers, vol. vi., part 5, p. 542.

1526.

the English ambassador at Venice to know nothing about it; and that the articles should be transmitted to France, that the most Christian King may modify them should he think fit.

Rome, 15th August. Registered by Sanuto, 18th August.

[Italian.]

Aug. 16.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 303.

1386. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador to England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Has met the Secretary Sabadin returning from Switzerland, whose account of the inconvenience of travelling with baggage through the Grisons determines him to proceed straight to Vercelli with an escort of 200 infantry.

Bergamo, 16th August. Registered on the 19th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 17.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 458.

1387. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

On receiving the Signory's letters of the 15th and 24th August with the advices, went to Hampton Court to the Cardinal, with whom he found the French ambassador, who had in like manner advocated the King's entry into the league; whereupon the Cardinal replied, "Est modus in rebus, sunt certi denique fines;" and before his Majesty makes the Emperor his enemy, he must await the reply given to the ambassador sent to him, and also the arrival of the mandates and the adjustment of the articles." Could elicit nothing else from his Lordship.

London, 17th August. Registered by Sanuto, 4th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 17.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 458.

1388. The SAME to the SAME.

The French ambassador, having conversed with the King, says he is of opinion his Majesty will do nothing more to benefit the league; unless it be to lend 100,000 ducats on security.

Has received the Signory's letters with the articles [of the surrender] of Milan castle. Is expecting the mandates. The Cardinal says that if they wish the King to wage war on the Emperor, articles must be settled with the King of France.

London, 17th August. Registered by Sanuto, 4th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 18.
Deliberazioni
Senato
(Secreta),
v. li. p. 68, tergo.

1389. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Have seen the declaration made by the Pope concerning the eight articles received from England. Approve it with regard to the fifth article; think it would be well to insist on inserting, that clause, to remove all difficulty. Commend the request to be made to the King and Cardinal about the eighth clause, to the effect that they be content to receive the 400,000 ducats from the kingdom of Naples, as the duchy of Milan will be so much burdened that they know not how it can furnish the amount.

Their secretary in England writes, that with regard to the aforesaid clauses the most Christian King has made a declaration, of which they 1526.

enclose a copy. On hearing his Holiness's opinion, will send mandates in conformity to the secretaries in France and England, with orders to the secretary in France to communicate everything to the most Christian King, requesting his Majesty to keep secret the transmission of the order and mandate, for the reasons alluded to by the Pope; the secretary, with the most Christian King's approval, forwarding the packet to England, so that the honour may rest with the King and Cardinal, according to the most sage suggestion of his Holiness.

With the rev. English ambassador [Prothonotary Casal] resident at Venice will use such reserve and secrecy as recommended.

[Italian.]

Aug. 18.

1390. CLAIM of ENGLAND on the MILANESE.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 297,
298.

Motion made in the Senate, by the sages of the Council and the mainland, for a letter in reply to the Venetian ambassador at Rome.

Have seen the Pope's answer with regard to the articles concerning the King of England. Are of opinion that everything should be done to secure the 40,000 ducats not on the Milanese, but on the kingdom of Naples. Should this be impossible, must do the best they can. The allies to decide unanimously respecting the Emperor's coming into Italy. As for aiding the King of England to recover the money due to him from the Emperor, are content to reimburse the sum which his Majesty will promise to contribute annually.*

Ayes, 150. Noes, 15. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian.]

Aug. 19.

1391. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Deliberazioni
Senato (Secreta)
v. li. p. 70,
tergo.

Power from the Doge Andrea Gritti authorizing Gasparo Spinelli, Venetian secretary, to include Henry King of England in the league between the Pope, Francis King of the French, the Signory of Venice, and Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan. The King of England to be named protector and conservator of the league, and any reformation of the articles concerning his indemnity or annual pension, in case he join it, to be legalized by the present mandate, furnished with the Doge's pendent leaden seal, and signed with his own hand.

Similar power given to the nobleman Marco Antonio Venier, Venetian ambassador on his way to England, and to Andrea Rossi, Venetian secretary in France.

[Original draft. Latin, 101 lines.]

Aug. 19.

1392. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

By his letters of the 19th, 25th, and 30th ultimo are informed of the good offices performed by the Cardinal with the most Christian King by urging him speedily to send his men-at-arms into Italy. To thank the Cardinal as warmly as possible.

* "Semo contenti darle reciproce quello Sua Maestà prometterà dar annui." 1526.

The mandate drawn up by Cardinal Wolsey, and sent to Rome, together with the articles remodelled and added by his right reverend Lordship for the Pope's opinion, having been returned to them approved by his Holiness, have sent the enclosed powers to enable the ambassador or him (Spinelli) to act.

Send him also a copy of the Pope's opinion concerning the articles aforesaid. To insist thereon if necessary. [Warn him, with regard to the eighth clause, concerning the pension of 40,000 crowns on the duchy of Milan, to be assigned to the King and Cardinal, that if ratified he must take care to have it so clearly and explicitly worded that at no period nor under any circumstances may the Signory be molested on this account. The clause to be according to the most Christian King's reply to the corrections made by Cardinal Wolsey. To keep this instruction very secret.]*

To go to the King and Cardinal and tell them, in the Signory's name, that holding in great account their wish for the mandate, and for revision of the clauses of the league, with the additions, the Signory determined to comply; and therefore to beseech them to join the league without delay. To proceed in this matter in concert with the Papal Nuncio, [but to regulate his conduct according to the instructions of the Signory's secretary in France, with the approval of his most Christian Majesty, who will already have been acquainted with the opinion of the Pope and of the Signory concerning this matter. To keep this a profound secret, lest it reach the ears of the King and Cardinal, to whom it would be disagreeable by reason of their extreme desire to have everything submitted to them (per il summo desiderio hanno ch'el tutto si deferisca a loro, intendendolo li saria ingrato, et perhò ti dicemo ad tenerlo secreto)].

On the 15th instant the Signory's forces made an attack on Cremona, which failed. The Proveditor-General Pesaro has marched thither with 2,000 infantry to obtain the desired effect.

The Marquis of Saluzzo writes that the French men-at-arms were advancing, and on joining the 4,000 in readiness with him, will march upon Milan. The Venetian army is under Milan, having been reinforced by upwards of 6,000 Switzers, who came down lately in the name of the most Christian King.

Transmit, moreover, copies of newsletters from Hungary, which, together with the intelligence aforesaid, he is to communicate to the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

Aug. 21.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 438.

1393. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Has been with the newly arrived Papal ambassador, Dom. Giovanni Battista Sanga, to Cardinal Wolsey at and urged the entry of the King of England into the league. His Lordship said his Majesty did not think fit to do so at present, as it would be contrary to duty and injurious to his subjects, although the King was excellently disposed towards the affairs of Italy; and that first of all the powers must be received, in order to rectify the clauses, and see whether it was better to attack Flanders from England, or to contribute a pecuniary subsidy monthly. He added that the winter season was approaching, when no attack could be made, and that it would also be necessary for the King of France to have his troops in readiness, as there are but few French forces near Flanders. When Sanga proposed speaking to the King, the Cardinal said it was unnecessary, and that he would perform the office.

* The bracketed paragraphs, when transferred from the drafts to the letters, were always ciphered.

1526.

Comes to the conclusion that nothing more can be hoped for from the King of England; but possibly, should the articles be stipulated in their fashion, some pecuniary subsidy might be obtained.

The Cardinal will not allow him (Spinelli) to leave him, in order that they may go together to a house of the Cardinal.

London, 21st August. Registered by Sanuto, 10th September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 23.

1394. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 348,
349.

Concerning England, the Pope told him he had seen the articles sent by the most Christian King, in order that his English Majesty may be induced to join the league.

Rome, 23rd August. Registered by Sanuto on the 27th.

[Italian.]

Aug. 24.

1395. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 512.

The French ambassador understood from the Cardinal that the Emperor was detaining all the ships in order to fit out a fleet for Italy. The Cardinal therefore told the ambassador to acquaint his King with this.

Sanga will depart in a few days, on his way back to Rome.

London, 24th August. Registered by Sanuto, 22nd September.

[Italian.]

Aug. 28.

1396. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 455,
456.

The Pope complains of the French King's delay in giving the promised succour against the Spaniards at Milan. The Pope writes he has spent 200,000 ducats in this war, and has not 10,000 ducats wherewith to proceed. He therefore directs Acciaoli, the Papal Nuncio, to tell the King that, if he pleases (s'il voleva), the Pope will give him the kingdom of Naples and the Milanese, his Majesty coming to take them at his own cost.

Told Acciaoli he should not announce this to the King, who would do more than he was bound, and that such complaints might cause his Majesty to agree with the Emperor, and induce the King of England to do the like, the latter becoming apprehensive of the aggrandizement of France through this invitation to invade Italy. Recommended Acciaoli to await the next letters from Rome. This advice pleased him, and he expatiated on the Pope's timidity. Recommends the Signory to write to Rome to dissuade the Pope from ever repeating similar proposals to France.

Amboise, 28th August. Registered by Sanuto, 14th September.

[Italian.]

1526.

Aug. 29.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1397. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Glad to hear of the mutual ties between France and England. To congratulate the Cardinal thereon. Enclose a summary of news from Lombardy.

[Italian.]

Aug. 30.
Deliberazioni
Senato
(Secreta),
v. li. p. 76.

1398. The DOGE and SENATE to ANDREA ROSSO, Secretary in France.

Approve the suggestion that it would be well to hear the Emperor's reply to the demands made by the English ambassador in the presence of the ambassadors of the confederates. Should his Imperial Majesty be inclined to consent, he should send the power to his ambassador in France; [the confederates?] not omitting nevertheless to act briskly, which will be the means of facilitating the peace.

Approve the good offices performed by him with the Rev. Bishop of Bath. To confer with him again, and to let him know how grateful the Signory is for his operations and offers for the benefit of the league.

Ayes, 145. Noes, 25. Neutrals, 8.

[Italian.]

Aug. 31.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 396.

1399. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Pope spoke to him as follows:—Both Kings (England and France) are well disposed. The most Christian King intends to fit out a fleet to oppose the Emperor's. The Emperor, seeing the league so powerful, and that he has lost the King of England, will join the league; wherefore the most Christian King wishes mandates to be sent to accept the Emperor as a party to the league in case he be thus inclined. Powers should be sent to the most Christian King immediately to make the most advantageous terms possible. The Signory to act in like manner.

Rome, 31st August. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd September.

[Italian.]

Sept. 2.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 404.

1400. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador to England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Proceeds to his legation through the Grisons, although he has not obtained the safeconduct.

Bergamo, 2nd September. Registered on the 4th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 4.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 547.

1401. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Cardinal's determination is to give nothing but words, and such he uttered to Sanga about the King's goodwill, saying he awaited the Emperor's declaration before making any stir, and then the agreement must be made with France, settling how, and where, and when war should be waged on the Emperor. In short, from him nothing can be obtained but words.

London, 4th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

1526.

Sept. 5.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 547.1402. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanga (the Papal envoy)* quits England dissatisfied; he is returning through France to Rome.

London, 5th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 6.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.1403. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The French ambassador [Jean de Calvimont]† showed him a letter from his King, desiring him to go to the Emperor and submit a clause contained in the treaty, of which he sent a copy. The King further instructs him to present this clause to the Emperor in company with the Pope's Legate or Nuncio and the Venetian ambassador, to whom their respective governments would send copies of this same clause, and the King of England on his part would do the like. This clause stipulates that on the ratification of the treaty the ambassadors of the confederates are to request the Emperor to release the children of the King of France on the terms specified in another clause. The French ambassador added, that should the Emperor refuse, he was to be informed that the confederates would resort to force.

Calvimont read the clause and the letter of the King likewise, and asked him his opinion and what he meant to do.

Replied he had no particular instructions from the State, nor a copy of the clause; but had been desired, on the arrival of an ambassador from England [Girolamo Ghinucci, Bishop of Worcester], to confer with him and with the Papal minister, as also with Calvimont himself, and to do what they requested.

Proposed that he and Calvimont should confer with the Nuncio and the English ambassador then at Granada [Edward Lee],‡ and discuss what should be done.

They therefore held a meeting. With regard to the proposals to be made, the English ambassador said he had no instructions whatever from his King, neither did he know that any new ambassador was coming. For this reason he did not see how he could make any representation in company with the French ambassador. The Nuncio [Castiglione] said the like. So it was resolved to allow a few days to elapse for instructions to arrive.

After a lapse of three days, an English gentleman arrived with letters from his King to Lee,§ desiring him to make the communication intended to have been announced through a new ambassador.

As by this letter Lee was desired to communicate the whole to the Nuncio [Castiglione] and to the French and Venetian ambassadors, he sent for them to his house and read to them his letter, which was not precisely of the tenor already notified by the Signory, though to the same effect.

The King writes blandly. Lee is to persuade the Emperor not to

* Concerning this mission of Sanga's, see Clerk to Wolsey, State Papers, vol. vi, part 5, p. 543.

† Second President of the Parliament of Bordeaux. (See Père Daniel, vol. ix. p. 325.)

‡ In "State Papers," vol. vi., part 5, there are no letters from Lee between 21 May 1526 and 13 Feb. 1527.

§ This gentleman was Osborne Echingham. (See State Papers, vol. vi. p. 547.)

1526.

disturb the general peace of Christendom, but to divest himself of private passion, and turn his mind to the common weal, as he is the chief of all Christians. The King narrates the many disasters which might befall the Emperor, and says that he would lament them as much as anyone, for he has loved and loves the Emperor above all other men.* He states the danger to which Christendom is exposed, both from the Turk and the Lutherans, and proves that nothing demands the Emperor's attention more than this, and that everything else is unimportant. He therefore exhorts the Emperor to prefer the common weal to private advantage, and to join this league, whereby there would be a general peace in Christendom.

With regard to the restitution of Burgundy by the King of France, the King [of England] reasons that it was not in the power of the King of France to do so; but that there would be no lack of means to arrange matters. Should the Emperor release the children of the King of France, he (the King of England) will mediate to obtain for the Emperor a large sum of money, and mediate likewise with all the other powers, provided the Emperor do not demand more than is due and allow every one to enjoy his own; and the King expects his consent from his knowledge of the Emperor's constant goodness of nature and generosity.

The King was of opinion the duchy of Milan should be left to its Duke [Francesco Sforza], and the Spanish army removed from its present quarters, in order that Italy might be at peace, and the affairs of all the Italian powers be adjusted, and that the heretics, the enemies of the Catholic faith, might be exterminated, and the Turks, who (it was feared) had already conquered Hungary, effectually resisted.

Thus the Emperor would gain glory, and show the world that he really intended what he always said was the object of his wishes.

Should he choose to act thus, the King of England promises to do everything to effect this general peace, and says that the Emperor must not entertain suspicion of him; for although he has been named as protector of the league, yet he swears by his faith that he has not yet joined it nor accepted this protectorate until acquainted with the Emperor's intentions; but he positively declares that, perceiving all the rest of Christendom united, should the Emperor reject the fair terms offered him, he cannot fail to accept this protectorate, and do whatever the Pope wishes. He also avails himself of a good opportunity to allude to the money due to him from the Emperor, and demands payment, saying, however, that he has no doubt the Emperor will give it him, as fair.

So far as he (Navagero) could recollect this was the summary of the letter, but he is unable to express how precise is its language, and how replete with infinite kindness and fair words. Confesses that since a long while he has never seen a letter which satisfied him more completely throughout than this one.

Lee received two copies of this letter, one in English, the other in French. The French copy he determined to give to the Emperor, that he might read and consider it well.

* "Ha sempre amato et ama S. Mta. sopra ogn' altro."

1526.

At the same time as this letter was received from England, a long brief reached the Nuncio for consignment to the Emperor from the Pope, setting forth the causes which had moved him to wage the present war, and complaining much of the Emperor. The Pope's expressions were stronger than necessary.

Lee declined accompanying the Nuncio and the French and Venetian ambassadors to audience of the Emperor, because the letters from his King informed him that he had not yet joined the league, and therefore Lee did not think fit to join the ambassadors of the other confederates. He also requested the French ambassador not to use any strong language (mala parola alcuna), but merely to mention the first part of the paragraph, namely, that the King of England besought the Emperor, in the name of all the confederates, to release the sons of the most Christian King for a reasonable sum of money. He also desired him for the present to be silent concerning the next clause, alluding to what was to be done should the Emperor refuse the demand, in order that the representations might be made in conformity with the King's wishes.

This request seemed reasonable to the envoys, who agreed accordingly, and delivered their messages to the Emperor, who desired the same might be repeated in the presence of his councillors. He then replied first to the Nuncio, that he had always desired the general peace of Christendom, on which account principally he released the King of France; that he had always wished to be the Pope's good son, and the Pope to be a good father to him, so that he knew not for what cause the Pope had severed these ties, and written him a brief charging him with many faults, of which he, the Emperor, knew he was innocent; that a general council should be summoned, in which he would then endeavour to exculpate himself. Should the Pope choose, he was always ready to have him for his good father, and to be his good and obedient son. Should he have erred, he would submit to his Holiness and accept any due reproof and correction (castigatione). But the Pope must prove himself to be the father-general in this matter, and be content to make this general peace, to which he, the Emperor, would most willingly become a party. Should he perceive that it could be accomplished, with regard to personal matters, such as releasing the French princes and the like, he would show the world that he is not covetous of any one's money or territories. He would utterly forget all that the Pope has done by him hitherto, provided that for the future his Holiness take upon himself to effect this general union of the Christian powers, and do not show partiality. It did not appear to him that he could in honour join the present league, as it had evidently been made against him, but he was anxious for a general peace, which he had always wished for above all things.

He therefore desired the Nuncio to write to the Pope, that he (the Emperor) might know his opinion, so as to be able at length to rid Christendom of heresies, and defend her against the Turk.

The Emperor then turned to the French ambassador, and said to him that had his King fulfilled what he promised the Emperor at the time of his release, the present troubles would not exist, and 1526.

Christendom would be at peace ; that he had treated the King with magnanimity and liberality, and been repaid with pusillanimity and malice ; that the King had not behaved either like a well-conditioned gentleman nor as a loyal cavalier, but like a merchant (mercantemente),* which last word he (Navagero) remarks has a much worse signification than vilmente in Italian ; that he (the Emperor) would to God that this matter could be settled between their two selves, for the lesser detriment to Christendom ; that he trusted to God to assist him, as justice was on his side, and thus show the whole world the truth. He demanded of Calvimont, as the representative of his King, that the King do keep the promise given to him, the Emperor, and to God at the same time, namely, that if unable to fulfil what he had promised him, he would return to prison. Should the King not do this, the Emperor does not know how he can deny that he has broken faith. On the King's acting thus he, the Emperor, will release his sons, as he considers the King to be better security than his sons. Should he not do so the Emperor will never more believe anything he may say unless he have the pledge in hand ; and as he could have no better pledge than these children he would not release them ; and if the King expected to obtain them by threats, he deceived himself. Even if compelled by force to abandon all his realms, so long as he saw one stone upon another he would not give back to the King his children. With regard to his giving them for money, had he been desirous of money, he would have sought it when the King was his prisoner, the ransom of the father being rated higher than that of the children ; but he had never thought of money, and was solely intent on making a good peace with the King of France, in order that the like might subsequently be stipulated with all Christendom, and the hostilities be turned against the Infidels, in which case he was ready to give money in lieu of receiving it. At the time of the King's release he had a long private conference with him about this peace, which the King seemed to desire extremely, and swore to him before God that it was his most earnest wish, and that he would aid the Emperor in the undertaking with all his forces. After this, on arriving in France, besides the other things, he sent to tell the Pope that at that private conference he (the Emperor) requested him (the King) to call a council, and depose the Pope. This the Emperor vowed he had never said ; and then declared that, regardless of the Nuncio's presence, he would state what passed on that occasion. In discussing the affairs of Italy, the King of France said to him that they would go to Italy, and be masters there, and then at Rome make the Pope the Emperor's chaplain. To this the Emperor replied that he did not want either to make himself the master of Italy, or to have the Pope for his chaplain, but meant to go and assume the crown, and then attack the Letheran infidels and heretics ; and that any person opposing that expedition should be considered their enemy, and as it were a Turk, even should it be the Pope himself. These were the words uttered by him, and not those attributed to him by the King of France. At that same conference he told the King that everybody said that he, the King, would not keep any of the promises made by him; but he, however, did not believe that such a King would fail in anything, though, as the mind of man cannot be known, he at least besought the King, should he purpose deceiving him, not to take his sister away, and deceive him in this matter likewise; because if he failed in his promises he, the Emperor, must be his enemy, and bear him personal enmity, which he had never done hitherto, and therefore he should regret wishing evil (voler male) and being an enemy to one who had his sister for wife. In reply the King made fresh oaths, swearing he would not fail him; and he (the Emperor) in like manner swore he would not fail in any of the promises made by him to the King.

* In a despatch dated Parados, 27 Sept. 1527, Navagero wrote to the Signory that he did not understand the French language (as stated also in this present letter). So it is possible he may have mistaken the word "mechamment" for "mercantilmente ;" or it may be a slip of the transcriber's pen.

1526.

Having said all this, the Emperor turned to him (Navagero), and said he had no occasion to make him any other answer than the one already given to the Nuncio.

* The reply made to the French ambassador seemed very fierce (brava), and by no means of the sort which the Emperor is accustomed to make; but it proceeded from a word uttered in the course of his speech by the French ambassador, which greatly displeased the Emperor. At the moment did not understand it, being but slightly acquainted with the French tongue, but subsequently the matter was explained to him by some of the Imperial ministers. Calvimont said that he was charged to pray, require, and *summon the Emperor in the name of his King. This is said to be a very menacing (brava) and insolent word in French, and employed when besieging a place, the assailants summoning the besieged to surrender within so many hours under pain of being cut to pieces. Concerning this matter, the French ambassador says the expression is not so offensive, and merely signifies to protest; but were this word the most offensive in the world, Calvimont showed him (Navagero) that it is written in the letter addressed to him by the King. Be this, however, as it may, it is certain that the Emperor took it very much amiss, and therefore had the whole repeated in the presence of his Council, and used very angry language to Calvimont, though his manner evinced no anger;† nay, whatever his words were, he uttered them very quietly. Calvimont then again told the Emperor that he wished to know whether this was given him as a definitive reply, because in that case he should have something else to say, for his King's guidance hereafter. At this point the Viceroy interrupted him, saying he did not know how a positive reply could be given to so confused a demand as the one made by him, (Calvimont); that when he (the Viceroy) quitted France the King and Madame the Regent said clearly that if the Emperor would release the King's sons, they would give him two millions of gold within the term of four months; and if any one in the King's service chose to say that the King had not said this to him, he would prove it to the denier in single combat; whereas now the ambassador spoke confusedly, saying that reasonable ransom should be paid at reasonable periods. The ambassador replied that if his King said to the Viceroy what the Viceroy asserted, he, the ambassador, did not mean to deny it, but had himself received no further instructions; and that it might be said that the King offered him that sum then, and subsequently altered his mind.

* "Et assumer;" qu., à sommer in French.

† "Et parlò con molto sdegno con lui, ma non mostrò però maniera di colera."

1526.

The Nuncio and he (Navagero) said to the Viceroy that it did not seem to them that the one thing contradicted the other, as by the words "reasonable sum" and "reasonable periods," nothing whatever was specified, so that three millions of gold as well as two millions might be considered the interpretation of "reasonable sum," in like manner as either one month or four might be understood by "reasonable periods;" so that they did not think there was any occasion to discuss this point. The Viceroy then became calm, and the ambassadors departed without any further decision.

From day to day they always communicate everything to the English ambassador Lee, who is thoroughly satisfied, save that he disapproves of the French ambassador's demand for a positive answer, and of his saying that if the Emperor refused to do what was required, he had a further communication to make to him in the name of his King. This appears to Lee a bravado (come un bravar), and as the King of England is proceeding gently, Lee would wish all the others to use similar language. The French ambassador, on the contrary, is of opinion that he failed to execute his instructions properly, not having yet declared war and made the announcement contained in the second part of the clause, commencing "Quod si facere renuerit," &c. But in reality the Emperor not only does not refuse, but says he is willing to be a party to this peace, and announcing moreover his intention of releasing the King's children.

As yet the English ambassador has received no other reply than fair words; today or tomorrow they will give it him in writing. Understands that it fills some ten or twelve sheets; and on becoming acquainted with their contents, will communicate them to the Signory.

Granada, 6th September 1526.

P.S.—The English ambassador has received a general reply, and well nigh the same as the one given previously to the others. The sole addition purports that not only is the Emperor content that the King of England should join the league, but even prays him to do so, that he may be a better mediator in all matters for the general peace than his Imperial Majesty.

Concerning details, such as the release of the French Princes, and other similar things, the Emperor declared himself willing to refer the whole to the King of England and the Pope. This was the answer given by word of mouth. The one in writing fills many sheets, which they transmit sealed to the Imperial ambassador in England, so that its contents are unknown.

[Italian.]

1526.

Sept. 6.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 418.

1404. MARTIN LUTHER.

Letters addressed to the Duke of Ferrara by his ambassador in Spain, intercepted by the Pope, and sent to Venice to be deciphered [by Zuan Soro?]

The Count Palatine has arrived from Germany. He says the Lutherans increase, and that a council should be held to reform the Church, as they would thus be quieted.

[Italian.]

Sept. 7.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 420.

1405. REGINALD POLE at PADUA.

The Doge went to church in state, accompanied by the ambassadors from the Pope, Milan, Ferrara, and Mantua. The French ambassador was not present, and the ambassador from England [Prothonotary Casal] has gone to Padua to visit the relation of the King's [Reginald Pole] who is studying there.

[Italian.]

Sept. 11.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 55.

1406. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The Cardinal has told him that the King will not join the league unless his most Christian Majesty first of all marry the Princess and restore Boulogne to him, saying, "This King will not spend money to make an enemy of his friend and gain nothing."

London, 11th September. Registered by Sanuto, 18th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. pp. 471,
472.

1407. MARCO FOSCARI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Today the Pope said to him, "Lord ambassador, we have letters from England, dated the 23rd ultimo, that the King will do nothing until he be first of all agreed with the King of France; and then nothing more can be expected from him than a pecuniary loan, after the month of October." The Pope is therefore in great tribulation. His Holiness added that the King of France does nothing.

Rome, 13th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 16th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 13.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 524.

1408. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador to England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Wrote on the 7th from Coir, where the burgomaster visited him, making great offers, &c.

Came on to Berne, where he met Mons. de Morette, the French ambassador, who visited him, and gave assurance of the excellent disposition of the Switzers towards his most Christian Majesty.

Intends departing on the morrow to continue his journey.

Berne, 13th September. Registered by Sanuto on the 25th.

[Italian.]

Sept. 16.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1409. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

To thank the Cardinal for his good intention, and hope it may be realized.

1526.

Concerning Hungarian affairs, inform him that by letters dated Petonia (sic) the 3rd, and Augsburg the 10th, the Turkish army had routed the King of Hungary, as by the enclosed summaries. To announce this to the Cardinal.

The Papal and Venetian armies are in their usual quarters. Nothing further has occurred worthy of notice. The forces under Cremona continue the siege of that city.

[Italian.]

Sept. 22.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1410. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Enclose a copy of what they have written to the Secretary Rosso in France. To act in unison with the King and Cardinal.

[Italian.]

Sept. 23.
Commemoriale,
XXI., p. 23,
tergo.

1411. The HOLY LEAGUE.

Oath taken by the ambassador of the Duke of Milan at Venice, in the presence of Doge Andrea Gritti, and of the envoys from the Pope, France, and England accredited to the Signory.

In May last, at Cognac, the alliance was stipulated between Pope Clement VII., Francis King of the French, and Andrea Gritti, Doge of the Venetians.

Of this league the most Serene King of England was constituted protector and defender.

There was also comprised in it Francesco II. Sforza Visconti, Duke of Milan, at that time besieged in the castle of "Porta Zobia."

His ambassador, Francesco Taberna, therefore ratifies the inclusion by oath, in the presence of Doge Andrea Gritti, of Altobello Averoldi, Bishop of Pola, Nuncio and Legate de latere from the Pope, of the Bishop of Bayeux, Ludovic Count of Canossa, ambassador from the King of the French, and of Giovanni Battista de Casale, ambassador from the King of England to the Doge and Signory of Venice.

[Original minute, Latin, 79 lines.]

Sept. 24.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 86.

1412. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

By their last, written to him on the day before yesterday, he will have heard of the Pope's having retired into Castle St. Angelo to escape the violence (impeto) of Cardinal Colonna and Don Ugo de Moncada, with the Imperialists and the Colonna faction. Their ambassador in Rome informs them that after the Imperialists had sacked the Papal palace with its wardrobe and sacristy, and also the sacristy of St. Peter's, besides certain palaces belonging to the right reverend cardinals and prelates, realizing booty to the amount of 300,000 ducats, his Holiness at length came to an agreement with Don Ugo de Moncada, and signed a truce for four months, binding himself to withdraw his land forces to this side the Po (de qua da Po), and recall his fleet into the Papal harbours (in terre de la Gesia), as by the enclosed copy.

1526.

In consequence of this announcement the Signory repeated the orders given to the army under Milan, for the Marquis of Saluzo and the French troops immediately to join the Switzers and the Venetian forces, so that notwithstanding the departure of the Papal soldiery they may make head against the enemy. Are certain that his Holiness, having received so deep an injury from the Imperialists, will never become their friend; and indeed, should his most Christian Majesty and the King of England act resolutely, are assured that he (the Pope) will join them for the benefit of the undertaking. To beseech the King and Cardinal to consider the importance of so great a stir against the person of the Pope, the honour of the Apostolic see, and ecclesiastical liberty. The King, in accordance with his title of "Defender of the Faith," should render assistance to the undertaking, so as to thwart the iniquitous plots of the Imperialists.

By the accompanying copy he (Spinelli) will perceive that the attack on Cremona has been brought to a good end.

Ayes, 174. Noes, 3. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Sept. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 522.

1413. MOTION made in the SENATE by the SAGES.

That a letter be written to the Secretary Spinelli in England, giving him notice of the late disturbances,* and stating that the King of England, as "Defender of the Faith," should be pleased to make such provision as shall seem necessary to him, and that the Signory will support the undertaking. Summaries of the news from Rome and Cremona to be transmitted.

Noes, 3. The rest Ayes.

[Italian.]

Sept. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xlii. p. 87.

1414. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador to England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Announces his arrival at Lyons, whither two Scottish ambassadors have come, who are going first to the Signory and then to Rome. Cardinal Salviati, late Legate in Spain, is to make his entry tomorrow or next day.

Will remain two days at Lyons, and then proceed on his journey.
Lyons, 24th September Registered by Sanuto, 13th October.

[Italian.]

Sept. 25.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1415. The DOGE and SENATE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

The Imperialists have stipulated to surrender Cremona within the month, having given 12 hostages to that effect, as by the accompanying copy of the articles.

[Italian.]

* The sack of the Vatican and of the "Borgo" by the Colonna faction on the 20th September 1526. (See Guicciardini, vol. iv. p. 175.)

1526.

Sept. 27.
Parti Secrete,
Consiglio X.,
Filza I^{ma}.

1416. The COUNCIL OF TEN and JUNTA to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

Approve of the Pope's sending two nuncios, the one to France, the other to England, to complain of the excesses committed by the Imperialists, and exhorting those Kings to defend the ecclesiastical liberty. The Pope should write again to the Emperor, exhorting him to put an end to the wars and to make a valid peace, of which there is the most urgent need by reason of what has taken place in Hungary with so much bloodshed.

The Signory has also written repeatedly to France, urging the most Christian King most strenuously to act in imitation of his predecessors, who, to avenge the ecclesiastical liberty and the dignity of the Holy Roman Church, hazarded their forces and their persons, and deservedly gained for themselves the title of "Most Christian King."

Feel certain [that his most Christian Majesty at so important a crisis will not fail warmly to espouse the interests of his Holiness and of the common cause; and the Signory has also recommended him to stimulate the English King. Have written in good form to the Venetian secretary in England.

Ayes, 29. Noes, 0. Neutrals, 0.

[Italian.]

Sept. 28.
Senato Mar,
v. xxi. p. 23.

1417. FACTORIES of LONDON and DAMASCUS.

Decree of the Senate.

Importance of keeping up the Damascus voyage.* At present the factory has a debt of 200,000 ducats in Venice, and in Syria 10,000, paying usurious interest.

And whereas the London factory is creditor of many merchants for a considerable sum of money, and debtor but for a very small amount—

Put to the ballot, that all debtors of the London factory be bound within one month to pay their debt in ready money to the proveditors of that factory, subject to the penalty of 10 per cent., besides all other penalties decreed in the said proveditors' office.

The proveditors for the London factory to assign the sum thus received to the proveditors of the Damascus factory, as a loan, to be placed to the credit of the London factory, for repayment after all the other deposits in the factory of Damascus.

Declaration that the London factory is not to be subjected to any overcharge (angaria), as by God's grace it has no debt, nor occasion to occur any expense; but, should such become requisite, the proveditors for the factory and the consul in London are empowered to levy such rate as necessary.

Ayes, 104. Noes, 8. Neutrals, 12.

[Italian, 53 lines.]

* The Venetian galleys destined especially for the trade with Damascus frequented the port of Beyrout.

1526.

Oct. 1. 1418. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 131.

Has spoken with the Cardinal, who chooses (vuol) the King to accomplish the marriage before joining the league; and his Majesty is for continuing the war, as he will not fail to assist the Pope.

London. — October. Registered by Sanuto, 10th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 4.

1419. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 55.

On receiving the Signory's account of the stir made at Rome by the Colonna faction and the Spaniards, went to the King and read the letters to him. His Majesty desired the Papal Nuncio, Roberto Acciaoli, and him (Rosso) to write warmly to England for assistance for the Pope; saying also that he, the King, would go to Lyons, send Renzo da Ceri post to Rome, and remit 50,000 crowns.

Subsequently received news of the capture of Cremona, and went to tell the King, who was out hunting. Such was his joy that he kissed the secretary, and gave 100 crowns to the courier who brought the letters, saying he had received good news. Then proceeded to Madame, who has the gout, and when the news was told her she made great rejoicings, and gave a ball, which lasted till the sixth hour of the night. Moreover, the King said that when the Signory chooses to act in earnest, he would rather be leagued with them than with all the other Powers; and Mons. de Lautrec said, "Had the Signory acted thus in my time, it would have been very beneficial." The King thanks the Proveditor Pesaro for this acquisition, praising him much, and saying that he knew him when he was in prison at Pizzighettone, where he saw him from a window, and Pesaro made a sign to the King whereby he knew that no agreement had been made with the Viceroy. The King also said that he would invade Flanders.

Amboise, 29th September and 4th October. Registered by Sanuto on 18th October.

[Italian.]

Oct. 6.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1420. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

By virtue of the capitulation of Cremona the Signory's proveditor general with the Venetian troops entered the city on the 1st. To acquaint the King with the surrender of that city, and with the departure for Germany of the 1,700 Lansquenets who were of the garrison, they being all very efficient troops; and the Spaniards were to leave for Naples on the morrow.

Being of opinion that this intelligence will gratify the King and Cardinal, to communicate it in the Signory's name.

[Italian.]

Oct. 6.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 56.

1421. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King has sent the portraits of his sons, now prisoners in Spain, to the English King, exhorting him to effect their release as conservator of the league; informing him also that he has received news of the capture of Cremona. A courier from Spain, who had 1526.

been detained, was set at liberty by the King that he might convey this intelligence thither; and his Majesty said to him (Rosso), "We will expel these Turks from Italy, and then go against the real Turks."

Amboise, 6th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 19th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 7.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna Copy.

1422. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

The affairs of England proceed very slowly. The English ambassador Lee is both a learned and a very worthy person, and most firmly believes that all the fair promises made to him will take effect, as is perhaps the case, and may God grant it. At any rate, in the meanwhile, should the French ambassador receive any reply and authority to act, and demand his (Navagero's) co-operation, knows not what to do unless he receive further instructions from the State. Is sure that Lee will not accompany them to the Emperor without orders from his King, whereas he (Navagero) is commissioned by the State to go, should the English ambassador do so.

Having been once without the English ambassador, purposes going again should the Nuncio go, and believes such to be the intention of the State, but would be very glad to hear more clearly what is wished.

Reported at Granada that the King of France stopped an ambassador on his way from the Emperor to England, although he had given a safeconduct, and that the ambassador has been detained;* so it is intended to despatch another ambassador, a Flemish gentleman of the Emperor's chamber.

Granada, 7th October 1526.

[Italian.]

Oct. 8.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 79.

1423. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador to England, to the SIGNORY.

Conversed with the King about inducing the King of England to join the league, which was the cause of his (Venier's) appointment.

Visited Madame, the King's mother, and praised her for having been the cause of the league.

Will depart for England next Monday.

Blois, 8th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 27th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 13.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1424. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Wrote to him on the 24th ult., that the Pope, having withdrawn into Castle St. Angelo, to secure himself against the Imperialists and the Colonna faction, had been compelled to make truce with them. The latter continue to raise troops, and his Holiness has given orders for the advance to Rome, from the camp, of 2,000 Switzers,

* This ambassador seems to have been Don Inigo de Mendoza, who was confined during four months in the "Castle of Hane." See State Papers, vol. vi. p. 545 and p. 515.

1526.

with a detachment of horse and foot. The Signory is nevertheless convinced of the Pope's readiness and anxiety to accomplish the undertaking in Lombardy. At present the war must be carried on by the Signory single handed. To request the Cardinal to call to mind how frequently he has urged the State strenuously to prosecute the undertaking. • To insist on the King's joining the league, as should his Majesty do what is expected of him, the Pope will adhere to the same most readily, and the most Christian King also act with greater warmth. Have announced the surrender of Cremona. The army which has been under Cremona with the Signory's captain-general will join the Marquis of Saluzzo, and the Swiss and French troops, besides other Venetian forces now under Milan; so the Emperor will be the more disposed towards the general peace, and the loss of Hungary will so affect him as to make him admit that the preservation of Christendom depends on him.

The Signory's ambassador at his Imperial Majesty's Court, in date of the 30th August, wrote to Secretary Rosso in France, that the English ambassador there [Edward Lee] had laid before the Emperor his King's most sage letter, with loving exhortations in favour of peace, towards which the Emperor was well disposed; so that after having dismissed the Venetian ambassador, he recalled him, thus evincing his pacific bias, although he had not yet heard of the loss of Hungary, and that his own territories adjoining that kingdom were in peril. Therefore he will not only be ready but anxious for peace.

To urge the King and Cardinal to induce the Emperor to make the general peace.

The Duke of Milan, after the surrender of Cremona, wished to reside in that city. Answered he might go when he pleased, but that he must keep good guard, and repair such part of the fortifications as had been damaged.

An ambassador arrived lately at Venice from the Grand Turk (Sigr. Turco). He presented letters from his Lord as by the enclosed copy, announcing the victory obtained over the Hungarians.*

Replied in loving terms, despatched the envoy as usual, and have elected the nobleman Marco Minio as their ambassador.

[Italian.]

Oct. 17.
Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1425. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Informed that his most Christian Majesty was writing to his ambassador in England to urge the King to join the league, owing to the loss of Hungary, or that he should furnish the league with 150,000 crowns, to be repaid on fair terms. To confer with the French ambassador, and perform such offices as are calculated to obtain this effect.

The Venetian army, having quitted Cremona, is on its march to join the French and Swiss troops and the rest of the Signory's forces under Milan.

[Italian.]

* Battle of Mohatz in Hungary, 29th August 1526.

1526.

Oct. 18.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. pp. 59, 60.

1426. PISANI and PESARO, Provveditors General in the Venetian Camp, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The French envoy, on arriving in the camp, and hearing that Guicciardini was gone to Piacenza, went thither to speak to him by order of the King.

Today an accident occurred in the camp. A certain Ipolito da Lucha, a military commander recommended to the Signory by the King of England, and sent by him to the camp, went to speak with the Procurator Pisani. On his way back he met Zanim de' Medici,* who, for certain words uttered, as Zanim says, by the said Ipolito about him (Medici) in England, struck Ipolito with and slew him; a very piteous case, for he was a brave man.

Lambra, 18th October. Registered by Sanuto on the 20th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 185.

1427. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

When the King heard what the Colonna faction had done at Rome, he sent the Pope 2,500 (sic) ducats, and wrote to him he greatly regretted such a catastrophe, encouraging his Holiness by assurances of every assistance. With regard to joining the Italian league, he says he would fain be mediator to make the peace with the Emperor; that the duchy of Milan should be placed in his hands, and he would send a delegate of his to rule it until it should be decided who was to have it; and that the Duke of Ferrara should be made King of Naples, ceding to the Pope Rubiera, Reggio, and Modena, and be appointed captain-general of the undertaking. The King also wishes to marry his daughter to the most Christian King. He will not make an attack beyond seas for the present, and awaits the Emperor's reply to his proposal about negotiating a peace. He exhorts the Papal Nuncio in London to urge his Holiness to act courageously.

London, 19th October. Registered by Sanuto, 21st November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 19.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 190.

1428. The SAME to the SAME.

The King, on hearing by the Pope's letters what had taken place at Rome, sent his Holiness 2,500 (sic) crowns; but Cardinal Wolsey told him (Spinelli) the Emperor had written to the King that he offers fair terms to his most Christian Majesty, complaining that none of the promises made had been kept, and that still less would he abide by an agreement, the Pope and the Signory acting in like manner. The Emperor therefore requests the King of England and Cardinal Wolsey to be mediators for peace, so that the Emperor may attack the Infidels.

Cardinal Wolsey told the Papal Nuncio and him (Spinelli) to

* Giovanni de' Medici, captain of the Black Bands. In date of this year, 1526, Guicciardini (vol. iv. p. 156) writes of him "apparisse molto la sua ferocia," &c., but does not allude to the murder of Ipolito of Lucca. Giovanni de' Medici died on the 30th November 1526 at Mantua; so the murder of Ipolito da Lucha was one of his last acts of ferocity.

1526.

write these particulars, and that it would be well to make a general peace.

London, 19th October. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 20.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 60.

1429. The VENETIAN GOVERNORS of BRESCIA to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The two ambassadors from Scotland have arrived here. They are going to Venice, and from thence to Rome.

Brescia, ———. Registered by Sanuto on the 20th.

[Italian.]

Oct. 22.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 185.

1430. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador to England, to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Announces his arrival there.

Dover, 22nd October. Registered by Sanuto, 21st November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 23.

Comuni
Consiglio X.,
v. ii. p. 79,
tergo.

1431. VENETIAN EMBASSY in ENGLAND.

Order for the cashier of the Council of Ten to pay from "the Ambassadors' Fund" to D. Pandolpho Ciniani, 26*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.*, equal to 121 broad golden ducats and four-fifths, for the expenses incurred in England by the secretary, Gasparo Spinelli, for the household of the deceased ambassador.

Ayes, 25. Noes, 0. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

Oct. 23.
Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 234.

1432. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Unimportant news and gossip (zanze). The King and Cardinal exhort the Signory to follow up the undertaking. The ambassador Venier having embarked on shipboard, with an intention to cross the Channel and come to England, was nearly drowned.

London, 23rd October. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd December.

[Italian.]

Oct. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 124.

1433. ADVICES from FRANCE, dated 24th October.

Letters from the Archduke [Ferdinand] to Madame Margaret in Flanders have been intercepted. He informs her that he has made a truce with the Great Turk, and will send troops to invade the territory of the Venetians, because they agreed with the Turk that he should seize the kingdom of Hungary.

Advices from England. The King and Cardinal, on hearing what took place at Rome, sent money to the Pope. His Majesty will not join the league until after the conclusion of his daughter's marriage.

Registered by Sanuto, 8th November.

[Italian.]

Oct. 28.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 205.

1434. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Came hither to meet the Ambassador Venier, who crossed the Channel with only three attendants, and is awaiting the rest of 1526.

his household and his horses, on whose arrival they will proceed to London.

The King has written to the Pope to take his revenge for the injury done him [by the Colonna faction], and besides the twenty-five thousand crowns already remitted, his Majesty will send a further supply. He has despatched ambassadors [Clerk and Ghinucci] to the most Christian King, and wishes to negotiate an agreement, stipulating the surrender to him of Boulogne, whereupon the King of England will renounce the title of King of France.

[Canterbury?], 28th October. Registered by Sanuto, 26th Nov.

[Italian.]

Nov. 4.

1435. GASPARO SPINELLI to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 241.

Narrates long conversations held by him with Cardinal Wolsey. On the day of All Saints his right reverend Lordship invited all the ambassadors in London to attend mass and dine with him. He then called the Papal and French ambassadors and him (Spinelli), saying it would be well to unite England with France, and conclude the marriage, and that the King and Cardinal intend to negotiate the peace with the Emperor. The Cardinal urged him (Spinelli) to write to the Signory to refer the affair of the peace to England.

The King of England will do nothing unless the King of France gives him Boulogne.

The ambassador Venier has crossed over to England, and is to make his entry into London on the 5th. Has been to meet him.

London, 2nd and 4th November. Registered by Sanuto, 4th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 5.

1436. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 195.

The King has provided funds for the fifth payment, and told him in secret that he had a plot on foot for the seizure of a certain town belonging to the Emperor, and that he would lose France rather than make truce.

The King of England has sent his Majesty a present of 12 handsome hounds (cani) and 12 horses.

The Chancellor complains that the King holds Robertet in greater account than him, Du Prat. His Majesty has complied with the request made by the messenger from Zanim de' Medici, whom he takes into his pay.*

Paris, 5th November. Registered by Sanuto on the 24th.

[Italian.]

Nov. 8.

1437. The SAME to the SAME.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 205.

Conversations with the King, who will grant everything; his forces harass Flanders incessantly. He will not fail to send money for the support of the undertaking.

The two English ambassadors [Clerk and Ghinucci] have arrived,

* As already stated, Giovanni de' Medici, Captain of the Black Bands, died on the 30th November 1526.

1526.

and presented the King with six horses and eight very handsome sporting dogs, with their coverings (et otto cani coperti bellissimi da caza).

The King has had the obsequies of the Queen celebrated at Paris at a cost of 50,000 francs.

Etampes, 7th and 8th November. Registered by Sanuto on the 26th.

[Italian.]

Nov. 13.

1438. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 297.

Gives an account of his arrival, of the honours done him, and of his audience of the King; much gossip (assa zanze). Nothing of importance, save that the King is sending the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] into Spain to the Emperor, and his Majesty and the Cardinal wish the Emperor and the King of France to be reconciled.

The King of England is also sending 25,000 ducats to the Vaivod of Transylvania, that he may assist the kingdom of Hungary against the Turks; and his Majesty has written to the Emperor to consent to his being the mediator for the peace, and to the duchy of Milan being placed in his hands.

London, 13th November. Registered by Sanuto, 16th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 14.

1439. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

Nothing further heard from England since the Emperor's reply to the King's letter. Lee is of opinion that his King will heartily favour the negotiation for peace, and use all his influence to adjust the dissension between Christians. The Emperor and all his ministers hope at any rate to have the King of England on their side, or that he will at least not be against them, although they know that Cardinal Wolsey is otherwise inclined.

Granada, 14th November 1526.

[Italian.]

Nov. 16.

1440. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. pp. 245,
246.

The King has persuaded the English ambassador to write to the King of England to declare war against the Emperor.

Poissi, 16th November. Registered by Sanuto, 5th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 17.

1441. The PROPOSED GENERAL PEACE.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 102,
tergo.

Power from the Doge, Andrea Gritti, authorizing Marc' Antonio Venier, Venetian ambassador in England, to sign a general peace. Place reserved for the Emperor and the King of England. Denomination of the Signory's confederates, viz., the Pope, Francis King of the French, Henry King of England, Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan, and the Republic of Florence. Furnished with the Doge's pendant leaden seal, and signed with his own hand.

[Original draft, Latin, 63 lines.]

1526.

Nov. 17.

Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 102,
tergo.

1442. The GENERAL PEACE.

Second power, like the foregoing, but with omission of the clause denominating the Signory's confederates.

[Original draft, Latin.]

Nov. 18.

Lettere
del Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1443. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Have heard from their ambassador at the Papal Court in date of the 17th. His Holiness had communicated to him letters from the Prothonotary Gambara, his Nuncio in England, dated the 19th October, purporting that the King and Cardinal were excellently disposed in favour of the joint undertaking, and that they greatly resented the injuries done to the Pope, to whom they were sending 25,000 crowns, for the maintenance of his dignity. Moreover, when the King and Cardinal shall hear of the manifest peril of Italy, through the successes of the Imperialists, who have mustered a considerable number of Lansquenets at Trent to enter the Brescian territory by way of Lodrone ad Anfo, a fleet being expected from Spain with the subsidy for Italy, they will then see the necessity for aiding the Holy League, and of doing that which was so largely promised by them to the State, and not permit the Emperor to make himself monarch of the universe.

The King and Cardinal will have had a reply from the Emperor to their letters, and also to the statement made by the English ambassador, and will have been enabled to ascertain whether his Imperial Majesty is inclined to peace.

[The Pope has suggested to the Signory that, as the Venetian secretary in France has received a power from them for the ambassador Navagero in Spain to conclude the general peace with the Emperor on the terms appointed in France, they should give a similar power to him (Spinelli) to conclude the peace, the instructions being the same as those given to Navagero, so that should the peace have to be negotiated and concluded in England they may facilitate it. Therefore they send the power to the secretary (Rosso) in France, for transmission with those from the Pope and the most Christian King, so that the aforesaid peace may be concluded.]

[To say nothing about the transmission to France of the power destined for him.]*

[Italian.]

Nov. 18.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1444. The SAME to the SAME.

Transmit to him two ample powers, one with the specific denomination of the contracting parties, and the other alluding to them in general terms, these being in accordance with the powers sent by the Pope. To use the one with the specific denomination; if not, the other.

Charge him, in conjunction with the ambassadors of the Holy League, to negotiate and conclude a general peace with the Emperor,

* The passages in brackets were to be put into cipher.

1526.

who is to release the sons of the most Christian King, to leave Lombardy intact, and the Duke Francesco in his territory, to pay the King of England what he owes him, and to come into Italy for his coronation in such form as already stipulated, or as shall be determined by the unanimous consent of all the members of the Holy League.

[Moreover, in the Pope's power to his Nuncio in Spain the preamble contained many hostile expressions against the Turks. Now although his Holiness has given the Signory to understand that in the power which he is now sending to England the document has been drawn up in better form, so that no mention is made of them, nevertheless the Signory is anxious that the instrument of peace shall not contain a word against the Turks, so as to avoid giving umbrage to the Grand Turk.] *

To lose no opportunity for requesting the King and Cardinal to grant the Signory their protection.

[Italian.]

Nov. 19.

1445. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 297.

Showed the mandates for treating the agreement with the Emperor to the most Christian King, who merely said that he would communicate them to his Privy Council. The King has received letters from England, informing him that the King of England was sending the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci] to the Emperor, to induce him to have the peace with France negotiated in England. His most Christian Majesty does not approve the proposal.

Poissy, 18th and 19th November. Registered by Sanuto, 16th Dec.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.

1446. MARC' ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 327.

Cardinal Wolsey told him that he wished the Signory to encourage the Pope, and to place the duchy of Milan in the hands of the King of England, who would then make terms.

London, 23rd November. Registered by Sanuto, 25th December.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.

1447. LETTER to ENGLAND.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 192.

Motion made and carried in the Senate, by the Sages and the Sages for the Orders, for a letter to Marco Antonio Venier, LL.D., the Signory's Ambassador in England.

Have received letters from the Secretary Spinelli concerning what the Emperor had written to England. Desire him (Venier) to say the Emperor's statement is false, as so far from wishing for peace his Majesty sent a fleet to Italy, under the command of the Viceroy, who has arrived in Corsica, and also from 15,000 to 20,000 Lansquenets into the Mantuan territory. Therefore the King of England should act.

[Italian.]

* The passage in brackets was to be put into cipher.

1526.

Nov. 23.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 104.

1448. The DOGE and SENATE to MARCO FOSCARI, Ambassador in Rome.

The most Christian King is ready to continue the undertaking. The King of England shows himself willing to assist the Pope. The Pope should write to France, to urge the most Christian King to increase his preparations; and the Signory will do the like.

Ayes, 185. Noes, 3. Neutral, 1.

[Italian.]

Nov. 23.
Deliberazioni
Senato Secreta,
v. li. p. 108.

1449. The DOGE and SENATE to MARC' ANTONIO VENIER, Ambassador in England.

To thank the King and Cardinal for the confidential statement made to Spinelli of what the Emperor's envoy brought back in reply to the King's letters, and commend the grant of aid to the Pope for his support and encouragement. To tell them of the entrance of the Lansquenets into Italy, and of the arrival of the Spanish fleet in Corsica. To notify the consequent confusion of the affairs of the league, adding that the King and Cardinal should have recourse to expedient measures to repress the Emperor's manifest craving for universal monarchy (il manifesto appetito se vede haver lo Imperator de farsi monarcha).

Have remarked in the Secretary's letters that the King, and still more the Cardinal, repeatedly expressed to him their wish that the Duke of Ferrara should make terms with the Pope and join the league. Should they again discuss this matter, to assure them that the Signory has never failed to perform every good office to that effect, both with the Pope and the Duke, and will continue so to do.

Ayes, 173. Noes, 2. Neutrals, 4.

[Italian.]

Dec. 2.

Navagero
Despatches,
Cicogna copy.

1450. ANDREA NAVAGERO to the SIGNORY.

Since his last of the 24th ult. a gentleman arrived from the King of England, the same who came to Granada some while ago [Osborne Echingham?].* He brought letters from his King to Lee, purporting that, perceiving by the Emperor's reply his inclination towards peace, and that he was content to refer the disputes of Christendom for arbitration to him (the King), he desires Lee to go to the Emperor and say how much pleasure was caused him (the King) by this goodwill, exhorting the Emperor to persevere in this good purpose, and proceed to particulars, so as to be able to clinch the business and come to some good settlement. The King considered it certain that the rest of the Christian powers would accept any fair terms, and hoped the Emperor would do the like; nor did the King know of any place better suited for the discussion of a treaty of agreement than England, all the other powers with the exception of himself having their own interests concerned. That the 1526.

* See note on p. 601.

Emperor ought therefore to come to a decision, most especially seeing the progress made by the Turks, with regard to which it seemed unnecessary for him, the King, to say anything, as it behoved the Emperor more than any one else to defend Austria and Germany, and recover Hungary, his inheritance and as the chief of Christians he was bound to defend Christendom against the infidels. That the Emperor should announce his intentions about the children of the King of France, the restoration of the Duke of Milan, and other differences in Italy; and that he (the King of England) would undertake so to mediate with all parties that matters would adjust themselves, provided the Emperor do not fail to co-operate.

To this announcement the Emperor made a bland reply, but in general terms, as often used by him, touching his goodwill towards peace.

Lee rejoined, that of this his King was aware, and therefore sought now to clinch matters, and to come to particulars, and that therefore the Emperor should be pleased to consider the business for four or five days, and then give a positive answer, so that such important affairs might no longer be procrastinated. The Emperor made answer that in truth the things appeared to him of such great importance that he would not even delay so long as proposed by Lee, who should receive his answer in two days. The Emperor and his ministers sat in council, and on the third day gave Lee his answer as follows:—The Emperor wished for the peace of Christendom, both because he had always desired it, and also because it now seemed to him more necessary than ever in order to resist the Turks. He therefore besought the King of England to take this thing up warmly, and mediate for the attainment of so good a result, as he, the Emperor, would not fail to accept any fair agreement. He was content to have the matter treated in England. With regard to particulars he would not tell Lee anything more for the present; but the other powers must send their commissions to their ambassadors over there, and the Emperor by this same messenger [Osborne Echingham?] would transmit a commission with every detail to Don Inigo de Mendoza, his ambassador, who had been detained in France, though by this time they thought he would have been released, and have arrived in England.

They told Lee, in short, that it would be seen by all for certain, in every particular, that the Emperor has more care for the common weal than for his own private interests.

Lee believes that the business will be concluded, and that the Emperor will make a durable and universal peace. With this reply he has despatched the gentleman [Osborne Echingham], who will depart today.

After this reply had been given to Lee the Nuncio [Castiglione] heard some additional facts from the Emperor, which he communicated to him (Navagero), saying, however, that the Emperor had desired him not to mention them to anybody. First of all he uttered much abuse of Cardinal Wolsey, saying that he was the cause of whatever the King did, and that he does not further this business for the welfare of Christendom, but from personal am-ambition, and because he wishes the whole world to be dependent on him. On the King the Emperor relies entirely, but does not know what trust can be placed in Wolsey, and would therefore be much more content were the affair treated at Rome by the Pope. He therefore wrote to the King that he had already sent Cesare Feramosca to Rome on account of this peace, and written to the Pope to take this thing to heart as father-general of Christendom; that he, the Emperor, referred every dispute to him, and would be his good and obedient son, provided the other Christian powers chose to do the like. That if the Pope assumed this charge, the Emperor, having offered it to him and requested his acceptance of it, did not know how to revoke it; but should the Pope refuse, the Emperor is content that the King mediate to obtain so great a blessing. The Emperor then told the Nuncio that the King of England, in reply to his letters, writes that he is very glad that his Majesty is content to refer all his disputes to him, whereas he never wrote such a thing. Notwithstanding, in his present reply the Emperor does not contradict the assertion, but leaves the matter in doubt, lest it deter the King from his good intention of accomplishing this peace, though in reality he does not mean to refer the matter to him entirely, but to have it negotiated in England by the ambassadors of the powers; and should there be any hope of an adjustment, he would in that case even refer many things to him, though he would prefer having the negotiation in the Pope's hands.

1526.

The Emperor next commenced speaking to the Nuncio about French affairs, and said that from his wish for a general peace he would consent to release the King's sons without money, provided the King gave security for remaining at peace, though the Emperor suspects that even on these terms he would say that, rather than bind himself not to make war, he declined receiving his sons.

This intention of releasing the children without ransom he requested the Nuncio not to mention to any one, adding that it was contrary to the wish of all his ministers, but that he had determined thus to do. He (Navagero) does not believe the Emperor means to release the hostages absolutely without money, but that were peace made he thinks of binding the King, by giving him his sons, to send a certain fair amount of troops against the Turks.

In addition, the Emperor said he was determined at any rate to attack the Turks, and that he found all his subjects much disposed that way, though were there no one but himself alone in person with his weapons he would go on this expedition, considering himself bound thus to do. That he knew that he also was a mortal man, and had defects, and amongst the rest that he was tardy to decide, and had allowed many things to be delayed through neglect. That he meant now to conquer his nature and be very diligent, and would lose no opportunity whatever for arriving at this end. That the whole world might wage as much war on him as they pleased, and the King of France take Spain should he think fit, but that for the object of defeating the Turks he (the Emperor) would abandon everything. Therefore the Nuncio was to write to the Pope, that perceiving this to be the Emperor's intention, he on his part was not to fail doing what he could; and should the Pope be of the same mind, the Emperor would not fear the whole world, and promises certain victory. These words he uttered so earnestly that the Nuncio is of opinion that he thinks solely of this Turkish expedition, and would make the fairest possible terms of peace [with France]. If this comes to pass, it must not be attributed to virtue but to necessity. The dread of the Turks has greatly changed the general opinion; the Spanish grandees show themselves most ready, and wish for peace in Italy. Many of them, including the Archbishop of Toledo, have made the Emperor great offers.

1526.

By the English gentleman above mentioned [Osborne Echingham] received letters from the Venetian secretary in France, desiring him, should he be requested by the French ambassador, again to make a joint protest with him to the Emperor, as the Nuncio would do the like. The Nuncio hesitates much to do so, but should the English ambassador and the Nuncio go, he (Navagero) will accompany them. On the first occasion the English ambassador did not choose to go, but approved of their going. At present Lee would not only refuse to go if the occasion presented itself, but also disapproves of others going. The Nuncio is much more in doubt now than he was the first time, because he subsequently received a brief from the Pope desiring him to seek peace. Is therefore in great suspense. In the meanwhile he (Navagero) and the Nuncio have conferred with the French ambassador, who has no further commission on the subject; on the contrary, the King writes to him that the Emperor having offered to become a party to the peace (intrar in la pace), he, the King, was perfectly content, and would do all that was fair, and pay any suitable ransom for his sons, most especially considering the present peril of Christendom. The King therefore desires Calvimont to ascertain thoroughly whether this is really the Emperor's intention and not [mere] words. Calvimont has not only done as desired, but also endeavoured to ascertain whether the English gentleman [Echingham] is the bearer of any other private instructions, and seems to place no trust whatever in the King of England. Does not know whether the suspicion proceeds from Calvimont himself, but feels sure it is false. Calvimont requested him (Navagero) likewise to investigate the matter. Ascertained that the gentleman came solely about this negotiation for peace, which interests the King of England principally from his wish to be the person in whose hands so important a decision and the affairs of all Christendom are placed.

Calvimont and Lee are not on friendly terms, either from the natural hatred between the French and the English, or from their not agreeing together (perchè un non si confa con l'altro). This, perhaps renders Calvimont suspicious; besides which, he himself says that by nature he always thinks evil. Has been unable to discover that the English gentleman is the bearer of anything more than is above written.

Granada, 2nd December 1526.

[Italian.]

1526.

Dec. 2.

1451. GASPARO SPINELLI to his Brother LODOVICO.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 370.

I endeavoured to see the portraits which the Duchess of Alençon's secretary brought as a present for his Majesty here, and which were assuredly very well contrived. It pleased and gratified me not a little to see them, and I will describe to you the form and quality of these gifts, thus adding to the satisfaction experienced by myself individually; but your imagination must supply the defects of my language.

Picture to yourself in the first place the shape of a flat, round, glass fire-screen, rather larger than those sold on St. Mark's Square, and of the sort which open; but the cover is fastened on one side, being of most delicately wrought gold, and on opening it one fold contains the portrait of the most Christian King, painted on paper* to the very life, and around it, engraved on the gold, is a double F thus, FF, for his own name Francis and for France. On the other fold of the cover are two columns, based on dry land, and between them flows the sea, thus separating the soil on which each of them is placed. To explain everything clearly, I must tell you that at the summit the two columns join, and are surmounted by a hat, round which the following two verses are inscribed:—

"Quos terra oceani quos separat unda, voluntas una duos firma jungit amicitia."

Over the ground of this picture a number of small scrolls are scattered, each containing a word, all together forming a verse thus:—

"Firma fides tibi me et virtus tua fecit amicum."

The other gift was of similar design, opening in like manner, and of gold very excellently wrought. On the outside of the cover, in its centre, was an antique white tablet, inscribed with these two verses:—

"In patre nam veri meritum tam nomen amici, Eripere et natos te quoque velle decet."

On raising the cover there appeared on one side the portrait of the Dauphin, H, and of the Duke of Orleans with h7. The other side of the cover externally bore a knotted chain, the space being filled up with a variety of knots.

It would be very difficult to express the delight which these gifts caused his Majesty, for the demonstration was extreme (troppo grande), and will testify eternally to the most Christian King's obligation to him. As I only saw the things once, and not at my leisure, you will therefore excuse me if the account is less clear than needed for comprehension; but at any rate I was unwilling to omit sending you the description, however imperfectly, and to explain the device of the columns, although you will very easily have understood it. I should tell you that one represents France, the other England; the one being white, emblematical of Faith, the other violet, signifying Love, whose hat joins the two columns.

London, 2nd December 1526. Registered by Sanuto, 3rd January 1527.

[Italian.]

* "Carta," perhaps for "carta pecora," vellum.

1526.

Dec. 3.

Lettere del
Collegio
(Secreta),
File no. 10.

1452. The DOGE and COLLEGE to GASPARO SPINELLI, Secretary in England.

Conjointly with the Papal Nuncio and the French ambassador to act for the benefit of the undertaking.

[Italian.]

Dec. 11.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 277.

1453. FALSE REPORT concerning CARDINAL WOLSEY.

Report from France, by way of Coir, that Cardinal Wolsey had arrived at the French Court from England, which, if true, is very important.

[Italian.]

Dec. 12.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 360.

1454. LETTER received by the Prothonotary CASAL, English Ambassador in Venice.

The most Christian King has sent the mandates for negotiating the agreement to Spain, and the Emperor ought to consent to make peace (as the Pope well nigh forgives the injuries done him by the Colonna faction,) and admit that it is better for the duchy of Milan to be held by the present Duke, although he has offended him, the Emperor, rather than by the most Christian King.

Poissi, 8th and 12th Dec. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd Jan. 1527.

[Italian.]

Dec. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 424.

1455. ANDREA ROSSO to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

"An envoy" from the English King has arrived here with a commission to negotiate the marriage of the Princess of England with his most Christian Majesty. Thinks it will be effected, because the King of England no longer demands the restitution of Boulogne.

Poissy, 24th December. Registered by Sanuto, 17th Jan. 1527.

[Italian.]

Dec. 24.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 434.

1456. FRENCH ADVICES forwarded to the DOGE and SIGNORY by the BAILIFF and CAPTAIN of CREMA.

On the 18th Morette arrived with the First Chamberlain of England.† They have come to conclude the marriage of the King with the English Princess.

St. Germain's, 24th December 1526. Registered by Sanuto, 19th January 1527.

[Italian.]

Dec. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 360.

1457. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The King has been much pleased with two pictures sent to him by his most Christian Majesty, representing his two sons, the Dauphin and the Duke of Orleans, now in Spain. He (the King of England) has promised to do everything for their release. Should the marriage take place, Boulogne, which France is to surrender,

* Sir William Fitzwilliam. (See "State Papers," vi. 552.) The other English ambassadors in France were Clerk, Bishop of Bath, and Ghinucci, Bishop of Worcester. (Ibid.)

† "Primo Giamberlan de Inghalterra." Sir William Fitzwilliam was the ambassador here alluded to; but he was only Treasurer of the Household.

1526.

England will give back. The King of England will negotiate the peace between the Emperor and Italy. The duchy of Milan is to be placed in his, the King of England's, hands, and he is to settle these disputes.

- London, 27th December. Registered by Sanuto, 2nd Jan. 1527.
[Italian.]

Dec. 27.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 445.

1458. MARCO ANTONIO VENIER to the DOGE and SIGNORY.

The negotiations for the marriages continue. Details conversations with Cardinal Wolsey.

London, 27th December. Registered by Sanuto, 21st Jan. 1527.
[Italian.]

Dec. 29.

Sanuto Diaries,
v. xliii. p. 450.

1459. The SAME to the SAME.

This morning they are sending 25,000 ducats to the Pope, and intent on the marriage of the Princess of England to the King of France, on the conclusion of which the Cardinal says the King of England will then declare himself the Emperor's enemy, having despatched an envoy to the Emperor, to protest against his waging war on the Pope or the Church, of whom his Majesty is the defender.

London, 29th December. Registered by Sanuto, 23rd Jan. 1527.
[Italian.]

APPENDIX.

1455.

April 15.
Library of the Venetian
Archives.

1460. PROTEST for NON-PAYMENT of a BILL of EXCHANGE for 267 ducats and 20 gross.

Drawn at Venice at usance on the 15th April 1455, by Alvise di Stefano di Zuanne, on Lodovico Strozzi and Co., in London, payable to themselves; value received in Venice from Zuan Muzarelli and Brothers, at the exchange of 44 sterlings per ducat.

Protest registered by the notary public (by Imperial authority) William Styfford, at his dwelling in Lombard Street, parish of St. Nicholas Acon, on the 1st July 1455, the bill broker, Beligardo de Bardis, certifying that on that day, in London, the Venetian ducat was worth 40 $\frac{1}{2}$ sterling.

Witnesses: Omobono Gritti, of Venice, and Francesco Cristian, of Bologna.

[Protest in Latin. Copy of the bill in the original Italian. Protest and copy, 18 lines. Notarial signature, 3 lines. Parchment.]

Aug. 8.

Library of the Venetian
Archives.

1461. PROTEST for NON-PAYMENT of a BILL of EXCHANGE for 180 ducats.

Drawn at Venice, at usance, on the 8th August 1455, by Andrea Mocenigo, son of the late Lazzaro; payable to Omobono Gritti, in London; value received in Venice from Maffio and Ambroso Contarini, at the exchange of 46 sterlings per ducat.

Protest registered by the notary public (by Imperial authority) William Styfford [&c., &c., as in former protest], on the 8th November 1455, the bill broker, Francesco Cristiano, certifying that on that day, in London, the Venetian ducat was worth 41 sterling.

Witnesses: Lorenzo Barbarigo, of Venice, and Bonifatio de Meralia, of Genoa.

[Protest in Latin. Copy of the bill in the original Italian. Protest and copy, 19 lines. Notarial signature, 4 lines. Parchment.]

Oct. 17.

Library of the Venetian
Archives.

1462. PROTEST for NON-PAYMENT of a BILL of EXCHANGE for 300 ducats.

Drawn at Venice, at usance, on the 17th October 1455, by Andrea Mocenigo, son of the late messer Lazzaro, on Filippo and Andrea Graziani, in London, payable to himself; value received in Venice from Marianno de' Colti, and nephew, at the exchange of 46 sterlings per ducat.

Protest registered by the notary public (by Imperial authority) William Styfford [&c., as in former protest], on the 17th January 1455 (style of the Anglican Church), the bill broker, Giovanni 1455.

Deduinsis, certifying that on that day in London the Venetian ducat was worth $41\frac{5}{6}$ sterling.

Witnesses: Simeone Nory and Nicolò de Rabata, of Firenze.

[Protest in Latin. Copy of the bill in the original Italian. Protest and copy, 22 lines. Notarial signature, 4 lines. Parchment.]

1466.

Jan. 25.

Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1463. POPE PAUL II. to JAMES [III.] King of Scotland.

Has received his letters in favour of Patrick [Graham], now Bishop of St. Andrew's, whose promotion the King had earnestly desired, and whom the Pope, knowing the King's wish and Patrick's virtues and deserts, raised to be bishop and pastor of the church of St. Andrew. Has always loved the King's ancestors, and the realm of Scotland, with paternal affection. Bears special goodwill to the King by reason of the excellent disposition and fair hopes of which he gave indication from his earliest years * (as narrated to the Pope by many persons), and on account of his devotion to the Pope and the Apostolic see. His Holiness therefore, to the utmost of his power, even when of lower grade, always showed himself well affected towards the honour and dignity of the King and of his kingdom; and will continue to do so.

Exhorts him, therefore, to persevere in defending and protecting the dominion (statum), honour, and ecclesiastical liberty of him (the Pope) and the Apostolic See; and to assist with every subsidy and support the work of the holy crusade, which the Pope will embrace and continue with all his might.

St. Mark's at Rome, 8 Kal. Feb. 1465, "anno secundo."†

Signed:—"D. Depisciaë."

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 33 lines.]

1470.

June 1.

Library of the Venetian
Archives.

1464. PROTEST for NON-PAYMENT of a BILL of EXCHANGE for 166 ducats and 16 gross.

Drawn at Venice, at usance, on the 1st June 1470, by Bernardo de Zuanne Drapier and brothers and nephews; value received in Venice from Marchiò de' Colti and nephews on Alvise Malombra, in London; payable to himself at the exchange of 55 sterlings per ducat.

Protest registered by the notary public (by Imperial authority), William Slade, at his dwelling in Lombard Street, parish of St. Nicholas Acon, on the 1st September 1470, the bill broker, Manfredo de' Nochi, certifying that on that day in London the Venetian ducat was worth $50\frac{1}{2}$ sterling.

* James III. ascended the throne in A.D. 1460, at the age of seven years.

† The palace of St. Mark at Rome was built by the Venetian Cardinal Pietro Barbo, who on the 31st August 1464, became Pope Paul II., and for some months after his election continued to reside in the building dedicated by him to the patron saint of his native land. The subsequent drafts, authenticated by Paul II., are dated from St. Peter's. In 1564, Pope Pius IV. presented the palace of St. Mark to the republic of Venice, and it is now the residence of the Austrian embassy.

1470.

Witnesses: Gabriele de' Ursi, of Bologna, and Girolamo Vinazexi, of Venice.

[Protest in Latin. Copy of the bill in the original Italian. Protest and copy, 20½ lines. Notarial signature, 3 lines. Parchment.] 1471.

Jan. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1465. POPE PAUL II. to the ARCHBISHOP of YORK (GEORGE NEVILL).

James Goldwell, his (the Pope's) notary, has long frequented the Papal Court, evincing invariably all discretion, integrity, and prudence. Can bear witness to the diligence and fidelity with which during his administration he has transacted the business both of the Archbishop and of his other clients. In the Archbishop's affairs especially he displayed no ordinary uprightness; and always commended him to the Pope. He is now going to England on his (the Pope's) business. Requests the Archbishop to receive him courteously and graciously, and to support him with his favour and protection in all quarters, so that he may the more speedily return to the Pope. St. Peter's, Rome, 28th January, 1471, etc., 7th year.

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 22 lines.]

Jan. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1466. POPE PAUL II. to THOMAS [ARCHBISHOP] OF CANTERBURY, Cardinal.*

Believes it unnecessary to render testimony to the fidelity, diligence, and discretion of James Goldwell, his (the Pope's) notary, in all matters committed to him during his administration. He is now going to England on his Holiness's business. Recommends him to the Archbishop, whose affairs he has always diligently negotiated.

St. Peter's, Rome, 28th January, 1471, 7th year.

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 20 lines.]

Jan. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1467. POPE PAUL II. to GEORGE [DUKE] OF CLARENCE.†

James Goldwell, our notary, is going to England on certain business concerning us. He is a man of probity and discretion, and well deserving of you, because, in like manner as in other affairs confided to him, so especially concerning your marriage dispensation,‡ he comported himself excellently; and he has always given good testimony of you. We exhort you to give Goldwell good greeting and assistance, and to show him favour in all quarters and with everybody.

Relying on your goodwill towards Goldwell, we allow him to depart.

St. Peter's, Rome, 28th January 1471, 7th year.

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 14 lines.]

Jan. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1468. POPE PAUL II. to RICHARD, EARL OF WARWICK.

Our notary, James Goldwell, has ably conducted himself during his administration at the Papal Court in all affairs relating to your

* Thomas Bouchier. His full title in this document is as follows:—"Cardinal priest with the title of St. Cyriac at the Baths" (Sancti Kyriani in thermis).

† The Pope addresses Clarence as his "beloved son." He uses the same style in the next letter to Warwick.

‡ George Duke of Clarence married Isabel Nevill at Calais in 1460 or 1461. (See Lingard, vol. iv. p. 480; also Hall, Polydore Virgili, Burke, etc.)

1471.

Lordship and the Archbishop of York, your cousin (germanus ~~un~~).^{*}
As he is now going to England, we recommend him to you.

St. Peter's, Rome, 28th January 1471, 7th year. Despatched the penultimate day of February.

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 19 lines.]

II. Endorsement on the foregoing draft, presented to Pope Paul II., for his approval by the Datary [Leonardo Griffi?].

Your Holiness writes to the Archbishop of York, testifying that the Prothonotary of England, during his administration, conducted himself discreetly and prudently. The Prothonotary is now going to England, with a certain commission, moreover from your Holiness, who exhorts the Archbishop to favour and protect the Prothonotary.

Your Holiness writes in the same sense to the Cardinal of Canterbury, the Earl of Warwick, and the Duke of Clarence, for whom the Prothonotary obtained the marriage dispensation.

[Latin, 9 lines.]

1473.

Sept. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1469. POPE SIXTUS IV. to EDWARD IV., King of the English.
Has lately conferred on Stephen, Cardinal Priest, by the title of St. Adrian at Milan, the deanery of the church of Salisbury, and promoted the venerable brother James Goldwell, its late dean, to the vacant church of Norwich; the appointment being at the Pope's disposal, as stated more at length in the letters whereby he has conferred it. As the Cardinal is now sending to take possession of the deanery, the Pope exhorts the King to order his officials and subjects to assist the Cardinal with such favour that he may pacifically obtain possession. Although this is only just, it will be most agreeable to the Pope, and will give Cardinal Adrian opportunity for promoting the affairs of the King and the kingdom with his Holiness.

St Peter's, Rome, 28th September 1473, 3rd year.

(Signed) L. Grifus, [the Datary, Leonardo Griffi.]

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 20 lines.]

Sept. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1470. POPE SIXTUS IV. to THOMAS BOURCHIER, Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury.

To the same effect as the foregoing; same date.

[Original draft. Latin.]

Sept. 28.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1471. POPE SIXTUS IV. to GUGLIELMO CANNISANO, Merchant, of Florence, [Privy] Councillor of Edward IV.[†]

To urge the King to render favour and assistance to the Cardinal of St. Adrian.

Same date as the foregoing.

[Original draft, paper. Latin.]

* The datary who drew up these drafts for the Pope's approval apparently styles the Archbishop the Earl's "cousin" (not brother), because the same paragraph gives the Archbishop the title of the Pope's brother, which could not have been extended even indirectly to any layman.

† "Consiliario regio."

1484.
July 30.

Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1472. POPE SIXTUS IV. to RICHARD III.

Has heard of the publication of an edict by his Majesty, for all the Genoese trading in his kingdom to sell their merchandise within one year, on the expiration of which term the unsold goods are to be forfeited entirely. This has much angered and displeased the Pope, nor can he persuade himself that the act proceeds from the King, but rather from the evil persuasions of certain persons, who hope to derive advantage thence to the detriment of his Majesty's honour. It is evident that the object of such an edict is to enable the inhabitants of the kingdom to purchase the said goods at their own price, or to compel the Genoese to lose them from lack of customers. For this the King will be held infamous by all men, as the measure is at variance with civilization, and contrary to the law of nations whose territories are reciprocally frequented by merchants in safety and freedom. For the honour of the King, which he holds very dear, the Pope regrets these things extremely. At this commencement of the King's reign in [accordance with] the first expectation of his virtue (virtutis) and just administration, the Pope would have wished him, in this and other laudable customs, to follow the footsteps of his ancestors, who always treated the Genoese with favour, and allowed them to trade freely, no less for the convenience of the King's subjects, who derived no slight advantage thence, than for that of the Genoese, the Pope's countrymen.* Exhorts the King, therefore, to repeal this edict.

Rome, 30th July 1484, 13th† year.

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 29 lines.]

1485.
April 23.

Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1473. POPE INNOCENT VIII. to the COLLECTOR of the FRUITS due to the Apostolic Treasury in the Kingdom of England.

Heretofore Giovanni Ambrogio de' Negroni, a Genoese merchant residing in London, in obedience to the letters of Sixtus IV., settled and paid the annats for Walter [Fitzsimons], Archbishop of Dublin (that see being then, as it were, vacant), disbursing 3,816 ducats, which through Francesco and Domenico de' Centurioni, also Genoese merchants, liege men of the Court of Rome, were, moreover, paid [to the Papal treasury]. Giovanni Ambrogio, relying on the good faith of the Archbishop, consigned to him the letters authorizing him to take possession of the see of Dublin. The Archbishop has hitherto refused payment, and caused Tomaso de' Negroni and other agents to be treated with disrespect.

The Pope therefore, at the suit of Giovanni Ambrogio, commands the collector to admonish the Archbishop, under penalty of being interdicted entry into the Church, and of being suspended a divinis

* Sixtus IV., by name Francesco d' Albescola della Rovere, was the son of a fisherman of Celle, a village, five leagues from Savona. He was elected Pope 9th August, 1471, and died 13th August 1484, a fortnight after the date of this brief to Richard III.

† Pope Sixtus IV. was elected on the 9th August 1471. (See L'Art de vérifier les Dates.)

1485.

by Papal authority, to pay the aforesaid sum in the course of October next.

Rome, 23rd April 1485, 1st year.

[Original draft, paper. Latin, 28 lines.]

1489.

April 2.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1474. POPE INNOCENT VIII. to PIETRO FANELLI, of Sezza, Priest of the Diocese of Terracina.

Absolves him from all penalties for having conceded false letters to Selibert Andrews (Seliberto Andreae), authorizing him to preach the Word of God in the kingdom of England, so that all Christians hearing his sermons and masses were to be made partakers of certain indulgences, obtained from the Pope.

Rome, 2nd April 1489, 5th year.

Endorsed: Absolution for falsification of Apostolic letters.*

[Original, paper. Latin, 60 lines.]

[1489 ?].

July 21.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1475. JOHN MORTON, Archbishop of Canterbury, to POPE INNOCENT VIII.

A few days ago there arrived in London, to exercise the office of Collector, the Pope's most worthy "scriptor," Dom. Adrian Castellese, from whom he received several letters from his Holiness. The first recommended Dom. Adrian, whose deserts are of no ordinary nature. The second contained an order from the Pope concerning the restitution and remittance of certain letters from his Holiness authenticated by the leaden seal, and conceded to moderate and restrict the right of sanctuary in England. These letters never reached the Archbishop's hands, but were delivered at once to the King, with whom they have remained ever since. From the Pope's third letter, the Archbishop readily comprehends his anxiety to make peace between France and England. For its establishment and perpetuity the Archbishop has exerted himself to the utmost. The King is so averse to the effusion of Christian blood, that he wishes for peace, although most disadvantageous for him; as the Papal Legate, the Bishop of Concordia, may have heard from the King's own lips. But such an unbridled rage for domination has seized the French, that not content with their own boundaries, they daily annex neighbouring kingdoms to their own empire, as the provinces belonging to the King of the Romans, the King of Spain, the Duke of Burgundy, and to the orphan Duchess of Brittany. In consequence of this, not from his own will, but from the necessity of defending the oppressed and those who are orphans, his Majesty is provoked to war, and the more so because, whilst the present peace was in course of negotiation, they fraudulently and dishonorably made preparations for a most fierce war against the most noble orphan the Duchess of Brittany.

Concerning the case of Sir John Kendal, knows that he has great merits which have long bound him (Morton) to his interests; and

* The name "Hier. Balbanus" is inscribed on the margin of the draft, and was perhaps the signature of the Datary.

[1489.?]]

Kendal is in the Pope's service,* Morton's love for him is increased. Will therefore take care that everything shall redound to his honour and advantage; but the King resents his having assumed the name of his priory† without asking his Majesty's advice or tendering him the oath of allegiance.‡ Notwithstanding, believes that by reason of the King's singular devotion towards the Pope, he will bear everything more tranquilly.

Recommends to the Pope Dom. John de Giglis as a most obedient servant, and most devoted son. In all matters committed to him he has always evinced so much discretion as never to give the slightest offence. His merits are well known to the Pope.

Lambeth, 21st July [no date of year].

(Signed) Most humble creature,
Jo. Cantuar.

[Original, parchment. Latin, 26 lines.]

Aug. 14.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1476. JOHN MORTON, Archbishop of Canterbury, to POPE INNOCENT VIII.

On the 6th of August the ambassador of the King of Naples arrived in London, bringing a present of certain horses for his Majesty (the King of England). He did not announce the commission given him, but should he undertake to negotiate anything detrimental to the honour and advantage of the Pope and the Apostolic see, Morton will do his utmost to prevent him from attaining his object, which he (Morton) will speedily notify to his Holiness.§ Is of opinion that the attempt to move the King against the Roman See will be vain, his Majesty's devotion towards it being such that he would not tolerate so much as a word the least offensive to the Pope's dignity.

Has no intelligence of these parts worth communicating, save that the truce between the English and French having been broken,—and this he writes with great sorrow,—all things are now ferociously transacted (aguntur) by fire and sword; for, as he has frequently written to the Pope, the French, not satisfied with their own boundaries, strive constantly to deprive the orphan Duchess of Brittany of her inheritance by force of arms, so that his Majesty of England is compelled to go to war against his will.

Lambeth, 14th August [no date of year].

(Signed) Most humble creature,
Jo. Cantuar.

[Original, parchment. Latin, 9 lines.]

* "Quod sanctitatis vestrae rebus inserviat."

† "Nomen prioratus ipsius usurpaverit."

‡ In the Plumptre Correspondence (Camden Society publications, 1839, p. 118), it is stated that the "exact date" of Sir John Kendal's nomination to the priory of St. John's "is not ascertained; the earliest discovered is the year 1491." The Archbishop of Canterbury now shows that already in 1489 the title had been assumed by Sir John Kendal, somewhat to the displeasure of Henry VII., who, however, subsequently employed him diplomatically, as mentioned by Lord Bacon (Life of Henry VII., p. 418 ed. London, 1854). In vol. i., Venetian Calendar, it is seen that abroad Sir John Kendal was styled "Prior of England" as early as the 19th April 1485.

§ On St. Peter's day (29th June) 1489, Pope Innocent VIII. excommunicated Ferdinand I., King of Naples, who seems to have sent immediately to Henry VII., to complain of this act.

[1489 ?]

Dec. 3.
Archives,
Venice,
Library.1477. JOHN MORTON, Archbishop of Canterbury, to POPE INNOCENT VIII.

Received the Pope's letter in recommendation of Sir John Kendal. Will exert himself in Kendal's behalf, and do all he can to obtain for his affairs the King's favour. Prays the Pope's favour for himself, as he is the Pope's most unworthy creature and formation (facturam). Nothing has happened in these western parts of the world worthy of being written to his Holiness, save that the King's most illustrious Majesty is preparing for war against the King of the French. Great calamities will thus be caused to Christendom. Prays God to suppress these dissensions so that a true peace may be established, to effect which he will do his utmost.

Lambeth, 3rd December.

(Signed) Most humble creature,
Jo. Cantuar.

[Original, parchment. Latin, 7 lines.]

[1496.]

Dec. 3.
Sforza Archives,
Milan.1478. ANTONIO SPINOLA to FRANCESCO SFORZA, DUKE of MILAN.

The day before yesterday arrived at Genoa, and received letters from England dated 8th October (sic). The King "his Lord" and the whole Court were in good plight at Windsor Castle. Encloses a copy of the news, word for word, as written by a trustworthy gentleman, a member of the King's Council. Hopes within a week to receive a messenger from England. They will thus know all the news; God grant it may be good. Should the Duke choose to have it transmitted, he shall be obeyed willingly. Would have gone to the Duke on his (Spinola's) return from Rome, but business letters from the King awaited him at Genoa, and he had to execute the commissions contained in them. Hopes to return to the King on the arrival of the messenger; in the meanwhile awaits the Duke's commands for England. In his (Spinola's) letters to the King, he gave account of the favour shown him by the Duke for love of his Majesty.

Genoa, 3rd December.

[Original, Italian.]

II. Copy of a letter enclosed in the foregoing, written by a Privy Councillor at Windsor, where the King and his Council then were, to Antonio Spinola.—Dated 24th September (sic).

The French are much surprised and alarmed by the league stipulated between the King our Lord and the Pope.† To prevent his Majesty from assisting his Holiness, they sent Mons. de Concre-sault to Scotland,‡ whereupon the Scots broke the agreement lately

* The date of this letter and its enclosure is uncertain. By the Venetian Calendar vol. i. entry 738, we learn that Antonio Spinola was in the service of Henry VII. in the year 1496.*

† The Holy League, ratified by Henry VII. at Windsor, 23rd September 1496. See Venetian Calendar, vol. i., no. 712.

‡ Concerning his "receiving" at St. Andrew's, at the beginning of September 1496, see Ellis's "Original Letters," vol. i., p. 26.

[1496.]

made with Monsignor de Durano [the Bishop of Durham], and took the field with as great a force as they could muster. To oppose them the Signor de Duran and the Earl of Surrey mustered in Richmond, York, and Northumberland 30,000 men, now on the Scotch territory, well determined to give battle to the Scots, who, on hearing this, offered to disband if the King would pay the cost incurred by them in raising their army for France. His reverend Lordship (el Reverendissimo Maestro) declined the offer, not holding the Scots in any account, and indeed tomorrow morning (to the praise of God) will go to Clingoure (sic) and from thence into Scotland. He (the writer) and others who accompany the King believe he will make such a march that the King of Scotland will be unable to do him any harm, and that he will easily conquer the Scots, who did what they have done at the instigation of the French.

[Copy, Italian.]

[1502.]

[May?]

Miscellany,
Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1479. DOGE LEONARDO LOREDANO to KING HENRY VII.

The affection borne by him and the entire Senate towards the renowned and glorious family of the most serene Kings of England was, and always is, such that nothing either prosperous or adverse can befall his royal Highness without its being shared by the Signory. Therefore, on hearing of the death of his Serenity's son, they were inexpressibly grieved, and by so much the more as he came to an untimely end when offering a rare example, worthy of the royal succession, and from which his noble father might hope the best. This mutual disaster would grieve them much more, if they did not bear in mind the common law of nature, to which there is no exception; and they derive comfort from the orthodox dogma (orthodoxa sententia) of their most holy religion, which teaches them that, by the hidden counsel of his wisdom, God calls to himself those who please him. Thus do they firmly believe has it happened to his Majesty's son, owing to his singular and excellent qualities and rare mental endowments.

His Majesty, being most sage, must therefore mitigate his grief, and utterly renounce mourning; and they exhort him to bear in mind that he is a most Christian Prince and King, appointed by God over his family as his vicegerent in that most flourishing realm, to govern human society, and to guide it for the attainment of such things as lead to immortality. In order that this may be effected as required by the King's state and condition, and that he may the more freely exert himself for the advantage of Christendom, they earnestly and cordially beseech his Majesty thus to do, and pray God very long to keep him safe and prosperous.

[Undated draft. Latin. Writing and paper of the end of the 15th, or beginning of the 16th century.]

1504.

June 10.

Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1480. POPE JULIUS II. to HENRY VII.

Alludes to the English ambassadors at Rome, viz., Cardinal Adrian and Gilbert Talbot. Requests assistance for the recovery of the cities and towns in the Romagna. Refers himself to what will be 1504.

stated more in detail by Gilbert Talbot, who is on the point of returning to England.

St. Peter's, 10th June 1504.

Signed: Sigismundus.

[Contemporary copy. Latin. Addressed: Char^{mo} in Christo filio nostro Henrico Angliæ regni Ill.]

July 8.

Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1481. PROTEST for NON-PAYMENT of a BILL of EXCHANGE for 250 ducats.

Drawn at Venice, at usance, on the 8th July 1504, by Zuan Saba and Bernardin Contarini, on Do. Stefano Fazan, in London; value received in Venice from Alvise and Francesco Pasqualigo, and to be placed to account of Lorenzo Pasqualigo, at the exchange of 53½ sterlings per ducat.

Protest registered by the notary public (by Imperial and Apostolic authority), Roberto Cressy, at his dwelling in Lombard Street, parish of St. Mary Wolnoth, on the 9th October 1504; the bill broker, Nicolò Bonizzi, certifying that on that day in London the Venetian ducat was worth 49½ sterling.

Witnesses: Nicolò Duodo of Venice and Giacomo di Ponte of Genoa.

[Protest in Latin. Copy of the bill in the original Italian. Protest and copy, 45 lines. Notarial signature, 7 lines. Parchment.]

Sept. 1.

Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1482. PIETRO CARMELIANO, Latin Secretary of Henry VII., to LUCA VALARESSO, Venetian nobleman in London.

I am as well disposed to watch over that affair, as if it was a matter of life and death to me. You know what you wrote to me about the great matter. The thing is again revived, and that great vicar (quel grande vicario?) is employing certain subtle means to obtain favour for himself here, and has written about it (et la scritto?). I, being as you know devoted to our State, have hitherto procrastinated, and shall continue to do so as long as I can, with all art and to the utmost of my power, so that no reply whatever may be given. Believe me that he is devising mischief against you (pensa male verso voi), and in a very few days this will be openly manifest. I purpose writing to you in a few days more at length and more plainly, as the briefs begin to revive and multiply.

Arundel, 1st September 1504.

Yours entirely, P. C. B*.

[Original, Italian.]

Sept. 20.

Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1483. PROTEST for NON-PAYMENT of a BILL of EXCHANGE for 250 ducats.

Drawn at Venice, at usance, on the 20th September 1504, by Battista and Silvestro Torto, on Pietro da Pesaro, in London, payable to themselves; value received in Venice from Alvise and

* Pietro Carmeliano of Brescia.

1504.

Francesco Pasqualigo, and to be placed to the account of Antonio Bavarino, at the exchange of $53\frac{1}{2}$ sterlings per ducat.

Protest registered by the notary public (by Imperial authority), John Devereux, at his dwelling in Lombard Street, parish of St. Mary Wolnoth, on the 23rd December 1504; the bill broker, Bernardo Talani, certifying that on that day in London the Venetian ducat was worth $50\frac{3}{4}$ sterling.

Witnesses: Andrea de Molino, of Venice, and Giovanni Vittore, of Florence, merchants.

[Protest, in Latin. Copy of the bill in the original Italian. Protest and copy, 24 lines. Notarial signature, 6 lines. Parchment.]

Sept. 24,
Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1484. PIETRO CARMELIANO of BRESCIA, Latin Secretary of Henry VII., to LEONARDO LOREDANO, Doge of Venice.

As he is the subject of the Doge and Signory, would fain have it in his power to show his faithful service and devotion towards them in some great matter. Will at any rate demonstrate his zealous wish for the welfare of the State in such affairs as present themselves to him, by so much the more as he is in a place where opportunities occur for that purpose. Not to weary your Highness by too much discourse, I enclose herein a copy of a brief, word for word, whereby you will learn the disposition of the Holy Father. Here hitherto all goes well, thank God, and I hope in future to prevent any adversity from befalling your most illustrious Signory, whom I most humbly beseech to keep this thing so secret as not to do me dishonour, for otherwise it might cause my ruin and destruction. I will keep on the watch, and should anything else of importance occur, I will perform the office of a true and faithful servant, in accordance with my duty towards my country. I will address my letters to Messer Luca Valaresso, as he is a grave, prudent, and most trustworthy person, he alone, some while ago, having requested me thus to do; and he will acquaint your Serenity both about myself individually and with regard to the other affairs.

London, 24th September 1504. Received at Venice 4th November.

[Italian, no signature.]

1514.
June 17.
Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1485. ANDREA BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in England, to PIETRO LANDO, Venetian Ambassador at Rome.

Wrote to him on the 6th ult., under cover of the letters of a Venetian, Auditor of the Bishop of Chieti,* Apostolic Nuncio in England, with whose own letters he also sent others to Lando on the 21st March, enclosing missives from the Signory. On the 6th ult. received Lando's letters of the 8th and 9th March, and on the 4th instant those of the 20th May.

* "De civita de Chieti." Chieti is a very ancient city in the Abruzzi, and its 56th bishop, Apostolic Nuncio in London, A.D. 1514, was Giovanni Pietro Caraffa, who reigned as Pope, with the title of Paul IV., from 23rd May 1555 to 18th August 1559. Panvinio, in his Lives of the Popes, alludes to the residence in England of Giovanni Pietro Caraffa, but assigns no date to it.

1514.

Although these last contain nothing of importance, considers the news good, and requests him to continue his exertions [for the peace] ; promises to do the like.

There arrived lately in London the General of Normandy,* styled here Grand Master (Gran Signor). Before he came, he sent a French herald to Calais, for a safeconduct, and also to arrange a truce, which last was not granted ; so he came here with a cartel (una breta, sic) to know the ransom required for the Duke of Longueville, which being generally known, he was answered that not having brought the ransom with him, and should he have nothing else to say, he was to depart in God's name.

He took for his excuse the captive Duke, who is in great favour, making himself most amiable ; so the King allowed him to write to France to his King, as he did. In the meanwhile I understand this individual (the General of Normandy?) is negotiating some adjustment between the two crowns, which will I think be effected. The business is conducted very secretly. The French King is near Paris with a good number of troops, and his towns (luochi) in Picardy are well garrisoned, so that he does not fear, but perhaps thinks by some fresh treaty to get married, and thus settle everything. Should this be verified Lando will know it immediately, but for his better information acquaints him that in these parts there are four ladies (4 done) of whom he, King Lewis, told the Dauphin [François] openly that he meant to take one, hoping to have a son, in which case he, the Dauphin, would remain Duke of Brittany, together with his possessions in France, and be a great prince, etc. (gran signor).

The four ladies above-mentioned are as follows :—

Madame Margaret, Duchess Dowager of Savoy, the Emperor's daughter.

One of the sisters of the Prince of Castile [Eleanor?], the Emperor's niece.

The Queen of Scotland, who was lately delivered of a son.

The sister of the King of England [Mary], who was promised to the aforesaid Prince of Castile, but the marriage has not been consummated, and she is in England.

Such are the negotiations on foot ; should a marriage come of them, there will be rejoicings.

In the meanwhile the Duke of Albany, favoured by the King of France, is still disturbing Scotland (“va anchora dando in Schozia”), choosing to be the Regent of that kingdom ; and the Queen with the Prince, her eldest son, oppose him. If agreed [about the marriage?] with the King of England her brother, it might easily be effected.

* * * * *

Having written thus far, informs him that 7,000 English landed in Normandy, and marched six miles inland, putting everything to fire and sword, and destroying property to the amount of 200,000 crowns.

* Thomas Bohier. See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. i., index.

1514.

The French troops have invaded the Rhenish territory (paexe di Renno), belonging to the Archduke of Burgundy, burning, destroying, and plundering, not sparing either sex, and using very great cruelty; so the Archduke sent hither, desiring succour from his own troops in the pay of the King of England, in number 2,000 horse; requiring also that arrangements be made for the marriage of his Majesty's sister to him the Archduke, as he suspects she may be demanded by France, and he lose her. It is not yet known what has been decided.

A certain Bishop of Tricarico [Lodovico Canossa] said to be a Veronese, has arrived here in great haste, and incognito, to favour (it is said) the peace with France, so that, if effected, the Pope may obtain the kingdom of Naples for his brother, the Magnifico Juliano. This Bishop remains concealed in his lodgings; nor will he show himself until acquainted with the decision, and then he will depart immediately. Expects the Bishop will do so in a few days, and convey news of some fresh marriage. There is also in London a Milanese,* who arrived lately as ambassador from the Emperor, now at Vienna. Does not know what the King will do.

London, 17th June 1514.

[Original letter, paper. Italian, 66 lines.]

1515.

Mar. 31.

Archives,
Venice,
Library.

1486. ANDREA BADOER, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

Wrote last on the 28th instant to the care of the ambassador in France, Messer Marco Dandolo; since when has little to tell, save that it is heard [†for certain, that the late Queen of France has been married by the Duké of Suffolk, the same who, less than two years ago, was a familiar in another person's service.‡

Being in favour with his sovereign, after the demise of the King of France he was sent thither, with some others, as ambassador, and performed his embassy in such wise, that he is now seen to have negotiated for himself; and it is supposed that he acted thus with the secret consent of the King, as notified to the Signory in his (Badoer's) foregoing letters, anticipating the result which is thoroughly verified. God grant that the marriage may not prove ill omened.

The whole kingdom clamours, and France likewise; so on hearing of this outcry, as they were proceeding hitherwards together, they received orders, in the event of their quitting France, not to come to England, but to go to Calais, to make less mischief. Is decidedly of opinion that they would be ill received, as he perceives the uproar to be very great, and most especially between the Lords and Commons (fra signori et populi), for on the day before yesterday, in Parliament, the latter well-nigh came to blows with the peers, who said that none of them had given their consent, with the excep-

* Query Giovanni Colla. See Mr. Brewer's Calendar, vol. i. entries, 5057, 5058, p. 800.

† Cipher within the brackets. The decipher is contemporary.

‡ "Fameglio in l'altrui servitii." Decipher is often so defective as to render it probable that in the present instance the original cipher contained an allusion to the court paid by the Duke of Suffolk to the Archduchess Margaret, concerning which see a previous letter of Badoer's, Venetian Calendar, vol. ii., entry no. 464, p. 184.

1516.

tion of the Archbishop of York, who has sprung up like a mushroom, and it will be no small matter if he gets out of this scrape.*

Will wait to see, and notify the result.†

Since his last, when with a friend of his, a great personage (signoroto), related to the King, who has always shown himself most friendly towards him (Badoer), and from whom he has sometimes heard secrets, he learned as follows. This individual has access to the King's chamber, and is also a member of his Council; and some days ago, it may perhaps be three weeks, a Florentine merchant, resident in London, showed him a letter from one of his correspondents in Florence, praising the Magnifico Julian, who in right of his wife, laid claim to Cyprus, unduly held by the Signory.‡

The letter was discussed, it being said that if the undertaking were continued, and the island changed masters. . . . This person has now arrived here and purposes dining with him (Badoer), who would fain die such a death as the Signory pleases, as at every hour of the day he is longing to throw himself into the Thames, being so ill-supplied with money by the State, that he certainly loses his wits; nor does he know how to continue writing and keep to his subject. Prays God to assist him. Has been two years without money; and as others are silent on the subject, he himself will repeat it. Should Cyprus change masters as aforesaid, his Majesty [of England] would have more right to it than anybody else, because when the Holy House (chaza santa) was taken [1191] Richard, King of England, conquered the island, and held it pacifically for many years (sic), so that the present King would have more right to it than others, though they thought it would be impossible for any but the Venetian Signory to keep possession, the State being paramount in all those seas; also that the kingdom [of Cyprus] was unimportant (de pocho momento), nor could anyone defend it against the power of Venice.

Such was the reply given to this merchant on behalf of his Majesty, who had the particulars from him, Badoer.

Thinks fit to announce these rodомontades (papaluelte), although they are held in small account; and also that the communication was made to him by the King's desire.

Requests, for the love of God, that the State will not forget him.

London, 31st March, 1515.

[Italian.]

* There is no mention in Hall of any assistance given by Wolsey to the Duke of Suffolk in aid of his marriage, which is well known to have been unpopular. In July 1516, Suffolk absented himself from the court, because, at the suggestion of Wolsey, the King refused to pay a debt contracted by him in France. In May 1517, as seen by the Mantuan correspondence (Venetian Calendar, vol. ii., p. 381), Suffolk was reconciled to Wolsey, and treated him most obsequiously.

† It is probable that Wolsey alluded to this support, when at the time of his downfall in 1529, he addressed Suffolk, thus:—"Sir, of all men living you have least reason to dispraise Cardinals; for if I, a poor Cardinal, had not been, you would not at this present have had a head upon your shoulders to make such a brag in disrepute of us, who have meant you no harm and have given you no cause of offence." (See Lingard, vol. iv. p. 258, ed. London, 1854.)

‡ Julian de' Medici claimed Cyprus in right of his wife Filiberta of Savoy, whom he married in February, 1515. Julian de' Medici died 17th May 1516.

1516.

Oct. 3.

Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1487. SEBASTIAN GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to the COUNCIL OF TEN.

In my foregoing letter* I mentioned having fully stated the contents of your Serenity's missives concerning the recovery of Verona, demonstrating how much its recovery, by securing peace, would facilitate hostilities against the Infidels, to the eternal glory of his Majesty.

Cardinal Wolsey replied,† "Lord Ambassador, you urge and stimulate us to make this general peace so as subsequently to make an expedition against the Infidels, which his Majesty is very ready to undertake; but you are the cause of preventing it, on account of this city of Verona; nor do you perceive that it will cause you to lose the rest of your state; for I certify this to you, that the Emperor and the King of France are now negotiating and treating very closely to arrange that Verona be deposited in the hands of the King-Catholic, who is to consign it to the King of France, on condition of its not getting into the hands of your Signory, and you will see that thus will it be; and on getting Verona rest assured that he aspires to the kingdom of Naples, for although he has agreed with the King-Catholic to give it him as dower,‡ it is a castle in the air, for never would the King-Catholic delay contracting marriage until he could obtain offspring through the puberty of the French Princess, and in case of his marrying elsewhere the kingdom of Naples is to return to the aforesaid King of France. You now comprehend what your plight will be, he possessing the Milanese, Verona, and the kingdom of Naples; for this I affirm to you, that were you not at present to his purpose and useful friends,§ he would be more openly your enemy, whereas now he is a covert foe, for he is certainly bent on your destruction, through the Turk and himself." He also repeated several times, "But another thing will befall you which, to my surprise, has not been seen or pondered by your Senate, namely, that all the Christian Princes, knowing for certain that you have rendered this King of France so great and powerful that he thinks he can command all the others, when they find you complaining of the wound inflicted by yourselves, not only will not assist you but will rejoice at your misfortune."

The Cardinal added many other words to this effect, which I do not write, to save your Serenity weariness. I answered him that for the present your Excellency will do and provide for your affairs as you best may, according to the nature of the times; yet were the crisis mentioned by his right reverend Lordship to take place, I stated my opinion that all the Christian powers will do what is for the good and security of their affairs, and not allow a member of this body (politic?) to perish, but that truly until now it does not

* See Venetian Calendar, vol. ii. pp. 325, 326, entry no. 781. This present missive, addressed to the Council of Ten, does not exist in the Giustinian copy-book, now preserved in St. Mark's Library.

† In the margin of the original there is a sign representing a cardinal's hat, signifying that the text of the letter related to Wolsey.

‡ The conference of Noyon, at which this agreement was made, lasted from the 1st to the 13th August 1516. (See L'Art de Vérifier les Dates.)

§ "Se vui non li fosti al proposito et amici utili." appear that the most Christian King exceeds the limits of a good confederate.

1516.

The Cardinal chose to hear throughout the summaries of news from Constantinople, and remained in great suspense on learning the amount of the galleys there. I therefore exaggerated the affair to him, declaring that the peril to that entire Christian commonwealth was manifest, as an armada of that sort was sufficiently powerful to subjugate the whole world, not merely the realms of Christendom. Thus did I, that he might think it possible for this tempest to reach England; and he, thinking accordingly, said, "What does the Turk intend to do with so powerful an armada?" I told him that for my part I suspected he would invade the territories of the Christian powers, but could not certify whose, as the secret rests with the Turk alone.

Thereupon his right reverend Lordship said, "Domine orator! let us first free ourselves from this greater peril from the King of France; and do not allow this body politic, both yours and that of other Princes, to be weakened, lest subsequently, when it has to provide against the Infidels, it be unable so to do; and scruple not for the sake of a town, which you are at liberty to get in a better way without cost to yourselves, and without lavishing the money of others." I, who have often said what is fitting on this subject, told him that your Serenity would provide for your need as you might think fit, according to the nature of the present times; but I earnestly besought his right reverend Lordship to persuade the King here not to send any more succour for the defence of the city of Verona, as he thus caused this fire to be fed and kept up; nor would it be possible to provide against still greater future misfortunes. To this he made me no reply at all, and when I then proposed taking leave his right reverend Lordship chose me by all means to stay and dine with him, and thus did I. After dinner he drew me aside and again repeated what is aforesaid, demonstrating the imminent peril of your Serenity. I in like manner proceeded with general replies, and then took leave of his right reverend Lordship.

This is what took place. My letters shall speedily acquaint your Serenity with the sequel.

London, 3 October 1516.

Signed: "Sebastianus Justinianus, Eques Orator."

Received at Venice, 27th October.

[Original, paper. Italian, 1½ page.]

Oct. 30.
Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1488. SEBASTIAN GIUSTINIAN, Venetian Ambassador in England, to DOGE LEONARDO LOREDANO.

Serenissime princeps et excellme. Dne. Dne. colme.

The Reverend Dom Pietro Carmeliano, heretofore secretary of the late most serene father of this King, and who is well known to your Highness, has most earnestly besought me to recommend to you a nephew of his, by name Cyprian, who will present this letter of mine to your Excellency. Knowing Dom Pietro to be most excellently disposed towards your Sublimity and your affairs, I could not refuse to do so. He wishes him to be provided by your Sublimity with some small employment (officieto) in his native city of Brescia, or in its territory, so that through this assistance he may support himself and his family, as he has suffered, and continues to suffer, owing to the late most turbulent times.

1516.

London, 30th October 1516.

Signed : "Sebastianus Justinianus, Eques Orator."

* [Original, paper. Italian, ½ page.]

Nov. 1.
Library,
Venetian
Archives.

1489. PIETRO CARMELIANO, of BRESCIA, Archdeacon of Gloucester, Latin Secretary of Henry VIII., to DOGE LORÉDANO.

I was distressed by the impious conspiracy formed by so many great princes to deprive Venice of her territories. Now, however, after many disastrous accidents, your Serenity has at length conquered Brescia,* which noble city was my birthplace; so that I now begin to breathe a little, and to divest myself of so much sorrow. I congratulate your Sublimity to the utmost on such great success, as although a very lowly and insignificant individual, my faith, observance, devotion, and service towards your Highness and the most illustrious Signory are, and always have been, inferior to none. God is my witness that in the time of my late king Henry VII., who most dearly loved the Venetian Republic, I spontaneously took very great pains, especially to mitigate and appease the wrath of the reigning Pope Julius II., against your Highness and your State.

There is a certain nephew of mine at Venice, one Cipriano Majolo, a poor subject of your Serenity's, who will present this letter of mine to your Sublimity, to whom I recommend him warmly, beseeching you to have him provided with some subaltern office for his maintenance.†

From Westminster in England, 1st November 1516.

Your Serenity's most humble and devoted servant and familiar, Peter Carmeliano of Brescia, Archdeacon of Gloucester, Latin Secretary of his Majesty of England.

[Latin.]

* The proveditor Gritti entered Brescia on the 26th May 1516. (See Romanin, vol. v. p. 314.)

† By the Venetian Calendar, Vol. II. p. 419, no. 963, it is seen that the office given to Cyprian Maiolo, by the Council of Ten, was the captaincy of the "Devedo."

GENERAL INDEX.

A.

- Abbatino, Battista, secretary to the Marquis of Mantua, 820.
 , letters to, 688, 757.
 Abbatis, ———, Francis I. displeased with, 1265.
 Abergavenny, Lord, imprisoned in the Tower of London, at the same time as the Duke of Buckingham, 189 note, 204.
 Aboukir, in Egypt, 30.
 Acciajoli, Roberto, Papal nuncio in France, 1202, 1323, 1324, 1334, 1396, 1419.
 Achmet Pascia, makes enquiries about Martin Luther, 704.
 Adda, the river, 931, 1327.
 , the forces of the Duke of Milan make a show of crossing, 436.
 , the Pope commends the passage of, by the Venetian troops, 800.
 , the Venetians prevent lansquenets from crossing, 802.
 Admiral of England. See Surrey, Thos. Howard, Earl of.
 of France. See Bonnavet.
 Adorno faction, the Genoese of the, 942.
 Adorno, Hieronimo, head of the family, 348.
 , Papal minister with the Emperor, 364, 365.
 , sent by Henry VIII. as ambassador to Venice, 563.
 , ambassador from Charles to Venice, 592, 594, 606, 609, 622, 624, 625.
 , suffers from the gout, 596, 603.
 , states his mission, and exhorts Venice to side with the Emperor, and abandon France, 597; the Venetian Senate's reply to, 598, 601, 602.
 , his negotiations with Venice, 599, 600, 603, 604, 617, 619, 620, 624, 625, 630, 684, 685, 695.
 , about to quit Venice, 603; which Venice hinders, 605.
 , the Venetian Senate gives him 12 kilderkins of wine, 611.
 Adorno, Hieronimo, ambassador from Charles to Venice—cont.
 , views the jewels at St. Mark's, and has an interview with Cardinal Campeggio, 615.
 , at a bull bait, 627.
 , informs Charles of the capture of Rhodes by Sultan Solymán, 646.
 , very ill, 648; dies, 649, 666, 712, 715; obsequies, 649, 652.
 Adrian VI. (Cardinal of Tortosa), elected Pope (9 Jan. 1522), 417, 457, 479, 523, 526, 568, 628, 651, 660, 665, 675, 799, 815.
 , rejoicings in Brussels upon his election, 395, 409.
 , his election as Pope disliked by Cardinal Wolsey, 396.
 , confirms the Marquis of Mantua as gonfalonier of the Church, 421.
 , going to Rome, 443, 444, 445, 487, 525.
 , exerts himself with the Switzers, 467.
 , Francis addresses him as Cardinal of Tortosa, 470.
 , writes to Charles on behalf of the Duke of Urbino, 472.
 , league between Charles, Henry, Venice, and, 475, 617, 619, 630, 641, 642, 714, 716, 732, 734, 735, 741, 759.
 , sends ambassadors to Charles and Francis, 486.
 , exhorts Henry and Charles to make peace with Francis, 493.
 , at Taragona, 498.
 , remains in Spain on account of the plague in Rome, 500.
 , his relations with Venice, 500, 535, 573, 574, 575.
 , Francis requests Charles to make peace through, 510.
 , in Spain, 517.
 , exhorts Venice to make a general peace, 530, 531.
 , wishes to reform the Church, 545.
 , sends briefs to England to release the Venetian galleys, 574, 582, 585.
 , insists upon Charles making truce with Francis, 659.

Adrian VI.—cont.

-, dissuades Archduke Ferdinand from making certain demands, 666.
 , his ambassadors to Venice, 691.
 , his health, 742.
 , intent on providing money for the war against France, 745.
 , very ill, 747; dies, 753, 756, 766.
 , letter to, 490.
 African costume, 702.
 Agiense, Rev., query Bishop of Ely, q. v.
 Agostini, —, a Venetian, Wolsey's physician, 614 note.
 Agramonte, report of its being taken by the Imperial army, 793.
 Aguilar, in Spain, 507.
 Aigues Mortes, in France, 1094, 1099.
 Aix-la-Chapelle, coronation of Charles V. at, 75, 134.
 , diet at, 118.
 Alarcon, Captain, 1057; accompanies the Viceroy of Naples in his embassy to France, 1269, 1270, 1273.
 Albanian costumes, 68, 91, 422.
 Albany, John Stuart, Duke of, Regent of Scotland, 130, 176, 179, 380, 384, 793, 919, 926, 1012.
 , ... , at Rome, 48, 957.
 , ... , Mons. d'Aubigni supersedes him as regent, 128, 136.
 , ... , has audience of Francis, 153.
 , ... , at his estates in Provence, 221, 983.
 , ... , news of his entering Scotland as king, 400.
 , ... , in Scotland, 408, 465, 1485.
 , ... , imprisons the Earl of Angus in France, and cohabits with his wife, Queen Margaret, 528.
 , ... , Francis sends him aid, 631.
 , ... , at war with England, 678, 770.
 , ... , routs the English, 786.
 , ... , absent from Scotland, 859.
 , ... , James V. emancipates himself from the guardianship of, 865.
 , ... , Henry expels his adherents from England, 869.
 , ... , expelled from Scotland by the English, 870.
 , ... , passes the river Po, 897.
 , ... , marches into Naples, 960.
 , ... , at Lyons, 1008.
 Albert, Emperor of Germany, 960.
 Alberto, Alessandro, merchant, of Florence, 120.
 , Filippo, merchant of Florence, 120.
 Albigni, —, 179.
 Albret, Cardinal de, 84, 53.
 , Dom Henri d', the kingdom of Navarre belonging to, 323, 335. See Navarre, King of.

- Alcazar (?), the Pietà, at Toledô, 1009.
 Alemani, —, secretary to Charles V., 1198.
 Alemano, Zuam, at Lyons, 1218.
 Alençon, Chancellor of. See Brinon, Jean.
 Duke of, brother-in-law of Francis I., 58, p. 24, 68, p. 43, p. 44, 70, 73, 81, 93, 325, 913, 939.
 , ... , meets Henry VIII. near Ardres, 84.
 , ... , dies at Lyons, through grief for the capture of Francis I., 1008.
 , Duchess of, sister of Francis I., 69, 80, 84, 85, 93, 1088, 1273.
 , ... , said to wish to marry Charles, 1048.
 , ... , the Duke of Milan seeks her hand, 1065.
 , ... , negotiating in Spain for the release of her brother Francis I., 1069, 1093, 1094, 1099, 1102, 1109, 1111, 1115, 1119, 1121, 1129, 1130, 1141, 1150, 1159, 1173.
 , ... , returns to France, 1197, 1203.
 , ... , her secretary sent to England with portraits of the royal family of France, 1451.
 Alexander, Pope, 811.
 Alexandria, in Egypt, Venetian factory of, providers of, 127.
 , in Italy, 1140, 1206, 1358.
 Alexandrian galleys, 991.
 Alfonso, Don, Charles's governor and captain-general, 135.
 Aliens, English statute against, 135.
 Almazarron, 1069 note.
 Almoner, the King's. See Lee, Dr. Edw.
 Alps, the, 342, 351, 454, 465, 489, 614, 824, 888, 1006, 1363.
 , Charles sends the Duke of Bari across, 256.
 Alva, Duke of, p. 19, 106, 463, 484.
 Ambassadors from and to England:—
 (1520): From Venice. See Surian, Antonio.
 From Charles V. See Mesa, Bernard de.
 From France, 9, 17.
 To France, Sir Ric. Wingfield, 40, 67.
 From Charles, Charles de la Sauch, 41.
 To France, Charles Earl of Worcester, 43.
 From the Pope, 62, 64:
 From France, Mons. de la Bastie, 106, 227, 230, 380.
 From France, John de Sains, Sieur de Marigny, 115, 121.
 From France, Francis de Montmorency, Seigneur de la Rochepot, 115, 125.
 From the Pope, Ghinucci, 117.
 To France, 117.

Ambassadors from and to England—cont.

- From France, the Bailly of Caen, 117, 124.
 To France, Dr. Cuthbert Tunstall, 118, 121.
 From Charles, Gerard de Pleine, Sieur de la Roche, 123.
 To France, 128.
 To Charles, 130.
 From the Duke of Savoy, 133, 135.
 To France, 142.
 To France, Sir Nicholas Carew, 143, 145.
 (1521) : From Scotland, 150, 152, 167, 176, 233.
 From France, Denis Poillot, 150, 151, 465.
 To Charles, Ric. Pace, 151.
 To France, 153.
 To Charles, Dr. Cuthbert Tunstall ; Sir Thos. Spinelli, 156.
 To the Pope, Dr. John Clerk, 167, 459, 503, 545, 641, 642, 651, 1142.
 From France, Marigny, Poillot, De Planis, 189.
 From Charles, 204.
 To France, Sir Ric. Jerningham, 204, 208, 215, 219.
 To Charles, Sir Corado (Sir Ric. Wingfield), 204, 208, 217, 219, 406.
 From France, Paiton (sic, Montpesat), 233, 237.
 To France, 234.
 To France, Sir William Fitzwilliam, 237, 238.
 To France, 245, 281.
 From Charles, Audiencier Philip Haneton, 249, 315.
 To France, the Bishop of Ely, and Charles, Earl of Worcester, 352, 355.
 To Charles, Sir Thos. Boleyn, Sir Thos. Docwra, Dr. Sampson, 350, 352, 380, 507, 542, 579, 939, 987.
 From Charles, Mons. de Castro, 378.
 (1522) : To the Switzers, Dr. William Knight, 380, 410, 413.
 To Charles, Sir Robt. Wingfield, 380, 407, 422.
 From France, 384.
 To Rome and Venice, Ric. Pace, 384, 392, 483, 484, 503, 509, 512, 762.
 From France, 393.
 To Charles, Sir Ric. Wingfield, 448, 451. * *
 To France, 457.
 From France, Chavigny, 465, 467.
 To France, Sir Thos. Cheney, 465, 486.
 From Lady Margaret, Mons. de Hedin, 467, 663.

Ambassadors from and to England—cont.

- From Pope Adrian VI., Bishop of Astorga, 486, 500, 526, 530, 531.
 To Venice, Dom. Hieronimo Adorno, 563.
 From Charles, Louis de Praet, 567, 739, 820, 987, 1061.
 (1523) : To the Switzers, Ric. Pace, 637, 651, 857. *
 From the Duke of Milan, 663, 843, 874.
 To the Pope, 665.
 To Charles, Sir Ric. Jerningham, 693, 702, 845.
 From Lady Margaret, 748.
 From the Pope, Melchior Langus, 778, 820, 859 (?), 939.
 (1524) : From Charles, 827, 846, 874.
 From France, Archbishop of Capua, 828, 832, 837.
 To the Duke of Bourbon, Sir Gregory da Casale, 880, 918, 919.
 From France, Giovanni Gioachino di Passano, 888, 918, 939, 989, 1008.
 (1525) : From Charles, Mons. de Beaurain, 916, 922.
 From France, the Bailli of Rouen, 918.
 From Scotland, 918, 939.
 From Charles, Mons. de Selin, 948.
 From Venice, Lorenzo Orio, 950.
 From the Pope, Ghinucci, 953, 986, 1007, 1008.
 To Charles, the Bishop of London and Sir Richard Wingfield (Sampson being already in Spain), 987, 992, 1011, 1017, 1021, 1090, 1095, 1150.
 From Charles, the Comendador Penalosa, 996, 1003, 1034, 1037, 1061.
 From Flanders, Sieur de Bevres and the President of Mechlin, 1037.
 To the Pope, Sir Gregory Casal, 1043, 1070, 1097, 1135, 1136, 1137, 1141, 1142, 1148.
 From France, Giovanni Gioachino di Passano, 1052, 1060, 1062, 1135, 1141, 1152, 1157.
 From France, Jean Brinon, President of Rouen, 1063, 1083, 1135, 1141.
 To the Pope, Ghinucci, 1070, 1097, 1135, 1136, 1137, 1141, 1142, 1157.
 From France, Mons. d'Aubigny, 111.
 From France, a nephew of Passano, 1137.
 To France, Sir Wm. Fitzwilliam and Dr. Tayler, 1151, 1173.
 To Charles, Dr. Lee, 1166, 1169, 1259, 1335.
 From France, Mons. Edoardin, 1187
 To Switzerland, 1191.

Ambassadors from and to England—cont.

- (1526): From the Duke of Guelders, 1193.
 From Margaret of Savoy, Mons. de la Motte, 1195, 1197, 1212.
 From France, Passano (again), 1196, 1219.
 To Venice, Gio. Batt. Casal, 1198, 1199.
 From France, Captain Guillaume Guiles, 1212.
 From Charles, 1220, 1314.
 To France, Sir Thomas Cheyne, 1235, 1244.
 From France, Mons. de la Morette, 1267, 1270, 1276, 1285, 1298, 1302, 1305, 1315.
 From the Pope, Uberto di Gambara, 1274.
 To Charles, two, with a herald, 1317.
 To Charles, Ghinucci, Bishop of Worcester, 1324, 1349, 1403, 1438, 1445.
 From Venice, Marco Antonio Venier, 1338, 1340, 1341.
 To France, Clerk, Bishop of Bath, 1339, 1351, 1371, 1383.
 To France, Sir Thos. More, 1351.
 From Charles, Don Inigo de Mendosa, 1356, 1374, 1422.
 From the Pope, Gio. Batt. Sanga, 1357, 1360, 1382, 1393.
 From Margaret of Savoy, Provost of Cassel, 1381.
 From Margaret of Savoy (not named), 1381.
 To Charles, Osborne Echingham, 1403, 1450.
 From Charles, a Fleming, 1422.
 To France, Clerk and Ghinucci, 1434, 1437.
 From France, secretary of the Duchess of Alençon, 1451.
 To France, Sir William Fitzwilliam, 1455.
 Amboise, letters dated at, 1365, 1383, 1384, 1396, 1419, 1421.
 Ambrun, Archbishop of, 1091.
 Amitié, Notre Dame de l', church of, the foundation stone laid at the meeting of Henry and Francis at Ardres, pp. 55, 60, 73, 91.
 Ammunition, 510.
 Analt. See Haneton.
 Ancona, Pietro degli Accolti, Bishop of, Cardinal, appointed with others by the Pope to suppress the heresies of Martin Luther, 11, 12, 28, 171, 781.
 Andrews, Selibert, obtains false papal letters to preach in England (A.D. 1489), 1474.
 Angleria, Petrus de, a Lombard, 447 note.
 Angoulême, letters dated at, 27, 1191, 1298, 1301, 1318, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1322, 1323, 1324, 1334.

- Angus, Earl of, husband of Queen Margaret of Scotland, complains to Henry VIII. of the conduct of the Duke of Albany, 393.
 Albany causes him to be imprisoned in France, and cohabits with his wife, 528.
 flies from France, 860.
 Annats, 263, 272, 1473.
 Anne of Brittany, her daughter. See Renée.
 Antere, Li, in France, taken by the English, 762.
 Anthony, usher of the Emperor's chamber, ambassador to England, 179, 185.
 Antonio, Captain. See Fayette, Anthoine de la.
 Antwerp, 96, 118, 133, 247, 248, 330, 331, 425, 757, 999, 1025.
 Charles at, 257.
 letters dated at, 262, 452, 760, 862, 1007, 1008.
 Amphitheatre erected for the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 32.
 Apostles, the twelve, in gold, p. 20.
 Apparel, 95, 470.
 Aragon, 825, 876, 960, 1054.
 Queen dowager of. See Brandenburg, Marchioness of.
 Arboreo, Mercurino, chancellor of Spain, and prime minister of Charles V., 196 note, 366 note. See Gattinara.
 Archbishop, death of an English, 629.
 Archers, English, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22, 56, 69, 80, 81.
 English, at the setting of the midsummer watch in London, 244.
 French, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22, 81.
 in the body-guard of Francis I., 1243, 1273.
 captain of, Mons. de Chavigni, 1273.
 Archery sports at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 85.
 Archo, Count Gerardo di, sent by the Duke of Milan to the Switzers, 1043.
 Ardres, 41, 62, 73.
 residence at, of Francis I. and suite during the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 21, p. 22, p. 26, p. 27, p. 30; 52, 56, 57, 58, 59; p. 40, p. 43, p. 45; 76, 77, 78, 80, 81, 84, 90, 94.
 Francis intends to fortify, 121, 124, 130. attacked by the Imperial troops, 327; taken by them, 329, 330, 334, 337 and burnt, 354.
 letters dated at, describing the Field of Cloth of Gold, 60,* p. 46, 67, 72, 76, 83, 93.
 castle of, 69.
 valley of, where the Field of Cloth of Gold was held, 67, 69, 89.
 palace at, 69.
 pavilions at, 83.

Argilly, letters dated at, 246, 253.
 Ariosto, his "Orlando Furioso" published at Ferrara (in 1516), 81 note.
 Aristotle, his "Meteors," p. 32.
 Arles, refuses to submit to the Duke of Bourbon, 858.
 Armagh, Archbishop of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.
 Arme, Lodovico dalle, ambassador from Henry VIII. to Venice, 561 note.
 Armuyden, in the United Provinces, 139.
 Arras of cloth of gold and silk, 54.
 Arschof, Marquis of, governor of Artois and Flanders, 702.
 Arsenal of Venice, the. See Venice.
 Artege (Artoes), La, a French captain, 188.
 Arthur, King, p. 33.
 Arthur, Prince of Wales, 1479.
 Artillery, 637, 736, 806, 942, 1021.
 at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67.
 in the service of England, 233, 236, 820.
 of France, 207, 369, 826, 1186. of Sultan Solymán, 351.
 of Charles V., 366, 523, 820, 1155, 1161.
 of Venice, 637, 671, 1317.
 of Archduke Ferdinand, 967.
 the Jews in India ask the Pope for, 810.
 Artoes. See Artege.
 Artois, county of, 280, 323, 1029.
 governor of. See Arschof, Marquis of.
 Arundel, letter dated at, 1482.
 Asti, county of, in Italy, 900, 1206, 1324.
 Astorga, Bishop of, Papal nuncio to Henry VIII., 486, 526.
 exerts Henry and Charles to make peace with France, 493.
 Ath, letter dated at, 337.
 Attorney, power of, sent by Charles to Henry, 234.
 Aubigui, Mons. de, sent by Francis I. to act as Regent of Scotland in the stead of the Duke of Albany, 128, 136, 142, 145, 152, 169, 176, 187.
 returns to France, 230, 333.
 ambassador from Francis to Henry, 1111.
 Audiencier of Charles, the. See Hancton.
 "Auditor novo," of Venice. See Venice.
 "Auditor vecchio," of Venice. See Venice.
 Auditor, the Papal. See Ghinucci.
 Augsburg, in Germany, 197, 813, 976, 999, 1098, 1153, 1409.
 letters dated at, 990, 1086, 1174.
 Aumale, —, a French noble, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43.
 Austin Friars, the order of, to which Martin Luther belonged, 11, 116.
 the church of, London, 213.

Austria, 275, 409.
 Charles gives his brother Don Ferdinand all the countries of, 413.
 threatened by the Turks, 1450.
 ambassador from, to Venice, 642, 691, 1042.
 Anne of, born 22 Sept. 1601, at Valladolid, 702 note.
 Archduke of. See Ferdinand.
 house of, the Lutherans hostile to, 1197.
 Venetian ambassador in. See Longin.
 Autun (Artoin or Autum), in France, letters dated at, 281, 287, 292, 295, 296, 297, 301, 307.
 Auxerre, in Burgundy, 1220.
 Avengiense, Bishop. See Worcester, Bishop of.
 Averoldi, Altobello, Bishop of Pola, apostolic legate in Venice, 464, 468, 520, 1411.
 Avignon, 899, 1003.
 Azalino, —, Hungarian ambassador to Charles, 366, 367, 405.
 Azores, the, a group of islands in the Atlantic Ocean, 589, 711, 1087.

B.

Bacchus, 83, p. 40.
 Badajos, 805, 843.
 bishopric of, 176.
 Bishops of. See Fonseca; Mesa.
 Baden, conference at, between Zuinglius and Œcolampadius, 1296.
 Marquis of, desires the reformation of the Church, 1296.
 Badoer, Andrea, 140, 148, 193, 194, 211, 427, 924.
 letter from, 1485.
 Giovanni, sometimes called Zuan, Venetian ambassador in France, 395, 457, 465, 482, 533, 542, 577, 578, 600, 780, 1016.
 letters from, 109, 124, 125, 126, 128, 131, 144, 146, 150, 153, 160, 161, 166, 170, 188, 190, 198, 205, 207, 212, 215, 221, 230, 234, 235, 237, 243, 245, 246, 253, 260, 261, 267, 271, 276, 281, 287, 292, 295, 296, 297, 301, 307, 317, 333, 337, 353, 355, 359, 496, 497, 560, 565, 572, 636, 639, 678, 756, 763, 769, 770, 785, 793.
 letters from, in conjunction with Antonio Giustinian, 70, 77, 79, 87, 91, 105; in conjunction with Antonio Giustinian and Antonio Surian, 95.
 letters to, 129, 172, 417, 428, 429, 485, 489, 514, 534, 539, 569, 592, 605, 631, 632, 645.
 returns to Venice, 841.

- Badoer, Giovanni—cont.
 his secretary. See Spinelli, Gasparo.
- Baggage waggons, 293.
- Baglione, Malatesta, captain of the Roman infantry, 1380.
- Baglioni, the family of, 441.
- Bagolin, —, a banker at Rome, 203.
- Bainbridge, Cardinal, 379 note.
- Bajona, a port in Galicia, 847.
- Baldassare, Count. See Castiglione.
- Balls given at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 55, 69.
- Banqueting hall, p. 33.
- Banquets, p. 23, p. 29; 54, 55, 83, 93, 95, 107.
- Barba, Bernardin de la, Papal envoy of Adrian VI. to Charles, 815.
- Barbarigo, Lorenzo, of Venice, 1461.
- Barbary galleys, the, 446, 1069 note.
- Barber, the Venetian ambassador's, in England, 501.
- Barbo, Cardinal Pietro, 1463 note.
- Barcelona, 878 note, 1008, 1029, 1049, 1054, 1166 note.
 letter from, 1048.
 Francis at, 1057.
- Barclay, Alexander, the "Blake Monke," author of "The Ship of Fools," 466 note.
- Bardis, Beligardo de, bill-broker in London, 1460.
- Bari, duchy of, 916.
 Archbishop of, in the service of Adrian VI., 765, 767.
 called Bishop, 486.
 negotiating peace between Francis and Charles, 768, 771, 780, 785, 787, 792, 902.
 Duke of, Francesca Sforza, favoured by Charles, 256, 323.
- Barton, Henry, one of the collectors of customs in London, 120.
- Basadonna, Zuan, of Venice, 258, 386, 576, 581.
- Bashaws, the, of Turkey, 1209.
- Basilisks, 1226.
- Basins, p. 20.
 and ewers of silver, 941.
- Basle, 1118 note.
 council at, respecting Lutheranism, 1252.
- Bassano, 1127.
 letter dated at, 1134.
 Venetian captain and bailiff of. See Lippomano, Hieronimo.
- Bastard, the Great, in the service of Francis against England, 639. See Savoy, René of.
- Bastard-galleys, 1226.
- Bastie, Olivier de la Vernade, Sieur de la, French ambassador to England, 9, p. 14, p. 15, p. 18, p. 19; 53, 54, 71, 106, 227, 230, 233, 240, 249, 252, 256, 263, 268, 272.
- Bastie, Olivier de la Vernade—cont.
 at a conference between Charles and Henry, 104.
 quits England, 278, 300.
 dies in London, 408 (?).
- Bath and Wells, Bishop of. See Clerk, Dr. John; Castellesi.
- Battista or Baptista, —, 682, 692.
 Angelo and Giovanni, falconers of the Marquis of Mantua, letter from, 643.
- Bavaria, 990.
 Duke of, 197.
 opposed to Martin Luther, 813, 936, 988, 944; commander-in-chief of forces to suppress him, 967, 1020.
- Bavarin, Antonio, 311, 1483.
- Bayeux, Bishop of, Lodovico Count of Canossa, 697. sent as ambassador by Louise of Savoy from Rome to Venice, 1050, 1070, 1073, 1081, 1100, 1149, 1150, 1163, 1171, 1182, 1183, 1185, 1186, 1190, 1240, 1317, 1343, 1411.
 letter from, 1152.
 letter to, 1123.
- Bayonne, 820, 821, 845, 1021, 1224, 1231, 1235, 1265.
 assaulted by the Spaniards, 763, 800.
 English forces to be sent to, 1236.
- Beaune, France, 1220.
- Beauport (Beoport), Wolsey at, 294.
- Beaurain, Mons. de, 737, 741.
 Imperial ambassador at Rome, 800; in England, 916, 922; in France, 983, 997, 1003, 1011, 1014. his bastard brother, in the service of the Archduke of Austria, 966.
- Bedstead, 94.
- "Beglarbei," the, of Turkey, 1226.
- Bejar, Duke of, 908.
- Belgrade, besieged and taken by Sultan Solyman, 244, 282, 302, 351, 516.
- Belgrado, 641.
- Belknap, Sir Edward, 81 note.
- Bel-reguardo, 1140.
- Beltrame, Don, of Castile, captain-general and governor of St. Sebastian, 385.
- Bembo, Zaccaria, 1127.
- Benevente, Count of, 523, 702 note.
- Bergamasque, a, 879.
- Bergamo, 266, 752, 1149, 1370.
 letters dated at, 782, 1386, 1400.
 the Venetian governors of, letters from, 1102, 1148, 1192.
- Bergavenny, Lord. See Abergavenny.
- Berghes, Mons. de, in the service of Charles, 260, 265, 278, 291, 319, 366.
- Bernardo, Cà, at Venice, 374.
 Beneto, banker at Venice, 561.
 Francesco, 561 note.
 Mafio, banker at Venice, trading with England, 474, 475, 483. receipt of letters by, 838.

Bernardo, Maño—cont.

....., murdered (in December 1546),
561 note.

Berne, Switzerland, letter dated at, 1408.

Bessarione, Cardinal of Nicæa, Wolsey desires copies of MSS. belonging to, 1187, 1219, 1258.

Bevres, Sieur de, Flemish ambassador to England, 1037.

Beyrout, port of, frequented by Venetian galleys, 1417 note.

Biagrassa, 15 miles from Milan, 753.

Bibiena, Antonio di, Cardinal of Santa Maria in Porticu, 5.

Bibles, 1069 note.

Bilboa, in Spain, 526.

Bilio, the Cavalier, ambassador from the Duke of Milan to Venice, 931, 942.

Binasco, near Milan, 753, 1140.

Binche, letter dated at, 343.

Biscay, 394, 399, 458, 1008, 1197.

....., Venetian galleys detained in, 380,
406, 407, 410, 412, 419, 424, 431, 433,
456, 458.

....., governors of, 391, 408.

....., ships of, 284, 847.

....., Bay of, 232, 381, 385.

Biscayans, the, 399, 434, 507, 848.

Bishop's Waltham, containing six or seven houses, 486.

....., Henry and Wolsey part from Charles at, 493.

Bishops at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.

Bisignano, Prince of, p. 19.

Black Bands, captain of the, Giovanni de'
Medici, 1426, 1436.

Blois, 44, 497, 811, 828, 1224, 1268, 1320.

....., Claude Queen of France dies at, 865,
note.

....., letters dated at, 33, 37, 40, 131, 144,
146, 150, 572, 678, 1423.

Bobadilla, Don Pedro, a sea captain, 385.

Bodenstein, Andrew. See Carlostadt.

Boesi. See Poissy.

Bohemia, King of. See Lewis II.

....., chancellor of, 807.

....., ambassador of, 995.

Bohemians, the, 616.

....., agree to obey the Roman Church, 928.

Bohier, Thomas, General of Normandy, 1485
note.

Boissi, Cardinal de, Papal legate to France,
69, 84, 93.

....., Gouffier de, Lord Steward (or Great Master) of France, 752.

Bojardo, Count Matteo, author of "Orlando Innamorato," 81.

Bolani, Troian, 576, 581.

Boldu, Nicolo, letter to, 883.

Boleyn, Sir Thos., treasurer or comptroller of Henry's household, English ambassador to Charles, 349, 350, 352, 364, 365,
507, 579, 662 note, 668, 672, 746 note.

Bolivet, Mons. de, 152.

Bologna, 117, 150, 1207, 1232, 1295, 1460, 1464.

....., bishopric of, 795.

....., legate of. See Cibo, Cardinal.

Bologna, Paulo da, 940.

Bolognese, the, 351.

Bolzano, letter dated at, 889.

....., Lutheran books sold at the fair of, 1000.

Bon, Alvisé, Venetian ambassador to the king of Hungary, 13.

....., candidate for the embassy to England, 1330.

Bonante, Messer Jo. Gabriel, merchant at Antwerp, 757.

Bonavelle, the band of, tilt at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 93.

Bonfires at Brussels, 248.

..... at Venice, 716, 736.

..... at Rome, 828.

..... in London, on the peace between
Charles and Francis, 1223.

Boniface, Pope, 960.

Bonizzi, Nicolò, bill-broker in London, 1481.

Bonnivet, Sieur de, William Gouffier, Admiral
of France, 146, 268, 1265.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold,
p. 21, p. 23, p. 24, p. 43, p. 44, p. 45;
58, 59, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72, 81, 82, 84, 90.

....., confers with Henry VIII., 73.

....., Henry makes presents to, after the Field of Cloth of Gold, 94.

....., prepares to resist the English invasion, 812.

....., killed at the battle of Pavia,
940.

Bonvisi, —, at Lyons, 331.

Book, Henry VIII.'s, against Martin Luther, 210.

Books of Martin Luther, Papal brief for the destruction of all, 116, 191, 223.

Books from Rome and Venice, required by Wolsey for his college at Oxford, 1187,
1198, 1219, 1258, 1286. •

Bordeaux, 1265.

....., second president of the parliament of,
Jean de Calvimont, 1403 note.

....., letters dated at, 1243, 1244, 1245, 1253.

Borders, the, 187.

Borromeo, Count Ludovic, the Switzers wish his estates to be restored to him, 1043.

Bosco, Monsignor di. See Kildare, Earl of.

Bouillon (Baïom), a castle belonging to Robt.
de la Mark, taken by Charles, 280, 293.

Boulogne, 22, 24, 42, 61, 79, 95, 106, 290,
307, 463, 484, 1007, 1008, 1052, 1110,
1175, 1218.

....., besieged by the English, 758, 763.

....., demanded by Henry from Francis,
1265, 1406, 1434, 1435, 1455, 1457.

....., letter dated at, 64.

Boulogne—cont.

..... gate, p. 31.

....., governor of. See Fayette, Anthony de la.

....., captain of, 327, 330.

Bourbon, Cardinal of, 84, 1245, 1273.

Bourbon, Duke of, Lord High Constable of France, 325, 729, 771, 874, 878, 879, 880, 900, 902, 922, 1008, 1012, 1021, 1034, 1037, 1048, 1050, 1069, 1070, 1075, 1100, 1104, 1107, 1108, 1109.

....., ... at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 21, p. 23; 58, 59; p. 43, p. 44, p. 49; 68, 69, 70, 72, 73, 84, 90, 98; Henry presents him with a gold cup, 94.

....., ... negotiating with Charles and Henry, 746 note, 758, 761, 805.

....., ... his proposed marriage with Charles's sister, 777, 819, 902, 960, 997, 1003, 1017, 1029, 1058, 1065, 1066, 1069, 1015, 1089, 1112.

....., ... fighting against France, 812, 824, 825, 831, 833, 890, 897.

....., ... commands Charles's army, 827, 997, 1036.

....., ... invades France, 834, 837; with Henry's aid, 850, 854, 862, 885, 888, 1012, 1026.

....., ... proposed agreement between Henry and, 843, 845.

....., ... Provence submits to, 858.

....., ... dependent on Charles and Henry, 868.

....., ... France refuses to cede Provence to, 983.

....., ... intrigues with the Viceroy Lannoy, 1003.

....., ... his proposed marriage with Renée, sister-in-law of Francis, 1029.

....., ... goes to Spain with a fleet, 1163.

....., ... the Viceroy hostile to, 1177.

....., ... Charles proposes to give Milan to, 1217, 1226, 1265.

....., ... reported to have taken flight from Spain to France with Francis, 1218.

....., ... besieged in Milan by the Papal and Venetian armies, 1348, 1358.

....., ... his agents. See Lursi, Mons. de; Motte, Mons. de la.

....., ... his secretary, 874.

....., ... his treasurer, 1012.

Bourbourg, 58 note.

Bourchier, Thomas, Cardinal, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1466, 1468, 1470.

Bowls, gilt, 69.

Bowmen, 68.

Brabant, 208, 219, 306, 1007, 1187, 1218.

Bracelets, given by Francis to Henry, p. 27, 77, 91.

Bragadin, Francesco, sage of the Venetian Council, 566, 604.

....., Lorenzo, 578, 949, 951.

....., ... letter to, 28.

....., ... refuses to go as Venetian ambassador to England, 950, 954.

....., ... Venetian ambassador to France, 1353, 1359.

Brancamonte, —, sent by the Marquis of Pescara to the Duke of Milan, 1140.

Brandenburg, duchy of, 413.

....., Albert Duke of, Grand Master of Prussia, 995.

....., Marquis of, Elector of Mentz, brother of the Duke of Saxony, and brother-in-law of Francis I., 741, 798, 807.

....., ... marries his second wife, Germaine de Foix, relict of Ferdinand of Aragon (13 March 1519), 383 note, 463, 484.

....., ... at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 14, p. 17; 106, 248.

....., ... dies, 1064, 1113.

....., ... his wife, Germaine de Foix, 54 note, 248, 323, 466 note, 799.

....., ... at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 14, p. 17, p. 19, p. 20.

Brandenburgs, both the, require the reformation of the Church, 1296.

Brasiga, Zuan Maria, a Bergamasque, envoy of the Count Palatine and Francis I. to Charles, 879, 882.

Bray, in France, taken by the English, 782.

Bread, great scarcity of, in England, 396.

Brescia, 111, 266, 487, 578, 752, 890, 897, 940, 951, 1138, 1148, 1246, 1482, 1488, 1489.

....., advices from, 392, 413.

....., letters dated at, 400, 835, 886, 887, 888, 895, 906, 918, 1149, 1376.

....., bailiff of, 1149.

....., captain of, 1149.

....., governors of, letters from, 400, 886, 1429.

....., podestà of. See Surian, Antonio.

....., territory of, 351, 358, 809, 1443.

Breslau, Michael Sanderus, dean of, in the service of Card. Sion in England, 130.

Bresse, Governor of, brother-in-law of the Chancellor of Spain, 224 (?), 366, 452, 542, 571, 741, 902, 956, 1021, 1030, 1044.

....., ... in England, 486.

Brest, in Normandy, 465, 474.

Bretons, 82.

Brianza, hill of, in Italy, 1363.

Bridewell, the, 466 note, 663.

Briefs, Papal, against Martin Luther's works, 195, 210, 223.

Brindisi, the port of, 438 note.

- Brinon, Jean, Chancellor of Alençon and President of Rouen, French ambassador to England, 913, 918, 939, 1060, 1083, 1110, 1111, 1135, 1147, 1169, 1175, 1183, 1187, 1193, 1195, 1197, 1203, 1212, 1219, 1235, 1254, 1258, 1262, 1286.
 , ... , quits England, 1269, 1275.
- Brion, Mons. de, French ambassador to Charles, 1014, 1021, 1032, 1091.
- Britanny, 498, 516, 526, 542, 572, 644, 645.
 , governor general in, 644.
 , wrestlers of, 85.
 , Duchess of, 1475.
 , Duke of, 1485.
- Britonico, Octavian, vicar of the Patriarch of Venice, 116.
- Brixen, the peasants of, revolt at the instigation of Luther, 1009.
 , Bishop of, 1009, 1134.
- Brixiano, Pietro, 453.
- Brocade, Gold and Silver, p. 15, p. 16; nos. 80, 302, 1273.
- Browne, Lady Anne, sweetheart of Mons. de Montpézat, described as the handsomest woman at the banquet of the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23, p. 25, p. 26.
 , Sir Weston, jousts at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 25, p. 26.
- Bruges, 306, 401, 430, 438, 451, 452, 455, 462, 465, 467, 480, 484, 492.
 , Charles V. confers with Cardinal Wolsey at, 248, 269, 277, 278, 283, 288, 290, 293, 300, 301, 307, 309, 314, 315, 316, 319, 332, 344, 345, 663.
 , St. James's church at, attended by Charles V. and Wolsey, 302.
 , Charles's garden at, the King of Denmark confers with Wolsey in, 308 note.
 , Wolsey quits, 318.
 , letters dated at, 284, 285, 289, 294, 298, 299, 302, 310, 312, 313, 315, 316, 456, 458, 460, 461, 487.
- Brussels, 295, 296, 315, 344, 452, 1101.
 , a Parliament held by Charles at, 75.
 , Charles at, 77, 91, 409, 761 note.
 , letters dated at, 239, 241, 242, 247, 248, 250, 254, 257, 331, 338, 339, 340, 395, 401, 402, 404, 405, 406, 407, 410, 411, 415, 416, 420, 421, 422, 425, 430, 431, 433, 434, 436, 438, 439, 443, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 473.
- Bryan, Francis, gentleman of Henry's chamber, sent by Wolsey to Bruges, 306, 308.
- Buckingham, Duke of, accompanies Henry VIII. to France, p. 15, p. 18, p. 20; 81, 106.
 , ... , imprisoned in the Tower of London by Henry, charged with plotting against the crown, 187, 189, 204, 208, 212, 219, 278, 354 note.
 , ... , condemned to death for high treason, 206, 210.
 , ... , charged with having plotted the assassination of Wolsey, 209.
- Buckingham, Duke of—cont.
 , ... , confutes the charges against him with great eloquence, 213.
 , ... , beheaded on the square at the Tower (17 May 1521), 214, 219.
 , ... , his father and grandfather, both beheaded, 210.
 , ... , his daughter, p. 19 note.
 , ... , his father-in-law. See Surrey, Earl of.
 , ... , his son-in-law, 204. See Abergavenny, Lord.
 , ... , his chancellor. See Gilbert, Robert.
- Buckingham, Henry creates his natural son Henry Duke of, 1052.
- Buda (sic), in England, letter dated at, 1305.
- Buda, in Hungary, diet at, 616.
 , letters dated at, 176, 791, 923, 995, 1019.
 , St. George's, the parish priest of, arrested by Campeggio, for having married, 1019.
 , St. Mary's, the provost of, a Lutheran, arrested by Campeggio, 1019.
- Bull-baiting, at Valladolid, 702.
 , at Venice, 627.
- Bulls, Papal, against Luther, 112, 163, 180, 181, 182, 183.
 , ... , by Leo X., authorizing Wolsey to confer benefices and receive annats in England, 263, 272.
- Buren, Mons. de, chief in authority with Charles, 1113.
- Burgos, 743, 852, 878, 880.
 , letters dated at, 746, 751, 752, 814, 815, 819, 821, 822, 823, 825, 827, 832, 836, 843, 845, 846, 847, 848.
 , Fonseca, Bishop of, 556, 607.
- Burgundian order of knighthood, the, 466.
 outlaws, 970.
 spears, 761.
- Burgundians, the, 757.
- Burgundy, 87, 430, 447, 487, 737, 743, 771, 882, 960, 983, 1008, 1014, 1029, 1044, 1080, 1099, 1130, 1137, 1265.
 , demanded by Charles from Francis, 1150, 1175, 1177, 1187, 1220, 1224, 1270, 1306.
 , Henry VIII. says it is not in the power of Francis to restore it to Charles, 1403.
 , Archduke of, Charles, 1485. See Ferdinand.
 , Duke of, Charles the Bold, 323, 960, 1029, 1475.
 , ... , married to his third wife, Margaret of York, sister of Edward IV. (3 July 1468), 404 note.
 , house of, its ancient friendship with England, 1374, 1377.
- Busignolo, Hieronimo de Marin de, of Ragusa, 557. See also Marin.

Butiro, Lunardo, physician, of Venice, 1325.¹
Butteries, p. 30.

C.

Cabot, Sebastian, a Venetian, pilot major for voyages of discovery, in the Emperor's service, 557, 558, 589, 669 note.
....., discovers the variation of the needle, 607.
....., refuses Wolsey's offer to command an armada for a voyage of discovery, 607.
....., offers his services to Francis, 634, 710.
....., commands a fleet for a voyage of discovery in the Indies, 1115.
....., letter to, 670.
Cadiz, 139, 836.
Cadore, Italy, 1358.
Caen, the Bailli of, French ambassador to Henry, 117 note, 121 note, 124, 130.
Caiazzo, Count of, a commander in Italy, 1368. *
Cairo, 1114.
..... carpets, for Wolsey, 2, 24.
Caitano. See Vio.
Calabria, 155.
....., Duke of, 1014.
Calais, 24, 64, 77, 135, 233, 281, 291, 292, 295, 296, 297, 301, 302, 312, 317, 337, 338, 339, 340, 350, 356, 364, 366, 401, 425, 433, 461, 462, 465, 467, 473, 484, 486, 487, 542, 637, 764, 939, 1007, 1008, 1031, 1141, 1349, 1467 note, 1485, 1486.
....., Henry fortifies, 121.
....., English infantry sent over to, 457, 463, 495, 502, 630, 743, 758, 888.
....., Henry and his court at, 22, p. 20, p. 34; 53, 56, 57, 58, 59, p. 40; 68, 69, 71, 73, 79, 93.
....., Henry and Charles meet at, p. 31; 106, 111.
....., French tribute paid at, 1151.
....., conference at, in which Wolsey mediates between Charles and Francis, 234, 240, 249, 252, 255, 256, 260, 261, 265, 267, 268, 269, 272, 273, 274, 277, 280, 285, 287, 292, 298, 299, 307, 310, 315, 316, 331, 333, 341, 343, 344, 345, 346, 348, 359, 370, 384, 393, 471, 663.
....., letters dated at, 61, 63, 97, 98, 100, 104, 106, 107, 108, 278, 279, 280, 282, 288, 290, 293, 300, 305, 306, 308, 309, 314, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 330, 334, 335, 336, 342, 347, 349, 352, 354, 361, 362, 371, 390.
....., deputy of, 1255 note.
....., governor of. See Peachey, Sir John.
....., staple of, 200, 201, 515.

Calais—cont.

....., palace of the, Henry and Charles and their Courts at, p. 81; 104.
....., treasurer of. See Sandys, Sir William.
Calshot castle, 650 note.
Calvimont, Jean de, second president of the parliament of Bordeaux, French ambassador in Spain, 1403, 1422, 1450.
Cambrai, Charles and Francis send commissioners to, 402, 405.
....., the league of, 447, 482, 685 note, 1226 note.
Cambridge, University of, 208.
Campeggio, Lorenzo, Cardinal, 781.
....., the Pope appoints him legate in Germany for the Lutheran affairs, 794, 795, 796.
....., in Germany, acting against the Lutherans, 813, 864, 883, 995, 1019.
....., appointed Bishop of Salisbury by Clement VII., 875.
....., Tommaso, Cardinal, Papal legate in Venice, 615, 627, 697, 708, 714, 724, 734, 736, 738.
Campidoglio, the, at Rome, burning of a witch on, 1125.
Canal, Bortolo da, Venetian senator, 1304.
Canaries, the, 300 leagues from Seville, 1115.
Candia, 46, 441, 465, 557, 576, 581.
Candlesticks, gold, 93.
Cane game, the, played in Spain, 416, 702.
Cannisano, Guglielmo, merchant of Florence, privy councillor of Edward IV., 1471.
Cannon, 275, 556, 657, 942.
....., in the service of Sultan Solyman, 523.
....., Henry seizes the, belonging to the Flanders galleys, 550.
....., silver and gold, sent to Charles from the Indies by Hernando Cortes, 1115.
Cano, Juan Sebastian del, sent by Charles in quest of the Spice Islands, 556 note.
Canossa, Lodovico di, Bishop of Tricarico, ambassador in England, 1485. See Bayeux, Bishop of.
Canterbury, p. 19, 56, 61, 278, 279, 462, 480, 481.
....., Henry and Charles meet at, p. 14, 111, 465.
....., letters dated at, 53, 54, 55, 463, 1434.
..... cathedral, 53, 488.
....., mass performed in, attended by Henry and Charles, p. 15, p. 17.
....., Christ Church, attended by Henry and Charles, 463 note.
....., Archbishop of. See Bouchier; Morton; Warham.
Canvas, 81, 83, 88, 97.
Capello, Carlo, Auditor novo of Venice, 258, 386, 576, 581.
....., Cristofal, 386, 576, 581; candidate for the embassy to England, 1330.
....., Dominicus, C.C.X., his signature, 458, 557.

- Capello, Giorgio, merchant of Venice, 120.
 Giovanni, 801.
 Panerazio, merchant of Venice, 120.
 Piero, 621.
 Polo, 541.
 Capini, Giacomo, letter from, 952.
 Capino, Dom. See Chiapino.
 Capra, Count of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 19.
 Caps, p. 17.
 cloth, worn by Henry and Charles, p. 16.
 Captain-general, the Venetian, 516, 557, 896, 1317, 1374. See Urbino, Duke of.
 Capua, Archbishop of, Fra Nicholas Schomberg, 800, 969, 998, 1113, 1120.
 sent by the Pope to Charles, Francis, and Henry, to negotiate peace between Charles and Francis, 809, 810, 811, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 826, 828, 832, 836, 839, 841.
 Francis calls him a German poltroon, 837.
 returns to Rome, 842, 873.
 with Charles again, 876, 898, 899, 902, 903, 904, 905, 916.
 at Rome, 1158, 1187, 1197, 1212, 1217.
 Henry blames the Pope for acting on the advice of, 1201.
 Caracciolo, Marino, Papal Nuncio with Charles, 134, 147, 209, 216, 248, 254, 262, 274, 275, 285, 294, 298, 299, 302, 319, 364, 365, 379, 402, 422, 436, 448, 463, 470, 472, 484, 486, 493, 1118.
 exerts himself against Luther, 156.
 confers with Wolsey at Bruges, 810, 812. called the Rev. Stafileo, 363, 390 note. enters the service of Charles V. (in 1523), 390 note; who sends him as ambassador to Venice, 697, 723, 724, 734, 738, 741, 931, 942, 1104, 1107, 1114, 1141, 1155, 1175, 1185, 1187, 1190, 1229.
 his secretary, 313.
 Caraffa, Giovanni Pietro, Papal Nuncio in England, 1485 note.
 Caravaial, Dr., 847.
 Caravels, from the Indies, arrive at Seville, 711, 751, 910, 992, 1021, 1087, 1115.
 Carbuncle, a, given to Francis by Venice, 1272.
 Cardinals, 545, 753, 937. created by Leo X., 122; by Clement VII., 781.
 the five, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.
 College of, at Rome, 628, 1010, 1224, 1333. canvassing for the Popedom, 747.
 their palaces at Rome sacked by the Colonna faction, 1419.
 Carew, Sir Nicholas, the favourite of Henry VIII., ambassador to France, 143, 145, 146, 150, 153, 166.
 dissuades Francis from going to Italy, 152, 160.
 Cariati, Giambatista Spinelli, Count of, 277. called Duke of, 199.
 accompanies the Imperial ambassadors to Calais, 290, 299, 319, 320, 324, 327, 346, 351.
 Carinthia, in Germany, disturbances in, 1135.
 Carlostadt, or Carlostadius, Andrew Bodenstein of, archdeacon of Wittemberg, a Lutheran, 383 note.
 Carmeliano, Pietro, Latin secretary of Henry VII. and Henry VIII., 111, 1482, 1484, 1488, 1489.
 Carmelite Friars, the, of Venice, p. 580.
 Carmillian, alias Carmeliano, Alice, a female artist in the service of Henry, 107 note.
 Carniola, in Germany, 448 note.
 Caroldo, Secretary, 1128.
 Carpets, 80.
 Damascene, presented to Wolsey by Venice, 1, 13, 18, 35, 107, 110, 117, 118, 133.
 velvet, p. 15.
 Carpi, Count of, Alberto Pio, French ambassador at Rome, 811, 818, 926, 1065, 1070, 1171, 1186, 1191, 1202.
 Cartagena, 824.
 Carthusian order, monks of the, 219.
 monastery, a, near Valladolid, 873, 876.
 Casal, Francesco, offers to bring over his 100 horse in the Imperial camp to the Venetians, 1281, 1308, 1310, 1333.
 Giovanni Battista, prothonotary, brother of Sir Gregory, English agent at Rome, 1141, 1163.
 English ambassador to Venice, 1175, 1187, 1198, 1199, 1202, 1203, 1205, 1206, 1207, 1208, 1210, 1214, 1215, 1218, 1222, 1227, 1228, 1232, 1239, 1240, 1264, 1271, 1274, 1279, 1280, 1281, 1308, 1311, 1317, 1326, 1343, 1344, 1346, 1363, 1385, 1389, 1405, 1411, 1454.
 Sir Gregory, sent by Henry to the Marquis of Mantua, 586; to the Duke of Bourbon, 874, 1012.
 English ambassador to the Duke of Milan, 918, 919, 1031.
 going to Rome, 935, 937, 1043, 1070, 1097, 1110, 1113, 1116, 1118, 1136, 1137, 1139.
 at Brussels, 1101.
 ambassador to the Pope, 1135, 1141, 1142, 1143, 1144, 1148, 1149, 1152, 1157, 1158, 1160, 1163, 1169, 1175, 1183, 1186, 1187, 1190, 1191, 1200, 1202, 1204, 1212, 1222, 1264, 1266, 1277, 1279, 1280, 1281, 1308, 1326, 1333.
 complains of the Pope, 1178.
 letters from, 661, 682, 1123.
 Cassel, provost of, ambassador from Margaret

- Cassia, imported to Seville from the Indies, 751.
- Castel Novo, 641.
- Castellesi, Adrian, Bishop of Bath and Wells, Cardinal, last news of, 374.
-, ... scriptor to Innocent VIII., 1475.
-, ... English ambassador at Rome, temp. Hen. VIII., 1480.
- Castiglione, Count Baldassar, Papal Nuncio with Charles, 956, 960, 971, 977, 1030, 1040, 1120, 1176, 1403, 1422, 1444, 1450.
- Castile, 385, 498, 711, 1089.
-, Francis marches his army into, 249, 250.
-, Queen of, accompanies Charles to Dover, 111.
-, comendador of, 571, 579. See Rœux, Mons. de.
-, comendador mayor of, 900. See Padilla, Don Juan de.
-, commons of, 579.
-, ... united against Charles, 306.
-, constable of, 806.
-, Cortes of, 1003, 1029, 1054, 1078, 1091.
-, council of, 394.
-, grandees of, 579.
-, junta in, 579, 589.
-, Prince of, Charles, 1485.
- Castro, Mons. de, ambassador from Charles to Henry, 378.
- Castra, Count of, 613.
- Cavalchante, Zuan, 503.
- Cazago, Jacomo da, 111.
- Celles, near Château Romorantin, letters dated at, 160, 161, 166.
- Censers, gold, p. 20.
- Censures, ecclesiastical, 815.
- Centuari, Francesco and Domenico de', 1473.
- Ceri, Renzo da, 438.
-, ... at Venice, 734.
-, ... with the Duke of Albany at Lyons, 1008.
-, ... sent by Francis to Rome, 1419.
- Cesano, Gabriel, letters from, 688, 692, 757.
- Cesis, Cardinal, 781.
- Chabot, Philippe, his signature, 1092.
- Chain, a, given by Henry VIII. to Brinon, 1269.
- Chains, gold, 46, p. 15; 53, 56, 58, p. 45; 67, 68, 69, 73, 80, 140, 193, 194, 211.
- Chairs, gilt, p. 18.
- Chalice, a gold, p. 20.
- Châlons, France, 1220.
- Chamber, gentlemen of Francis', 67.
- Chamberlain of England. See Worcester, Earl of.
- of France, 466.
- Champagne, in France, 314.
- Chancellor of France. See Duprat, Anthony.
- of Spain. See Gattinara.
- Chancery of Venice, the, 697.
- Chandeliers, p. 33.
- Chaneus, Dr. Jo. Maria, of Brescia, letter from, 487.
- Channel, the English, p. 34; 59, 64, 143, 217, 236, 239, 240, 252, 265, 284, 286, 316, 371, 406, 687 note, 784, 868, 874, 882, 892, 1365, 1432, 1434.
- Chapel, a, built and endowed at the joint expense of Henry and Francis, after the Field of Cloth of Gold, 91.
- Chapel Royal, Dean of the. See Clerk, Dr. John.
- Charles V., Emperor of Germany, and King of Spain, called the Catholic King, 2, 3, 9, 19, 31, 42, 73, 75, 117, 121 note, 122, 123, 129, 130, 134, 144, 147, 151, 156, 198, 206, 207, 208, 210, 213, 233, 247, 251, 284, 288, 305, 309, 339, 348, 349, 352, 378, 379, 380, 390, 393, 396, 422, 430, 434, 456, 457, 458, 470, 473, 517, 521, 523, 526, 542, 543, 553, 557, 579, 580, 607, 612, 633, 646, 662, 681, 686, 691, 693, 702, 703, 711, 729, 734, 743, 746, 752, 754, 757, 758, 766, 777, 797, 799, 800, 806, 811, 815, 826, 828, 836, 837, 846, 860, 868, 871, 874, 878, 893, 897, 901, 904, 910, 912, 929, 935, 942, 943, 948, 951, 957, 958, 962, 966, 969, 970, 973, 983, 991, 992, 996, 998, 1016, 1050, 1052, 1063, 1064, 1066, 1085, 1087, 1100, 1104, 1107, 1120, 1124, 1128, 1129, 1140.
-, (A.D. 1514): his sister to marry Lewis XII., 1485.
-, (A.D. 1516): King Catholic, 1487.
-, (A.D. 1520): his relations with Italy, 4, 6, 99, 105, 134, 137, 160, 167, 168, 169, 170, 176, 184, 226, 317, 365, 885.
-, his interviews with Henry in England, 24, 26, 31, 32, 34, 37, 38, 40, 41, 43, p. 14, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 66, 103, 104, 111, 186, 215, 239, 462, 463, 465, 467, 478, 483, 484, 486, 493, 495, 498.
-, his relations with Venice, 29, 124, 196, 254, 259, 324, 328, 330, 338, 341, 343, 346, 351, 363, 381, 385, 387, 389, 401, 438, 440, 441, 446, 447, 469, 848, 963, 1038, 1051, 1126.
-, his interviews with Henry at Calais, p. 31, 75, 77, 79, 91, 92, 93, 96, 97, 98, 100, 101, 106, 107, 108, 109, 232.
-, disputes between Francis and, 62, 71, 75, 87, 119, 177, 188, 204, 219, 228, 229, 236, 237, 238, 239, 243, 245, 249, 252, 256, 260, 265, 266, 271, 272, 353, 354, 359, 368, 407, 454, 485, 510, 765, 767, 768, 771, 780, 785, 879, 882, 899, 900.
-, his relations with Henry, 63, 84, 135, 145, 207, 216, 262, 364, 442, 651, 671, 820, 825, 845, 880, 922, 925, 932, 945, 963, 975, 987, 989, 1004, 1005, 1014, 1015, 1017, 1021, 1023, 1025, 1032, 1033, 1037, 1045, 1080, 1114, 1121, 1137.
-, proposed interview with Francis, 89, 105.

Charles V.—cont.

-, ruled by Chièvres, 119; who dies, 224.
-, his relations with Francis, 132, 185, 187, 375, 1014, 1015, 1103, 1118, 1130.
-, Henry refuses to lend him money or troops, 136.
-, confers with the King of Hungary and the King of Poland, 141, 143.
-, proposed marriage with the sister of the King of Hungary, 143.
-, (A.D. 1521): Francis demands arrears for Naples from, 166.
-, great sedition in his dominions, 172, 179.
-, proposed marriage with Isabella, daughter of Emmanuel, King of Portugal, 185, 589, 902, 911, 1009, 1015, 1029, 1046, 1058, 1074, 1075, 1076, 1089, 1091, 1099, 1125, 1132.
-, holds a Diet in Germany, 189, 197.
-, summons Luther before him, and condemns his works, 191, 192, 197, 199, 202, 216, 224.
-, Henry dissuades, from entering Italy, 195.
-, Francis wages war against, through Robt. de la Mark, the Duke of Guelders, and the King of Navarre, 195, 215.
-, orders Luther to quit Germany, 203, 223.
-, refers his disputes with Francis to the arbitration of Henry, 204, 205, 221, 225.
-, proposed marriage with Mary, daughter of Henry, 215, 274, 275, 283, 302, 323, 332, 400, 409, 413, 415, 452, 852, 902, 1021, 1046, 1054, 1058, 1059, 1074, 1097, 1099, 1132.
-, Francis defies, 215.
-, Henry dissuades, from going to war, 220.
-, his relations with the Popes, 222, 223, 500, 832, 917, 960.
-, Francis' successes against, 227.
-, sends Henry a power of attorney to make terms for him with Francis, 233, 234, 235, 239, 240.
-, Henry sends Wolsey to Calais to adjust the disputes between Francis and, 241, 249, 269, 272, 274, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282.
-, his brother-in-law the King of Denmark offers him assistance, 248, 252, 256, 272.
-, Henry's great influence with, 250.
-, aids Leo X., who gives him the investiture of Naples, 253, 254.
-, intends to settle his disputes with Francis by force of arms, 257, 275, 334.
-, in league with Leo X., 263, 304, 313, 320, 321.

Charles V.—cont.

-, proposed marriage with Charlotte, daughter of Francis I., 272, 278, 283, 323, 335, 765, 767, 780.
-, his interviews with Wolsey at Bruges, 285, 290, 293, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 307, 312, 313, 315, 316.
-, Henry mediates between Francis and, 289, 302, 350, 370, 405, 448, 449, 530, 531, 538, 541, 544, 546, 548, 550, 552, 554, 555, 663.
-, the Pope complains of, 294.
-, Prior of the order of Santiago de Compostella, 302.
-, disinclined to make terms with Francis, 306, 310, 312, 313.
-, at strife with the Pope, 314.
-, Wolsey remonstrates with, 319.
-, Henry sends ammunition to, 331.
-, his army takes a castle, 336.
-, report of an attempt to poison his food, 340.
-, seeks nothing but the deliverance of Italy from the French, 344.
-, he and Francis strongly bent on war, 345.
-, going to Spain through England, 356, 360, 367, 382, 411, 413, 415, 416, 421, 431, 433, 435, 436, 442, 443, 445, 502, 505.
-, failure of the arbitration between Francis and, 362, 371.
-, rejects the articles of agreement with France, drawn up by Wolsey, 366.
-, at war with Francis in Flanders and Picardy, 370.
-, the death of Leo interferes with all his projects, 376.
-, refuses to promote the election of Wolsey as Pope, 384, 396.
-, (A.D. 1522): Henry demands that he release the Flanders galleys, 391.
-, rejoices at the election of Adrian VI., 395, 404.
-, detains Venetian galleys, 397, 398, 399, 419.
-, weary of being dependent on Henry, Venice, and the Switzers, 402.
-, proposed league between Henry, Venice, the Pope, and, 403, 417, 426, 428, 429, 475, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 488, 492, 505, 714, 735, 751, 759.
-, intercedes for the release of the Flanders galleys in England, 408.
-, appoints Ferdinand vicar-general and Imperial lieutenant of Germany, 409, 413.
-, content to make truce with Francis, 414.
-, Wolsey complains of Venice aiding Francis against, 424.
-, asks Henry for a loan, 425.
-, leaves the government of Flanders to Lady Margaret, and Henry assumes the protection of all the provinces, 439.

Charles V.—cont.

-, quits Brussels, 450, 451.
-, agreement between Venice and, 460, 461, 476, 507, 514, 516, 518, 522, 564, 566, 567, 568, 570, 571, 573, 575, 589, 590, 594, 596, 597, 598, 599, 601, 602, 615, 617, 619, 630, 631, 636, 637, 638, 666, 671, 680, 685, 690, 697, 708, 709, 712, 714, 715, 716, 717, 720, 721, 722, 732, 739, 741, 749, 750, 762, 774, 803.
-, his relations with the Duke of Urbino, 472.
-, in league with Henry, 479, 487, 516, 518, 528, 1002.
-, letters from, 490, 491.
-, grants Wolsey a pension of 22,000 ducats, 507.
-, (A.D. 1523): refuses the offer of a pension from the King of Portugal to relinquish the spice trade, 589, 635, 805.
-, Henry and Wolsey dissatisfied with, 680.
-, (A.D. 1524): disputes between the King of Portugal and, concerning the discovery of the Spice Islands, 805, 843.
-, Clement VII. negotiates for peace between France, Venice, and, 808, 809, 818, 819, 824.
-, persuades Henry to go to France with an army, 827, 1034.
-, raises troops for the invasion of France, 834, 839.
-, Henry refuses him more money, 835.
-, sends letters into Germany against the Lutherans, 847; the people refuse to obey him, 863.
-, dissatisfied with the proceedings of Wolsey, 852.
-, suffers from the quartan ague, 866, 867, 873, 884, 892, 894, 898, 905, 908, 914, 915.
-, causes a Lutheran to be burnt (?), 872.
-, fails in his engagements to Henry, 888.
-, (A.D. 1525): has a natural daughter born to him at Valladolid, 916.
-, calls the Pope a poltroon, 920.
-, the Germans averse to his aggrandisement, 955.
-, forbids public rejoicings for his successes at the battle of Pavia, 956, 959.
-, dislikes Henry's being one of the principal contracting parties in the league against the Turk, 971.
-, the Pope urges him to induce France to accept fair terms for peace, 977.
-, complains to Henry of Wolsey's intercepting letters to himself, 986.
-, his demands of Francis, 997.
-, in league with the Pope, 1002, 1024.
-, holds Francis captive after the battle of Pavia, 1003, 1011.
-, the Pope again mediates between Francis and, 1005.

Charles V.—cont.

-, dissensions in his dominions caused by the Lutherans, 1007.
-, Henry delays sending Princess Mary to, 1013.
-, the Viceroy of Naples urges him to conquer Italy, 1035.
-, sends Bourbon to command an attack on France, 1036.
-, ratifies the league with the Pope, 1040.
-, Henry refers himself to, in waging war or making peace, 1044.
-, removes Francis to Spain, 1048.
-, the Duchess of Alençon wishes to marry, 1048.
-, the grandees of Spain exhort him to marry Isabella, 1054; of which he informs Henry, 1078.
-, requires Henry to send Mary to Spain, 1057; which Henry delays doing, 1061.
-, demands Mary of Henry, 1062.
-, determined to make war on France, 1065.
-, Henry displeased at his sending Francis to Spain, 1068, 1077.
-, seeks pecuniary aid from Venice, 1069, 1070.
-, negotiations between Francis and, 1069, 1091, 1112, 1133.
-, maritime truce between Francis and, 1073, 1092, 1093, 1094, 1097, 1102, 1105, 1108, 1114.
-, Henry thinks that Francis should be released on paying ransom to, 1079, 1090, 1095.
-, remains firm in favour of marrying Mary, 1089.
-, Henry exhorts him to release Francis, 1106, 1111.
-, visits Francis when ill at Madrid, 1115.
-, Henry willing to release him from his promise to Princess Mary, 1119.
-, aspires to be monarch of the world, and to make the Pope say mass for him, 1141.
-, deserted by Henry, 1145.
-, the Milanese in possession of, 1146, 1157, 1158, 1161, 1164, 1183, 1396.
-, release of Francis to be demanded from, by the English and other ambassadors, 1150, 1166.
-, disbelieves the league between England and France, 1154.
-, proposed peace with Venice, 1155, 1156, 1162, 1190, 1317.
-, failure of the Duchess of Alençon's negotiations with, 1159.
-, his proposed agreement with France, 1163, 1186.
-, remits money to Italy, 1160.
-, English ambassadors demand arrears of pensions from, 1168.
-, an enemy to the Pope, 1169.
-, dissatisfied with England, 1172.

Charles V.—cont.

-, absolved by the Pope from his promise to marry Mary, 1175.
-, his relations with the Pope, 1176, 1185, 1217, 1221.
-, Henry claims half of what he gets from France, 1177.
-, Wolsey denounces the ambition of, 1187.
-, proposed marriage with Isabella of Portugal, 1187.
-, (A.D. 1526): will give his sister to Francis, 1192, 1243.
-, money lent to, by Henry, who endeavours to recover it, 1195, 1279, 1307, 1315, 1324, 1347, 1348, 1349, 1351, 1363, 1390.
-, Wolsey displeased with the Pope's adherence to, 1197.
-, renewal of negotiations with Francis, 1198.
-, Henry endeavours to form a league against, to prevent him from going to Italy, 1200, 1201, 1203, 1204, 1224, 1250, 1254, 1258, 1262, 1266, 1269, 1276, 1277, 1295.
-, agreement between Francis and, 1214, 1218, 1220, 1222, 1223, 1226, 1238.
-, Henry will not consent to the aggrandisement of, 1231.
-, Henry urges Francis not to observe his agreement with, 1235, 1244, 1263.
-, resolved to go into Italy for his coronation, 1236, 1306.
-, writes to the princes of Germany not to renounce the Pope, 1241.
-, Henry offers his forces to Francis against, 1246.
-, Francis promises to pay the money due from, to Henry, 1253.
-, proposes a new league with Henry, 1259.
-, challenged by Francis to a single combat, 1265.
-, Henry promises to ransom the French princes from, 1268.
-, his envoy to France, the Viceroy of Naples, 1270, 1273.
-, the league against, negotiated in France, 1272.
-, Henry to be "conservator" of the league against, 1279, 1280.
-, Francis denies negotiating with, 1285.
-, the "Holy League" against, 1289, 1290, 1343.
-, Henry will demand from, the release of the French princes, 1298, 1302, 1305, 1318, 1320, 1335.
-, sends conciliatory letters to Henry and Wolsey, 1314.
-, refuses a general peace, 1319.
-, a hackney delivered by, to the Pope, as tribute for Naples, 1333.
-, demands from, made by the English and other ambassadors, 1336, 1398, 1403, 1422.

Charles V.—cont.

-, Henry urged to join the league against, 1334, 1339, 1342, 1377, 1382, 1387, 1388, 1401, 1416, 1443.
-, Henry writes to, 1355, 1424, 1439.
-, sends Mendosa to England, 1356, 1374, 1381.
-, his relations with the Lutherans, 1369.
-, England and France united against, 1372.
-, fitting out a fleet for Italy, 1395, 1399.
-, accuses Francis of breach of faith, p. 604, no. 1428.
-, willing to be a party to the Holy League, p. 606.
-, Henry wishes to be mediator for peace with, 1427, 1435, 1438.
-, Francis plots to seize a town of, 1436.
-, Francis wishes Henry to declare war against, 1440.
-, to be included in a general peace, 1441, 1444, 1445.
-, sends a fleet to Italy under the Viceroy of Naples, 1447.
-, Henry's letter to, 1449.
-, to refer his disputes with Francis to Henry for arbitration, 1450.
-, Henry to negotiate peace between Italy and, 1457.
-, Henry protests against his waging war on the Pope, 1459.
-, his sisters. See Eleanor, Queen of Portugal; Katharine.
-, his audiencier. See Haneton, Philip.
-, his confessor. See Confessor.
-, his Council, 1403. See Imperial ministry.
-, his physician, Master Liberal, 340.
-, his pilot-major for voyages of discovery. See Cortes, Hernando.
- Charles VIII., King of France, 1477.
- Charlotte, daughter of Francis I., proposed in marriage to Charles, 323, 765, 767, 780; to the son of the Magnifico Lorenzino de' Medici, 897.
- Chateau —, France, letter dated at, 1356.
- Chateaubriant, Mons. de, 82.
-, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43, 68.
-, Madame, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 26.
-, Henry presents her with a gold crucifix, 94.
- Chatillon, Mons., Marshal of France and Governor of Picardy, 59, 67.
-, Francis gives him Ardres, 124.
- Chau, Mons. de la, 741, 902, 956.
-, ambassador from Charles to Portugal, 992, 1003, 1029, 1133.
- Chavigny, Mons. de, ambassador from France to England, 478.
-, captain of the archers of Francis I.'s body-guard, 1273.

- Checker, the, at Calais, p. 31, p. 32, 107 note.
 Cectria, Earl of. See Westmoreland, Earl of.
 Cheney, Sir Thomas, English ambassador to France, 465, 486.
, ..., his second embassy to France, 1235, 1238, 1243, 1244, 1263, 1265, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1276, 1282, 1284, 1286, 1292, 1293, 1298, 1315, 1317, 1322 note.
 Cheapside, the, London, 244 note.
 Chiavenna, fortress of, 1135.
 Chiapino, Dom., Papal Nuncio to Louise of Savoy, 1100, 1243, 1245, 1256, 1265, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1276, 1283, 1284, 1285, 1287, 1292, 1300, 1311, 1315, 1319, 1320, 1322, 1323, 1324, 1334, 1384.
 Chiefs of the Council of Ten. See Venice.
 Chierigato, Francesco, Bishop of Teramo, letter from, 616.
 Chieti, Bishop of, Nuncio in England, 1485.
 Chièvres, Mons. de, chief councillor of Charles, 55, 119, 134, 156, 196, 310, 902.
, ..., accompanies Charles to Calais, p. 14, p. 31, 53, 106.
, ..., dangerously ill, 209, 220, 222; dies, 224, 579.
, ..., Charles obtains 600,000 ducats by his death, 272.
 Chimney pieces, stone, 83.
 Chiusa, La, 346.
 Chiut (Knight?), Dr., 272.
 Christian, Most, Henry assumes the title of, 883, 869.
 Church erected on the site of the Field of Cloth of Gold, 69, 78, 79, 92.
, States of the, 479.
, Adrian VI. wishes to reform the, 545.
 Churches, reduced to mosques, that is, to white walls, in Switzerland, 1153.
 Cibo, Cardinal, 781.
, ..., elected Legate of Bologna, 795.
 Ciniano, Pandolpho, agent for Spinelli, secretary in England, 1431.
 Cinnamon, imported to the Azores, 1087.
 Cival, Italy, 1358.
 Clarence, George, Duke of, letter to, 1467, 1468.
Clarence St. Mary, the, a ship named, 162.
 Clarencieux, an English herald, sent by Henry to declare war against Francis, 457, 465.
 Claude, Queen of Francis I., 58, 65, 355, 359.
, ..., pregnant, 40.
, ..., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22, p. 24, p. 26, p. 30, p. 39, p. 45, 67, 69, 72, 78, 79, 80, 81, 83, 84, 85, 90, 91, 93, 95.
, ..., exchanges presents with Queen Katharine, 94.
, ..., very ill, 819; dies at Blois (25 July 1524), 865, 1066.
, ..., obsequies of, 1365, 1437.
 Clement VII., Pope (elected 19 November 1523), 776 note, 778, 779, 789, 803, 811, 813, 815, 818, 819, 826, 834, 839, 841, 878, 899, 900, 903, 932, 945-991, 995-1005, 1007, 1009, 1015, 1016, 1030, 1033, 1042, 1045, 1050, 1059, 1067, 1070, 1073, 1085, 1097, 1113, 1118, 1121, 1126, 1132, 1135, 1139, 1141, 1156, 1225, 1247, 1292.
, ..., creates nine Cardinals, 781.
, ..., Francis irritated against, 785.
, ..., his relations with Charles, 792, 832, 960, 971, 1176, 1183, 1185, 1203, 1224, 1318.
, ..., acting against Luther, 794, 795, 796, 824, 832, 1010.
, ..., his affairs with Ferrara, 800.
, ..., suspected of joining the French, 802, 888.
, ..., relations with Venice, 804, 857, 861, 935, 951, 956, 1082, 1105, 1138.
, ..., endeavours to make peace between Charles and Francis, 808, 809, 810, 821, 824, 825, 828, 977.
, ..., requests Charles to act against the Lutherans, 847, 884.
, ..., gives Cardinal Campeggio the English see of Salisbury, 875.
, ..., his alliance with France, 897, 909, 912, 916, 936, 939.
, ..., (A.D. 1525): rumour of disputing his election as Pope, on the score of illegitimate birth, 917.
, ..., Charles calls him a poltroon, 920.
, ..., wishes to form a league with Venice and the Florentines, 926, 937.
, ..., said to be a man of faint heart and will, 937.
, ..., Wolsey abuses him, 986.
, ..., proposed league between Henry, Charles, Archduke Ferdinand, Milan, Florence, and, 998, 1002, 1004, 1011, 1024, 1040, 1065.
, ..., cancels his alliance with Francis and Charles, 1037.
, ..., negotiating a league with Francis and others, 1099, 1100, 1101, 1122, 1124, 1125.
, ..., Henry urges him to exhort Charles to release Francis, 1106.
, ..., accuses Henry of having asked him to join a league against Charles; which Henry denies, and countercharges the Pope, 1120.
, ..., Charles intends to make, his chaplain, 1141.
, ..., his relations with the Switzers, 1147.
, ..., reported league with England and France, 1154.
, ..., gives audience to English ambassadors, 1157, 1158.
, ..., said to be timid, 1163.
, ..., his relations with France, 1167, 1169, 1171, 1182, 1186, 1196, 1224, 1236.

Clement VII., Pope—cont.

-, proposed league with France, 1175, 1187, 1204, 1249, 1251, 1253, 1256, 1257, 1261, 1262, 1264, 1267, 1269, 1270, 1272, 1274, 1277, 1278, 1279, 1280, 1283, 1286, 1305, 1314.
-, Sir G. Casal complains of, 1178.
-, his indecision as to joining the league, 1190, 1191.
- (A.D. 1526): Wolsey writes to, not to make an agreement with Charles, 1197.
-, Henry urges, to join the league, 1199, 1200.
-, Henry suspects, of having made an agreement with the Emperor, 1201.
-, sends Acciajoli to France, 1202.
-, will not allow Milan to be given to Bourbon, 1217.
-, sends Gambara to England, 1221.
-, sends Vitorio to France, to attend Francis after his release, 1221, 1226.
-, promises to absolve Francis from his oath to Charles, 1231, 1235.
-, alarmed at the Turkish preparations, 1238.
-, princes of Germany will renounce, 1241.
-, requests Henry to join the proposed league, 1266.
-, displeased with Gambara's proceedings in England, 1281, 1287.
-, the Holy League between France, Venice, and, 1289, 1290, 1294, 1300, 1309, 1311, 1312, 1319, 1337, 1343, 1347, 1351, 1375, 1379, 1391, 1394, 1411.
-, sends Ruccellai to France, 1295.
-, employs his army against the Imperial army in Italy, 1317, 1327, 1332, 1352.
-, wishes Henry to be a party to the Holy League, 1323, 1339, 1347, p. 602.
-, urged to demand release of French princes in Spain, 1324.
-, Charles sends Moncada to, 1326.
-, a hackney presented to, by Charles, as tribute for Naples, 1333.
-, his relations with Venice, 1336.
-, Wolsey wishes him to send powers to England for modification of the Holy League, 1348, 1380.
-, sends Sanga to England, to urge Henry to join the league, 1357, 1362; and to send his men-at arms and Switzers into Italy, 1368, 1372.
-, receives the articles remodelled by Wolsey, 1385, 1389, 1390, 1392.
-, offers Naples and Milan to Francis, 1396.
-, proposes to include Charles in the Holy League, 1399.

Clement VII., Pope—cont.

-, proposal of Francis and Charles to go to Italy and make him the Emperor's "chaplain," p. 604.
-, intercepts letters to the Duke of Ferrara, 1405.
-, his ambassador at Venice, 1405.
-, troubled at Henry's delay in joining the league, 1407.
-, his palace sacked by the Imperialists and the Colonna faction, 1412, 1416, 1419, 1424.
-, Henry will not fail to assist, 1418, 1448.
-, Henry sends money to, 1427, 1428, 1433, 1434, 1443, 1449, 1459.
-, to be included in a general peace, 1441, 1444.
-, Wolsey desires Venice to encourage, 1446.
-, requested by Charles to conclude a general peace, 1450.
-, forgives the injuries done him by the Colonna faction, 1454.
- Clergy, the English, 463.
- Clerk, Dr. John, Dean of the Chapel Royal, Windsor, and Bishop of Bath and Wells, English ambassador resident at Rome, 167, 459, 503 note, 545, 660, 675, 714, 800, 819, 861, 873, 909, 918, 927, 932, 945, 974, 998, 1125, 1142.
-, his signature, 638.
-, the creature of Wolsey, whom he is to aid in obtaining the Papedom, in case Adrian VI. should die, 651.
-, ambassador to France, 1339, 1351, 1356, 1371, 1372, 1383, 1384, 1398, 1434, 1437, 1440.
- Cleves, Duke of, named as a confederate in the treaty of Windsor, 479.
- Cloth, 1007.
- of gold, p. 14, p. 15, p. 16, 41, 53, 93, 503, 622, 718, 773, 1272.
- of silver, p. 27.
- Cloths, exported from England to Venice, 139.
- Cloves, imported to Spain, 556; to Portugal, 1087.
- Code, the maritime, 848.
- Cognac, 1280.
-, Viceroy of Naples at, 1269, 1292.
-, the Holy League made at, 1289, 1411.
-, letters dated at, 17, 1250, 1261, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1276, 1282, 1284, 1285, 1293, 1322 note.
- Coir, Italy, 1408, 1453.
-, letter from, 1102.
-, Lutherans at, 1006.
- Colick, the, 130.
- Colla, Giovanni, in London, 1485 note.
- Collar, jewelled, worn by Henry at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 17, 69, 673; which he gives to Francis, p. 27, 91, 94.
- of the order of the Garter, 73.
-, golden, presented by Venice to Ric. Pace, 719, 728.

- Collars, jewelled, p. 30.
- College, the, of Venice. See Venice.
- Collioure, a port six leagues from Perpignan, 1048.
- Collona, Friar Sebastian, a Venetian, 607.
- Cologne, 134, 220, 999, 1007.
-, Archbishop of, at the Diet of Spires, 1313.
- Colonna factiōn, the, has 7,000 infantry, 1357.
-, sack the Vatican and other palaces at Rome, 1412, 1413 note, 1419, 1424, 1427, 1434, 1454.
- Colonna, Cardinal, the vice-chancery given to, 795, 998, 1054
-, chief of the Colonna faction, 1412.
-, Marc' Antonio, at the French Court, from Rome, 320.
-, Prospero, 294, 486, 631, 753, 766.
- Colti, Marchiò de', and nephews, 1464.
-, Marianno de', and nephew, 1462.
- Columbus, Christopher, 607 note.
-, dies at Valladolid (in 1506), 1115.
-, Diego, son of Christopher, 1038.
- Comaere (Comacler ?), secretary, sent by Francis to Charles, 1319.
- Comedies, performed in Wolsey's court, 1193.
- Comedy, a, composed by the Neapolitan Terene, 941.
- Comendador Mayor, Mons. de la Chau, 741, 1088. See Castile.
- Commissioners, to meet at Calais to decide damages between England and Scotland, 465.
- Commons of England, the, 679, 1486.
- Communities, army of the, in Germany, 172.
- Como, Italy, 369, 1206, 1368, 1373.
- Compiègne, letters dated at, 353, 355, 373.
- Compostella, S. Giacomo di, 38.
-, letter dated at, 31.
-, Santiago de, the order of, founded A.D. 1170, 302.
- Concordia, Bishop, Papal Legate in England, 1475.
- Concresault, Mons. de, sent by the French to Scotland, temp. Hen. VII., 1478.
- Conegliano, 1055.
- Confections, 498.
- Conference, the Calais, at which Wolsey endeavours to settle the disputes between Charles and Francis, 320, 321, 323, 325, 326, 327, 329, 334.
- Confessor, Henry VIII.'s. See Lincoln, Bishop of.
-, Charles's, 275 note, 302, 407, 552.
- Congregation, the, at Rome, held to condemn the heresies of Luther, 15, 16.
- Consistory, the, at Rome, 5, 122, 796, 909, 937.
- Constable, the, of England. See Dorset, Marquis of.
-, of France. See Bourbon, Duke of.
- Constance, Council of, 192, 199, 202.
-, lake of, 413.
- Constantinople, 441, 956, 1050, 1071.
-, letters and news from, 39, 189, 225, 255, 1104, 1114, 1233, 1487.
-, Venetian ambassador at, letter to, 1209.
-, Venetian bailiff at, letter from, 704.
-, letters to, 370, 1209.
- Consuls, 23.
-, Venetian, 740.
- Contarini, Antonio, patriarch of Venice, 734.
-, Bernardin, 1481.
-, Carlo, 576, 581.
-, Venetian ambassador to the Archduke Ferdinand, 974, 1056.
-, letters from, 863, 864, 872, 907, 936, 938, 944, 955, 967, 976, 980, 984, 988, 994, 1000, 1018, 1028, 1174, 1252, 1313.
-, his secretary, Marco Antonio Longin, 1086, 1153.
-, Francesco, 482, 528.
-, elected ambassador to England, 1303, 1309; declines, 1325, 1330.
-, Gasparo, Venetian ambassador with Charles V., 290, 390, 419, 480, 481, 502, 504, 514, 516, 549, 598.
-, letters from, 196, 197, 199, 202, 209, 216, 217, 220, 222, 223, 224, 228, 239, 241, 242, 247, 248, 250, 254, 257, 262, 265, 266, 269, 274, 275, 277, 284, 285, 289, 294, 298, 299, 302, 310, 312, 313, 315, 316, 331, 338, 339, 340, 343, 344, 345, 346, 348, 350, 356, 357, 360, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 372, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 382, 385, 388, 391, 394, 395, 401, 402, 404, 405, 406, 407, 410, 411, 415, 416, 420, 422, 425, 430, 431, 433, 434, 436, 438, 439, 443, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 455, 456, 458, 460, 461, 462, 463, 465, 466, 467, 470, 474, 475, 478, 483, 484, 486, 492, 493, 498, 507, 510, 523, 526, 542, 543, 552, 554, 556, 564, 570, 571, 579, 589, 607, 612, 613, 630, 633, 634, 635, 646, 659, 662, 665, 668, 672, 681, 686, 693, 702, 703, 710, 711, 729, 737, 741, 743, 746, 751, 752, 753, 761, 766, 767, 768, 771, 776, 779, 780, 792, 797, 799, 805, 806, 814, 815, 819, 821, 822, 823, 825, 827, 831, 832, 836, 843, 845, 846, 847, 848, 852, 856, 858, 859, 860, 865, 866, 867, 873, 876, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 884, 885, 892, 893, 894, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 908, 910, 911, 914, 915, 916, 917, 920, 922, 939, 943, 948, 956, 958, 960, 962, 963, 966, 969, 971, 986, 987, 992, 996, 1002, 1011, 1014, 1021, 1029, 1030, 1035, 1038, 1039, 1044, 1047, 1048, 1049, 1057, 1063, 1064, 1066, 1069, 1078, 1087, 1088, 1091.
-, letters to, 327, 488, 494, 505, 518, 548, 557, 669, 754.
-, his secretary, 339.
-, Giovanni, 19.

- Contarini, Giustinian, 386, 576, 581.
 letter to, 421.
 Maffio and Ambrosio, 1461.
 Marco, 258, 386, 576, 581.
 Marco Antonio, 386, 576, 581, 1330.
 Piero, Venetian state-attorney, 540, 772.
 Tomaso, letter from, 421.
 Zuan, 18.
 Zuan Francesco, brother of Carlo, letters from, 883, 1027.
 letter to, 1153.
Corado, Sir. See Wyngfield, Sir Ric.
Corbie, taken by the English, 782.
Cordova, Bishop of, 613.
 Gonsalvo of, the Great Captain, 875.
Corfu, 523, 1327.
Corn, Indian, 556.
Cornaro, Cardinal, 781.
 Francesco, Venetian ambassador with Charles, p. 14 note; 124, 209, 467, 556, 902.
 at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 15, p. 18, p. 19, p. 29; 53.
 his report on England on his return to Venice from Charles, 232.
 his secretary, Andrea Rosso, 147.
 letters from, 31, 38, 53, 54, 55, 75, 96, 104, 156, 191.
 Georgio, procurator of Venice, 620.
 Zorzi, procurator of Venice, 677, 695, 697.
Cornets, used at Mass, 93.
Cornwallis, Sir Charles, 809 note.
Corsairs, 430.
Corsi, Giovanni, Florentine ambassador with Charles V., 899, 900, 902, 916, 917, 1030, 1035, 1120.
Corsica, the Imperial fleet at, 1447, 1449.
Cortes, the, 1029, 1078, 1099. held by Charles, 507, 526, 825, 1054.
Cortes, Hernando, Charles's governor of the Island of Cuba, discovers Mexico and other places, 556, 589.
 his marriage, 1115.
Coranna, 31, 32, 41, 232, 385, 556.
 Cortes at, 26.
 letter dated at, 38.
Costabeli, Antonio de', Ferrarese ambassador with the Pope, 800.
Council, Privy, of England. See Privy Council.
 the, of France. See France.
 of Venice. See Venice. of Spain, 702. See Imperial Council.
Councils, the heresies of Luther condemned by, 191, 199.
Couriers, 321, 351, 418, 467.
Coursers, p. 22, 69, 77.
Court, the English, 268.
Courteney, Hen., Earl of Devonshire, &c. See Devonshire, Earl of.
Courtray, in the Austrian Netherlands, letter dated at, 350.
Covos palace, at Valladolid, the, 702 note.
Covos, Secretary, 391.
Crema, 266, 752, 753, 809, 913, 1032, 1138.
 Wolsey wishes his proposed pension to be derived from, 1315.
 bailiff and captain of, letters from the, 1246, 1292, 1456.
 letter dated at, 1084.
Cremona, 485, 516, 531, 538, 572, 751, 809, 810, 890, 897, 990, 1128.
 Francis willing to give, to the Pope, 800.
 letter dated at, 919.
 besieged by the Imperial army, 1164, 1171, 1185, 1249, 1270, 1272, 1280, 1281, 1286, 1287.
 in possession of the Imperialists, 1358, 1377.
 besieged by the Papal and Venetian armies, 1380, 1392, 1409.
 captured by them, 1412, 1413, 1415, 1419, 1420, 1421, 1424, 1425.
Cressy, Roberto, notary public of London, 1481.
Cristian, Francesco, of Bologna, 1460, 1461.
Croatia, 516.
Croce, Cavalier della, letter from, 59.
Croiers, taken by the English, 782.
Cross, diamond, p. 16.
 silver, 69.
 the true, Wolsey gives Lady Margaret a jewelled cross containing a piece of, 91.
 the red, 637.
Crown, the English, revenues of, 232.
 the Imperial, 6, 107, 111.
Crowns of the sun, 784.
Croy, Cardinal de, obsequies of, 156.
Crucifix, 91.
 a golden, 88, 93.
 given to Wolsey by Lady Margaret, 94.
Crusade, a, proposed, 1463.
Cuba, governor of. See Cortes, Hernando.
Cuenca, Bishop, 1038.
Cupboards, in use at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 81.
Custom duties, 608.
Customs, the, of London, 474.
Cyprian, 1488. See Majolo.
Cyprus, held by the Venetians, though belonging to Henry VIII., 467, 1468.
 Lord Lieutenant of, Donado da Leze, 1188, 1189.

D.

- Dacre, Lord, of Gillesland, 1037.
- Dalmatia, 139.
 atrocities committed by the Turks in, 469.
- Damascene carpets, 1, 13.
- Damascus, Venetian factory of, 127, 1417.
 governor of, Gazeli Bey, 177.
- Dancing, p. 23, p. 26, nos. 54, 69, 83, 90 248, 1292.
- Dandolo, Cà, at Venice, 527, 551, 941.
 Dom. Marco, Wolsey desires a rare book belonging to, 1258.
 Venetian ambassador in France, 1485.
 Matteo, LL.D., letters to, 199, 404.
- Danes, the, 679.
 hatred between the English and, 308.
- Dappled Duke, a horse called the, 81.
- Darmer, Alvise, proveditor of the Venetian navy, 1327.
- Datary, Papal, Matteo Giberti, Bp. of Verona, 897, 1201. See Verona.
- Dauncy, Sir John, 1037.
- Dauphiné, in France, 144, 960.
- Dauphin, the, of France. See Francis, son of Francis.
- Davila, Pedraria, 1011 note.
- Deduinsis, Giovanni, bill broker in London, 1462.
- "De Libertate Christiana," one of Luther's works, 1086.
- "De Vera et Falsa Religione," title of a book, 1006.
- Defender of the Faith, the title granted by Leo X. to Henry VIII., 479, 546 note, 833, 1256, 1323, 1349, 1412, 1413.
- Defensores Libertatis et Scripturæ Evangelicæ, Lutherans styling themselves, 907, 944, 967.
- De la Valle, Mons., French ambassador to Spain, 1268.
- Denmark, 209.
 King of, Christiern II., 262, 299, 607, 781.
 named as ally in the league between England and France, 111.
 joins Charles against Francis, 247, 252, 256.
 description of his person, 248.
 his relations with Henry, 272.
 has an interview with Wolsey at Bruges, 298.
 Wolsey refuses to pay a visit to, 308.
 nominee in the treaty of Windsor, 479.
 in Scotland, 679.
 residing in Brabant, 1218.
 Queen of, sister of Charles V., her death, 1218.
- Depiscæ, D., signature to a Papal breve, 1463.
- Devedo, captaincy of the, at Venice, 1489.
- Devereux, John, notary public of Lombard Street, 1483.
- Devonshire, Henry Courtenay, Earl of, nephew of Henry VIII., 663.
 at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 111.
 created Earl of Exeter, 1053 note.
- Diamonds, p. 17, no. 1272.
- Diets in Germany, 147, 151, 152, 163, 169, 170, 195, 197, 199, 202, 225.
- Dijon, letters dated at, 188, 198, 212, 215, 221, 230, 234, 235, 245, 260, 261, 267, 271.
- Docwra, Sir Thomas, Prior of St. John of Jerusalem in England, 206.
 English ambassador to France, 70, 349, 350.
 accompanies Wolsey to Calais, 272.
 goes to Charles, 352, 507.
 returns to Calais, 364, 365.
- Dogs, 472.
- Dogs, English sporting, 1437.
- Dolfin, Ser Zuan, candidate for the embassy to England, 1330.
- Domenico, the Brescian, a courier, 1192.
- Dominican Friars, 156, 163.
 monks, 493.
- Dominicans, General of the, 788 note. See Vio, Tomaso de.
- Donado, Count Alexandro, letters from, 78, 83.
 Antonio, master of the "Donata" galley, 381, 385, 457.
 Ser Francesco, Sage of the Council, 1127.
 Francesco, captain of Padua, letter to, 519.
- Donata, the, one of the Flanders galleys, 444, 445.
 detained in Biscay, 388, 394, 399, 406, 407, 412, 419, 422, 431, 433, 434; released, 456, 457, 469.
- Doria, Andrea, in the service of Francis, 746.
 his galleys, 1368.
- Dorset, Thos. Grey, Marquis of, Constable of England, 1037.
 accompanies Henry to France, p. 18, p. 21, p. 44, 68, 69, 71, 73, 106.
 called Duke Mirlot, 84; Marquis of Monfort, 1025. his brother, Lord Leonard Grey, 108 note.
- Dourlens in France, taken by the English, 769.
- Dover, p. 14, p. 19, p. 20, 52, 53, 56, 58, 61, 111, 232, 278, 463, 473, 480, 1008.
 Castle, p. 14.
 letters dated at, 462, 1430.
- Dragon, the red, Henry's baège of arms, p. 33.
- Drapier, Bernardo de Zuanne, and his brothers and nephews, Venetian merchants in London, 1464.
- Dublin, see of, 1473.
 Archbishop of, Walter Fitzsimons, temp. Ric. III., 1473.

Dunkirk, 462.

Duodo, Nicolò, of Venice, 784, 1481.

Duprat, Anthony, Chancellor of France, 73, 84, 198, 205, 1197, 1218, 1270, 1272, 1285, 1301, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1324, 1356, 1358, 1365, 1383, 1436.

....., at the conference at Calais on behalf of Francis, 260, 267, 268, 279, 288, 300, 305, 308, 314, 317, 320, 322, 324, 327, 329, 330, 334, 337, 342, 359; his statements at the Calais conference, 280, 321, 323, 326, 335.

Durham, Bishop of, temp. Hen. VII., at war with the Scots, 1478.

....., Bishop of, Thomas Ruthal, 6, 34, 463, 467, 475, 484, 494.

....., accompanies Henry to France, p. 15, p. 29, 106.

....., goes with Wolsey to Calais, 272.

E.

Eagle, Imperial, p. 33, p. 34.

Eastlanders (Olachia), at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 90.

Eating and drinking, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 94.

Ecclesiastical Orders of England, 679.

Echingham, Osborne, sent by Henry to Dr. Lee in Spain, 1403, 1450.

Eckius, attends the conference at Baden, 1296.

Edict-stone, the, at Venice, 734.

Edmonde, Count de, 702.

Edoardin, Mons., sent by Louise of Savoy to England, 1187.

Edward IV., King of England, Papal breve to, 1469.

....., a merchant of Florence privy councillor to, 1471.

Egyptians, the, 556.

Eleanor, sister of Charles, and widow of Emmanuel King of Portugal, 665, 681, 693, 702, 711.

....., proposed marriage with the Duke of Milan, 589.

....., with child by her step-son, John of Portugal, 613, 680.

....., proposed marriage with the Duke of Bourbon, 758, 777, 902, 1003, 1017, 1058, 1065, 1066, 1069, 1085, 1089, 1112.

....., proposed marriage with Francis I., 819, 865, 983, 997, 1029, 1063, 1112, 1177, 1492, 1220, 1226, 1403.

....., proposed marriage with her step-son, John King of Portugal, 876.

....., Francis sends presents to, 1243.

....., writes to Francis, 1270, 1273.

....., proposed marriage with Lewis XII. (in 1514), 1485.

Eleanor, sister of Charles, and widow of Emmanuel King of Portugal—cont.

....., her daughter Eleanor by Emmanuel, 992.

....., proposed marriage with Count Frederick of Palatine, 902; with one of the sons of Francis I., 962, 997, 1029, 1058.

Electors of Germany, the, 151, 156, 192, 196, 199, 217, 479, 1241.

Elizabeth, daughter of James I. of England, temp. 1607; 809 note.

Elna, Bishop of. See Mesa, Bernard de.

Eltham, Henry at, 142, 219.

....., called "Altr.," 463.

Ely, Dr. Nicholas West, Bishop of, accompanies Wolsey to Calais, 272, 335.

....., called the Rev. Agiense, 240.

....., English ambassador to France, 349, 352, 353.

Emanuel, Don Juan, Imperial ambassador at Rome, 376, 395, 472, 545. See also Mannel.

Embargo, Henry lays an, upon all foreign vessels, 982.

Emeralds, p. 30.

Emigrants, Venetian, 19, 685, 1226, 1273.

Emmanuel, King of Portugal, 589, 902.

Emperor, the. See Charles.

Empire of the West, the, 466.

....., the Roman, 479.

....., the Venetian, 494.

....., the German, 752.

England, 2, 4, 5, 13, 21, 40, 46, p. 14, 52, 53, 65, 66, 94, 97, 100, 108, 114, 146, 148, 150, 160, 164, 179, 185, 187, 197, 198, 205, 207, 209, 211, 231, 235, 240, 241, 243, 246, 247, 250, 254, 257, 258, 261, 264, 266, 270, 274, 279, 284, 286, 303, 311, 315, 328, 350, 356, 360, 362, 367, 371, 373, 378, 382, 384, 386, 394, 395, 397, 399, 401, 406, 411, 413, 415, 416, 418, 420, 421, 424, 431, 433, 437, 445, 446, 449, 454, 456, 460, 461, 464, 467, 468, 469, 473, 475, 478, 480, 485, 487, 492, 493, 498, 508, 526, 542, 552, 553, 556, 561, 565, 570, 571, 572, 575, 583, 585, 586, 589, 591, 607, 634, 637, 643, 647, 651, 658, 662, 676, 678, 682, 693, 731, 732, 737, 740, 748, 764, 768, 772, 773, 775, 780, 783, 784, 808, 809, 810, 818, 819, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 841, 842, 845, 848, 886, 897, 903, 904, 905, 913, 916, 918, 919, 922, 927, 935, 954, 961, 966, 969, 970, 973, 974, 975, 977, 980, 982, 984, 994, 996, 1005, 1007, 1014, 1026, 1029, 1032, 1040, 1048, 1051, 1057, 1067, 1069, 1070, 1078, 1080, 1084, 1089, 1091, 1102, 1114, 1123, 1127, 1128, 1132, 1135, 1144, 1188, 1189, 1423, 1432, 1465, 1466, 1467, 1468, 1478, 1480, 1485, 1487.

England—cont.

-, its relations with Venice, 8, 424, 426, 459, 482, 521, 530, 564, 1163, 1164, 1213, 1249, 1303, 1304, 1311, 1326, 1327, 1329, 1330, 1331, 1348, 1363, 1378, 1431, 1443.
-, quietly governed by Wolsey, 57, 101, 398.
-, its relations with France, 69, 190, 408, 484, 1168, 1186, 1198, 1212, 1219, 1224, 1230, 1233, 1247, 1258, 1261, 1262, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1272, 1273, 1298, 1306, 1321, 1383, 1397, 1435, 1453, 1457.
-, the regency of, to be left to Francis should Henry die without male heirs, 119.
-, Cardinals elected for, 122.
-, its relations with Scotland, 128.
-, Francis refuses to send grain to supply the scarcity in, 130, 134, 142, 170.
-, league between the Pope, France, and, 151.
-, a report of, made to the Venetian Senate, 232.
-, league between Charles and, 289, 387, 507.
-, great scarcity of bread and wine in, 396.
-, Venetian negotiations with France and, 427, 541.
-, muster of forces in, for the attack on Scotland, 442.
-, Henry detains all Frenchmen and their goods in, 457, 458, 465.
-, Henry detains Venetian galleys, and will not allow Venetians to trade with, 495, 506, 522, 567, 584, 585, 590, 592, 593, 644, 652.
-, the population of, dissatisfied with the war against France, 537.
-, Henry levies a fresh duty upon all merchandise in, 562.
-, rumoured attack by France on, 605.
-, question of precedence between France and, 603, 606.
-, Henry agrees to release the Venetian galleys on certain conditions, 608.
-, prepares for war with France, 630, 640, 990.
-, French preparations against, 631, 636.
-, Henry releases the Venetian galleys in, 656, 671.
-, Parliaments held in, 663.
-, the French invade, 664.
-, the Black Parliament of, 679.
-, rumour of an insurrection in, 786.
-, conspiracy in, 830.
-, its relations with the Emperor, 865, 1168, 1172, 1197, 1305, 1320, 1324, 1335, 1356, 1422, 1439, 1445, 1447, 1450.

England—cont.

-, Venetians complain of the embargo laid on galleys trading with, 877.
-, the people complain of Henry levying a tax of one-sixth on all personal and landed property in, 1008.
-, inclined for war, 1021.
-, disturbances in, by reason of Henry imposing a tax for the war against France, 1025.
-, insurrection against Cardinal Wolsey in, 1027, 1028.
-, negotiations between France and, 1052, 1073, 1088, 1097, 1112.
-, negotiations between Charles and, 1074, 1099, 1119, 1133.
-, in league with France, 1081, 1121, 1122, 1129, 1130, 1133, 1154, 1162, 1173, 1181, 1187, 1193, 1202, 1211, 1227, 1349.
-, truce between the Emperor, France, and, 1092, 1108.
-, its relations with the Pope, 1147, 1199, 1221, 1295, 1357, 1360, 1362, 1402, 1407, 1416, 1419, 1433, 1444.
-, its power held in great account, 1251.
-, the Venetian ambassador much beloved in, 1275.
-, its relations with Italy, 1276, 1279, 1286, 1287, 1289, 1317, 1319, 1324, 1334, 1343, 1366, 1367, 1368, 1381, 1385, 1389, 1394.
-, Duke of Orleans to marry Princess Mary and reside in, 1297.
-, its relations with the Switzers, 1301.
-, its relations with Flanders, 1381, 1393.
-, a violet column used as an emblem of, 1451.
-, false Apostolic letters for preaching the Word of God in, temp. Hen. VII., 1474.
-, the right of sanctuary in, restricted temp. Hen. VII., 1475.
-, its relations with France, temp. Hen. VII., 1475, 1476.
-, displeased with the marriage between Queen Mary and the Duke of Suffolk, 1486.
-, news and letters from, 32, 242, 265, 477, 571, 640, 680, 744, 745, 758, 776, 797, 804, 829, 843, 846, 858, 859, 860, 865, 869, 874, 884, 939, 972, 985, 1004, 1022, 1023, 1033, 1044, 1045, 1056, 1068, 1077, 1478.
-, King of. See Henry VIII.
-, Queen of. See Katharine.
-, Princess of. See Mary.
-, ambassadors from and to. See Ambassadors.
-, arms of, p. 22, p. 33, p. 34, 94.
-, benefices and annats of, 263.
-, Constable of. See Dorset, Marquis of.

England—cont.

-, Court of, 91, 688, 692, 730.
-, doctors of, 90.
-, First Chamberlain of, ambassador to France, 1456.
-, laws of, 193.
-, Master of the Horse of, Sir Hen. Guy-lford, 72.
-, merchandise of, 23, 200, 444, 515.
-, ports in, 351.
-, Prior of. See Kendal; Docwra.
-, prothonotary of, 1468. See Goldwell.
-, the roses of, p. 16.
-, royal postmaster of, 339.
-, Venetian merchants in, 419.
-, Venetian secretary in. See Spinelli, Gasparo.
- English, the, p. 39, 121, 142, 143, 463, 466, 486, 507, 522, 528, 632, 812, 845, 958, 986, 992, 1007, 1080, 1089, 1094.
-, hatred between the Danes and, 308.
-, assume the government of Scotland, with the consent of France, 862.
-, dissatisfied at the peace with France, 1223.
-, their natural hatred to the French, p. 623.
-, invade Normandy (in 1514), 1485.
-, army, 463.
-, employed against France, 486, 496, 543, 552, 565, 572, 702, 729, 733, 739, 743, 756, 757, 764, 771, 786, 787, 853, 855, 871, 874, 880, 888, 1001, 1012.
-, suffers a defeat from the French, 497, 499, 748.
-, defeat the French, 511, 761.
-, take a castle belonging to the French, 542, 552.
-, routed in Brittany by the French, 542, 560.
-, besiege Boulogne, 758, 760, 763.
-, take Monon, Montreuil, Dour-lens, and Montdidier, 769.
-, three leagues from Paris, 777.
-, take Li Antere, Corbie and Bray, and Croiers, and Montdidier, 782.
-, return to England, 801.
-, under Terouenne, 826.
-, against Scotland, 630, 770, 797.
-, suffers a defeat from the Scots, 676.
-, fleet, 111, 435, 474, 484, 498, 630.
-, against France, 486.
-, against Scotland, 637.
-, at Portsmouth, 643.
-, bishops, barons, lords, knights, ministers, ladies, and gentlemen at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 15, p. 19,
p. 21, p. 22, p. 25, p. 30, p. 41, p. 45;
53, 54, 69, 70, 80, 81, 83, 85, 90, 92,
93, 94.

English—cont.

- bishops, 213, 663.
- cloths, to be sold in France, 1381.
- dukes, earls, and barons, 663.
- fishermen, 321.
- gentlemen, 298.
- government, 135, 227.
- noblemen, 108.
-, accompany Wolsey to Bruges, 298.
- pale, 100.
- peers, 209.
- ports, 321.
- privy councillors, accompany Wolsey to Bruges, 315.
- sailors, 463.
- ships, 279, 644, 645.
- troops, 463.
-, sent to Spain for the use of Charles, 467.
- wrestlers, 82; at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 85.
- Erasmus, Desiderius, Luther has an understanding with, 147.
-, invited to a conference in Switzerland, 1296.
- Ermine, p. 15, 663.
- Escu, Mons. l', at the Field of Cloth of Gold, pp. 24, 25; nos. 58, 68, 84, 85, 94.
- Esparre, Mons. de l', at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 68, 84.
- Estampes, in France, letter dated, 1437.
- Estates, the three, of London, summon the Duke of Suffolk to return from France, 786.
- Este, Hercules of, son of Alfonso Duke of Ferrara, married in June 1528 to the second daughter of Lewis XII. and Anne of Brittany, 1029 note.
- Exchange, bills of, 673, 824, 916, 918, 1301, 1333.
-, protests for non-payment of,
1460, 1461, 1462, 1464, 1481, 1483.
-, rates of, 949.
- Exeter, Earl of, 663.
-, Henry Courtenay, Earl of Devonshire, nephew of Henry VIII., created, 1053.
- Exile-grandeas, Venice gives refuge to, 283.
- Exiles, the, 272. See also Emigrants.

F.

- Faber, attends a conference at Baden, 1296.
- Falchener (Folchinaria), —, his signature, 628.
- Falconets, engines of war, 1226.

- Falcons, brought by falconers to Henry, as presents from the Marquis of Mantua, 643, 661, 682, 1216.
- Falier, Lodovico, of Venice, 258, 386, 418, 437, 553, 554, 576, 577, 578, 1330.
-, Sebastian, master of the galleys detained in England, negotiating their release by means of bribery, 614.
- Falmouth, 3, 356, 360.
- Fanelli, Pietro, of Sezza, absolution of, by Pope Innocent VIII., 1474.
- Farnese, Cardinal, 781.
-, his sister Júlia, 811.
- Faro, near Cadiz, in Portugal, 836.
- Fasan (or Fazan), Stefano, executor of Lorenzo Orio, ambassador to England, 1294.
-, Venetian merchant in London, temp. Henry VII., 1481.
- Fassan, Dom. Lorenzo, 1070.
- Fayette, Anthony de la, governor of Boulogne, 309, 330, 354, 644, 645, 1125.
- Feathers, p. 17, p. 30, 73, 83.
- Feltre, 772.
-, Bishop of, 627.
- Feramosca, Cesare, ambassador from Charles to Clement, 1450.
- Ferdinand of Aragon, King of Spain, p. 14, 323, 395, 404, 447, 607, 1064.
- Ferdinand, Don, Archduke of Austria, brother of Charles V., the "Infant" of Spain, 395, 416, 420, 422, 439, 544, 570, 603, 619, 630, 813, 863, 865, 872, 878, 884, 897, 899, 923, 966, 973, 974, 976, 984, 1000, 1009, 1028.
-, with his brother at his interview with Henry, 97, 106.
-, Charles leaves him Imperial Vicar of Germany while he goes to Spain, 141, 409, 413.
-, proposed marriage with the sister of the King of Hungary, 143, 227.
-, Charles resigns the duchy of Wurtemberg and the county of Tyrol to, 409.
-, Charles gives to, all the countries of Austria, all the countries of the Lake of Constance, the duchy of Brandenburg, and the county of the Tyrol, 413.
-, named as confederate in the treaty of Windsor, 479.
-, Charles refuses him the duchy of Milan, 589.
-, his negotiations with Venice, 641, 685, 689, 690, 715, 724, 723, 726, 981, 1024, 1100.
-, acting against the Lutherans, 675, 699, 883, 1118.
-, causes the printer of Luther's books to be burnt, 712.
-, league between the Pope, Henry, Charles, Venice, the Duke of Milan, and, 716, 734, 735, 998, 1002, 1011.
-, causes two Lutherans to be burnt at Stutgard, 840.
- Ferdinand, Don, Archduke of Austria, &c.—cont.
-, Francis willing to cede the duchy of Milan to, 879.
-, prohibits all persons from following Luther under pain of being beheaded, 889.
-, the population of Germany greatly exasperated against him about the affairs of Luther, 889, 891.
-, defends his duchy of Wurtemberg against the Lutherans, 907, 936, 955.
-, assists other German Princes against the Lutherans, 967.
-, raises troops against the Lutherans, 979, 980.
-, negotiating with the Lutherans, 994.
-, the Lutherans take his duchy of Wurtemberg, 1007.
-, the Pope aids him with money against the Lutherans, 1065.
-, league between Henry, Charles, Francis, Lady Margaret, and, 1108, 1132.
-, heir apparent to Charles V., 1177.
-, dreaded by Venice, 1183.
-, requires satisfaction from Venice, 1226.
-, wishes Charles to obtain Milan for him, 1241.
-, preparing to invade Italy, 1327, 1332, 1358, 1368.
-, writes to Margaret of Savoy, 1371, 1374, 1377.
-, makes truce with the Great Turk, 1433.
-, his ambassador at Venice, Vido dalla Torre, 641, 666, 690.
-, his ambassador at Rome, 998.
-, his consort, 988.
-, his forces, 675.
- Fermo, Lodovico da, 1152.
- Ferrara, 81, 141, 176, 177, 253, 263, 524, 527 note, 802, 916, 1050.
-, fashions of, p. 26.
-, Andrea of, of the order of Friars Hermits, preaching the doctrines of Luther at Venice, 149, 159, 174.
-, Duke of, Alfonso, 366, 781, 800, 854, 1111, 1121, 1126, 1128, 1135, 1136.
-, included in the treaty between England and France, 141, 716, 1122.
-, his ambassador at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29, p. 43; at Venice, Antonio de' Costabelli, 606, 627, 691, 724, 734, 800, 916, 991, 1042; at Venice, Jacopo Theobaldo, 1343, 1405; with Charles, 1038, 1404.
-, requires a passport to go to Charles, 1150.
-, will not go to Spain, 1163.

Ferrara, Duke of, Alfonso—cont.

-, urged by England to join the league against Charles, 1187, 1201, 1202, 1449.
-, prothonotary Casal sent by Henry to, 1207.
-, Wolsey disapproves of his being captain-general, 1351.
-, Henry proposes he shall be King of Naples, 1427.
-, his son, Hercules of Este, 1029 note.
-, Marquis of, included in the treaty between England and France, 1122.
- Ferrarese, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 70.
- Ferrete, two leagues west of Basle, rise of Lutherans at, 1118.
- Fever, a pestilential, raging at Greenwich, and London, 236.
- Field of Cloth of Gold, interview between Henry and Francis at Ardres (in 1520), called the, 17, 22, 24, 25, 26, 32, 36, 37, 38, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 61, 65, 71, 72, 75, 76, 77, 82, 87, 89, 92, 1016.
-, descriptions of, p. 20, nos. 53, 58, 59, p. 39, nos. 67, 68, 69, 70, 73, 78, 79, 80, 81, 83, 84, 85, 90, 91, 93, 94, 95, 111.
- Fielding, Viscount, temp. 1635, 527 note.
- Fiesco, Cardinal, 781.
- Fifers, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67.
- Finale, in Italy, letter dated at, 855.
- Fiorenza, Angelo di, French ambassador at Venice, 606.
-, Ambrosio di, French ambassador at Venice, negotiating a league between England, France, and Venice, 1081, 1152, 1171, 1182, 1183, 1185, 1186, 1190, 1322.
- Firenze. See Florence.
- Firescreens, sold on St. Mark's Square, Venice, 1451.
- Fireworks, display of, at Venice, 736.
- Fisher, Bishop. See Rochester.
- Fitzroy, Henry, natural son of Henry VIII., created Duke of Richmond (18 June 1525), 1037 note, 1289 note. See Richmond.
- Fitzwilliam, Sir William, English ambassador to France, 215 note, 238, 240, 243, 245, 246 note, 253, 276, 281 note.
-, Vice-admiral, commander of the fleet in the Channel against France, 687 note.
-, ambassador to France, to conclude a league, 1097, 1151, 1173, 1179, 1187, 1224.
-, again sent to France, to negotiate a marriage between Princess Mary and King Francis I., 1455, 1456.
- Flanders, 41, p. 31, 94, 111, 166, 169, 172, 179, 185, 195, 198, 208, 217, 219, 227, 298, 306, 385, 394, 406, 413, 415, 419, 445, 454, 463, 467, 478, 487, 552, 570, Flanders—cont.

- 633, 693, 702, 737, 821, 825, 845, 874, 880, 899, 935, 970, 973, 974, 987, 1212, 1218, 1227, 1371, 1374, 1433.
-, Charles's visit to, 2, 19, 31, 32, 58, 59, 61, 73, 97, 100.
-, controversy between Charles and Francis relative to, 177, 215, 237, 278, 280, 323, 354, 780.
-, Diet in, 272.
-, Charles to do homage to Francis for, 317.
-, Charles and Francis at war in, 370, 409.
-, French vessels taken by the English in the seas of, 430.
-, Henry assumes the protection of the towns in, 430, 439.
-, the government of, left to Lady Margaret during Charles's visit to Spain, 439.
-, Charles's forces in, 486; offered to Henry for the invasion of France, 827.
-, English forces in, 760, 853.
-, Lutherans in, 1007.
-, Francis renounces supremacy in, 1029.
-, ambassador from, to England, 1037.
-, sale of Charles's revenues in, 1175.
-, money raised in, by Margaret for Charles, 1187, 1190.
-, threatened invasion of, by France, 1195, 1201, 1419.
-, troops raised in, against France, 1197.
-, superiority of, claimed by Francis, 1220.
-, property of English subjects in, 1377.
-, proposed invasion of, by England, 1381, 1393.
-, English commerce with, to be transferred to France, 1381.
-, harassed by French troops, 1437.
-, letters from, 473, 855, 882, 1088.
-, castles of, taken by the French, 354.
-, fashions of, p. 17, p. 34.
-, barons and lords of, in attendance upon Charles, 111.
-, fishermen of, 323.
-, forces of, in the war against France, 552, 846, 871.
-, fleet of, 484.
-, Governess of, Lady Margaret, 651.
-, horses of, 1008.
-, merchants of, 23, 135, 441.
-, pale of, 100.
-, princes of, 196.
-, French, laid waste by Francis, 479.
-, Gallies, Venetian galleys voyaging to and from Flanders for mercantile purposes called the, 31, 200, 436, 441, 444, 446, 469, 663, 697.
-, at Hampton, 1; at Falmouth, 3; at Portsmouth, 391.

- Flanders Galleys—cont.
 orders for those bound to Flanders, 139.
 trading with England, 303, 304, 384; cause Henry loss, 440.
 detained in Biscay, 381, 384, 385, 406, 407, 408, 419, 431, 433, 443, 456, 458; Henry demands of Charles their release, 391. detained by Henry in England, 457, 507, 522, 562, 566, 567, 590, 595, 618, 640; to be made use of for Charles's journey to Spain, 463, 465, 474, 480, 483, 484, 486, 493, 494, 495, 498, 501, 502, 514, 515; Henry seizes their guns, 502, 506; Venice requests Henry to allow them to quit England, 512, 517, 583, 584, 877; which he refuses till they promise not to side with France, 513, 537, 550, 555, 608; Wolsey seeks an opportunity to seize them, 871; the Pope sends briefs to Henry for their release, 574, 582, 585; their release negotiated by means of a bribe, 614; Venice complains bitterly of their detention, 621; Henry fits them out against the French, 623; Henry releases them, but detains six of their bronze guns, 637, 644, 647, 650, 652, 656, 657, 664, 666, 671, 683, 687, 694; the Doge thanks Henry for releasing them, 653, 654, 655; they sail from England, 699, 701. captain of the, Vincenzo Priuli, 391, 394, 419, 438.
 Fleece, Golden, the order of, 34.
 Fleet, the Imperial, 53. See Imperial.
 Flemings, the, 219, 298, 366, 439, 1089, 1197.
 in the war against France, 853, 888.
 dissatisfied with the peace between England and France, 1223.
 Flemish gentleman, a, of the Emperor's chamber, to be sent to England, 1422.
 Fleuranges, Mons. de, son of Robert de la Marek, 335.
 Florence, 259, 617, 925, 1076, 1202, 1462.
 Pope Leo, his brothers, and family expelled from, 283.
 cloth of gold made at, for Henry's use, 503.
 Republic of, named in the treaty of Windsor, 479.
 in league with the Pope and France against Charles, 1289, 1441.
 ambassador of, with Charles, Giovanni Corsi, 819, 821, 836, 859, 873, 892, 884, 899, 900, 902, 903, 911, 916, 917, 920, 939, 971, 986, 1030, 1035, 1038, 1099, 1120.
 merchants of, 120, 1471, 1483, 1486.
 natives of, 455, 786, 1101.
 letters from, 838, 982.
 Florentines, the, 637, 644, 810, 926, 937, 969.
 league between the Pope, Henry, Charles, Venice, the Duke of Milan, and, 714.
 to retain their possessions, 1272.
 in the Holy League against Charles, 1290.
 Florio, Giacomo, 236.
 Foleta, Augustin, 829.
 Foix, Germaine de. See Brandenburg.
 Folehinaria. See Falckener.
 Fonseca, Bishop of Badajos, afterwards Bishop of Burgos, 556 note.
 Fontainebleau, 88 note.
 Fonterabia, 381, 391, 496, 579, 1236.
 in possession of Francis, 353, 354, 359, 364, 366, 471, 510, 543, 555, 767, 768, 780.
 besieged by the Spaniards, 632, 639, 722, 797; who take it, 806, 811, 845.
 Forty, Chiefs of the, 1239.
 Foscari, Agostin, of Venice, 941.
 Francesco, Governor of Brescia, letter from, 835.
 Marco, Venetian ambassador at Rome, 765, 909, 912, 974, 1070, 1101, 1105, 1188, 1183, 1191, 1256, 1380, 1390, 1412, 1443.
 letters from, 745, 747, 762, 778, 781, 787, 789, 794, 800, 802, 804, 808, 809, 810, 811, 818, 824, 826, 829, 834, 837, 870, 875, 839, 842, 926, 945, 998, 1004, 1005, 1033, 1059, 1065, 1121, 1126, 1132, 1138, 1142, 1157, 1158, 1160, 1178, 1199, 1200, 1202, 1204, 1221, 1225, 1234, 1264, 1266, 1281, 1295, 1300, 1333, 1337, 1357, 1385, 1394, 1399, 1407.
 letters to, 714, 742, 753, 857, 861, 935, 937, 951, 954, 978, 1060, 1082, 1147, 1156, 1277, 1278, 1283, 1347, 1360, 1372, 1375, 1379, 1389, 1416, 1448.
 candidate for the embassy to England, 1330.
 Foscus, Andreas, C. C. X., his signature, 669.
 Fountain, the, which spouted wine for all comers at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23.
 Fox, Richard, Bishop of Winchester, blind, 687.
 France, 4, 7, 20, 26, 43, 48, p. 21, 52, 64, 94, 122, 142, 143, 167, 169, 176, 177, 185, 187, 204, 206, 232, 233, 238, 240, 247, 254, 263, 288, 342, 352, 356, 394, 408, 438, 447, 461, 474, 482, 555, 556, 605, 614, 625, 637, 667, 697, 737, 746, 752, 758, 774, 787, 792, 801, 804, 805, 808, 810, 819, 822, 823, 824, 828, 832, 841, 842, 860, 865, 879, 902, 903, 904, 905, 935, 956, 959, 996, 1008, 1014, 1048, 1050, 1069, 1085, 1089, 1100, 1111, 1113, 1116, 1123, 1165, 1370, 1433, 1451, 1485.

France—cont.

-, in league with England and Spain, 2, 5, 69.
-, its relations with England, 14, 134, 135, 195, 396, 417, 452, 1067.
-, Wolsey endeavours to make peace between Charles and, 98.
-, reports on, made to the Venetian Senate, 119, 841.
-, Francis recommends the case of, to Henry, 126, 130.
-, in league with England, 141, 151.
-, disputes between Charles and, 145, 219, 225, 228, 239, 252, 257, 265, 274, 298, 299, 319, 350, 364, 366, 371, 405, 3441.
-, Henry prolongs the Scotch truce at the persuasion of, 189.
-, conquers Navarre, 249.
-, Charles aids the Pope against, 276.
-, Charles promises the Pope not to make terms with, 290, 313.
-, the Pope declares against, 294.
-, relations with Venice, 324, 338, 344, 351, 469, 530, 531, 544, 566, 570, 636, 751.
-, the Pope assents to Charles making truce with, 348.
-, at war with the Pope and Charles, 367.
-, Wolsey exasperated against, 380.
-, in league with Venice, 403, 460, 467, 489.
-, Charles leagues with Henry for the destruction of, 409.
-, Henry undertakes to sustain in the Low Countries the war against, 413.
-, negotiating with Venice, 427, 477, 1117, 1118.
-, Wolsey complains of the aid given by Venice to, 440.
-, Switzers in the service of, 445.
-, agreement between Charles and, in the hands of Henry, 449.
-, Henry's title to, 467, 487, 1046.
-, league against, 467, 479.
-, Venice raises troops at the suit of, 486.
-, Henry and Charles at war with, 487, 493, 496, 500, 543, 630.
-, English invasion of, 499, 812, 814, 820, 826, 827, 829, 833, 834, 835, 837, 839, 843, 845, 846, 850, 853, 854, 859, 871, 874, 880, 882, 884, 888, 892, 897, 922, 926, 939, 966, 985, 987, 990, 994, 997, 998, 999, 1003, 1004, 1005, 1007, 1009, 1012, 1015, 1017, 1023, 1025, 1026, 1036, 1037, 1040, 1045, 1057, 1060, 1061.
-, allows Wolsey and others of the English Court a pension of 22,000 ducats, 507.
-, truce between Charles, Henry, and, 510.
-, the English desire peace with, 522.

France—cont.

-, the Earl of Angus imprisoned in, 528.
-, Henry requires Venice to desist from succouring, 534.
-, English victories in, 552, 782.
-, the English desist from attacking, 565, 572.
-, Venice refuses to attack, 592, 594.
-, Henry and Charles endeavour to induce the Venetians to break with, 597, 608.
-, said to precede England everywhere, 603.
-, question of precedence between England and, 606, 609.
-, Henry prepares an army against, 659, 663, 691, 733, 739, 745, 760.
-, Henry advised to make truce with, 687.
-, Spaniards sent to England for the attack on, 693.
-, invasion of, 702. •
-, the English land in, 748, 756, 757, 786.
-, the affairs of, in a sorry plight, 761, 771.
-, negotiations for agreement between Charles and, 767, 771.
-, ecclesiastical censures against, 815.
-, Henry expels from England the adherents of, 869.
-, plotting for the mastery of all Italy, 890.
-, in league with the Pope, 897, 916.
-, ill-will of Henry towards, 927, 932.
-, Henry encourages the Imperialists in the war against, 937, 969, 970.
-, Charles's demands from, 960, 963, 983.
-, Henry aids the Imperialists, and intends to wage war on, 972, 987.
-, the English to have the whole of, 992.
-, Henry demands the kingdom of, from Charles, 1021.
-, Charles urges Henry to invade, 1034.
-, negotiations between England and, 1052, 1073, 1088, 1097, 1112.
-, Charles determines to wage war on, 1065.
-, Henry desists from making war on, 1068, 1077.
-, adjustment between Henry and, 1070, 1073, 1105, 1110.
-, truce between Charles and, 1073.
-, Henry tells Charles he will err should he claim any territory belonging to the Crown of, 1079, 1095.
-, in league with England, 1081, 1083, 1084, 1096, 1121, 1122, 1129, 1130, 1133, 1145, 1150, 1154, 1162, 1173, 1181, 1186, 1193, 1202, 1209, 1210, 1211, 1227, 1230, 1233, 1234, 1238, 1254, 1275, 1305, 1316, 1349, 1371, 1372, 1375, 1401, 1435, 1453, 1457.

France—cont.

-, peace between Charles, Henry, and, 1092, 1093, 1097, 1102, 1106, 1108, 1114, 1118, 1121, 1124, 1126, 1128, 1132, 1141.
-, the Pope and Venice negotiating an agreement with, 1099, 1101.
-, Henry urges, to league with Italy, 1137, 1142.
-, negotiating a league with Italy, 1148, 1149, 1152, 1156, 1169, 1175, 1176, 1182, 1183, 1184, 1187, 1190, 1195, 1199, 1204, 1212, 1218, 1219, 1229, 1235, 1248, 1258, 1272, 1279, 1286, 1287, 1288, 1295, 1297.
-, claims tribute from the Milanese, 1158.
-, its relations with the Emperor, 1159, 1163, 1177, 1197, 1198, 1203, 1224, 1241, 1246, 1263, 1269, 1306, 1324, 1436.
-, pensions due from, to England, 1168, 1172. See Pensions.
-, its relations with the Pope, 1191, 1281, 1416, 1448.
-, dissatisfied with the regency of Louise, 1194.
-, Wolsey promises to be surety for, to Italy, 1201.
-, the 12 personages of, to be given as hostages for Francis to Charles, 1231.
-, Henry swears to the league with, 1262.
-, in the Holy League with the Pope, Venice, &c., against the Emperor, 1300, 1301, 1309, 1311, 1319, 1326, 1333, 1337, 1343, 1345, 1346, 1347, 1348, 1350, 1367, 1379, 1411.
-, makes a treaty of "mutual obligation" with England, 1351, 1382, 1397.
-, the English want their cloths to be sold in, 1381.
-, invited by the Pope to invade Italy, 1396.
-, proposed peace between the Emperor and, 1443, 1445.
-, Charles's ambassador to England detained in, 1450.
-, its relations with England, temp. Hen. VII., 1475, 1476, 1478.
-, displeased at the marriage between Mary the French Queen and the Duke of Suffolk, 1486.
-, ambassadors of, to England, 9, 53, 136, 227, 380, 393, 408, 430, 458, 1105, 1141. See Ambassadors.
-, ... to Venice, 19, 29, 438, 485, 511, 592, 600, 603, 606, 609, 615, 627, 691, 697, 724, 734, 786, 1081, 1082, 1101, 1123, 1152, 1177, 1190, 1203, 1240, 1346, 1405. See Bayeux; Fiorenza.
-, ... to proceed from Scotland to England, 187.
-, ... to the King of Denmark, 262.
-, ... to the Pope, 800, 804, 873.

France, ambassadors of—cont.

-, ... to Charles, 1014, 1065, 1066, 1094, 1124, 1317, 1335, 1336, 1403, 1422. See Calvimont.
-, ... to the Switzers, Mons. de Morette, 1408.
-, ambassadors from Charles to, 70, 130, 132, 224, 1398.
-, ... from the Pope to, 229, 523.
-, ... from Venice to, 1303, 1304, 1329. See Badoer; Rosso; Giustinian; Bragadin.
-, delegates of, at Calais, to discuss before Wolsey the disputes between Charles and Francis, 269, 279, 282, 283, 285, 289, 290, 295, 296, 297, 298, 300, 306, 307, 308, 312, 314, 315, 319, 320, 321, 325, 327, 330, 342, 346, 351, 393.
-, Papal Legate in, 70, 84, 93. See Boissy, Cardinal.
-, Papal Nuncios to. See Acciajoli; Sanga; Vitorio.
-, Admiral of, p. 24. See Bonnivet.
-, the arms of, p. 22.
-, army of, 238, 359, 454, 486, 782, 926; its camp, 350.
-, ... blockade Navarre, 229.
-, ... in Italy, 263, 336, 351, 369, 753, 818.
-, ... against England, 605.
-, Constable of, 325. See Bourbon.
-, Council of, 1196, 1270, 1272, 1288, 1445.
-, ... wishes to deprive Louise of the government, 1194.
-, Court of, 71, 73, 81, 90, 94, 130, 227, 320, 465, 659, 836, 1198, 1372, 1382.
-, ... at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 31, 91.
-, ... letters from, p. 39, 56, 57, 68, 80, 82, 84, 88.
-, crown of, dependency of Flanders on the, 278.
-, fashions of, 248.
-, the four Estates of, 1254.
-, houses of, 94.
-, kissing a custom of, 1273.
-, letters from, 640, 818, 1001.
-, Marshal of, 73, 115 note.
-, merchants of, and their effects, detained by Henry, 457.
-, ... in London, 135.
-, navy of, 457, 502, 623, 711, 957, 1007, 1008, 1225.
-, ... fail to effect a landing in England, 664.
-, noblemen of, accompany the Duchess of Alençon to Spain to negotiate the release of Francis, 1121.
-, Parliament of, 1029.
-, Parliaments of, 1224.
-, people and princes of, 868.

France—cont.

-, princes, prelates, barons, lords and ladies, gentlemen, and heralds of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23, p. 41, p. 43, p. 45, 69, 70, 80, 81, 83, 85, 90, 92, 93, 94, 111.
-, "all" the princes of, 1273.
-, ports of, the, 697.
-, Regent of. See Louise.
-, ships and vessels of, 279, 284, 330, 465, 836, 838, 1163, 1187, 1212.
-, taken by the English, 430.
-, taken by the Spaniards, 1141.
-, Lord Steward (or Great Master) of, p. 43, 73, 85, 752.
-, towns of, 24.
-, Kings of. See Charles VIII., Lewis XII., Francis I.
-, Queens of. See Brittany, Anne of; Claude; Mary.
-, Queen dowager of. See Mary.
-, Princess of, an infant, 283, 1487. See also Charlotte.
- Franceschi, Andrea di, secretary of the Council of Ten, 604.
- Franceschi (Rosso?), Andrea, Venetian secretary in France, 1334.
- Franciæ Rex*, Henry bears the title of, and Francis the title of Francorum Rex, 606.
- Francis I., King of France, styled the "Most Christian King," 1, 4, 19, 24, 39, 40, 92, 105, 108, 115, 198, 232, 251, 259, 330, 333, 334, 335, 337, 342, 348, 350, 429, 430, 474, 482, 485, 504, 512, 533, 536, 539, 565, 571, 612, 625, 645, 716, 723, 737, 752, 793, 812, 868, 890, 900, 917, 977, 996, 1010, 1016, 1044, 1047, 1275, 1378.
-, (A.D. 1514): Dauphin of France, 1485.
-, (A.D. 1516): his relations with Charles, 1487.
-, (A.D. 1520): in league with Henry and Charles, 5.
-, his interview with Henry at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 17, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 32, 33, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 49; accounts of the same, p. 14, 52, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59; p. 39, 61, 64, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72, 73, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 82, 83, 84, 85, 89, 90, 91, 93, 94, 95, 103, 111.
-, gives Henry the title of King of France, p. 45.
-, England mediates between Charles and, 62, 71, 75, 87.
-, extremely satisfied with Wolsey, and says he is worthy to rule England, 65.
-, Henry and, promise to meet each other in France once a year, 69.
-, Henry and he take leave of each other in tears, 70.
-, Henry and he exchange presents, 81, 91, 94.

Francis I., King of France—cont.

-, his relations with Henry, 107, 109, 119, 123, 131, 135, 136, 146, 396, 417, 913, 918, 939.
-, England persuades him not to go to Italy, 117, 118, 124, 135, 153, 195, 220.
-, Charles and, hate each other cordially, 119.
-, Henry displeased at his fortifying, 121, 130.
-, his relations with Venice, 123, 279, 288, 327, 351, 379, 489, 497, 512, 615, 697, 926.
-, recommends France to the care of Henry, while Francis is in Italy, 126, 130.
-, Henry and Wolsey dissatisfied with, 130.
-, prohibits the exportation of grain to England, 130, 170; rescinds the order, 134.
-, Charles negotiates a new confederacy with, 132.
-, his affairs in and expedition to Italy, 137, 141, 142, 143, 144, 162, 178, 572, 605, 614, 630, 639, 729, 742, 756, 794, 892, 935, 937.
-, (A.D. 1521): his disputes with Charles, which England endeavours to settle, 145, 195, 204, 205, 208, 221, 224, 225, 227, 228, 229, 233, 235, 240, 250, 256, 257, 261, 262, 265, 266, 268, 271, 272, 274, 275, 278, 280, 281, 285, 287, 291, 292, 293, 295, 296, 302, 310, 312, 313, 317, 319, 320, 321, 323, 346, 347, 349, 352, 353, 354, 355, 368, 384, 442, 447, 449, 454, 460, 465, 486, 1015, 1037, 1091.
-, proposed interview with the Pope, 150.
-, disputes between Henry and, concerning Scotland, 152, 153, 176, 185.
-, meets with an accident while hunting, 153, 160.
-, demands from Charles the arrears of the tribute for Naples, 166.
-, in league with the Pope, 176, 188.
-, controversy between Charles and, relative to Flanders, 177.
-, rules Scotland, 184.
-, violates his agreement with Charles, 185, 187.
-, distrusts Henry and Wolsey, 189.
-, intercepts letters from Charles, 207.
-, takes Pampeluna, 212, 229, 233.
-, defies Charles, 215.
-, accepts Henry as a friendly pacificator, not as an arbitrator, in his disputes with Charles, 234, 236, 237, 238, 239, 243, 245, 246, 249, 260, 263.

Francis I., King of France—cont.

-, has three armies against Charles, 252.
-, the Pope makes a stir against, 253, 260, 263, 268.
-, Venice aids, 272, 273, 304, 436, 438, 441, 446, 449.
-, refuses to make truce with Charles, 276, 359, 362.
-, remains at war with Charles, 300, 305, 314, 325, 345, 370.
-, in need of money, 322, 324, 837.
-, in league with Venice, 338, 403, 424, 428.
-, pays Henry tribute for Tournai, 357.
-, refuses to surrender Fonterabia, 364, 366.
-, the sole enemy of Charles, 375.
-, (A.D. 1522): pays an annual pension to Henry, 393.
-, insists on retaining the duchy of Milan, 414, 423.
-, Henry declares war against, 457, 487, 493.
-, Wolsey states that Henry is more entitled to the crown of France than, 467.
-, addresses Pope Adrian as Cardinal, 470.
-, Henry complains of his breaking the treaty of London, 471.
-, treaty of Windsor made by Henry and Charles against, 479, 484.
-, reinforces Fonterabia, 496.
-, recalls his troops from Italy, 498.
-, gains a victory over the English, 499.
-, wishes to make peace with Charles, 510.
-, Henry and Charles request Venice to declare against and attack, 528, 534, 538, 555, 567, 597; they refuse, 531, 592.
-, Henry at war with, 542, 552.
-, bears the title of Rex Francorum, and Henry that of Rex Franciæ, 606.
-, (A.D. 1523): sends troops to Scotland to aid the Duke of Albany, and De la Pole, Duke of Suffolk, called the "White Rose," 631, 636.
-, succours Fonterabia, 632, 639.
-, means to place De la Pole on the throne of England, 640.
-, Henry's causes for war against, 663.
-, sends Albany, De la Pole, and Lautrec with troops to England, 678.
-, truce between Henry and, 747.
-, Venice breaks faith with, 751.
-, negotiates for an agreement with Charles, 765, 767, 768, 780.

Francis I., King of France—cont.

-, refers his disputes with Henry to the arbitration of Charles, 765, 785.
-, his total ruin considered certain, 777.
-, (A.D. 1524): negotiating with the Pope, 800, 804.
-, at Blois, sick of the French disease, 811.
-, the Pope mediates between Henry, Charles, and, 819, 821, 822, 824, 826, 836, 837, 852, 1005.
-, the English assume the government of Scotland with the consent of, 862.
-, negotiating for peace with Charles, 879, 882, 899, 902.
-, rumoured agreement between Henry and, 888.
-, supposed to encourage Lutheranism, 881.
-, in possession of Milan, 899.
-, (A.D. 1525): in league with Clement VII., 909, 912, 936.
-, his army routed, and he wounded and taken prisoner, at the battle of Pavia, 940, 942, 945, 952, 956, 957, 959, 974, 982, 990; which greatly pleases Henry, 982, 985.
-, Charles's demands of, 960, 983, 997, 1008, 1014, 1017.
-, the French willing to ransom, 1003.
-, calls himself Charles's slave, 1011.
-, Charles removes, to Spain, 1024, 1032, 1033, 1034, 1040, 1041, 1045, 1048, 1049, 1058; Henry displeased at his removal, 1068, 1077.
-, proposed marriage with Eleanor of Portugal, 1029, 1066, 1112, 1177, 1192, 1226.
-, his offers to Charles, 1029, 1030.
-, Henry's demands of, 1046, 1123.
-, narrowly escapes being shot, 1057.
-, agreement between Henry and, 1062.
-, sends a love letter to Eleanor of Portugal, 1063.
-, his amorous temperament, 1066.
-, truce between Henry, Charles, and, 1069, 1093, 1094, 1097, 1102, 1105, 1109, 1114, 1118, 1121, 1124, 1126, 1128, 1129, 1133, 1141.
-, Henry urges Charles to release, on paying ransom, 1079, 1090, 1095.
-, his affability wins him love and adoration in Spain, 1093, 1103.
-, Henry endeavours to obtain the release of, 1106, 1111, 1137, 1150, 1191, 1194, 1209.
-, suffers from double tertian ague, 1112, 1131.

Francis I., King of France—cont.

-, Charles visits, on hearing of his illness, 1115.
-, Venice urges the release of, 1117.
-, near death, 1119, 1130.
-, negotiating with Charles, 1156, 1175.
-, rejects Charles's demands, 1159, 1187.
-, wishes a league to be made with England, 1163.
-, still prisoner in Spain, 1167, 1186, 1190.
-, (A.D. 1526): the Duke of Guelders under the protection of, 1193.
-, makes an agreement with Charles, 1197, 1198, 1214, 1218, 1219, 1220, 1222, 1223, 1226.
-, delivers his two sons to Charles, as hostages, 1224, 1258, 1262, 1320, 1450.
-, returns to France, 1227, 1229, 1230, 1233, 1234.
-, the Pope will absolve, from his oath to Charles, 1231.
-, Henry sends an ambassador to, 1235.
-, negotiating a league with Italy, 1236, 1253, 1257, 1272, 1278, 1288, 1360.
-, will cause Henry to invade Spain, 1236.
-, urged by Henry not to ratify the agreement, 1237, 1244, 1263, 1284.
-, sends an ambassador to England, 1238.
-, distrusted by the Imperialists, 1241.
-, Venetian embassy to, 1242.
-, entry of, into Bordeaux, 1243, 1245.
-, Louise presents two millions of gold to, 1246.
-, challenges Charles to single combat, 1265.
-, negotiating with England, 1247, 1286, 1407, 1412.
-, desires Henry to be protector and conservator of the Italian League, 1249, 1251, 1256, 1261, 1267, 1280, 1282, 1283, 1285, 1322, 1324, 1359, 1383, 1385, 1388, 1391, 1394, 1423, 1425.
-, urged by Henry to conclude the league against Charles, 1258, 1276.
-, the Viceroy of Naples sent to, by Charles, to demand the ratification of their agreement, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1292.
-, party to the Holy League with the Pope, Venice, &c., against Charles, 1289, 1290, 1293, 1294, 1297, 1298, 1300, 1309, 1311, 1312, 1323, 1327, 1343, 1380, 1411, 1416.

Francis I., King of France—cont.

-, confirms the peace with England, 1292.
-, his sons' release to be demanded by Henry, 1298, 1302, 1305, 1317, 1335, 1342, 1349.
-, provides money for the Switzers, 1301.
-, pays the usual pension to England, 1314.
-, sends troops to Italy, 1316, 1368.
-, offers to make a fresh agreement with Charles, 1319.
-, proposed interview between Henry and, 1334, 1365.
-, treaty of mutual obligation with England, 1351.
-, Venetian ambassadors to, 1353, 1361.
-, detains Charles's ambassador to England, 1356, 1422.
-, the Pope sends a nuncio to, 1362.
-, urged by England to send troops to Italy, 1371, 1384, 1392.
-, negotiating the release of his sons, 1372, 1375, 1403.
-, desires Henry to declare war against Charles, 1388, 1440.
-, proposes to invade Flanders, 1393.
-, delays sending succours to Milan, 1396.
-, intends to fit out a fleet against the Emperor's, 1399.
-, accused by Charles of breach of faith, 1403.
-, proposed marriage with Princess Mary, 1406, 1427, 1455, 1456, 1459.
-, his relations with the Switzers, 1408.
-, sends money to Italy, 1419.
-, sends portraits of himself and his sons to Henry, 1421, 1451, 1457.
-, his army in Italy, 1426.
-, his relations with Charles, 1428.
-, Henry demands Boulogne from, 1434, 1435.
-, horses and hounds presented to, by Henry, 1436, 1437.
-, Henry wishes, to be reconciled to Charles, 1438.
-, proposed general peace with Charles, Henry, &c., 1441, 1443, 1444, 1445, 1450, 1454.
-, his sons to be released, 1444.
-, Venice urges, to continue the war, 1448.
-, letter from, 373.
-, letters to, 102, 644.
-, his Queen. See Claude.

Francis I., King of France—cont.

-, ..., his children, Francis recommends them to the care of Henry, 130.
-, ..., to be placed in Charles's hands as security for Francis fulfilling his promises, 1029.
-, ..., his sons, 902. See Francis, and Orleans, Duke of.
-, ..., his daughter, 272, 278, 510, 897, 1487. See Charlotte.
-, ..., his sister, 1112. See also Alençon, Duchess of.
-, ..., his brother-in-law, 1113. See Brandenburg, Marquis of.
-, ..., his ambassadors in England. See Ambassadors.
- Francis, son of Francis I., Dauphin of France, 152, 1066.
-, ..., affianced to Princess Mary of England, 105, 119, 134, 215, 232, 452, 1062, 1088, 1096, 1102, 1179.
-, ..., proposed marriage with the daughter of Eleanor of Portugal, 997, 1029, 1058, 1192.
-, ..., hostage in Spain for Francis I., 1177, 1224, 1272, 1298, 1318, 1339, 1342, 1349, 1403, 1450.
-, ..., his interest in the duchy of Milan, 1220.
-, ..., portrait of, sent to Henry VIII., 1421, 1451, 1457.
-, ..., See French Princes.
- Franciscan Friars Observant, congregation of, convoked against Luther, 16.
-, ..., Friars of the Order of, 266, 275, 383, 552 note, 813, 1007.
-, ..., general of the, Quinones, 1139.
- Francolino, Italy, 1207.
- Franconia, the nobility of, 675.
- Frangipane, Count Christopher, brother-in-law of Cardinal Gurk, 141.
- Frankfort, 66.
- Frankish wools, imported to Venice, 200, 515.
- Frari, the church of the, at Venice, 1042 note.
- Free Towns, the, of Germany, 1153.
- Fregoso, Octavian, Governor of Genoa, p. 39.
- French, the, p. 21, 111, 153, 280, 283, 302, 310, 312, 337, 344, 365, 379, 391, 395, 422, 436, 438, 446, 448, 455, 465, 567, 571, 579, 662, 746, 751, 752, 754, 767, 777, 808, 815, 845, 847, 893, 900, 904, 996, 1003, 1011, 1025, 1050, 1090, 1091, 1112, 1125, 1130, 1133, 1167, 1177, 1475, 1476, 1478.
-, their four hostages in England, 184.
-, expelled from the Milanese, 197 note.
-, worsted in Picardy, 206.
-, retreat from Navarre, 239.
-, attack Reggio, 254.

French, the—cont.

-, rout the Spaniards, 324.
-, in Italy, 436, 460, 461, 580, 757, 766, 801, 802, 809, 819, 874, 890.
-, Wolsey vituperates, 467.
-, defeat the English, 497, 560.
-, called Turks, 507.
-, defeated by the English, 511, 552.
-, capture an English ship, 632.
-, take Fonterabia, 722.
-, repulse the English on their attempting to land in France, 748.
-, their jurisdiction at Rhodes, 797.
-, fortify Vigevano, 812.
-, retreat beyond the Alps, 824.
-, expelled from Italy, 828.
-, take Milan, 905.
-, undertaking of the Duke of Milan against, 925.
-, defeated at the battle of Pavia, in 1525,—940, 942, 945, 956, 959, 974.
-, natural hatred of, to the English, 1450.
- French disease, the, Francis suffers from, 811.
- envoy, a, to Guicciardini, 1426.
- galleys, 1033, 1041.
- herald, a, sent to Calais, 1485.
- pirates, captured by the English, in England, 1022.
- men-at-arms, in Italy, 516, 531, 1348, 1392, 1412, 1424, 1425.
- ministry, 1191, 1292, 1324.
- troops, 1485.
- waters, Wolsey demands that the English should be allowed to fish in, 321.
- princes, the, sons of Francis I., hostages in Spain, 1272, 1318, 1339, 1342, 1349. See Francis, and Orleans, Duke of.
-, princess, proposed marriage of Charles V. to a, 1487.
- Frenchmen, 278, 279, 637, 651, 686.
-, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 26.
-, in Flanders, 185.
-, in England, arrest of, 456, 465.
-, at Venice, 460.
-, expelled from Scotland by the English, 870.
-, resident in London, 1223.
- Freschi, Thomà de', secretary of the Council of Ten, 116.
- Freundsberg (or Fronsperg), Dom. George, said to have been killed by the peasants in Germany, 1327.
-, ..., mustering troops for Don Ferdinand, 1368.
- Friars-Hermits, the Order of, 174.
- Friendship, Our Lady of, a church called, built on the site of the Field of Cloth of Gold, 69. See Amitié.
- Frieze, cloth of, 956, 959.

Friuli, the, territory of Venice, 19, 141, 236, 448 note, 458.
 , ... , Turkish invasion of, 55.
 Fruits, papal collector of, in England, temp. Ric. III., 1472.
 Fuggers, the, 798.
 Fur, lynx's, p. 16.
 Fuscarenus, Andreas, a chief of the Council of Ten, 669.
 Fusina, 921, 923.

G.

Gabiniglio, Captain, 630.
 Gabriel, Anzolo, of Venice, 258.
 , ... , letters to, 864, 872, 1174.
 , ... , State Attorney, 1364.
 , Friar, General of the Friars Hermits at Rome, 28.
 Gades, 240.
 Gaeta, 916.
 , Friar Tommaso de Vio, Cardinal of, appointed by the Pope to suppress the heresies of Luther, 11, 12.
 Galicia, 847.
 Galleons, in the service of Henry, 435.
 Galley half-pence, 135 note.
 Galleys, Venetian, for the merchant service, 30, 115.
 , ... , trading with England, 272.
 , Venice arms fifty, 545.
 , to be supplied by Venice for the Venetian outlaws, 625, 684, 685, 697.
 , in the service of France, 746.
 , Barbary, masters of the, seized by the officials of the Romish Inquisition, for selling Bibles, 1069.
 , constructed for the Great Turk, 1226.
 Gallipoli, 646.
 , port of, 438 note.
 Gambara, Uberto di, Papal Nuncio to England, 1212, 1221, 1254, 1258, 1262, 1270, 1274, 1277, 1280, 1281, 1286, 1287, 1294, 1295, 1297, 1302, 1305, 1307, 1314, 1315, 1335, 1336, 1339, 1348, 1349, 1351, 1378, 1380, 1381, 1382, 1392, 1427, 1428, 1435, 1443, 1452.
 Gammaches (Gamadria), Mons. de, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43.
 Garlasco, captured by Venice, 809.
 Garonne, the river, 1243.
 Garter, the Order of the, p. 20, 73, 484.
 , ... , conferred on Charles by Henry, 38, 447.
 , ... , knights of, 209, 1037.

Garzano, in Italy, 1152.
 Gascony, 969.
 Gattinara, Dom. Gio. Bartolomeo, cousin to Chancellor Gattinara, ambassador from Charles to Rome, 873, 1011.
 , Mercurin de, chancellor of Charles V., 196, 228, 239, 248, 250, 254, 346, 385, 391, 394, 401, 425, 434, 438, 439, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 461, 480, 504, 510, 516, 544, 548, 554, 556, 557, 566, 571, 589, 607, 630, 635, 662, 671, 702, 741, 743, 746, 751, 752, 758, 766, 767, 792, 805, 819, 821, 823, 825, 843, 847, 852, 856, 860, 865, 879, 881, 882, 884, 885, 892, 893, 894, 898, 900, 902, 911, 920, 939, 956, 958, 960, 962, 963, 971, 986, 1002, 1014, 1021, 1029, 1035, 1044, 1048, 1069, 1087, 1088, 1091, 1115, 1162, 1177.
 , ... , his authority with Charles, 224.
 , ... , at the Conference of Calais, 260, 265, 278, 279, 282, 291, 310, 312, 313, 315, 319, 320, 326, 327, 334, 339, 351; speaks of the injuries inflicted on Charles by Francis, 280; in private conference with Wolsey, 298, 299; answers the accusations of Francis's chancellor, 323.
 , ... , accused of thwarting the adjustment between Charles and Francis, 366.
 , ... , with Charles in England, 467, 470, 474, 480, 484, 486, 492, 493, 498.
 , ... , Wolsey calls him exacting, 475.
 , ... , asserts Wolsey wants to get money for himself from Venice, 507, 552, 570.
 , ... , says Wolsey is a man of little religion, and avaricious, 507.
 , ... , sketch of his character, 579.
 , ... , declines going as ambassador to Rome, 824, 835, 837.
 , ... , his great dislike to Wolsey, 845.
 , ... , receives an estate from the Duke of Milan, 878.
 , ... , has little faith in Wolsey's promises, 948.
 , ... , Clement VII. makes him a Cardinal, of which he avails himself (13 August 1529), 1030 note.
 , ... , proffers his resignation as chancellor, 1063, 1064.
 Gawtron, Walter, one of the collectors of the port of London, 120.
 Gazelli Bey, Governor of Damascus, routed by Sultan Soliman, 177 note, 184, 226.
 , ... , resuscitated, 236.
 Generals, the four, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84. •
 Geneva, Philip of Savoy, Duke of Nemours and Count of, 741.
 , ... , at Windsor, 486.

- Genoa, 365, 811, 818, 834, 860, 958, 996, 1012, 1017, 1024, 1032, 1033, 1041, 1045, 1100, 1107, 1333, 1461, 1478, 1481.
 , sacked and captured by the Spaniards, 478, 486.
 , ambassador of, to Charles, 958, 1038.
 , secretaries of, at Milan, 989.
 , letter dated at, 1478.
 , Governors of. See Fregoso ; Adorno.
 Genoese, the, 627, 637, 644, 810, 859.
 , ... , Adorno faction of, 942.
 merchants in England, 1473.
 , edict by Richard III. concerning, 1472.
 Geographical topics, concerning the variation of the needle, &c., 607.
 George, St., 244.
 Gerbi, 996.
 German warehouse in Venice, the, 23, 66, 1022.
 merchants, 66.
 drummers, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 90.
 leagues of distance, 248.
 factory in Venice, 640.
 Ocean, corsairs in the, 656.
 troops, in the war against France, 743, 821, 871, 874.
 captain, the, in Burgundy, 777.
 Germanada, members of the, arrested, 799.
 Germanello, Dom. Augustino, letter from, 1125.
 Germans, the, 851, 884, 955, 1015, 1128.
 Germany, 3, 137, 225, 351, 477, 607, 751, 772, 789, 832, 899, 902, 973, 974, 1029, 1114, 1141, 1165, 1420, 1450.
 , Lutheran affairs in, 11, 16, 51, 74, 112, 149, 788, 795, 796, 818, 847, 849, 875, 884, 891.
 , Luther's followers in, 147 ; his repute in, 168, 169, 199, 202.
 , disturbances in, caused by Luther, 938, 944, 955, 979, 984, 999, 1006, 1007, 1008, 1009, 1016, 1049, 1050, 1056, 1069, 1071, 1104, 1118, 1153, 1241, 1327, 1369, 1404.
 , Luther's doctrines preached in all the churches of, 976.
 , description of living in, according to the teachings of Luther, 1007.
 , the clergy in, live according to the Lutheran fashion, 1009, 1086.
 , entirely Lutheran, 1086.
 , fashions of, p. 30, 90, 248.
 , Princes and Electors of, 117, 151, 152, 188, 191, 196, 197, 199, 202, 413, 422, 813, 881.
 , Bishops of, 199.
 , Diets in, 117, 151, 152, 163, 168, 169, 170, 177, 189, 197, 199, 202, 219, 813.
 , Prelates of, 197.
 , Lord Lieutenant of. See Ferdinand, Don.
 Ghent, 84, 239, 248, 284, 302, 392, 452.
 , letters dated at, 75, 265, 266, 269, 274, 275, 277, 376, 377, 378, 379, 382, 385, 388, 390, 391, 394, 455.
 Ghiara d'Adda, the Imperial army in the, 897, 1114, 1155, 1161.
 Ghibelline fashions, p. 19.
 Ghinucci, Girolamo, Papal Auditor, Nuncio in England, 117, 213, 263, 272, 274, 957 note, 1132.
 , ... , at Calais, 280.
 , ... , at Bruges, 302, 310, 312, 321.
 , ... , in England, 466, 574, 859, 953, 986 (?), 1005 (?).
 , ... , captured by German peasants, 1007, 1008.
 , ... , in England, 1059, 1070.
 , ... , created Bishop of Worcester (in 1523), 1097, 1113, 1116, 1135, 1136, 1137.
 , ... , sent by Henry to Rome, 1139, 1141, 1142, 1157, 1160, 1191, 1200, 1277.
 , ... , ambassador from England to France and the Emperor, 1324, 1349, 1403, 1434, 1437, 1438, 1445.
 Giberti, Matteo. See Verona, Bishop of.
 Gibraltar, the Gut of, 607.
 Giglis, John de, recommended by Archbishop Morton to Pope Innocent VIII., 1475.
 , Silvester de, Bishop of Worcester, Cardinal, 122 ; dies, 240.
 Gilbert, Robert, chancellor of the Duke of Buckingham, arrested with Buckingham, 189.
 , ... , accuses Buckingham of treason, 219.
 Gillesland, Lord, 1037.
 Ginger, 1087.
 Gioachino, Giovanni. See Passano.
 Giorgio, Friar Francesco, 1139 note.
 Giron, Don Pedro, commander of the forces of the Community of Spain, 151.
 Giugnes, Mons., 1102.
 Giustinian Palace, the, at San Moise, 527 note.
 Giustinian, Andrea, merchant of Venice, 120.
 , Antonio, Venetian ambassador in France, 8.
 , ... , at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29, 1016.
 , ... , visits England, and represents Henry's court as very mean and insignificant, 56.
 , ... , reports on France, 119.
 , ... , letters from, 17, 27, 33, 37, 40, 44, 45, 52, 58, 62, 65, 70, 77, 79, 87, 91, 95, 105.
 , ... , letters to, 4, 20, 39.
 , Lunardo, letter to, 1006.
 , Sebastian, member of the Venetian Senate, 1, 13, 18, 35, 46, 148, 193, 399.
 , ... , ambassador to England, letters from, 1487, 1488.

- Giustinian, Sebastian—cont.
 ambassador to France, 1353, 1359.
 Zuane Francesco, 836.
Giustiniana, the, loss of, 836.
Glass, p. 32, 83.
Gloucester, Archdeacon of, 1489. See Carmeliano.
Gloves, performed, 711.
Gobo, Zuan, courier, 1056.
Gold, 73, 607.
 in bars, and wrought, presented to Charles from the kings in the parts of Mexico, 589.
 pieces, imported from the Indies (Mexico) into Spain, 686, 703, 751, 910, 992, 1021, 1087, 1115. brocade and tissue, 702.
 collars, 728.
Goldwell, James, notary to Pope Paul II., sent to England (A.D. 1471), 1465, 1466, 1467, 1468.
 dean of Salisbury, promoted to the see of Norwich, 1469.
Gonfalonier of the Church. See Mantua, Marquis of.
Gonzaga, Francesco di, letters from, 927, 1010, 1015, 1040, 1045, 1068, 1077.
Gradenigo family, the, 1042 note.
 Alvise, Venetian ambassador at Rome, 514, 516, 519, 520, 573.
 letters from, 48, 51, 74, 122, 159, 163, 171, 173, 186, 203, 229, 332, 545, 575, 585.
 letters to, 358, 459, 525, 535, 568, 574.
 Marco, LL.D., of Venice, 258, 386, 576, 581.
Gradisca, in the Friuli, 141.
Gradonico, Julianus, C.C.X., 453, 557.
Graham, Patrick, Bishop of St. Andrew's, Scotland (in A.D. 1466), 1463.
Grain, scarcity of, in England, 130, 134, 142, 170. vessels, 797.
Granada, Spain, letters dated at, 1306, 1369, 1403, 1422, 1439, 1450.
Grande, Madame la, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 85.
Grand Master, of St. John's of Jerusalem, 523. See Docwra. of France. See Savoy, René Bastard of; Montmorency, Anne de.
 Council, the, of Venice, 1056.
 hall of the, 1232.
Gravelines, belonging to Madame de Vendome, under the jurisdiction of Charles, p. 31, 77, 79, 91, 93, 97, 240.
 interview between Henry and Charles at, 101, 106.
 called Rovelim, 800.
Graziani, Filippo and Andrea, in London, 1462.
Greece, collection of provisions in, for the Grand Turk, 1226.
Greek costumes, p. 26, 91.
 MSS., copies of, desired by Wolsey, 1187, 1258, 1286.
Greenwich, 130, 133, 134, 167, 463, 465, 480, 481.
 pestilential fever very rife at, 236.
 banquets to be held at, 466.
 Henry VIII. at, 1235, 1254, 1258.
 letters dated at, 586, 713, 1216.
Gretto, Livio, his proposal concerning Naples, 1157.
Grey, Thos. See Dorset, Marquis of.
Greyhounds, English, 682.
Griffi, Leonardo, Papal Datary (in 1473), 1468, 1469.
Grimani, Antonio, elected Doge of Venice (6 July 1521), 334 note, 438, 551 note.
 dies (7 May 1523), 527 note, 674.
 letters from, 251, 397, 398, 583, 584.
 Cardinal, son of the Doge, 674.
 Marco Antonio, of Venice, 258.
 Marco and Vettor, procurators of Venice, 674.
 Vicenzo, brother of the Doge, 674.
Grisons, the, 1147, 1327, 1370, 1386, 1400.
 ambassadors from, to France, 639.
 Lutherans in, 1006.
 ambassadors from, at Milan, 1135.
Gritti, Andrea, Proveditor General, and afterwards Doge of Venice, 225, 373, 504, 734, 888, 1489.
 letters from, 387, 712, 720.
 letters to, 749, 750.
 letters patent to, from Henry VIII., 1181.
 issues powers to conclude the Holy League, 1312, 1391, 1411.
 issues powers to conclude a general peace, 1441.
 Giovanni Francesco, letters to, 78, 83.
 Omobono, in London, 1460, 1461.
Guadalaxara, belonging to the Duke dell' Infantazgo, 1093.
Guard, Henry VIII.'s, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 21.
Guasto, Marquis del, Imperial commander in Italy, 1140, 1161, 1332.
Guelders, Duke of, 366.
 in league with France and Venice, 123, 130.
 at war with Charles, 185, 195, 215.
 at peace with Lady Margaret, 846.
 named in the peace between England and France, 1122, 1133.
 sends an ambassador to England, 1193, 1206.

Guerrozi, Cà, 674.
 Guicciardini, commander of Venetian troops, 1333.
, at Piacenza, French envoy to, 1426.
 Guiche, Mons. de la, 1243, 1245, 1270, 1273 ; represents France at the Conference of Calais, 321.
 Guidoto, Vincenzo, Venetian secretary in Hungary, letters from, 788, 790, 791, 798, 807, 849, 851, 928, 995, 1019.
 Guienne, 983, 1046.
, undertaking against, 825.
, England's project for the recovery of, 969, 1177.
 Guildford, Surrey, letter dated at, 334.
, Sir Henry, Henry VIII.'s master of the horse at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 21, 69, 71, 72, 73.
, ..., sent by Wolsey to Calais, 319.
, Sir R., his pilgrimage (in 1506), 1042 note.
 Guiles, Captain Guillaume de, French ambassador to England, 1212, 1218, 1235.
 Guisnes, 41, 71, 89, 151.
, Henry and his court at, during the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 21, p. 26, p. 27, p. 30, 57, p. 39, p. 40, p. 42, p. 45, p. 49, 68, 69, 73, 78, 80, 81, 83, 84, 91, 93.
, Henry's banqueting house at, 80.
, letters dated at, 59, 86, 88.
, captain of, Sir Nicholas Vaux, 70.
, castle, p. 20, p. 40, p. 41, 69, 77.
, ..., Henry's palace within the, 72, 90 ; description of, 69, 81, 83, 94.
 Gulf, the (of Venice), 209.
 Gunners, English, at Calais, taken by the French, 637.
 Gunpowder, 942.
 Guns, 486.
, belonging to the Flanders galleys trading with England, Henry seizes, 495, 502, 506, 514, 583, 608, 650, 656.
, bronze, Henry asks Venice for six, 656, 657, 666, 671.
 Gurk, Cardinal of, 141, 167, 196.
, bishop of, 1104.

H.

Hackney, a, presented by Charles V. to the Pope, as tribute for Naples, 1333.
 Hackneys, ridden by ladies at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 81.

Halberdiers, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 68, 70.
, French, 1245.
 Hampton, 3, 195, 465, 466, 467, 472, 484, 486, 498.
, Flanders galleys at, 1, 139, 412, 457, 463, 483, 507, 514, 515, 644.
, letter dated at, 424, 474, 475, 492, 493.
, Court, Wolsey's palace at, 130, 1227, 1374, 1377, 1382, 1387.
, port of, 444.
, controller of, 506.
 Hane, castle of, 1422 note.
 Haneton, Philip, chief secretary and audiencier of Charles, and chief of the order of the Golden Fleece, 34, 248, 260, 319.
, ..., ambassador from Charles to Henry, 249, 254, 315.
 Hannart, John, secretary of Charles V., 254 note.
 Hannibal, 956.
 Harpsicord, the, 1096.
 Hat, the, used in the Coronations of the Kings of England, 663.
 Hawking, 284.
 Hector, a Bohemian, captures Martin Luther, 209, 216.
 Hédin, 1293 ; the siege of, 562 note.
, Mons. de, ambassador to England, from Lady Margaret, 467.
 Helna, Bishop of. See Mesa.
 Henry VII., King of England, 272, 232, 278, 1037, 1475, 1482, 1488, 1489.
, ..., horses presented to, 1476.
, ..., preparing for war against France, 1477.
, ..., going to Windsor Castle, 1478.
, ..., letters to, 1479, 1480.
 Henry VIII., King of England, "Defender of the Faith," 4, 9, 13, 18, 19, 29, 46, 118, 123, 125, 128, 129, 137, 140, 142, 145, 148, 155, 158, 161, 162, 170, 176, 178, 193, 194, 206, 211, 219, 259, 268, 271, 279, 283, 288, 289, 308, 309, 310, 328, 330, 338, 340, 348, 353, 368, 371, 375, 380, 386, 405, 406, 407, 408, 418, 433, 446, 447, 455, 461, 498, 510, 526, 552, 553, 579, 580, 591, 594, 602, 607, 620, 629, 638, 693, 719, 721, 722, 730, 731, 734, 739, 754, 757, 760, 764, 767, 774, 792, 800, 804, 819, 848, 857, 858, 877, 892, 897, 902, 905, 918, 924, 926, 931, 934, 935, 937, 939, 941, 943, 948, 949, 951, 953, 957, 961, 964, 965, 975, 992, 1008, 1013, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1042, 1043, 1045, 1050, 1051, 1060, 1065, 1067, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1073, 1075, 1078, 1080, 1083, 1085, 1100, 1104, 1107, 1113, 1117, 1135, 1136, 1138, 1139 note, 1140, 1146, 1151, 1161, 1166, 1183, 1185, 1214, 1223, 1226, 1227, 1228, 1242, 1285, 1303, 1308, 1328, 1333, 1338, 1341, 1353, 1361, 1370, 1410, 1420, 1426, 1447, 1485, 1486.

Henry VIII.—cont.

- (A.D. 1520): his relations with Francis, 2, *105, 109, 131, 132, 135, 146, 153, 160, 207, 253, 303, 304, 913.
-, his relations with Charles, 3, 132, 135, 378, 401, 771, 805, 922, 932, 953, 986, 997, 998, 1003.
-, his relations with Venice, 426, 441, 459, 469, 563, 720, 732, 942, 962, 973, 1024, 1031.
-, deprives the Earl of Kildare of the Deputyship of Ireland, 7.
-, inclines to Spain, 14.
-, interview between Francis and, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 32, 33, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 47, 49; accounts of the same, p. 14, 52, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59; p. 39, 61, 64, 67, 68, 69, 70, 72, 73, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 88, 89, 90, 91, 93, 94, 95, 102, 103, 111.
-, interviews between Charles and, in England and elsewhere, 26, 34, 37, 38, 40; p. 34; 53, 54, 56, 58, 59, 61, 75, 77, 78, 79, 92, 93, 96, 97, 98, 100, 104, 106, 109, 111, 113, 186, 442, 462, 463, 466, 470, 480, 484, 486, 493, 598.
-, sends a convoy to Land's End for Charles, 31.
-, Wolsey's supreme authority with, 35, 398, 974.
-, wishes to delay his interview with Francis, 40.
-, description of the dress worn by, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67, 68, 72.
-, negotiates for adjustment of disputes between Charles and Francis, 71.
-, he and Francis build a church after the Field of Cloth of Gold, 79.
-, sends succour to Rhodes, 99.
-, Wolsey deservedly considered the second self of, 101.
-, mediates between Francis and Charles, 107, 177, 205, 217, 219, 220, 221, 222, 224, 225, 226 note, 228, 229, 233, 235, 236, 237, 239, 240, 243, 245, 246, 249, 250, 252, 255, 263, 280, 316, 350, 414, 448, 449.
-, arrests two noblemen for speaking against the French, 108.
-, tells Francis that should he die without male heirs he would leave him the Regency of England, 119.
-, licenses Venetian galleys to export wool from London, 120.
-, fortifies Calais, 121.
-, dissuades Francis from going to Italy, 124.
-, Francis commends France to his care, while in Italy, 126.
-, dissatisfied with Francis, 130.
-, promises aid to the Cardinal of Sion, 131.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, promises Sion an annual pension of 3,000 crowns, 133.
-, proclaims Francis's permit to export corn to England, so that the English may bear good will to the French, 134.
-, refuses to lend Charles money or troops, 136.
-, raises an army to quell the disturbances in Ireland, 136.
-, sends his favourite, Sir Nicholas Carew, with presents for Francis, 143, 150, 152, 153.
-, promises Francis a subsidy of troops, 144.
- (A.D. 1521): at peace with Scotland, 154.
-, has not power to dissuade Charles from going to Italy, 167.
-, wishes for peace between the Christian powers, 184, 195.
-, at the request of Francis, consents to prolong the truce with Scotland, 187, 189.
-, imprisons the Duke of Buckingham and Earl of Westmoreland, and arrests several others for high treason, 187, 189, 204; surrenders the Duke to be tried by the Peers of the Realm, 209, 210.
-, Francis distrusts, 189.
-, dissuades Charles and Francis from entering Italy, 195, 210.
-, his Book against Martin Luther, 195, 210.
-, advises Venice not to make too much of his nephew, Reginald Pole, 204.
-, will not quit England, owing to the plot of the Duke of Buckingham, 212.
-, contradicts the report of his negotiating marriage between Charles and Mary, 215.
-, Francis refuses to accept his mediation between himself and Charles as an arbitrator, 234.
-, Francis promises to abide by what he shall dictate in the disputes between Francis and Charles, 238.
-, Charles requests a conference at Calais with, 249.
-, his authority with Charles, 250.
-, most closely linked with the Church, 254.
-, Francis complains to, of the Pope's actions, 260.
-, has not sufficient power to obtain peace or truce in Italy, 262.
-, extols the power of Charles, 272.
-, complains of Venice aiding Francis, 272, 273.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, acts as a friendly mediator in the disputes between Charles and Francis, 272.
-, inclines to Charles, 274.
-, lays claim to Normandy, 275.
-, his realm insecure by reason of the Duke of Buckingham's plot, 278.
-, his munificence to Charles, 298.
-, betroths Princess Mary to Charles, 302, 487.
-, plans for bringing, over to Charles's side, 312.
-, not at liberty to negotiate an agreement between Charles and Francis without the consent of the Pope, 319.
-, sends ammunition to Charles, 331.
-, league between the Pope, Charles, Venice, &c., and, 332, 364, 403, 417, 475, 714, 715, 716, 717, 735, 751, 759.
-, congratulates Doge Antonio Grimani on his election, 334.
-, the cause of Ardres being taken from the French, 337.
-, fits out ships for the safety of his kingdom, 354.
-, receives tribute from Francis for Tournai, 357.
-, Francis gives him an account of the state of his affairs, 373.
-, (A.D. 1522): sends Pace to Rome with great authority to promise money, &c. to promote Wolsey's election as Pope, 384.
-, asks Charles to aid Wolsey's election as Pope, 384.
-, fits out a fleet against Scotland, 384.
-, demands from Charles the release of the "Donata galley," 384, 391, 399.
-, closely allied with Charles, 392.
-, the Earl of Angus, husband of Queen Margaret, complains to, of the Duke of Albany, 393.
-, Francis' apologies for not paying the annual pension to, 393.
-, Francis' promises to, not to interfere with Scotland, 396.
-, matrimonial alliance between Charles and, 400, 409.
-, Francis' dependence upon, 402.
-, in league with Charles against Francis, 409, 413, 415.
-, undertakes to sustain the war in the Low Countries against Francis, during Charles's stay in Spain, 413, 430, 439.
-, Charles asks him for a loan, but refuses to have it upon Henry's terms, 425.
-, raises troops for the invasion of Scotland, 432.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, fits out ships to meet Charles upon his visit to England, 435.
-, loses by the trade with the Flanders galleys, 440.
-, assists Charles, 443, 467.
-, repudiates Princess Mary's marriage with the Dauphin of France, 452.
-, report of his arresting all Frenchmen in England, 456.
-, declares war against Francis; sends troops over to Calais; detains the Flanders galleys, and all French merchants in England and their effects, 457.
-, insists on the removal of the Duke of Albany from Scotland, 465.
-, insists upon Francis paying the arrears of tribute due to him, 465.
-, Wolsey states that Henry is better entitled to the crown of France than Francis, and that he means to possess himself of it, 467.
-, charges Venice to declare against France, 471.
-, lays an embargo on the merchandise and effects of Venetian merchants in London, 474.
-, persuades Venice to join the league between himself and Charles against France, 476, 480, 481, 482, 484, 488, 504, 505.
-, treaty between Charles and, (called the treaty of Windsor), 479, 484.
-, proclaims war against France, 487.
-, in a very great rage against Francis, 493.
-, seizes the Flanders galleys in England, 494, 495, 502, 506, 514, 517, 550; refuses to release them till the Venetians make peace with Charles, 513, 550; the Pope sends briefs for their release, 573, 574, 582, 585; Venice requests him to release them, 584; the conditions on which he will release them, 614; fits them out to serve against the French, 623; releases them, but detains six pieces of their bronze artillery, 637, 647; Venice thanks him for their release, 653; Venice, at his request, presents him with the six pieces of artillery, 656, 657, 666.
-, prepares an army against France, 495.
-, the Pope exhorts him not to make war upon France, 500.
-, Florentine manufactures for, 503.
-, perseveres in the war against Francis, and intends making himself master of Scotland, 507.
-, sends Pace to Venice to induce her to join the league between himself and Charles, 509, 514, 516, 518,

Henry VIII.—cont.

- 520, 527, 528, 530, 531, 534, 538, 544, 546, 547, 597, 598; authorizes Pace to settle all disputes between Charles and Venice, 638.
-, has eight causes for making war on Francis, 528.
-, Leo X. confers the title of "Defender of the Faith" upon, (11 Oct. 1521), 546 note.
-, lays a fresh duty on all merchandise belonging to Venetians, 562.
-, allows Venetian merchants to export their wares from England, 593.
-, bears the title of "Rex Franciæ," and Francis that of "Rex Francorum," 606.
-, (A.D. 1523): conservator with the Pope of the league between Charles and Venice, 617, 619, 630.
-, prepares an army against Francis, 640.
-, inspects his fleet at Portsmouth, 643.
-, wishes to recal Pace from Venice, but Wolsey does not choose it, 651.
-, the Marquis of Mantua presents him with falcons, 661, 682.
-, convokes a Parliament to hear the causes for making war against Francis, 663.
-, will not assent to the truce between Charles, Francis, and himself, unless James V. be excluded, 665.
-, on bad terms with Charles, 671, 680.
-, calls Charles double-tongued, 680.
-, Fox, Bishop of Winchester, advises him to recall two captains sent by Wolsey against Francis, 687.
-, presents the Marquis of Mantua with some horses, 681, 692.
-, asks Venice to grant a copyright for Leonico the Hellenist's translation of a commentary concerning Natural History, 698.
-, urges Charles to act against France, 702, 711.
-, sends an ambassador to prevent the Switzers aiding Francis, 723.
-, prepares an army against France, 733.
-, sends troops over to France, 745.
-, reported truce between Francis and, 747.
-, refuses to lend money to Lady Margaret, 748.
-, rejoices at the treaty between Charles and Venice, 749, 750.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, presents the Venetian ambassador with 500 crowns on his return to Venice, 755, 775, 783, 784.
-, Francis refers his disputes with Charles to the arbitration of, 765.
-, Francis willing to pay the pension for Tournai to, without having it restored to him, 768, 780.
-, desires the Duke of Suffolk to continue the war against France, 782.
-, Francis irritated against, 785.
-, rumour of his death, 786.
-, recalls the Duke of Suffolk from France, 786.
-, (A.D. 1524): makes a three years' truce with Scotland, 792.
-, exhorts Venice not to aid the Switzers, 803.
-, promises Charles to send troops over to France, 811.
-, the Pope refuses to use ecclesiastical censures against France at the instigation of Charles and, 815.
-, Charles's offer to, touching the invasion of France, 820, 821, 825.
-, unwillingly commences war against France, 821.
-, the Pope mediates between Charles, Francis, and, 824.
-, Charles urges him to invade France, 827, 829.
-, plot in England to change the government, brought on by Henry's taxing the people too heavily, 830.
-, desires Bourbon to vigorously continue the war in Italy, 831.
-, gives himself the title of "Most Christian," 833.
-, preparing for the invasion of France, 834, 835, 837, 839, 846, 850.
-, accepts the truce with Francis, 836.
-, offers to aid the Duke of Bourbon's return to France, on certain conditions, 843, 845.
-, aids the Duke of Bourbon with money, 850, 854, 862, 868.
-, demands of Francis as much territory as Charles has conquered, 852.
-, makes preparations against Scotland upon the Earl of Angus promising to place Queen Margaret and James V. in his hands, 859, 860.
-, James V. accepts him as his protector, 865.
-, deceives Francis, 868.
-, expels the adherents of Scotland and France from England, 869.
-, called "Most Christian," 869.
-, sends troops to France, 871, 874.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, about to invade France in person, 880, 882, 1012, 1026.
-, insists on war or peace with France, 884, 885.
-, Charles fails in his engagements with, 888.
-, (A.D. 1525): refuses to give assistance for the affairs of Italy, 916, 922.
-, again mediates between Charles and Venice, 925, 929.
-, bears ill-will to Francis, 927.
-, aids Charles with money, 930.
-, rejoices at the result of the battle of Pavia, 966.
-, forms a project for the recovery of Normandy, Guienne, and Gascony, 969.
-, urges Charles to a brisk war on France, 970.
-, Charles does not wish him to be a contracting party in the league against the Turk, 971.
-, sends money to the Imperialists, 972.
-, desires a universal attack upon the Turk, 977.
-, lays an embargo upon all foreign vessels in the islands, 982.
-, Francis refuses to surrender Picardy to, 983.
-, greatly pleased at the capture of Francis, and detains all vessels for the transport of troops into France, 985.
-, bent on the war against France, 987, 994, 999.
-, dismisses the French ambassador, 989.
-, league between the Pope, Charles, the Archduke of Austria, and, 1002, 1011.
-, Charles does not wish him to conquer France, 1004.
-, purposes invading France, and having himself crowned King of France, 1005.
-, levies a sixth of all the revenues, 1007.
-, awaiting Charles's decision whether he is to invade France, 1009, 1023, 1044.
-, negotiations between Charles and, 1017, 1021, 1033, 1036, 1046, 1097.
-, repeals the property tax of one-third for the war against France, on account of the disturbances caused by the taxation, 1025.
-, quells the insurrection against Wolsey, 1027, 1028.
-, arrears of tribute due by Francis to, 1030.
-, arrests the Imperial ambassador for a debt due to him by Charles, 1032.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, his great love for his natural son, Henry, 1037; creates him Earl of Richmond, &c., 1052; dismisses Queen Katharine's chief councillors for showing displeasure at his love for him, 1057.
-, refuses to allow Charles to marry Mary, 1061.
-, negotiations between Francis and, 1062, 1081, 1082.
-, displeased with Charles for removing Francis to Spain, 1068, 1077.
-, tells Charles he ought to release Francis, 1079, 1090, 1095, 1124.
-, agreement between Francis and, 1084, 1093, 1094, 1096, 1101, 1102, 1105, 1106, 1108, 1109, 1110, 1112, 1114, 1116, 1118, 1121, 1125, 1126, 1128, 1129, 1130, 1133, 1141, 1145, 1150, 1168, 1194, 1202.
-, content to release Charles from his promise of marrying Princess Mary, 1119.
-, seeks by all means to unite Italy against Charles, 1120, 1156, 1160.
-, warm against Charles, 1137.
-, his ambassadors to the Pope, 1157.
-, advises Venice not to give money to Charles, 1163.
-, urges the Pope to conclude the league between France and Italy, 1169.
-, his assistance requested by Venice, 1171, 1184.
-, demands repayment of money lent to Charles, 1172, 1177, 1195.
-, sends Prothonotary Casal from Rome to Venice, 1175, 1198, 1199, 1205, 1208, 1209.
-, "head of the Italian movement," 1176.
-, united with France, 1186.
-, endeavours to make a league between France and Italy, 1182, 1187, 1190, 1201, 1224.
-, delights in music, 1188, 1189.
-, endeavours to procure Francis' release, 1191.
-, (A.D. 1526): his protection requested by the Duke of Guelders, 1193.
-, will be surety for the Pope to France, 1197.
-, urges Venice not to make terms with the Emperor, 1200.
-, will not brook Charles's coming into Italy, 1203, 1259.
-, to be protector of the Italian league, 1204, 1212, 1248, 1249, 1250, 1256, 1257, 1261, 1264, 1268, 1270, 1272, 1277, 1279, 1280, 1283.
-, wishes to benefit Italy, 1206.
-, articles of his treaty with France, 1210.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, objects to the nomination of Bourbon as Duke of Milan, 1217.
-, does not wish to be principal of the league, 1218, 1295.
-, defender of Venice, 1219, 1230, 1233.
-, at Greenwich, 1220, 1235, 1258.
-, sends ships to join the French fleet, 1225.
-, his and Wolsey's counsel to Francis, 1229.
-, will not consent to Charles's aggrandisement, 1231.
-, will send ambassadors to Francis on his release, 1234.
-, Francis attributes his release to, 1235.
-, offers his forces to Francis against Charles, 1246.
-, money lent by, to Charles, to be repaid by Francis, 1253, 1266.
-, confirmation of the peace between Francis and, 1254, 1269.
-, swears to the agreement with France, 1262.
-, urges Francis not to keep his promises to Charles, 1263.
-, willing to join the Italian league, 1265, 1267.
-, urges Francis to conclude the league with Italy, 1276, 1278, 1284, 1286.
-, wishes the league to be stipulated in London, 1281.
-, allowed three months to join the league, 1282.
-, place reserved for, in the Holy League, 1289, 1300, 1304, 1311, 1312, 1322, 1343.
-, lands in Naples to be settled on, 1290.
-, the league between France and, concluded, 1292.
-, urged to join the Holy League, 1294, 1305, 1307, 1309, 1315, 1317, 1319, 1323, 1326, 1327, 1332, 1334, 1337, 1339, 1348, 1351, 1352, 1357, 1358, 1359, 1360, 1362, 1368, 1378, 1379, 1381, 1385, 1388, 1389, 1390, 1393, 1394, 1423, 1425.
-, his ambassadors to demand the release of Francis' sons, 1298, 1302, 1318, 1320, 1335, 1336, 1339, 1403.
-, Charles endeavours to conciliate, 1314.
-, pleased at his inclusion in the Holy League, 1316.
-, urged to declare himself against Charles, 1324.
-, desires Charles to desist from his invasion of Italy, 1335.
-, makes certain demands before joining the league, 1342, 1347, 1349, 1350, 1366, 1367, 1371, 1380, 1383.

Henry VIII.—cont.

-, to be named protector of the Holy League, 1345, 1391, 1411.
-, makes a treaty of mutual obligation with France, 1351, 1382.
-, would prefer lands in the Milanese to Naples, 1363, 1392.
-, writes to Charles, 1355.
-, desires an interview with Francis, 1365.
-, united with Francis, 1372.
-, Charles sends an ambassador to, 1374.
-, binds Francis to confirm his league with England, 1375.
-, cannot join the Holy League, 1377.
-, acts in favour of the league, 1384.
-, send an ambassador to Charles, 1387, 1403, 1422.
-, might take alarm if Italy were invaded by the French, 1396.
-, well disposed towards the league, 1399, 1401.
-, assures Charles he has not joined the Holy League, 1403.
-, desires Francis to marry Princess Mary, 1406, 1418, 1455.
-, requested to defend the Pope against the Imperialists, 1412, 1413, 1416.
-, will lend money instead of joining the league, 1407.
-, desires the war to continue, 1418.
-, Francis sends his sons' portraits to, 1421, 1451, 1457.
-, endeavours to make peace between Charles and Francis, 1424.
-, will send a delegate to rule Milan, 1427.
-, Charles desires, to mediate for peace, 1428.
-, exhorts Venice to pursue the war in Italy, 1432.
-, sends money to the Pope, 1433, 1443, 1449.
-, will renounce the title of King of France if Boulogne be surrendered, 1434.
-, demands Boulogne, 1435.
-, sends hounds and horses to Francis, 1436.
-, desires Milan to be placed in his hands, 1438, 1446.
-, Charles hopes to have, on his side, 1439.
-, urged by Francis to make war on Charles, 1440.
-, to be included in a general peace, 1441.
-, Charles to repay money lent to him by, 1444.

- Henry VIII.—cont.
 wishes Charles to make peace with France, 1445, 1450.
 willing to assist the Pope, 1448.
 protests against Charles waging war on the Pope, 1459.
 letters from, 586, 660, 713, 749, 1181, 1216, 1255, 1271.
 his signature, 471.
 letters to, 103, 251, 397, 529, 583, 654, 712.
 description of his person, and excellent accomplishments, 232, 663.
 his wealth, 232.
 his father. See Henry VII.
 his sisters. See Mary, Margaret.
 his Queen. See Katharine. his natural son. See Richmond, Henry Duke of.
 his daughter. See Mary.
 his brothers-in-law. See Suffolk, Duke of; Angus, Earl of.
 his nephews. See Pole, Reginald; Exeter, Earl of.
 his chief-secretary. See Pace, Richard.
 his ambassadors. See Ambassadors.
 his confessor, the Bishop of Lincoln, 663.
 his cup-bearer, Sir Francis Bryan, 306.
 gentleman-usher of his chamber, Sir Richard Jerningham, 814.
Henry Grace a Dieu, Henry's great ship called the, 463 note.
Heralds, 252.
 at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22, p. 30.
 English, 395, 422, 466, 1298, 1317.
Hercules, p. 33.
Herera, an envoy from Charles to the Pope, 1183, 1185.
Hermits, General of the Friars, Friar Gabriel, 28.
 the Order of Friars, 174, 183.
Herod, 244.
Herodias's daughter, 244.
Hesdin. See Hédin.
Hesse, Landgrave of, 675.
 Elector of, 1296.
 favours Lutheranism, 1313.
Hiernomites, the, 1007.
Hispaniola, 1115.
Hobbies, 81, 682. presented by Henry to the Marquis of Mantua, 586, 1255.
Holland, 1141.
Holy Land, the, Venetian pilgrims to, 1042 note.
Holy League, the, 1478. See Leagues.
- Hoochstrate, Mons. de Montagni, Count of, 262.
Hopkins, Nicholas, causes the Duke of Buckingham's downfall by telling him that Henry would shortly die, 219.
Horn, French, players of the, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67.
Horse, Master of the, of England, Sir Henry Guylford, p. 21.
 the Emperor's, 466.
Horses, p. 23, p. 34, 67, 68, 73, 83, 418, 425, 682, 688, 957, 1311, 1338, 1341.
 Flemish, 1008. presented by Henry to Francis, 1436, 1437.
 presented to Henry VII., 1476.
Hostages, French, sent to England, p. 23, 115 note.
Hounds, English, presented by Henry to the Marquis of Mantua, 586, 682, 1255.
 presented by Henry to Francis, 1436.
House, the French, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22.
Household of England, Comptroller of the, Sir Thomas Boleyn, 364.
Howard, Lord Edmond, younger son of the Duke of Norfolk, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 25.
 Thos., Earl of Surrey, Admiral of England, afterwards Duke of Norfolk, 463, 474, 498, 562 note.
 appointed Deputy of Ireland, 7; dismissed by Henry, 204.
 his jousting-band at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 81.
Hungarians, the, 851.
Hungary, 225, 255, 275, 288, 376, 441, 554, 641, 784, 810, 851, 1071, 1238, 1416, 1424, 1433, 1450. invaded by the Turks, 304, 331, 366, 395, 440, 479, 507, 516, 531, 1224, 1254, 1403, 1409, 1424, 1425, insurrections in, 1050.
 Henry sends moneys to assist, 1371, 1438.
 news-letters from, to Henry and Wolsey, 1392.
 nobility of, 156.
 ambassadors of, in Spain, 331, 366, 367, 405.
 Venetian ambassadors in, 259, 666, 928, 954, 1019.
 King of. See Lewis II. to be mentioned in a truce, 1307.
Hunting, in Spain, 894, 898, 908, 914.
Hus, John, condemned by the Council of Constance, 199.

I.

- Ibrahim Pasha, 1114.
- Ignia, the fair of, 891.
- Illuminations at Venice, 734, 738, 942.
- Images of gold, used as decorations at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20, 83.
- Imperial ambassadors, 368.
- at Verona, 18, 29.
- in France, 130, 1245, 1270.
- in England, 130, 185, 465, 467, 567, 570, 986, 1021, 1029, 1187, 1203, 1314.
- at Calais, to arrange disputes between Charles and Francis, 269, 278, 279, 280, 283, 285, 287, 289, 292, 297, 306, 308, 309, 316, 319, 320, 321, 327, 329, 330, 334, 335, 342, 346, 352.
- at Venice, 389, 460, 473, 481, 484, 488, 493, 516, 518, 523, 527, 530, 536, 609, 649, 666, 677, 723, 739, 912, 942, 962, 974, 1024, 1121, 1165, 1226, 1233, 1238, 1317, 1349.
- at Rome, 800, 873, 1197, 1202.
- court, the, 239, 391, 400, 406, 407, 413, 470, 498, 557, 598, 902, 989, 1064, 1192, 1356.
- in England, 486.
- council, 434, 436, 552, 710.
- army, 1043, 1070, 1075, 1104, 1128.
- against France, 769, 787, 793, 811, 845, 956.
- under the command of the King of Denmark, 252.
- outrages committed by the, in the Brescian territory, 351, 358.
- in Italy, 1155, 1183, 1185, 1206, 1308, 1358.
- camp, 925, 935, 939, 940.
- fleet, 1085, 1107.
- ministry, 395, 452, 484, 571, 579, 805, 821, 845, 880, 884, 1259, 1403.
- territories, 469.
- troops, in France, 233, 300, 319, 327.
- in Luxemburg, 238.
- vessels, 279.
- Imperialists, the, 185, 198, 248, 250, 257, 274, 282, 293, 365, 382, 391, 395, 402, 407, 436, 448, 466, 567, 570, 571, 714, 761, 802, 804, 808, 828, 845, 865, 890, 897, 900, 902, 905, 911, 918, 926, 931, 952, 957, 974, 977, 1037, 1046, 1050, 1080, 1114, 1119, 1120, 1123, 1145, 1164, 1190, 1241, 1280, 1292, 1317, 1319, 1332, 1333, 1336, 1363, 1368, 1373, 1412, 1415, 1443.
- take Mouzon, 322.
- attack Tournai, 366.
- direct their energies to the expulsion of the French from Italy, 461.
- at Venice, 744.
- Imperialists, the—cont.
- enmity between the Pope and, 903.
- Henry sends them money, 927, 972.
- Henry encourages them to continue the war against France, 935, 937.
- the Pope objects to league with, 951.
- gain the Battle of Pavia (in 1525), and take Francis I. prisoner, 959.
- exasperated against Henry for making peace with Francis, 1133.
- in the Milanese, 1165, 1167, 1171, 1327, 1348.
- blockade the Duke of Milan, 1183.
- besiege the castle of Milan, 1242.
- excesses committed by the, 1416.
- successes of the, 1443.
- India, the Jews in, offer the Pope assistance against the Turk, 810.
- Indies, the, 556.
- gold, pearls, and other merchandise imported from, to Spain, 686, 703, 711, 751, 827, 910, 992, 1021, 1087, 1115.
- cities discovered to the west of, 1002, 1011.
- admiral of, Diego, son of Christopher Columbus, 1038, 1115.
- President of the Council of, the Bishop of Osma, 1047.
- Governor of, Hernando Cortes, 1115.
- Indulgences, plenary, conceded at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29, 69, 78, 93.
- impugned by the Lutherans, 383, 813.
- sent to Hungary, 851.
- obtained from the Pope, 1474.
- Infant of Spain, the. See Ferdinand, Don.
- Infanta of Spain, sister of Charles. See Eleanor.
- Infantazgo, Duke dell', one of the principal grandees of Spain, 1093.
- Infantry, English, for the succour of Rhodes, 99.
- Infidels, the, 375, 507, 574.
- expedition of the Christian powers against, 548.
- Ingolstadt, letter dated at, 628.
- Innocent VIII., Pope, letters from, 1473, 1474.
- letters to, 1475, 1476, 1477.
- Inquisition, the Romish, 1069 note.
- Inspruck, 690, 699, 897, 973, 990.
- diet of, 675, 1056.
- letters dated at, 675, 777, 907, 936, 938, 944, 955, 966 note, 967, 976, 980, 981, 984, 988, 994, 1000, 1009, 1018, 1027, 1028, 1039, 1089.
- Governors of, 19.
- Ireland, Henry prepares an army against, 136.
- Henry styled Lord of, 479.
- Lieutenant of, 204.

- Ireland, Deputy of. See Kildare, Earl of; Surrey, Earl of.
- Irish, the, show little obedience to Henry VIII., 7, 136.
- Iron, supplied by Venice to the Infidels, 507.
- Isabella, elder sister of the King of Portugal, marriage of, with Charles V., 589, 902,
911, 1008, 1015, 1046, 1048, 1058,
1074, 1075, 1076, 1089, 1091, 1099,
1102, 1125, 1132, 1133, 1141, 1187,
1195.
-, declares she will never marry anybody but Charles, 852.
-, the grandees of Spain, &c., exhort Charles to marry, 1029, 1054.
-, all Spain compel Charles to marry, 1078.
- Isonzo, the river, 448 note.
-, the Turks sound, 458.
- Italian fashions, p. 23, p. 30, 248.
- miles, p. 39, p. 40, 248.
- infantry, 812, 890, 897, 1206, 1333.
- powers, 893, 977; form a league against Charles, 1116, 1120, 1142.
- affairs, 1102.
- league, an, desired by England, 1175,
1218, 1219, 1349, 1427. See Leagues.
- Italians, the, 55, 1016.
-, in the service of France, 1108.
-, desire Maximilian Sforza to be Duke of Milan, 1162.
- Italy, 92, 117, 166, 176, 177, 178, 179, 187,
253, 262, 313, 314, 336, 340, 342, 344,
345, 359, 365, 367, 370, 379, 401, 409,
411, 415, 436, 438, 440, 442, 443, 445,
447, 448, 452, 455, 460, 461, 463, 467,
472, 475, 486, 487, 492, 496, 498, 504,
516, 525, 538, 567, 571, 572, 580, 597,
602, 605, 614, 630, 636, 659, 682, 729,
741, 749, 752, 777, 805, 809, 818, 819,
820, 824, 825, 828, 829, 837, 845, 852,
857, 860, 878, 885, 888, 892, 899, 903,
907, 918, 920, 942, 943, 951, 956, 958,
959, 969, 970, 974, 984, 985, 997, 1006,
1008, 1029, 1033, 1040, 1047, 1050,
1069, 1070, 1071, 1093, 1104, 1107,
1111, 1114, 1121, 1128, 1135, 1138,
1147, 1157, 1162, 1176, 1217, 1226,
1251, 1255, 1272, 1273, 1335, 1343,
1396.
-, Charles's expedition into, 4, 6, 99, 105,
107, 109, 132, 134, 137, 144, 156, 160,
167, 168, 169, 170, 184, 205, 225, 226,
233, 294, 317, 757, 821.
-, Francis' expedition into, 118, 124,
126, 129, 130, 135, 141, 142, 144, 152,
162, 195, 276, 446, 639.
-, disturbances in, 304, 351, 407, 441.
-, league between the Pope, Charles,
Henry, and others for the defence of,
714, 735, 802.
-, Francis' entry into, 751, 756, 766, 801.
- Italy—cont.
-, the Pope wishes for the expulsion of the French from, 794.
-, Charles's army in, under the Duke of Bourbon, 827, 831.
-, Francis plots for the mastery of all,
890, 897.
-, Henry refuses to give any assistance for the affairs of, 916, 922.
-, Francis enters (Oct. 1524), 939.
-, Henry will not suffer Charles to seize more territory in, 946.
-, offensive and defensive league of,
against the Turk, 971.
-, Francis to cede, to Charles, 983.
-, Francis offers to Charles the Venetian territory and all the rest of, 1021.
-, Charles's agents in, 977.
-, Henry's agents in, 1037.
-, Charles chooses peace in, 1030, 1035.
-, Charles urged to conquer, for himself, 1035.
-, proposed coronation of Charles in,
1054, 1065, 1097, 1105.
-, league for the maintenance of the States of, 1096, 1097, 1099, 1100, 1101, 1113, 1116, 1118, 1119, 1141.
-, Henry makes peace with Francis lest Charles should make himself monarch
of, 1106.
-, Henry does not choose that the French should have dominion in, 1113.
-, Henry seeks to unite all, against
Charles, 1120.
-, Henry urges France to league with,
1137.
-, good disposition of France towards the war in, 1149.
-, Henry will maintain the liberty of,
against Charles, 1150, 1156, 1160, 1175,
1184, 1203, 1206, 1214, 1220, 1228.
-, proposed league with France and England, 1158, 1171, 1190, 1195, 1198,
1201, 1223, 1224, 1229, 1231, 1235,
1251, 1284, 1285, 1286, 1289, 1305,
1324, 1349, 1351, 1363.
-, threatened invasion of, by Charles,
1163, 1164, 1177, 1241, 1258, 1306, 1390.
-, Wolsey's good offices in behalf of,
1165, 1183.
-, Charles's goodwill towards, 1185.
-, Venice bears the burden of all, 1186.
-, Charles desires to rule all, 1187.
-, Henry willing to stipulate the league with, 1236, 1249.
-, Francis ready to join the league with,
1253, 1256.
-, Henry's goodwill towards, 1254, 1271,
1280, 1393.
-, Henry will not brook Charles's invasion of, 1259.

Italy—cont.

-, Francis will not allow the Viceroy to enter, 1270, 1297, 1320.
-, Henry urges Francis to join the league with, 1276, 1278.
-, under great obligations to England, 1279.
-, lands in, to be given to Henry, 1290.
-, money sent to, by France, 1301.
-, territory in, to be given to Henry and Wolsey, 1307, 1309.
-, Francis will accompany his army into, 1316.
-, Charles sends Moneada into, 1317.
-, Charles to enter, for his coronation, 1319, 1444.
-, the Swiss about to enter, 1348.
-, Henry urged to send his troops into, 1368, 1392.
-, Francis to send troops into, 1371.
-, a fleet fitted out by Charles for, 1395, 1447.
-, the Spanish army to be expelled from, 1403, 1421.
-, in peril, 1443.
-, the Lansquenets enter, 1449.
-, Henry will negotiate the peace between Charles and, 1450, 1457.

J.

- James I., King of England, 809 note.
- James III., King of Scotland, letter to, 1463.
- James IV., King of Scotland, 384.
- James V., King of Scotland, nephew of Henry, 860.
-, ... opposing the Duke of Albany, (in 1514), 1485.
-, ... named as ally in the league between England and France, 111.
-, ... truce between Henry and, 130.
-, ... Henry endeavours to get, into his own hands, 507.
-, ... Henry objects to his being included in the truce between England and France, 665.
-, ... takes Henry as his protector, emancipating himself from the guardianship of the Duke of Albany, 865.
-, ... his regents, 870.
-, ... proposed marriage with Princess Mary, 911, 1048, 1075, 1192.
-, ... negotiates for peace with Henry, 918.
-, ... named as confederate by France in the treaty between England and France, 1122.

Janissaries, the Aga of the, beheaded by the Grand Turk, 1104.

Jernegan, Sir Richard, English ambassador in France, 204, 237 note, 246 note, 215, 220 note, 234.

....., ... English ambassador with Charles, 693, 702, 761, 780, 797, 814, 821, 825.

....., ... English ambassador to Lady Margaret, 880.

Jewels, 83, 1272.

....., worn by Henry and Francis and their Courts, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 14, p. 16, p. 17, p. 30, 67, 70, 77, 79, 80, 84, 85, 90, 94.

....., vases set with, 81.

....., Charles raises money on Maximilian's, 392.

Jews, the, in India, offer the Pope assistance against the Turks, 810.

Joachino, Gioan., secretary of the Governor of Genoa, letter from, 60. See Passano.

Joachim, Marquis, brother of the Duke of Brandenburg, 995.

Jordan, a German bookseller, at San Maurizio, Venice, Lutheran books seized from, 116.

Joseph, 956.

Jousts held at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 24, p. 22, p. 23, p. 24, p. 25, p. 26, p. 27, p. 28, p. 29, 68, 69, 76, 80, 81, 83, 84, 85, 87, 90, 93, 95, 111.

..... at Greenwich, 466.

..... in Spain, 711; upon Sunday, 420, 422.

..... in France, 1292.

Juana, Queen of Castile, mother of Charles V., residing at Tordesillas, 32, 344 note, 507, 908, 910.

Julia, Madame, sister of Cardinal Farnese, favorite of Pope Alexander, her death, 811.

Juliers, Duke of, nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.

Julius II., Pope, 809, 1484, 1489.

....., league between Henry VII. and, 1478.

....., letter from, to Henry VII., 1480.

Junta, the army of the, 212.

K.

Katharine, Queen, consort of Henry VIII., 167, 213, 232, 463, 466, 974, 1016, 1037, 1071, 1139 note.

Katharine, Queen—cont.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, with Henry, 45, p. 14, p. 15, p. 17, p. 81, p. 19, p. 20, p. 22, p. 23, p. 24, p. 26, p. 30, p. 31, p. 32, nos. 53, 54 note, 55, 58, p. 39, p. 45, nos. 61, 63, 64, 68, 69, 72, 76, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 88, 90, 91, 93, 94, 95, 106, 130.

....., dissatisfied with Henry for conferring an earldom and dukedom on his natural son, 1053.

....., Henry dismisses three of her chief councillors, 1053.

Katharine of Austria, sister of Charles V., her marriage with the King of Portugal, 843, 908, 910.

Kendal, Sir John, prior of St. John's of Jerusalem in England, 1475, 1477.

Kerseys, 23, 836, 1007.

Kildare, Gerald Fitzgerald, Earl of, Henry deprives him of the Lord Deputyship of Ireland, 7.

Killigrew, Thos. (temp. Eliz.), 527 note.

Kitchens, erected at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 30.

Knight, Dr. William, English ambassador to the Switzers, 380, 406, 407, 409, 410, 413, 422. See Chiut.

L.

La Diense, ? Liege, 323.

La Valle. See Valle.

Lady, Our, of —, visited by Wolsey, 115.

Lake, a salt, in America, discovered by Hernando Cortes, 556.*

Lama, gold and silver, used in decorating wearing apparel, p. 16, p. 18, 724.

Lambeth, letters dated at, 1475, 1476, 1477.

Lambra, Italy, letter dated at, 1426.

Land's End, 31.

Lando, Marco, of Venice, 576, 581.

....., Pietro, Venetian ambassador in Rome, letter to, 1485.

Languedoc, 825, 897, 1008.

....., appertains to the crown of Aragon, 960.

....., demanded by Charles, 1187.

Langus, Dom. Marchio, Papal Nuncio in England, 778, 939, 986 (?), 1005, 1212. See Longhio.

Lannoy, Charles de, Viceroy of Naples, 294, 472, 646, 978, 1050, 1064, 1069, 1078, 1080.

....., serving with Charles in Italy, 452, 481, 714, 812, 871, 888, 897, 912.

....., his offers to the Pope, 916.

Lannoy, Charles de, Viceroy of Naples—cont.

....., negotiations between France and, 956, 1419.

....., the Duke of Bourbon's intrigues with, 1003.

....., takes Francis to Spain, 1017, 1034, 1041, 1045, 1048, 1058.

....., concludes a league between the Pope and Charles, 1024.

....., urges Charles to conquer Italy for himself, 1035.

....., Spaniards mutiny against, and endeavour to take his life, 1057.

....., forwards a love letter from Francis I. to Eleanor, Queen Dowager of Portugal, 1063.

....., Charles sends, to Francis upon hearing of Francis' illness, 1112, 1115, 1130.

....., intrigues against Bourbon, 1177.

....., negotiates with Francis, 1198.

....., Imperial ambassador to France, 1261, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1276, 1284, 1285, 1292, 1293, 1297, 1319, 1320, 1322, p. 605.

....., commander of the Imperial fleet in Italy, 1447.

Lansquenets, in the service of Francis, 144, 325, 327, 330; disbanded, 1108.

....., at Trent, 320, 1128.

....., in the service of Charles, 387, 434, 445, 760, 802, 824, 825, 837, 897, 1104, 1107, 1114, 1138, 1140; under the Duke of Bourbon, 761.

....., subsidized by England for the service of Charles against France, 614, 918, 930.

....., Henry commissions Lady Margaret to procure 5,000—874.

....., relations and friends of the Lutherans, 967, 984.

....., besiege Milan, 1171.

....., to be subsidized by England against Charles, 1186.

....., in Milan, 1206.

....., to invade Italy, 1327, 1358, 1368, 1443, 1447, 1449.

....., depart from Italy for Germany, 1420.

Laredo, 381.

Lautrec, Madame de, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 85.

....., Mons. de, in the service of Francis, 44, 225, 334, 351, 438, 1008, 1197, 1243, 1245, 1270, 1272, 1322, 1419.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43, nos. 68, 70, 73, 82, 90.

....., letter to, 373.

....., sent with troops by Francis to England (i.e. Scotland), 678.

....., in Scotland with an army for its defence, 744.

....., at Bayonne, 763.

....., sent to Picardy to oppose the English, 1001.

Lavello, description of a, 941 note.

Lawyers, English, description of their dress, 662.

Leagues concluded or proposed between:—

The Pope, Francis and Venice, called the Triple League, 4, 304.

Henry VIII. and Francis, 25.

Leo X., Henry VIII., Charles, Francis and Venice, 29.

Henry and Charles, 34, 277, 289, 409, 467, 479; and Venice, 481, 482, 483, 488, 504, 508, 516, 518, 528, 530, 554, 571, 617, 619, 690, 714, 716, 717, 734, 736, 738, 749, 759, 761, 774, 815.

Charles and Francis, 132.

The Pope, Francis, Henry, and Venice, 151.

Leo X. and Francis, 176, 188.

The Pope and Charles, 263, 313.

Quinquennial league, 330. See Truce.

The Pope, Henry, and Charles, 332, 364.

The Pope, Henry, Charles, the King of Hungary, and Venice, 403, 417, 467, 475, 484.

Francis and Venice, 441, 1117.

Clement VII. and Francis, 897, 909, 912, 916, 936.

The Pope, Venice, and the Florentines, 926.

The Pope, Henry, Charles, and Archduke Ferdinand, 735, 998, 1002, 1011, 1024, 1040, 1065.

Henry and Francis, 1052, 1070, 1073, 1081, 1083, 1110, 1111, 1113, 1121, 1122, 1124, 1125, 1126, 1128, 1129, 1130, 1132, 1150, 1154, 1162, 1163, 1169, 1173, 1181, 1182, 1186, 1187, 1193, 1199, 1200, 1201, 1202, 1203, 1209, 1210, 1211, 1257, 1261, 1262, 1265, 1268, 1270, 1274, 1297, 1298.

Italian or "Holy League," against Charles, including the Pope, France, England, Venice, etc., 1116, 1119, 1120, 1123, 1158, 1159, 1160, 1171, 1175, 1183, 1190, 1195, 1204, 1212, 1219, 1224, 1249, 1251, 1253, 1254, 1256, 1266, 1267, 1272, 1276, 1277, 1278, 1279, 1280, 1281, 1282, 1283, 1284, 1285, 1286, 1287, 1288, 1289, 1290, 1291, 1292, 1293, 1295, 1300, 1304, 1305, 1307, 1309, 1311, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1322, 1323, 1324, 1326, 1327, 1332, 1333, 1334, 1335, 1337, 1339, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345, 1346, 1347, 1348, 1349, 1350, 1352, 1356, 1357, 1358, 1359, 1360, 1362, 1363, Leagues—cont.

Italian or "Holy League," &c. —cont.

1366, 1367, 1371, 1374, 1375, 1378, 1379, 1380, 1381, 1382, 1383, 1384, 1387, 1391, 1392, 1393, 1394, 1399, 1403, 1406, 1411, 1418, 1421, 1423, 1425, 1433, 1443, 1444, 1449.

Charles and Francis, 1133, 1141, 1163, 1204, 1218, 1222, 1223, 1227, 1248, 1250, 1269.

Charles, Henry, Francis, &c. (general peace), 1441, 1442, 1444, 1445, 1457.

Leandro, Dom. Hieronimo, 216.

Leandro, Dom. Hieronimo, Leo X.'s librarian, 112.

Lecco, 369.

Lec, Dr. Edward, almoner to Henry VIII., English ambassador to the Emperor, 1159, 1166, 1169, 1302, 1305, 1317, 1324, 1335, 1336, 1342, 1371, 1398, 1403, 1422, 1424, 1439, 1443, 1450.

Legate in England, Cardinal Wolsey, 78, 80, 320, 463.

..... in Venice, Bishop of Pola, 520, 521, 530, 582, 1346, 1411.

....., letter to, 464.

..... in Spain, 487. See Salviati.

..... in Venice, Tommaso Campeggio, 615, 697, 708, 941.

..... to Hungary, Tommaso de Vio, 788.

..... to France and Spain, Cardinal Salviati, 1015, 1130, 1187, 1414.

Leghorn, 200, 957.

Leo X., Pope, 14, 26, 48, 64, 92, 159, 167, 173, 174, 186, 188, 210, 227, 229, 251 note, 259, 262, 274, 280, 285, 323, 328, 334, 351, 363, 366, 878, 917.

....., Luther's work against, 11, 12.

....., appoints cardinals for the Lutheran affairs, 11, 16.

....., his ambassadors at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43.

....., the Duke of Saxony and other Lords write in defence of Luther to, 74.

....., takes La Mirandola under his protection, 82.

....., authorizes Wolsey to grant plenary indulgences at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 93.

....., named as ally in the treaty between England and France, 111.

....., sends briefs, bulls, and excommunications into Germany against the Lutherans, 112.

....., the English endeavour to prevent his interview with Francis at Bologna, 117.

....., elects cardinals, 122.

....., Wolsey asks him to advise Francis not to enter Italy, 135.

Leo X., Pope—cont.

-, subsidizes Switzers, 141, 144, 178.
-, acting against Luther, 147.
-, excommunicates Luther for abusing him, 149.
-, has an interview with Francis at Bologna, 150.
-, league between Henry, Francis, and, 151.
-, his troops, 155.
-, it is said to be the business of the Emperor and Electors of Germany to correct, 163.
-, confirms Wolsey's legatine powers for another two years, 168.
-, anxious about the Lutheran affairs, 169, 171.
-, holds Luther's works in great account, 171.
-, in league with Francis, 176.
-, suspected of an intention to seize Ferrara, 176, 177.
-, charges all who possess Luther's works to burn them, under pain of excommunication, 182.
-, Switzers in Italy for his protection, 187.
-, condemns all Luther's works, and orders them to be burnt, 191, 198.
-, Luther's abuse of, 199.
-, the Imperialists make use of Luther to keep Leo in awe, 202.
-, commands a musical comedy to be performed, 203.
-, refuses to join the triple league because Charles does not go to Italy, 205.
-, receives Charles's declaration against Luther, 216; which he praises, 223.
-, considered a Frenchman by the Imperialists, 222.
-, makes a stir against Francis with the assistance of Charles, who promises him Ferrara, Lucca, Parma, and Piacenza, 253.
-, seeks assistance of Henry, Charles, and other Christian princes, against the French in Italy, 254.
-, Francis complains to Henry of, 260.
-, in league with Charles, 263, 313.
-, authorizes Wolsey to confer the benefices of England and to receive annats, 263.
-, Francis wishes to have his revenge on, 266.
-, Francis complains bitterly of Leo's acting against him in the Milanese, 268.

Leo X., Pope—cont.

-, sends an ambassâdor to Calais, 273.
-, Charles aids him against Francis, 276.
-, his relations with Charles, 278.
-, prevents Charles making peace with Francis, 282.
-, urges Charles to war against Francis, 289.
-, Charles strictly binds himself to, not to make terms with Francis, 290.
-, complains of Charles's slow movements in Italy, having declared against Francis at his request, 294.
-, said to be ruled by his prime minister, 294.
-, league between Francis, Venice, and, 304.
-, rejects both peace and truce, 312.
-, at strife with Charles, 314.
-, Charles's promises to, 316.
-, Henry not at liberty to negotiate peace between Charles and Francis without the consent of, 319.
-, laments declaring against Francis, being apprehensive of becoming an insignificant priest, 320.
-, charged with seeking to deprive Francis of the duchy of Milan, 321.
-, his relations with Venice, 324.
-, opposes the agreement between Charles and Francis, 325, 327, 330.
-, league between Henry, Charles, and, 332, 364.
-, assents to the truce with Francis, 348.
-, outrages committed by his army in the Brescian territory, 358.
-, dies (1 December 1521), 374, 376, 384, 404, 426, 441, 467, 479.
-, treaty of London dissolved by his death, 538.
-, styled Henry "Defender of the Faith," for having composed a work against Luther, 833.
-, suspicion of his having been poisoned by the desire of Francis I., 865 note.
-, and his brothers, Venice gave them refuge during their exile, 283.
-, his brother, the Magnifico Giuliano, 1485.*
-, his Prime Minister, Cardinal Giulio de' Medici, 294.
- Leonico, Tomeo Nicola, a learned Venetian scholar, his intimâcy with Pole and Pace, 519.
-, Venice allows him to print his commentaries concerning Natural History, translated from Greek into Latin, 696, 693.
- L'Escu, Mons. de. See Escu.

- Levant, news from the, 9, 195.
- Lewis II., King of Hungary and Bohemia, 13, 288, 810.
-, conference between Charles, the King of Poland, Don Ferdinand, and, 141, 143.
-, his proposed marriage with Charles's sister, 208.
-, with Madame Rénée, sister-in-law of Francis, 208.
-, with a daughter of the King of Navarre, 208.
-, preparing against the Turk, 259.
-, proposed league between the Pope, Henry, Charles, Venice, and, 403.
-, nominated as confederate in the treaty between Henry and Charles, 479.
-, the Great Turk takes Scardona and Temisvar from, 530.
-, prorogues the Diet of Buda, 616.
-, acts against the Lutherans, 788, 849.
-, and his Queen, favour Lutheranism, 790, 791.
-, seeks assistance from Silesia against the Turk, 798, 807.
-, confederate in the league between England and France, 1122.
- Lewis XII., King of France, 68, 84, 958, 1029 note, 1272.
-, four ladies proposed in marriage to, 1485.
-, aids the Duke of Albany in Scotland, 1485.
-, his widow, Queen Mary, married to the Duke of Suffolk, 1486.
- Leze, Donà da, of the Venetian Senate, 482.
-, Lord Lieutenant of Cyprus, 1188, 1189.
-, Zuan da, musician, commits suicide in England, 1188, 1189.
- Liberal, Master, Charles's physician, examines Charles's food when suspected of being poisoned, 340.
- Liberty, the cry of the Lutheran peasant, 976.
- Liege, called La Diense or Lodiense, 323.
- Liege, Bishop of, made Cardinal for Spain, 122.
-, Cardinal de, with the city of Liege, nominated as confederates in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
- Ligâ Christiana, Nos de, deffensores verbi, &c. Dei*, Lutherans style themselves, 1009.
- Lilies, golden, used as decorations at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 83.
- Linck, called Lingue or Linz, a fort near Bourbourg, 59.
-, letters dated at, 52, 58, 62, 65, 70, 73, 80, 81, 87, 90, 91, 94.
- Lincoln, John Longland, Bishop of, Henry's Confessor, 663.
- Linx. See Linck.
- Lion, Mafio, State Attorney of Venice, 258, 482.
-, Ser Simon, Master of the Arsenal of Venice, 991.
- Lippomano, Hieronimo, letters from, 112, 795.
-, bailiff and captain at Bassane, letter from, 1134.
-, his son, the Prior of the Trinity at Venice, 112.
- Lisbon, Portugal, 836.
- Lisen. See Linck.
- Lisien. See Linck.
- Lisle, 455 note.
- Lisle-Adam, Grand Master of St. John's of Jerusalem, 523.
-, Grand Master of Rhodes, the Emperor grants Malta and Tripoli to, 797.
-, Francis advises, not to accept Malta, 824.
- Letters used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23.
- Lix. See Linck.
- Lodi, 890, 897.
-, taken by the Imperialists, 460.
-, Lansquenets enter, in the name of Charles, 1138, 1140.
-, Spanish troops at, 1206.
-, taken by the Papal army, 1332, 1333, 1336, 1374.
-, Duke of Milan at, 1378.
-, Bishop of, 1327.
- Lodiense. See Liege.
- Lodrone ad Anfo, in Italy, 1443.
- Logrado, 897.
- Logroño, 743.
-, Francis marches his army under, 249.
-, letters dated at, 758, 761.
- Lombardy, 776, 897, 916, 1227, 1373, 1397.
-, Francis proposes taking the title of King of, 752.
-, affairs of, 840, 935.
-, Charles to give the investiture of Milan to the Duke, to encourage the people of, against the French, 895.
-, the Pope's affairs in, 1190, 1424.
-, Venetian and other armies in, 1380.
-, Charles to leave, intact, 1444.
- Lomelina, 1114.
- London, 25, 35, p. 14, 108, 130, 179, 184, 249, 272, 278, 394, 414, 446, 463, 488, 502, 764, 830, 843, 846, 869, 894, 905, 974, 1007, 1008, 1059, 1132, 1186, 1189, 1190, 1212, 1274, 1305, 1336, 1434, 1475.
-, treaty of (made October 1518), 338, 465, 467, 471, 474, 479, 484, 528, 534, 538, 663.
-, peace proclaimed between England and France in, 1124, 1128.
-, licence to export merchandise from the port of, 120.
-, the plague raging most violently in, 1073.

London—cont.

-, the Holy League to be concluded in, 1281.
-, protests of bills of exchange on, 1140, 1461, 1464, 1481, 1483.
-, the King of Naples in (temp. H. VII.), 1476.
-, letters dated at, 1, 2, 3, 7, 22, 34, 41, 43, 47, 49, 113, 115, 121, 123, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 141, 142, 143, 145, 151, 152, 154, 162, 167, 168, 169, 185, 187, 195, 204, 206, 208, 210, 213, 214, 219, 233, 236, 238, 240, 244, 252, 255, 256, 263, 268, 273, 380, 393, 408, 423, 424, 432, 435, 442, 466, 467, 470, 471, 472, 483, 490, 491, 495, 550, 555, 563, 590, 595, 618, 623, 638, 650, 661, 663, 671, 682, 683, 687, 694, 701, 722, 748, 750, 757, 820, 1016, 1025, 1037, 1052, 1053, 1061, 1073, 1083, 1096, 1097, 1105, 1106, 1110, 1111, 1113, 1141, 1150, 1151, 1159, 1163, 1164, 1169, 1175, 1187, 1193, 1195, 1197, 1201, 1203, 1218, 1219, 1220, 1223, 1224, 1227, 1230, 1231, 1235, 1238, 1254, 1258, 1269, 1270, 1294, 1297, 1302, 1307, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1339, 1349, 1351, 1355, 1371, 1374, 1377, 1381, 1382, 1387, 1388, 1393, 1395, 1401, 1402, 1406, 1418, 1427, 1428, 1432, 1435, 1438, 1446, 1451, 1457, 1458, 1459, 1484, 1485, 1486, 1487, 1488.
-, ambassadors in. See Ambassadors.
-, Bishop of. See Tunstall, Cuthbert.
-, the deputies of, recall the Duke of Suffolk from France, 786.
-, Genoese merchants in, 1473.
-, Lombard Street, in the parish of St. Mary Wolnoth, 1460, 1464, 1481, 1483.
-, officials of, 466.
-, St. Paul's church. See St. Paul's.
-, Venetian consul in, 399, 515, 740, 877.
-, Venetian factory in, 23, 127, 673, 1417.
- Londoners, setting of the Midsummer Watch, as performed by the, 244.
- Longhio, Melchior, letter from, 820. See Langus.
- Longin, Marco Antonio, secretary of Venetian ambassador in Spain, letters from, 1086, 1153, 1296; to his brother, Zuan Hieronimo, 1098.
- Longueville, Duchess of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 80.
-, Duke of, ransom required for the (A.D. 1514), 1485.
-, Mons. de, in the service of Francis, 271.
- Lords, House of, English, 679.
- of Parliament, the, disagree with the Commons respecting the Duke of Suffolk's marriage, 1486.

- Loredan, Andrea, of Venice, 386.
-, candidate for embassy to England, 1330.
- Loredano, Leonardo, Doge of Venice, 606.
-, letters from, 101, 102, 103, 138, 654, 655, 1479.
-, letters to, 1484, 1488, 1489.
-, his death, 251, 255.
- Lorraine, 675, 1008, 1025.
-, Cardinal of, 1243, 1245, 1270.
-, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84, 93.
-, Duke of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43, 68, 70, 73, 82, 84, 93.
-, acting against the Lutherans with his brother, 1025.
-, nominated as confederate in the treaty between England and France, 1122.
-, his ambassador at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.
-, his brother Francis slain at the battle of Pavia, 946.
-, Duchess of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 80.
- Louise of Savoy, mother of Francis I., 4, 44, 221, 234, 260, 281, 292, 295, 296, 301, 307, 337, 353, 355, 359, 417, 902, 905, 1065, 1118, 1126, 1136, 1141, 1191, 1195, 1198, 1201, 1209, 1214, 1218, 1292, 1419, 1487.
-, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 45, p. 22, p. 24, p. 26, p. 27, 58, 65, 67, 69, 78, 80, 82, 84, 87, 90, 93, 94, 95.
-, arbitrates with Wolsey respecting Scottish affairs between Henry and Francis, 142, 150, 151, 188, 204.
-, sends to Lady Margaret, requesting her to mediate for peace between Charles and Francis, 266, 413.
-, sends an ambassador to England to effect a truce between Francis and Charles, 463, 465, 467, 478, 826, 860.
-, Regent of France, 983, 1100, 1101, 1123, 1128, 1135.
-, negotiates the release of Francis, 997, 1003, 1014, 1050, 1070, 1091.
-, residing at Lyons, 1008.
-, requests authority from the Pope to act against the Lutherans, 1010.
-, negotiates an agreement between England and France, 1052, 1081, 1082, 1175, 1190.
-, called a most terrible woman, 1066.
-, concludes a truce with Henry and Charles, 1108, 1110.
-, sends the Duchess of Alençon to tell Francis not to make terms with Charles, as Henry will aid his release, 1111, 1121.
-, signs the treaty between England and France, 1122.

Louise of Savoy, mother of Francis I.—cont.

-, negotiates a league with Italy, 1158, 1159, 1163, 1171, 1183, 1184, 1212, 1224, 1226, 1236, 1272.
-, demands moneys on the Milanese, 1160.
-, to attack Charles on the French frontier, 1186.
-, swears to the articles with England, 1187.
-, has the gout and fever, 1194, 1231.
-, Henry wishes, to contribute to the war against Charles, 1203.
-, presents Francis with two millions of gold, 1246.
-, clauses drawn up by, 1256.
-, visited by the Viceroy Lannoy, 1273.
-, promises Charles money if he release Francis' sons, 1403.
-, praised for having been the cause of the Holy League, 1423.

Louise, daughter of Francis I., her death, 323.

Louvain, Dean of. See Tortosa, Cardinal of.

Love, God of, statue of the, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 33, 83.

Low-Countries, war against France in the, 413. See Flanders.

Lozaseo, Paulo, gains a victory over the French, 820.

Lucca, Charles promises, to Leo X., 253.

....., a native of, 298.

Lucha, Ipolito da, a military commander recommended by Henry VIII. to Venice, 1426.

Ludovico, Messer, 90.

Lursi (Ursi), Mons. de, in the service of the Duke of Bourbon, 858, 879, 1066, 1112.

Lute, Princess Mary's performance on the, 1096.

Luther, Martin, 159, 163, 173, 174, 175, 704, 786, 851, 864, 875, 1000, 1197.

....., the Pope convenes a congregation to condemn the propositions of, 10, 15, 16, 28, 51.

....., his works against the Pope and the Church, 11.

....., favoured by the Duke of Saxony, 12.

....., preaches against the authority of the Pope, founding his arguments upon the Gospels, 12.

....., the Duke of Saxony, and other lords, write in his defence to the Pope, 74.

....., the Pope issues a brief, condemning the works and doctrines of; forbidding any one to read them upon pain of excommunication, 116, 180, 181, 182, 183, 198.

Luther, Martin—cont.

....., burnt in effigy, 147.

....., has an understanding with Desiderius Erasmus, 147.

....., excommunicated by the Pope, 149.

....., his followers said to number 40,000,—156.

....., his great repute in Germany, 168, 169, 202.

....., gives the Pope great anxiety, 169.

....., composes a work which the Pope holds in great account, 171.

....., Charles V. and the Electors and Princes of Germany summon him before them, and condemn his works, 191, 199.

....., the protest of Charles against, announcing that he intends to proceed against him as a public heretic, 192.

....., Henry VIII. writes a work against, 195.

....., proceedings of Charles against, 196, 197, 884.

....., said to be imprudent, unchaste, and ignorant of the doctrines of Christianity, 197, 199.

....., his books sold publicly at Worms, 199.

....., Charles orders him to quit Worms, 202, 203.

....., Wolsey publishes in St. Paul's the condemnation of, by the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford; burns his works, and excommunicates him, cursing him and his followers, 208, 210, 213.

....., report of his capture by Hector, a Bohemian, 209, 227, 236.

....., in Saxony, and as popular as ever, 216.

....., his works burnt at Worms, and himself outlawed by Charles, 223, 224.

....., account of the pernicious novel-ties at Wittenberg owing to the errors of, 383.

....., his sect gaining strength in Saxony, 404.

....., his doctrines, 616, 628, 788, 813, 832, 990, 1007.

....., a greater evil to Christendom than the Turk, 616.

....., compared to a monstrosity born in Saxony, 633.

....., Don Ferdinand causes all his works and their printer to be burnt, 675, 699.

....., the Pope appoints nine cardinals for the affairs of, 781.

....., at the Diet of Nuremberg, with the Duke of Saxony, to refute the charges brought against him, 790, 791.

• Luther, Martin—cont.

-, Clement VII. appoints Cardinal Campeggio to manage the affairs of, 794, 795, 796.
-, Clement would make him a cardinal to quiet him, 796.
-, the affairs of, discussed at the Diet of Nuremberg, 798.
-, two preachers preach the doctrines of, at Nuremberg, 816.
-, vastly troubles Clement VII., 824.
-, the title of "Defender of the Faith" given to Henry for having composed a work against, 833.
-, called a prophet by his sect, 840.
-, sermon preached in Venice against, 844.
-, his faction very great in Germany, 849, 863.
-, formation of a confederacy headed by the Duke of Saxony in favour of, 881.
-, Don Ferdinand's proceedings against, 883, 889, 891.
-, Charles says he will perhaps some day become a man of worth, 920.
-, great disturbances in Germany caused through, 938, 944, 955, 994, 1006.
-, the five letters of his name said to signify Lux vera totius ecclesie Romanæ, 1006.
-, his whole faith said to consist in loving God above all things, and one's neighbour as one's self, 1086.
-, his work entitled "De Libertate Christiana," 1086.
-, books printed at Wurtemberg against the works of, 1098, 1174.
-, writes a work against the insurgent peasants of Germany, 1153.
-, the Swiss cantons opposed to, 1252.
- Lutherans, the, 675, 813, 847, 883, 928, 936, 1007, 1049.
-, their proceedings, 628.
-, favoured by the King and Queen of Hungary, 790, 791.
-, the Silesians side with, 791.
-, depose a bishop in Silesia, and appoint one of their own sect in his stead, 790, 791, 798.
-, expelled from Silesia by the King of Hungary, 807.
-, making great progress, 816.
-, favoured publicly by the Duke of Saxony only, 818.
-, summon a council in Germany to confute the arguments adduced against the tenets of Luther, which greatly distresses the Pope, 832.

Lutherans, the—cont.

-, burnt, 840, 872, 995.
-, the King of Hungary acts against, 849.
-, style themselves "Defensores Scripturæ Evangelicæ et Libertatis," and muster to the number of 40,000,—907, 944, 967, 976, 994, 1000, 1069.
-, assist the Duke of Wurtemberg to recover his places, 952, 955; re-instate him, 1000.
-, their doctrines preached in all the churches of Germany, 976.
-, in Augsburg, 990.
-, their books sold at the fair of Bolzano, 1000.
-, to the number of 200,000 take up arms against the bishops and nobles of Germany, 1009. See Peasants.
-, in France, 1010.
-, arrested by Cardinal Campeggio, one for marrying, 1019.
-, slain by the Duke of Lorraine and his brother, 1025.
-, their strength in Germany, 1086, 1098.
-, their sect increasing, 1174, 1369, 1404.
-, hostile to the house of Austria, 1197.
-, raging more than ever, 1241.
-, Poles condemned for, 1307.
-, troops mustered in favour of, 1313.
-, influence of the league between England and France upon, 1372.
-, expose Christendom to danger, 1403.
- Lutheranism, 977.
-, the free towns of Germany abet, 813.
-, suppression of, in Venice, 844.
- Luxemburg, French and Imperial troops in the duchy of, 238, 252.
- Lynx's fur, 606.
-, worn by the English Court, 1053.
- Lyons, 130, 150, 161, 331, 438, 457, 467, 482, 484, 486, 742, 751, 811, 913, 997, 1003, 1067, 1008, 1073, 1082, 1084, 1108, 1111, 1126, 1128, 1132, 1139, 1141, 1142, 1143, 1144, 1160, 1173, 1179, 1194, 1246, 1365, 1419.
-, war between England and France proclaimed at, 465.
-, league between England and France (1525) dated at, 1122.
-, English ambassadors at, 1163, 1187.
-, the Regent Louise at, 1194, 1212.
-, letters dated at, 497, 756, 763, 769, 770, 785, 793, 983, 1006, 1032, 1079, 1081, 1123, 1136, 1137, 1197, 1206, 1214, 1219, 1414.
-, Cardinal of, and his dominions, nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
- Lys. See Linck.

M.

Mace, imported into Portugal, 1087.
Mace-bearers, in Henry's service at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 68.
Macers, Francis', at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67.
Macon, Bishop of, 1187.
Madonna de' Miracoli, at Venice, 940.
Madrid, 390 note, 873, 876, 892, 894, 992, 1115, 1119, 1130, 1141.
 Francis I. at, 1093, 1094, 1103, 1187.
 letters dated at, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 908, 910, 911, 914, 915, 916, 917, 922, 939, 943, 948, 956, 958, 959, 960, 962, 963, 966, 969, 970, 971, 977, 986, 987.
Magellan, —, the Discoverer, 556 note.
Magellan's Strait, discovered by Magellan (in 1519), 556 note.
Magnana, La, 203.
Mago, Andrea, senior councillor of the Venetian Senate, 674.
Mainland, Sages for the, of Venice, 386, 422, 528, 716, 1127, 1308.
 Proveditor-General for the, 413.
Majolo, Cyprian, nephew to Pietro Carmeliano, 1488, 1489.
Majorca, 139.
Malacca, disputes between Spain and Portugal concerning, 1074, 1217.
Malatesti, Gio. Batt. de', Mantuan ambassador at Venice, 1343.
Malaure, Mons. de. See Maulevrier, Count de.
Malipiero, Ser Gasparo, Chief of the Ten, 1304.
Malombra, Alvise, Venetian merchant in London, 1464.
Malta, granted by Charles to the Order of Rhodes, 797, 799; Francis advises the Grand Master of Rhodes not to accept it, 824.
Mantellino, the, a horse called, 90.
Mantua, 400, 850, 888, 895, 1125, 1128, 1138, 1426.
 English ambassador at, 1149, 1152.
 letters dated at, 816, 890.
 territory of, 1447.
Mantua, Bishop of, his secretary, letter from, 816.
 Marquis of, Federigo Gonzaga, p. 27, 840, 888.
 his ambassador at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29, p. 43; at Venice, 606, 622, 627, 691, 724, 734, 840, 941, 991, 1042; in Spain, 970, 977, 1038.
 in the pay of the Pope, 328.

Mantua, Marquis of—cont.

....., the Pope appoints him Gonfalonier of the Church, 421.
 letters to, 81, 85, 90, 93, 94, 586, 616, 675, 660, 661, 682, 692, 713, 816, 820, 959, 970, 977, 997, 1074, 1080, 1094, 1130, 1172, 1216, 1245, 1255.
 nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479; in the league between Charles and Venice, 617.
 Charles writes in his favour to Adrian VI., 490.
 presents Henry with falcons, 643.
 his secretary, Battista Abbati, 688.
Mantuan ambassadors, in France, p. 21, 73; in Venice, 511, 596, 699, 1343, 1405; in Spain, 959.
 horses, p. 27, 73, 81.
Manuel, Don Juan, Imperial ambassador at Rome, 545, 878.
 resigns his post of privy councillor to Charles V. on account of advanced age, 893.
 letter from, 491. See also Emanuel.
Marano, Governor of, Count Frangipane, 141.
Marcadello, Bortolomeo, merchant of Venice, 120.
Marchio, Dom., Papal nuncio in England, 778. See Langus.
Marek. See Mark.
Marem, Francesco, Vicar of the Province of St. Antonio, Professor of Theology, letter to, 813.
Margaret, Queen of Scotland, sister of Henry VIII., 393, 28.
 Henry endeavours to get her, and her son, James V., into his own hands, 507; her husband, the Earl of Angus, promises to consign them to Henry, 860.
 proposed marriage to Lewis XII. (A.D. 1514), 1485.
Margaret of Austria, natural daughter of Charles V. See note, 685.
Margaret of Savoy, Archduchess of Austria and Duchess of Burgundy, aunt of Charles V., 41, 455, 461, 651, 764, 973, 974, 1008, 1017, 1057, 1141, 1374.
 at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 31, p. 32, p. 34, 97, 106.
 Frenchmen in Flanders in her service, 185.
 at Charles's court, 248, 275.
 exerts herself to make peace between Charles and Venice, 262.
 Louise of Savoy requests her to mediate for peace between Charles and Francis, 266.

Margaret of Savoy, Archduchess of Austria—
cont.

-, ... , Wolsey's interviews with,
at Bruges, 298, 299, 302, 310, 312.
-, ... , Charles's army in Flanders under the command of, 409.
-, ... , Louise of Savoy presents her with 50 carts of wine, 413.
-, ... , Charles leaves her the government of Flanders while he is in Spain, 439.
-, ... , named as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
-, ... , Princess Mary to be placed in her hands until the consummation of her marriage with Charles, 487, 1058.
-, ... , mustering her Flemish forces, 846.
-, ... , supplies Henry with troops according to the agreement with Charles, 871, 874, 880, 888.
-, ... , enforces the law against the Lutherans most severely, 1007.
-, ... , truce between Henry,
Charles, Francis, Ferdinand, and, 1108, 1132.
-, ... , Charles writes to, 1175.
-, ... , supplies raised by, in Flanders, by Charles's orders, 1190.
-, ... , raising troops against France, 1197.
-, ... , letters from, expected in London, 1218, 1371.
-, ... , Ferdinand writes to, 1433.
-, ... , proposed marriage to
Lewis XII. (A.D. 1514), 1485.
-, ... , courted by the Duke of Suffolk, 1486 note.
-, ... , her ambassadors at the English Court, 467, 663, 748, 1071, 1212, 1381.
- Maria, Señora Doña, daughter of a Spanish count, at the Field of Cloth of Gold,
p. 19.
- Maria Anna, sister to the King of Hungary, proposed marriage with Don Ferdinand 141 ; with Charles V., 143.

Marriages, remarkable,—celebrated or proposed :—

A.D.

1520. Between Mons. Lautree and —, 44.

1520. } the Dauphin of France and Princess Mary of England, 119, 913, 1062, 1525-6. } " 1088, 1096, 1179, 1192.1520. " the son of the Duke of Savoy and the daughter of the King of Portugal, 133." " Don Ferdinand and Maria Anna, sister of the King of Hungary, 141, 143.

" " Charles V. and Maria Anna, sister of the King of Hungary, 143.

1520-5. " Charles V. and Isabella, sister of the King of Portugal, 185, 589, 852, 911, 1008, 1015, 1046, 1048, 1054, 1058, 1074, 1075, 1076, 1078, 1091, 1099, 1132, 1133, 1141, 1187, 1195, 1201, 1203, 1242.

1521. " the King of Hungary and Charles V.'s sister, 208.

" " " and Rénée, sister-in-law of Francis I., 208.

" " " and a daughter of the King of Navarre, 208.

Marignano, 897.

....., Papal and Venetian armies at, 1336, 1352, 1358, 1363......, ... , Imperial infantry driven into, 1348.Marigny, John de Sains, Sieur de, French ambassador in England, 115, 121, 123,
130, 135, 136, 142, 143, 145, 154, 167,
169, 176, 178, 185, 187, 189, 195, 204,
209, 210, 213, 230, 233, 236, 238.

....., ... , his secretary, 185.

Marin, Alvise, Venetian secretary at Milan, letter from, 89......, Hieronimo de, de Busignolo, sent by Sebastian Cabot to Venice, 557, 558,
607, 669, 670.Mariners, Venetian, for the service of Henry,
463.

....., Venetian, in England, 567.

Mark, Robert de la, 212, 220, 305.

....., ... , submits to Francis, 142.

....., ... , threatens Charles with hostilities, 179......, ... , Francis wages war on Charles through, 185, 187, 195......, ... , makes a stir on the borders of Flanders, 198......, ... , Henry complains of Francis aiding, 215......, ... Charles means to punish him as a rebel, 239......, ... , the Imperialists take one of his castles, 252, 280, 293.

....., ... , at peace with Charles, 300, 414.

....., ... , distrusts Francis, 314.

....., ... , Francis assists him, 334 ; and allows his son to raise troops in Paris, 335......, ... , Francis insists that he shall be included in the truce between Charles and Francis, 366, 1133.

....., ... , protected by Francis, 471, 528.

....., ... , his son, married to Madame Fleuranges, 335 note.Marney, Sir Henry, has great authority with Henry, 658.

....., ... , created a Baron, 663.

Marquise, p. 40.

- Mary, Princess, daughter of Henry VIII.—
cont.
 betrothed to Charles V., 215, 274, 283, 302, 323, 332, 409, 413, 415, 452, 852, 902, 1021, 1046, 1054, 1059, 1061, 1074, 1089, 1097, 1102, 1119, 1132, 1175.
 to be placed in the care of Lady Margaret till the consummation of her marriage with Charles, 487, 1058.
 Henry delays sending her to Charles, 1013.
 her proposed marriage with James V., 911, 1048, 1075, 1078, 1192.
 Charles requires her to be sent to Spain, 1057.
 Charles to refund the dower of, 1172.
 proposed marriage with the Duke of Orleans, second son of Francis I., 1297, 1339, 1371, 1372.
 proposed marriage with Francis I., 1406, 1418, 1433, 1435, 1455, 1456, 1457, 1458, 1459.
 Marzelo, Donatus, C.C.X., his signature, 453.
 Masquerades, held at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 90, 93.
 at the Court of Henry VIII., 1273.
 at the French Court, 1292.
 Masquers, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 26, p. 30.
 Mass, performed in the Lutheran fashion, 1174.
 Massario, Francesco, Venetian secretary, his report on Hungary, 788 note.
 Masters of the Flanders Galleys, 465, 474, 484, 498, 506, 514, 515, 517, 567, 584, 637, 656.
 Mastiffs, given by Henry VIII. to the Marquis of Mantua, 1255.
 Maulevrier, Count de (Mons. de Malaure), Seneschal of Normandy, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43.
 Maurienne, Bishop of, created a Cardinal, 1030.
 Maximilian, Emperor of Germany, 19, 111, 319 note, 404, 429, 447, 455, 460, 482, 619.
 his jewels, 392.
 Francis' proposition to divide Italy with, 752.
 his niece, Eleanor of Castile, 1485.
 his negotiations with France (A.D. 1516), 1487.
 Mayence, Bishop of, vituperated by the Lutherans, 199.
 Cardinal of, 209.
 Dean of, 209.
 Mayence, 1007.
 letters dated at, 228, 999.
 Mecklin, 248, 420, 461, 1007, 1008.
 letter dated at, 764.
 President of, Flemish ambassador to England, 1037.
 Medici, Giovanni (Janin) de', 436, 897.
 captain of the Black Bands, 1426, 1436.
 Ippolito de', son of Juliano, his proposed marriage with a natural daughter of Charles V., 916.
 Juliano de', the Magnifico, brother of Leo X., 1485.
 claims Cyprus, 1486.
 Julius de', Cardinal, 259, 464, 468, 520, 713; administrator of the see of Worcester, 240 note.
 prime minister of Leo X., 294 note. candidate for the Popedom, 376, 377.
 his agent at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 80.
 with the Florentine Republic, nominated as confederate in the treaty between Henry and Charles, 479.
 Protector of the Order of Rhodes, 545. elected Pope under the title of Clement VII., 776 note, q. v.
 Lorenzino de', his son, proposed marriage with Charlotte, daughter of Francis I., 897. See Urbino.
 Dom Rafael de', at Rome, 203.
 Medina, 681, 693.
 Mediterranean, the, 1008.
 Turkish and other pirates in the, 656.
 Melancthon, Philip, of Zurich, a funeral oration by, on the death of the Duke of Saxony, 1153.
 Meleun (Melanon), Mons. de, one of the French hostages in England, 188.
 Meliano, Paolo, merchant of Venice, 120.
 Memo, Silvestro, of the Venetian Senate, 258, 386, 576, 581.
 Cà, the Crutched friar of, a musician, patronised by Henry VIII., 1189.
 Memorantin, Mons. de, senior, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84.
 Mendicant, Order of the Friars, 788. congregation of all the generals of the, appointed to condemn Luther's doctrines, 12.
 Mendoza, Don Iñigo de, ambassador from the Emperor to England, 1356, 1371, 1374, 1403.
 detained in France, 1381, 1422, 1450.
 Mentz, Elector of, see Brandenburg, Marquis of.
 Meravile, Giovanni, merchant of Venice, 120.
 Merchandise, carried by the Flanders galleys, 419, 433, 444, 463, 484, 583.
 Henry lays an embargo on, belonging to Venetians in England, 474, 483.
 Henry refuses to allow Venetians to export, from England, 495, 522; rescinds the order, 593.
 Henry lays a fresh duty on all, in England, 562.
 to be imported from Venice to the places newly discovered by Cabot, 607.

Merchandise— cont.

....., taken from an English ship by the French, belonging to Venetians, 632.

....., Flanders galleys forbidden to carry, belonging to the Florentines and Genoese, from England, 637.

....., Genoese, proclamation of Richard III. respecting, 1472.

Merchant service, dimensions of Venetian galleys destined for the, 30.

Merchants, Imperial, 130.

....., diet in Flanders held for the disputes concerning, 272.

....., English, 440, 441, 1093.

....., French, 1093.

....., German, tainted with Lutheranism, 813.

....., Spanish, 703.

....., Venetian, 1022.

....., ..., in Turkey, 441.

....., ..., in Spain, 470.

....., ..., trading with and in England, 351, 419, 444, 463, 465, 474, 506, 507, 514, 517, 567, 584, 593, 608, 632, 644, 656, 732, 801, 877, 974, 1016, 1037, 1163, 1218.

....., ..., detained in Brittany, 645.

Mesa, Bernard de, Bishop of Elna, of Tripoli, of Badajoz, Imperial resident ambassador at the English Court, 6, 34, 123, 135, 136, 151, 178, 213, 255, 263, 467, 567 (?), 570 (?).

....., ..., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.

....., ..., called Bishop di Monte, 130.

....., ..., ill, 143.

....., ..., with Wolsey at Calais, by order of Charles, 272, 319, 320.

....., ..., his see of Badajoz saddled with a pension for Wolsey, 651.

....., ..., quits England, 668, 672.

....., ..., dies, 668 note.

Mesancourt, castle of, taken by Charles, 323.

Messina, frequented by the Flanders galleys, 139.

....., Zenone, Bishop of, canonization of, said to have performed more miracles than Christ, 173.

Meuse, the river, 293.

Mexico (Tenuchtitlan, its ancient name), surrenders to Charles V. (13 August 1521), 556 note.

....., kings of the parts of, present Charles with gold, 589, 992.

Mézières, Mons. de, sent by Francis to assist Robert de la Mark, 300, 305, 314.

....., ..., called Mons. Naxares, 314.

Michael, Jacobus, C.C.X., his signature, 669.

Michiel, Giovanni (temp. 1555), 244 note.

....., Marco Antonio, of the Venetian Senate, 581.

Midsummer watch, setting of the, in London, description of, 244.

Milan, city and duchy of, 73, 225, 278, 365, 366, 401, 436, 438, 467, 486, 637, 651, 662, 729, 742, 753, 767, 780, 782, 803, 804, 878, 890, 897, 920, 935, 978, 1024, 1041, 1050, 1070, 1104, 1135, 1138, 1140, 1179, 1198, 1382.

....., Charles to have, in the agreement between Charles and Francis, 87.

....., Francis going to his State of, 142, 143, 150, 160.

....., Charles invades, by means of the Milanese exiles, 256, 280.

....., Leo X. seeks to deprive Francis of, 321.

....., Francis omits to do homage to Charles for, 323.

....., Francis acquaints Henry of the occurrences at, 373.

....., Francis claims, in the agreement between Charles and himself, 414, 423.

....., an Imperial "chamber," 422.

....., recovered by Charles, 439.

....., Francis willing to cede it to Charles, 510, 765.

....., Henry and Charles desire Venice to ask Francis to deliver the fortresses of, to the Duke of Milan, 536.

....., Francis endeavours to recover, 572.

....., Charles refuses to give it to Don Ferdinand, 589.

....., Francis proposes that Charles concede it to Francis' youngest son, 879.

....., Francis recovers, 899, 900.

....., the Viceroy of Naples proposes to place the investiture of, in the hands of the Pope, 916.

....., Francis is willing to renounce to Charles his pretended rights in, 1029, 1123.

....., an English ambassador passes through, 1148.

....., another Duke to be placed in, 1158.

....., Charles's army enters the duchy of, 1161, 1163.

....., siege of the castle of, 1164, 1169, 1171, 1175, 1183, 1185, 1191, 1242, 1249, 1270, 1272, 1280, 1281, 1286, 1287, 1305, 1306, 1311, 1327, 1332, 1357, 1358.

....., lands in the duchy of, to be given to Henry and Wolsey, 1184, 1186, 1315, 1347, 1363, 1366, 1392.

....., death of the Marquis of Pescara at, 1187.

....., lansquenets in, 1206.

....., interest of the Dauphin in the duchy of, 1220.

....., the Imperialists perplexed about, 1241.

....., coveted by Archduke Ferdinand, 1241.

....., Bourbon to be Duke of, 1265.

....., Papal and Venetian armies advance to, 1333, 1336, 1348.

....., arrival of Moncada at, 1349.

Milan, city and duchy of—cont.

-, surrenders to the Imperialists, 1368, 1371, 1388.
-, cannot furnish the amount claimed by Henry, 1389.
-, French, Venetian, and Swiss troops march upon, 1392, 1396, 1412, 1424, 1425.
-, the duchy of, to be placed in Henry's hands, 1427, 1438, 1446, 1457.
-, letters dated at, 831, 989, 1001, 1012, 1013, 1017, 1026, 1031, 1034, 1036, 1043, 1046, 1058, 1075, 1090, 1095, 1108, 1109, 1144, 1317.
-, royal senator of, Pietro Montemerlo, 88.
-, Venetian secretary at, Alvise Marin, 89.
-, letter to a doctor at, 1089.
- Milan, Francesco Sforza, Duke of, 392, 395, 401, 735, 1229.
-, Francis objects to his being included in the league between himself and Charles, 465.
-, league between the Pope, Henry, Charles, Venice, and, 475, 714, 716, 734.
-, nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
-, negotiations for re-instating him in his duchy of Milan, 536, 857.
-, his proposed marriage with Eleanor, widow of the King of Portugal, 589.
-, his proposals to Charles, 819.
-, proposed marriage with a relation of Francis, receiving the duchy of Milan as dower, 837.
-, Charles said to intend to deprive him of his duchy, 865.
-, gives Chancellor Gattinara an estate, 878.
-, castles and estates held by Francis under, 879.
-, touching his investiture of the duchy of Milan, 893, 900.
-, Henry aids him against the French, 925.
-, Henry considers that he should retain his duchy, 945.
-, sends the news of the battle of Pavia to Henry, 994.
-, wants to marry Renée, sister-in-law of Francis, 1065.
-, Charles invests him with the duchy of Milan, 1069.
-, league between the Pope, Henry, Charles, Francis, Venice, and, 1070.
-, suffers from a fever, 1085, 1104, 1107, 1109, 1114, 1128, 1135, 1138, 1145, 1146, 1155, 1162, 1217.

Milan, Francesco Sforza, Duke of—cont.

-, the Pope and Venice negotiating with, 1099, 1101.
-, Henry does much to place him in his duchy, 1100.
-, to marry a relation of Francis, and to pay a pension of 13,000 crowns to the Switzers, 1123.
-, to be maintained in his territory, 1157, 1186, 1201, 1226, 1272.
-, besieged in Milan by the Imperial army, 1164, 1175, 1183, 1185, 1206.
-, head of the Italian movement against Charles, 1176.
-, named in the league between England and France, 1202.
-, a party to the Holy League, 1257, 1289, 1290, 1309, 1312, 1343, 1391, 1416.
-, unable to maintain himself, 1286.
-, Charles demands money from, 1324.
-, surrenders the castle of Milan to the Imperialists, 1368.
-, goes to Como, 1373.
-, to be restored to his duchy, 1403, 1450, 1454.
-, to reside in Cremona, 1424.
-, included in the general peace, 1441.
-, letters to, 1003, 1478 (A.D. 1496.)
-, to pay Henry what he owes him, 1444.
-, his ambassador in England, 663, 843, 874.
-, in Venice, Taverna, 723, 724, 734, 853, 869, 874, 942, 991, 998, 1042, 1317, 1343, 1405, 1411.
-, in Spain, 843, 865, 878, 879, 885, 893, 900, 1038.
-, with the Switzers, 1043.
-, Venetian ambassador with, 736, 738, 821, 912, 940.
- Milanese, a, ambassador from the Emperor Maximilian in London, 1485.
- fashions, 90.
- emigrants, in Venice, 940, 942.
- outlaws, 1084.
- Milanese, the, 176, 266, 312, 800, 819, 837, 879, 882, 1135, 1487.
-, touching the expulsion of the French from, 196 note, 365.
-, the Switzers promise Francis not to molest, 225.
-, Leo acts against Francis in, 268.
-, exiles in, stirred up by Charles against Francis, 272, 280.
-, Papal and Spanish forces in, 369.

- Milanese, the—cont.
, Charles's army in, 387.
, lost by the French, 395, 489.
, the French hold three fortresses in, 510.
, Francis prepares to recover, 605, 639, 742, 751.
, Henry's aid for the defence of, 614.
, Venice gives aid to Charles for the defence of, 625, 762.
 to be surrendered to Francis in his proposed agreement with Charles, 767.
, Francis' army retires from, 826.
, Imperial affairs in, 897.
, occupied by Francis, 935, 937, 939.
, Charles's army again in, 1050, 1085; under the command of the Marquis of Pescara, 1058; reinforced, 1107.
, the Duke of Milan willing to join the league between Charles and Francis provided they let him hold, 1065.
, invaded by the Imperial army, 1146, 1164, 1165, 1185, 1187, 1358.
, Henry demands tribute from, 1158.
, Louise of Savoy demands tribute from, 1160.
, impositions on, by the Imperialists, 1171.
, to be released by the allied forces, 1186.
, Charles wishes to be master of, 1190.
, the Pope to withdraw his troops from, 1201.
, to be retained by the present Duke, 1201, 1217.
, to be given to Bourbon, 1226.
, to be attacked by the Switzers, 1236.
, Charles to remove his troops from, 1272, 1305, 1335.
, the Duke unable to maintain himself in, 1286.
, territory in, demanded by Henry, 1307, 1324, 1349, 1381, 1390.
, to be given by the Pope to Francis, 1396.
Minio, Marco, Venetian ambassador at Rome, letters from, 5, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 26, 48.
, Venetian ambassador to Sultan Solyman, 141, 1424.
, Governor of Candia, 441.
Minor Friars, the, of Venice, 1342.
Mint, of England, calls in all Venetian pence, 135.
, of Venice, 719.
Miranda, Count of, 956.
Mirandola, La, taken under the protection of Leo X., 82.
Mirlot, Duke. See Dorset, Marquis of.
Mocaron, a gentleman of Charles's chamber, 880.
Mocenigo ducat, a carbuncle called the, 81.
Mocenigo, Alvise, one of the three Venetian commissioners, to negotiate with the English and Imperial ambassadors an agreement between Charles and Venice, 684, 697.
, Andrea, LL.D., 1208.
, Andrea, son of Lazzaro (A.D. 1455), 1461, 1462.
, Lunardo, of the Venetian Senate, 482.
, Piero, letter from, 1149.
Modena, 1427.
, Francis promises to restore it to Leo, 253.
, Charles pawns it to the Pope, 800.
Modenese warder, a, Tarabin, attendant on Henry VIII., 1255.
Mohatz, battle of, 1409.
Molin, Andrea Nicolo de, merchant of Venice, 120.
, Andrea, of Venice, 1483.
, Ferigo, Sage for the Mainland, 528.
, Hironimo da, Venetian consul in England, 133.
, in England, without office, 311, 561; returns to Venice, 830.
Moluccas, the, discovered by Cortes, spices of every description grown in, 556.
, Francis and Charles send vessels to bring spices from, 612.
, disputes between Charles and the King of Portugal concerning the possession of, 635, 1074. See Spice Islands.
Moncada, Don Ugo de, in the service of Charles V., 425, 436, 1306.
, sent to Francis, 1029, 1198.
, Charles sends him to meet the Duchess of Alençon at Valencia, 1099.
, sent by Charles to Milan, 1317, 1349; to the Pope, 1326.
, united with the Colonna faction against the Pope, 1412.
Monfort, Marquis of. See Dorset, Marquis of, 1025.
Monleon, taken by the Imperial army, 793.
Monon, in France, taken by the English army, 769.
Mons, 343.
, letters dated at, 344, 345, 346.
Mont de Marsan, letter dated at, 1236.
, English ambassadors at, 1243.
Montagni, Mons. de, Count of Hoochstrate, in the service of Charles, 366.
, exerts himself to make peace between Charles and Francis, 262.
Montdidier, taken by the English, 769, 782.
Monte, Cardinal St. Prazed called De, letter to, 623.
, Bishop di. See Mesa, Bernard de.
Monte Novo, procurators of St. Mark's, superintendents of the, 148.

Montemerlo, Magnifico Pietro, Royal Senator of Milan, letters to, 68, 84, 88.

Monte Rosolo, 20 miles from Rome, 926.

Montferrat, 1050.

....., Marquis of, nominated as confederate in the treaty of Windsor, 479; in the league between England and France, 1122.

Montfort, a Burgundian gentleman, 743.

Montibus, Cardinal de, Clement VII. appoints him cardinal for the affairs of Denmark, 781.

Montmorency, Anne de, marshal of France, 115 note.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 31, 84.

....., French ambassador at Venice, 499.

....., French ambassador with Charles, 1066.

....., stipulates a truce between Francis and Charles, 1069.

....., negotiating an agreement between Francis and Charles, 1080.

....., with Charles, 1112, 1116.

....., returns from Spain to France, 1214, 1219.

....., Lord Steward of France, 1245, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1285.

....., Francis de, Siegneur de Rochefort, brother of the Marshal, French ambassador in England, 115, 125, 126, 130.

....., bearer of presents for Princess Mary and Wolsey, from Francis, 130.

....., satisfied with Henry, 131.

....., called Mons. Remorantino, 146.

Montpellier, 752, 839.

Montpésat, Anthony des Prez, Sieur de, one of the French hostages in England, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23.

....., his sweetheart, Anne Brown, p. 23.

....., French ambassador in England, 227.

....., called Païton, 233, 237; called Poisam, 235.

....., sent to substantiate to Henry Francis' charges against Charles, 235.

....., returns to France, 237, 243.

....., again in England, 263.

....., returns to France, 268.

Montreuil, 58.

....., taken by the English, 769.

....., letter dated at, 56.

Monza, taken by the Venetians, 1363.

Moorish fashions of dress, assumed by Charles's Court, 416.

..... galley fustes, taken by the French, 957.

Moors, Clement VII. wishes for a Christian expedition against the, 824.

More, the, in Herts, letters dated at, 88 note, 874 note, 1181.

....., a place belonging to Wolsey, 1150.

More, Sir Thos., councillor of Henry VIII., 34.

....., accompanies Wolsey to Calais, 272.

....., very learned, 302, 899, 1037.

....., in great favour with Henry and Wolsey, 1037.

....., ambassador to France, 1351.

....., D. Filippo, bishop of five churches, Hungarian ambassador to Silesia, 798.

Morette, Mons. de la, French ambassador to England, 1267, 1270, 1276, 1285, 1297, 1298, 1302, 1305, 1315, 1316, 1321, 1324, 1456.

....., French ambassador to the Switzers, 1408.

Morisini, Alvise, of the Venetian Senate, 581. See also Morosini.

Morlaix in Brittany, taken by the English, 498.

Moro, Gabriel, Knt., of Venice, 924.

....., Santo, LL.D., of the Venetian Senate, 576.

....., Zuan or Giovanni, captain of the Flanders Galleys, 115, 139.

Morone, Don Hieronimo, prime-minister of the Duke of Milan, 812, 1162.

....., arrested by the Marquis of Pescara, 1138, 1140, 1163, 1169, 1185.

....., the Magnifico, at Pavia, 1107.

Morosini, Francesco, LL.D., of the Venetian Senate, 258, 386, 576, 581.

....., Vettor, of St. Paul's, his amity with the Doges of Venice, 606.

Morton, John, Archbishop of Canterbury, letters from (temp. Hen. VII.), 1475, 1476, 1477.

Mota, Pedro Ruiz de la, Bishop of Palencia, remains staunch to Charles, 447 note.

....., vituperates Wolsey's arrogance, 465.

Motta, Domino Aleandro dalla, sent by the Pope for the Lutheran affairs at Worms, 147.

Motte, La, town of, taken by the French, 354.

....., Mons. de la, lieutenant of the Duke of Longueville in the war against Charles, 271.

....., the Frenchman, agent of the Duke of Bourbon, 746, 1195.

....., Mons. de la, a Fleming, taken by the French, 354.

....., envoy from Margaret of Savoy to England, 1197, 1212.

Mouzon, taken by the Imperialists, 293, 319, 322, 323, 324, 330.

....., Governor of, kinsman of the Count of Nassau, surrenders Mouzon to the Imperialists, for which Francis threatens to behead him, 322.

Mozaurcha, a dappled mare called, given by Francis to Henry, 90, 94.
Mudescio, Andrea, caput Consilii X., 557.
Mules, ridden by Wolsey, trappings for, 56, 130.
Munster, Bishop of, nominated as confederate in the treaty of Windsor, 479.
Mus, the warder of, takes ambassadors of the Grisons to Milan, 1135.
Muscovy, Prince of, sends an ambassador to Charles V., 659.
Music, performed at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 83.
 by Perino, performed at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 93.
 performed on the stages at Venice, 738.
Musical instruments, used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23, p. 29, p. 30.
 Henry VIII.'s, 1189 note.
Musicians, bands of, at the setting of the Midsummer watch in London, 244.
Muskets, made for the Turkish army, 1226.
Mussi l'Evêque (Mausi), letters dated at, 205, 207.
Muzarelli, Zuan, and brothers, of Venice, 1460.

N.

Nadal, Messer Stefano de, merchant of Venice, 1007.
Nain, Paulo, Bailiff of Verona, letters to, 889, 891.
Najera, Duke of, 552, 711.
 Abbot of, Imperial ambassador at Rome, 897.
Naples, 10, 155, 320, 452, 523, 765, 797, 897, 920, 1033, 1045, 1048.
 Spanish troops in, 155, 1420.
 arrears of tribute due to Francis from Charles for, 166, 215, 237, 280, 317, 323, 510.
 the Pope and Francis accused of meaning to seize, 176.
 Francis attacks, 178, 239.
 Luther's works prohibited in, 198.
 Leo gives Charles the investiture of, 253.
 Charles pays Francis tribute for, 266, 278, 780, 1333.
 plan for revolutionizing, 438.
 defence of, against France, 625, 684.
 exposed to peril from the Turks, 819.
 French troops march to, 926.
 the Duke of Albany marches into, 960.
 Francis at, 1024.

Naples—cont.

..... Francis willing to renounce his claims to, 1029.
 Clement VII. wants to have, 1113, 1141.
 Italian league for the recovery of, from Charles, 1123.
 Clement VII. wishes to revolutionize, 1157.
 Henry insists on a pension from, were he to join the league, 1158.
 the Pope demands a revenue from, 1270.
 Henry's revenue from, 1289 note, 1315, 1324, 1347, 1349, 1389, 1390.
 Venetian army to be sent into, 1357.
 Wolsey's rental from, 1363, 1389.
 the Pope makes an offer of, to Henry, 1396.
 Duke of Ferrara to be made King of, 1427.
 Ambassador from the King of (A.D. 1489) to Henry VII., 1476.
 to be obtained for the Pope's brother (A.D. 1514), 1485.
 to return to Francis (A.D. 1516), 1487.
 King of, 1486.
 Viceroy of, Charles de Lannoy, 294, 472, 646, 1024, 1265. See Lannoy.
Narbona, Zuam Maria di, page of Peter Carmeliano, 111.
Narbonne, 729, 758, 1067, 1236.
Nassau, Count of, 322, 415, 741, 879, 1088.
 at Charles's Court, 248.
 in command of one of Charles's armies, 305.
 takes the town and castle of Tournai from the French, 372.
 Charles sends him to Antwerp to raise money to pay the gentlemen of the Spanish Court, 425.
Natural History, commentary on, translated from Greek into Latin, and published at Venice, 698.
Naturelli, Dom Philiberto, Provost of Utrecht, his mission to Cambrai, 123, 130, 132, 405, 752.
Nau, county of, 1008.
Navagero, Andrea, Venetian ambassador to Charles V., 1117, 1118, 1317, 1424.
 letters from, 1035, 1038, 1039, 1044, 1047, 1049, 1057, 1063, 1064, 1066, 1069, 1078, 1087, 1088, 1091, 1093, 1099, 1103, 1112, 1115, 1119, 1120, 1129, 1131, 1133, 1154, 1162, 1166, 1167, 1168, 1176, 1177, 1213, 1241, 1259, 1369, 1403, 1422, 1439, 1450.
 letters to, 1124, 1335.
 to demand the release of Francis I., 1150, 1193, 1198, 1324.
 to quit Spain, 1305, 1336.
 to conclude a general peace with the Emperor, 1443.

Navarre, 207, 256.

....., bound to be surrendered to Charles by Francis in the treaty of Noyon, 119.

....., fear that Francis will invade, 130.

....., French expedition against, 190, 228, 274.

....., taken by the French, 212.

....., Francis requires Charles to give it to its rightful owner, 215.

....., Wolsey says Francis will lose France should he recover, 225.

....., the French enter, 229; and retreat from, 239.

....., to be retained by the King of Navarre in the proposed agreement between Charles and Venice, 237.

....., Charles wishes Francis to surrender it before negotiating an agreement with him, 249, 250.

....., Francis' army in, 252.

....., the "affair" of, between Charles and Francis, 257, 266, 305, 317, 323, 335, 528.

....., recovered by Charles, 278, 280.

....., King of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84, 93.

....., going to war with Charles, 179, 185.

....., Francis wages war on Charles through, 195.

....., Francis wishes him to league with the Commons of Spain, 212.

....., Henry complains of the stirrs made by, 215. See Albret.

....., nominated as confederate in the league between England and France, 1122.

....., a daughter of, proposed marriage with the King of Hungary, 208.

....., proposed marriage with Rénée, 1273, 1306.

....., Princesses of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 73.

Navaier, Ser Zuan Alvise, 1330.

Naxeres. See Mézières.

Neapolitan coursers, p. 24, 73, 81, 85.

..... exiles, 278.

Neapolitans, the, 224.

Needle, Variation of the, discovered by Sebastian Cabot, 607 note.

Negroni, Giovanni Ambrogio de' (A.D. 1485), 1473.

....., Tomaso de' (A.D. 1485), 1473.

Nemours, Duke of. See Geneva, Count of,

....., Duchess of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84, 93.

Neufuy (Neufville?), Mons. de, French ambassador in England, 408 note.

Neufville, Mons. de, he and his eldest son killed in an engagement between the English and French, 782.

Nevill, Sir George. See Bergavenny, Lord.

....., George, Archbishop of York (A.D. 1471), letter to, 1465.

....., Isabel, marriage to the Duke of Clarence (A.D. 1460 or 1461), 1467 note.

New Accountants' Office, the, of Venice, 1353.

Newport, 462.

Nicæa, late Cardinal of, MSS. of, desired by Wolsey, 1187, 1219.

Nice, 825.

Nicholas, Angelo Joseph, son of Antonio Surian, 906.

Nicoletto, crier of Venice, 734.

Nicola, Philip, Charles's secretary, collates a copy of the treaty of Windsor with the original, 479.

Nieli (Nolay?), letter dated at, 276.

Nobles of Germany, killed by the Lutheran army, 1327.

Nochi, Manfredo de, a bill broker of London, 1464.

Nogarola, Count Girolamo, a Venetian emigrant, his daughter mistress of Charles V., 685.

Norfolk, Duke of, Royal Lieutenant of England, 268, 272, 663, 1037, 1218.

....., calls the Scotch proud and treacherous, 143.

....., his son Edmond Lord Howard, p. 25.

....., Duchess of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 19.

Normandy, 465, 612, 729, 999.

....., Henry lays claim to, 275.

....., Henry purposes invading, 630.

....., Henry forms a project for the recovery of Guienne, Gascony, and, 969.

....., ships fitted out in, 1187.

....., English troops landed in (A.D. 1514), 1485.

....., Seneschal of, Count de Maulevrier, p. 43.

....., General of (A.D. 1514), Thomas Bohier, in London, 1485.

Northumberland, muster in (A.D. 1496), 1478.

Northumberland, Earl of, his son, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 18.

Norwich, Bishop of (A.D. 1473), 1469.

Nory, Simone, witness to a protest, (A.D. 1455), 1462.

Nottingham, Earl of. See Richmond, Duke of.

Novara, 1085, 1138, 1140.

....., the French retreat upon, 818.

....., Spanish troops in, 1206.

Noyon, treaty of, 119, 195, 260, 323, 767, 1487 note.

Nuncios, Papal, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 15, p. 20, p. 29, 73.

Nuncios, Papal—cont.

-, in France, p. 27.
 at Guisnes with Henry, 71; at Calais with him, 106.
 in England, Ghinucci, q. v.
 with Charles, 134, 209, 216, 248, 463, 470, 472, 486. See also Carracciolo.
 at Worms, acting against the Lutherans, 147. appointed to suppress Lutheranism in Naples, 198.
 with Henry, the Bishop of Astorga, 486, 526.
 to Francis, the Bishop of Bari, 486, 523.
 to Henry, Dom Marchio, 778; Langus, 939, 1212; Gambara, 1254.
 to Charles, Baldassar Castiglione, 956, 1099, 1176, 1403.
 to the Regent of France, Chiapin, 1100, 1243, 1256, 1323. in England, (A.D. 1514), Caraffa, 1485 note.
Nuremberg, 628.
 Luther preaches at, 11.
 Imperial Diet at, attended by Luther and the Duke of Saxony to refute the charges against them, 790, 791, 944.
 the Pope sends Cardinal Campeggio to the Diet at, for the affairs of Luther, 794, 796, 813.
 purposes for which the Diet assembled, 798.
 asylum for all converts to Lutheranism, 813.
 two Lutheran churches and preachers at, 816.
 Lutheranism at, 817, 1086, 1153.
 letters dated at, 616, 813.
Nutmegs, 1087.
 imported into Spain from the Indies, 556.

O.

- Oarsmen of the Flanders Galleys, 517, 555, 618.
Observantine Friars, congregation of learned, convened for suppressing the heresies of Martin Luther, 11.
Observantine Hermits, Order of the, 175.
Oecolampadius, Joannes, a Lutheran, 1153; going to Raden, 1296.
Ofen, letters dated at, 807, 849, 851.
Oilcloth, painted, used for decorating, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 83.
Okying, letter dated at, 749.
Olachai. See Eastlanders.
Old Accountants' Office, the, of Venice, 1207.

- Olivel, Mons. di, ambassador of Louise of Savoy to England, for the affairs of Scotland, 151.
Orange, Prince of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 17. attends upon Charles V. in England, 463.
 at Charles's court, 702.
Oratories, erected at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.
Orazio . . . , letter from, to the Duke of Urbino, 472.
Orders, Generals of the, state their objections to the doctrines of Luther, 28.
Ordinance, Master of the, of England, 671.
Organ, a silver, ornamented with gold, in Henry's house at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 83, 88.
 mass performed at the Field of Cloth of Gold, accompanied by trombones, cornets, and an, 93.
 played by Zuan da Léze, before Henry, 1188, 1189.
Orio, Lorenzo, LL.D., and knight, Venetian ambassador in England, 950, 953, 954, 961, 964, 965, 968, 973, 980, 988, 1031, 1056, 1060, 1124, 1145, 1160, 1164, 1170, 1180, 1186, 1188, 1189, 1248, 1251, 1277, 1318, 1431. his commission, 974; power given him to stipulate a perpetual general league, 1257.
 letters from, 979, 981, 984, 990, 999, 1008, 1016, 1025, 1037, 1052, 1053, 1061, 1062, 1067, 1073, 1083, 1096, 1097, 1105, 1106, 1110, 1111, 1113, 1116, 1141, 1150, 1151, 1159, 1163, 1169, 1175, 1187, 1193, 1195, 1197, 1201, 1203, 1212, 1218, 1219, 1220, 1223, 1224, 1227, 1230, 1231, 1235, 1238, 1254, 1258, 1262, 1296.
 letters to, 975, 1024, 1041, 1050, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1085, 1100, 1101, 1104, 1107, 1114, 1118, 1128, 1135, 1138, 1140, 1146, 1155, 1161, 1165, 1171, 1183, 1184, 1185, 1190, 1198, 1206, 1214, 1226, 1229, 1233, 1242, 1249, 1256, 1263, 1274, 1279, 1280, 1286, 1287, 1288.
 death of, in England, 1275, 1294, 1299, 1303, 1304, 1305, 1309, 1311, 1314, 1378.
Orlando Furioso, Ariosto's, published at Ferrara (in 1516), 81.
Orlando Innamorato, Bojardo's, printed at Scandiano (between 1495 and 1499), 81.
Orleans, Duke of, 2nd son of Francis I., Wolsey intends marrying the Princess Mary to, 1297, 1339, 1371, 1372.
 to reside in England, in order to become popular there, 1297.
 hostage for his father in Spain, 1298, 1342, 1349, 1403, 1421, 1450, 1457. portrait of, presented to Henry VIII., 1451.

Orsini, Cardinal, his son, 161.
 Orval, Mons. di, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84.
 Osma, Bishop of, President of the Council of the Indies, Charles's confessor, 1047.
 Otranto, port of, 139, 438 note.
 Ottobiano, letter dated from the camp of, 812.
 Ottolengo, sacked by the Spaniards, 351.
 Oudenarde, letters dated at, 356, 360, 364, 365, 366, 367, 372, 375, 390.
 Outlaws, 697.
, Charles demands of Venice the restitution of the states of the, 1114.
 Oxford, University of, Council of the, condemn the works of Luther, 208.
, Wolsey's College at, who wishes to obtain for it books from Rome and Venice, and copies of Greek MSS. belonging to the late Card. of Nicæa, 1187.
, Wolsey proceeding to, 1374.

P.

Pace, Richard, chief secretary of Henry VIII., 34, 93, 204, 215, 236, 251, 334, 749, 906.
, proclaims plenary indulgence at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.
, ambassador to Charles, 151.
, Henry sends him to Rome to effect Wolsey's election as Pope, and for other affairs, 379, 384, 392, 459 note, 483, 503 note, 504, 512.
, has great authority with Henry, 392, 475.
, the staunchest partizan of Venice in England, 475; the Signory's treatment of, in consequence, 509, 519, 524.
, goes from Rome to Venice to negotiate an agreement between Charles and Venice, 514, 516, 518, 521, 523, 524, 525.
, Venice pleased that affairs pass through his hands, 519.
, much caressed on his arrival at Venice (Aug. 1522), 527.
, to persuade Venice to declare against Francis in favour of Henry and Charles, 528, 530.
, his negotiations with Venice, 530, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 544, 547, 548, 550, 552, 564, 566, 569, 580, 592, 594, 596, 597, 598, 604, 615, 621, 624, 625, 667, 677, 684, 685, 689, 690, 695, 697, 705, 708, 709, 716, 718, 723, 732.
, the Venetian Senate compliments him upon his learning, and thanks him for his services to the State, 531.
 Pace, Richard—cont.
, indisposed, 551, 652.
, Venice allows him to import wine into Venice for his own use, 559, 587, 610, 611, 626, 706, 707, 933, 934.
, 32 silver tankards stolen from his house, 603.
, absents himself from certain ceremonies to avoid being placed below the French ambassador, 606, 609, 627, 691.
, Venice offers him presents to make peace with Charles advantageously for the State, 620.
, entertainment given in his honour, 622.
, Henry sends him to Milan and then to the Switzers, to persuade them not to join France against Henry and Charles, 637, 651.
, receives letters patent from Henry to settle all disputes between Charles and Venice, 638.
, still at Venice, 647, 654, 656, 666, 674.
, Henry wishes him to return to England, but Wolsey does not choose it, 651.
, his correspondents in England, 658.
, Henry desires him to remain at Venice, 680.
, petitions the Signory to allow Leonico to print his commentaries upon Natural History, 696, 698.
, Venice highly commends him, 712, 715, 717, 719, 720.
, Venice presents him with a gold collar, 719, 728.
, attends mass in St. Mark's church, 723, 1042.
, Venice presents his secretary with 50 ducats, 725, 726.
, quits Venice for Switzerland, 727.
, at Crema, 753.
, at Rome, 762, 802, 819.
, has a mandate from Henry to effect a truce with France, 804.
, says Pope Julius could have expelled the French from Italy, and subsequently the Spaniards could have been expelled, 809.
, calls Henry "most Christian King," 833.
, conveys money to accelerate Bourbon's march into France, 833, 837.
, at Brescia, 835, 886, 887, 898, 896.
, his mission to the Switzers, 857.
, encourages Bourbon against France, 888.

Pace, Richard—cont.

....., suspects Wolsey has a secret understanding with Francis through subornation, by reason of Wolsey's base nature, 888.

....., report concerning, by Antonio Surian, 897.

....., makes use of bushels of bravadoes, 897.

....., said to be too vehement, 899.

....., commissioned to reside at Venice, and to induce Venice to fulfil the promises made on the league with Charles, &c., 918, 935, 937, 940.

....., returns to Venice, 919, 921, 923, 924.

....., stays with Reginald Pole at Padua, 921.

....., renews negotiations with Venice, 925, 929, 931, 932, 962, 1022, 1023, 1037.

....., ambassador at Venice, 942, 972, 978, 985, 1055.

....., ill, 947.

....., Venice commends him to Henry, 974, 1037, 1050.

....., not in great favour with Wolsey, 975.

....., Wolsey's persecution of, (alluded to by Shakespear), 975 note.

....., his relations with Reginald Pole, 991.

....., recruiting his health at Padua, 993.

....., asks for the reversion of a broker's patent in the German warehouse at Venice for a bastard, 1022.

....., Henry tells him to return to England, in spite of letters written in his name to the contrary, 1097.

....., ill, 1105, 1114, 1127, 1128.

....., returns to England, 1127, 1128, 1134, 1169.

....., very ill, 1175; brain affected, 1187.

....., prothonotary Casal takes his place, 1209.

....., letter from, 890.

....., his tutor, Tomeo Nicola Leonico of Venice, 520.

Padilla, Don Juan de, commander of the army of the Junta, put to death, 212.

....., comendador of Castile, 900.

Padua, 184, 727, 923, 924, 968, 993, 1105, 1114, 1128, 1163.

....., letter dated at, 921.

....., Reginald Pole at, 204, 218, 527, 941, 991, 1042 note, 1343, 1405.

....., Captain of, Francesco Donato, 519.

Paduans, the, 941.

Pageants, held at Greenwich, 466.

Paitom and Paiton. See Montpézat.

Palace, Henry and Francis to build a, at Ardres, after the Field of Cloth of Gold, 69, 79.

....., the, at Rome, 159.

Palatine, Count, Louis IV., Elector of Germany, 675.

....., at the interview between Henry and Charles at Calais, p. 18, p. 19, 106.

....., a Lutheran, 813.

....., sends an agent to Charles's Court, 879, 882; seeks his aid in person, and proposes a council to reform the Church, 1273, 1369, 1404.

....., Count Frederick, younger brother of the Elector, proposed marriage with Eleanor, Queen Dowager of Portugal, 902.

Pale, English, in France, p. 21, p. 31, p. 40, 68, 80, 106.

Palencia, 507, 542, 752.

....., letters dated at, 510, 523, 526.

....., Pedro Ruiz de la Mota, Bishop of Imperial Councillor, 254, 339, 344, 346, 375, 377, 385, 391, 401, 402, 411, 415, 433, 445, 460, 557.

....., his conversations with the Venetian ambassador in Spain, 338, 443, 447, 448, 463, 465, 467.

....., expects Leo to give him the red hat, 366.

....., says there are more Frenchmen in Venice than in Paris, 463.

....., loudly vituperates Wolsey's arrogance, 465.

....., says Wolsey is a wonderful man, 465.

....., accompanies Charles to England, 486, 493, 498.

....., dies, 554.

Palermo, 139.

....., Charles promises it to the Pope, 290.

Palfries, white, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 14, p. 17.

Palisse, Mons. de la, 333.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 69.

....., Francis sends him to Calais to meet the English and Imperial commissioners, to settle disputes, 260, 279; Francis recalls him, 314.

Pampeluna, 785, 797.

....., taken by Francis, 212, 229, 233.

....., letters dated at, 766, 767, 768, 771, 776, 779, 780, 792.

Papal ambassador to England, 61, 64. See Ambassadors.

..... camp, 324.

..... army, 351, 358, 1327, 1332, 1336, 1348, 1352, 1363, 1380, 1409, 1412.

..... enter the Milanese, 369.

..... Court, 1455, 1468.

..... States, 1121; league proclaimed throughout the, 1337.

- Paphos, Dom. Giacomo da Pesaro, Bishop of, 374.
 Titian paints his portrait, which is still visible at the church of the Frari, Venice, 1042.
- Papists instigate the Bohemians to march against the Lutherans, 928.
- Pardo, th^e, Charles V. hunts at, 898, 908.
 palace of the, 894.
- Paris, 27, 69, 77, 87, 91, 460, 486, 1008, 1012, 1194, 1268, 1320, 1334, 1365, 1485.
 the English army three leagues from, 777.
 rumours of Henry's intention to march his army into, 999.
 proclamation of peace between England and France at, 1110.
 obsequies of Queen Claude celebrated at, 1437.
 letters dated at, 44, 45, 128, 560, 1436.
 Stephen Poncher, Bishop of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23, 73.
 Parliament of, 219.
 President of, John de Selve, 273 note, 335, 1032, 1069, 1091, 1270, 1272.
- Parker, Charles, of Morley (temp. Eliz.), 946 note.
- Parliament, inauguration of the High Court of, in England, 663.
 the Black, in England, 679.
 of England, Lords and Commons at variance upon marriage of Suffolk to Mary, 1486.
- Parma, 1114.
 Charles promises it to Leo, 253, 290.
 Francis willing to give it to the Pope, 800.
 Spanish forces in, 1050, 1332.
- Pasqualigo, Alvise and Francesco, 1481, 1483.
 Lorenzo, 1481.
- Pasqualigo, Cà, Venice, Sta. Giustina, in, 942.
- Passano, Giovanni Gioachino, originally a Genoese grocer, afterwards Lord of Vaux, Francis sends him to England as ambassador, 859, 860, 888, 918, 939.
 dismissed from England, 989, 1008.
 again in England, 1032, 1060, 1062, 1097, 1141, 1151, 1163, 1169, 1175, 1183, 1187, 1191, 1196, 1197, 1198, 1212, 1219, 1224, 1227, 1231, 1235, 1238, 1242, 1250, 1251, 1254, 1258, 1262, 1269, 1274, 1275, 1278, 1280, 1286, 1294, 1305, 1307, 1314, 1324, 1339, 1383, 1349, 1351, 1378, 1387, 1388, 1395, 1425, 1435, 1452.
 negotiates an agreement between England and France, 1052, 1073, 1083, 1110, 1135.
 his nephew in England, 1137.
 See Joachino.
- Patmos, the isle of, represented at the Setting of the Midsummer Watch in London, 244.
- Patriarch's vicar, of Venice, Octavian Brittonico, 116. See Venice.
- Paul II., Pope, letters from, 1463, 1465, 1466, 1467, 1468.
- Paul IV., Pope (A.D. 1555), 59 note, 1485.
- Pavia, 436, 890, 917 note, 1107, 1108, 1145.
 strongly garrisoned by Prosper Colonna, 753.
 Francis is willing to give it to the Pope, 800.
 the Imperialists raise the siege of, 897.
 battle of, (Feb. 1525) between the Imperialists and French, the latter being routed and Francis I. taken prisoner, 940, 942, 945, 955, 956, 957, 959, 966, 969, 986, 994, 1014, 1135 note, 1285.
 list of great personages killed at, 946.
 Imperial army at, 952, 1138, 1140, 1146, 1206, 1358.
- Pavilions, erected at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22.
- Peachey, Sir John, Captain of Calais, 70, 84.
 despatched to Ireland with instructions for the Earl of Surrey, 204 note.
- Pearl, pendant, worn by the King of Denmark in his cap, 248.
- Pearls, worn at the Field of Cloth of Gold, as ornaments, p. 14, p. 15, p. 16, p. 17.
 imported from the Indies into Spain, 751, 910, 1021, 1272.
- Peasants, German, insurrection of, called the Peasants' War, 979, 980, 990, 1028, 1050, 1069.
 take Ulm and its Bishop, 984.
 the Archduke of Austria negotiates with, 994.
 place all Germany in tumult, 999.
 capture Ghinucci, who has to ransom himself, 1007, 1008.
 take up arms against the Bishops and Nobles, and resolve not to obey the Pope or his ministers, 1009.
 routed by the Duke of Bavaria, 1018, 1020; by the Duke of Lorraine, 1025.
 routed, 1056.
 the Pope sends aid to Don Ferdinand against, 1065.
 battering the Castle of Trent, 1104, 1107, 1134.
 rise to the number of 15,000 in Ferrete, 1118.
 the Bishop of Brixen causes two to be beheaded, &c., 1134.
 Luther's work against, 1153.
 kill 4,000 nobles, 1327.

- Pedro, Don, cousin-german of the Count of Benevento, one of the leaders of the Commons of Spain, beheaded by Charles V., 523.
- Peñalosa, Comendador, Imperial ambassador to England, 996, 997, 1003, 1037, 1047, 1061, 1220. See Spinalosa.
-, ... , urges Henry to attack Francis in person, 1034.
-, ... , Henry refuses his request of a loan for Charles, 1057.
- Pence, Venetian, called in by the English Mint, 135.
- Pensions, demanded by Wolsey of Charles for himself and other English courtiers, 507, 1069.
-, due to Henry from Francis, 1030, 1080, 1129, 1141, 1145, 1168, 1172, 1177, 1314.
- Pepoli, Count Ugo de', 450.
- Pepper, imported into Portugal from the Indies, 1087.
- Perino, his mass performed at the Field of Cloth of Gold, by the English and French choirs, 93.
- Perpignan, 837, 1036.
- Perrenot (Perone), Antoine, Charles V.'s secretary, 1045.
- Persia, Sophy of, 226.
- Perugia, Antonazo of, Constable of the Castle of Trent, 291.
- Pesaro Palace at San Benetto, Venice, 83.
- Pesaro, Augustin da Chà da, of the Venetian Senate, 258, 386, 576, 581.
-, Francesco da Cà da, Podestà, letter from, 921.
-, Hironimo da Cà da, Proveditor-general of Brescia, 392, 413.
-, ... , letters from, 400, 812.
-, Giacomo da. See Paphos, Bishop of.
-, Piero da Cà da, Proveditor-general, 940.
-, ... , Proveditor-general at Verona, letters from, 1143, 1426.
-, ... , marches to Cremona, 1392; at capture of it, 1419, 1420.
-, ... , refuses to go to France, 1304.
-, Pietro da, 1483.
- Pescara, Marquis of, in command of Charles V.'s army in the Milanese, 1024, 1058, 1085, 1128, 1146, 1164, 1172, 1185.
-, ... , confers with Morone at Pavia, 1107; arrests him, 1138.
-, ... , at Vercelli, 1109, 1135.
-, ... , justifies himself to the Duke of Milan for arresting his prime-minister, Morone, 1440; quits Pavia for Milan, 1161.
-, ... , demands the castles of Milan and Cremona, 1170, 1175.
-, ... , death of, 1183, 1187.
- Petonia, 1409.
- Petrucchi, Raffaello. See Sienna, Cardinal of.
- Pews, erected at Canterbury cathedral for the meeting of Henry and Charles, p. 16; at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.
- Pharaoh, King of Egypt, 956.
- Philibert [Naturelli], Dom., Provost of Utrecht, Imperial ambassador with Francis, 752.
-, ... , urges Francis to renounce his alliance with Venice and the Duke of Guelders, 123, 130, 132.
-, ... , Charles sends him to Cambrai, 405.
- Philip the Handsome, King of Spain, 340 note, 946.
-, ... , dispossessed by Pope Boniface, 960.
- Philippe le Hardi (1270-1285), 323.
- Philippine Islands, the, 556 note.
- Philosophy, lecturer in, at Venice, Nicolò da Ponte, LL.D., 576, 581.
- Physician, Charles V.'s, 915.
- Physicians, of Venice, 947.
- Piacenza, 436, 945, 1065, 1426.
-, Charles promises it to Leo, 253, 290.
-, Francis willing to give it to the Pope, 800.
-, Spanish forces in, 1050.
-, Papal army at, 1327.
- Piamonte, Don Ferdinand demands of Venice the restitution of, 641.
- Picardy, 321, 467, 484, 486, 631, 1008, 1046, 1084, 1485.
-, Imperial successes in, 206.
-, French army in, 252.
-, Charles and Francis at war in, 370.
-, Charles and Henry attack, 543, 552, 630, 874.
-, English troops in, 729, 1001, 1012.
-, Governor of, 73. See Chatillon.
-, to be surrendered to Henry in the proposed agreement with Francis, 983.
-, Charles insists on having, 1187.
- Pictures of Francis and his two sons, 1451, 1457.
- Piedmont, Imperial forces in, 1085, 1114, 1128.
-, Francis threatens to send troops into, 1236.
- Piedmontese, 460.
- Pietà [Alcazar?], at Toledo, Charles at the, 1009.
- Pilgrims, Venetian, to the Holy Land, 1042.
- Pilot-Major, Charles V.'s, for voyages of discovery, Sebastian Cabot, 557, 607.
- Pilots, for the Flanders Galleys, 139.
-, banished from Biscay, on pain of being hanged, for piloting the Flanders Galleys, 433.
- Pimentel, Don, Papal nuncio at the Imperial Court, 390 note.
- Pinnace, an English vessel termed a, 498.
- Pioneers, in the service of Charles, offered to Henry, 820.
- Pirates, 860.

- Pirates, French, on the English coast, 1022.
 Pirate vessels of the Turks, and other rovers in the Mediterranean, 656.
 Pisani, Alvise, procurator, 419, 434.
, letter from, 1426.
 Pius IV., Pope, 1463 note.
 Pizaro, or Picaro, a Spanish captain, discovers a large city in the Indies, 1011 and note.
 Pizzamano, Domenico, letter from, to his brother Gregorio, 957.
 Pizzighettone, 956, 1024.
, letters dated at, 869, 871, 874.
, prison at, place of captivity of Francis I., 1419.
 Placards, placed on the doors of churches in England, excommunicating Luther, 213.
 Plague, Luther's heresies called a, 147.
 Plague, the, in London and England, 123, 184, 501, 1073, 1145, 1187, 1193, 1275, 1294.
, raging most violently, 1073, 1096.
, at Rome, 500, 575, 811, 824, 879.
 Planis, Mons. de, French ambassador from Scotland to England, 185, 187, 189.
 Plate, Venice authorizes Pole to import, 218.
, silver, Francis gives Sir Ric. Wyngfeld a costly service of, 224.
, belonging to Venetian ambassadors, 1353, 1354.
 Pleine, Gerard de. See Roche, Sieur de la.
 Pluto, 244.
 Plymouth, letter dated at, 381.
 Po, the river, 143, 527 note, 1140.
, Albany crosses with troops, 897.
, Spaniards cross, 957, 1114.
, the Papal army crosses, 1327, 1332; withdraws, 1412.
 Poillot, Denis, Councillor of the Grand Parliament of Paris, sent by Louise of Savoy to England to settle the disputes with Scotland, 150, 185, 189, 204, 371.
, called Mons. di Olivet, 151; Mons. di Bolivet, 152.
, one of the leaders on the French side at the conference at Calais, 321.
, sent again by Francis to England, 373, 467.
, called President, 465.
, quits England, 478.
 Poinol. See Montpésat.
 Poisam. See Montpésat.
 Poissy, letters dated at, 105, 109, 124, 125, 565, 631, 636, 639, 1440, 1445, 1454, 1455.
 Pola, Altobello Averoldi, Bishop of, Papal Legate at Venice, 180, 183, 520, 521, 530.
, witness to oath of the Duke of Milan in the Holy League, 1411.
 Poland, King of, his conference with Charles V., 141, 143.
, nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
, gives his daughter in marriage to the Grand Master of Prussia, 995, 1009.
, of Lutheran opinions, 1000.
, declines making a truce with the Turk, 1307.
, his ambassador at Venice, 724; at Rome, 641; in Spain, 641.
, sends an envoy to Henry, on account of certain Poles who had been condemned for Lutheranism, 1307.
 Polani, Hironimo, LL.D., of the Venetian Senate, 258, 386, 576, 581, 1330.
 Pole, Reginald, nephew of Henry VIII., afterwards Cardinal Pole, studying at Padua, 184, 204, 218, 519 note, 527 note, 921, 924, 941, 1042, 1343.
, called the White Rose, by mistake, 991.
, visited by Prothonotary Casal, 1405.
, Richard De la, Earl of Suffolk, called the White Rose, has an understanding with the Duke of Albany, 130.
, harboured by Francis, 528.
, Francis sends him with troops to act against England, 631, 639, 676, 678, 742.
, Francis means to place him on the throne of England, 640.
, killed at the battle of Pavia, 946.
 Polish ambassador, the, at Rome, 545; to England, 1307.
 Ponte, Giacomo di, of Genoa, 1481.
, Nicolò da, LL.D., of the Venetian Senate, 258, 386, 576.
 Pontremolo, writer in the Ten offices, Venice, 149.
 Pope, the. See Leo X.; Adrian VI.; Clement VII.; Innocent VIII.; Julius II.; Paul II.; Paul IV.; Pius IV.; Sixtus IV.
, election of, after the death of Leo, 379, 382, 403.
, Henry endeavours to effect Wolsey's election as, 384.
 Porcupines, the emblems of Lewis XII. of France, 84.
 Pordenone, Don Ferdinand demands the restitution of, from Venice, 641.
 "Porta Zobia," castle of, the Duke of Milan besieged in, 1411.
 Porte, the Turkish, 1209.
 Portofino, 1041.
 Portraits, 1451, 1457.
 Portsmouth, the Flanders Gallies at, 391.
, Henry inspects his fleet at, 643.

- Portugal, 135, 836, 838, 992, 1008, 1015, 1087, 1133, 1189.
-, ambassador of, to Charles, 589, 635, 805, 843 ; at Rome, 641.
-, ambassador of, to Francis, misbehaves himself, 1243, 1245.
-, fortresses and fleets of, 607.
-, Emmanuel, King of, 589, 902 ; his widow. See Eleanor.
-, John, King of, 556, 607.
-, ... marries his daughter to the son of the Duke of Savoy, 133.
-, ... his daughter's proposed marriage with Charles, 185.
-, ... nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
-, ... his step-mother Eleanor with child by him, 613, 680.
-, ... his proposed marriage with Eleanor, his step-mother, 630.
-, ... disputes between Charles and, as to the possession of the Moluccas and Spice Islands, 635, 805, 1074.
-, ... his marriage with Katharine, sister of Charles, 843, 876, 908, 910.
-, ... sends a fleet to the Spice Islands, 843, 1217.
-, ... Charles's negotiations with, 1046.
-, ... nominated as confederate in the treaty between England and France, 1122.
-, ... his sister, married to Charles, 852, 1187, 1197, 1242. See also Isabella.
-, Queen Dowager of. See Eleanor.
- Portuguese, the, 556, 1021, 1243.
- Possonia, in Hungary, letters dated at, 790, 798.
- Post-horses, 57.
- Postmaster, the Imperial, 331, 456.
-, ... at Bruges, 836.
- Postmaster, the, of England, Brian Tuke (?), 339.
-, at Dover, 462.
-, at Windsor, 484.
- Postoina, belonging to Charles, 448, 458.
- Pozo, Maria da, letter from, 796.
- Praet, Louis de, Imperial resident ambassador at the English Court, 567, 570, 571, 739, 820, 871, 874, 987, 1061.
-, ... Wolsey desires him to write no more letters to Charles, without first showing them to him, 986.
-, ... arrested by Henry for money due from Charles, 1032.
- Prague, diet of, 616.
- Preaching in England, false apostolic letters obtained for (A.D. 1489), 1474.
- Precedence, question of, between English and French ambassadors at Venice, 606 ; 609, 627, 691, 724 ; the Imperial and French ambassadors at Venice, 627.
- Prelates, English and French, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, Wolsey gives them a banquet, p. 27.
- Priests, married in Silesia, 807.
- Primolano, 1134.
- Print, a Venetian licence to, 696, 698.
- Printer, the, of Luther's works, burnt by Don Ferdinand, 699.
- Prior, Grand. See Docwra, Sir Thos.
- Priuli, Andrea di, LL.D., of the Venetian Senate, 258, 386, 576, 581.
-, Francesco (temp. 1606), 809 note.
-, Lorenzo di, knight, 258, 386, 576, 1205, 1208.
-, ... elected as Venetian ambassador to England, 581, 588, 630.
-, ... Venetian ambassador with Charles, letters from, 1035, 1038, 1039, 1044, 1047, 1049, 1057, 1063, 1064, 1066, 1069, 1078, 1087, 1088, 1091.
-, Vincenzo, captain of the Flanders Gallies, 391, 394, 408, 431, 433, 438, 443, 444, 446, 450.
-, ... letters from, 424 ; to his brothers Hironimo and Francesco, 381.
-, ... letters to, 412, 419, 506.
-, ... detained in England by Henry, 457, 463, 474, 484, 486, 498, 502, 515, 657.
- Privy Councillors, Imperial and English, 466, 1478 ii.
- Proclamation, calling in Venetian pence to the English mint, 135.
- Procurator's office, at Venice, 46.
- Property tax, Henry demands a universal, which causes an insurrection against Cardinal Wolsey, 1025.
- Prophecy concerning Charles V. (in 1519), 852 note.
- Prophets, represented at the Setting of the Midsummer Watch in London, 244.
- Proveditor di Comun, of Venice, the, 576.
- Proveditors, Venetian, 23, 753, 909, 940, 1310, 1317, 1420, 1426.
- Provence, 631, 811, 824, 825, 834, 858.
-, the Duke of Albany's estates in, 221.
-, the Duke of Bourbon's expedition into, 879, 897.
-, towns taken in, by the Duke of Bourbon, 888.
-, to be surrendered to Henry in the proposed agreement between England and France, 983.
-, the Duke of Bourbon to have, 1008.
-, the Duke of Bourbon's claims on, 1029.
-, French ships destined for, 1187, 1225.
-, English ships destined for, 1225.

Prussia, Grand Master of, 995.

....., renounces the Teutonic Order and marries the daughter of the King of Poland, taking the State of Prussia as dower, 1000, 1009. See also Brandenburg, Duke of.

Puglia, 646, 697.

Pulignano, port of, 438 note.

Pusterla, D. Pietro, the people's general against the Imperialists at Milan, 1327.

Pyrenees, Imperial troops cross the, 787.

Q.

Querini, Rev. Santo, letter to, 868.

....., Hironimo, 1330.

Quiñones, General of the Franciscans, 1139.

Quinquennial truce, the, between Charles and Venice, 19, 29, 330, 467, 469.

Quirini's report on England (in 1506), 232 note.

Quirini, Vincenzo, Venetian ambassador, 878 note.

R.

Rabata, Nicolò de, of Firenze (A.D. 1455), 1463.

Ragusa, 200, 272, 350.

....., natives of, 557, 558, 607, 669.

....., ships of, 1163.

Ragusans, the, 644.

Rasse, Calle delle, Cà Dandolo in the, Venice, 527, 941.

Rebels, Venetian, 625, 684. See Emigrants and Exiles.

....., English, favoured and harboured by France, 528.

Red Sea, the, 607.

Reggio, Charles promises to restore it to Leo, 253, 1185, 1427.

....., attacked by the French, 254, 268.

Remorantino. See Montmorency.

Rénée, sister-in-law of Francis, proposed in marriage to the King of Hungary, 208.

....., called Maria Zenevre, 208.

....., proposed in marriage to the Duke of Bourbon, 1029.

....., married (in 1528) to Hercules of Este, son of Alfonso Duke of Ferrara, 1029 and note.

....., proposed in marriage to the Duke of Milan, 1065.

....., proposed in marriage to the King of Navarre, 1273, 1306.

Renier, Daniel di, member of the Junta of the Council of Ten, 604.

Renzo, Signor, French ambassador at Venice, 667.

Revenues, Henry obtains a sixth of all the, of England, 1007.

Rheims, 337.

Rhenish guilders, 110, 803.

..... territory, French troops invade (A.D. 1514), 1485.

Rhine, Count Palatine of the, p. 18.

Rhodes, 206, 516, 545, 557.

....., Henry succours, 99.

....., attacked by Sultan Solymán, 523, 530, 531; taken by him (Dec. 1522), 646, 659, 685.

....., the Pope consults about the succours for, 545.

....., Charles's demands of, for Malta and Tripoli, 797, 799.

....., Grand Master of, 1243, 1245. See Lisle-Adam.

....., knights of, 824.

....., order of, galley belonging to the, 1163.

Rhodians, the, assisted by Charles, 523.

Rialto, the edict stone at, 515.

Richard I., King of England, 1486.

..... III., King of England, letter to, 1472.

Richmond, Surrey, 244, 1116.

....., Henry at, 123, 236.

....., Wolsey at, 1187, 1294, 1305.

....., letters dated at, 643, 660, 1181.

....., treaty dated at, 1211.

....., Yorkshire, musters in (A.D. 1496), 1478.

Richmond, Henry Fitzroy, Duke of, Henry VIII.'s natural son, 1037, 1052, 1053, 1057, 1289.

Richmond herald, carries instructions to Sir Ric. Wyngfeld at the Imperial Court, 237.

Rings, worn at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 30.

Robbers, gentlemen, in England, 986.

Robertet, Florimond, treasurer of France, 131, 146, 188, 297, 899, 1123, 1194, 1197, 1267, 1268, 1272, 1334, 1436.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 73, 87.

....., his signature, 373, 438, 1122, 1323.

Robodanges, —, a French gentleman, sent by the Regent to her ambassadors with the Signory, 1171, 1187; quits Venice, 1198, 1206.

Roche, Gerard de Pleine, Sieur de la, 819, 823.

....., Imperial ambassador in England, 123, 135, 136, 143.

....., called Mons. di Rachia, 130.

....., Imperial ambassador at Rome, 837, 856.

....., dies, 873.

- Roche-Guyon, Mons. de, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43.
- Rochepot, Francis de Montmorency, Seigneur de la, French ambassador in England, 115, 130.
- Rochester, Fisher, Bishop of, commends Wolsey for his actions against Luther, and publishes the Papal brief against Luther, 210, 213.
- Rœux or Rœulx, Mons. de, Imperial councillor, 571, 665, 702.
-, at Calais, 321.
-, ambassador in England, 467.
- Rolls, Master of the, of England:—
 John Yong, 140, 193, 211.
 Cuthbert Tunstal, q. v.
 Dr. Tayler, 1110 note.
- Romagna, cities and towns in the, the Pope asks assistance of Henry VII., for the recovery of (A.D. 1504), 1480.
- Roman States, the, 328.
- Romanello, Antonio, 930.
- Romano, letter dated at, 853.
- Romans, King of the. See Charles V.
-, Ferdinand hopes to be elected, 1241.
- (A.D. 1489), 1475.
- Rome, 2, 4, 11, 12, 16, 28, 57, 74, 114, 137, 151, 161, 167, 168, 171, 181, 183, 118, 206, 210, 254, 262, 288, 312, 320, 346, 348, 351, 358, 374, 379, 384, 392, 395, 438, 443, 444, 459, 475, 477, 483, 487, 491, 503, 504, 509, 512, 514, 521, 525, 534, 630, 641, 651, 665, 674, 714, 720, 742, 756, 819, 823, 828, 832, 836, 841, 856, 857, 861, 878, 878, 905, 909, 912, 916, 917, 918, 935, 937, 939, 969, 974, 983, 1002, 1011, 1017, 1037, 1043, 1049, 1050, 1054, 1070, 1085, 1097, 1101, 1105, 1110, 1116, 1118, 1124, 1136, 1137, 1141, 1143, 1144, 1163, 1165, 1171, 1183, 1184, 1187, 1190, 1191, 1197, 1198, 1201, 1217, 1222, 1224, 1231, 1238, 1248, 1249, 1256, 1271, 1280, 1286, 1294, 1307, 1314, 1349, 1350, 1380, 1381, 1396, 1403, 1413, 1450, 1473, 1478.
-, the plague at, 500, 575.
-, theologians of, discuss the heresies of Luther, 28.
-, Court of, 199, 376.
-, its morals, 147.
-, abused by Luther, 149.
-, conclave at, 762.
-, Senate of, cause a witch to be burnt, 1125.
-, St. Peter's, p. 44.
-, Venetian ambassador at, Marco Foscarini, 1147, 1170, 1247, 1277, 1300, 1347, 1380, 1448.
-, English ambassador to, Sir Gregory Casal, 1149, 1152, 1169, 1175, 1205, 1207, 1208, 1209, 1212, 1279.
-, Imperial ambassador to, D. Michiel Herera, 1183, 1185.
- Rome—cont.
 , the Lord Albert of Carpi at, 1191.
 , Church of, 928, 1296.
 , Sanga returning to, 1395, 1402.
 , Francis reported to have said they would make the Pope the Emperor's chaplain at, p. 604.
 , the sacking of, by the Imperialists, 1412, 1419, 1424, 1427, 1429, 1433.
 , letters dated at, 5, 10, 14, 15, 26, 48, 51, 112, 122, 159, 171, 173, 186, 203, 332, 545, 575, 585, 745, 747, 762, 765, 778, 781, 787, 789, 794, 795, 796, 800, 802, 804, 808, 809, 810, 811, 818, 824, 826, 829, 834, 837, 839, 842, 868, 870, 875, 926, 927, 945, 957, 998, 1004, 1005, 1010, 1015, 1033, 1040, 1045, 1059, 1065, 1068, 1077, 1121, 1125, 1126, 1132, 1139, 1142, 1157, 1158, 1160, 1278, 1199, 1200, 1202, 1204, 1225, 1234, 1264, 1266, 1281, 1295, 1326, 1333, 1337, 1357, 1385, 1394, 1399, 1407, 1463, 1465, 1466, 1467, 1468, 1469, 1472, 1474, 1480.
 , Scotch ambassadors to, 1414.
 , French envoy to [Renzo da Ceri], 1419.
 , Venetian ambassador at (A.D. 1514), 1485.
- Romford, Essex, Henry VIII. at, 1025.
- Romorantin, 160, 170.
-, Château, 160.
- Rosas, 1048.
- Roses, Henry's badge, p. 20.
- Rosetta, 30.
- Rosso, Andrea, secretary of Francesco Cornaro, 147, 979, 1238, 1249, 1256, 1260, 1269, 1292, 1311.
-, sent to Francis by the Signory, 1226, 1278, 1280, 1300, 1305, 1315, 1317, 1350, 1367, 1368, 1389, 1391, 1392, 1410, 1424, 1443, 1450, p. 623.
-, (called Franceschi), letter from, 1334.
-, letters from, 1236, 1237, 1243, 1244, 1250, 1253, 1261, 1265, 1267, 1268, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1276, 1282, 1284, 1285, 1293, 1298, 1301, 1318, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1322, 1324, 1342, 1356, 1365, 1383, 1384, 1396, 1419, 1421, 1436, 1437, 1440, 1445, 1455.
-, letters to, 1250, 1362, 1398.
- Rotterdam, Erasmus at, 147.
- Rouen, 1110.
-, Bailli or President of, Jean Brinon, 918, 1083.
-, French ambassador in London, 1187, 1193.
- Roussillon, letters dated at, 1194, 1196.
- Roveline (Gravelines), 300.

Rovere, Francesco Maria della, ex-Duke of Urbino, 283.
, Henry complains of the Pope favouring, 328.
 Roveredo, 979.
 Rubiera, 1185, 1427.
 Rubies, balass, worn by Henry VIII. at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 17.
, presented to Francis by Henry, 153.
 Ruby, worn by Francis, 1272.
 Ruccellai, —, sent by Leo X. to Francis to stipulate the Holy League, 1295.
 Ruport (sic), [in France], letter dated at, 1342.
 Rushes, the wooden floors of England strewn with, 94.
 Ruthal, Thos. See Durham, Bishop of.

S.

Saba, Zuan, 1481.
 Sabadino, —, Venetian secretary in Switzerland, letter to, 1361.
, returning from, 1386.
 Sables, p. 17, 330, 596.
 Safra, Sultan Soliman quits, 272.
 Sages of the Council, for the Orders, &c. See Venice.
 Sagudino, Nicolo, Venetian secretary, 1309.
 Sailors, 555.
 Saints, images of the, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 88, 93.
 St. Adrian at Milan, Stephen Cardinal of, made Dean of Salisbury (A.D. 1473), 1469, 1470, 1471.
 St. Ander, 507, 752.
, letter dated at, 498.
 St. Andrew's, Archbishop of, Legate in Scotland, his death, 184.
, Patrick [Graham] (A.D. 1466), 1463.
 St. Andrew, Patron Saint of the Order of Santiago de Compostella, 302.
 St. Angelo, Rome, castle of, Pope Clement VII. retires into, 1412, 1424.
 St. Antonio, vicar of the province of, 813. See Marem, Francesco.
, monastery of, MSS. in the, 1187.
 St. Aponal, Venice, rector of, 724.
 St. Augustine, Luther acknowledges, 12.
 St. Austin, Friars Hermits of, favour Lutheran doctrines, 383.
 St. Barbara, image of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.
 St. Christopher, image of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.

St. Cyriac at the Baths, Cardinal Priest of, title given to Thomas Bouchier, Archbishop of Canterbury (A.D. 1471), 1466 note.
 St. Denis, figure of, on a stage of Minor Friars at publication of Holy League in Venice, 1343.
 St. Dominic, church of, the site of Henry's palace at Bridewell, 663.
 St. Dominic, church of, at Angoulême, the Holy League published in the, 1322.
 St. Dominic, at Augsburg, prior of the monastery of, expelled because opposed to Luther, 1086.
 St. Edward's (San Doardo), off England, 456, 694, 701.
 St. George, image of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20, p. 27.
, at the publication of the Holy League in Venice, 1343.
, altar dedicated to, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 69.
 St. Francis, friars and novices of, take part in the publication of the Holy League at Venice, 1343.
 St. Germain-en-Laye, 124, 438.
 St. Germain's, letter dated at, 1456.
 St. Jean de Port, ferry of, 207.
 St. John the Baptist, 244.
 St. John's of Jerusalem, in England, prior of. See Docwra, Sir Thos.
, knights of, 523.
, priory of, date of Sir John Kendal's nomination to (A.D. 1489), 1475 note.
 St. John's "Scuola," Venice, 1343.
 St. Katharine, image of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.
 St. Marceau, Mons. de, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 57.
, French ambassador at Rome, 151, 800, 804, 811.
 St. Margaret, 244.
 St. Mark's, Venice, procurators of, 13, 148, 193, 211, 784.
, jewels in, 615.
, church, 649, 674, 1346.
, masses, &c. performed at, 175, 603, 604, 609, 716, 724, 1042.
, Papal bull against Luther published in, 180, 181.
, ceremonies on publication of the Holy League in, 1343.
, vicar of, 724.
, the banner of, 474.
, armorial bearings of, 734.
, Square, bull baiting on, 627.
, glass fire screens sold on, 1451.
 St. Mary's of the Parliament, title of the church to be built by Henry and Francis, after the Field of Cloth of Gold, 92.
 St. Michael, representation of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 42, 83.
, knights of the order of, p. 43, 1273.

- St. Omer, p. 34.
 St. Paul, the Apostle, 1007.
 St. Paul's Church, London, condemnation of Luther published in, 210.
, Henry and Charles at, 470.
, Wolsey sings mass in, upon publication of peace between Charles and Francis, 1223.
, deans and canons of, 213.
, Churchyard, condemnation of Luther published in, 213.
, royal palace at, 210.
 St. Paul's, at Rome, 998.
, at Venice, 606.
 St. Peter's, Rome, coronation of Adrian VI. at, 545.
, sacristy of, sacked by the Imperialists, 1412.
, Cathedral, Venice, 844.
 St. Pol, Mons. de, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43, 68, 70, 84.
, with Francis at Bordeaux, 1243, 1245.
, meets the Viceroy at his entry into Cognac, 1270, 1273.
 St. Praxed, Cardinal, called de Monte, letter to, 628.
 St. Rocco, "Scuola," takes part in publication of the Holy League at Venice, 1343.
 St. Quentin, 786.
 St. Sebastian, Spain, 797.
, Venetian galleys detained at, 380, 381, 385, 397, 398, 433, 443, 457, 458.
, port of, 391.
 St. Severin (eight leagues from Angoulême), letter dated at, 1191.
 St. Stephen's (Austin's), friars of, at Venice, 1343.
 St. Thomas's Cathedral, Canterbury, Henry and Charles attend, 463.
 St. Ursula, image of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.
 St. Vincent's Cape, 838.
 Saker (a bird of prey), 1270.
 Salamanca, Count of, 883, 980.
 Salisbury, 486.
, Edmund Audley, bishop of, his death, 875. See Campeggio, Cardinal.
, deanery of the church of (A.D. 1473), 1469.
 Salma, D. Nicolò, commander of the army of the nobility of Germany against the Lutherans, 1107.
 Salome, the tumbling girl, 244.
 Salt Office, the, at Venice, 965.
 Saluzzo, 1050, 1071.
, Marquis of, his prowess as a joust, p. 26 note.
, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 90.
, with Francis I. at Angoulême, 1322.
, will march upon Milan, 1392, 1412, 1424.
 Salvatierra, taken by the Imperialists, 793.
, the Spaniards retreat from, 800.
 Salviati, Cardinal Legate, 897, 945, 1015.
, Legate-resident at the Imperial Court, 1124, 1126, 1156, 1157, 1166 note, 1167, 1168, 1187, 1190, 1201, 1217, 1305, 1317, 1324, 1335, 1336.
, to make his entry into Lyons, 1414.
 Salzburg, besieged by the Lutherans, 1085, 1107.
, Cardinal of, opposed to the Lutherans, 938, 944, 955.
 Sambuello, Battista, 688, 692, 757.
 Sampson, Dr. Richard, 272.
, senior English ambassador with Charles, 507, 579, 662 note, 702, 746 note, 761, 780, 797, 814, 819, 821, 825, 845, 848, 856, 880 note, 892, 939, 943, 959, 969, 987, 1069 (?), 1076, 1078, 1080, 1088, 1089, 1091, 1092 note, 1109, 1112, 1119, 1124, 1129, 1130, 1141, 1150, 1166, 1167, 1168, 1172, 1177, 1193, 1195, 1218, 1220.
 San, letter dated at, 117.
 San Benetto, Venice, 83.
 San Germano, infantry of the Colonna faction at, 1357.
 San Giorgio Maggiore, Venice, 736, 1344.
, the island of, 738, 921, 923, 942, 1105, 1207, 1210, 1232.
 San Giovanni, at Rome, 998.
 San Lorenzo, at Venice, 175.
 San Lucar, 556 note, 805 note.
 San Luco, letter dated at, 1062.
 San Marco, Cà di, on the island of S. Giorgio Maggiore, Venice, 1105.
 San Maurizio, Venice, 116.
 San Moise, the Giustinian Palace at, Venice, 527 note.
 San Polo, Venice, the Grand Canal at, 374.
 San Severino, Galeazzo di, master of the horse to Francis I. at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 27, p. 28, 67, 68, 69, 70, 73, 84, 93, 94; Henry's presents to him, 94.
 San Severo, in Cà Zorzi, Venice, 527, 942.
 San Sixtus, Cardinal of, Papal Legate, 28, 790. See also Vio, Tomaso de.
 San Vido, Venice, 674.
, festival of, 691.
 Sanchez, Don Alfonso, Imperial ambassador in Venice, negotiating with others for the inclusion of Venice in the league between Henry and Charles, 344, 448, 484, 488, 493, 516, 518, 523, 530, 534, 536, 538, 544, 548, 552, 564, 592, 596, 597, 603, 606, 609, 615, 617, 619, 620, 622, 625, 627, 675, 677, 684, 685, 689, 690, 697, 705, 708, 718, 723, 724, 729, 733, 734, 738, 741, 912, 931, 935, 937, 940, 942, 1024, 1042, 1114, 1141, 1155, 1175, 1185, 1187, 1226, 1229.

- Sanctuary, right of, in England, moderated and restricted by the Pope (A.D. 1489), 1475.
- Sandals, jewelled, placed by Bishops on Wolsey's feet previous to his performing mass at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.
- Sanderus, Michael, Dean of Breslau, Swiss secretary in London, 130.
-, endeavours to get the annual pension for the Cardinal of Sion, promised to him by Henry, 133.
- Sandwich, 53, 55, 58, 61, 139.
- Sandys, Sir William, Treasurer of Calais, 308.
- Sanga, Giovanni Battista, Papal nuncio to Francis I., 1357, 1360, 1362, 1368, 1372.
-, arrives at the French Court, 1382; goes to England to urge the entry of Henry into the league, 1393, 1401; departs on his way back to Rome, 1395, 1402.
- Santa Maria Formosa, Venice, 551, 603, 674.
- Santa Marina, Venice, 941.
- Santa Giustina in Cà Pasqualigo, Venice, 942.
- Santi Quatro, Cardinal, 171, 781.
- Santo Spirito, the island of, 527.
- Santo Stefano, Venice, 649.
-, Campo of, 149.
- Sanuto, Marco Antonio, of the Venetian Senate, 581.
-, Marin, diarist, 773, 883, 941, 1076, 1145, 1148, 1149, 1150, 1151, 1152, 1153, 1157, 1158, 1159, 1160, 1163, 1169, 1172, 1773, 1174, 1175, 1178, 1187, 1191, 1192, 1193, 1194, 1196, 1197, 1199, 1200, 1201, 1202, 1203, 1204, 1212, 1218.
-, notes by, 13, 36, p. 21, 107, 116, 286, 473, 1153.
-, speeches made by him in the Senate, 1304, 1309.
-, letter to, 1296.
- Sanuto, Palazzo, alias Vanaxel, Venice, 941 note.
- Sappers (guastadori), the Imperialists at the castle of Milan can find but few, to undertake the service, 1171.
- Sapphires, p. 17.
- Saragossa, 1054.
- Sarsnet and Sarsnet-murrey, p. 18, 83.
- Sarzana, 810.
- Satin and Satin-murrey, p. 16, 80, 302.
- Sauch, John de la, Imperial ambassador in England, 38, 41.
- Savona, 1085, 1107, 1108, 1109, 1114.
- Savoy, 752, 1071.
-, renounces its alliance with Francis, and adheres to Charles, 135.
-, René Bastard of, Lord Steward (or Great Master) of France, p. 43, nos. 73, 85 ("Boissi" is an error).
- Savoy, Duke of, 467, 809 note.
-, acquaints Henry with his son's marriage to the daughter of the King of Portugal, 133, 135, 1012.
-, nominated as confederate in the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
-, Charles refuses his request to be allowed to remain neutral in the war between Charles and Francis, 751.
-, at Lyons, 1082.
-, nominated as confederate in the league between England and France, 1122.
-, ambassador of the, at Bordeaux, 1243.
-, his brother. See Geneva, Count of.
- Saxony, Luther in, 209, 216, 1007.
-, Lutheranism gaining ground in, 404.
-, a monstrosity born in, 633.
-, Frederick, Duke of, Elector of Germany, 141, 196, 209, 383 note.
-, his connection with Martin Luther, 12, 147, 628, 813, 818.
-, writes in favour of Luther to the Pope, 74.
-, refuses to accept the care of Germany while Charles is in Spain, 137.
-, accompanies Luther to the Diet at Wurtemberg, to refute the charges brought against them, 790, 791.
-, heads a confederacy in favour of Luther, 881.
-, seizes certain castles belonging to the Bohemians, 928.
-, attacks the Duke of Bavaria and Cardinal Salzburg, for having called him a heretic, 938, 944, 955.
-, dies a natural death (5 May 1525), 1018, 1020, 1025, 1039.
-, funeral oration by Melancthon on the death of, 1153.
-, John, Duke of, brother of Frederick, 1039.
-, supports the reform of the Church, 1296, 1313.
-, his son, John Frederick, afterwards Duke of Saxony, called the Magnanimous, 1039.
- Scaltezza. See Tiascala.
- Scandiano, 81.
- Scardona, Sultan Solymán takes the fortress of, 516, 530, 531.
- Scena, Cavalier, a Milanese outlaw, 1084.
- Scents, sent by Francis I. as a present for Princess Mary, 153.
- Sceptre, the, of England, 663.
- Schiavoni, Riva de', Venice, 527 note.
- Schomberg, Fra Nicholas, Archbishop of Capua. See Capua.

Scotch territory, a large army of English on the, to give battle, (A.D. 1496), 1478.

Scotland, 130, 136, 467, 528, 651, 679, 770, 918, 1463, 1485.

....., truce between England and, 128; expiry of it, 143, 154, 195.

....., Francis leaves the disputes touching, between himself and Henry, to the arbitration of Louise of Savoy and Wolsey, 142, 150.

....., disputes between Henry and Francis touching, 145, 151, 152, 153.

....., Francis appoints ambassadors from, to Henry to negotiate a truce between it and England, 160, 167, 176, 179, 185, 230.

....., the vacant archbishopric of St. Andrew's in the gift of Francis as he rules, 184.

....., Francis urges Henry to prolong his truce with, 187.

....., Louise of Savoy endeavours to arrange the affairs of, 204.

....., truce concluded between England and, 219, 227, 233.

....., the Duke of Albany is requested to assume the government of, 221.

....., Wolsey exasperated against Francis for sending Albany to, 380; Francis excuses himself for so doing, 393.

....., Henry fits out a fleet against, 384, 637.

....., Henry and Wolsey send for Albany to make arrangements concerning, 393.

....., Francis tells Henry he will not interfere with the affairs of, 396.

....., the Duke of Albany enters, as King, 400.

....., Francis orders Albany to quit, 408.

....., Henry raises troops for the invasion of, 432, 442, 630.

....., Francis promises Henry to remove Albany from, 465.

....., Henry intends to persevere in the war against France, and so render himself master of, 507.

....., Henry's successes in, 516.

....., Francis sends troops to, to aid Albany, 631, 636.

....., report of a 12 years' truce between England and, 744.

....., triennial truce between England and, 801.

....., Henry raises troops against, it being in a poor state of defence, 859, 860.

....., England assumes the government of, with the consent of France, 862.

....., Albany exacts oaths of allegiance as King of, 865.

....., the English enter, and expel Albany and "other" Frenchmen, the regents of James V., 869, 870.

....., included in the truce between England and France, 1109.

Scotland—cont.

....., ambassadors from, to Rome, 1414, 1429.

....., Mons. de Concrasault, French ambassador to (A.D. 1496), 1478.

....., Kings of. See James III., James IV., James V.

....., Queen of. See Margaret.

....., Regents of. See Albany, Duke of; Aubigni, Mons. d'.

....., warden of the marches of, Henry VIII.'s natural son Henry, Duke of Richmond, 1052 note.

Scots, the, 154, 465, 528, 679, 744.

....., called proud and treacherous, 143.

....., Henry consents to prolong the truce with, at the persuasion of Francis, 189, 210.

....., ravage the English territory, 384.

....., raise a great army against England, 640.

....., worst, the English, 676.

....., take the fleet on board which Henry's army against France was to have embarked, 733.

....., make immense preparations against England, 776, 797.

....., truce between Henry and, 793.

....., Francis desires that they should be included in the league between England and France, 1091.

Scottish gentleman, a, 227.

....., affairs, Henry's, with Francis, 882.

....., ambassadors to England, 150, 160, 167, 169, 185, 187, 939.

Scotus, St. Thomas, Luther scoffs at, 12.

Secretary, Henry's chief, Richard Pace, 93.

Sédan, belonging to Robert de la Mark, 300; he surrenders it to the Imperialists, 305.

See Apostolic, the, 93.

Segovia, Charles at, 1112, 1115.

Selim, Sultan, his death, 137.

Selin, Mons. de, one of the gentlemen of Charles's chamber, ambassador to England, 948.

Selva, Jean de, president of the Parliament of Paris, 1270, 1272.

....., ... at Calais, 260, 279, 335.

....., ... ambassador to Spain, 1032.

....., ... at Toledo, 1069, 1130.

....., ... holds a conference with Charles's ministers about the release of Francis, 1091.

....., ... his signature, 1092.

Semitecolo, Giacomo, late treasurer of Venice, 1330.

....., Nicolò, and Co., Venetian merchants, their galleon taken by the French, 838.

Senate, the, of Venice. See Venice, Senate of.

- Servia (Serimia), conquered by Sultan Solyman, 516.
- Sessa, Duke of, Imperial ambassador at Rome, 714, 765, 802, 873, 909, 957, 1185.
-, presents a hackney to Clement VII. as tribute from Charles V. for Naples, 1333.
-, his brother, 796.
-, Duchess of, daughter of Gonsalvo of Cordova, wife of the Duke of Sessa, her death, 875.
- Seuliman. See Solyman.
- Severino, San. See San Severino.
- Seville, 556, 557, 607, 710, 711, 751, 797, 827, 836, 910, 1021, 1115, 1133.
-, letters dated at, 1241, 1259.
- Sezza, 1474.
- Sforza, Francesco Maria, 323, 401, 461, 735.
- See* Bari, Duke of; Milan, Duke of.
-, malady of, 1162, 1191.
-, Lodovic, his son, 365.
-, Maximilian, brother of the Duke of Milan, 1123.
- Ship-builders, Venetian, 30.
- Ship-building, 607.
- Ships, 167, 354, 463, 1110.
-, offered to Charles by the King of Denmark, 256.
- Shrines, gold, in Henry's palace at Guisnes, 83.
- Sicilian Barons, in Spain, 662.
- Sicily, 506, 1238.
-, Spanish infantry in, 155.
-, in peril from the Turk, 819.
-, Francis and the King of Tunis arrange on attack on, 996.
-, French in, 996.
-, Viceroy of, 824.
- Sickingen, Francesco, 675.
- Sienna, 919, 957.
-, ambassador of, in Spain, 507, 1038.
- Sienna, Raffaello Petrucci, Cardinal of (made Cardinal 1517—dies in 1522), 376.
- Sigismondo, Dom., de —, of Naples, 320.
- Sigismondo, Dom., secretary to Lord Albert of Carpi, sent to the Regent of France by the Pope, 1070, 1085, 1101.
- Signory, the. See Venice.
- See Turkey.
- Siguenza, Bishop of, 908.
- Silesia, proceedings of the Lutherans in, 788, 790, 791, 798, 807.
-, the King of Hungary seeks assistance from, against the Turks, 798.
- Silk, 41, 44, 161, 503.
- Simancas, castle of, 552.
- Simars, worn by Henry and Charles at their meeting at Calais, p. 16.
- Singers, English and French, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 29.
- Sion, Matthew Scheiner, Cardinal of, 167, 196, 197, 225, 351.
-, Henry promises assistance to, 130.
-, sends an envoy to Henry for the pension promised him by Henry, 133.
-, kindling war against Francis, 323.
- Sittingbourne, Kent, Henry and Charles at, 463.
- Sixtus IV., Pope, 1473.
-, letters from, 1469, 1470, 1471, 1472.
- Slade, Wm., notary public of London, 1464.
- Sluys, 139.
- Smocks, presented to Princess Mary by Francis I., 153.
- Soardino, —, Mantuan ambassador at the Court of France, p. 26.
-, letters from, 73, 81, 85, 90, 93, 94, 959, 977, 1074, 1080, 1094, 1130, 1172, 1306.
- Solyman I., Sultan of Turkey, called Grand Signor, 141, 160, 272, 350, 370, 426, 441, 484, 852, 1050, 1254.
-, routs Gazelli Bey, Governor of Damascus, 177, 184, 206, 226.
-, takes the castle of Belgrade (August 1521), 244, 302, 351.
-, making preparations against the King of Hungary, 259; against Christendom, 448, 494, 832.
-, bombards Rhodes, 523, 531; takes it (Dec. 1522), 646.
-, takes Scardona and Tenina in Hungary, 531.
-, desire of Venice to continue at peace with, 1209.
-, takes important measures, in new levies upon his subjects, 1226.
-, marches into Hungary, 1307.
-, the Venetians anxious to avoid giving umbrage to, 1444.
- Somaglia, the Countess, letter from, 1273.
- Sombernou (Siamburn), letter dated at, 317.
- Somerset, Duke of. See Richmond, Duke of.
- Somme, the river, 1008, 1029.
- Soncino, 897.
- Soranzo, 258, 386, 576.
- Soratinum, 890.
- Soro, Zuan, a decipherer in Venice, 1404.
- Spain, 4, 14, 26, 119, 122, 135, 137, 166, 167, 170, 195, 224, 298, 356, 360, 367, 382, 384, 395, 401, 407, 409, 411, 413, 415, 422, 425, 430, 433, 435, 439, 442, 445, 454, 457, 463, 465, 467, 472, 479, 480, 483, 484, 486, 487, 493, 495, 496, 498, 500, 502, 505, 514, 542, 564, 567, 571, 575, 607, 630, 651, 668, 669, 702, 765, 777, 797, 808, 809, 810, 814, 818, 819, 821, 824, 825, 828, 837, 839, 845, 902, 922, 969, 970, 983, 997, 1003, 1009, 1011, 1012, 1015, 1017, 1024, 1032,

Spain—cont.

- 1033, 1034, 1036, 1037, 1040, 1041, 1045, 1046, 1048, 1050, 1054, 1057, 1058, 1065, 1067, 1068, 1069, 1074, 1075, 1077, 1078, 1085, 1089, 1093, 1094, 1095, 1100, 1102, 1103, 1107, 1109, 1111, 1113, 1115, 1121, 1126, 1135, 1136, 1141, 1177, 1187, 1201, 1203, 1217, 1231, 1270, 1292, 1293, 1305, 1317, 1324, 1335, 1342, 1351, 1421, 1450, 1475.
-, its relations with France, 5, 1454.
-, Wolsey relies upon making peace between France and, 98.
-, great disturbances in, 129, 136, 141, 151, 172, 212.
-, its affairs quieted, 421.
-, St. Matthew's Day one of great ceremony in, 942.
-, Kings of. See Ferdinand, Charles.
-, King of, temp. Hen. VII., 1745.
-, Infant of, the. See Ferdinand, Don.
-, a Count of, p. 19.
-, the Gloves of, ball at the meeting of Henry and Charles at Calais called, p. 19.
-, the arms of, 94.
-, lords of, accompany Charles to Calais, 111.
-, High Constable of, Inigo de Velasco, 306.
-, Commons of, the, rise against Charles, 523, 526, 552.
-, its seaports, 686.
-, Duke of Bourbon departs for, 1163.
-, Duchess of Alençon still in, 1173; departed from, 1197.
-, Montmorency departs from, 1219.
-, sons of Francis I. prisoners in, 1236, 1339, 1342, 1421, 1457.
-, Spinalosa returns from, to France, 1265.
-, English merchants and property to remove from, preparatory to declaration of war, 1276.
-, Cardinal Legate in. See Salviati.
-, return of the Viceroy's envoy from, 1319.
-, bills of exchange for 100,000 ducats at Genoa from, 1333.
-, English capital in, 1349, 1377.
-, the Abbot Don Inico de Mendoza expected in London from, 1371.
-, Duke of Ferrara's ambassador in, 1404.
-, Papal Nuncio in, 1444.
-, Venetian ambassador in, Francesco Cornaro, q. v.
-, English ambassadors in. See Ambassadors.
-, ... Dr. Lee, in lieu of Tunstall, 1169, 1173.
-, ... Tunstall and Sampson, 1195, 1218, 1220.
-, ... the Papal Auditor [Ghinucci], 1438.

Spain—cont.

- Papal ambassador in, the Archbishop of Capua, 841, 842.
-, ambassador of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43.
- Spaniards, the, 135, 224, 416, 474, 556, 702, 729, 810, 811, 812, 998, 1011, 1069, 1197.
-, their victories over the French, 263.
-, in the Milanese, 351, 369, 809, 819.
-, Henry sends troops to Spain, to keep them in subjection, 467.
-, retreat from Fonterabia, 632.
-, sent by Charles to England for the war against France, 693.
-, Francis says he shall expel them from the Milanese, 751.
-, assault Bayonne, 763, 800.
-, retreat from Salvatierra, 800.
-, at Venice, 942.
-, cross the Po, 957.
-, French galleys manned by, to convey Francis as prisoner to Spain, 1033, 1041.
-, mutiny against the Viceroy of Naples, and endeavour to take his life, 1057.
-, Wolsey says they are detested, 1061.
-, adore and love Francis, 1103.
-, in Pavia, 1138, 1140.
-, take French ships, 1141.
-, the arrest of Morone by, 1169.
-, Francis counselled by his mother not to observe his promises made to, 1246.
-, the Pope complains of the delay of Francis in sending to Milan his promised aid against, 1396.
-, at Rome, 1419.
-, leave Cremona for Naples, 1420.
- Spanish ladies at the meeting of Henry and Charles at Calais, p. 17, p. 19.
- Count, a, p. 19.
- merchants, 23.
- jennet, p. 28.
- envoys in England, 36.
- fashions, p. 31, nos. 85, 248.
- horses, 69.
- infantry, 177.
-, in Sicily, 155.
- and forces in Italy, 552, 890, 897, 1050, 1071, 1085, 1118, 1128.
- ambassadors in England. See Ambassadors.
- Princes, 196.
- barks, 457.
- men-at-arms, 467.
- fleet, the, 478, 484, 1443.
- ship, a, called the Victory, discovers the Spice Islands, 805.
- camp, 811, 930.
- fleet, at Carthage, with infantry, 824.
- Court, 856.

Spanish Captain, the, discovers a large city in the Indies, 1011.
 ladies, in Queen Katharine's service, dismissed by Henry for expressing displeasure at the honours conferred by Henry on his natural son, 1053.
 troops, march towards Narbonne, 1067.
 , shift their quarters from Milan to Pavia, &c., 1206, 1403.
 ships, bound from Flanders, taken by French vessels in the Thames, 1212.
 fleet, arrival of, in Corsica, 1449.
 grandees, wish for peace in Italy, through dread of the Turks, 1450.
 Spavento, Marco, letter from, 1006.
 Spears, p. 31, 83.
 Spice-cakes given to all comers at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 69.
 Spice Islands, the, 556.
 , discovered by the Spanish ship called the Victory, 805, 1217.
 trade, the, 589, 612, 634.
 , disputes between Charles and the King of Portugal concerning, 635, 843, 1074.
 Spices, 441, 607, 1011, 1087, 1115.
 , imported into Spain, 556.
 , Francis fits out vessels to bring, from the Moluccas, 612.
 Spina, D. Leonardo, a Florentine, sent by Clement VII. to Louise of Savoy, 1101, 1126.
 Spinalosa, a gentleman named, 956.
 , returns to France from Spain, 1265.
 See Peñalosa.
 Spinelli, Francesco, letter to, 796.
 , Gasparo, 1016, 1037, 1150, 1299, 1320, 1367, 1431, 1447, 1449.
 , secretary of the Venetian ambassadors in France, letters from, 1007, 1275, 1294, 1297, 1302, 1305, 1307, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1339, 1349, 1351, 1355, 1371, 1374, 1377, 1381, 1382, 1387, 1388, 1393, 1395, 1401, 1402, 1406, 1418, 1427, 1428, 1432, 1434, 1435.
 , letters to, 106, 213, 244, 1309, 1311, 1317, 1327, 1332, 1336, 1348, 1352, 1358, 1363, 1368, 1373, 1392, 1397, 1409, 1410, 1412, 1415, 1420, 1424, 1425, 1443, 1452.
 , in the camp with Francis, 355.
 , secretary of the Venetian ambassador (Orio) in London, 1150, 1163, 1235, 1304.
 , retained in England by Venice as ambassador, 1378.
 , his appointment as representative, with powers to join a league, 1312, 1345, 1379, 1383, 1389, 1391, 1413.
 , payments to him, 1331.

Spinelli, Gasparo—cont.
 , his extreme difficulties, caused by the death of Orio, 1294.
 , subjected to quarantine by Wolsey, 1297.
 , gives a description of the pictures of Francis and his sons, presented to Henry, 1451.
 , Giambatista. See Cariatì, Count of.
 , Ludovico, secretary of the Venetian ambassador in England, p. 26 note, 964, 773.
 , letters from, 106, 213, 244, 614, 748.
 , letters to, 1007, 1451.
 , Sir Thomas, English resident ambassador with Charles, 134, 156, 209, 217 note, 220, 222, 248, 343, 348, 350, 356, 360, 395, 422, 430, 431, 433, 446, 455, 498.
 , Henry entrusts him with little business of importance, 254.
 , professes to be a thorough Imperialist for the sake of finding favour with Charles, 254, 274.
 , spoken of as mad and foul-mouthed, 448.
 , dies of the flux, at Valladolid, 542.
 , said to be of a sinister and impudent nature, 542.
 , held in small account in Spain, being considered a spy rather than an ambassador, 507.
 Spinola, Antonio (A.D. 1496), letter from, 1478.
 Spires, the Diet at, 863, 864.
 , letters dated at, 1296, 1313.
 Spy, news brought to Spain from France by a, 552.
 Stafford, Katharine, married to the Earl of Westmoreland, 189 note.
 , Mary, married to Lord Abergavenny, 180 note.
 Stafileo, Papal nuncio, resident with Francis, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 27. See Caracciolo, Marino.
 Stanga, Zuan Clemente, 631.
 Staple Hall, at Calais, reception of Charles and Lady Margaret in, upon their interview with Henry, p. 31, p. 32.
 State of Venice. See Venice.
 State Attorneys of Venice, 482, 540, 576, 772, 1325.
 Statutes made at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 83, 94.
 Stenech, castle of, 413.
 Stephen, Cardinal priest of St. Adrian at Milan, made dean of Salisbury, (A.D. 1473), 1469.
 Steward, Lord, of France, p. 43, 1245. See Boissi; Montmorency; Savoy, Bastard of.

- Stirrup-men, in attendance upon Switzers, 73.
- Storiom, or Sturion, Zorzi, letters from, 983, 1194, 1196.
- Strasburg, town of, become Lutherans, 1153.
....., abolition of the mass at, 1086.
- Stream, the Boundary, of the English and Flemish territories, 97, 100.
- Strozzi, Lodovico, in London (A.D. 1455), 1460.
- Stutgard, 675.
....., (Stochar), 833.
....., Lutherans at, 840.
- Styfford, Wm., notary public, of London (A.D. 1455), 1460, 1461, 1462.
- Suardino. See Soardino.
- Suffolk, Ric. de la Pole called Earl of, q. v.
....., Charles Brandon, Duke of, 466, 1025, 1037.
....., ..., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 41, p. 15, p. 16, p. 18, p. 20, p. 44, p. 45, 81, 84, 88, 90, 93, 106.
....., ..., General of the English army in France, 687 note, 782.
....., ..., crosses over to Calais with troops, 758, 760.
....., ..., recalled by the Deputies of London, called the three Estates, 786, 874.
....., ..., advances towards Picardy, 1012.
....., ..., the uproar consequent upon his marriage with Mary, Q.D. of France, between the Lords and the Commons, 1486.
....., ..., his Duchess. See Mary, Queen Dowager of France.
- Sugar, imported into Spain, 751.
- Sumptuary laws of Venice, the, 622.
- Surgeons, Francis I.'s, 160.
- Surian, Antonio, L.L.D., Venetian ambassador in England, 8, 18, 20, 35, 103, 129, 157, 158, 165, 172, 213, 244, 286, 289, 298, 303, 315, 328, 331, 339, 341, 343, 346, 350, 358, 368, 381, 385, 389, 390, 394, 395, 406, 407, 417, 427, 428, 429, 433, 438, 446, 449, 450, 452, 456, 462, 463, 464, 467, 469, 474, 475, 476, 480, 481, 484, 486, 493, 502, 514, 518, 531, 540, 541, 542, 546, 548, 553, 554, 566, 569, 570, 571, 574, 575, 598, 630, 654, 693, 717, 749, 758, 759, 784, 1016.
....., ..., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 14, p. 15, p. 18, p. 19, p. 29, p. 34.
....., ..., ill, 614, 748.
....., ..., recalled, 730, 731, 740, 749.
....., ..., Henry presents him with 500 crowns upon his return to Venice, 755, 775, 783.
....., ..., returns to Venice, 772, 773, 744, 1210, 1304, 1330.
....., ..., letters from, 1, 2, 3, 7, 22, 24, 36, 41, 42, 43, 47, 49, 53, 54, 55, 61, 63, 64, 71, 86, 92, 95, 97, 98, 99, 100, 104, 107, 108, 113, 115, 117, 118, 121,
- Surian, Antonio, L.L.D., letters from—cont.
123, 130, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 141, 142, 143, 145, 151, 152, 154, 162, 167, 168, 169, 176, 177, 178, 179, 184, 185, 187, 189, 195, 204, 206, 208, 210, 214, 219, 225, 226, 227, 233, 236, 238, 240, 249, 252, 255, 256, 263, 268, 272, 273, 278, 279, 280, 282, 283, 288, 290, 293, 300, 305, 306, 308, 309, 314, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 329, 330, 334, 335, 336, 342, 347, 349, 352, 354, 361, 362, 371, 380, 384, 393, 396, 403, 408, 414, 423, 424, 432, 435, 442, 454, 457, 483, 495, 501, 513, 522, 537, 550, 555, 562, 563, 590, 593, 595, 608, 618, 623, 629, 637, 650, 651, 663, 664, 671, 676, 683, 687, 694, 700, 701, 722, 733, 739, 760, 764.
....., ..., letters to, 6, 9, 19, 29, 155, 304, 311, 351, 369, 399, 426, 440, 441, 453, 468, 488, 494, 504, 512, 516, 517, 544, 549, 567, 582, 599, 656, 657, 658, 666, 715, 721, 732, 890.
....., ..., his secretary, Lodovico Spinelli, 56, 106.
....., ..., Governor of Brescia, 886, 896, 897, 1079.
....., ..., letters from, 835, 888, 895, 906, 918.
- Surrey, Earl of, men mustered by, for battle against the Scots (A.D. 1496), 1478 II.
-, ..., See Howard, Thos.
- Swabia, 1006.
....., League of, 675, 955, 1098.
....., ..., secretly furnishes the Lutherans with money, 952.
- Swiss fashions, p. 20, 383.
....., secretary, a, in England, 130.
....., Cardinal of Sion, 225.
....., Cantons, 572, 951.
....., ..., all pronounce against Luther, 1252.
- Switzerland, 410, 484, 727, 1121.
....., Lutheranism in, 1006, 1153, 1296.
....., English ambassadors in, 1191.
....., Sabadin, Venetian ambassador, returns from, 1386.
- Switzers of Francis I.'s guard, p. 43, 59, 67, 68, 70, 73.
- Switzers, the, 118, 130, 358, 422, 436, 460, 467, 824, 826, 861, 1043, 1123, 1147, 1154, 1162, 1186, 1236, 1251.
....., the Pope conjointly with Francis subsidizes them for Italy, 141, 144, 169, 176, 177, 178, 179, 187, 207.
....., promise Francis not to molest the Milanese, 225.
....., in the service of Francis under command of Mons. de Longueville, 271.
....., in the service of Francis, 323, 325, 631, 639, 777.
....., in the service of Charles, 365, 375, 466.

Switzers, the—cont.

-, Henry sends an ambassador to, to persuade them not to stir in the Milanese, 380, 395, 406, 407, 409.
-, Francis weary of being dependent upon, 402.
-, Charles persuades them to desert Francis, 413.
-, descend into Italy in favour of Francis, 445.
-, invited to join the league between Henry and Charles, 479.
-, their tergiversation, 489.
-, Francis embarks 1,000 for England in aid of Scotland, 636.
-, Henry sends Pace to persuade them not to join France against England, 637, 651, 723, 857.
-, the three Leagues of 803.
-, subsidized jointly by the Pope and Venice, 937, 1327, 1333, 1348, 1352, 1358, 1368, 1392, 1408, 1412, 1424, 1425.
-, nominated as confederates in the treaty between England and France, 1122.
-, payment of, by Francis, 1301.
- Sword, the, borne by the Marquis of Dorset before Henry VIII., p. 21.
- Syria, 160, 177, 184, 189, 612.
-, returns under the Turkish yoke, 226, 236.
-, Venetian factory for, debt of, 1417.

T.

Taberna. See Taverna.

Taffeties, Henry's house at Guisnes adorned with, 80.

Talani, Bernardo, bill broker in London, 1483.

Talbot, Gilbert, English ambassador at Rome (A.D. 1504), 1480.

Tankards, silver, 603.

Tapestries, 248, 466, 702, 1243, 1273.

....., used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 23, p. 33, 53, 69, 83, 93, 94, 97.

Tarabin, —, a beloved attendant of Henry, sent by him to Gonzaga, 1255.

Taragona, 498, 1057.

Taranto, 916.

Tarbes, Bishop of, 1272.

Taverna or Taberna, Dom. Francesco, Milanese ambassador at Venice, 723, 931, 942.

Taverna or Taberna, Dom. Francesco—cont.

-, present at publication of the Holy League, 1343; ratifies by oath the inclusion of the Duke, 1411.
- Taylor, Dr. John, English ambassador in France, 1097 note, 1179, 1224, 1235, 1237, 1238, 1243, 1245, 1250, 1265, 1270, 1272, 1273, 1276, 1282, 1284, 1286, 1292, 1293, 1298, 1321, 1322.
-, Master of the Rolls, called Chancellor of London, 1110.
-, departs for France, 1151; at Lyons, swears to the League between France and England, 1173, 1187.
- Temisvar (Tenina), taken by the Great Turk, 516, 530, 531.
- Ten, the Council of. See Venice.
- Ten Offices, the, of Venice, 149.
- Tenina. See Temisvar.
- Tents, erected at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 24, 41, p. 22, p. 40, p. 42, 68, 69, 70, 72, 73, 80, 83, 94.
- Tenuchtitlan, the ancient name of Mexico, 556, 589.
- Tenustitan. See Tenuchtitlan.
- Teramo, Bishop of. See Chierigato, Francesco.
- Tercino, Ambrosio, merchant, 913.
- Terene, a Neapolitan, composer of a comedy performed in Venice, 941.
- Termini, Duke of, 67.
- Termonde, 455 note.
- Terouenne, 95, 233.
-, the English army under, 826.
- Terracina, diocese of, 1474.
- Testament, the New, 1086.
- Teutonic Order, the, Grand Master of, 1000, 1009.
- Thames, the river, 279 note, 1486.
-, Ragusan ship hired in, by the merchants of Venice, 1163.
-, French vessels take Spanish ships in, 1312.
- Theatre, a, erected at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 32.
- Theobaldo, Jacopo, Ferrarese ambassador at Venice, 1343.
- Theology, professor of, at Venice, Francesco Maren, 813.
- Thomaso, a horse trainer, 90.
- Threadgold, p. 17.
- Throkmorton, —, his signature, 471.
- Ticino, the river, 753, 766, 1140.
- Tiepolo, Nicolò, LL.D., elected as Venetian ambassador to England, 157, 158, 164.
-, declines going, 231, 258.
-, letter to, 197.
-, bailiff of Brescia, letter from, 1149.
- Tigers, live, brought to Seville from the Indies, 1021, 1115.
- Tin, shipped in England for Venice, 139, 838.

- Tithes, German peasants refuse to pay, to the priests and prelates, 1028.
- Titian, paints the portrait of the Bishop of Paphos, which still exists in the church of the Frari, Venice, 1042 note.
- Tlascala (La Scaltezza), alias Los Angeles, the republican city of, in Mexico, 556.
- Toledo, 212, 1009, 1034.
 letters dated at, 992, 996, 997, 1002, 1003, 1011, 1014, 1021, 1029, 1030, 1035, 1038, 1044, 1047, 1048, 1049, 1054, 1057, 1063, 1064, 1066, 1069, 1074, 1078, 1080, 1087, 1088, 1091, 1092, 1093, 1094, 1099, 1103, 1112, 1115, 1119, 1120, 1129, 1130, 1131, 1133, 1145, 1154, 1162, 1166, 1167, 1168, 1172, 1176, 1177, 1217.
 Imperial Court at, 1192, 1226.
 Cardinal of, accompanies Charles to Calais, 106.
 makes great offers to Charles for peace in Italy, being in dread of the Turks, 1450.
- Toneys, —, his signature, 759.
- Torches, p. 19, 248, 942.
 used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 33.
- Tordesillas, 32, 172, 507, 681, 693, 876, 884, 892, 893, 908.
- Torre, Vido dalla, ambassador of Archduke Ferdinand, at Venice, 689, 690 note, 705, 723, 724, 725, 726.
- Torto, Battista and Silvestro, of Venice, 1483.
- Tortosa, Cardinal of, elected Pope, and called Adrian VI., 395, 404, 470.
- Toulon, 1104.
- Toulouse, Bishop of, made Cardinal, 122.
- Tournai, 354, 359, 1029.
 the Imperialists mean to seize, 330; besiege it, 366; take it, 372, 439.
 tribute paid to Henry by Francis for, 357, 768, 780, 1177, 1220.
 to be surrendered to Francis in the proposed agreement between Charles and Francis, 767.
- Tournaments, held at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 27, p. 28. fought in the Albanian fashion in Spain, 422.
 held in England, 466.
 held in Spain, 702.
- Tournon, François de, his signature, 1092.
- Tours, 836.
 Francis going to, 1334.
- Tower of London, the, 187, 189, 210, 213.
 the Square at, Buckingham beheaded on, 214.
- Tragedies, performed before Wolsey, 1193.
- Traieto, Duke of, at Cognac, 1270, 1273.
- Trani, port of, 438 note.
- Transylvania, the Vaivod of, England sends him a large sum to assist Hungary against the Turks, 1438.
- Traponis, Mons. de, husband of Gattinara's grand-daughter, 885, 893.
- Traseignes, Seigneur, 290.
- Tree, a, used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 22.
- Tree of Life, the, the tree of Jesse, represented at the Setting of the Midsummer Watch in London, 244 note.
- Treasurer, the, of the Council of Ten of Venice, 558.
 the, of the Senate of Venice, 576.
- Treasury, the, of England, 193.
- Trent, "on the borders of Scotland," warden of, Henry Duke of Richmond, 1052 note.
- Trent, in Italy, 320, 324, 392, 395, 409, 772, 906 note, 924, 1107, 1128, 1134.
 castle of, 291.
 lansquenets mustered near, 1368, 1443.
 letters dated at, 817, 979.
 Bishop of, 1020, 1069, 1104.
 his brother, 413.
 his secretary, letter from, 817.
- Treport (Tripolto), a port in France, 756.
- Treves, Elector of, 675.
 makes his entry into Spires, 1313.
- Trevisan, Francesco and Lodovico, merchants of Venice, 120.
 Lorenzo, secretary of Gasparo Contarini, 397 note.
 Nicolò, master of a Venetian galley trading with England, 120.
- Treviso, 340 note, 641, 772, 1127.
 the treasury of, 110.
- Tribute, paid to Henry by Francis, 465, 467, 1080, 1129.
- Tricarico, Bishop of [Lodovico Canossa], secret Papal envoy to England, for peace with France, 1485.
- Trimouille, Mons. de la, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 68, 69, 84, 85, 90.
 routed by the English, 761.
- Trinità, the, sent by Charles in quest of the Spice Islands, 556.
- Triple League, the. See Leagues.
- Tripoli, Charles grants it to the Order of Rhodes, upon certain conditions, 797, 799.
 Bishop of. See Mesa, Bernard de.
- Triulzi, Alvise, 1246.
 Paulo Camillo, Venetian governor at the French Court, 80.
 letters from, 72, 76.
 Theodore, captured by the Imperialists, 369.
 at Lyons, letter from, 1173.
- Triumphal arches, erected in London upon Charles's visit, 466.
- Trombones, 68.
 mass performed at the Field of Cloth of Gold, accompanied by an organ, cornets, and, 93.

- Trono, Piero, Bailiff of Brescia, 111.
 Tronto, the river, 155, 239.
 Troto, Giovanni Cristoforo, Henry's features compared to those of, 68.
 Troyes, Francis at, 314.
, letters dated at, 333, 337.
 Truce, between Henry, Charles, and Francis, 1092, 1093, 1094.
, the quinquennial, between Charles and Venice, 19, 29, 330, 467, 469.
 Trumpeters, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67, 68, 69.
, attached to the Flanders galleys, 139.
 Tubingen, in Wurtemberg, letters dated at, 1098, 1153, 1252.
 Tuina, in Croatia, taken by the Great Turk, 516. See Temisvar.
 "Tunazati," Turkish troops, 1226.
 Tunis, King of, his relations with Francis, 996.
 Tunstall, Dr. Cuthbert, Vice-Chancellor and Master of the Rolls of England, and Bishop of London, 34, 217 note, 467, p. 488.
, sent to the Diet at Aix-la-Chapelle, 118.
, ambassador with Charles, 121, 156.
, accompanies Wolsey to Calais, 272, 467.
, called Chancellor of England, 293.
, has great authority and credit with Henry, 658.
, his speech at the inauguration of the Parliament, 663.
, again sent to Charles as ambassador, 987, 992, 1003, 1011, 1021, 1029, 1044, 1048, 1057, 1058, 1064, 1067, 1078, 1079, 1080, 1089, 1090, 1091, 1092 note, 1095, 1109, 1112, 1119, 1129, 1130, 1150, 1166, 1167, 1168, 1172, 1177, 1193, 1195, 1218, 1220.
, returning, (Lee to take his place,) 1169.
 Turin, 1012.
 Turk, the Great, 49, 53, 259, 440, 441, 607, 697, 716, 718, 1072, 1114, 1212.
, beheads the Aga of the Janissaries, &c., 1104.
, requests the King of Poland to make a truce, 1307.
, ambassador to Venice from, 1124.
, See Selim: Solyman.
 Turkey, news from, 86.
, Venetian merchants and subjects in, 441.
 Turkish news, p. 27, 55, 206, 350, 579, 666, 1072.
, affairs, 64, 541, 545, 781.
, ambassador in Venice, 141, 484.
, yoke, Syria returns under the, 226, 236.
 Turkish invasion of Hungary, 275, 304, 1224, 1238, 1254, 1307, 1403, 1409.
, fashions, 359.
, forays, in the Imperial territory, 469.
, invasion, the Signory's defence against a, 475.
, power, the, menaces the destruction of Christendom, 659.
, armada at Constantinople, 1487.
 Turks, the, 500, 507, 656, 662, 799.
, proposed Christian expedition against, 111, 331, 409, 479, 616, 675, 815, 824, 828, 956, 959, 977, 1007.
, under Belgrade, 282.
, take Postonia, 448, 455, 458.
, sound the Isonzo, 458.
, conquer Belgrade, Servia, and a great part of Hungary; take Scardona and Tuina, and besiege Rhodes, headed by the Great Turk, 516, 530.
, their pirate vessels in the Mediterranean, 656.
, the King of Hungary seeks the assistance of Silesia against, 798.
, the Jews in India offer the Pope assistance against, 810.
, Naples and Sicily exposed to peril from, 819.
, the King of Hungary routed by [at Mohatz], 1409.
, the Emperor anxious for peace with other powers, that he may attack, 1428.
, the Archduke Ferdinand makes a truce with, 1433.
, Henry renders aid to Hungary against, 1438.
, Signory of Venice anxious not to mention, in the general league, 1444.
, Spanish grandees wish for peace, in Italy in their dread of, 1450.
 Tyrol, 445, 452.
, the county of, resigned by Charles to his brother, Don Ferdinand, 409, 413.
, rising of German peasants in, 1069, 1085, 1104.
 Tyrolese infantry, in the service of the Pope, 314.
- U.
- Ulm, 990.
, the Lutherans take the town and bishop of, 976, 984.
, Lutheranism in, 1098, 1153.
 Urbino, p. 39, 472.
, the Magnifico Lorenzino, Duke of, his wife, 48. See Medici.

Urbino, Francesco Maria della Rovere, Duke of, at Venice, 282, 283.
 Francis supplies him with money, 438.
 Charles writes in his favour to the Pope, 490.
 Venice denies having assisted, 441.
 Governor or Captain General of the Venetian army, 753, 896; retires from Milan to Marignano, 1348; captures Lodi, 1374.
 proposed marriage with Charlotte, daughter of Francis, 897.
 letter to, 472.
 Ursi, Gabriele de', of Bologna, 1464.
 Utrecht, 395.
 Bishop of, nominated as confederate in the treaty between Henry and Charles, 479.
 Provost of, Dom. Philibert, 123, 130, 132, 752.

V.

Valaresso, Alvise, Venetian senator, 1330.
 Lodovico, merchant of Venice, 120.
 Luca, Venetian nobleman in London, 1482, 1484.
 Valcamonica, 434.
 Vale of Gold, the Field of Cloth of Gold held on the ancient site of the, 68.
 Valencia, 570, 1054, 1057, 1094, 1099.
 delegates from, ask pardon of Charles for the insurrection of the Commons of Spain in, 526.
 Vice-Queen of, Germaine de Foix, 799.
 Valencian aristocracy, insurrection caused by the oppressions of the, 589.
 Valenciennes, 353.
 letter dated at, 348.
 Valier, Giovanni Francesco, letter from, 868.
 Valladolid, 275, 526, 685 note, 746.
 Columbus dies at, 1115 note.
 letters dated at, 542, 552, 554, 556, 564, 570, 571, 579, 589, 596, 607, 612, 613, 630, 633, 634, 635, 646, 659, 662, 665, 668, 672, 681, 686, 693, 702, 703, 710, 711, 729, 737, 741, 743, 848, 852, 856, 858, 859, 860, 865, 866, 867, 873, 876, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 884, 885, 892, 893, 894.
 Valle, Mons. de la, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43, 82.
 returns to France from Spain, 1268.

Vallis Aurea, the Field of Cloth of Gold held in the valley called, p. 21.
 Valois, 306.
 Valorosi, the company of the, at Venice, 941.
 Valtellina, the, 1135, 1358.
 Van Geste, the mother of Margaret of Austria named, 685 note.
 Vaniol, Antonio, letters from, 1135, 1137.
 Vannes, Peter, a Lucchese, one of Wolsey's secretaries, 298, 302, 1305.
 his signatures, 586, 660, 713, 749, 1216, 1255.
 Varola, Nicholas, letter from, 1191.
 Vases, gold, used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 81, 93.
 given to Wolsey by Francis, 94.
 Vatican, sacked by the Colonna faction, 1413 note.
 Vaux, Sir Nicholas, Captain of Guisnes, English ambassador to France, 70.
 Dom. Giovanni Gioachino di Passano, Lord of, French ambassador in England, 1269. in London, 1175, 1305. See Passano.
 Vedoia, Gaspara della, Vice-Chancellor of Venice, 716, 734.
 Veils, worn by ladies at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 17.
 Velasco, Inigo de, High Constable of Spain, 306.
 Velvet, 606, 724, 773. worn at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 15, p. 16.
 Vendôme, Madame, Gravelines her property, p. 31.
 Mons. de, 1008.
 Duke of, of the blood royal, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 58, p. 43, 68, 70, 73, 84, 90, 93.
 at Bordeaux, 1243, 1245.
 meets the Viceroy of Naples at his entrance into Cognac, 1270.
 at Angoulême, 1322.
 his brother, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 70.
 Duchess of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 84, 85.
 Cardinal of, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 93.
 Venetian army, the, 1327, 1333, 1348, 1352, 1358, 1363, 1368, 1373, 1380, 1392, 1409, 1412, 1420, 1424, 1425.
 fleet, the, 494.
 galleys, 447.
 trading, 351, 397, 398.
 gentlewomen, the sumptuary law concerning, 622.
 men-at-arms, in the Milanese, 369, 485.
 noblemen, 527, 540 note, 590, 596, 640.
 in London, 498.
 republic, the, invited to join the league between Henry and Charles, 479.

Venetian—cont.

- seamen, 474.
- ships, 388.
- states, the, 387, 1433.
- towns, Wolsey wishes them to be fortified, 1169.
- governor of Bergamo, letter from, 1192.
- captain-general, the, takes Lodi, 1332, 1333; Urbino, 1374.
- factories, of London and Damascus, 127, 1417.
- troops enter Cremona, 1420; quit for Milan, 1425.
- Venetians, the, 254, 448, 675, 802, 969.
-, regarded by Charles as his enemies, for having assisted Francis, 469.
-, abused by Wolsey, 555.
- Venice, 53, 115, 137, 143, 159, 174, 209, 304, 368, 392, 433, 453, 483, 493, 509, 512, 519, 520, 521, 540, 555, 767, 772, 801, 830, 918, 937, 942, 982, 1167.
-, letter dated at, 670.
-, named as ally by Henry and Francis, 111.
-, its territories, 262, 283, 379, 438, 440, 458, 530, 531, 538, 1021.
-, more "Frenchmen" said to be at, than in Paris, 460.
-, expenses incurred by, for defence against Turkish invasion, 475.
-, indissoluble union between France and, 489.
-, woollen manufactures the chief source of employment of the populace of, 515.
-, Richard Pace at, 524, 525, 533, 923, 924, 935.
-, ... import permits to, 610, 934.
-, league between Charles and, 617, 749.
-, disputes between Charles and, 638.
-, Francis irritated against, 785.
-, proposed league between the Pope, the Florentines, and, 926.
-, nominated as confederate in the treaty between England and France, 1122.
-, continuance of negotiations with the Imperial ambassadors by, 1175, 1200.
-, articles concerning, in the treaty between England and France, 1181.
-, its contingent for war against Charles, 1182.
-, Wolsey wishes to obtain books for his College from, 1187, 1286.
-, Robadanges quits, for the French Court, 1198.
-, declares her intention to be at perpetual peace with the Grand Turk and the Porte, 1209.
-, envoy sent by, to France, in accordance with the opinion of Wolsey, 1226.

Venice—cont.

-, Francesco Casal enters the military service of, 1281, 1308, 1310, 1333.
-, included in the Holy League, 1289, 1290, 1312.
-, bills of exchange drawn on, 1301.
-, at joint cost with the Pope subsidizes Switzers, 1327.
-, account of religious ceremonies performed in, on publication of the Holy League, 1343.
-, bills of exchange drawn at, on London, 1460, 1461, 1462, 1464, 1481, 1483.
-, conspiracy to deprive her of her territories (A.D. 1516), 1489.
-, accountants' office, the new, of, 961.
-, ambassadors of:—
 - to England, 1294, 1303, 1311, 1325, 1328, 1329, 1330, 1338, 1341, 1364, 1431, 1485. See Ambassadors,
 - at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 43, 103.
 - at Constantinople, letter to, 1209.
 - to France, 1226, 1359, 1362.
 - in Rome, 1360, 1485 App.; letter to, 1247.
 - in Austria, secretary of, Longin, 1296.
 - in Switzerland, 1361.
 - to Charles, 1424.
-, ambassadors to:—
 - from Charles, 460, 473, 488, 523, 962. See also Imperial Ambassadors.
 - from the Great Turk, 484, 1050.
 - from France, 1149, 1152, 1186, 1196.
 - from Henry, and Wolsey, 1199, 1200, 1202, 1206, 1208, 1222, 1232, 1363. See also Ambassadors.
 - from Scotland, 1414, 1429.
 - from the Turk, 1424.
-, apostolic legate in, Altobello Averoldi, 464, 468.
-, army of, 55, 256, 571, 937, 939, 1065. See Venetian army.
-, ... against the Pope, 351.
-, ... assisting Charles in the Milanese, 803, 804, 818, 912, 942, 956.
-, arsenal of, 39, 506, 877, 942, 991.
-, auditor novo of, 576.
-, auditor vecchio of, 576.
-, canal at, 1344.
-, captain general of, 1317.
-, College of, the, 13, 35, 80, 116, 138, 164, 180, 181, 231, 453, 464, 485, 499, 502, 511, 527, 528, 532, 536, 547, 566, 580, 594, 596, 597, 600, 603, 604, 606, 615, 621, 652, 667, 674, 677, 684, 689, 695, 697, 705, 706, 709, 718, 723, 726, 733, 734, 773, 786, 834, 841, 854, 924, 929, 931, 932, 940, 942, 953, 964, 965,

Venice, College of, the—cont.

- 972, 985, 993, 1022, 1023, 1037, 1051, 1055, 1105, 1117, 1127, 1145, 1208, 1210, 1213, 1215, 1222, 1228, 1257, 1271, 1303, 1317, 1366.
-, Council of, the, 440, 578, 591, 1127, -, ... sages of, 1239, 1308, 1309, 1345, 1350, 1390.
-, ... the Grand, 540, 677, 1232.
-, Council of Ten and Junta of, 390, 426, 453, 464, 520, 521, 533, 558, 949, 1105, 1128.
-, ... decrees of, 110.
-, ... motions made in, 389, 427, 437, 477, 620, 719, 953, 964, 965, 1170, 1180, 1331, 1340, 1341.
-, ... letters from, 39, 129, 155, 165, 417, 459, 468, 519, 534, 535, 548, 549, 567, 656, 657, 658, 669, 857, 861, 909, 1060, 1209, 1277, 1278, 1372, 1375, 1416.
-, ... letters to, 254, 257, 262, 265, 266, 338, 344, 402, 403, 449, 607, 613, 646, 668, 672, 681, 752, 780, 865, 878, 882, 885, 893, 900, 902, 903, 911, 916, 917, 920, 943, 958, 963, 971, 986, 1014, 1021, 1030, 1035, 1044, 1063, 1088, 1099, 1103, 1112, 1115, 1119, 1120.
-, Council of Ten, letter to, 1176, App. 1486, 1487.
-, ... cashier of, 1431.
-, ... secretary of, 116, 604. See also Franceschi, Andrea di.
-, ... treasurer of, 728.
-, ... chiefs of, 511, 557, 596, 607, 689, 1073, 1304, 1310.
-, ... letter from, 453.
-, ... letters to, 634, 710, 1062.
-, Council of XII. of, 673.
-, Council of Forty of, chiefs of the, 783, 1239.
-, Doge of, the, 226, 251, 334, 438, 471, 482, 502, 527, 528, 546, 594, 596, 597, 603, 606, 609, 627, 647, 663, 674, 684, 689, 690, 691, 697, 699, 711, 716, 724, 734, 773, 924, 925, 929, 931, 940, 942, 991, 993, 1022, 1042, 1056, 1127, 1145, 1152, 1208, 1391, 1405, 1411, 1441, 1484. See also Loredano; Gritti; Grimani.
-, Doge and College of, letters from, 721, 732, 1024, 1041, 1050, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1085, 1100, 1101, 1104, 1107, 1114, 1118, 1128, 1135, 1138, 1140, 1146, 1155, 1171, 1206, 1214, 1226, 1229, 1233, 1242, 1274, 1279, 1280, 1286, 1287, 1288, 1317, 1327, 1332, 1336, 1352, 1358, 1373, 1380, 1392, 1397, 1408, 1409, 1410, 1420, 1424, 1425, 1443, 1444, 1452.
-, Doge and Senate of, commission from, 1359.

Venice, Doge and Senate of—cont.

-, ... power from, to their ambassador in England, to stipulate a perpetual league, 1257.
-, ... letters from, 4, 6, 9, 19, 20, 29, 172, 259, 304, 328, 351, 358, 369, 370, 387, 399, 412, 419, 426, 428, 441, 459, 480, 485, 488, 489, 494, 514, 516, 517, 518, 525, 539, 544, 569, 574, 582, 592, 599, 605, 644, 645, 666, 714, 715, 742, 753, 754, 935, 937, 951, 954, 975, 978, 1082, 1124, 1147, 1156, 1161, 1165, 1183, 1184, 1185, 1190, 1198, 1247, 1249, 1251, 1256, 1260, 1283, 1300, 1311, 1347, 1348, 1360, 1361, 1362, 1363, 1368, 1379, 1389, 1398, 1412, 1415, 1448, 1449.
-, Doge and Signory of, letters from, 504, 505, 506, 1335.
-, ... letters to, 54, 61, 64, 65, 122, 124, 128, 287, 295, 301, 729, 737, 746, 990, 998, 1001, 1004, 1012, 1016, 1017, 1026, 1028, 1031, 1033, 1034, 1036, 1037, 1052, 1058, 1059, 1061, 1067, 1075, 1083, 1090, 1095, 1097, 1102, 1105, 1109, 1110, 1111, 1113, 1116, 1121, 1126, 1132, 1134, 1139, 1141, 1142, 1143, 1144, 1148, 1149, 1150, 1151, 1157, 1158, 1159, 1160, 1163, 1169, 1170, 1178, 1187, 1192, 1193, 1194, 1195, 1196, 1197, 1199, 1200, 1201, 1202, 1203, 1204, 1212, 1218, 1219, 1220, 1221, 1223, 1224, 1225, 1227, 1230, 1231, 1234, 1235, 1236, 1237, 1238, 1243, 1244, 1246, 1250, 1253, 1254, 1258, 1261, 1262, 1264, 1265, 1266, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1270, 1272, 1275, 1276, 1281, 1282, 1284, 1285, 1292, 1293, 1294, 1295, 1297, 1298, 1301, 1302, 1305, 1307, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1318, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1322, 1324, 1333, 1334, 1337, 1339, 1342, 1349, 1351, 1355, 1356, 1357, 1365, 1371, 1374, 1377, 1381, 1382, 1383, 1384, 1385, 1386, 1387, 1388, 1393, 1394, 1395, 1396, 1399, 1400, 1401, 1402, 1406, 1407, 1408, 1414, 1418, 1419, 1421, 1426, 1427, 1428, 1429, 1430, 1432, 1434, 1435, 1436, 1437, 1431, 1440, 1445, 1446, 1455, 1456, 1457, 1458, 1459.
-, Foundling Hospital at, 698.
-, German factory in, 640.
-, merchandise imported into, 23, 139, 200, 201, 522, 877.
-, merchants of, 120, 394, 399.
-, Ragusan ship hired in the Thames by, 1163.
-, Patriarch of, Antonio Contarini, 116, 633, 734, 844.
-, Prior of the Trinity at, 112.
-, Proveditor General of, 1317, 1392, 1426. See Pesaro.
-, Sages of the Senate of, 8, 18, 21, 139, 347, 368, 403, 429, 440, 476, 508, 512, 528, 529, 540, 541, 573, 575, 576, 597, 604, 803, 1210, 1330, 1413, 1447.

Venice—cont.

-, Sages for the Orders of, 18, 19, 1232, 1304, 1309, 1447.
-, Senate of, 114, 119, 121, 164, 184, 192, 201, 232, 251, 258, 264, 270, 286, 309, 327, 389, 390, 404, 427, 429, 453, 471, 477, 482, 508, 524, 528, 530, 531, 532, 538, 541, 546, 547, 575, 587, 591, 598, 600, 601, 602, 617, 619, 620, 625, 626, 680, 685, 690, 697, 716, 773, 774, 802, 840, 931, 1054, 1081, 1171, 1208, 1312, 1326, 1479, 1487.
-, ... decrees of the, 35, 200, 211, 444, 726, 949, 1127, 1338, 1417.
-, ... motions made in the, 8, 18, 21, 23, 30, 127, 148, 157, 158, 193, 303, 341, 368, 418, 437, 440, 476, 503, 512, 515, 529, 573, 576, 577, 578, 581, 588, 611, 653, 673, 696, 706, 707, 717, 725, 731, 755, 775, 783, 784, 803, 877, 912, 933, 950, 961, 973, 974, 1164, 1182, 1186, 1239, 1248, 1303, 1304, 1308, 1309, 1310, 1328, 1329, 1345, 1350, 1354, 1367, 1378, 1390, 1413, 1447.
-, ... 40 new members of, 1304.
-, Signory of, passim.
-, ... letters to, passim.
-, ... firmly bent on the closest union with Henry so as to have him for protector of the State, 1212.
- Venier, —, 697.
-, Antonio de, merchant of Venice, 120.
-, Domenego, Sage for the Milan Land, 716.
-, Gabriel, State Attorney of Venice, 576.
-, ... late State Attorney, 1330.
-, Leonardo, of the Venetian Senate, 258.
-, Marco Antonio, LL.D. of the Venetian Senate, 258, 1216.
-, ... appointed as Venetian ambassador to England, 264, 270, 386.
-, ... Venetian ambassador to the Duke of Milan, letters from, 853, 869, 871, 874, 919, 989, 1001, 1012, 1013, 1017, 1026, 1031, 1034, 1036, 1043, 1046, 1058, 1075, 1090, 1095, 1109, 1144.
-, ... State Attorney, ambassador to England, 1330, 1332, 1338, 1340, 1341, 1353, 1354, 1358, 1361, 1364, 1368, 1370, 1376, 1378, 1391, 1392, 1434, 1435, 1447.
-, ... nearly drowned on his way to England, 1432.
-, ... power given him to sign a general peace, 1441.
-, ... letters from, 1400, 1408, 1414, 1423, 1430, 1438, 1446, 1457, 1458, 1459.
-, ... letter to, 1449.
-, Nicolò, captain of Padua, letter from, 921.

- Venier, Orio, late one of the ten sages, 1330.
-, Zuan Antonio, 386.
-, ... elected as Venetian ambassador to England, 576, 581.
- Ventimiglia, captured by Francesco Casal, 1333.
- Vercelli, 366, 1100, 1104, 1107, 1109, 1135, 1386.
- Verona, 328, 477.
-, the conference at, between the Imperial and Venetian ambassadors, 18, 19, 20, 22.
-, the Doge's letters for the recovery of, 1487.
-, letters dated at, 291, 1020.
-, Governors of, letters from, 291, 1020.
-, bailiff of, Paulo Nani, 889, 891.
-, Matteo Giberti, Bishop of, Papal Datary, at Rome, 897, 916, 1121, 1201, 1204.
-, ... called a cowardly traitor by Charles, 1099.
-, ... a partizan of France, 1113.
- Veronese, a, 607, 1485.
-, Garzano in the, letter dated at, 1152.
- Vessels, golden, used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 88.
- Vettori, D. Paulo, sent by the Pope to France, 1226.
- Vicar, Imperial. See Ferdinand, Don.
- Vice-Chancellor, Imperial, 196.
-, Venetian, Gasparo di la Vedoa, 734.
- Vice-Chancellors of England, 140, 193, 211, 293. See also Yong, John; Tunstall, Cuthbert; Tayler, John.
- Viceroy of England, Henry creates his natural son, 1052, 1053.
- of Naples. See Lannoy, Charles de.
- Victory, the, a Spanish ship, discovers the Spice Islands, 556 note, 805, 1115.
-, captured by the Portuguese, 1217.
- Vielmi, Venetian secretary at Venice, 697.
- Vienna, proclamation against Luther at, 889.
-, Emperor Maximilian at, 1485.
-, letters dated at, 863, 864, 872, 883.
-, Bishop of, 883.
- Vigevano, the French fortify, 812.
- Villa Franca (Villefranche), in Provence, 170, 1048.
- Villach, 849.
- Villiers, Mons. de, French ambassador at Venice, 734.
- Vinazexi, Girolamo, of Venice, 1464.
- Vinci, Leonardo da', the painter, dies at Fontainebleau (2 May 1519), 88 note.
- Vio, Thomas de, Caitano, General of the Dominicans, Cardinal of S. Sixtus, Papal Legate in Hungary, 788 note.
- Vipach, the river, 448 note.

Viscontino, the, (Anchises Visconti ?) 68.

Viterbo, 916.

Vitorio, D. Paoio, sent by the Pope to France, 1221.

Vittore, Giovanni, merchant of Florence, 1483.

Vittoria, 500, 792.

....., letters dated at, 797, 799, 805, 806.

Volante, Master. See Wingfield, Sir Richard.

Volterra, Cardinal, deputed for the affairs of Luther, 781.

Voyages of discovery, Charles's pilot-major for, 557. See Cabot, Sebastian.

....., Wolsey offers Cabot high terms if he will sail upon, 607.

W.

Wales, Princess Mary visits her principality of, 1096.

Waltham, letter of Henry's dated at, 1255.

Wardrobe, gentlemen of Francis', at the Field of Cloth of Gold, 67.

....., the Queen's, a palace of Katharine's called, 213.

Warehouses in England, 483.

Warham, William, Archbishop of Canterbury, at the meeting of Henry and Charles at Calais, p. 15, p. 16, 53.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20.

....., his praise of Wolsey, 210.

....., his conversation with Orio, 1218.

Warwick, Richard, Earl of, letter to (A.D. 1471), 1468.

Weapons, jousting, used at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 24.

West, Dr. Nicholas, Bishop of Ely, at the Calais conference, 335; sent from thence by Wolsey to Francis to make an adjustment between Francis and Charles, 349, 352, 353, 355.

Western produce, Venetian duty on, 23.

Westminster, 130, 206, 210, 213.

....., the plague very rife at, 123.

....., letter dated at, 1489.

Westmoreland, Earl of, called Earl of Chectria, his brother arrested with Buckingham upon the charge of high treason, 189.

Whistle, a sailor's gold, worn by Bonnavet, the Admiral of France, as a symbol of his office, 67.

Winchester, 467, 478, 484.

....., letter dated at, 486.

....., Bishop of. See Fox, Richard.

Winchester bushels, 142.

Windebank, Secretary (temp. 1634), 467 note.

Windsor, 486, 1037, 1053.

....., letters dated at, 478, 484.

....., the treaty of, made between Henry and Charles against Francis, 479.

..... Castle, treaty of Windsor dated at, 479.

....., Henry VII. and Council at, 1478.

Wine, fountain at the Field of Cloth of Gold spouting, for all comers, p. 23, 83.

....., English ladies at the Field of Cloth of Gold accused of drinking large quantities of, 81.

....., great scarcity of, in England, 396.

....., 50 carts of good, presented to Lady Margaret by Louise of Savoy, 413.

....., licences to Pace to import, into Venice, 559, 587, 610, 611, 626, 706, 707, 933, 934.

....., duty free, for use of ambassadors in Venice, 1239, 1240.

Wine measures, 440.

..... duties, office for the, at Venice, 559.

Wines, Henry's house at the Field of Cloth of Gold, containing the choicest, 88, 94.

....., seized at St. Sebastian's, 433.

....., imported at London from Venice, 474, 475.

Wine-ship, a, detained at Biscay, 394.

....., belonging to Mafio Bernardo, trading with England, 483.

Wingfield, Sir Richard, 407, 448, 463, 498, 987.

....., English ambassador with Francis, 40.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 21, 67.

....., called Master Volante, 57; Sir Corado, 204.

....., English ambassador (on several occasions) to Charles, 204, 217, 220, 222, 224, 239, 241, 249, 254, 257, 343, 348, 356, 360, 380, 395, 451, 452, 992, 1003, 1011, 1021, 1029, 1044, 1048, 1057, 1059, 1064, 1069, 1079, 1090, 1095.

....., going to meet Wolsey at Calais, 274.

....., dies of the flux (24 July 1525), 1078.

....., Sir Robert, English resident ambassador with Charles, 406, 407, 410, 422, 430, 431, 433, 446, 448.

Witch, a, burnt at the Campidoglio, Rome, 1125.

Wittemberg, 147 note, 675.

....., Lutheranism at, 383.

....., Lutheran books printed at, 628.

....., University of, 383.

Wolsey, Thomas, Archbishop of York, Cardinal, Lord Chancellor, and Legate a latere, 19, 22, 29, 36, 41, 49, 86, 99, 108, 113, 115, 121, 123, 132, 137, 141, 143, 151, 162, 169, 176, 178, 185, 195, 204, 226, 227, 233, 236, 238, 239, 241, 248 note, 304, 351, 389, 390, 393, 399, 403, 406, 407, 408, 424, 429, 433, 446, 457, 474, 481, 483, 493, 506, 513, 514, 520, 536, 537, 541, 547, 573, 582, 590, 629, 650, 656, 666, 671, 692, 715, 721, 730, 732, 757, 760, 764, 784, 820, 860, 874, 899, 935, 1021, 1024, 1051, 1052, 1059, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1073, 1085, 1096, 1104, 1107, 1113, 1114, 1116, 1117, 1125, 1128, 1135, 1138, 1140, 1183, 1184, 1226, 1304, 1339, 1375, 1397, 1401, 1409.

....., (A.D. 1520): might be styled King of England, 1.

....., Venice presents him with 60 Cairo carpets, 1, 2, 13, 18, 35, 107, 110, 117, 118, 133.

....., Francis presents him with a golden chalice, 1.

....., his friendliness towards Venice, 3, 8, 9, 155, 165, 177, 441, 469, 480, 974, 1037, 1100.

....., spoken of as alter rex, 18, 509.

....., draws up the articles of agreement for the interview between Henry and Francis, 25.

....., in supreme authority and favour with Henry, 35, 974.

....., suffers from the colic, 43.

....., in better health than usual, 47.

....., accompanies Henry to France, p. 14, p. 19, 53, 54, p. 44, 64, 106.

....., "legate born," p. 16.

....., gives plenary indulgence at the interview between Henry and Charles, p. 16.

....., exacts the "assay," p. 18.

....., at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 20, p. 21, p. 22, p. 23, p. 26, p. 27, 58, 59, p. 45, 67, 68, 70, 71, 72, 73, 80, 82, 90.

....., performs mass there, p. 29, 69, 78, 79, 92, 93, 95.

....., at the second interview between Henry and Charles, p. 31.

....., said to be the proudest prelate that ever breathed, 56.

....., governs the realm of England as quietly as his own archiepiscopal see of York, 57.

....., offers to arrange the disputes between Francis and Charles, 62.

....., Francis says he is worthy to rule England, 65.

....., endeavours to adjust the disputes between Francis and Charles, 73, 75, 87.

....., gives Lady Margaret a cross containing a piece of the true cross, 91.

....., Louise of Savoy presents him with a jewelled crucifix, 94.

Wolsey, Cardinal—cont.

....., Francis presents him with golden vases, 94.

....., relies on making peace between Charles and Francis, 98.

....., opposed to Francis' going to Italy, 129, 130, 135.

....., building a palace at Hampton, 130.

....., owing to presents received is contented with Francis fortifying Ardres, 130.

....., refuses to accept from Charles the bulls for the bishopric of Badojoz free of cost, 130.

....., says Francis is of a jealous disposition, 136.

....., Francis appoints him and Louise of Savoy arbitrators of the affairs of Scotland, 142, 150.

....., (A.D. 1521): dissatisfied about the affairs of Scotland, 167.

....., his legatine powers confirmed for another two years, 168.

....., Henry's visit to him when ill of the fever, 187.

....., Francis distrusts, 189.

....., complains of Francis' actions against Charles, 189.

....., publishes the condemnation of Martin Luther, 208.

....., the Duke of Buckingham said to have plotted the assassination of, 209.

....., receives a brief, which gives him greater authority, 210.

....., publicly excommunicates Luther, and curses his followers, 213.

....., his palace at Eltham, 219.

....., Henry appoints him judge of the disputes between Charles and Francis, 225.

....., the government of England exclusively in his hands, 232.

....., described as being very proud and choleric, 232.

....., goes to Calais to arrange the disputes between Charles and Francis, 234, 240, 249, 252, 255, 256, 260, 265, 268, 269, 272, 273, 274, 277, 278, 279, 280, 282, 286, 287, 289, 290, 2.

....., receives bulls authorizing him to receive the annats in England, 263.

....., quits Calais for Bruges for an interview with Charles, 283, 284, 285, 288, 291, 293, 295, 296, 297.

....., the French do not trust him because in Charles's camp the English angel is the only current coin, 292.

....., his reception upon entering Bruges, 298.

....., his interview with Charles, 298, 299.

....., at Bruges, 300, 301, 307, 314, 315, 344, 345.

Wolsey, Cardinal—cont.

-, returns to Calais from Bruges, 305, 306, 309, 310, 316, 318, 319, 320, 325, 326.
-, his interview with the King of Denmark in Charles's garden at Bruges, 308.
-, his conferences and negotiations with Charles, 312, 313.
-, renews his conferences with the French and Imperial Commissioners at Calais, 321.
-, states Francis has no money, 322.
-, negotiates at Bruges with Charles for his (Charles's) marriage to Princess Mary, 323 note, 332.
-, still at Calais, 327, 330, 331, 333, 334, 335, 344, 346, 347, 348, 350, 364, 366, 368, 369, 370, 371.
-, ill of the fever, 329, 335, 336; suspects he has been poisoned, 335; recovers, 342.
-, his illness said to be feigned, 343.
-, sends two ambassadors to Charles and two to Francis from Calais, to make an adjustment between Charles and Francis, 349.
-, exasperated against Francis for having sent Albany to Scotland, 380.
-, (A.D. 1522): returns to England, 384.
-, Charles refuses to aid his election as Pope, 396.
-, endeavours to effect a truce between Charles and Francis, 414, 423, 442.
-, proposes a league between the Pope, Charles, Henry, and Venice, 417, 426, 428, 449, 467; draws up the articles for the same, 475, 484, 488, 494, 504, 505, 516, 531.
-, his complaints against Venice, 440, 441.
-, receives Charles upon his visit to England, 462, 463, 470.
-, demands of Venice the use of the Flanders galleys for Charles's journey to Spain, 463, 465; makes use of them, 484.
-, the Bishop of Palencia loudly vituperates his arrogance, 465.
-, says he will take the field in person against France, and raise 10,000 men at his own cost, 467.
-, vituperates the French, 467.
-, his late negotiations at Calais, related by Henry to Venice, 471.
-, Venice asks him to release the Flanders galleys, 517.
-, wishes to make an agreement between Charles and Venice, 522, 544.
-, said to want to obtain money from Venice, 552, 570.

Wolsey, Cardinal—cont.

-, grossly abuses the Venetians, saying they are the lowest of all potentates, 555.
-, prohibits exports from England, 555.
-, angry about the Venetian galleys, 562, 563.
-, insists on Venice attacking France, 566, 569.
-, Pace's insinuations against, 567.
-, seeks an opportunity to confiscate the Flanders galleys in England, 571.
-, the Pope sends him briefs to release the Flanders galleys, 574.
-, undertakes the modification of the articles of agreement between Charles and Venice, 598.
-, Venice empowers him to make an adjustment between the Signory and Charles, 601.
-, Cabot refuses his high offers to go on a voyage of discovery with an armada, 607.
-, (A.D. 1523): the see of Badajoz saddled with a pension of 2,000 ducats for, 651.
-, Venice thanks him for releasing the Flanders galleys, 653.
-, at the inauguration of the High Court of Parliament, 663.
-, causes the election of four individuals, his creatures, for the Black Parliament, 679.
-, dissatisfied with Charles, 680.
-, no longer in such great favour with Henry, 687.
-, pleased at the agreement between Charles and Venice, 739.
-, abuses the ambassador of Lady Margaret, who asks for a loan of money, 748.
-, (A.D. 1524): wishes to negotiate the peace between Charles and Francis to give himself greater authority, 824; to which Francis agrees, 826.
-, Gattinara's dislike to, and opinion of, 845, 852, 865, 882, 948.
-, said to have deceived Francis, 882.
-, deceives himself as regards Charles placing the negotiations for peace in his hands, 885.
-, Pace's bad opinion of, 888; says his nature is very base, 888.
-, his negotiations with the French, 900, 1105.
-, (A.D. 1525): urges the Imperialists to war, 939.
-, his persecution of Pace, alluded to by Shakespear, 975 note.
-, desires the Imperial ambassador to write nothing from the English Court without first showing his letters to him (Wolsey), 986.

Wolsey, Cardinal—cont.

-, abuses Clement VII., 986.
-, report of his commanding one of the armies against Picardy, 1012.
-, warmly receives the Venetian ambassador Orio, 1016, 1037, 1060; for which Venice thanks him, 1050.
-, an insurrection against, in consequence of Henry levying a tax upon the people, quelled by Henry repealing it, 1025, 1027, 1028.
-, recommends Venice not to make any agreement with Charles, because the Spaniards are detested, 1061, 1062, 1067.
-, pensions paid to, by Charles, 1069.
-, wants to make peace with Francis, reserving place for Charles, 1069.
-, directs everything, 1097.
-, Henry writes without the knowledge of, for the return of Pace from Venice, 1097.
-, sends ambassadors to France and Rome to negotiate an agreement between England and France, 1097.
-, well inclined to the confederacy of the Italian powers, lest Charles render himself monarch of Italy, 1101, 1106, 1141.
-, very intent on the league with France, 1111.
-, the Venetian ambassador instructed to offer him whatever can rebound to the honour and profit of the English Crown or himself, 1118.
-, desires the release of Francis on behalf of Henry and himself, for the benefit of the Christian religion, 1124.
-, chooses Italy to remain free, as Charles wishes to make himself monarch of the world, 1141, 1187.
-, at his place, "the Moore," the King being with him, 1150.
-, spoken of conjointly with the King, as the King and Cardinal, 1146, 1160, 1161, 1166, 1169, 1171, 1185, 1190, 1191, 1198, 1199, 1206, 1214, 1226, 1229, 1233, 1242, 1249, 1251, 1256, 1265, 1277, 1278, 1279, 1280, 1286, 1309, 1311, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1326, 1332, 1336, 1345, 1352, 1358, 1368, 1378, 1380, 1383, 1389, 1410, 1412, 1432, 1433, 1438, 1443, 1449.
-, his conversations or interviews, sometimes in company of the King, with the Venetian ambassador and secretary, 1163, 1164, 1165, 1169, 1187, 1190, 1198, 1201, 1203, 1218, 1219, 1224, 1227, 1230, 1231, 1235, 1238, 1254, 1269, 1275, 1314, 1315, 1349, 1351, 1371, 1377, 1379, 1381, 1382, 1387, 1393, 1418, 1428, 1446, 1458, 1459.

Wolsey, Cardinal—cont.

-, urges the stipulation of the league by the Signory, adding, "The King and we, at the cost of our own substance, will not tolerate the domination of Italy by the Emperor," 1175.
-, at Richmond, "the court of the Cardinal," 1187.
-, desires books and MSS. for his College at Oxford, 1187, 1198, 1258, 1286.
-, (A.D. 1526): has the entire management of the realm, 1193.
-, gives audience in lieu of the King to the French ambassador, 1197, 1203.
-, commissions Sir Gregory Casal to proceed to Venice and prevent the Signory from making terms with the Emperor, 1200.
-, Madame Margaret's ambassador waits on, 1212.
-, treats Langus, Papal nuncio, as a spy, 1212, 1335, 1336.
-, the King and he will be protectors and defenders of the Signory and State of Venice, 1219, 1230.
-, at Greenwich with the King, giving audience to the Venetian ambassador, 1220, 1235.
-, in pontifical array sings mass at St. Paul's, upon publication of the peace between Charles and Francis, 1223.
-, sings high mass at the taking of Henry's oath to the agreement with Francis, 1262.
-, in great dread of the plague, 1275.
-, rental for, from territory in Naples, to be paid by Francis upon Henry joining the league against Charles, 1284, 1289, 1290, 1307; would prefer deriving the sum from the duchy of Milan, 1363, 1366, 1392.
-, indisposed at Richmond, 1294.
-, intends marrying the Princess of England to the Duke of Orleans, Francis' second son, that he may reside in England and become popular there, 1297.
-, declines to receive the Signory's secretary, as the term of quarantine had not expired since the demise of the ambassador, 1305.
-, confers with the Papal nuncio, Gambara, 1307, 1335, 1336, 1339, 1348, 1349, 1351, 1382.
-, gives audience to the ambassador of France (Passano), 1324, 1387, 1388, 1395.
-, thanked by the Doge and College of Venice, who acknowledge the league to be the work of his hands, and worthy of his great ability, counsel, and wisdom, 1327, 1345.

Wolsey, Cardinal—cont.

-, ... proposes that the league be bound not to desist until the Emperor acquit his debt to the King of England, 1347, 1349.
-, ... goes to Hampton Court, thence to Oxford, 1374, 1382.
-, ... gives audience to the newly arrived Papal nuncio, Sanga, 1393, 1401, 1428.
-, ... tells the Venetian secretary "this King will not spend money to make an enemy of his friend, and gain nothing," 1406.
-, ... urged to induce the Emperor to agree to a general peace, 1424.
-, ... requested by the Emperor to be a mediator for peace, so that he may attack the Infidels, 1428.
-, ... invites all the ambassadors in London to attend mass and dine with him, 1425.
-, ... not inclined to side with the Emperor, even if the King is, 1439, 1450.
-, ... characteristics of, depicted by Castiglione, 1450.
-, ... false report of his arrival at the French Court, 1453.
-, ... (A.D. 1515): spoken of as "one who has sprung up like a mushroom," 1486.
-, ... connives at the Duke of Suffolk's marriage with Mary Queen of France, 1486 and note.
-, ... speech of, to Giustinian, upon the recovery of Verona, 1487.
-, ... letters from, 750.
-, ... letters to, 101, 138, 398, 584, 655, 720.
-, ... his secretaries, 572: See also Vannes, Peter.
-, ... his physician, Agostini, 614.

Woodstock, 759.

Wool, exported from England, 120, 139, 200, 201, 506, 515, 687, 838.

....., scarcity of, in Venice, 872.

Woolsacks, four, in use at the inauguration of the High Court of Parliament of England, 663.

Worcester, bishops of. See Giglis; Ghinucci.

....., Charles Somerset, Earl of, Lord Chamberlain of England, 319 note, 466.

....., ... ambassador to France, 43.

....., ... to Charles and Francis, 240.

....., ... accompanies Wolsey to Calais, 272, 279; who sends him with Dr. West to Francis to make a truce between Charles and Francis, 349, 352, 353, 355.

....., ... bears Henry's train, 663.

Worms, 203, 227, 239, 832, 1024.

....., Diet of, 395.

....., treaty of, 1100.

....., letters dated at, 147, 156, 191, 196, 197, 199, 202, 209, 216, 217, 220, 222, 223, 224.

Wrestling, at the Field of Cloth of Gold, p. 24, 82.

Wurtemberg, duchy of, Charles resigns it to Don Ferdinand, 409.

....., rising of Lutherans in, 907, 936.

....., the league of Swabia bound to maintain, for Don Ferdinand, 955.

....., the Lutherans take the marquisate of, 1007.

....., books against Luther printed at, 1098.

....., Duke of, Francis insists that he be comprised in the truce between Charles and Francis, 366.

....., ... favoured by the Lutherans, 952.

....., ... fighting for the recovery of his states, 952; recovers many of them, 955.

....., ... re-instated, 1000.

X.

Xativa, Spain, disturbances at, 526.

....., besieged by Charles, 570.

....., tenders obedience to Charles, 589.

Y.

Yong, John, Master of the Rolls, 140 note, 193, 211.

York, Wolsey's see of, 57.

....., Cardinal of. See Wolsey.

....., Margaret of, third wife of Charles the Bold, dies (in 1506), 404 note.

....., a captain of, perishes in a storm off Brittany, 572.

....., Archbishop of, George Nevill, (A.D. 1471), letter to, 1465.

....., ... cousin to Richard, Earl of Warwick, 1468.

Yorkshire, muster in (A.D. 1496), 1478 ii.

Ypres, 467.

Yucatan, discovered by Cortes, 556, 827.

Z.

- Zamora, Bishop of, 151.
, takes the field with the Commons of Spain, against Charles, 212.
, confined in the castle of Simancas, 552.
- Zana, the*, a Venetian ship, taken by the French, and subsequently by the Biscayans, 847, 848.
- Zane, Beneto, master of a Venetian ship, 836.
, Zuan, and Brothers, Venetian merchants, 838.
- Zantani, Vincenzo, captain of the Alexandrian galleys, 991.
- Zealand, 232, 425, 436.
- Zen, Piero, Venetian ambassador at Constantinople, 704.
- Zenone. See Messina, Bishop of.
- Ziani, Paolo, a Franciscan friar, letter from, 813.
- Zonca, Venetian secretary in London (A.D. 1634), 467 note.
- Zorzi, Marin, LL.D., of the Venetian Senate, 482.
, Cà, Venice, 527.
- Zuanne, Alvise di Stefano di, of Venice, 1460.
, Bernardo de, of Venice, 1464.
- Zuinglius, vicar of Zurich, writes and prints in favour of Luther, 1153 note, 1252, 1296.
- Zurich, 422, 639.
, vicar of, Zuinglius, 1153, 1252.
, Philip Melanethon of, 1153.
, conference at Baden near, 1296.

ERRATA.

Page.

- 43, and nos. 73, 85, for "Boissi" read "Réné, Bastard of Savoy."
- 56, line 22, for "Bibiena," read "Boissi."
- 90, lines 4, 5, for "The Bailly [of Caen], the English ambassador in France," read "The Bailly [of Caen], late [French] ambassador in England (che fò orator di qui)."
- 122, no. 210, for "The Same to the Same," read "Antonio Surian to the Signory."
- 144, foot-note, for "1531," read "1521."
- 254, no. 493, for "Hampton Court," read "Hampton."
- 315, no. 668, foot-note, for "1524" read "1523."

In Vol. I. p. 356, dele "Calcutta" before "Colocut, Calicut." The place referred to is not the capital of Bengal, but the capital of Malabar, 19 leagues S.W. of Bombay, and which was the first port visited by the Europeans under Vasco de Gama.

In Vol. II. p. 336, no. 808, line 1, for "Signory," read "Council of Ten."

LONDON:
Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.
[.—400.—10/69.]

CATALOGUE
OF RECORD PUBLICATIONS ON SALE

BY

Messrs. Longman & Co., London ;
Messrs. James Parker & Co., Oxford and London ;
Messrs. Macmillan & Co., Cambridge and London ;
Messrs. A. & C. Black, Edinburgh ; and Mr. A. Thom, Dublin.

CONTENTS.

	Page
CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c. - - -	3
CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND
DURING THE MIDDLE AGES - - -	9
PUBLICATIONS OF THE RECORD COMMISSIONERS, &c. - -	25
WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY - - -	30

CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c.

[IMPERIAL 8vo., cloth. Price 15s. each Volume or Part.]

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the present Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although “the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world,” and although “they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the want of proper Calendars and Indexes.”

Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

The following Works have been already published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls :—

CALENDARIUM GENEALOGICUM; for the Reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. Edited by CHARLES ROBERTS, Esq., Secretary of the Public Record Office. 2 Vols. 1865.

This is a work of great value for elucidating the early history of our nobility and landed gentry.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGNS OF EDWARD VI., MARY, and ELIZABETH, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by ROBERT LEMON, Esq., F.S.A. 1856-1865.
Vol. I.—1547-1580. | Vol. II.—1581-1590.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF ELIZABETH (continued), preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. 1867-1869.
Vol. III.—1591-1594. | Vol. V.—1598-1601.
Vol. IV.—1595-1597.

Of the above series, five volumes are published, extending from 1547 to 1601.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF JAMES I., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. 1857-1859.
Vol. I.—1603-1610. | Vol. III.—1619-1623.
Vol. II.—1611-1618. | Vol. IV.—1623-1625, with Addenda.

Mrs. Everett Green has completed a Calendar of the Domestic State Papers of the reign of James I. in four volumes. The mass of historical matter thus rendered accessible to investigation is large and important. It throws new light on the Gunpowder-plot; the rise and fall of Somerset; the particulars connected with the Overbury murder; the disgrace of Sir Edward Coke; and other matters connected with the reign.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES I., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by JOHN BRUCE, Esq., F.S.A. 1858-1869.
Vol. I.—1625-1626. | Vol. VII.—1634-1635.
Vol. II.—1627-1628. | Vol. VIII.—1635.
Vol. III.—1628-1629. | Vol. IX.—1635-1636.
Vol. IV.—1629-1631. | Vol. X.—1636-1637.
Vol. V.—1631-1633. | Vol. XI.—1637.
Vol. VI.—1633-1634. | Vol. XII.—1637-1638.

This Calendar is in continuation of that of the Domestic State Papers of the reign of James I., and will extend to the Restoration of Charles II. At present it comprises the first fourteen years of the reign of Charles I., but is in active progress towards completion. It presents notices of a large number of original documents of great value to all inquirers into the history of the period to which it relates. Many of these documents have been hitherto unknown.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES II., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. 1860-1866.
Vol. I.—1660-1661. | Vol. V.—1665-1666.
Vol. II.—1661-1662. | Vol. VI.—1666-1667.
Vol. III.—1663-1664. | Vol. VII.—1667.
Vol. IV.—1664-1665.

Seven volumes, of the period between 1660 and 1667, have been published.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS relating to SCOTLAND, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARKHAM JOHN THORPE, Esq., of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. 1858.

Vol. I., the Scottish Series, of the Reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth, 1509-1589.

Vol. II., the Scottish Series, of the Reign of Elizabeth, 1589-1603; an Appendix to the Scottish Series, 1543-1592; and the State Papers relating to Mary Queen of Scots during her Detention in England, 1568-1587.

The above two volumes of State Papers relate to Scotland, and embrace the period between 1509 and 1603. In the second volume are notices of the State Papers relating to Mary Queen of Scots.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS relating to IRELAND, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by HANS CLAUDE HAMILTON, Esq., F.S.A. 1860-1867.

Vol. I.—1509-1573.

| Vol. II.—1574-1585.

The above have been published under the editorship of Mr. Hans Claude Hamilton; another volume is in progress.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, COLONIAL SERIES, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, and elsewhere. Edited by W. NOEL SAINSBURY, Esq. 1860-1862.

Vol. I.—America and West Indies, 1574-1660.

Vol. II.—East Indies, China, and Japan, 1513-1616.

These volumes include an analysis of Colonial Papers in the Public Record Office, the India Office, and the British Museum. The third volume is in the press. The regular series of the East India Papers in the Public Record Office are calendared to the year 1623; those relating to the same subject in the Domestic Correspondence to 1625; in the Foreign Correspondence to 1621; the Court Minutes of the East India Company to 1621; and the Original Correspondence in the India Office to 1621. Many undated Papers have been dated and arranged.

CALENDAR OF LETTERS AND PAPERS, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC, OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, the British Museum, &c. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1862-1867.

Vol. I.—1509-1514.

Vol. II. (in Two Parts)—1515-1518.

Vol. III. (in Two Parts)—1519-1523.

These volumes contain summaries of all State Papers and Correspondence relating to the reign of Henry VIII., in the Public Record Office, of those formerly in the State Paper Office, in the British Museum, the Libraries of Oxford and Cambridge, and other Public Libraries; and of all letters that have appeared in print in the works of Burnet, Strype, and others. Whatever authentic original material exists in England relative to the religious, political, parliamentary, or social history of the country during the reign of Henry VIII., whether despatches of ambassadors, or proceedings of the army, navy, treasury, or ordnance, or records of Parliament, appointments of officers, grants from the Crown, &c., will be found calendared in these volumes.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD VI., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. 1547-1553. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Correspondant du Comité Impérial des Travaux Historiques et des Sociétés Savantes de France. 1861.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF MARY, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. 1553-1558. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law, and Correspondant du Comité Impérial des Travaux Historiques et des Sociétés Savantes de France. 1861.

The two preceding volumes exhibit the negotiations of the English ambassadors with the courts of the Emperor Charles V. of Germany, of Henry II. of France, and of Philip II. of Spain. The affairs of several of the minor continental states also find various incidental illustrations of much interest.

A valuable series of Papers descriptive of the circumstances which attended the loss of Calais merits a special notice; while the progress of the wars in the north of France, into which England was dragged by her union with Spain, is narrated at some length. The domestic affairs of England are of course passed over in these volumes, which treat only of its relations with foreign powers.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF ELIZABETH, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, &c. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863-1869.

Vol. I.—1558-1559.	Vol. IV.—1561-1562.
Vol. II.—1559-1560.	Vol. V.—1562.
Vol. III.—1560-1561.	Vol. VI.—1563.

These six volumes contain a calendar of the Foreign Correspondence of Queen Elizabeth, from her accession in 1558, to 1563, of which the originals, drafts, or contemporary copies, are deposited in the Public Record Office, &c. These documents are of the greatest value as exhibiting the position of England at one of the most interesting periods of history, in regard to its relations with France, Scotland, Spain, and Germany. They are of especial importance as illustrating not only the external but also the domestic affairs of France during the period which immediately preceded the outbreak of the first great war of religion under the Prince of Condé and the Duke of Guise.

CALENDAR OF TREASURY PAPERS, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. 1557-1696. Edited by JOSEPH REDINGTON, Esq. 1868.

The Papers connected with the administration of the affairs of the Treasury, from 1556-7 to 1696, comprising petitions, reports, and other documents relating to services rendered to the State, grants of money and pensions, appointments to offices, remissions of fines and duties, &c., are calendared in this volume. They illustrate civil and military events, financial and other matters, the administration in Ireland and the Colonies, &c., and afford information nowhere else recorded.

CALENDAR OF THE CAREW PAPERS, preserved in Lambeth Library. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London; and WILLIAM BULLEN, Esq. 1867-1869.

Vol. I.—1515-1574.	Vol. III.—1589-1600.
Vol. II.—1575-1588.

The Carew Papers relating to Ireland deposited in the Lambeth Library are not only unique in themselves, but are of great importance. Three volumes of the Calendar of these valuable Papers have been published, extending from 1515 to 1600, which cannot fail to be welcome to all students of Irish history. Another volume is in the press.

CALENDAR OF LETTERS, DESPATCHES, AND STATE PAPERS, relating to the Negotiations between England and Spain, preserved in the Archives at Simancas, and elsewhere. Edited by G. A. BERGENROTH. 1862-1868.

Vol. I.—Hen. VII.—1485-1509.
Vol. II.—Hen. VIII.—1509-1525.
Supplement to Vol. I. and Vol. II.

Mr. Bergenroth was engaged in compiling a Calendar of the Papers relating to England preserved in the archives of Simancas in Spain, and the corresponding portion removed from Simancas to Paris. Mr. Bergenroth also visited Madrid, and examined the Papers there, bearing on the reign of Henry VIII. The first volume contains the Spanish Papers of the reign of Henry VII.; the second volume, those of the first portion of the reign of Henry VIII. The Supplement contains new information relating to the private life of Queen Katharine of England; and to the projected marriage of Henry VII. with Queen Juana, widow of King Philip of Castile, and mother of the Emperor Charles V.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS, relating to ENGLISH AFFAIRS, preserved in the Archives of Venice, &c. Edited by RAWDON BROWN, Esq. 1864-1869.
 Vol. I.—1202-1509. | Vol. III.—1520-1526.
 Vol. II.—1509-1519.

Of the Papers in the Venetian archives, Mr. Rawdon Brown has published three volumes of his Calendar, extending from 1202 to 1526, and has made considerable progress in the fourth volume. Mr. Brown's researches have brought to light a number of important documents relating to the various periods of English history, and his contributions to historical literature are of the most interesting and important character.

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY KEEPER OF THE PUBLIC RECORDS AND THE REV. J. S. BREWER TO THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS, upon the Carte and Carew Papers in the Bodleian and Lambeth Libraries. 1864. Price 2s. 6d.

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY KEEPER OF THE PUBLIC RECORDS TO THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS, upon the Documents in the Archives and Public Libraries of Venice. 1866. Price 2s. 6d.

SYLLABUS, IN ENGLISH, OF RYMER'S FÆDERA. By THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. Vol. I.—Will. I.—Edw. III.; 1066-1377. 1869.

The "Fædera," or "Rymer's Fædera," is a collection of miscellaneous documents illustrative of the History of Great Britain and Ireland, from the Norman Conquest to the reign of Charles II. Several editions of the "Fædera" have been published, and the present Syllabus was undertaken to make the contents of this great National Work more generally known.

In the Press.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, COLONIAL SERIES, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, and elsewhere. Edited by W. NOEL SAINSBURY, Esq. Vol. III.—East Indies, China, and Japan, 1617, &c.

CALENDAR OF LETTERS AND PAPERS, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC, OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office, the British Museum, &c. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vol. IV.—1524, &c.

CALENDAR OF THE CAREW PAPERS, preserved in Lambeth Library. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London; and WILLIAM BULLEN, Esq. Vol. IV.—1601, &c.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, FOREIGN SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF ELIZABETH, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. Vol. VII.—1564.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS, relating to ENGLISH AFFAIRS, preserved in the Archives of Venice, &c. Edited by RAWDON BROWN, Esq. Vol. IV.—1527, &c.

SYLLABUS, IN ENGLISH, OF RYMER'S FÆDERA; with Index. Vol. II.

In Progress.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS relating to IRELAND, preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by HANS CLAUDE HAMILTON, Esq., F.S.A. Vol. III.—1586, &c.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF CHARLES I., preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by JOHN BRUCE, Esq., F.S.A. Vol. XIII.—1638.

CALENDAR OF LETTERS, DESPATCHES, AND STATE PAPERS, relating to the Negotiations between England and Spain, preserved in the Archives at Simancas and elsewhere. Edited by DON PASCUAL DE GAYANGOS. Hen. VIII.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, DOMESTIC SERIES, OF THE REIGN OF ELIZABETH (continued), preserved in Her Majesty's Public Record Office. Edited by MARY ANNE EVERETT GREEN. Vol. VI.—1601-1603, with Addenda.

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[ROYAL 8vo., half-bound. Price 10s. each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional knowledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. THE CHRONICLE OF ENGLAND, by JOHN CAPGRAVE. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. CHRONICON MONASTERII DE ABINGDON. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. LIVES OF EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. I.—La Estoire de Seint Aedward le Rei. II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Æduuardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,686 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., and probably written in the year 1245, on the occasion of the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between the years 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between the years 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many facts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. MONUMENTA FRANCISCANA; scilicet, I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. II.—Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. III.—Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1858.

This volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. It has been the aim of the editor to collect whatever historical information could be found in this country, towards illustrating a period of the national history for which only scanty materials exist. None of these have been before printed.

5. FASCICULI ZIZANIORUM MAGISTRI JOHANNIS WYCLIF CUM TRITICO. Ascribed to THOMAS NETTER, of WALDEN, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the school-men had been extended to the field of theology, and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. THE BUIK OF THE CRONICLIS OF SCOTLAND ; or, A Metrical Version of the History of Hector Boece ; by WILLIAM STEWART. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, and was written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends, and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the "evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for in such a work as this ; but the stories of the colonization of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true ; and the chronicle is valuable as a reflection of the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this metrical version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern lowland Scotch.

7. JOHANNIS CAPGRAVE LIBER DE ILLUSTRIBUS HENRICIS. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three distinct parts, each having its own separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, and extends from the election of Henry I., the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, and extends from the accession of Henry I. in the year 1100, to the year 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world.

Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for the history of which period his work is of some value.

8. HISTORIA MONASTERII S. AUGUSTINI CANTUARIENSIS, by THOMAS OF ELMHAM, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by CHARLES HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The only copy known is in the possession of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham, whence he derived his name.

9. EULOGIUM (HISTORIARUM SIVE TEMPORIS) : Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366 ; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by F. S. HAYDON, Esq., B.A. 1858-1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle is divided into five books, and contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1356 and 1366. The notices of events appear to have been written very soon after their occurrence. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. It is believed to be the earliest authority for the statement that the latter monarch died in the Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster.

10. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE SEVENTH: Bernardi Andreæ Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1858.

The contents of these volumes are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in the year 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest in connexion with the period are given in an appendix.

11. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE FIFTH. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhami Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by CHARLES A. COLE, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A Life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. MUNIMENTA GILDHALLÆ LONDONIENSIS; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I., Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859–1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, a large folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London. It gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and early part of the fifteenth centuries.

The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is also preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the twelfth, thirteenth, and early part of the fourteenth centuries.

13. CHRONICA JOHANNIS DE OXENEDES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in the year 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to the year 1292, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the kingdom, which are not to be elsewhere obtained, and some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A COLLECTION OF POLITICAL POEMS AND SONGS RELATING TO ENGLISH HISTORY, FROM THE ACCESSION OF EDWARD III. TO THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1859-1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us, through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. The "OPUS TERTIUM," "OPUS MINUS," &c., of ROGER BACON. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon: also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologici."

16. BARTHOLOMÆI DE COTTON, MONACHI NORWICENSIS, HISTORIA ANGLICANA; 449-1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. BRUT Y TYWYSOGION; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Caedwala at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A COLLECTION OF ROYAL AND HISTORICAL LETTERS DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY IV. 1399-1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events. The period requires much elucidation; to which it will materially contribute.

19. THE REPRESSOR OF OVER MUCH BLAMING OF THE CLERGY. By REGINALD PECOCK, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1450. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecock took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporaneous history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century. Pecock, though an opponent of the Lollards, showed a certain spirit of toleration, for which he received, towards the end of his life, the usual mediæval reward—persecution.

20. ANNALES CAMBRIÆ. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in the year 447, and come down to the year 1288. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. Davids, by Blegewryd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. THE WORKS OF GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V. and VI. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861–1868.

The first three volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. Davids to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before, and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in the year 1183, the second in 1185–6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. Curious as this treatise is, Mr. Dimock is of opinion that it ought not to be accepted as sober truthful history, for Giraldus himself states that truth was not his main object, and that he compiled the work for the purpose of sounding the praises of Henry the Second. Elsewhere, however, he declares that he had stated nothing in the Topographia of the truth of which he was not well assured, either by his own eyesight or by the testimony, with all diligence elicited, of the most trustworthy and authentic men in the country; that though he did not put just the same full faith in their reports as in what he had himself seen, yet, as they only related what they had themselves seen, he could not but believe such credible witnesses. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about the year 1188, and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. No one can peruse it without coming to the conclusion that it is rather a poetical fiction than a prosaic truthful history.

Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Kambriæ et Descriptio Kambriæ.

22. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE WARS OF THE ENGLISH IN FRANCE DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY THE SIXTH, KING OF ENGLAND. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861-1864.

The letters and papers contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impériale, and the Dépôt des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the line of policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and such other provinces of France as had been acquired by Henry V. We may here trace, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared to read of its final overthrow.

23. THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, ACCORDING TO THE SEVERAL ORIGINAL AUTHORITIES. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by BENJAMIN THORPE, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This Chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to the year 1154, is justly the boast of England; for no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, either in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In the present edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGNS OF RICHARD III. AND HENRY VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1861-1863.

The Papers are derived from MSS. in the Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from these documents is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. LETTERS OF BISHOP GROSSETESTE, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1253, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III., but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS RELATING TO THE HISTORY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND: Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066-1200. By THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862-1865.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history, and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. This arrangement has two advantages; the materials for any given period may be seen at a glance; and if the reader knows the time when an author wrote, and the number of years that had elapsed between the date of the events and the time the writer flourished, he will generally be enabled to form a fair estimate of the comparative value of the narrative itself. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which the original portions are distinguished from those which are mere compilations. When possible, the sources are indicated, from which such compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice has also been given of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. ROYAL AND OTHER HISTORICAL LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGN OF HENRY III. From the Originals in the Public Record Office. Vol. I., 1216-1235. Vol. II., 1236-1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, D.D., Regius Professor in Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862-1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

28. CHRONICA MONASTERII S. ALBANI.—1. THOMÆ WALSINGHAM HISTORIA ANGLICANA; Vol. I., 1272-1381: Vol. II., 1381-1422. 2. WILLELMI RISHANGER CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1307. 3. JOHANNIS DE TROKELowe ET HENRICI DE BLANEFORDE CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1296; 1307-1324; 1392-1406. 4. GESTA ABBATUM MONASTERII S. ALBANI, A THOMA WALSINGHAM, REGNANTE RICARDO SECUNDO, EJUSDEM ECCLESIE PRÆCENTORE, COMPILATA; Vol. I., 793-1290: Vol. II., 1290-1349: Vol. III., 1349-1411. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1869.

In the first two volumes is a history of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., written by Thomas Walsingham, precentor of St. Albans and prior of the cell of Wymundham, belonging to that abbey. Walsingham's work is printed from MS. VII. in the Arundel Collection in the College of Arms, London, a manuscript of the fifteenth century, collated with MS. 13 E. IX. in the King's Library in the British Museum, and MS. VII. in the Parker Collection of Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

In the third volume is a Chronicle of English History, from 1259 to 1306, attributed to William Rishanger, monk of Saint Albans, who lived in the reign of Edward I., printed from the Cottonian Manuscript, Faustina B. IX. (of the fourteenth century) in the British Museum, collated with MS. 14 C. VII. (fols. 219-231) in the King's Library, British Museum, and the Cottonian Manuscript Claudius E. III., fols. 306-331: Also an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol by King Edward I., 1291-1292, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., attributed to William Rishanger above mentioned, but on no sufficient ground: A short Chronicle of English History, from 1292 to 1300, by an unknown hand, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A short Chronicle from 1297 to 1307, Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi Regis Angliæ, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library, and MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., with an addition of Annales Regum Angliæ, probably by the same hand: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1292, 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1293 to 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: and a fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1285 to 1307, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library.

In the fourth volume is a Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer, 1259 to 1296; from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: Annals of King Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe, a monk of St. Albans, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henricus de Blanford, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A full Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer of St. Albans, 1392 to 1406, from MS. VII. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge: and an account of the benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the fifteenth century, from MS. VI. in the same Library.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes (which form an entirely separate work), contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, and of the fortunes and vicissitudes of the house, from 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham, Præcentor of the Abbey in the reign of Richard II., and transcribed from MS. Cotton. Claudius E. IV., in the British Museum; with a brief Continuation of the History, extracted from the closing pages of the Parker MS. No. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

29. CHRONICON ABBATIE EVESHAMENSIS, AUCTORIBUS DOMINICO PRIORE EVESHAMIE ET THOMA DE MARLEBERGE ABBATE, A FUNDATIONE AD ANNUM 1213, UNA CUM CONTINUATIONE AD ANNUM 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. MACRAY, M.A., Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Egwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. RICARDI DE CIRENCESTRIA SPECULUM HISTORIALE DE GESTIS REGUM ANGLIÆ. Vol. I., 447-871. Vol. II., 872-1066. Edited by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863-1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355-1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book iii. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Britannia, in 1747.

31. YEAR BOOKS OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD THE FIRST. Years 20-21, 30-31, and 32-33. Edited and translated by ALFRED JOHN HORWOOD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1866.

The volumes known as the "Year Books" contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the Courts of Common Law. They may be considered to a great extent as the "lex non scripta" of England, and have been held in the highest veneration by the ancient sages of the law, and were received by them as the repositories of the first recorded judgments and dicta of the great legal luminaries of past ages. They are also worthy of the attention of the general reader on account of the historical information and the notices of public and private persons which they contain, as well as the light which they throw on ancient manners and customs.

32. NARRATIVES OF THE EXPULSION OF THE ENGLISH FROM NORMANDY; 1449-1450.—Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normannia: Le Recouvrement de Normendie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conférences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS.

in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in the year 1450. The history commences with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ends with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The whole period embraced is less than two years.

33. HISTORIA ET CARTULARIUM MONASTERII S. PETRI GLOUCESTRIÆ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. HART, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863–1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester, the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. ALEXANDRI NECKAM DE NATURIS RERUM LIBRI DUO; with NECKAM'S POEM, DE LAUDIBUS DIVINÆ SAPIENTIÆ. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "this Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful; but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiæ" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre; and though there are many lines which violate classical rules, it is, as a whole, above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. LEECHDOMS, WORTCUNNING, AND STARCRAFT OF EARLY ENGLAND; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. OSWALD COCKAYNE, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1864–1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect. The manuscripts from which they have been printed are valuable to the Anglo-Saxon scholar for the illustrations they afford of Anglo-Saxon orthography.

36. ANNALES MONASTICI. Vol. I.:—Annales de Margan, 1066–1232; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066–1263; Annales de Burton, 1004–1263. Vol. II.:—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519–1277; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1–1291. Vol. III.:—Annales Prioratus de Dunstaplia, 1–1297; Annales Monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042–1432. Vol. IV.:—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016–1347; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066–1289; Annales Prioratus de

Wigornia, 1-1377. Vol. V. :—Index and Glossary. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registry of the University, Cambridge. 1864-1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. MAGNA VITA S. HUGONIS EPISCOPI LINCOLNIENSIS. From Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and, being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic, but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities he was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1186; he died on the 16th of November 1200; and was canonized in 1220.

38. CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF RICHARD THE FIRST. Vol. I. :—ITINERARIUM PEREGRINORUM ET GESTA REGIS RICARDI. Vol. II. :—EPISTOLÆ CANTUARIENSES; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury; 1187 to 1199. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864-1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vinesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time, from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. RECUEIL DES CRONIKES ET ANCHIENNES ISTORIES DE LA GRANT BRETAGNE A PRESENT NOMME ENGLETERRE, par JEHAN DE WAURIN. Vol. I., Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399-1422. Edited by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864-1868.
40. A COLLECTION OF THE CHRONICLES AND ANCIENT HISTORIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, NOW CALLED ENGLAND, by JOHN DE WAURIN. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vol. I.) Edited and translated by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471, after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. The work, as originally bound, was comprised in six volumes, since rebound in morocco in 12 volumes, folio maximo, vellum, and is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthuyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1865-1869.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. LE LIVRE DE REIS DE BRITTANIE E LE LIVRE DE REIS DE ENGLETERE. Edited by JOHN GLOVER, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le livre de Reis de Engleterre." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French.

It is supposed that Peter of Ickham must have been the author, but no certain conclusion on that point has been arrived at.

43. CHRONICA MONASTERII DE MELSA, AB ANNO 1150 USQUE AD ANNUM 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by EDWARD AUGUSTUS BOND, Esq., Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866-1868.

The Abbey of Meaux was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. MATTHÆI PARISIENSIS HISTORIA ANGLORUM, SIVE, UT VULGO DICITUR, HISTORIA MINOR. Vols. I., II., and III. 1067-1245. Edited by Sir FREDERIC MADDEN, K.H., Keeper of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1866-1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1250. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the 'Historia Major.' The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. LIBER MONASTERII DE HYDA: A CHRONICLE AND CHARTULARY OF HYDE ABBEY, WINCHESTER, 455-1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by EDWARD EDWARDS, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources, which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify—either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from, writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments.

There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. CHRONICON SCOTORUM: A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, from the EARLIEST TIMES to 1135; with a SUPPLEMENT, containing the Events from 1141 to 1150. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befell the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked, year by year, from A.M. 1599 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are the invasions of foreigners and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. THE CHRONICLE OF PIERRE DE LANGTOFT, IN FRENCH VERSE, FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE DEATH OF EDWARD I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1866-1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and that he lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum," in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, down to the death of Henry III., and in the third a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. THE WAR OF THE GAEDHIL WITH THE GAILL, OR, THE INVASIONS OF IRELAND BY THE DANES AND OTHER NORSEMEN. Edited, with a Translation, by JAMES HENTHORN TODD, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University, Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not himself an eye-witness, must have derived his information from those who were eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. GESTA REGIS HENRICI SECUNDI BENEDICTI ABBATIS. THE CHRONICLE OF THE REIGNS OF HENRY II, AND RICHARD I., 1169-1192 ; known under the name of BENEDICT OF PETERBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. MUNIMENTA ACADEMICA, OR, DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF ACADEMICAL LIFE AND STUDIES AT OXFORD (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. HENRY ANSTEY, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. CHRONICA MAGISTRI ROGERI DE HOVEDENE. Vols. I. and II. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868-1869.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree, showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work; it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

In the Press.

A COLLECTION OF SAGAS AND OTHER HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS relating to the Settlements and Descents of the Northmen on the British Isles. Edited by GEORGE WEBBE DASENT, Esq., D.C.L., Oxon.

OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THOMAS BEKYNTON, SECRETARY TO HENRY VI., with other LETTERS and DOCUMENTS. Edited by the Rev. GEORGE WILLIAMS, B.D., Senior Fellow of King's College, Cambridge.

ROLL OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL OF IRELAND, 16 RICHARD II. Edited by the Rev. JAMES GRAVES, A.B., Treasurer of St. Canice, Ireland.

THE WORKS OF GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. Vol. IV. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vol. VII. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire.

CHRONICON RADULPHI ABBATIS COGGESHALENSIS MAJUS; and, CHRONICON TERRÆ SANCTÆ ET DE CAPTIS A SALADINO HIEROSOLYMIS. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham.

ITER BRITANNIARUM: THE PORTION OF THE ANTONINE ITINERARY OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE RELATING TO GREAT BRITAIN. Edited by WILLIAM HENRY BLACK, Esq., F.S.A.

WILLELMI MALMESBIRIENSIS DE GESTIS PONTIFICUM ANGLORUM LIBRI V. Edited, from William of Malmesbury's Autograph MS., by N. E. S. A. HAMILTON, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum.

YEAR BOOKS OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD THE FIRST. Years 21-22. Edited and translated by ALFRED JOHN HORWOOD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

HISTORICAL AND MUNICIPAL DOCUMENTS IN THE ARCHIVES OF THE CITY OF DUBLIN, &c. Edited by JOHN T. GILBERT, Esq., M.R.I.A. Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland.

THE ANNALS OF LOCH CÉ. Edited by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A.

CHRONICLE OF ROBERT OF BRUNNE. Edited by FREDERICK JAMES FURNIVALL, Esq., M.A., of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, Barrister-at-Law.

POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vol. III. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH RAWSON LUMBY, M.A., of Magdalene College, Cambridge.

CHRONICA MONASTERII S. ALBANI.—5. JOHANNIS AMUNDESHAM, MONACHI MONASTERII S. ALBANI, ANNALES. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

THE ANGLO-LATIN SATIRISTS OF THE TWELFTH CENTURY. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A.

CHRONICA MAGISTRI ROGERI DE HOUEDENE. Vol. III. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford.

DOCUMENTS RELATING TO ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND, FROM THE NORTHERN REGISTERS. Edited by the Rev. JAMES RAINE, M.A., Canon of York, and late Fellow of the University, Durham.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS RELATING TO THE HISTORY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. Vol. III. ; 1201, &c. By Sir THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Deputy Keeper of the Public Records.

In Progress.

LIBER NIGER ADMIRALITATIS. Edited by Sir TRAVERS TWISS, D.C.L., Queen's Advocate-General.

THE METRICAL CHRONICLE OF ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER. Edited by WILLIAM ALDIS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge.

ORIGINAL LETTERS AND DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF GENERAL AND DOMESTIC HISTORY. Edited by the Rev. WILLIAM CAMPBELL, M.A.

RECUEIL DES CRONIQUES ET ANCHIENNES ISTORIES DE LA GRANT BRETAGNE A PRESENT NOMME ENGLETERRE, par JEHAN DE WAURIN.
Vol. III. Edited by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A.

LIVES OF ARCHBISHOP DUNSTAN. Edited by the Rev. JOHN RICHARD GREEN, M.A.

PUBLICATIONS
OF
THE RECORD COMMISSIONERS, &c.

- ROTULORUM ORIGINALIUM IN CURIA SCACCARI ABBREVIATIO. Henry III.—Edward III. Edited by HENRY PLAYFORD, Esq. 2 Vols. folio (1805—1810). Price 25s. boards, or 12s. 6d. each.
- CALENDARIUM INQUISITIONUM POST MORTEM SIVE ESCAETARUM. Henry III.—Richard III. Edited by JOHN CALEY and JOHN BAYLEY, Esqrs. Vols. 3 and 4, folio (1821—1828), boards : Vol. 3, price 21s.; Vol. 4, price 24s.
- LIBRORUM MANUSCRIPTORUM BIBLIOTHECÆ HARLEIANÆ CATALOGUS. Vol. 4. Edited by the Rev. T. HARTWELL HORNE. Folio (1812), boards. Price 18s.
- ABBREVIATIO PLACITORUM. Richard I.—Edward II. Edited by the Right Hon. GEORGE ROSE and W. ILLINGWORTH, Esq. 1 Vol. folio (1811), boards. Price 18s.
- LIBRI CENSUALIS vocati DOMESDAY-BOOK, INDICES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS. Folio (1816), boards, (Domesday-Book, Vol. 3). Price 21s.
- LIBRI CENSUALIS vocati DOMESDAY-BOOK, ADDITAMENTA EX CODIC. ANTIQUISS. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS. Folio (1816), boards, (Domesday-Book, Vol. 4). Price 21s.
- STATUTES OF THE REALM. Edited by Sir T. E. TOMLINS, JOHN RAITHEY, JOHN CALEY, and WM. ELLIOTT, Esqrs. Vols. 4 (in 2 parts), 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, including 2 Vols. of Indices, large folio (1819—1828). Price 31s. 6d. each : except the Alphabetical and Chronological Indices, price 30s. each.
- VALOR ECCLESIASTICUS, temp. Hen. VIII., Auctoritate Regia institutus. Edited by JOHN CALEY, Esq., and the Rev. JOSEPH HUNTER. Vols. 3 to 6, folio (1817—1834), boards. Price 25s. each.
* * The Introduction, separately, 8vo., cloth. Price 2s. 6d.
- ROTULI SCOTIÆ IN TURRI LONDINENSI ET IN DOMO CAPITULARI WESTMONASTERIENSI ASSERVATI. 19 Edward I.—Henry VIII. Edited by DAVID MACPHERSON, JOHN CALEY, and W. ILLINGWORTH, Esqrs., and the Rev. T. HARTWELL HORNE. 2 Vols. folio (1814—1819), boards. Price 42s.
- FÆDERA, CONVENTIONES, LITTERÆ, &c. ; or, RYMER'S FÆDERA, New Edition. Vol. 3, Parts 1 and 2, 1344—1377, folio (1825—1830) : Vol. 4, 1377—1383 (1869). Edited by JOHN CALEY and FRED. HOLBROOKE, Esqrs. Vol. 3, price 21s. each Part ; Vol. 4, price 6s.

DUCATUS LANCASTRIÆ CALENDARIUM INQUISITIONUM POST MORTEM, &c. Part 3, Calendar to the Pleadings, &c., Henry VII.—Ph. and Mary; and Calendar to the Pleadings, 1—13 Elizabeth. Part 4, Calendar to the Pleadings to end of Elizabeth. (1827—1834.) Edited by R. J. HARPER, JOHN CALEY, and WM. MINCHIN, Esqrs. Folio, boards, Part 3 (or Vol. 2), price 31s. 6d.; and Part 4 (or Vol. 3), price 21s.

CALENDARS OF THE PROCEEDINGS IN CHANCERY, IN THE REIGN OF QUEEN ELIZABETH; to which are prefixed, Examples of earlier Proceedings in that Court from Richard II. to Elizabeth, from the Originals in the Tower. Edited by JOHN BAYLEY, Esq. Vols. 2 and 3 (1830—1832), folio, boards, price 21s. each.

PARLIAMENTARY WRITS AND WRITS OF MILITARY SUMMONS, together with the Records and Muniments relating to the Suit and Service due and performed to the King's High Court of Parliament and the Councils of the Realm. Edited by Sir FRANCIS PALGRAVE. (1830—1834.) Folio, boards, Vol. 2, Division 1, Edward II., price 21s.; Vol. 2, Division 2, price 21s.; Vol. 2, Division 3, price 42s.

ROTULI LITTERARUM CLAUSARUM IN TURRI LONDINENSI ASSERVATI. 2 Vols. folio (1833, 1844). Vol. 1, 1204—1224. Vol. 2, 1224—1227. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. Price 81s., cloth; or separately, Vol. 1, price 63s.; Vol. 2, price 18s.

PROCEEDINGS AND ORDINANCES OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL OF ENGLAND. 10 Richard II.—33 Henry VIII. Edited by Sir NICHOLAS HARRIS NICOLAS. 7 Vols. royal 8vo. (1834—1837), cloth. Price 98s.; or separately, 14s. each.

ROTULI LITTERARUM PATENTIUM IN TURRI LONDINENSI ASSERVATI. '1201—1216. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. 1 Vol. folio (1835), cloth. Price 31s. 6d.

* * * The Introduction, separately, 8vo., cloth. Price 9s.

ROTULI CURIÆ REGIS. Rolls and Records of the Court held before the King's Justiciars or Justices. 6 Richard I.—1 John. Edited by Sir FRANCIS PALGRAVE. 2 Vols. royal 8vo. (1835), cloth. Price 28s.

ROTULI NORMANNIÆ IN TURRI LONDINENSI ASSERVATI. 1200—1205; also, 1417 to 1418. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1835), cloth. Price 12s. 6d.

ROTULI DE OBLATIS ET FINIBUS IN TURRI LONDINENSI ASSERVATI, tempore Regis Johannis. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1835), cloth. Price 18s.

EXCERPTA E ROTULIS FINIUM IN TURRI LONDINENSI ASSERVATIS. Henry III., 1216—1272. Edited by CHARLES ROBERTS, Esq. 2 Vols. royal 8vo. (1835, 1836), cloth, price 32s.; or separately, Vol. 1, price 14s.; Vol. 2, price 18s.

FINES, SIVE PEDES FINIUM; SIVE FINALES CONCORDIÆ IN CURIA DOMINI REGIS. 7 Richard I.—16 John, 1195—1214. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH HUNTER. In Counties. 2 Vols. royal 8vo. (1835—1844), cloth, price 11s.; or separately, Vol. 1, price 8s. 6d.; Vol. 2, price 2s. 6d.

ANCIENT KALENDARS AND INVENTORIES OF THE TREASURY OF HIS MAJESTY'S EXCHEQUER; together with Documents illustrating the History of that Repository. Edited by Sir FRANCIS PALGRAVE. 3 Vols. royal 8vo. (1836), cloth. Price 42s.

DOCUMENTS AND RECORDS illustrating the History of Scotland, and the Transactions between the Crowns of Scotland and England; preserved in the Treasury of Her Majesty's Exchequer. Edited by Sir FRANCIS PALGRAVE. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1837), cloth. Price 18s.

ROTULI CHARTARUM IN TURRI LONDINENSI ASSERVATI. 1199—1216. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. 1 Vol. folio (1837), cloth. Price 30s.

REPORT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE RECORD COMMISSIONERS, 1831—1837. 1 Vol. folio (1837), boards. Price 8s.

REGISTRUM vulgariter nuncupatum "The Record of Caernarvon," e codice MS. Harleiano, 696, descriptum. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS. 1 Vol. folio (1838), cloth. Price 31s. 6d.

ANCIENT LAWS AND INSTITUTES OF ENGLAND; comprising Laws enacted under the Anglo-Saxon Kings, from Æthelbirht to Cnut, with an English Translation of the Saxon; the Laws called Edward the Confessor's; the Laws of William the Conqueror, and those ascribed to Henry the First; also, Monumenta Ecclesiastica Anglicana, from the 7th to the 10th century; and the Ancient Latin Version of the Anglo-Saxon Laws; with a compendious Glossary, &c. Edited by BENJAMIN THORPE, Esq. 1 Vol. folio (1840), cloth. Price 40s. Or, 2 Vols. royal 8vo. cloth. Price 30s.

ANCIENT LAWS AND INSTITUTES OF WALES; comprising Laws supposed to be enacted by Howel the Good; modified by subsequent Regulations under the Native Princes, prior to the Conquest by Edward the First; and anomalous Laws, consisting principally of Institutions which, by the Statute of Ruddlan, were admitted to continue in force. With an English Translation of the Welsh Text. To which are added, a few Latin Transcripts, containing Digests of the Welsh Laws, principally of the Dimetian Code. With Indices and Glossary. Edited by ANEURIN OWEN, Esq. 1 Vol. folio (1841), cloth. Price 44s. Or, 2 Vols. royal 8vo. cloth. Price 36s.

ROTULI DE LIBERATE AC DE MISIS ET PRÆSTITIS, Regnante Johanne. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1844), cloth. Price 6s.

THE GREAT ROLLS OF THE PIPE FOR THE SECOND, THIRD, AND FOURTH YEARS OF THE REIGN OF KING HENRY THE SECOND, 1155—1158. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH HUNTER. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1844), cloth. Price 4s. 6d.

THE GREAT ROLL OF THE PIPE FOR THE FIRST YEAR OF THE REIGN OF KING RICHARD THE FIRST, 1189—1190. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH HUNTER. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1844), cloth. Price 6s.

DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF ENGLISH HISTORY in the 13th and 14th centuries, selected from the Records of the Department of the Queen's Remembrancer in the Exchequer. Edited by HENRY COLE, Esq. 1 Vol. fcp. folio (1844), cloth. Price 45s. 6d.

MODUS TENENDI PARLIAMENTUM. An Ancient Treatise on the Mode of holding the Parliament in England. Edited by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq. 1 Vol. 8vo. (1846), cloth. Price 2s. 6d.

MONUMENTA HISTORICA BRITANNICA, or, Materials for the History of Britain from the earliest period. Vol. 1, extending to the Norman Conquest. Prepared, and illustrated with Notes, by the late HENRY PETRIE, Esq., F.S.A., Keeper of the Records in the Tower of London, assisted by the Rev. JOHN SHARPE, Rector of Castle Eaton, Wilts. Finally completed for publication, and with an Introduction, by THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, Esq., Assistant Keeper of Records. (Printed by command of Her Majesty.) Folio (1848). Price 42s.

REGISTRUM MAGNI SIGILLI REGUM SCOTORUM in Archivis Publicis asservatum. 1306—1424. Edited by THOMAS THOMSON, Esq. Folio (1814). Price 15s.

THE ACTS OF THE PARLIAMENTS OF SCOTLAND. 11 vols. folio (1814—1844). Vol. I. Edited by THOMAS THOMSON and COSMO INNES, Esqrs. Price 42s. Also, Vols. 4, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11; price 10s. 6d. each.

THE ACTS OF THE LORDS AUDITORS OF CAUSES AND COMPLAINTS (ACTA DOMINORUM AUDITORUM). 1466—1494. Edited by THOMAS THOMSON, Esq. Folio (1839). Price 10s. 6d.

THE ACTS OF THE LORDS OF COUNCIL IN CIVIL CAUSES (ACTA DOMINORUM CONCILII). 1478—1495. Edited by THOMAS THOMSON, Esq. Folio (1839). Price 10s. 6d.

ISSUE ROLL OF THOMAS DE BRANTINGHAM, Bishop of Exeter, Lord High Treasurer of England, containing Payments out of His Majesty's Revenue, 44 Edward III., 1370. Edited by FREDERICK DEVON, Esq. 1 Vol. 4to. (1835), cloth. Price 35s. Or, royal 8vo. cloth. Price 25s.

ISSUES OF THE EXCHEQUER, containing similar matter to the above; James I.; extracted from the Pell Records. Edited by FREDERICK DEVON, Esq. 1 Vol. 4to. (1836), cloth. Price 30s. Or, royal 8vo. cloth. Price 21s.

ISSUES OF THE EXCHEQUER, containing similar matter to the above; Henry III.—Henry VI.; extracted from the Pell Records. Edited by FREDERICK DEVON, Esq. 1 Vol. 4to. (1837), cloth. Price 40s. Or, royal 8vo. cloth. Price 30s.

HANDBOOK TO THE PUBLIC RECORDS. By F. S. THOMAS, Esq., Secretary of the Public Record Office. 1 Vol. royal 8vo. (1853), cloth. Price 12s.

HISTORICAL NOTES RELATIVE TO THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND; from the Accession of Henry VIII. to the Death of Queen Anne (1509—1714). Designed as a Book of instant Reference for ascertaining the Dates of Events mentioned in History and Manuscripts. The Name of every Person and Event mentioned in History within the above period is placed in Alphabetical and Chronological Order, and the Authority whence taken is given in each case, whether from Printed History or from Manuscripts. By F. S. THOMAS, Esq. 3 Vols. 8vo. (1856), cloth. Price 40s.

STATE PAPERS, DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY THE EIGHTH: with Indices of Persons and Places. 11 Vols., 4to. (1830—1852), cloth. Price 5l. 15s. 6d. ; or separately, price 10s. 6d. each.

Vol. I.—Domestic Correspondence.

Vols. II. & III.—Correspondence relating to Ireland.

Vols. IV. & V.—Correspondence relating to Scotland.

Vols. VI. to XI.—Correspondence between England and Foreign Courts.

WORKS PUBLISHED IN PHOTOZINCOGRAPHY.

DOMESDAY BOOK, or the GREAT SURVEY OF ENGLAND OF WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, 1086; fac-simile of the Part relating to each county, separately (with a few exceptions of double counties). Photozincographed, by Her Majesty's Command, at the Ordnance Survey Office, Southampton, Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., F.R.S., &c., Director. 35 Parts, imperial quarto and demy quarto (1861-1863) boards. Price 4s. 6d. to 17. 1s. each Part, according to size; or, bound in 2 Vols., 18l.

This important and unique survey of the greater portion of England* is the oldest and most valuable record in the national archives. It was commenced about the year 1084 and finished in 1086. Its compilation was determined upon at Gloucester by William the Conqueror, in council, in order that he might know what was due to him, in the way of tax, from his subjects, and that each at the same time might know what he had to pay. It was compiled as much for their protection as for the benefit of the sovereign. The nobility and people had been grievously distressed at the time by the king bringing over large numbers of French and Bretons, and quartering them on his subjects, "each according to the measure of his land," for the purpose of resisting the invasion of Canut, King of Denmark, which was apprehended. The commissioners appointed to make the survey were to inquire the name of each place; who held it in the time of King Edward the Confessor; the present possessor; how many hides were in the manor; how many ploughs were in demesne; how many homagers; how many villeins; how many cottars; how many serving men; how many free tenants; how many tenants in soccage; how much wood, meadow, and pasture; the number of mills and fish-ponds; what had been added or taken away from the place; what was the gross value in the time of Edward the Confessor; the present value; and how much each free man or soc-man had, and whether any advance could be made in the value. Thus could be ascertained who held the estate in the time of King Edward; who then held it; its value in the time of the late king; and its value as it stood at the formation of the survey. So minute was the survey, that the writer of the contemporary portion of the Saxon Chronicle records, with some asperity—"So very narrowly" he caused it to be "traced out, that there was not a single hide, nor one virgate of land, nor even, it is shame to tell, though it seemed to him no shame to do, an ox, nor a cow, nor a swine was left, that was not set down."

Domesday Survey is in two parts or volumes. The first, in folio, contains the counties of Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester and Lancaster, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Gloucester, Hants, Hereford, Herts, Huntingdon, Kent, Leicester and Rutland, Lincoln, Middlesex, Northampton, Nottingham, Oxford, Salop, Somerset, Stafford, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Wilts, Worcester, and York. The second volume, in quarto, contains the counties of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk.

Domesday Book was printed verbatim et literatim during the last century, in consequence of an address of the House of Lords to King George III. in 1767. It was not, however, commenced until 1773, and was completed early in 1783. In 1860, Her Majesty's Government, with the concurrence of the Master of the Rolls, determined to apply the art of photozincography to the production of a fac-simile of Domesday Book, under the superintendence of Colonel Sir Henry James, R.E., director of the Ordnance Survey, Southampton. The fac-simile was completed in 1863.

*For some reason left unexplained, many parts were left unsurveyed; Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, and Durham, are not described in the survey; nor does Lancashire appear under its proper name; but Furness, and the northern part of Lancashire, as well as the south of Westmoreland, with a part of Cumberland, are included within the West Riding of Yorkshire. That part of Lancashire which lies between the Ribble and Mersey, and which at the time of the survey comprehended 688 manors, is joined to Cheshire. Part of Rutland is described in the counties of Northampton and Lincoln.

FAC-SIMILES OF NATIONAL MANUSCRIPTS, from WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR to QUEEN ANNE, selected under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, and Photozincographed, by Command of Her Majesty, by Colonel SIR HENRY JAMES, R.E., Director of the Ordnance Survey. Price, each Part, double foolscap folio, with translations and notes, 1l. 1s.

Part I. (William the Conqueror to Henry VII.). 1865. -

Part II. (Henry VIII. and Edward VI.). 1866.

Part III. (Mary and Elizabeth). 1867.

Part IV. (James I. to Anne). 1868.

The first Part extends from William the Conqueror to Henry VII., and contains autographs of the kings of England, as well as of many other illustrious personages famous in history, and some interesting charters, letters patent, and state papers. The second Part, for the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edward VI., consists principally of holograph letters and autographs of kings, princes, statesmen, and other persons of great historical interest, who lived during those reigns. The third Part contains similar documents for the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth, including a signed bill of Lady Jane Grey. The fourth Part concludes the series, and comprises a number of documents taken from the originals belonging to the Constable of the Tower of London; also several records illustrative of the Gunpowder Plot, and a woodcut containing portraits of Mary Queen of Scots and James VI., circulated by their adherents in England, 1580-3.

*Public Record Office,
October 1869.*